leefulane (lē'fō-lān), adv. [leeful (< lee¹ + -ful) + lane, lane: see leelane.*] Same as leelane. [Scotch.] lee-gage (lē'gāj), n. Naut., with reference to another vessel, a situation of less exposure to the wind; hence, the sheltered or safe side: opposed to weather-gage. See gage², 3.

leek (lēk), n. [*< ME. leek, < AS. leca, a leek, an herb, = D. look = LG. look = OHG. louch, MHG. louch, G. lauch = Icel. laukr = Dan. løg = Sw. lök, leek. Cf. O.Bulg. lukŭ = Serv. luk = Pol. luk (barred l) = Russ. lukŭ = Lith. lukai = Finn. laukka, leek, all of Teut. origin. The word occurs now unfelt as the final element in garlic, but prob. not, as usually stated, in charlock, hemlock, or barley: see these words.]*

One of several species of the genus Allium; especially, a biennial culinary plant, Allium Porrum. It is distinguished from the onion (A. Cepa) by having a cylindrical base instead of a spherical or flattened bulb, by its flat leaves, and by its milder flavor. It is stimulant and diuretic. The cultivated leek is believed to have originated from the wild leek, A. ampeloprasum, found in southern Europe and western Asia. It was probably cultivated in ancient Egypt, and may have been the plant called by that name in Numbers xi. 5. According to Pliny, it was made prominent among the Romans by Nero; and at the present day it is still in extensive use. The leek has long been the national badge of the Welsh, traditionally said to have been adopted by direction of St. David, in celebration of a victory of King Arthur over the Saxons. The crow-leek is the bluebell squill, Scilla nutans; the sand-leek, Allium scorodoprasum, found in sandy places in the middle latitudes of Europe; the stone-leek, A. fistulosum, known as Welsh onion; the wine-leek, A. ampeloprasum; the wild leek, A. ampeloprasum, A. ursinum, and, in America, A. tricoccum. (See also house-leek.)

Leek (Allium tricoccum).
1, flowering plant; 2, the plant with leaves developed; a, flower; b, fruit; c, seed.

He is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek.
Shak., Hen. V., v. 1. 10.
Leek to the Welsh, to Dutchmen butter 'a dear.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Monday, l. 83.
Not worth a leek, of no value. Compare not worth a cross or curse, under curse².
Thou fishes not worth a leek, rise & go thi waya.
Rob. of Brunne, p. 204.
To eat the leek, to make a retraction or submit to humiliating treatment from compulsion: in allusion to the scene between Fluellen and Pistol in Shakspeare's "Henry V." See the quotation from Shakspeare, above.

Here is a case in which they were made to eat the leek.
Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 231.

leeket, a. An obsolete dialectal form of leek².

leek-green (lēk'grēn), n. A shade of green resembling that of the leaves of the leek; a dull-bluish green.

leelt, a. An obsolete spelling of leal.

leelane (lē'lān), adv. [Cf. leefulane, and leesome-lane (under leesome).] All alone; quite solitary. [Scotch.] leelang (lē'lang), a. A Scotch form of live-long.

The lovers rade the leelang night,
And safe got on their way.
Bonny Baby Livingston (Child's Ballads, IV. 44).

leemt, n. See leam¹.

leeman's Act. See act.

leemer (lē'mēr), n. [Origin obscure.] A ripe nut. [Prov. Eng.] leep¹, n. An obsolete strong preterit of leap¹.

leep², n. See leap².

leer¹ (lē'r), n. [< ME. lere, lire, lure, < AS. hleor, the cheek, face, = OS. hlor, hlier, hleor, hlear, = OFries. lerre = MD. liere = MLG. lēr = Icel. hljǫr, the cheek. Cf. lire².] 1. The cheek; more generally, the face.
A loutliche lady of lere in lynnen y-clothid,
Cam down fro that castel and calde me by name.
Piers Plowman (C), ll. 3.
No, ladie (quothe the earle with a loud voice, and the tears trilling down his leeres), saie not so.
Holinshed, Descrip. of Ireland, an. 1546.

2. Complexion; hue; color.

He hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.
Shak., As you Like it, iv. 1. 67.

3. Flesh; skin.

He didde next his whyte lere
Of cloth of lake fyn and clere
A breech and eek a sherte.
Chaucer, Sir Thopas, l. 146.

4. The flank or loin. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

leer² (lē'r), v. [Origin appar. 'make a face,' < leer¹, n., face. Cf. lower¹.] I. intrans. To look obliquely or askant; now, especially, to look obliquely with significance; cast a look expressive of some passion, as contempt, malignity, etc., especially a sly or amorous look.
As a Wolf, that hunting for a pray,
And having stoln (at last) some Lamb away,
Flies with down-hanging head, and leereth back
Whether the Mastife doo pursue his track.
Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 5.
You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye
Wounds like a leaden sword.
Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 480.
I met him once in the streets, but he leered away on the other side, as one ashamed of what he had done.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, l. 117.
As the priest, above his book
Leering at his neighbour's wife.
Tennyson, Vision of Stn.

II. trans. 1. To give an oblique glance or leer with.

Cocking his head, leering his eye, and working his black tongue, he [a parrot] edged himself sidelong.
D. Jerrald, Men of Character, Matthew Clear, ll.

2. To affect by leering, in a way specified.

To gild a face with smiles, and leer a man to ruin.
Dryden, Spanish Friar.

leer² (lē'r), n. [< leer², v.] A significant side glance; a glance expressive of some passion, as malignity, amorosness, etc.; an arch or affected glance or cast of countenance.

With jealous leer malign Eyed them askance.
Milton, P. L., iv. 503.
Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer.
Pope, Prof. to Satires, l. 201.

leer³, leer² (lē'r), a. [*Early mod. E. also lere; < ME. *lere, lar, < AS. *lære (in deriv. lærness, emptiness), gelār (> ME. ilar), empty, = OS. lāri = MD. laer, D. laar = OHG. lāri, MHG. lere, lar, lere, lēr, G. leer, empty.] 1. Empty; unoccupied.

But at the first encounter downe he lay,
The horse runs leere away without the man.
Sir J. Harrington, tr. of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, xvi. 64.
Hence — 2. Frivolous; trifling.

Laugh on, sir, I'll be bed and sleep,
And dream away the vapour of love, if the house
And your leer drunkards let me.
B. Jonson, New Inn, iv. 3.
He . . . never speaks without a lere asense.
Buller, Remains.

leer⁴ (lē'r), a. [Prob. a particular use of leer³, empty (cf. left¹, orig. 'weak'); otherwise a form equiv. to D. laager, lower, left.] Left.

With his hat turned up o' the leer side too.
E. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, l. 2.

leer⁵ (lē'r), n. A dialectal variant of lire².

leer⁶ (lē'r), n. [Origin obscure.] Tape, braid, binding, etc. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

In steele of silkes, I will weare sackcloth: for Owches and Bracelletes, Leere and Caddy.
Lyly, Euphuca, Anat. of Wit, p. 79.

leer⁷ (lē'r), n. [Also leer and lere, and perhaps merely another spelling of leer¹ as pronounced dialectally lē'er.] In glass-manuf., an annealing-furnace in which glassware is slowly cooled and annealed. It consists usually of a long chamber with a furnace at one end and having either a track of rails over which the glass is moved on cars through the furnace or a traveling apron for the same purpose.

leerness, n. [*Early mod. E. lerecess, < ME. lerecess, < AS. lærness, emptiness, < lære, empty: see leer³.] Emptiness. Batman, 1582. (Halliwel.)

leer-pan (lē'r'pan), n. A shallow iron tray in which are placed objects to be annealed in a furnace. See leer⁷.

Leersia (lē-er'si-ā), n. [NL. (Swartz, 1788), named after Johann Daniel Leers, a German druggist and botanist.] A genus of grasses of the tribe Oryzoæ, or rice family. It is closely related to the genus Oryza (to which rice belongs), but differs from it in having only two glumes instead of four, and often less than six stamens. The plants are marsh-grasses with narrow leaves which often have sharp, rough-edged edges that cut the flesh of those who pass through places where they grow. Five species are known, all of which occur in America, but one of them, L. oryzoides, is also found in Europe and temperate Asia, and another, L. hexandra, is widely distributed throughout the tropical regions of the Old World. Three species occur in the United States, and are known as white-grass, especially L. virginica. L. oryzoides is the rice cut-grass, and L. lenticularis the fly-catch grass. The name Leersia was given six years earlier to a genus of mosses, on which account it has been proposed to restore to the grass genus the name Homalocenchrus, proposed by Mieg in 1768.

leerspool (lē'r'spōl), n. [< leer³ + spool.] A cane or reed. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.] leery (lē'r'i), a. [< leer² + -y¹.] Knowing; wide-awake; sly: as, the leery man. [Thieves' slang.] lees¹, n. pl. See lee⁵.

lees², n. A Middle English form of leash.

lees³, a. and n. See leas³.

leese¹ (lēz), v. t. [*< ME. leesen, lesen (pret. lees, les, pl. loren, pp. lorn, lore; < AS. *leosan (pret. *leas, pl. *laron, pp. loren), in comp. be-leosan, for-leosan = OS. far-liosan, for-leosan = OFries. ur-liasa, ur-liasa = D. verlietzen = OHG. for-liosan, for-liasan, MHG. ver-liesen, ver-lieren, G. ver-lieren = Dan. for-lise = Sw. för-lisa = Goth. fra-liusan, lose; akin to L. luere = Gr. λῦω, loose, loosen, set free. See leas³, loose, lose¹, loss.] The verb leese is now obs., being superseded by lose, which is in part a var. of leese, and in part from a secondary form: see lose¹.] To lose.
Suche hath ther bene, and are, that getithe grace, and leese itt soone when thet ite hade attheyd.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 73.
By the way his wyfe Creusa he les.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 945.
Take heed you leese it not, signior, ere you come there;
preserve it.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, v. l.

leese², v. t. [ME. leescn, < L. laesus, pp. of laedere, hurt.] To hurt.
The princias of the puple soughten to leese him.
Wyclif, Luke xix. 47.

leese³, n. A Middle English form of leas⁵, leash.

leesing, n. A Middle English form of leasings³.

leesome (lē'sum), a. A dialectal form of leef-some.—Leesome-lane [confused with leelane], alone; all by one's self. [Scotch.] leet¹ (lē't), n. [Cf. laith³, lath², < AS. lēth, a territorial division: see laith³.] 1. An ancient English court; originally, the assembly of the men of a township for administering the law of the community. See court-leet.

M. Lambert acemeth to be of the opinion that the leets of our time doo yeeld some shadow of the politike institution of Alfred.
Holinshed, Descrip. of England, ii. 4.
Who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit With meditations lawfu!

leet² (lē't), n. The district subject to the jurisdiction of a court-leet.

In their renewal of this system the Commons seem to make sheriffs in their leets answer for the provincial synd. R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., iii.

3. The day on which a court-leet was held; also, the right to hold such a court, which in later times could be granted to a baron.—Grand leet, the chief assembly.
In the grand-leets and solemn elections of magistrates, every man had not prerogative alike.
Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 25.

2. The district subject to the jurisdiction of a court-leet.

In their renewal of this system the Commons seem to make sheriffs in their leets answer for the provincial synd. R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., iii.

3. The day on which a court-leet was held; also, the right to hold such a court, which in later times could be granted to a baron.—Grand leet, the chief assembly.
In the grand-leets and solemn elections of magistrates, every man had not prerogative alike.
Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 25.

leer² (lēt), n. [Appar. < leel. leiti, a share, a part; but cf. AS. hlēt, hlýt, hlíet, var. forms of hlot, lot, share: see lot.] 1. One portion; a lot.—2. A list of candidates for any office.—Short leer, a list of persons selected as the most eligible of the candidates for any office in order that their claims may be more particularly considered in view of nomination.

leer³, n. See *leer*¹.

leer⁴ (lēt), a. A dialectal form of *leer*¹, little.—Leer rather, a little while ago. Hallivell.

leer⁵ (lēt), r. i. [A dial. form of *leer*¹.] To let on; pretend; feign. [Prov. Eug.]

leer⁶ (lēt), a. and n. A dialectal form of *leer*¹.

leer⁷ (lēt), r. i. A dialectal form of *leer*³.

leer-ale (lēt'äl), n. A feast or merry-making at the holding of a court-leer.

Leer-ale, in some parts of England, signifies the dinner at a court-leer of a manor for the jury and customary tenants. T. Warton, Hist. Eng. Poetry, III. 329.

leerle (lēt'li), a. and n. A vulgar or humorous variant of leer.

She may be a leerle spolt by circumstances. Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, iv. 13.

leer-man (lēt'man), n. 1. One subject to the jurisdiction of a court-leer.—2. In the Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina (1669), a sheriff.

leers (lēt's), n. A name of the pollock. See *lythe*².

leer¹, leer, v. t. [ME. leeren, leeren, < AS. lyfan, gelyfan, believe: see believe.] To believe.

Alas! that lordes of the bonde *leer*th swiche wrecchen, And *leer*th swych lordes for her lowe wordes. Quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. xlv.

leer², v. An obsolete form of *leer*¹.

leeward (lē'wärd; pron. by seamen lū'ärd), a. and n. [*leer*¹ + -ward. The pron. lū'ärd is prob. due to a form leeward, the forms lee and leer being ult. identical: see *leer*¹, *leer*¹.] I. a.

Pertaining to the quarter toward which the wind blows; being in the direction of the wind: opposed to windward: as, a leeward course.—Leeward tide, a tide running in the same direction that the wind blows, and directly contrary to a tide under the lee, which implies a stream in an opposite direction to the wind.

II. n. The point or direction opposite to that from which the wind blows: as, to fall to leeward.

leeward (lē'wärd; by seamen, lū'ärd), adv. [= D. lijvaarts = G. leewärts = Sw. lävärt. See leeward, a.] Toward the lee, or that part toward which the wind blows: opposed to windward.

leewardly (lē'wärd-li; by seamen, lū'ärd-li), a. Making much leeway when sailing close-hauled: applied to ships that are not weatherly or cannot sail close to the wind without making great leeway. See weatherly.

leewardness (lē'wärd-nes; by seamen, lū'ärd-nes), n. Tendency to make leeway; lack of weatherliness.

But such was the leewardness of his Ship that, though he was within the sight of Cape Henry, by stormy contrary winds was he forced so farre to Sea that the West Indies was the next land.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 165.

leeway (lē'wä), n. 1. The lateral movement of a ship to the leeward of her course, or the angle formed between the line of the ship's keel and the line which she actually describes through the water; the deviation from her true course which a vessel makes by drifting to leeward. Hence—2. Loss of progress in general; a falling behind; retrogression: as, to be making leeway financially.—To make up leeway, or make up for leeway, to make up for time lost; overtake work which has fallen behind.

leer (lēt). [In the phrase leer me, appar. a contr. of leer is me, that is, it is pleasing to me.] It is pleasing; used in the expression leer me on (a person or thing), equivalent to I love. [Scotch.]

But leer me on thee, my little black mare. Archie of Ca'field (Child's Ballads, VI. 90).

O leer me on my spinning-wheel, O leer me on my rock an' reel. Burns, Boss and her Spinning-Wheel.

leer¹, *leer¹, n. Obsolete forms of leer.*

leer², a. An obsolete form of leer.

leer³, n. [ME., also leesal, leefesel, leesal, leesal, leesal, etc. (= Sw. löfsal = Dan. löfsal), an arbor, < AS. leaf, leaf, + sele, a hall, a room: see leaf and saloon. Cf. lobby, orig. of like meaning and ult. connected with leaf.] A bower of leaves; a place covered with foliage; an arbor.

[They] lurkyt vnder leer-sals loget with vines, Busket vnder bankes on boarders with-oute. Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 1167.

leer¹ (leer), a. and n. [leer, leer, leer, leer, < AS. lyft, lyft, weak, worthless, fornas found only in comp., lyft-ädl, palsy (< lyft, weak, + ädl, disease), and the gloss "inanis, leer" (not found in the deflected sense, 'left,' for which the AS. word is winster), = MD. lyft, lycht, left, = North Fries. leer, left; the lit. sense, found only in AS., is 'weak,' orig. 'broken,' ult. = L. ruptus, broken: see rupture. Cf. *lop*², cut off, main, etc. The leer hand or arm is thus the 'weak' one, as compared with the right, which is stronger because in more active use. The term has been extended, with mere ref. to position, to the leg, ear, eye, cheek, side, etc. The common explanation, that the leer hand is that which is usually 'left' unused (as if from the pp. of *leer*¹), is erroneous. The L. laevus = Gr. λαίος = Russ. lievuü, left, is not akin to the E. word.] I. a. 1. Belonging to that side of the body of man and other animals which is directed toward the west when the face or front is turned to the north; sinistral: the opposite of *leer*²: as, the leer hand, arm, leg, ear, or eye; the heart beats on the leer side of the body.

Let nat thy leer half, oure lord techeth, Ywite what thou delect with thy ryht syde. Piers Plowman (C), lv. 75.

This bridle bose with gold I beare in my leer hande. Garcotyne, Philomene (ed. Arber), p. 114.

Then Johnny looked over his leer shoulder. Johnie Armstrong (Child's Ballads, VI. 48).

2. Being on the left-hand side; situated on the side toward which the left hand of a person is or is supposed to be turned. The left wing of an army is the part or division on the left side of the center when facing an enemy. The left bank of a river is that which is on the left hand of a person who is going in the direction of its current. The left side of a deliberative assembly is that on the left hand of the presiding officer. In heraldry, the left (or sinister) is the spectator's right.

Upon the lyfte way, men goon fyrst un to Damas, by Flome Jordane; upon the rygt syde, men goon thorewe the Lande of Flagann. Mandeville, Travels, p. 128.

Left bower. See *bower*⁶.—Over the left shoulder. Same as over the left (which see, under ll).

II. n. 1. The left-hand side; the side opposite to the right: as, turn to the leer (hand); the leer (wing) of an army; to wheel from right to leer.

Lying, robed in snowy white That loosely flew to leer and right. Tennyson, Lady of Shalott.

2. In the politics of continental Europe, that part of a legislative assembly which sits on the left of the president; specifically, the liberal or democratic party, as that party, according to custom, always sits on this side of the house. [Usually with a capital letter.]—3t. A worthless creature.

The kynge knewe he seide sothe for Conscience hym tolde, That Wronge was a wikked leer and wronge moche sorwe. Piers Plowman (B), lv. 62.

In music and stage directions abbreviated L. Left about! See about.—Over the left, or over the left shoulder (see above), not at all: indicating negation, or the contrary of what is stated or ordinarily meant: as, he's a very clever fellow—over the left. [Colloq. or slang.]

You will have an account to keep too; but an account of what will go over the leer shoulder; only of what he squanders, what he borrows, and what he owes and never will pay. Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, I. 242.

leer¹ (leer), adv. [*leer*¹, a. and n.] Toward the left; sinistral: as, they senttered right and leer.

Shall not Love to me, As in the Latin song I learnt at school, Sneeze out a full God-bless-you right and leer! Tennyson, Edwin Morris.

Guide leer. See guide.

leer² (leer), *Preterit and past participle of leer*¹, *leer*².

leer³, a. A preterit and past participle of *leer*¹.

leer⁴, a. An obsolete form of the preterit of *leer*².

leer-hand (leer'hand), a. 1. Situated or located on one's left side; found near the left of: as, one's leer-hand man.—2t. Left-handed; sinistral; unskillful; unlucky; unfavorable.

If leer-hand fortune give thee leer-hand chances, Be wisely patient. Quarles, Emblems, iv. 4.

leer-handed (leer'han'ded), a. 1. Having the left hand or arm stronger and more capable of being used with facility than the right; using the left hand and arm in preference to the right.—2. Characterized by direction or position toward the left hand; moving from right to left: as, a leer-handed quartz crystal (one which rotates the plane of polarization to the left). See levogyrate and polarization.

Herschel found that the right-handed or leer-handed character of the circular polarization corresponded, in all cases, to that of the crystal. Whewell.

3. Clumsy; awkward; inexpert; unskillful.

Histo. What kind of man? Piso. That thou mayst know him perfectly, he's one Of a leer-handed making, a lank thing. Beau. and Fl., Captain, III. 5.

4. Insincere; sinister; malicious. The commendations of this people are not always leer-handed and detraitive. Landor.

5t. Unlucky; insipiduous.—Left-handed compliment. See compliment.—Left-handed marriage. See morganatic.

leer-handedness (leer'han'ded-nes), n. 1. The state or quality of being left-handed; habitual use of the left hand, or the ability to use the left hand with more ease and strength than the right, or equally with it.

Although a squint leer-handedness Be ungracious, yet we cannot want that hand. Donne, To the Countess of Bedford.

2. Awkwardness; clumsiness.

leer-hander (leer'han'dér), n. 1. A left-handed person. Let us pass on to the case of leer-handers. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, III. 42.

2. A dagger carried in the left hand to parry the thrusts of a rapier: an important accessory of the fencing of the sixteenth century.—3. A blow with the left hand; hence, a sudden blow or attack from an unexpected quarter.

Stepping back half a pace, he let fly a terrific leer-hander at the doctor. Macmillan's Mag., Feb., 1861, p. 273.

leer-handiness (leer'han'di-nes), n. Same as leer-handedness. [Rare.]

An awkward address, ungraceful attitudes and actions, and a certain leer-handiness (if I may use the expression) proclaim low education. Chesterfield.

leerfulness (leer'nes), n. The condition or state of being left or on the left side. Rightness and leerfulness, upness and downness, are again pure sensations differing specifically from each other, and generically from everything else. W. James, Mind, XII. 14.

leer-off (leer'ôf), a. Laid aside; no longer worn: as, leer-off clothes.

leerward (leer'wärd), adv. [*leer*¹ + -ward.] Toward the left; to the left hand or side; sinistral. Rightward and leerward rise the rocks. Southey. Turning leerward, we approach the Troitzkij Bridge. Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 202.

leer-witted (leer'wit'ed), a. Dull; stupid; foolish. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

leerful, a. See leerful.

leg (leg), n. [Early mod. E. also legge; < ME. leg, pl. legges, < leel. leggr, a leg, a hollow bone, = Dan. leg = Sw. lög, the calf of the leg. The AS. word for 'leg' was scanca (> E. shank); the G. word is bein (= E. bone).] 1. One of the two lower limbs of a man, or any one of the limbs of an animal which support and move the body. Specifically—(a) A lower limb or posterior extremity; a limb which is not an arm or a wing. (b) The part of a lower limb which lies between the knee and the ankle: the crura; distinguished from thigh and foot. (See cut under crura.) In vertebrates the parts called legs are never more than two pairs. When both pairs are used in supporting and moving the body, they are distinguished as fore legs and hind legs, as in all ordinary quadrupeds. A limb not used in support is known by some other name, as wing, fin, arm, etc. In about three fourths of the animal kingdom there are six legs, in three pairs, as in the whole class of Insecta proper (hence called Hexapoda). The arachnids have normally four pairs of legs. All the higher crustaceans have five pairs of legs, and are hence called Decapoda. In some arthropods there are more than 100 pairs of legs, whence the terms centiped, milleped, etc. Leg is often used synonymously with foot. Many parts of invertebrates which are legs in a morphological sense become other kinds of limbs or members, as mouth-parts, claws, falces, etc.

Her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh. Shak., R. and J., II. 1. 19.

The lone hern forgets his melancholy, Lets down his other leg, and, stretching, dreams Of goodly supper in the distant pool. Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

2. Some object resembling a leg in use, position, or appearance: as, the legs of a table or chair; the legs of a pair of dividers; the legs of a triangle (the sides, as opposed to the base, especially the sides adjacent to a right angle); the leg of an angle, or of a hyperbola.

Joint-stools were then created; on three legs Upborne they stood. Couper, Task, I. 19.

I have seen a leg of a rainbow pluge down on the river running through the valley. Jefferson, Correspondence, II. 336.

Hence—3. Something that serves for support, moral or physical. The sprightly voice of sinew-strength'ning pleasure Can lend my bed-rid soul both legs and leisure. Quarles, Emblems, iv. 3.

Worthy but weak Mr. Brandon, You haven't a leg to stand on. Jean Ingelone, Of the Skelligs, xxii.

4. The part of a pair of trousers or drawers, or of a stocking, that covers the leg.—5. In cricket: (a) The part of the field that lies to the left of and behind the batsman as he faces the bowler: as, to strike a ball to leg.

A beautifully pitched ball for the outer stump, which the reckless and unfeeling Jack catches hold of, and hits right round to leg for five, while the applause becomes deafening. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, ii. 8.

(b) The fielder who occupies that part of the field known as leg. Also long-leg.—6. A sharper: same as black-leg, 3. [Slang.]

He was a horse chaunter: he's a leg now.

Dickens, Pickwick, xlii.

Now send then a regular leg, when he's travelling to Chester, York, or Doncaster, to the races, may draw other passengers into play, and make a trifle, or not a trifle, by it; or he will play with other legs.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 501.

7. Naut.: (a) The run made by a ship on one tack when beating to windward. (b) One of two small ropes spliced together, by which a buntline or leech-line is fastened to the foot or leech of a sail.—Abdominal legs. See abdominal.—Artificial legs, supports imitating the natural leg, used by persons who have undergone amputation. They are made of various materials, such as wood, vulcanite, gutta-percha, rawhide, splints crossed at right angles and glued together, etc., and are often provided with ingenious combinations of joints and springs to imitate as far as possible the natural motions. Light artificial legs are commonly called cork legs, but cork is now seldom used in them, willow-wood being found preferable.—Barbados leg, pachydermia, or elephantiasis Arabum. See pachydermia.—Cursorious legs. See cursorious.—False legs of caterpillars, the fleshy abdominal legs, or prop-legs, which disappear in the perfect insect. See cut under Anura.—Fossorial legs. See fossorial.—Hyperbolic leg. See hyperbolic.—In high leg, much excited or exultant; in high feather. [Rare.]

— is not returned: the Mufti in high leg about the Spaniards. Sydney Smith, To Lady Holland, Oct. 8, 1808.

Leg-and-foot guard. See guard.—Leg-of-mutton sleeve. See sleeve.—On one's last legs. See last's, a.—On one's legs, standing, especially to speak: as, to be able to think on one's legs.

Meanwhile the convention had assembled, Mackenzie was on his legs, and was pathetically lamenting the hard condition of the Estates. Macaulay, Hist. Eng.

The leg business, ballet-dancing. [Low.]

I was merely telling your Grace what Mrs. Theobald was. . . . "She was," says Adonis, . . . "in the leg business, your Grace."

Miss Annie Edwardes, Ought we to Visit her?

To change the leg, to change from one gait to another: as, to change his leg twice as he approaches.

Lawrence, Guy Livingstone, ix.

To fall on one's legs. Same as to fall on one's feet (which see, under fall).

A man who has plenty of brains generally falls on his legs. Buhrs, Night and Morning, iii. 3.

To feel one's legs, to begin to support one's self on the legs, as an infant. [Colloq.]

Remarkably beautiful child! . . . Takes notice in a way quite wonderful! May seem impossible to you, but feels his legs already! Dickens, Cricket on the Hearth, i.

To find one's legs. See find.—To give a leg to, to assist by supporting the leg, as in mounting a horse.

The wall is very low, Sir, and your servant will give you a leg up. Dickens, Pickwick, xvi.

To have a bone in one's leg. See bone.—To have the legs of one, to be quicker in running. [Slang.]

The beggar had the legs of me.

Macmillan's Mag., March, 1861, p. 357.

To make a leg, to make a bow or act of obeisance (in allusion to the throwing back of one leg in performing the act).

He that cannot make a leg, put off his cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap. Shak., All's Well, ii. 2. 10.

Making low legs to a nobleman,

Or looking downward, with your eye-lids close. Marlowe, Edward II.

We are just like a Child; give him a Plum, he makes a Leg; give him a second Plum, he makes another Leg.

Selden, Table-Talk, p. 109.

To put the boot on the wrong leg. See boot.—To shake a leg, to dance. [Low.]—To shake a loose leg, to lead an independent and generally licentious life. [Low.]—To show a leg, to get up from or out of bed. [Low.]—To try it on the other leg, to try the only other possible means or resource. [Colloq.]—Upon its legs, established; in a stable or prosperous condition.

"When the paper gets upon its legs"—that was the only answer he received when he asked for a settlement. The Century, XXXVII. 305.

leg (leg), v. i.; pret. and pp. legged, ppr. legging. [leg, n.] 1. To pass on; walk or run nimbly: often with an indefinite it. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch, or slang.]

The fool doth pass the guard now,

He'll kiss his hand and leg it. Shirley, Bird in a Cage, v. 1.

2. To make a reverence.

leg. An abbreviation of legato.

legable (leg'a-bl), a. [< NL. as if legabilis*, < L. legare, send, bequeath: see legacy.] Capable of being bequeathed. Bailey.

legacy (leg'a-si), n.; pl. legacies (-siz). [< ME. legacie, < OF. legacie (found only in sense of 'legateship') = Sp. legacia = Pg. legacia, < ML. as if legatia*, for L. legatum (> It. legato = Sp. legado; cf. Pg. legado, bequeathed), a bequest, < legatus, pp. of legare, bequeath: see legate.

The F. legs, a legacy, is not related; it is a bad spelling of OF. lais: see lease, n.] 1. Money or other property left by will; a bequest; specifically, a gift of personalty by will as distinguished from a devise or gift of realty.

Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy Unto their issue. Shak., J. C., iii. 2. 141.

Samborn bestowed by legacie his goods and possessions upon the said Order, receiving maintenance and exhibition from the said Order, during the terme of his life. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 145.

2. Anything bequeathed or handed down by an ancestor or a predecessor.

Good counsel is the best legacy a father can leave a child. Sir R. L'Estrange.

3. A business which one has received from another to execute; a commission; an errand.

He came and told his legacy. Chapman, Iliad, vii. 348.

4. Legation; embassy.

Offs by often legacies solicited Charles le maigne, the king of France, to be his friend. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 125.

Cumulative legacies. See cumulative.—Demonstrative legacy, a legacy in which the thing or money is not specified or distinguished from all others of the same kind, but a particular fund is pointed out for its payment, as a gift of $1,000 worth of securities to be taken from testator's stocks and bonds, or a certain sum out of a bank-deposit.—General legacy, a legacy of a specified quantity of money or other commodity, payable out of the personal assets generally; one which does not necessitate delivering any particular thing, or paying money exclusively out of any particular part of the estate, as a specific legacy does.

—Legacy duty, a duty to which legacies are subject, for purposes of revenue, as in Great Britain, the rate of which rises according to the remoteness of the relationship of the legatee, and reaches its maximum where he is not related to the testator. In the State of New York a uniform tax of five per cent. on legacies is called collateral inheritance tax.

—Residuary legacy, a gift of whatever remains after satisfying other gifts.—Specific legacy, the bequest of a particular thing or money, specified and distinguished from all others of the same kind, as a picture, or the money in a particular bag. Thus, a bequest of a diamond ring is general; a bequest of my diamond ring is specific.—Vested legacy. See vested.

legacy-hunter (leg'a-si-hun'ter), n. One who seeks to obtain a legacy or legacies by flattery, servility, or other artifice.

The legacy-hunter, however degraded by an ill-compounded appellation in our barbarous language, was known, as I am told, in ancient Rome, by the sonorous titles of "captator" and "hæredipeta."

Johnson, Rambler, No. 197.

legacy-hunting (leg'a-si-hun'ting), n. An eager pursuit of legacies.

legal (lē'gal), a. and n. [< F. légal = Pg. Sp. legal = It. legale, < L. legalis, legal, < lex (leg-), law, ult. akin to E. law: see law.] Cf. leal and loyal, doublets of legal.] I. a. 1. Pertaining or relating to law; connected with the law: as, legal doctrines or studies; a legal document or controversy; legal arguments.—

2. According or conformable to law; permitted or warranted by the law or laws; lawful; not forbidden by law; having the force of law: as, the action is strictly legal; legal traffic or commerce.—

3. Pertaining to the provisions or administration of the law; determined by or in accordance with law; judicial: as, legal proceedings; a legal opinion or decision; a legal standard or test.—

4. Amenable to remedy or punishment by law as distinguished from equity: as, legal waste; legal irregularity.—

5. Created by law; recognized by law: as, legal incapacity; a legal infant; legal crimes.—

6. In theol., according to the Mosaic law or dispensation; according or pertaining to the doctrine of reliance on good works for salvation, as distinguished from that of free grace.—

Legal assets, those assets which are subject to common-law process; such assets as do not require the intervention of equity to be recognized as assets.—

Legal compulsion. See compulsion.—Legal debts, debts that are recoverable in a court of common law, as a bill of exchange or a bond; a simple contract debt, as distinguished from liabilities enforceable only in equity.—

Legal estate, an estate in land recognizable as such in a court of common law. See equitable estate, under estate.—Legal fiction, fraud, holiday. See the nouns.—

Legal interest. See interest.—Legal memory, necessity, person, relation, etc. See the nouns.—

Legal representatives. See representative.—Legal reversion, in Scots law, the period within which a debtor whose heritage has been adjudged is entitled to redeem the subject—that is, to disencumber it of the adjudication by paying the debt adjudged for.—

Legal tender. See tender.—Syn. 2 and 3. Legitimate, etc. (see lawful); legalized, authorized, allowable, just, constitutional.

II. n. In Scots law, same as legal reversion (which see, under I.).—Expiry of the legal. See expiry.

legalisation, legalise. See legalization, legalize.—legalism (lē'gal-izm), n. [< legal + -ism.] 1. Strict adherence to law or prescription; belief in the efficacy of adhering strictly to the requirements of the law. Specifically—

2. In theol., the doctrine that salvation depends on strict observance of the law, as distinguished from the doctrine of salvation through grace; also, the tendency to observe with great strictness the letter of religious law, rather than its spirit.

Leave, therefore, . . . mysticism and symbolism on the one side; cast away with utter scorn geometry and legalism on the other. Ruskin.

His [Zwingli's] profound respect for the letter of the Bible led him to legalism and extreme Sabbatarianism. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 790.

legalist (lē'gal-ist), n. [< legal + -ist.] One who practises or inculcates strict adherence to law; specifically, in theol., one who regards conformity to the law as the ground of salvation, or who is rigorous in exacting obedience to the letter of the law.

They [the Jews] were rigid monotheists and scrupulous legalists, who would strain out a gnat and swallow a camel. Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, I. § 17.

legality (lē'gal-i-ti), n. [< F. légalité = Sp. legalidad = Pg. legalidade = It. legalità, < ML. legalitas (-t-), lawfulness, < L. legalis, legal: see legal. Cf. lealty and loyalty, doublets of legality.] 1. The state or character of being legal; lawfulness; conformity to law.

The legality was clear, the morality doubtful. T. Hook, Gilbert Dury.

The agreement of an action with the law of duty is its legality; that of the maxim with the law is its morality. Abbott, tr. of Kant's Metaph. of Morals.

2. In theol., a reliance on works for salvation; insistence on the mere letter of the law without regard to its spirit: personified in the quotation.

He to whom thou wast sent for ease, being by name Legality, is the son of the bond-woman which now is, and is in bondage with her children; and is, in a mystery, this mount Sinai, which thou hast feared will fall on thy head. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.

legalization (lē'gal-i-zā'shon), n. [< legalis + -ation.] The act of legalizing. Also spelled legalisation.

legalize (lē'gal-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. legalized, ppr. legalizing. [= F. légaliser = Sp. legalizar = Pg. legalisar = It. legalizzare, as legal + -ize.] 1. To make lawful; render conformable to law, either by previous authorization or by giving the sanction of law to what has already been done; authorize; sanction; justify.—

2. In theol., to interpret or apply Scripture in the spirit of legalism.

Also spelled legalise.

legally (lē'gal-i), adv. In a legal manner; lawfully; according to law; in a manner permitted by law.

legality (lē'gal-nes), n. Legality.

legal-tender (lē'gal-ten'der), a. That can be lawfully used in paying a debt: as, legal-tender currency; legal-tender money. See tender.

legantine (leg'an-tin), a. Same as legatine.

legatary (leg'a-tā-ri), n.; pl. legataries (-riz). [= F. légitaire = Sp. Pg. It. legatario, < L. legatarius, a legatee, < legatum, a legacy: see legacy.] One to whom a legacy is bequeathed; a legatee. [Rare.]

legate (leg'at), n. [< ME. legat, legate, < F. légal = Sp. Pg. legado = It. legato, an ambassador, esp. of the Pope, < L. legatus, a deputy, < legare, pp. of legare, send with a commission, appoint, < lex (leg-), law: see law.] Cf. legate, n. 2, legacy.] 1. A person commissioned to represent a state, or the highest authority in the state, in a foreign state or court; a deputy; an ambassador. Specifically—

2. In Rom. hist., a foreign envoy chosen by the senate, or a lieutenant of a general or of a consul or other magistrate in the government of an army or a province.—

3. One who is delegated by the Pope as his representative in the performance of certain ecclesiastical or political functions, or both. The papal legate to a church council is its presiding officer; the ordinary legate to a foreign court was formerly both ambassador to and ecclesiastical overseer of the country to which he was sent; and the legates of six of the former Papal States (see legation, 4) were their governors. Three ranks of legates were early established: legatus (legati) a or de latere (from the side), who were generally cardinals; legati missi or dati (sent or given), corresponding to the modern nuncios or internuncios; and legati nati (legates born), a limited number of bishops or archbishops who had or claimed the rank of legates by right of office in their particular sees.

In this King's Time, the first Legat to supply the Pope's Room came into England.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 41.

The Lord Cardinal Pole, sent here as Legate From our most Holy Father Julius, Pope.
Tennyson, Queen Mary, III. 3.

legate, *n.*² [ME. legatē = Sp. legado = It. legato, < L. legatum, neut. of legatus, pp. of legare, bequeath: see legate, *n.*¹, legacy.] A legacy.

In dysposyng thy legatus, pay firste thy servauntis.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 32.

legatee (leg-ā-tē'), n. [L. legatus, pp. of legare, bequeath (see legate, *n.*², legacy), + -ee.] One to whom a legacy is bequeathed; in the civil law, and as sometimes loosely used in both Great Britain and the United States, one to whom property, real or personal, is given by will.

legateship (leg'āt-ship), n. [L. legatus, *n.*¹, + -ship.] The office or position of a legate.

Thus, by the chance and change of Popes, the Legateship of Anselme could take no place.
Holinshed, Hen. I., an. 1116.

legatine (leg'ā-tin), a. [L. legatus, *n.*¹, + -ine.] 1. Of or pertaining to a legate.

All those things you have done of late, By your power legatine within this kingdom, Fall into the compass of a prænunciare.
Shak., Hen. VIII., III. 2. 339.

Sending from about them [the apostles] to all countreys their Bishops and Archbishops as their deputies, with a kind of Legatine power.
Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

2. Made by or proceeding from a legate: specifically applied to certain ecclesiastical laws enacted in national synods in England under the presidency of legates from the Pope about the time of Henry III.

When any one is absolved from excommunication, it is provided by a legatine constitution that some one shall publish such absolution.
Ayliffe, Parergon.

Also legatine.

Legatine court, a court held by a papal legate, and exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction: seen in England especially in the time of Wolsey, who as legate asserted jurisdiction as a supreme court of appeal over the spiritual courts, and jurisdiction in probate and administration, thus controlling and absorbing in a degree the functions of the courts of the Church of England.

legation (lē-gā'shon), n. [L. legatione = Sp. legación = Pg. legação = It. legazione, < L. legatio (n.), an embassy, < legatus, pp. of legare, send, deputy: see legate, *n.*¹.] 1. A sending forth; a commissioning of one or more persons to act at a distance for another or for others; the office or functions of a legate or envoy.

And thus busynesse was farre dyverse from worldlye affaires; euen so was this kind of ambassade or Legation new, and such a one as had not bene used before.
J. Udall, On Mark vi.

The holy Jesus went now to eat his last paschal supper, and to finish the work of his legation.
Ser. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 301.

2. The person or persons sent to represent a government at a foreign court; an embassy; a diplomatic minister and his suite: as, the legation of the United States at Paris.

A legation or embassy comprises, in most cases, besides the minister, one or more persons, known either as counsellors of embassy, secretaries of legation, or attachés.
E. Schuyler, Amer. Diplomacy, p. 122.

3. The place of business or the official abode of an embassy.—4. Formerly, the designation of any one of those six Papal States that were governed by cardinal legates.

The pope began his government of Ferrara, now become a legation like Bologna.
Brougham.

legatissimo (lā-gā-tō'si-mō), a. and adv. In music, in the smoothest, most connected, most legato manner.

legato (lā-gā'tō), a., adv., and n. [It., pp. of legare, tie, < L. ligare, tie: see ligament.] 1. a. and adv. In music, in a smooth, connected manner, without breaks or pauses between successive tones: opposed to staccato. It is usually indicated by the word itself (or its abbreviation leg.), by a sweeping curve, , above or below the notes to be performed without break, or (for single notes and chords in the midst of staccato passages) by the mark , above or below.

2. n. A smooth, connected manner of performance, or a passage so performed. In singing and on wind-instruments a strict legato is produced only when more tones than one are made continuously by a single breath; on instruments with a keyboard, like the organ and the pianoforte, it is produced by holding each key until just as the next is struck; on bowed instruments it is produced by a continuous motion of the bow, either up or down.

legator (lē-gā'tor), n. [L. legator, a testator, < legatus, pp. of legare, bequeath: see legate, *n.*².] A testator; one who bequeaths a legacy.

A fair estate Bequeath'd by some legator's last intent.
Dryden, Hind and Panther, II. 375.

legatura (leg-ā-tō'rā), n. [It., = E. ligature, q. v.] In music, same as ligature.

legature† (leg'ā-tūr), n. [L. legatura, *n.*¹, + -ure.] The office or mission of a legate.

The Parliament forbade him to usurp the privileges of his legature.
Clarendon, Religion and Policy, vi.

leg-bail (leg'bāl), n. Escape from custody; flight from danger of arrest or capture. [Humorous.]

The summons and complaint were supplied by the tomahawk, while judgment was enforced by the scalping-knife, with leg-bail or a tribal warfare as a court of last resort.
The Century, XXXVII. 632.

To give leg-bail, to escape from custody or arrest by absconding; hence, in general, to seek safety by flight. [Colloq.]

He has us now if he could only give us leg-bail again; and he must be in the same boat with us.
Dickens, Oliver Twist, xix.

leg-band (leg'band), n. A band secured around the leg, serving as part of the dress, and forming the only or principal covering of the leg, now worn by some Italian peasants, etc.; one of a set of bands passing diagonally around the leg below the knee and forming a defense for armed men.

leg-bone (leg'bōn), n. Any bone of the hind limb of a vertebrate. These are the femur or thigh-bone; the tibia, shin-bone, or leg-bone proper; the fibula, perone, or outer bone of the lower leg; the patella or kneecap; and, in animals which walk upon the toes, the bones of the tarsus and metatarsus, such as the cannon-bone of the horse or ox. See cuts under cannon-bone, femur, fibula, and knee-joint.

leg-boot (leg'bōt), n. In a harness, a horseboot extending from the hoof to the knee, used to protect the limb.

leg-by (leg'bi), n. In cricket, a run made on a ball touching any part of the batsman's person except his hand.

legel† (lej), v. t. A Middle English aphetic form of allegel and *allegel*².

legence†, n. Same as legiance for allegiance.

legement†, n. An obsolete form of legdment.

legem-pone† (lē'jem-pō'nē), n. [L. legem pone, the title, in the Anglican prayer-book, of a psalm (the fifth division of Ps. exix., which begins in the Vulgate with these words: "Legem pone mihi, Domine, viam justificationum tuarum"; A. V., "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes") appointed for the 25th day of the month. This psalm came to be associated especially with the 25th day of March, formerly the beginning of the year, and thus a general pay-day; hence the application of the phrase to "ready money," an application probably assisted by a humorous twist given to the literal translation 'lay down the law,' taken to mean 'lay down what is required,' i. e. "the needful," "the ready": L. legem, acc. of lex, law (see legal); pone, 2d pers. sing. impv. of ponere, put, place, lay: see ponent.] Ready money; cash. [Old slang.]

If legem pone comes, he is receav'd, When Vix haud habeo is of hope bereav'd.
The Affectionate Shepherd (1594). (Halliwell.)

But in this, here is nothing to be abated, all their speech is legem pone, or else with their ill custom they will detain thee.
G. Minshul, Essays in Prison, p. 26. (Nares.)

legend (lej'end or lē'jend), n. [L. legenda, < OF. legende, F. légende = Sp. legenda = Pg. legenda, lenda = It. leggenda = D. G. Dan. legende = Sw. legend, a legend, < ML. legenda, f., a legend, story, esp. the lives of the saints; orig. things to be read, neut. pl. of fut. pass. part. of legere, read. = Gr. λέγω, speak: see lecture, etc.] 1. In the early church, a selection of readings from Scripture appointed for use at divine service; later, and more especially, the chronicle or register of the lives of the saints, formerly read at matins and in the refectories of religious houses.

The Legend contained all the lessons out of Holy Writ, and the works of the fathers, read at matins.
Rock, Church of our Fathers, III. II. 212.

2. An entertaining story, especially in early times one relating to wonders or miracles told of a saint; hence, any unauthentic and improbable or non-historical narrative handed down from early times; a tradition.

Thou shalt, why! that thou livest, yere by yere, The most party of thy tyme spende In making of a glorious Legende Of Goode Women, maidens, and wifes That weren trewe in lovinge all her lives.
Chaucer, Prol. to Good Women, l. 483.

It were infinite, and indeed ridiculous, to speak of all the Miracles reported to be done by this St. Dunstan, which may be fit for a Legend, but not for a Chronicle.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 13.

This also was furthered by the Legend of Daphne, recorded by the Poets.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 82.

3. A musical composition set to a poetical story, or intended to express such a story without words.—4. An inscription or device of any kind; particularly, the inscription on a shield or coat of arms, or the explanatory inscription on a monument or under a plan or drawing, or the inscription which accompanies a picture, whether descriptive or supposed to stand for words used by the persons represented in the picture.

The new inscription in fresh paint, Peffer and Snagsby, displacing the time-honoured and not easily to be deciphered legend, Peffer, only.
Dickens, Bleak House, x.

5. In numis., the words or letters stamped on the obverse or the reverse of a coin or medal: sometimes differentiated from inscription as the reading around the circumference of a coin or medal, and sometimes as all that is inscribed excepting the name of the sovereign or other person represented.

The first fault therefore which I shall find with a modern legend is its diffusiveness; you have sometimes the whole side of a medal overrun with it.
Addison, Ancient Medals, III.

6†. A roll; list; book.

Many tales se tellen that Theologie lerneth; And that I man made was and my name yentred In the legende of Iyf longe er I were, Or elles vnwritten for somme wikkednesse as holywrit wytneseth.
Piers Plowman (B), x. 376.

Golden Legend, the "Aurea Legenda" of the middle ages, the most popular of all hagiological records, consisting of lives of saints and histories and descriptions of festivals. It was written by Jacobus de Voragine, Archbishop of Genoa, about the end of the thirteenth century, and is filled with fancies and inventions so extravagant as to be now universally discredited.

legend (lej'end or lē'jend), v. t. [L. legenda, n.] 1. To narrate or celebrate in or as in a legend.

Nor ladies wanton love, nor wand'ring knight Legend I out in rhimes all richly dight.
Bp. Hall, Satires, l. 1.

Some of these perhaps by others are legended for great Saints.
Milton, Hist. Eng., III.

2. To furnish with an inscription; inscribe with a legend: as, "a legended tomb," Poe.

legenda (lē-jen'dā), n. pl. [L., things to be read: see legend.] Eccles., things which may be or are to be read, as distinguished from credenda, things to be believed.

legendary (lej'en- or lē'jen-dā-ri), a. and n. [= F. légendaire = Sp. Pg. legendario = It. legendario, < ML. legendarius, prop. adj., pertaining to legends (as a noun, see liber, a book of legends), < legenda, a legend: see legend.] 1. a. Consisting of legends; like a legend; traditional; mythical; fabulous.

Thereupon she took A bird's-eye view of all the ungracious past: Glanced at the legendary Amazon As emblematic of a nobler age.
Tennyson, Princess, II.

II. n.; pl. legendaries (-riz). 1. A chronicle or register of the lives of the saints: same as legend, I.—2. A book of legends.

Read the Countess of Pembroke's "Arcadia," a gallant legendary, full of pleasurable accidents.
James VI.

3. A relator or compiler of legends.

legendist (lej'en- or lē'jen-dist), n. [L. legenda + -ist.] A writer of legends.

This was decidedly an invention of the legendist.
Southey, Letters, IV. 312. (Encyc. Dict.)

legendize (lej'en- or lē'jen-diz), v. t. [L. legenda + -ize.] To affix a legend to; inscribe with a legend.

Legendre's equation. See equation.

Legendrian (le-jen'dri-an), a. [L. Legendre (see def.) + -ian.] Pertaining to or invented by the eminent French mathematician Adrien Marie Legendre (1752-1833).—Legendrian function. See function.—Legendrian or Legendre's symbol, a symbol, looking like a fraction in parenthesis, used in the theory of numbers. It is equal to plus or minus unity, according as the numerator is or is not a quadratic residue of the denominator. It vanishes if the numerator is divisible by the denominator.

leger¹, n. and a. An obsolete form of *ledger*¹.

leger² (lej'ér), a. [Also ledger; < OF. legier, ligier, leger, F. léger = Sp. ligero = Pg. ligeiro = It. leggiere, light, nimble, < L. as if leviarius*, < levis, light: see levity.] 1. Light or small, as a line. See phrases below.—2†. Slight; unimportant; trivial: as, "leger performances,"

Bacon.—Leger line, in musical notation, a short line added above or below a staff to increase its extent temporarily to more than the usual five lines. The leger lines are numbered from the staff both upward and downward. Also called added line.—Leger space, in musical notation, a space between leger lines. The leger spaces are numbered from the staff both upward and downward. Also called added space.

legerdemain (lej'ér-dē-mān'), n. [Early mod. E. legerdemayne, legierdemayne, leggier demaine, lieger du maine, < F. léger de main, light of hand: léger, light (see *leger*², a.); de, < L. de, of; main, < L. manus, hand: see *main*³.] Sleight of hand; a deceptive performance or trick which depends on dexterity of hand; fallacious adroitness, trickery, or deception generally.

Perceive theyr leggier demaine, wyth which they would iugle forth thir falshood and shift the throngh asyde.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 813.

He in alyghts and jugglyng feates did flow,
And of legierdemayne the mysteries did know.
Spenser, F. Q., v. ix. 13.

The gypsies were then to divide all the money that had been got that week, either by stealing linen or poultry, or by fortune-telling or legerdemain.

I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 112.

To make it ground of acensation against a class of men that they are not patriotic in the most vulgar legerdemain of sophistry.
Macaulay, Civil Disabilities of the Jews.

legerdemainist (lej'ér-dē-mā'nist'), n. [legerdemain + -ist.] One who practises legerdemain; a juggler; a trickster.

legering, n. [*leger*¹, *ledger*¹, n., 4, + *-ing*¹.] See the quotation, and *ledger*¹, n., 4.

The law of legering, which is a deceit that colliers abnae the commonwealth withall in having unlawfull sackes.
Greene, Discovery of Coosnage (1591).

legerity (lē-jer'i-ti), n. [OF. legerite (F. légereté), lightness, < leger, light: see *leger*².] Lightness; nimbleness. [Rare.]

When the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,
• The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.
Shak., Hen. V., iv. 1. 23.

leges, n. Plural of lex.

legestert, n. A variant of legister.

legge¹, v. A Middle English form of *lay*¹.

legge², n. A Middle English form of leg.

legge³, v. t. An aphetic form of *allege*².

legged (leg'ed or legd), a. [leg + *-ed*².] 1. Having legs: often in composition: as, the legged maple-borer; a two-legged animal.

What have we here? a man or a fish? . . . Legged like a man!
Shak., Tempest, ii. 2. 35.

A fine clean corse he is: I would have him buried,
Even as he lies, cross-leggd, like one o' the Tempiara.
Beau. and Fl., Captain, ii. 2.

2. In her., having legs, as a bird, of a different tincture from the body.

legget (leg'et), n. [Cf. tigget, lidget.] A kind of tool used by reed-thatchers. [Local, Eng.]

leggiadro (le-jā'drō), adv. [It., pretty, light, < leggiero, light: see *leger*².] In music, a direction that the music to which the word is appended is to be performed gaily or briskly.

leggiadrous (lej-i-ad'rus), a. [It. leggiadro, pretty, graceful: see leggiadro.] Graceful; pleasing.

Yet this Retirement's cloud ne'er overcast
Those beams of leggiadrous courtesy Which smile in her deportment.
J. Beaumont, Payche, xviii.

leggiero (le-jā'rō), a. and adv. [It., light: see *leger*².] In music, in a light, easy, rapid manner, without emphasizing single tones: usually applied to a decorative or episodic passage.

leggin¹ (leg'in), n. [Also laggen, laggin, lagen: see *ledge*¹.] The rim of a cask. [Scotch.]

leggin² (leg'in), n. See legging.

legging (leg'ing), n. [leg + *-ing*¹.] An outer and extra covering for the leg, usually for cold weather or rough traveling. It commonly has the form of a long gaiter extending to the knee, but for special purposes and sometimes for children to the thigh. Often pronounced and sometimes written leggin.

He was dressed in deer-skin leggings,
Fringed with hedgehog quills and ermine.
Longfellow, Hiawatha, xi.

leggism (leg'izm), n. [leg (blackleg) + -ism.] The character or practices of a leg or blackleg. Blackwood's Mag. [Slang.]

leggy (leg'i), a. [leg + *-y*¹.] Long-legged; having disproportionately long and generally lank legs.

Bobby frequents the Union-Jack club, where you behold Slapper's long-tailed leggy mare in the custody of a red-jacket.
Thackeray, Book of Snobs, x.

Like her great grand-dam, Flenr-de-lis, she stood full sixteen hands, but was neither leggy nor light of bone.
Harper's Mag., LXXV. 205.

leght, n. A Middle English form of *lea*¹.

leg-harness (leg'hār'nes), n. In medieval armor, the defenses of the legs and thighs. Hewitt.

leghet. A Middle English form of *lie*².

leghorn (leg'hörn), n. and a. [So called from Leghorn, F. Livourne = Sp. Liorna = Pg. Líorne, < It. Livorno, < L. Liburnus, Gr. Λίβουρνος (Ptolemy), a sea-port in Tuscany.] 1. n. 1. A fine kind of plait for bonnets and hats made in Tuscany from the straw of a peculiar variety of wheat, Triticum vulgare (turgidum), thickly sown, cut green, and bleached: so named because exported from Leghorn.— 2. A bonnet or hat made of this material.— 3. [cap.] An important breed of the common domestic fowl, of the Spanish type, characterized by great activity and rather small size, high serrated comb, drooping to one side in the hen, and white ear-lobes. The chief varieties are the brown (colored like black-breasted red games), and the white, dominique or cuckoo, and black Leghorns, all but the last having yellow legs and beak. The Leghorns are noted as being perhaps the most prolific layers of all poultry.

II. a. Pertaining to or brought from the city of Leghorn; also, made of or relating to Leghorn straw: as, a Leghorn bonnet or hat.— Leghorn plait, a braid of Leghorn straw, from which bonnets and hats are made. The upper joint of the stem is used.— Leghorn straw, the straw of a variety of wheat, Triticum vulgare, sometimes considered a distinct species with the name T. turgidum.

legiance (lē'jans), n. [Also legeance, ligeance, liegeance, < ME. legiance, legeance, etc., leageans, ligeance, etc., < OF. ligeance, ligeance, liegeance, ligance, etc.: see allegiance.] Same as allegiance.
God forbid, but each were others brother,
Of one ligeance due vnto the King.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 190.

So also of a man that is abjured the realme; for notwithstanding the abjuration, he oweth the king his legiance, and remaineth within the kings protection.
M. Dalton, Country Justice (1620).

legibility (lej-i-bil'i-ti), n. [legible: see -bil-ity.] Capability of being read; legibleness.

His [Lamb's] badinage on his sister's handwriting was in jest. It was remarkable for its perfect legibility.
Talfourd, Memoirs of Lamb.

legible (lej'i-bl), a. [= Sp. legible = Pg. legível, < LL. legibilis, legible, < L. legere, read: see legend.] 1. That may be read; written plainly or in intelligible characters: as, a legible manuscript.
Let me receive no more Gibberish or Hieroglyphics from you, but legible Letters.
Howell, Letters, I. v. 28.

The old gate [of the convent of Mount Sinai] now built up is on the west side; there is some sign of a Greek inscription over it, but such as I believe would not be legible, if any one could come near it.
Pococke, Description of the East, I. 149.

Hence—2. That may be discovered or discerned by marks or indications.
People's opinions of themselves are legible in their countenances.
Jeremy Collier.

=Syn. Readable, recognizable, plain, manifest.

legibleness (lej'i-bl-nes), n. The quality or state of being legible; legibility.

legibly (lej'i-bli), adv. In a legible manner; so as to be read without difficulty: as, a manuscript legibly written.

legiert, n. and a. See *ledger*¹.

legierdemainet, n. See legerdemain.

legio (lē'ji-ō), n.; pl. legiones (lē-ji-ō'nēz). [L.: see legion.] 1. n., a legion.

legion (lē'jon), n. [ME. legium, legium, < OF. legion, < OE. légion, F. légion = Sp. legion = Pg. legião = It. legione = Gr. λεγεών, λεγιών, < L. legio (n.), a Roman legion, < legere, gather, select, = Gr. λέγω, collect: see legend.] 1. In Rom. antiq., a body of infantry not corresponding exactly to either the regiment or the army-corps of modern times, composed of different numbers of men at different periods, from 3,000 under the kings to over 6,000 under Marius, usually combined with a considerable proportion of cavalry. The ancient legion had 300 horse, and that of Maria about 700. Each legion was divided into ten cohorts, each cohort into three maniples, and each maniplo into two centuries. The great power of the Roman legion was due to its rigid discipline and its tactical formation in battle, which was so open and flexible as to enable it to meet every emergency without surprise or derangement. It thus presented a strong contrast on the one hand to the unwieldy solidity of the Greek phalanx, and on the other to the confused and undisciplined state of other armies of the time. Compare maniple.
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe.
Shak., J. C., iv. 3. 215.

2. In French hist., one of numerous military bodies so called at different periods. Foreign legions were employed by the kings from medieval times. A number of them were formed during the Revolution and under the first empire, of which one was maintained till a recent period. This body, called specifically the legion, made itself famous in Algiers and in the Crimea. There were also provincial legions in the sixteenth century.

A soldier of the legion lay dying in Algiers.
Mrs. Norton, Bingen on the Rhine.

3. Any distinct military force or organization comparable to the Roman legion.

I myself beheld the King Charge at the head of all his Table Round,
And all his legions crying Christ and him.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

4. An extraordinary number; a great multitude.

My name is Legion: for we are many. Mark v. 9.

Where one sin has entered, legions will force their way through the same breach.
Rogers.

5. In zool., a large group or series of animals, of indeterminate taxonomic rank, but generally of high grade. In Haeckel's system, for example, the legion intervenes between the subclass and the order, and corresponds to what is usually called a superorder.— Legion of Honor, in France, an order of distinction and reward for civil and military services, instituted in May, 1802, during the consulate, by Napoleon Bonaparte, but since modified from time to time in important particulars. Under the first empire the distinctions conferred invested the person decorated with the rank of legatory, officer, commander, grand-officer, or grand-cross. The order holds considerable property, the proceeds of which are paid out in pensions, principally to wounded and disabled members.— The Thundering Legion, in Christian tradition, the name given to a legion of Christians in the army of Marcus Anrelus, in battle with the Quadi, whose prayers for rain were answered, according to the tradition, by a thunder-shower, which refreshed the thirsty Romans, while it destroyed numbers of the enemy by lightning.

legion (lē'jon), v. t. [legion, n.] To enroll or form into a legion.

We met the vultures, legioned in the air,
Stemming the torrent of the tainted wind.
Shelley, Hellas.

legionary (lē'jon-ā-ri), a. and n. [= F. légionnaire = Sp. Pg. It. legionario, < L. legionarius, belonging to a legion, < legio (n.), a Roman legion: see legion.] 1. a. 1. Pertaining to or consisting of a legion or legions: as, legionary discipline; a legionary soldier; a legionary force.— 2. Containing a great number.

Too many applying themselves betwixt jest and earnest make up the legionary body of error.
Sir T. Browne.

II. n.; pl. legionaries (-riz). 1. One of a legion; especially, a Roman soldier belonging to a legion or a subaltern member of the Legion of Honor.— 2. The neuter of a kind of red ant: so named by Huber. It is probably the neuter of Polyergus rufescens, a slave-making species.

legiones, n. Plural of legio.

legionize (lē'jon-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. legionized, ppr. legionizing. [legion + -ize.] To form into a legion.

Descend, sweet Angels, legioniz'd in ranks.
Davies, Holy Roode, p. 28.

leg-iron (leg'ī'ern), n. 1. A fetter for the leg. Dickens, Great Expectations, xvi.— 2. In car-building, a wrought-iron forging attached to the sole-bar, and supporting the foot-boards.

legislate (lej'is-lāt), v.; pret. and pp. legislated, ppr. legislating. [A back formation (like Pg. legislar) from legislator, legislation, etc., q. v.] 1. intrans. To exercise the function of legislation; make or enact a law or laws.

II. trans. To act upon or effect by means of legislation; determine by enactment: as, to legislate a man out of office (as by abolishing the office or changing its tenure); to legislate a corporation into existence. [U. S.]

legislation (lej-is-lā'shən), n. [= F. législation = Sp. legislación = Pg. legislação = It. legislazione, < L. legis latio (n.), a proposing of a law: legis, gen. of lex, law (see legal); latio (n.), a bearing, proposing: see latio.] 1. The enacting of laws or statutes; the exercise of the power of legislating; the business of a legislator or a legislature.— 2. The product of legislative action; a law or the laws promulgated by a legislator or a legislature; a statute, or a body of statutory law: as, the legislation of Moses is contained in the Pentateuch.— Class legislation, that legislation which affects the interests of a particular class of persons.— General legislation, that legislation which is applicable throughout the state generally, as distinguished from special legislation, which affects only particular persons or localities.— Local legislation. See local.

legislative (lej'is-lā-tiv), a. and n. [= F. législatif = Sp. Pg. It. legislativo; as legislate + -ive.] 1. a. 1. Pertaining to or resulting from legislation; ordained by a legislator or a legislature; having statutory force or quality: as, legislative proceedings; a legislative prohibition.

The poet is a kind of lawgiver, and those qualities are proper to the legislative style.
Dryden.

2. Having power to legislate; enacting or uttering laws; lawmaking: as, a legislative body; legislative authority.— 3. Of or belonging to a legislature; relating to or consisting of a body of legislators: as, a legislative committee; a legislative vote; a legislative recess.—Legislative Assembly. See assembly.—Legislative power, the power to make or alter laws. See Judicial power (under Judicial), and executive, 1.

II. n. A person, as a prince or dictator, or a body of persons, as a parliamentary assembly, invested with authority to make or alter laws. Compare executive.

The power of the legislative, being derived from the people by a positive voluntary grant and institution, can be no other than what that positive grant conveyed, which being only to make laws and not to make legislators, the legislative can have no power to transfer their authority of making laws, and place it in other hands.
Locke, Civil Government, xi.

legislatively (lej'is-lā-tiv-ly), adv. By legislative action; by means of legislation.

legislator (lej'is-lā-ter), n. [= F. législateur = Sp. Pg. legislador = It. legislatore, < L. legislator (also legum lator), a lawgiver; legis, gen., legum, gen. pl., of lex, law (see legal); lator, a bearer, proposer of a law, < latus, used as pp. of ferre = E. bear.¹ Cf. legislation.] A lawgiver; an individual who gives or makes laws; also, a member of a legislature or parliament, or other lawmaking body.

legislatorial (lej'is-lā-tō-ri-al), a. [legislator + -ial.] 1. Pertaining or relating to legislation or legislators: as, legislatorial power or dictation.—2. Having the power of a legislator; acting as a legislator or legislature.

Solon, the legislatorial founder of Athens.

De Quincey, Homer, ii.

One may imagine a community governed by a dependent legislatorial body.

Encyc. Brit., XIV. 357.

legislatorship (lej'is-lā-tōr-ship), n. [legislator + -ship.] The office of legislator.

legislatress (lej'is-lā-tres), n. [legislator + -ess.] A woman who makes laws; a female legislator. Shaftesbury, Morals, iv. § 2.

legislatrix (lej'is-lā'triks), n. [= F. législatrice, < L. as if legis latrix*, fem. of legis lator, legislator: see legislator.] Same as legislatress.

legislature (lej'is-lā-tūr), n. [= F. législature = Sp. Pg. It. legislatura, lawgiver; < L. legis, gen. of lex, law, + (LL.) latura, a bearing, carrying, < latus, pp. of ferre = E. bear.¹: see legislator.] 1. A body of lawmakers; an assemblage of men invested with the power of making, repealing, or changing the laws of a country or state, and of raising and appropriating its revenues. A legislature generally consists of two houses or separate bodies acting concurrently, and usually requires the assent of the supreme executive authority for the validation of its acts, the refusal of which, however, may in the United States be overcome by a prescribed majority of votes. (See veto.) Legislatures have different specific names, as the Congress of the United States and the Legislatures of most of the separate States (the former consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives, and the two houses of the latter being generally also termed Senate and House of Representatives or Assembly), the Parliament of Great Britain (divided into the House of Lords and the House of Commons), the Reichstag of Germany, the Cortes of Spain, etc. See house, n., 6.

In the legislature, the people are a check on the nobility, and the nobility a check upon the people.

Blackstone, Com., I. ii.

'Twas April, as the bumpkins say:

The legislature call'd it May. Couper, A Fable.

2. Any body of persons authorized to make laws or rules for the community represented by them: as, the General Assembly is the legislature of the Presbyterian Church.

legist (lō'jist), n. [OF. legiste, F. légiste = Sp. Pg. It. legista, < ML. legista, one skilled in law, < L. lex (leg-), law: see legal. Cf. legister.] One skilled in the laws.

Though there should be emulation between them, yet as legists they will agree in magnifying that wherein they are best.

Bacon, Letters, cxxvii., To the King.

Ye learned legists of contentions law.

Ford, Fame's Memorial.

legister, n. [ME., also legistre, legester, < OF. legistre, equiv. to legiste, legist: see legist.] A legist.

Bishopes yblessed gif thei ben as thei shulden, Legistes of bothe the lawes, the lewed the-re-with-to preche.

Piers Plowman (B), vii. 14.

legitim, n. See legitime.

legitimacy (lē-jit'i-mā-si), n. [legitima(te) + -cy.] 1. The state of being legitimate; conformity to law, rule, or principle; natural or logical result; regularity; propriety; correctness: as, the legitimacy of a government, of an argument, or of a conclusion.

During his first ten years of duty Beust served in Berlin and Paris; the first, the stronghold of legitimacy, more conservative than Vienna itself; the second, the center of fashion and culture, where the salon had not yet become extinct.

Quarterly Rev., CXLV. 330.

Specifically—2. Lawfulness of birth: opposed to bastardy.—3. Directness or regularity of descent, as affecting the right of succession. See legitimize, 2.

legitimate (lē-jit'i-māt), v. t.; pret. and pp. legitimated, ppr. legitimizing. [ML. legitimatus, pp. of legitimare (> It. legitimare = Pg. Sp. legítimar = F. légitimer), make lawful, < L. legitimus, lawful: see legitimate.] 1. To make lawful; establish the legitimacy or propriety of.

Our blessed Lord was pleased to legitimate tear to us by his agony and prayers in the garden.

Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, iii. 8.

To enact a statute of that which he dares not seem to approve, even to legitimate vice.

Milton, Divorce, li. 2.

The general voice has legitimated this objection.

Jefferson, Correspondence, II. 450.

2. To render legitimate, as a bastard; invest with the rights of a legitimate child or lawful heir, as one born out of wedlock. Under the civil and canon laws operative in many European countries a bastard is legitimated by the subsequent marriage of the parents; but this is not the case under the laws of England and most of the United States.

At this Time, in a Parliament, the Duke of Lancaster caused to be legitimated the Issue he had by Katherine Swinford before he married her.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 147.

legitimate (lē-jit'i-māt), a. [ML. legitimatus, pp. of legitimare, make lawful: see the verb.] 1. According to law, rule, or precedent; agreeable to established principles or standards; in conformity with custom or usage; lawful; regular; orderly; proper: as, a legitimate king or government; the legitimate drama; a legitimate subject of debate; legitimate trade.

There are certain themes . . . which are too entirely horrible for legitimate fiction.

Poe, Tales, I. 325.

Among the topics of literary speculation, there is none more legitimate or more interesting than to consider who, among the writers of a given age, are elected to live.

Gladstone, Might of Right, p. 123.

Specifically—2. Of lawful birth; born in wedlock, or of parents legally married: as, legitimate children; a legitimate heir.

Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;

Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him.

Shak., K. John, I. 1. 116.

A legitimate child is one born of wedlock; or, more particularly, one between whose parents the relation of marriage subsisted either at the time when he was begotten, or at the time when he was born, or at some intervening period.

Stephen, 2 Com., 283.

3. Justly based on the premises; logically correct, allowable, or valid: as, a legitimate result; legitimate arguments or conclusion.

I will prove it [an assertion] legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Shak., Twelfth Night, iii. 2. 16.

A series of legitimate syllogisms, exhibiting separately and distinctly, in a light as clear and strong as language can afford, each successive link of the demonstration.

D. Stewart, Human Mind, II. iii. 1.

It is just as legitimate an inference that there are bodies in stellar space not luminous as that there are luminous bodies in space not visible.

J. Croly, Climate and Cosmology, p. 310.

Legitimate drama, a designation used at different periods with a varying specific reference, being sometimes applied to the representation of Shakspeare's plays and at other times otherwise restricted, but generally employed loosely to indicate approval of some (usually not distant) former time.—Legitimate prejudice, an innate or a priori presumption and anticipation of nature. = Syn. Legal, Licit, etc. See lawful.

legitimately (lē-jit'i-māt-ly), adv. In a legitimate manner; lawfully; according to law; genuinely; not falsely.

legitimateness (lē-jit'i-māt-nes), n. The state or quality of being legitimate; legality; lawfulness; genuineness.

Asserting the legitimateness of his ordination.

Barrow, Pope's Supremacy.

legitimation (lē-jit-i-mā'shōn), n. [= F. légitimation = Sp. legitimación = Pg. legitimação = It. legittimazione, legittimazione, < ML. as if legitimatō(n)*, < legitimare, legitimate: see legitimate, v.] 1. The act of making legal, or of giving a thing the recognition of law.

The coinage or legitimation of money.

East.

2. The act of rendering legitimate; specifically, the investing of an illegitimate child, or one supposed to be the issue of an illegal marriage, with the rights of one born in lawful wedlock.

This doubt was kept long open, in respect of the two queens that succeeded, Mary and Elizabeth, whose legitimations were incompatible one with another, though their succession was settled by act of parliament.

Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII. (ed. Bohn), p. 452.

I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land; Legitimation, name, and all is gone;

Then, good my mother, let me know my father.

Shak., K. John, I. 1. 243.

3. In Germany, etc., proof of identity and of legal permission to reside in a certain place, engage in a certain occupation, etc.—Letters of legitimation, in Scots law, letters from the sovereign empowering a bastard who has no lawful children to dispose of his heritage or movables at any time during his life, and to make a testament. These privileges, however, he can now enjoy without letters of legitimation.

legitimatist (lē-jit'i-mā-tist), n. [legitimate, a., + -ist.] Same as legitimize.

legitimize (lē-jit'i-mā-tiz), v. t.; pret. and pp. legitimized, ppr. legitimizing. [legitimate + -ize.] To legitimate. [Rare.]

A Governor-General of the Soudan . . . who legitimizes the slave-trade by a decree. The Century, XXVIII. 561.

legitime (lej'i-tim), n. [F. légitime = Sp. legítimo = Pg. legítimo = It. legittimo, < L. legitimus, according to law, legal, legitimate, < lex (leg-), law: see legal.] In civil law, the part of the free movable property of a testator which he cannot bequeath away from his children, or deprive them of inheriting by making gifts while living. The one fourth which was thus secured to the children by the Roman law was termed the Falcidian portion, the law being named after the tribune Falcidius, who proposed it. This principle has been adopted in varying extent in some of the principal countries of Europe, including Scotland, and also in Louisiana. In Scots law the legitime (commonly spelled legitim), also called baron's part of gear (the part which the testator may freely dispose of being termed the dead's part), amounts to one third where the father has left a widow, and one half where there is no widow. It cannot be diminished or affected by any testamentary or other deed.

legitimation, legitimize. See legitimation, legitimize.

legitimism (lē-jit'i-mizm), n. [F. légitimisme, < L. legitimus, legitimate: see legitimate and -ism.] Maintenance of or insistence upon legitimacy in any relation; specifically, the principles of the Legitimists.

The theory of sovereignty and government called legitimism, which is still a factor in French and Spanish politics, is ultimately based on the assumption of a sort of sacred and indefeasible law regulating succession to the Crown, and placing it beyond competition and above popular sanction.

Maine, Early Law and Custom, p. 143.

legitimist (lē-jit'i-mist), n. [F. légitimiste = Sp. legitimista, < L. legitimus, legitimate: see legitimate and -ist.] 1. One who maintains or advocates legitimacy of any kind; especially, a supporter of legitimate authority; one who believes in the sacredness of hereditary monarchical government; a favorer of the doctrine of divine right. Specifically—2. [cap.] (a) In France, a supporter of the claim to the throne of the elder branch of the Bourbons, descendants of Louis XIV., in opposition to that of the Orleans family, descendants of the Duke of Orleans, brother of Louis XIV. Charles X., the representative of the elder line, was deposed in 1830, and replaced by Louis Philippe, of the younger line. The succession fell into abeyance after the deposition of the latter in 1848, and the dispute was terminated in 1883 by the death of the childless Comte de Chambord (who was actually invested with the crown at the age of ten by the abdication of his grandfather, Charles X., and of the daphin, the Duc d'Angoulême, and was called by his adherents Henry V.), leaving the Comte de Paris, grandson of Louis Philippe, sole heir to the royal claims of the whole Bourbon family. (b) In Spain, same as Carlist, 2.

legitimization (lē-jit'i-mi-zā'shōn), n. [legitimize + -ation.] Legitimation. Also spelled legitimation.

The conflict of laws on the subject of legitimization by subsequent marriage yields some curious results.

Encyc. Brit., III. 427.

legitimize (lē-jit'i-miz), v. t.; pret. and pp. legitimized, ppr. legitimizing. [L. legitimus, legitimate (see legitimate), + -ize.] To legitimate. Also spelled legitimise.

legless (leg'les), a. [leg + -less.] Having no legs.

leglet (leg'let), n. [leg + -let.] An ornament for the leg, of the same nature as the anklet.

Her [the Begum of Oude's] dress was an immense pair of trousers of striped Indian silk, a Cashmere shawl . . . over a close covering of blue and yellow silk, two pairs of remarkable slippers, numbers of anklets and leglets, a great deal of jewelry, and a large blue cloak over all.

Caroline Fox, Journal, p. 11.

leglin (leg'lin), n. [Appar. for legling*, dim. of legel*, < Icel. legill = Sw. lågell = OHG. lagila, lagella, MIG. lagelc, lagel, lagel, G. legel, lågell, a small cask, < L. lagena, a flagon: see lagena.] A wooden milk-pail. [Scotch.]

The lassies are lonely, dowle, and wae; . . . lik ane lifts her leglin, and hies her away.

Jane Elliot, Flowers of the Forest.

leg-lock (leg'lok), n. A lock or fetter for the leg.

leg-muff (leg'muf), n. One of the fleecy or downy puffs or tufts about the feet of many humming-birds; a fluffy legging. See cut under Eriocnemis.

Legnotidae (leg-nō-tid'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bartling, 1830), < Legnotis (-id-), a former genus of plants now referred to Cassipourea (< Gr. λεγωτός, with a colored border, < λεγωίν, furnish with a colored border, < λέγω, a hem, border, esp. a colored border), + -eae.] A tribe of tropical trees or shrubs of the natural order Rhizophoraceae sometimes regarded as a distinct order, chiefly distinguished from the rest of the order by the presence of albumen in the seed. It embraces 11 genera and about 31 species, inhabiting the immediate coasts and muddy estuaries of various tropical countries and islands.

lego-literary (lē'gō-lit'ē-rā-ri), a. [L. lex (leg-), law (see legal), + E. literary, q. v.] Pertaining to the literature of law. [Rare and barbarous.]

An essay on this lego-literary subject. Lord Campbell.

leg-rest (leg'rest), n. A rest or support for the leg.

Tom advanced before him, carrying the leg-rest.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, iii. 8.

leg-shield (leg'shēld), n. A defensive appliance formerly used to protect the leg of a jester: sometimes attached to the saddle, sometimes to the pommel of the horse, and sometimes forming a separate shield-shaped plate of iron. This shield, of whatever form, was worn particularly to guard the left leg, because this side was especially liable to injury by striking against the barrier which separated the jousting knights. The first of the three forms was also used in war.

Leguatia (leg-ū-ā'ti-ā), n. [NL., named after one Leguat.] A genus of large ralliform birds of the Mascarene Islands, recently extinct; the giant rails. L. gigantea, a species about 6 feet tall, was described by Leguat. H. Schlegel, 1858.

leguleian (leg-ū-lē'yān), a. and n. [L. leguleius, a pettifogging lawyer, with dim. -ul-, < lex (leg-), law: see legal.] I. a. Pettifogging. [Rare.]

In the classical English sense, or in the sense of leguleian barbarism. De Quincey.

II. n. A pettifogger. [Rare.]

You do but that over again that you have from the very beginning of your Discourse, and which some silly Leguleians now and then do, to argue unawares against their own Clients. Milton, Answer to Salmasius.

legume (leg'ūm or lē-gūm'), n. [F. légume = Sp. legumbre = Pg. It. legume, pulse, < L. legumen, any leguminous plant, pulse, esp. the bean, lit. 'that which may be gathered,' < legere, gather: see legend.] I. pl. The fruit of leguminous plants of the pea kind; pulse.

Legumes, or Legumens, are a species of plants which are called pulse, such as pease, beans, &c., and are so called because they may be gather'd by the hand without cutting. Müller, Gardener's Dict.

2. A pod formed of a simple pistil, which is dehiscent by both sutures and so divides into two valves, the seeds being borne at the inner or ventral suture only. The name is confined to the fruit of the Leguminosae. In the modification of the legume called a loment the pod breaks up into indehiscent joints. See cut under loment.

legumen (lē-gū'men), n. [L.: see legume.] Same as legume.

legumin (lē-gū'min), n. [legume + -in.] A nitrogenous proteid substance resembling casein, obtained from peas and other legumes. It is insoluble in water or acid, but is freely soluble in very dilute alkali, and has an acid reaction. Also called vegetable casein.

leguminar (lē-gū'mi-nār), a. In bot., resembling or characteristic of a legume: said of dehiscence by a marginal suture.

leguminiform (leg-ū'min'i-fōrm), a. [L. legumen, legume, + forma, form.] Having the form of a legume.

Leguminosae (lē-gū'mi-nō'sē), n. pl. [NL. (P. S. Ralph, 1849), fem. pl. of leguminosus, leguminous: see leguminous.] A large order of dicotyledonous plants, exceeded in the number of species by the Compositae only, belonging to the great division (cohort) Rosales. It is characterized, in brief, by the generally papilionaceous but sometimes regular flowers, and a single free pistil that forms a fruit known as a legume. The leaves are, with rare exceptions, alternate, compound, and generally pinnate. The order is composed of trees, shrubs, and herbs, distributed throughout the world, except the frigid islands of the antarctic region. It is divided into three suborders, known as the Papilionaceae, Cesalpiniaceae, and Mimosaceae. There are about 7,000 species, contained in about 430 genera, mostly included in the suborders Papilionaceae and Cesalpiniaceae. The order contains many plants common in cultivation, such as the acacias, genistas, Wisteria, etc.; also food-plants, such as the kidney-bean, Phaseolus vulgaris, and lucerne, Medicago sativa; some are used medicinally, from others are obtained products of commercial value, and a few are poisonous. Also called Fabaceae.

leguminose (lē-gū'mi-nōs), a. [NL. leguminosus: see leguminous.] Same as leguminous.

leguminous (lē-gū'mi-nus), a. [= F. légumineux = Sp. Pg. It. leguminoso, < NL. leguminosus, pertaining to pulse, bearing legumes, < L. legumen (legumin-), pulse, bean, NL. legume: see legume.] 1. Pertaining to pulse; consisting of pulse.—2. In bot., bearing legumes as seed-vessels; pertaining to plants which bear legumes, as peas; specifically, of or pertaining to the Leguminosae.

Also leguminose.

lehrbachite (lār'boch-it), n. [Lehrbach (see def.) + -ite.] A rare selenide of lead and mercury occurring at Lehrbach in the Harz.

lei- For scientific words so beginning, see lio-.

Leibnitzian (līb-nit'zi-an), a. and n. [Leibnitz, often written Leibniz (see def.), + -ian.]

I. a. Belonging, due, or according to the German philosopher and mathematician Gottfried Wilhelm Leibnitz (1646–1716). In philosophy Leibnitz taught the doctrine of monads, the identity of indiscernibles, the law of continuity, preestablished harmony, the doctrine of vis viva, innate ideas, a universal characteristic, the principle of sufficient reason, theism, optimism, etc. He and Newton were independent inventors of the differential and integral calculus, but the name, notation, etc., which have prevailed are those of Leibnitz.

II. n. A follower of Leibnitz; in math., an early student of the infinitesimal calculus.

Leibnitzianism (līb-nit'zi-an-izm), n. [Leibnitzian + -ism.] The doctrine and principles of the Leibnitzian philosophy.

Leibnitz's theorem. See theorem.

leidgett, n. and a. An obsolete form of *ledger*¹.

leiet, v. A Middle English form of *lay*¹.

leift, n. A Middle English (Scotch) form of *leave*².

leigert, n. and a. An obsolete form of *ledger*¹.

leiger-du-mainet, n. An obsolete variant of legerdemain.

leigh¹ (lē), n. A different spelling of *lea*¹, meadow or pasture, used as a suffix (-leigh, also -ley, -ly) in English place-names, especially in Devonshire: as, Chudleigh, Chulmleigh, Calverleigh.

leigh², n. An obsolete preterit of *lie*².

leighton (lē'ton), n. [Also laughton; ME. leighton, leightun, lāhton, < AS. leāhtūn, lēhtūn, a garden of herbs, < leac- (changed to leah- before t), herb (see leek), + tūn, an inclosure: see town.] A garden. [Prov. Eng.]

leightonward, n. [ME. leightunward, < AS. leāhtunward*, lēctinward, a gardener, < leāhtūn, a garden, + ward, ward, keeper.] A gardener.

leikin, n. [A contr. of liefkin.] A sweetheart. Hallivell. [North. Eng.]

leil, a. Another (Scotch) spelling of leal.

leimma, n. See limma.

leio- For scientific words so beginning, see lio-.

Leiophyllum (li-ō-fil'um), n. [NL. (Persoon, 1805), < Gr. λείος, smooth, + φύλλον, a leaf.] A genus of ericaceous plants of the tribe Rhodoreae, distinguished by the separate lobes of the corolla and the terminal corymbose arrangement of the white to rose-colored flowers. L. buxifolium, the only species, is a small shrub with alternate oblong or oval evergreen leaves, inhabiting the sandy pine-barrens of eastern North America and the mountains of Carolina. It is a pretty wild flower, also cultivated, known as sand-myrtle.

Leipoa (li-pō'ā), n. [NL. (Gould, 1840), also Leipoa, Leipoa, Laiopa, and Liopa; origin uncertain.] 1. A genus of Australian mound-birds, of the family Megapodidae and subfamily Megapodinae, having the plumage ocellated. L. ocellata, the only species, is about 2 feet long. It is known as the native pheasant by the English colonists. Its mounds are constructed in a peculiar manner.

2. [l. c.] A bird of this genus: as, "the ocellated leipoa," Gould.

leirt, n. A Middle English form of *lair*¹.

leiset, n. An irregular spelling of *lash*¹, 4.

leisert, n. A Middle English form of leisure.

leister, lister (lēs'tēr, lis'tēr), n. [Ice. lýstr = Norw. lýster = Sw. lýster = Dan. lýster, a salmon-spear.] A barbed spear having three or more prongs, for striking and taking fish; a salmon-spear. Also called waster. [Scotch.]

A three-taed leister on the fither [shoulder]
Lay, large and lang.
Burns, Death and Doctor Hornbook.

leister (lēs'tēr), v. t. [leister, n.] To strike or take with a leister. [Scotch.]

He [Scoti] and Skene of Rubislaw and I were out one night about midnight, leistering kippels in Tweed.
Hogg, quoted in Personal Traits of Brit. Authors, III. 63.

Leistes (lis'tēz), n. [NL. (Swainson, 1826), < Gr. ληστής, Attic ληστής, a robber: see Lestes.] A genus of American passerine birds of the family Icteridae, to which different limits have been assigned. It is now restricted to two South American species, L. guianensis and L. superciliosus, which resemble marsh-blackbirds of the genus Agelaius in form, but have the tail short with acute rectrices. The male is blackish, with the bend of the wing and most of the under parts scarlet.

leisurable (lē'zhūr- or lezh'ūr-ā-bl), a. [Formerly also leasurable; < leisure + -able.] 1. Leisurely; spare. [Rare.]

This . . . I had at leisurable hours composed.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, Pref.

2*t.* Leisurely; not hurried.

Thus much I say, that by some leisurable trauell it were not hard matter to induce all their ancient feet into vae with va.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 87.

leisurably (lē'zhūr- or lezh'ūr-ā-bli), adv. In a leisurable manner; at leisure; without haste. [Rare.]

But what shall bee their glory and reward thou shalt see, if thou wilt leisurably lyaten and behold to the end of the tragedy.
Barnes, Works, p. 358.

leisure (lē'zhūr or lezh'ūr), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also leasure, leisour; with orig. term. -er (-erō), irreg. accom. to -ure; < ME. leiser, leisere, leyser, layser, laser, < OF. leisir, lesir, laissir, lasir, leizeir, loisir, permission, leisure, F. loisir, leisure, < leisir, loisir, be permitted, < L. licere, be permitted: see license.] I. n. 1. Opportunity for ease or relaxation; freedom from necessary occupation or business; spare time.

His limbs resol'd through idle leisour, Unto sweete sleepe he may securely lend.
Spenser, Virgil's Gnat, l. 141.

Where other senses want not their delights
At home in leisure and domestick ease.
Milton, S. A., l. 917.

The founding of a new philosophy, the imparting of a new direction to the minds of speculators, this was the amusement of his leisure.
Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

2. Convenient opportunity; available or commodious time; hence, convenience; ease.

She . . . swoore hir oath, by Seint Thomas of Kent,
That she wol been at his comandement
Whan that she may hir leyser wel espie.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 107.

Their vaasals, seruanta and slauca yead it [hair] short or shauen in signe of seruitude and because they had no meane nor leasure to kembe and keepe it cleanly.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 240.

If your leisure serued, I would speak with you.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 2. 84.

Passions must have leisure to digest.
Bp. Hall, Epistles, li. 9.

At leisure (GF. a leisir), free from occupation; not engaged: as, I am now at leisure to hear you.

Go youre way, and another tyme we shall speke more at leyser.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 7.

Madam, Mrs. Candour is below, and if your ladyship's at leisure, will leave her carriage.
Sheridan, School for Scandal, l. 1.

At one's leisure, at one's ease or convenience; at any time otherwise unoccupied: as, do it at your leisure.

I shall leave with him that rebuke to be considered at his leisure.
Locke.

II. a. Free from business; idle; unoccupied: as, leisure moments.

I spent my time very agreeably at Damascus, passing my leisure hours in the coffee houses, and commonly taking my repast in them.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 126.

It may be accepted as the old-world assumption that the foundation on which the structure known as "Society" is founded is the existence of a leisure class.
Arch. Forbes, Souvenirs of some Continents, p. 143.

leisured (lē'zhūrd or lezh'ūrd), a. [leisure + -ed.] Having ample leisure; not occupied with business.

We are not debating whether government ought to be carried on by the people rather than by the leisured classes.
Gladstone, Gleanings, l. 193.

Many of the inhabitants belong to the leisured class.
Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 491.

leisurely (lē'zhūr-li or lezh'ūr-li), a. [*ME. leiserly, layserly; < leisure + -ly.] Done at leisure; not hasty; deliberate: as, a leisurely stroll; a leisurely survey.

With leisurely delight she by degrees
Lifts ev'ry hill, does ev'ry drawer draw.
Sir W. Davenant, Gondibert, iii. 1.

He . . . was at last taken up into heaven in their sight, by a slow and leisurely ascent.
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. i.

leisurely (lē'zhūr-li or lezh'ūr-li), adv. [leisurely, a.] At leisure; not hastily or hurriedly; deliberately.

Others santly Promise more speed, but do it leisurely.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 1349.
A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one. Wordsworth, Sonnets, l. 14.

Leitch's blue. See blue.
leitet, n. See leit.
Leitner's blue. See blue.
Leitneria (lit-né-'ri-ä), n. [NL. (A. W. Chapman, 1860), named after Dr. Edward F. Leitner, who collected in Florida.] A genus of plants, type of the order Leitneria. L. Florida, a native of Florida, is a stout shrub from 2 to 6 feet in height, with short thick branches and deciduous entire leaves, smooth and shining above and covered below with short woolly hairs. A second species is said to occur in Texas.

Leitneria (lit-né-'ri-'ë-ö), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1880), < Leitneria + -ce.] An order of unisexual apetalous plants. It is distinguished by the absence of a perianth, and by a superior radicle and simple leaves, from the related family Plantaginaceae, in which the radicle is inferior, and from the Juglandaceae, in which the leaves are pinnate.

Lejeune-Dirichlet's theorem. See theorem.
lek (lek), v. t. A dialectal variant of lake.

Some particular spot is chosen in their haunts, where they (black grouse) congregate, or lek, as it is sometimes called.
H. Seebohm, Brit. Birds, II. 436.

leket, n. An obsolete form of leek.
lekin (lë-'kin), n. Same as lekin. lekythoid, lekythos. See lekythoid, lecythus.
lel, a. A Middle English form of leal.
Lelaps, n. See Lalaps, 1 (b).
lelet, a. and v. A Middle English form of leal.
lelly, adv. A Middle English form of leally.
Lema (lë-'mä), n. [NL.; origin not ascertained.] A genus of phytophagous beetles of the family Crioceridae, having the prothorax constricted. L. trilineata is a common North American species found on the potato, with a reddish-yellow head and prothorax, and three lengthwise black stripes on the elytra. Fabricius, 1798.

Three-lined leaf-beetle (Lema trilineata). a, a, larva; b, tip of its body, enlarged; c, pupa; d, eggs. (Lines show natural sizes.)

leman (lem-'an or lë-'man), n. [Also leman; early mod. E. also lemman; < ME. lemman, lemmon, limman, lefmon, leafmon, leveman (f), dear one, lover, sweetheart, lit., as separately and only in a general sense, in AS., leof mann or monn, 'loef man,' i. e. 'dear person': AS. leof, dear; mann, monn, person (man or woman): see leif and man.] 1. One who is dear; a person beloved.

Ho that sith him one the Rode.
Iesus his leman.
And his moder bi him stonde
Sore wepnde, and seynt Iohan.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 220.

2. A sweetheart of either sex; a gallant or a mistress: often in a bad sense; a paramour.

He seyde he wolde ben hire Limman or Paramour.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 24.
His wif anon hath for hir leman sent;
Her leman? certes, this is a knavisch speche.
Chaucer, Manciple's Tale, l. 100.

Then like a king he was to her exprest,
And offred kingdoms unto her in vew,
To be his Leman and his Lady trew.
Spenser, F. Q., III. viii. 40.

As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman.
Shak., M. W. of W., iv. 2. 172.

Lemanea (lë-mä-'në-ä), n. [NL. (Bory de Saint-Vincent, about 1801), named after M. Leman, a French botanist.] A genus of floridaceous algae, the type of the family Lemanea-ceae.

Lemanea (lë-mä-në-ä-'së-ö), n. pl. [NL. (L. Rabenhorst, about 1864), < Lemanea + -aceae.] A small family of fresh-water algae of the order Floridaceae, growing in tufts of a gray, olive-brown, or darker color, in rapidly running water, as under mill-wheels. The fillum and cartilaginous thallus is simple or sparsely branched, hollow, and more or less nodose. Tetraspores are wanting; the fructification is therefore sexual only. The carpospores are collected at intervals within the filaments, and the spermatozoids are produced in zones on the surface of the thallus.

Lembida (lem-'bi-dë), n. pl. [NL., < Lembus + -ida.] A family of ciliate infusorians named from the genus Lembus.

lembic, lembik, n. Variants of limbec. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 9.

lembus (lem-'bus), n. [L., < Gr. λέμβος, a small sailing-vessel with a sharp prow.] 1. A small piratical vessel without a deck.—2. [cap.] [NL.] The typical genus of Lembida, having a crest-like membranous border, and no anterior digitiform appendages nor caudal seta. These animalcules swim very actively with a wriggling motion. They are found in salt water. L. velifer is an example.

leme¹, n. and v. A Middle English form of leam.

leme², n. A Middle English form of limb. Chaucer.

leming, n. See lemming.

lemma (lem-'ä), n.; pl. lemmata (-ä-tä). [= F. lemme = Sp. Pg. lema = It. lemma, < L. lemma, a theme, < Gr. λέμμα, anything received or taken, a thing taken for granted, < λαμβάνειν, 2d aor. λαβείν, take, = Skt. √ rabh, take. Cf. labis, etc. Hence dilemma, trilemma.] 1. In logic: (a) In the Stoical logic—(1) The major premise of a hypothetical syllogism, or modus ponens; thus, in the reasoning, "If it is day, it is light; but it is day; hence, it is light," the first premise was called the lemma. (2) A premise in general. (b) A Megaric sophism depending on the question whether a man who says "I am lying" is truly lying or not.—2. In math., a proposition upon which it is necessary to arrest the attention for the sake of proving an ulterior one, but which interrupts the regular series of theorems; also, a premise drawn from another branch of mathematics than that under consideration.—3. A theme; a thesis; the subject of an epigram, or of a musical composition, etc. [A Latinism.]

In the year 1445, several pageants were exhibited at Paul's-gate, with verses written by Lydgate on the following lemmata. . . . Five wise and five foolish virgins, Of St. Margaret, etc.

T. Warton, Hist. Eng. Poetry, III. 158, note.

4. In embryol., the primary or outer layer of the germinal vesicle. Pascoc. = Syn. See inference.

lemmergeyer, n. See lammergeier.

lemming, leming (lem-'ing), n. [Norw. lemming, also lemende, limende = Sw. lemming = Dan. lemming, a lemming, according to Aasen lit. 'destroying,' with ref. to its ravages, < Norw. lemja, maim, strike, beat, = E. lame], v.; but the variations of form indicate a foreign origin, perhaps Lappish: cf. Lapp. loumek, a lemming. Hence NL. Lemmus.] A rodent quadruped of the family Muridae, subfamily Arvicolinae, and one of the genera Myodes, Cuniculus, and Synaptomys (see these terms). The common European lemming, Mus lemmus of Linnæus, now Myodes lemmus, to which alone the name originally pertained, inhabits Norway, Sweden, Lapland, and other northern countries. It is about 5 inches long and of varied coloration. It is very prolific, and vast herds periodically migrate down to the sea, destroying much vegetation in their path. So numerous are they at times, and so sudden is their appearance, that they were fabled to rain down from the clouds. Large numbers of rapacious quadrupeds and birds hang upon their line of march and materially diminish their numbers. Their migrations are said to portend a hard winter. M. schisticolor is a plain slaty-gray species of Siberia. M. obesus is a bright rusty-brown species inhabiting arctic regions of both hemispheres and common in northwestern America. The lemming of the Hudson's Bay regions, Greenland, etc., is Cuniculus hudsonius or torquatus, a species of which turns snow-white in winter; it is also called hare-tailed mouse or rat, and by other names. A kind of false lemming, found in parts of the United States from Indiana and Kansas to Alaska, and also in British America, is Synaptomys cooperi. There are several other nominal species.

Common European or Norway Lemming (Myodes lemmus).

Lemmus (lem-'us), n. [NL., orig. a technical designation of the Norway lemming: see lemming.] A genus of Muridae, subfamily Arvico- linae, including the lemmings and some other arvicoline.

Lemna (lem-'nä), n. [NL. (Linnæus), < Gr. λέμνα, a water-plant.]

A genus of monocotyledonous plants, type of the order Lemnaceae. It is distinguished from Wolffia, the only other genus of the order, by having the flowers developed on the margin of the frond instead of from a pit in the upper surface. Distributed about the temperate and tropical regions of the world are seven species, known as duckweed, some of them the smallest of flowering plants, consisting of a frond that floats on the surface of the water, and bears below a few thread-like roots, and above one or more monöcious flowers.

1. Lemna minor, flowering plants; a, inflorescence; b, pistil cut longitudinally; c, fruit. 2. Lemna trisulca. 3. Lemna gibba.

Lemnaceae (lem-nä-'së-ö), n. pl. [NL. (S. L. Endlicher, 1840), < Lemna + -aceae.] An order of monocotyledonous water-plants, the duckweed family, distinguished by the absence of a distinct stem or foliage, and producing one or a few monöcious or diöcious flowers from the edge or upper surface of the frond. There are two genera, Lemna and Wolffia, both generally distributed throughout the temperate and tropical regions of the world.

lemnad (lem-'nad), n. [NL. Lemna + -ad.] A plant of the order Lemnaceae; a duckweed: used in the plural by Lindley for the Lemnaceae, or duckweed family.

Lemnian (lem-'ni-an), a. [L. Lemnius (< Gr. Λήμνιος), Lemnian, < Lemnos, Lemnos, < Gr. Λήμνος, Lemnos, an island in the Ægean sea.] Of or pertaining to Lemnos, an island in the Ægean sea.—Lemnian earth, a kind of astringent earth, of fatty consistence and reddish color, used medicinally in the same cases as the other boles. It has the external appearance of clay, with a smooth surface resembling agate, especially in recent fractures. Like soap, it removes impurities. Like kaolin, to which it is related, it has its origin in the decomposition of feldspathic rocks. See bole.—Lemnian ruddle, a sort of red chalk obtained from deposits in Lemnos, and used as a coloring material.

lemniscate (lem-nis-'kät), a. and n. [NL. lemniscata, fem. of L. lemniscatus, adorned with pendent ribbons, < lemniscus, a ribbon: see lemniscus.] 1. a. 1. In math., related to the lemniscate of Bernoulli.—2. In ichth., having a hyaline or transparent appearance and ribbon-like form; of or relating to the Lemniscati: as, a lemniscate fish.—Lemniscate function, the function of which the lemniscate integral is the inverse.—Lemniscate integral, the elliptic integral which is exhibited in the quincuncial projection of the sphere.

$$\int \frac{dx}{\sqrt{1-x^4}}$$

II. n. In math.: (a) The locus of the point at which the tangent to an equilateral hyperbola meets the perpendicular let fall upon it from the center: a curve invented by James Bernoulli. It may also be defined as the locus of the point the product of whose distances from two fixed points is a quarter of the square of the distance of those points from each other. It is a kind of Cassinian, and is also a lemniscate in sense (c), below. (b) Any conoidal curve of the fourth order having only one real branch,

Fig. 1, 8th class ($x^4 + y^4 - 2x^2y^2 - x^2 + y^2 = 0$).
Fig. 2, 8th class ($x^4 + 100x^2y^2 - x^2 + y^2 = 0$).
Fig. 3, 10th class ($x^4 + 8y^4 + x^2 + y^2 = 0$).
Fig. 4, 10th class (fish-tail) ($x^4 + 100x^2y^2 + 100y^4 - x^2 + y^2 = 0$).

and this finite and symmetrical with respect to two axes. [This definition is an attempt to interpret that of certain writers formerly in repute, who say that the lemniscate has the shape of an 8, but who give as the typical form a curve which, having a tacnodal anocoda at infinity, is not a bicircular quartic. Curves satisfying this definition are of the 10th, 8th, and 6th classes. See figures and Cassinian.] (c) The locus of the point at which the tangent to a fixed conic is cut by a perpendicular let fall upon it from the center.

Its equation is $(x^2 + y^2)^2 = ax^2 + by^2$. It is a unicursal bicircular quartic. (See bicircular.) It has two real and two imaginary bitangents represented by the equation

$$\{3a^2 + (b-a)y^2\} \{3b^2 + (a-b)x^2\} = 0.$$

It is called an elliptic or hyperbolic lemniscate, according as the fixed conic is an ellipse or a hyperbola; in the former case the central node is an acnode, in the latter a crunode. See the figure. (d) A Cassinian: a misapplication of the word originating in Germany.

Lemniscati (lem-nis-kā'ti), n. pl. [NL., < L. lemniscatus, adorned with pendent ribbons: see lemniscate.] A group of fishes of ribbon-like form and hyaline appearance, containing the Leptocephalidae and similar forms, now known to be the larval stages or young of other fishes.

lemniscatic (lem-nis-kat'ik), a. [< lemniscate + -ic.] Of or concerning lemniscates.—Lemniscatic coordinates, a system of conical Cassinians cut orthogonally by equilateral hyperbolas and used as coordinates. See lemniscatic geometry.—Lemniscatic curve. See curve and lemniscate (b).—Lemniscatic geometry, the geometry of Cassinians. Any conform map-projection which shows every point of the globe twice (except the one thrown to infinity), and on a single sheet, transforms all circles into bicircular quartics, thus affording an easy way of studying the latter curves. If the point thrown to infinity is one of the poles, the parallels of latitude appear as Cassinians, while the meridians become equilateral hyperbolas.

lemniscus (lem-nis'kus), n.; pl. lemnisci (-i). [L., a pendent ribbon, < Gr. λεμνίσκος, a woolen fillet or band; with irreg. inserted μ and dim. term. -ίκος, < λίπος = L. lanā, wool.] 1. In anc. costume, a woolen fillet or ribbon pendent at the back of the head from diadems, crowns, etc. It was likewise attached to prizes as a mark of additional honor.—2. In anat.: (a) One of the minute ribbon-like appendages of the generative pores of some entozoans, as Echinorhynchus. See cut under Acanthocephala.

The cavity of the body [of Echinorhynchus] is filled with a fluid, in which the ova, or spermatozoa, float, and, at its anterior extremity, two elongated oval bodies depend from the parietes, and hang freely in it. These are the lemnisci. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 554.

(b) Same as fillet, 9.—3. [cap.] In zool., a genus of aculephs. Quoy and Gaimard, 1824.

Lemodipoda (lem-ō-dip'ō-dā), n. pl. See Lemodipoda.

lemon (lem'on), n. and a. [Formerly also lemmon, limon, lemond; = D. limoen = G. limone = Dan. Sw. limon, limon, < F. limon = Sp. limon = Pg. limão = It. limone, < ML. limo(n)- (also limonium), NL. limonium = Ngr. λεμόνι = Russ. limonū = Bulg. limon = Serv. limun = Hung. lemonya = Turk. limün = Hind. nimbū, nimbū, nimbū = Pers. limān, limānā, also limū, < Ar. limān, a lemon. Cf. limō, from the same ult. source.]

I. n. 1. The fruit of the rutaceous tree Citrus medica, var. Limonium. It is botanically a berry of an ellipsoid form, knobbed at the apex, with a pale-yellow rind whose outer layer is charged with a fragrant oil, and a light-colored pulp, full of an acid well-flavored juice. The latter, together with lime-juice, is the chief commercial source of citric acid. The oil or essence of lemons is extracted from the rind, at present by the method of expression, which yields the best. It is consumed in large quantities as a flavoring essence and a component of perfumes.

A fruit that the inhabitants call Maracocks, which is a pleasant wholesome fruit much like a Lemon. Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 123.

It'll be with you in the squeezing of a lemon. Goldsmith, She Stoops to Conquer, I. 1.

2. The tree that yields this fruit. It is found wild in the mountainous regions of India, especially in the north. As a cultivated fruit-tree, it was early known and disseminated by the Arabs, but appears not to have been established in Europe till comparatively late, perhaps brought by the crusaders. It is now cultivated widely in subtropical countries, and is grown industrially in Italy and the adjacent islands, in Spain and Portugal, and in Florida, generally in connection with the orange. The common lemon is a tree from 10 to 15 feet high. Unlike the orange, it is of irregular growth and of sparse foliage. The corolla of its flowers is purplish on the outside, and their fragrance is less heavy than that of orange-flowers. Its closest botanical affinity is with the citron, the two being now considered as varieties of the same species. See Citrus, 2.

Far off, and where the lemon grove
In closest coverture upspring.
Tennyson, Arabian Nights.

3. The borhame or sand-sole, a kind of flatfish. See lemon-sole. 1.—Bergamot lemon. Same as bergamot. 1.—Essential salt of lemon, the binxalate of potash, or potash combined with oxalic acid, used for removing iron-mold and ink-stains from linen.—Fingered lemon, an odd Chinese variety of lemon with very little pulp, in which the segments divide at the apex into five or more cylindrical lobes.—Sea lemon. See sea-lemon.—Sweet lemon, pear lemon, the variety Lemetta of Citrus medica, a somewhat pear-shaped fruit. The variety also includes the sweet lime. They lack the acidity of the common lemon.—Water lemon. See water-lemon.

II. a. 1. Having lemon as a principal ingredient; impregnated or flavored with lemon: as, lemon candy.

He made our Skins as smooth as a Fair Ladies Cheeks, just wash'd with Lemon Posset, and greas'd over with Pomatum. Quoted in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 116.

2. Of the color of a lemon; lemon-colored: as, lemon silk.

lemonade (lem-ō-nād'), n. [< F. limonade (= Sp. limonada = Pg. limonada, limoada = It. limonata, limonea, > Ar. limūnada), < limon, lemon: see lemon and -ade.] A beverage consisting of lemon-juice mixed with water and sweetened.

A Persian's heaven is easily made,
'Tis but black eyes and lemonade.
Moore, Intercepted Letters, vi.

lemon-balm (lem'on-bām), n. A garden-herb, Melissa officinalis. See balm, 7, and Melissa.

lemon-bird (lem'on-bêrd), n. The common linnet, Linota cannabina: from the yellowish coloration of the male. [West Riding, Eng.]

lemon-cadmium (lem'on-kad'mi-um), n. A very pale shade of cadmium-yellow.

lemon-color (lem'on-kul'or), n. A yellow resembling the color of a ripe lemon; any proper yellow of a greener tint than gamboge, but not so much so as to suggest the idea of green.

lemon-colored (lem'on-kul'ord), a. Having the color of a ripe lemon; of a lemon-color.

lemon-dab (lem'on-dab), n. The smear-dab. [Local, Irish.]

lemon-drop (lem'on-drop), n. A kind of candy in drops, flavored with lemon-juice or oil of lemon.

lemon-fish (lem'on-fish), n. A sort of amberfish, Sciola stearnsi, of the Gulf of Mexico. [Louisiana.]

lemon-grass (lem'on-grās), n. A sweet-scented East Indian grass, Andropogon Schenanthus or A. citratus. It is abundant wild and in cultivation in India, and is known in Western greenhouses. An infusion of its leaves is used as a tea, and is considered a good stomachic. The name lemon-grass is also given to A. Nardus and perhaps to other fragrant species of the genus.—Lemon-grass oil, an oil distilled from the leaves of Andropogon citratus. It is chiefly sought as a perfume, for which use it is exported from Ceylon and elsewhere in large quantities. It resembles oil of verbena, under which name it often passes. It is more or less confounded with citronella-oil, from a related grass. See Andropogon and citronella.

Lemonias (lē-mō-ni-as), n. [NL., < Gr. λεμόνιας, a meadow-nymph, < λεμόνι, a meadow.] The typical genus of Lemoniidae, of which the Linnean Papilio lemonias is the type.

Lemoniidae (lem-ō-ni'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lemonias + -idae.] A family of butterflies: also called Erycinidae. They are characterized by the male having but four perfect feet, and are divided into four subfamilies, Lemoniinae, Euselastinae, Nemeobinae, and Libythinae.

lemon-juice (lem'on-jōs), n. The juice of the lemon. It is somewhat opaque and turbid and extremely sour, owing its acidity to citric and malic acids. It is much used, especially in the form of lemonade, or combined with potassium bicarbonate, as a cooling and effervescing beverage. Among seamen it is highly esteemed as an antiscorbatic.

lemon-kali (lem'on-kā'li), n. A mixture of potassium bicarbonate with lemon-juice. (a) In the form of a powder, the bicarbonate strongly flavored with lemon. (b) An effervescing drink made either by dissolving the powder or by mixing the ingredients fresh. Also lemon and kali.

lemon-scented (lem'on-sent'ed), a. Scented with lemon, or having a fragrance similar to that of lemon.—Lemon-scented thyme. See lemon-thyme.—Lemon-scented verbenā. See lemon-verbenā.

lemon-sole (lem'on-sōl), n. 1. A fish of the family Soleidae, Solea lascaris.—2. The smear-dab, Hippoglossoides limandoides. [Scotch.] Also lemon-dab.

lemon-squash (lem'on-skwoš), n. Lemonade. [Eng.]

lemon-squeezer (lem'on-skwē'zēr), n. A small hand-press, usually of the lever type, for expressing the juice from a lemon. It is made in a great variety of forms, and is fitted with a strainer to retain the seeds.

lemon-thyme (lem'on-tim), n. A lemon-scented garden variety of Thymus Serpyllum.

lemon-verbenā (lem'on-vēr-bē'nā), n. A garden-shrub, Lippia (Aloysia) citriodora, related to the verbenā. Its leaves have a lemon fragrance.

lemon-walnut (lem'on-wāl'nūt), n. The butternut, Juglans cinerea: so called on account of its fragrance.

lemonweed (lem'on-wēd), n. A sea-mat of the family Flustridae: so called from its scent.

lemon-yellow (lem'on-yel'ō), n. 1. A clear pale-yellow color, like that of the rind of a ripe lemon. In entomology it is distinguished from citron-yellow, which is paler and more greenish.—2. A pigment used by artists, composed of barium chromate. It is of a bright lemon hue and quite permanent, but has little body.

Lemur (lē'mēr), n. [NL., so called with ref. to its nocturnal habits and stealthy steps, < L. lemur, only in pl. lemures, a ghost, specter.] 1. The typical genus of Lemuridae and Lemurinae. It has been more than coextensive with these groups as now understood, but is now restricted to the typical Lemuridae with a long furry tail, fox-like face, and typical dentition, such as the ring-tailed lemur, L. catta, and several other species.

Varied Lemur (Lemur varius).

2. [i. c.] (a) A member of the genus Lemur, in the widest sense; any lemurine, lemuroid, or prosimian. The ring-tailed, red, ruffed, etc., lemurs belong to the genus Lemur. Gray lemurs, with the tail as long as the body, belong to Hapalemur, as H. griseus, which is about 15 inches long. The broad-nosed lemur is Hapalemur simus. The rather small lemurs with comparatively short tail belong to Lepilemur, as L. mustelinus. Mouse-lemurs are small species of Chiropalemus. (See cut under Chiropalemus.) Dwarf lemurs belong to Microcebus. The lemurs of continental Africa are mostly referred to the genus Galago. (See cut under Galago.) The woolly lemur or indris form the subfamily Indriniæ, of the genera Indris, Propithecus, and Microrhynchus; some of these are tailless. The slender lemur or lorix belong to the genus Loris or Stenops (see cuts under Loris); the slow lemurs to Nycticebus. These are Indian, extending to Java, Borneo, Sumatra, and Ceylon. The potto is an African lemur of the genus Perodicticus. The angwantibo is a tailless lemur of the genus Arctocebus. (b) Some animal like a lemur. See flying-lemur and Galeopithecus.—Yellow lemur. Same as kinkajou, 1.

Lemuravidae (lem-ū-rav'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lemuravus + -idae.] A family of lemuroid mammals with 44 teeth, from the Lower Eocene of Wyoming, representing a generalized ancestral type.

Lemuravus (lem-ū-rāv'vus), n. [NL., < Lemur + L. avus, grandfather.] The typical genus of Lemuravidae. O. C. Marsh, 1875.

lemures (lem'ū-rēz), n. pl. [L.: see Lemur.] 1. Among the ancient Romans, the spirits of the departed considered as evil-disposed specters or ghosts, who were supposed to do mischief at night to the living, and were exorcised annually with a ceremonial ritual by the head of each household, at midnight on May 9th, 11th, and 13th, on which days was celebrated the festival called lemuralia or lemuria. There were also games and other public observances of the festival. Also called larvæ. Compare Lari, 1.

The Lars and Lemures moan with midnight plaint.
Milton, Nativity, l. 171.

2. [cap.] In zool.: (a) Lemurs: equivalent to Lemuroidea. (b) A group of noctuid moths. Hübner, 1816.

Lemuria (lē-mū'ri-ā), n. [NL., fem. sing., < Lemur, q. v.] In zoögeog., a supposed former faunal area of the globe, corresponding to some extent to the geographical distribution of the lemurs, and characterized by the abundance and variety of those animals inhabiting it. The existence of any such region or continent is hypothetical, being inferred from, or held to account for, the present peculiar geographical distribution of the lemurs.

Professor Haeckel uses the latter noun [Lemuria] . . . as the name of a continent now largely submerged, which he supposes to have been the center of distribution of the lemuroid ancestors of the higher orders of Mammalia, and part of which has persisted, as Madagascar with its remarkable fauna. Paleontological discoveries have, however, shown that America can . . . lay as good a claim to have been the original home of the lemuroids.

Lemuria² (lĕ-mū'ri-ā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl., < Lemur, q. v.] In some editions of Cuvier's system, a subdivision of the Chiroptera (which comprised Bimana and Quadrumania) by which the lemurs, including Chiromys, are distinguished collectively from monkeys and man. With some little alteration, the division corresponds to the modern suborder Prosimia of the order Primates; but the term Lemuria is scarcely in use in this sense. See Prosimia.

Lemurian (lĕ-mū'ri-ān), a. and n. [*Lemuria*¹ + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the region Lemuria.

II. n. One of the hypothetical human inhabitants of Lemuria, or a person supposed to have lived when the supposed Lemuria was an extensive continent. Compare Atlantean, 2.

Lemuridae (lĕ-mū'ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lemur + -idae.] A family of Prosimia or Lemuroidea formed by the exclusion of the Tarsiidae and the Daubentoniidae; the lemurs proper. The teeth are of three kinds, and the incisors are not gliriform. There are pectoral as well as inguinal mammae. The fibula is distinct from the tibia, and the bony orbits of the eyes are open behind. The claws of the hind feet are like flattened nails, excepting that of the second toe. These animals are especially characteristic of Madagascar, but many also inhabit Africa, some India and islands further eastward. They are arboreal and quadrumanous, and many of them might be described as fox-like or cat-like monkeys; but their forms are very diverse. Their size ranges from that of a cat to that of a mouse. The family is divided into four subfamilies, Indrisinae, Lemurinae, Nycticebinæ, and Galagatinae.

Lemurinae (lĕ-mū'ri-nō), n. pl. [NL., < Lemur + -inae.] The typical subfamily of Lemuridae; lemurs strictly so called. They have more than 30 teeth, usually 36; the tarsus moderate; hind limbs longer than the fore; the tail at least two thirds as long as the body; the ears moderate, with distinct tragus and antitragus, and the anterior portion of the helix folded over; and the spinous processes of the last dorsal and lumbar vertebrae proclivous. The leading genera are Lemur, Haplemur, Lepilemur, and Chirogaleus.

lemurine (lĕm'ū-rin), a. and n. [Lemur + -ine.] Same as lemuroid.

lemuroid (lĕm'ū-roid), a. and n. [Lemur + -oid.] I. a. Pertaining to the lemurs or Prosimia, or having their characters; lemuroine; prosimian.

II. n. One of the Prosimia; one of the Lemuridae; a lemur.

Lemuroidea (lĕm-ū-roi'dē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lemur + -oidea.] 1. The lemuroids, prosimians, or lemurs at large, a suborder of Primates, distinguished from Anthropoidea; the strepsirrhine quadrumanous mammals. The Lemuroidea are the lower series of Primates, having the cerebrum much less developed, leaving the cerebellum much uncovered; the teeth variable, not confined to the breast; the uterus bicornuate; and the clitoris perforated by the urethra. The lacrymal foramen of the skull is outside the orbit of the eye, and the orbit is open behind. The ears are pointed, with indistinct lobules or none. There are three families, Lemuridae, Tarsiidae, and Daubentoniidae (or Chirognathidae).

2. A superfamily of Prosimia, containing the families Lemuridae and Tarsiidae, together contrasted with the Daubentoniidae.

len¹, v. An older and dialectal form of lend¹.

len², v. A dialectal form of lend³.

lena (lĕ'nā), n. [L., a procuress (cf. leno, a procurer), < lenire, persuade, render mild, < lenis, smooth, mild; see lenity.] A procuress; as, "my lean lena," Webster.

Lenaia (lĕ-nā-ī-ā), n. pl. [L. Ἀναία (se. ἑπά), neut. pl. of ἄναϊος, pertaining to the wine-press (an epithet of Dionysus, or Bacchus), < ἄναός, a wine-vat, wine-press.] In Gr. antiqu., an Athenian festival in honor of Dionysus (Bacchus), celebrated in the ancient temple of that god, called the Lenaia, to the south of the Acropolis. It was the second of the series of Dionysiac festivals, and took place during the month of Gamelion (part of January and February); it was the occasion of a procession, and of dramatic contests in both tragedy and comedy. See Bacchus and Dionysia.

lencheon (lĕn'chōn), n. [Perhaps a corruption of ledging.] In mining, a kind of shelf in a shaft. Halliw. Eng. [Prov. Eng.]

lend¹ (lĕnd), v.; pret. and pp. lent, ppr. lending. [With excrement -d, as also in sound⁵, round¹, etc.; prop. lene, or as dial. len, < ME. lencen, lencen (pret. lende, pp. lencel, lent, lencel, ylent), < AS. lānan (= OFries. lena, lenia = D. lencen = MLG. lencen, lencenen, lencen = OHG. lēhanōn, MHG. lēhenen, G. lehnen = Icel. lāna = Dan. laane = Sw. lāna, lend, make a loan), < lān, lēn, a loan; see loan¹.] I. trans. 1. In a general sense, to give; grant.

Matheu maketh mencion of a man that lente Hus selter to thre manere men and menyng that he sholde
Chaffare and cheene ther-with in chele and in hete.

Mathew maketh mencion of a man that lente
Hus selter to thre manere men and menyng that he sholde
Chaffare and cheene ther-with in chele and in hete.

Mathew maketh mencion of a man that lente
Hus selter to thre manere men and menyng that he sholde
Chaffare and cheene ther-with in chele and in hete.

Mathew maketh mencion of a man that lente
Hus selter to thre manere men and menyng that he sholde
Chaffare and cheene ther-with in chele and in hete.

Mathew maketh mencion of a man that lente
Hus selter to thre manere men and menyng that he sholde
Chaffare and cheene ther-with in chele and in hete.

To hys lorde he can meene,
And preyed hym that he wolde hym leene
Wepyn, armowe, and stede.
MS. Canab. Ft. il. 83, f. 75. (Halliw. Eng.)

Ihesu, that me lone haat lende,
In-to thi lone thou me bringe,
Take to thee al myn entente.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 23.

If God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court.
Shak., All's Well, il. 2. 8.

2. To give the use of without compensation; grant or give (anything) in expectation of a return of the same, or of the like in equal quantity or amount: as, to lend a book, a loaf of bread, or a sum of money.

Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need. Deut. xv. 8.

Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon All-hallowmas last?
Shak., M. W. of W., I. I. 210.

3. To give the use of for a consideration; let or grant for hire; yield up on condition of return of the same or an equivalent, and payment for its use: as, to lend money on interest.

Thou shalt not . . . lend him thy victuals for increase.
Lev. xxv. 37.

Lent privately to my lady Newcut upon her gilt casting-bottle, . . . fifty-five shillings.
Middleton, Your Five Gallants, i. 1.

4. To give for a particular occasion or purpose; grant or yield temporarily or specifically; afford; accommodate (with or to): as, to lend one's ear to an appeal; to lend assistance: often used reflexively: as, to lend one's self to a project.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears.
Shak., J. C., iii. 2. 78.

A little onward lend thy guiding hand
To these dark steps.
Milton, S. A., I. 1.

The facility with which the hair lends itself to various methods of treatment.
W. H. Flower, Fashion in Deformity, p. 7.

5. To furnish, impart, or communicate; confer; add: as, "distance lends enchantment to the view."

Lo! where the heath, with withering brake grown o'er,
Lends the light turf that warms the neighboring poor.
Crabbe, Works, I. 5.

And round the roofs a gilded gallery
That lent broad verge to distant lands.
Tennyson, Palace of Art.

Truth is for other worlds, and hope for this;
The cheating future lends the present's bliss.
O. W. Holmes, The Old Prayer.

To lend a hand. See hand.

II. intrans. To make a loan or loans.

Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury.
Deut. xxiii. 20.

I neither lend nor borrow
By taking nor by giving of excess.
Shak., M. of V., I. 3. 62.

lend¹ (lĕnd), n. [lend¹, v.] A loan: as, will you give me the lend of your spade? [Colloq.] For the lend of the ass you might give me the mill.
The Crafty Miller (old ballad).

lend² (lĕnd), v. i. [ME. lenden, < AS. lendan, land; see land¹, v.] To land; arrive; dwell; stay; remain.

They put up pavilions round,
And lended there that night.
Quoted in Religious Pieces (E. E. T. S.), Gloss., p. 100.

Here is full faire dwelling for vs,
A lykand place in for to lende.
York Plays, p. 190.

lend³, n. A Middle English form of land².

lendable (lĕn'da-bl), a. [lend¹ + -able.] Capable of being lent.

lende¹ (lĕnd), n. [ME., usually in pl. lendes, lencdes, lyndes, < AS. lendenu, lentinu, pl. (in comp. lenden-, rarely lende-), = OS. lentli = OFries. lenden = D. lendenen, pl., = MLG. lende = OHG. lenti, lenti, MHG. G. lende, loin, haunch, = Icel. lend = Dan. lend = Sw. länd, loin. Cf. L. lumbus, loin, > ult. E. loin: see loin, lumber.] A loin: usually in the plural.

A barmelooth eek as whit as morne milk
Upon hir lendes, ful of many a gore.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 57.

lende², v. A Middle English form of land¹.

lender (lĕn'dĕr), n. [lend¹, earlier lener, lenere, lencere, < AS. lānere, a lender (= OFries. lener = D. lener = MLG. lener = OHG. lēhanari, MHG. lēhanarc, lēhanere, G. lehener, a lender, a person holding a fief, = Dan. laaner = Sw. lånare, a lender), < lānan, lend: see lend¹, v.] One who lends; especially, one who makes a trade of putting money to interest: opposed to borrower.

The borrower is servant to the lender. Prov. xxii. 7.

lende³, v. A Middle English form of land¹.

lender (lĕn'dĕr), n. [lend¹, earlier lener, lenere, lencere, < AS. lānere, a lender (= OFries. lener = D. lener = MLG. lener = OHG. lēhanari, MHG. lēhanarc, lēhanere, G. lehener, a lender, a person holding a fief, = Dan. laaner = Sw. lånare, a lender), < lānan, lend: see lend¹, v.] One who lends; especially, one who makes a trade of putting money to interest: opposed to borrower.

The borrower is servant to the lender. Prov. xxii. 7.

lende³, v. A Middle English form of land¹.

lender (lĕn'dĕr), n. [lend¹, earlier lener, lenere, lencere, < AS. lānere, a lender (= OFries. lener = D. lener = MLG. lener = OHG. lēhanari, MHG. lēhanarc, lēhanere, G. lehener, a lender, a person holding a fief, = Dan. laaner = Sw. lånare, a lender), < lānan, lend: see lend¹, v.] One who lends; especially, one who makes a trade of putting money to interest: opposed to borrower.

The borrower is servant to the lender. Prov. xxii. 7.

lende³, v. A Middle English form of land¹.

lender (lĕn'dĕr), n. [lend¹, earlier lener, lenere, lencere, < AS. lānere, a lender (= OFries. lener = D. lener = MLG. lener = OHG. lēhanari, MHG. lēhanarc, lēhanere, G. lehener, a lender, a person holding a fief, = Dan. laaner = Sw. lånare, a lender), < lānan, lend: see lend¹, v.] One who lends; especially, one who makes a trade of putting money to interest: opposed to borrower.

The borrower is servant to the lender. Prov. xxii. 7.

lending (lĕn'ding), n. [Verbal n. of lend¹, v.]

1. The act of making a loan: as, the lending of money.—2. That which is lent or furnished; something not one's own; a borrowed article.

Off, off, you lendings! come, unhitton here.
Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 113.

Thou lost a good wife, thou lost a true friend, ha!
Two of the rarest lendings of the heavens.
Marston, Antonio and Mellida, II., iv. 5.

lene¹, v. A Middle English form of lean¹.

lene², v. A Middle English form of lean².

lene³, v. A Middle English form of lend¹.

Than moot another paye for oure cost,
Or lene us gold. Chaucer, Shipman's Tale, l. 19.

lene⁴ (lĕ'nĕ), a. and n. [L. lenis, neut. lene, smooth: see lenity.] I. a. In philol., smooth; surd and non-aspirate, as k, p, or t.

II. n. A smooth mute or non-aspirate surd, as k, p, or t.

lener, n. An obsolete variant of lender.

leng¹, adv. An obsolete comparative of long¹.

leng², leng¹, leng¹, v. [ME., < AS. lengan (= D. lengen, lengthen, = MLG. lengen, lengthen, post-pone, = OHG. lengjan, lengan, MHG. lengen, G. längen, lengthen, = Icel. lengja, lengthen, prolong, = Dan. længes, refl., grow longer), prolong, put off, < lang, long: see long¹, length, linger.] I. trans. To lengthen; prolong.

II. intrans. To linger, dwell, rest, or remain.

Lenge at home pur charyté, Leve soon, y prey the.
MS. Canab. Ft. il. 38, f. 150. (Halliw. Eng.)

Listen a little, & leng here a while:
Let vs karpe of thies kynges or we cayre ferre.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 4549.

leng², n. A Middle English form of ting¹.

lengert, adv. A Middle English comparative of long¹.

length (lĕngth), n. [ME. lengthe, sometimes lenthe, < AS. length (= D. lengte = Icel. lengd = Dan. længde = Sw. längd), length; with formative -th (cf. lengu, length), < lang, long: see long¹.] 1. The property of being long or extended in a single direction; also, that which is long.

A needless Alexandrine ends the song,
That, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.
Pope, Essay on Criticism, l. 157.

2. Distance along a line, as measured, for example, upon the circumference of a wheel that rolls over it: as, the length of a road, a river, or the arc of a curve.

When thei aproched nygh thei lete renne and smyte to-geder so harde that ye myght here the strokes half a myle of length.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), il. 161.

Our Lady streete is very faire, being of a great length, though not so broad as our Cheapside in London.
Coryat, Criticisms, I. 30.

Every measuring instrument is liable to change its length with temperature. It is therefore necessary, in defining a length by reference to a concrete material standard, such as a bar of metal, to state the temperature at which the standard is correct.

J. D. Everett, Units and Phys. Const., p. 17.

3. The magnitude of the greatest principal axis of a body or figure; one of the dimensions of a body, the others being breadth and thickness. See dimension, 1. Thus, the length of a stick of timber is not its longest measurement, between opposite angles, but is the shortest distance between the ends. Every body has three principal axes, which are capable of being determined with mathematical precision; and in most cases we can see what they are near enough for practical purposes. The distance between the extremities of the longest of these three axes is the length of the body.

& cleymed him for ther chefe of West and of East,
Of North & of South in length & in brede.
Rob. of Brunne, p. 19.

Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it.
Gen. xiii. 17.

So stretch'd out huge in length the Arch-french lay.
Milton, P. L., l. 209.

4. Reach; power of reaching; extent of range: as, the length of one's vision or of a view.

Within my sword's length set him; if he scape, Heaven forgive him too! Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 234.

She . . . holds them dangling at arm's length in scorn.
Cowper, Truth, l. 164.

5. Extent of or in time; duration; continuance: as, the length of a day or a year, or of life; the length of a battle or a performance; a discourse of tedious length.

He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever.
Ps. xxi. 4.

Now length of fame (our second life) is lost.
Pope, Essay on Criticism, p. 480.

6. In orthoëpy and prosody: (a) The time occupied in uttering a vowel or syllable; quantity. (b) The quality of a vowel as long or short, according to the conventional distinction of long and short in English pronunciation. (c) The quality of a syllable as metrically accented or unaccented in modern or accentual poetry. See long¹, a.—7. A piece or portion of the extent of anything in space or time; a part of what is extended or elongated: as, a length of rope; a dress-length; to cut anything into short lengths: often used specifically of a definite portion, of known extent, of the thing spoken of, as of an acting drama (namely, forty or forty-two lines): as, an actor's part of six lengths; won by a length (that is, of the horse, boat, etc., engaged in the contest).

Large lengths of seas and shores Between my father and my mother lay. Shak., K. John, i. l. 105. Time glides along with undiscover'd haste, The future but a length behind the past. Dryden, tr. of Ovid.

Ten lengths from the big double he was out of his rider's hand, and going as fast as he could drive. Whyte Melville, Satanella, p. 123.

8. In archery, the distance from the archer to the target he is to shoot at.—A cable's length, a measure of distance in charts and sailing directions, about 100 fathoms (600 feet). The regular length of a chain cable is 120 fathoms (720 feet). See cable's length.—A great length, a long way or distance toward any end or object.—At full length, fully extended; to or in the greatest extension.—At length. (a) To or in the full extent; without curtailment: as, to write a name at length; to read a document at length. (b) After a time; at last; at the end, or at a point of transition: as, at length he came to a spring; at length they were subdued.—Basal-alveolar length. See basi alveolar.—Basinasal length. See basinasal.—Butt's length. See butt².—Focal length. See focal distance (b), under focal.—Iron's length. See iron.—Length of days, long life; prolonged existence.

Length of days is in her right hand. Prov. iii. 16. Length of one's nose. See nose.—On length, away. Draw the to pese with alle thy strength; Fro stryf and bate draw the on lengthe. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 304.

To go to all lengths, to exhaust all means; use extreme efforts or measures to do everything possible without scruple: as, he went to all lengths to compass his purposes.—To go to the length of. (a) To go to; proceed as far as. (b) To go to the extent of; rise to the pitch or height of; commonly used of inordinate action or speech: as, he went to the length of tearing down his house, of denying his identity, or of sacrificing his own interests.—To keep a length, in archery, to maintain the same distance in shooting; shoot uniformly as to distance; shoot the same distance with each arrow.—To march to the length of. Same as to go to the length of (a). He had marched to the length of Exeter. Clarendon, Great Rebellion.

To measure one's length. See measure.—Unit of length. See unit.

length (length), v. t. [ME. lengthen; < length, n.] To extend; lengthen.

"For sche had brought hem of bale bothe," thei seide, "& i-lengthed here lif mani long zere." William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 1040. And knowes ful wel life doth but length his paine. Mir. for Maga., p. 264.

And miogled yarn to length her web withall. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, f. 2.

lengthen (leng'thn), v. [length + -en¹. Cf. length, v.] I. trans. To make long or longer; extend or elongate in space or in duration; protract or prolong: as, to lengthen a line; to lengthen life; to lengthen a vowel or syllable in pronunciation.

Why do I overlive? Why am I mock'd with death, and lengthen'd out To deathless pain? Milton, P. L., x. 774.

The bare white roads Lengthening in solitude their dreary line. Wordsworth, Prelude, xiii.

II. intrans. To grow long or longer; extend in length.

And gasping, panting, fainting, labour on With heavier strides, that lengthen to'ward the town. Pope, Iliad, xxi. 636.

Drags at each remove a lengthening chain. Goldsmith, Traveller, l. 10.

lengthful (length'fúl), a. [length + -ful.] Of considerable or remarkable length; lengthy; long. [Rare.]

The driver whirls his lengthful thong. Pope, Iliad, xi.

lengthily (leng'thi-li), adv. In a lengthy manner; at great length.

lengthiness (leng'thi-nes), n. The quality of being lengthy; prolixity.

lengthways (length'wäz), adv. Same as lengthwise.

lengthwise (length'wiz), adv. [length + -wise.] In the direction of the length; in a longitudinal direction.

lengthy (leng'thi), a. [length + -y¹.] Having length; long; especially, of great length; immoderately long, sometimes with the idea of tediousness attached: applied chiefly to discourses, writings, arguments, proceedings, etc.:

as, a lengthy sermon; a lengthy dissertation. [Said by Richardson to have originated in the United States (see the allusions in Southey and Lowell below), but the earliest quotations found are from British authors.]

Sometimes a poet when he publishes what in America would be called a lengthy poem with lengthy annotations, advises the reader in his preface not to read the notes in their places as they occur, . . . but to read the poem by itself at first. Southey, The Doctor, clx.

The word lengthy has been charged to our American account, but it must have been invented by the first reader of Gower's works, the only inspiration of which they were ever capable. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 259.

Next came a body of about one hundred and fifty persons on horseback, each carrying a very lengthy Persians-made rifle. O'Donovan, Merv, x.

lenience (lē'niens), n. [lenien(t) + -ce.] Same as leniency.

leniency (lē'niēn-si), n. [lenien(t) + -cy.] The quality of being lenient; mildness; gentleness; lenity.

The House has always shown a wise leniency in dealing with improper words blurted out in the heat of argument. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 264.

=Syn. Leniency, Lenity, Clemency, Mercy; humanity, tenderness, forbearance. Clemency is exercised only toward offenders, being especially the attribute of those in exalted places having power to remit or lighten penalty. Leniency, as a word, is much more common and expressive than lenity; leniency or lenity may be practised by any one having authority to lighten or remit penalty or to excuse from tasks: as, the leniency of a judge, a parent, or a teacher. Mercy has a twofold use, expressing clemency toward offenders or great kindness toward the distressed; in either sense it is a strong word.

lenient (lē'niēt), a. and n. [= OF. lenient = Sp. Pg. It. leniente, < L. lenien(t)-s, ppr. of lenire, soften, soothe, < lenis, soft: see lenity.] I. a. 1. Softening; mitigating; assuasive. [Archaic.]

Consolatories writ With studied argument, and much persuasion sought, Lenient of grief and anxious thought. Milton, S. A., l. 659.

Those lenient cares, which with our own combined, By mix'd sensations ease th' afflicted mind. Crabbe, Works, l. 140.

[Old Time] upon these wounds hath laid His lenient touches. Wordsworth, Sonnets, iii. 8.

2. Relaxing; emollient; lenitive. [Rare.] Oils relax the fibres, are lenient, balsamic. Arbuthnot, Aliments.

3. Acting or disposed to act without rigor or severity; mild; gentle; merciful; element. The law is remarkably lenient towards debtors. E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, I. 124.

A critic should be lenient when considering speculations of this nature. Science, VII. 556.

=Syn. 3. Forbearing, tender. See leniency. II. n. An emollient; a lenitive.

Therefore I do advise the use of lenients, not only by the authority of those ancient and modern chirurgeons, but by my own practice. Wiseman, Surgery, v. 9.

leniently (lē'niēt-li), adv. In a lenient manner; assuagingly; mildly.

Leniently as he was treated by his contemporaries, posterity has treated him more leniently still. Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

lenify (len'i-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. lenified, ppr. lenifying. [OF. lenifier, F. lenifier = Pr. Sp. Pg. lenificar = It. lenificare, < L. lenis, smooth, soft, mild, + facere, make: see -fy.] To assuage; soften; mitigate. [Now rare.]

That sorowe whiche shall assaffe me by reason of your absence I wdl sweten and lenifie with contentation. Barnaby Rich, Farewell to Military Profession.

My Lord Treasurer Clifford, who could not endure I should lenifie my style when a war with Holland was the subject. Evelyn, To Pepys.

All soft'ning simples, known of sov'reign use, He presses out and pours their noble juice; These first infus'd, to lenify the pain, He tugs with pincers, but he tugs in vain. Dryden, Æneid, xii. 592.

leniment (len'i-ment), n. [= OF. leniment, liniment, < L. lenimentum, a soothing remedy, < lenire, soften, soothe: see lenient, a.] A soothing application; a liniment.

lenitive (len'i-tiv), a. and n. [= F. lenitif = Pr. lenitivu = Sp. Pg. It. lenitivo, < L. as if *lenitivus, < lenitus, pp. of lenire, soften: see lenient.] I. a. Assuaging; palliating.

Those milks have all an scrimony; though one would think they should be lenitive. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 639.

II. n. 1. A medicine or an application that has the quality of easing pain; anything which softens or mitigates.

Thy lenitive appli'de did ease my paine; For, though thou did forbid, twas no restrainte. Marie Magdalens Lamentations (1601). (Nares.)

Address Some lenitives, t' allay the firiness Of this disease. Daniel, Civil Wars, viii.

Their pain soft arts of pharmacy can ease, Thy breast alone no lenitives appease. Pope, Iliad, xvi. 39.

2. Anything which tends to allay passion or excitement; a palliative.

I did apply some lenitives to soften His anger, and prevail'd. Shirley, Brothers, iv. 1.

There is one sweet lenitive at least for evils, which Nature holds out; so I took it kindly at her hands, and fell asleep. Sterne, Sentimental Journey, p. 43.

lenitiveness (len'i-tiv-nes), n. The quality of being lenitive or emollient. Bailey, 1727.

lenitude (len'i-tūd), n. [= OF. lenitude, < L. lenitudo, softness, mildness, < lenis, soft: see lenity.] Lenity. Blount.

lenity (len'i-ti), n. [OF. lenite, F. lenité = Sp. lenidad = Pg. lenidade = It. lenità, < L. lenita(t)-s, softness, smoothness, mildness, < lenis, soft, smooth.] Mildness of temper; softness; tenderness; mercy.

But they now, made worse through his lenitie & gentleness, cast stones at him & brake his head. J. Udall, On Mark xii.

Glorious is the victorie Conquerours use with lenitie. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 104.

=Syn. See leniency.

lennert (len'ert), n. [A dial. var. of linnert¹.] The linnert or linter. [Prov. Eng.]

leno (lē'nō), n. [A corrupt form of F. linon, lawn: see linon.] A very thin linen cloth made in imitation of muslin, and sometimes called linen muslin. It is used for translucent window-blinds, and for other purposes for which a gauzy fabric is needed. "Why, twenty years ago," she exclaimed, "I bought a lot of leno cheap—it was just about going out of fashion for caps then, I think." Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 430.

lenocinant (lē-nos'i-nant), a. [< L. lenocinān(t)-s, ppr. of lenocināri, flatter, entice, < leno, fem. lena, a pander: see lena¹.] Given to lewdness.

lenocinium (lē-nō-sin'i-um), n. [L., the trade of a pander, < leno, a pander: see lena¹.] In Scots law, a husband's connivance at his wife's adultery.

lens (lenz), n.; pl. lenses (len'zez). [= Sp. Pg. It. lente (It. also, as E., after L., lens = D. lens = G. linse = Dan. lindse = Sw. lins). < NL. lens, a lens, so called from its shape, < L. lens, a lentil (which is shaped like a double-convex lens); see lentil.] 1. A piece of transparent substance bounded by two curved surfaces (usually spherical), or by a curved surface and a plane. The ordinary use of a lens is to cause pencils of rays to converge or diverge systematically after passing through it. Lenses for optical purposes are usually made of glass; acoustic lenses, of carbon dioxide enclosed between two thin membranes; lenses for action upon electrical radiations, of paraffin or pitch, substances which are transparent to electrical rays, though opaque to light. Optical lenses alone are in common use. Ordinary lenses are distinguished into two classes—convex or magnifying lenses, which are thickest in the center, and concave, which are thinnest in the center. Each class has three varieties, as shown in fig. 1.

Fig. 1.

To the first belong D, the double-convex or biconvex; C, the plano-convex; and E, the meniscus. The concave lenses are B, the double-concave or biconcave; A, the plano-concave; and F, the concavo-convex, sometimes improperly called concave meniscus. The line which passes through the centers of curvature of the two surfaces is the axis of the lens, and a point on this axis so taken that every line drawn through it pierces parallel elements of the two surfaces is its optical center. A convex lens converges rays which are parallel to its axis, approximately to a point called its principal focus (F in fig. 2). The distance from the optical center to this focus is the same on both sides of the lens, and depends upon the radii of its curved surfaces and the material of which it is made. Rays diverging from a point beyond the principal focus F on either side of the lens are approximately collected to a "real" focus beyond the principal focus on the other side (see fig. 3); but if the source of light is between the lens and its principal focus, the rays after emergence diverge as if they came from a so-called virtual focus behind the luminous point. The luminous point and its focus are interchangeable, and are called conjugate foci, as, for instance, L and l in fig. 3.

Fig. 2.

Fig. 3.

(See focul, 1.) A concave lens always renders still more divergent rays emanating from a point, and so forms only virtual foci. If the source of light is an extended surface, then the pencil of rays emanating from each point forms its own focus; and the collection of foci constitutes an image, which is real and inverted if the foci are real, but virtual and erect if they are virtual. The relative sizes of the object and image are sensibly proportional, if the lens is thin, to their respective distances from the optical center; if the lens is thick, the distances must be reckoned from the two so-called principal points of the lens (see principal point, under point), which lie on the axis on each side of the optical center. An image formed by a single lens is never perfectly distinct, on account of the spherical and chromatic aberrations of the lens. (See aberration, 4.) The former is due to the fact that a lens bounded by spherical surfaces converges marginal rays to a point nearer the lens than that in which the central rays meet; the latter, to the fact that rays of different color form their foci at different distances, the focal distance for violet rays being (with a glass lens) nearly a seventh part shorter than that for the red rays. The spherical aberration can be corrected by making the surfaces of forms other than spherical, or by combining two or more lenses properly proportioned; the chromatic aberration, only by combining two or more convex and concave lenses of different materials, usually a convex of crown-glass with a concave of flint-glass.

2. In anat., in the eye, a double-convex body placed in the axis of vision behind the iris between the aqueous humor and the vitreous humor, serving to focus rays of light upon the retina; the crystalline lens. See first cut under eye.—3. Figuratively, photography, from the use of lenses in that art.

So thoroughly has this region been set forth by the pen and the pencil and the lens that I am relieved of the necessity of describing it. Harper's Mag., LXXVIII, 255.

4. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of leguminous plants of the tribe Vicieae. It is distinguished from Vicia by having but two ovules instead of many, as is generally the case in Vicia. The 8 species enumerated by some are generally reduced to 2, which are low erect or half-climbing herbs with pinnate leaves and small single or racemose pale flowers, natives of the Mediterranean region and eastern Asia. One species, Lens esculenta, the seeds of which are called lentils, is probably one of the oldest of plants cultivated by man for food. See lentil.—Achromatic lens. See achromatic.—Actinic lens, a compound lens so constructed that its chemical and luminous foci coincide.—Aplanatic lens, a compound lens in which both chromatic and spherical aberrations are corrected.—Apochromatic lens, a microscope-objective made from certain peculiar kinds of glass, by means of which the aberrations can be more accurately corrected than in lenses made of the ordinary crown- and flint-glass.—Burning-lens, a convex lens used to concentrate the heat of the sun at its focus.—Camera-lens, a combination of lenses used in a camera obscura. See camera.—Capsule of the lens. See capsule.—Cartesian lens. See Cartesian.—Coddington lens, a lens formed from a sphere of glass by cutting a deep and wide equatorial groove around it, and filling the groove with some opaque substance.—Collimating lens. See collimating.—Concave lens, a lens that is thinner at the center than at the edge.—Condensing-lens, or condenser, a convex lens or a combination of lenses used to concentrate a strong light upon some point or surface, as upon the slit of a spectroscope or a microscope object, or a photographic negative in the process of making an enlarged picture.—Convex lens, a lens that is thicker at the center than at the edge.—Copying-lens, a photographic lens specially designed for copying engravings, etc.—Crossed lens, a glass lens the spherical surfaces of which have radii bearing the ratio of 1 to 6. It has less spherical aberration than any other form of glass lens with spherical surfaces.—Crystalline lens. See def. 2, crystalline, and eye, 1.—Cylindrical lens, a lens which has one or both surfaces cylindrical; commonly used in eye-glasses to correct astigmatism of the eye. See astigmatism.—Diamond lens, a lens made from a diamond.—Doublet (lens), a combination of two lenses separated by a small distance. Sometimes each of the two is itself compound.—Field lens. In an eyepiece, the lens which is furthest from the eye, and has the special function of enlarging the field of view.—Fluid lens. See fluid.—Fresnel lens, a lens (bearing the name of its inventor) formed of a central plano-convex lens surrounded by segmental rings, all having the same focus. The separate pieces are cemented to a plane glass or set in a metal frame. (Fig. 4 represents the cross-section of such a lens.) It is used in lighthouses and signal-lamps.—Immersion-lens, a microscope-objective which requires a drop of water or other liquid to be put between it and the cover of the object under examination, thus increasing the angle of aperture and obviating loss of light by reflection.—Landscape lens, a photographic lens specially adapted to landscape photography.—Magnifying-lens, a lens used to increase the apparent size of an object seen through it. A convex lens held near the eye produces this effect when the distance of the object from the lens is less than the principal focal length of the lens.

Fig. 4. Fresnel Lens.

(O F in fig. 5.) The rays from the object A B, after passing through the lens, reach the eye as if they came from the virtual image a b.—Multiplying-lens, a plano-convex lens the convex side of which has been worked into a number of plane facets, each of which presents a separate image (virtual, and not magnified) of the object viewed through it.—Orthoscopic lens, a form of achromatic doublet giving a very flat and undistorted field of view.—Periscopic lens, a lens with a very wide field of view. The name is specially applied to spectacle-lenses which are concave on the surface next the eye; also to some wide-angle photographic lenses.—Photographic lens, a lens or combination of lenses adapted for photography. Ordinarily the lens of the photographic camera is a combination of two achromatic lenses of peculiar curves, mounted in a tube with a considerable space between them. (See fig. 6.) The photographic objective of a telescope is like an ordinary achromatic objective, except that its curves are adjusted to bring the blue and violet rays to the most accurate focus possible, rather than the yellow and green rays, which are most effective in vision.—Polyzonal lens. Same as Fresnel lens.—Portrait-lens, a photographic lens specially adapted to the taking of portraits.—Rectilinear lens, a photographic lens so constructed that straight lines in the object will not be distorted into curved lines in the picture.—Side-condensing lens, a condensing-lens so attached to a microscope as to illuminate an opaque object by side-light.—Stanhope lens, a lens of small diameter with two convex faces of different radii, enclosed in a metallic tube.—Triplet lens, a combination of three lenses, usually all achromatic. The ordinary form of microscope-objective is a triplet.—Wide-angle lens, a photographic lens capable of making a distinct and undistorted picture of objects which subtend angles of 60° to 100° or more as seen from the camera; also, a microscope-objective which admits from each point of the object a pencil of rays of wide angle (often as much as 140° and upward); an objective of large angular aperture. See aperture, 4.

Fig. 5.

Fig. 6. Photographic Lens (Type of Portrait Lens).

lens-cap (lenz'kap), n. A cap or cover fitting over the opening of the tube of a lens.

lens-holder (lenz'höl'dër), n. A device for supporting a lens, or a combination of lenses, during the adjustment to the focus of an object on an adjustable foreeps or stage below.

lent (lent), n. [< ME. lent, lente, an abbr. of lenten], the final syllable being appar. taken as inflexive; see lenten.] An annual fast of forty days, beginning with Ash Wednesday and continuing till Easter, observed from very early times in the Christian church, in commemoration of Christ's forty days' fast (Mat. iv. 2), and as a season of special penitence and preparation for the Easter feast. The lenten fast is now observed as obligatory by the Orthodox Greek and other Oriental churches, and by the Roman Catholic, Anglican, and Lutheran churches, and as a profitable exercise by many members of other churches. It has varied in length at different times and in different parts of the church, and has begun later or earlier according as Sundays only or Saturdays also were excepted from fasting. In the Western Church it begins on Ash Wednesday, forty-six days before Easter; but as the intervening Sundays, called Sundays in (not of) lent, are (on the ground that Sunday is always a feast-day) not counted part of Lent, the fast lasts only forty days. The first Sunday in Lent is known as Quadragesima Sunday, the fourth as Mid-Lent Sunday, the fifth as Passion Sunday, and the sixth (beginning Holy Week) as Palm Sunday. The two weeks and a half preceding Lent, beginning with Septuagesima, following which are Sexagesima and Quinquagesima Sundays, form the pre-lenten season, a transition between the joyful Christmas and Epiphany season and the penitential season of Lent. In medieval times the name Lent (or, in Latin, Quadragesima) was given to other periods of fasting also. Forty days between Martinus (November 11th) and Christmas Eve were called St. Martin's Lent (Quadragesima S. Martini), and another Lent preceded St. John Baptist's day (June 24th). In distinction from these, the period between Ash Wednesday and Easter was called Great Lent and Clean Lent, the last name being probably given on account of the preceding confession and absolution. In the Greek Church Lent (Τεσσαρακοστή) begins on the Monday after Tyrophagus (Quinquagesima), and the first, third, and sixth Sundays are called Orthodoxy Sunday, Stavroproskynnesimos (Sunday of the Adoration of the Cross), and Palm Sunday respectively.

If it may be, fast
Whole Lent, and pray.
Tennyson, St. Simeon Stylites.

Great Lent, Great fast, in the Gr. Ch., the lenten fast, as the most important fast of the year, in distinction from other seasons of fasting, to which the name Lent (as equivalent to Τεσσαρακοστή) is also given by Western writers; namely, that between St. Philip's day (November 14th) and Christmas (Fast of St. Philip or of the nativity), that after All Saints' Sunday, which corresponds to the Western Trinity Sunday (Fast of the Apostles), and that from August 1st to the 14th, the eve of the Repose of Theotocos (Fast of the Theotocos).—Head of Lent. See head.—Lent collectors. See collector, 5.—Lent determination. See determination, 12.

lent² (lent), Preterit and past participle of *lent*¹.

lent³ (lent), a. [< OF. and F. lent = Sp. Pg. It. lento, pliant, flexible, tenacious, slow, sluggish, easy, ealm, < L. lentus (in form as if contr. of lentus, pp. of lenire, soften), < lenis, soft, smooth, gentle, akin to E. lithe: see lenty, lenten, etc., and *leath*¹, *lithe*¹. Hence relent.] 1. Slow; gentle; mild.

We must now increase
Our fire to ignis ardens; we are past
Fimus equinus, balnei cineris,
And all those lenter heats.
B. Johnson, Alchemist, iii. 2.

2. In music, same as lento.

lento (len-tán'dō), adv. [It., pp. of lentare, make slow, < lento, slow: see *lent*³, a.] In music, slackening; retarding; a direction to sing or play with increasing slowness the notes over which it is written.

lente, n. [ME., < OF. lente, < L. len(t)-s, a lentil: see lens, lentil.] A lentil. Wyclif.

lenten¹ (len'ten), n. and a. [ME. lentin, rarely lenton, leinten (also abbr. lente, leinte, whence mod. E. lent), < AS. lencten, lengten, rarely lenten (= D. lentic = MLG. lente, lenten, lentic = OHG. lenzin, lengizin (in lengizimnōth), also lenzo, MHG. lenze, G. lenz), the spring, later applied esp. to the fast beginning in the spring, called in full lentenfasten, i. e. 'spring-fast,' usually derived < lang, long (whence also length and lengthen), "because the days become longer in spring"; see long, a. This derivation is supported by the var. forms OHG. langiz, MHG. langez, langeze (appar. < lang, long); but the deriv. is irreg. in form and thought, and the OHG. MHG. var. forms may be due to popular etymology. It is not probable that the word is connected with long. In mod. use lenten as a noun is abbr. to lent, while in attrib. use it remains unchanged, being taken as an adj. in -en.] 1. The spring; the season following winter.—2. A fast observed in the spring; same as *Lent*¹ (of which lenten is the older form).

To lene ne to lere, ne lentes to faste.
Piers Plowman (C), xiv. 81.

II. a. [cap. or l. c.] 1. Pertaining to Lent; used in Lent: as, Lenten sermons; the lenten fast.

And perhaps it was the same polittick drift that the Divell whipt St. Jerom in a lenten dream, for reading Cicero.
Milton, Areopagitica, p. 14.

Hence—2. Characteristic of or suitable for Lent; spare; plain; meager: as, lenten fare.

If you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you.

Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 329.
Who can read
In thy pale face, dead eye, and lenten suit,
The liberty thy ever-giving hand
Hath bought for others?

Beau. and Fl., Honest Man's Fortune, iv. 1.
Meanwhile she quench'd her fury at the flood,
And with a lenten sallad cool'd her blood.
Dryden, Hind and Panther, iii. 27.

3. Cold; austere: as, a lenten lover. Compare Lent-lover. Cotgrave.—Lenten fig, a dried fig; a raisin.—Lenten hearse. Same as tenebra-hearse.—Lenten veil, a curtain formerly suspended in the Western Church before the high altar during Lent, and said to be still in use in Spain. It was a survival of the primitive anphithra, retained in the Greek Church.

lenten² (len'ten), n. A dialectal variant of linden.

lenten-crab (len'ten-krab), n. A fresh-water crab of southern Europe, Thelphusa fluviatilis, allowed to be eaten in Lent.

lenthe, n. A Middle English form of length.

Lentibulariæ (len-tib-ū-lā-rī'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1845), < Lentibularia (said to be irreg.) < L. lens (lent-), a lentil, + tubulus, a small pipe or tube), old name for Utricularia, + -æ.] An order of diotyledonous gamopetalous plants of the cohort Personales, distinguished by the one-celled ovary containing a free central placenta. See Utricularia.

lenticel (len'ti-sel), n. [Also lenticelle; < F. lenticelle, dim. of lenticule, lens-shaped: see lenticule.] 1. In bot., a lens-shaped body of cells formed in the periderm or corky layer of bark, which by its enlargement soon ruptures the epidermis, or the older corky layers where such are present. Outwardly lenticels appear in the earliest stage merely as brighter spots, then as oval warts, becoming two-lipped; while in some plants they widen with the growth of the stem into transverse striae. They are produced either beneath a stoma or group of stomata or independently. Their intercellular spaces are in communication with the outer air, and they thus serve the purpose of cortical pores, which name they sometimes bear. The outer (not corky) cells of a lenticel are termed packing or complementary cells; the inner (corky) cells have been called phellem. Lenticels occur on the greater majority of stems which produce bark in annular layers, also on the footstalks of many ferns.

2. In anat., one of the small mucous crypts or follicles of the base of the tongue having the shape of a lentil; a lenticular gland.

lenticellate (len-ti-sel'āt), a. [< lenticel + -ate.] Pertaining to or having lenticels.

lenticelle, n. See lenticel.

lenticula (len-tik-ū-lā), n.; pl. lenticulae (-lē). [L., a lentil, a lentil shape, a vessel of lentil shape, a freckle: see lentil, lenticule.] 1. In optics, a small lens.—2. In bot.: (a) A lenticel. (b) The spore-case of some fungi.—3. A freckle; an epheles.
Also lenticule.

lenticular (len-tik'ū-lār), a. [= F. lenticulaire = Pr. Sp. Pg. lenticular = It. lenticolare, < L. lenticularis, lentil-shaped, < lenticula, a lentil; see lenticule, lentil.] 1. Resembling a lentil in size or form.—2. Having the form of a double-convex lens, as some seeds.—Lenticular bone. Same as lenticulare.—Lenticular fever, fever attended with an eruption of small pimples.—Lenticular ganglion. See ganglion.—Lenticular gland. Same as lenticel.—2.—Lenticular mark or space. In entom., one having the outline of a double-convex lens as seen from the side, bounded by two convexly curved lines which meet in two points.—Lenticular nucleus, the lower of the two gray nuclei of the corpus striatum. It is somewhat conical in shape, with base outward toward the insula. It is divided into three parts by medullary layers parallel to the base. The outermost segment is called the putamen, the two inner the globus pallidus; the innermost is more or less indistinctly divided into two. The lenticular nucleus is separated from the caudate nucleus and from the optic thalamus by the internal capsule.—Lenticular process of the incus of a mammal. See incus (a). lenticulare (len-tik'ū-lā-rē), n.; pl. lenticularia (-rī-ā). [NL., neut. of L. lenticularis, lenticular; see lenticular.] A bone of the carpus of some reptiles, as crocodiles. It is an oval ossicle situated between the ulnar proximal carpal bone and the second to fifth metacarpals, supporting the third to fifth of these entirely. Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 220.

lenticularly (len-tik'ū-lār-li), adv. In a lenticular manner; like a lens; with a curve.

lenticule (len-ti-kūl), n. [F. lenticule, a., lentil-shaped (as a noun, duckweed), = Sp. lenticula, < L. lenticula, a lentil; see lentil.] Same as lenticula.

lenticulite (len-tik'ū-līt), n. [F. lenticule, lentil, + -ite.] In geol., a fossil of lenticular shape.

lenticulostriate (len-tik'ū-lō-strī'āt), a. [F. lenticule, lentil, + NL. striatus, furrowed; see striate.] Pertaining to the lenticular portion of the corpus striatum of the brain. Specifically applied to one of the anterolateral nutritive arteries from the middle cerebral or Sylvian artery, which from the frequency with which it bleeds is called by Charcot the "artery of cerebral hemorrhage."

lentiform (len-ti-fōrm), a. [= F. It. lentiforme, < L. lens (lent-), a lentil, + forma, form.] Having the form of a lens; lenticular: as, the lentiform nucleus of the striate body of the brain.

lentigerous (len-tij'ē-rus), a. [F. lentigineux, a lens, + L. gerere, carry, bear.] Provided with a crystalline lens, as an eye: applied to the eyes of some mollusks, as cephalopods, in distinction from punctigerous.

lentiginous, n. Plural of lentigo, 1.

lentiginose (len-tij'i-nōs), a. [F. lentiginosus, freckled; see lentiginous.] In bot. and zool., covered with minute dots as if dusted or freckled; speckled.

lentiginous (len-tij'i-nus), a. [= F. lentiginoux = It. lentiginoso, < LL. lentiginosus, freckled, < L. lentigo (-in-), a freckly eruption, freckles; see lentigo.] Same as lentiginose.

lentigo (len-ti'gō), n. [NL., < L. lentigo, a lentil-shaped spot, a freckly eruption, < lens (lent-), a lentil; see lentil.] 1. Pl. lentiginos (len-tij'i-nēz). In med., a freckle; abstractly, a freckly condition; the presence of freckles.—2. [cap.] In zool., a genus of mollusks.

lentil (len'til), n. [ME. lentil, < OF. lentille, F. lentille = Sp. lenteja = Pg. lentilha = It. lentichia, < L. lenticula, a lentil, < lens (lent-), a lentil; see lens. Cf. lenticular, lenticule.] 1. The annual leguminous plant Lens esculenta, or its seeds. Its native country is unknown; but it is now widely cultivated in the Mediterranean region and the Orient, having been in use in Egypt and the East from a high antiquity. The small flattened seeds furnish a nutritious food, similar to peas and beans, and are cooked whole or split or ground into meal. The leafy stems of the lentil serve as fodder, and when in blossom the plant is a good source of honey.

2. pl. Freckles; lentigo. The root brought into a liniment cureth the lentils or red spots. Holland, tr. of Pliny, xxii. 21.

3. In apparatus for rectifying alcohol, one of the lentil-shaped bulbs (of which there are generally two, but may be more) placed in the condenser between the coil and the pipe leading from the column of the still. See still and rectification.—Water-lentils, the duckweed Lemna minor. [Prov. Eng.]

lentil-shell (len'til-shel), n. A shell of the genus Ercillia.

lentinert, n. See lentner.

lenticus (len-tis'kus), n.; pl. lenticisci (-sī). [L., the mastic-tree.] Same as lentisk.

lentisk (len'tisk), n. [Also lentise; < ME. lentiske = F. lentisque = Pr. lentise = Sp. Pg. lentisco = It. lentischio, < L. lentiscus, also lentis- cum, the mastic-tree.] The mastic-tree, Pistacia Lentiscus. See mastic-tree and Pistacia.

In this tract all the heathes or com'ons are cover'd with rosemary, lavender, lentises, and the like sweet shrubs. Evelyn, Diary, Sept. 30, 1644.

lentitude (len'ti-tūd), n. [F. lenticude = Sp. lentitud, < L. lentitudo, slowness, < lentus, slow, tenacious; see lent, a.] Slowness. Baile, 1731.

Lent-lily (lent'li'lī), n. The daffodil: so named from its time of flowering. Also called Lent-rose. [Prov. Eng.]

A silk pavilion, gay with gold
In streaks and rays, and all Lent-lily in hue,
Save that the dome was purple.
Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

Lent-lovert, n. A cold lover; a lentin lover. See lentin, a., 3.

These dolent, contemplative Lent-Lovers.
Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, ii. 21. (Davies.)

lentner, lentiner (lent'nēr, len'ti-nēr), n. [F. lenten + -er: "so called because taken during that season" (?).] A kind of hawk.

If I should enlarge my discourse to the observation of the . . . Haggard, and the two sorts of Lentners, . . . it would be much . . . pleasure to me.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, i. 1.

lento (len'tō), a. [It., slow; see lent, a.] In music, at a slow tempo. Also lent.

lentoid (len'toid), a. [F. lent (t-), a lentil (see lens), + Gr. eidos, form.] Having the form of a lentil or a double-convex lens; lens-shaped.

When Assyria and Phenicia took the place of Babylonia . . . as civilizing powers, the cylinder made way for the lentoid or cone-like aæl.
A. H. Sayce, Pref. to Schliemann's Troja, p. xx.

lenton, n. A Middle English form of lentin.

lentor, lentour (len'tor), n. [= F. lentour = Sp. Pg. lensor = It. lensor, < L. lentor, flexibility, pliancy, < lentus, pliant, tenacious, also slow, sluggish; see lent, a.] 1. Tenacity; viscoseness; viscosity, as of fluids.

Some bodies have a kinde of lentour, and are of a more deperible nature than others. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 857.

By reason of their clamminess and lentor they [arborescent hollyhocks] are banished from our sallet.
Evelyn, Acetaria.

2. Slowness; delay; sluggishness. The lentor of eruptions not inflammatory points to an acid cause. Arbuthnot, Alimenta.

lentous (len'tus), a. [F. lentus, pliant, tenacious, viscous, slow; see lent, a.] Viscid; viscous; tenacious.

In this [a frog's] spawn of a lentous and transparent body are to be discerned many specks.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 13.

Lent-rose (lent'rōz), n. Same as Lent-lily. [Prov. Eng.]

lent-seed (lent'sēd), n. [ME. lentesced, lentesced; < lent + seed.] Seeds sown in spring.

Lynne-seed and lik-seed and lente-seedes alle Aren nought so worthy as whete.
Piers Plowman (C), xlii. 190.

lenvoyt, lenvoy, lenvoi (len-voi'; F. pron. loñ-vwo'), n. [F. lenvoy, lenvoi; < OF. Penvoy, Penvoi; le, the; envoi, a sending; see envoy.] 1. A sort of postscript appended to a literary composition. See envoy.

Page, Is not lenvoy a salve?
Ar. No, Page, it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plaine
Some obscure precedence that hath tofore bin faine.
Shak., L. L. L., iii. 1. 82 (folio 1623).

2. A conclusion; a result. See envoy.

Lenzites (len-zī'tēz), n. [NL. (Elias Fries, 1813).] A genus of fungi of the order Agaricini. The pileus is sessile, dimidiate in form, and woody or coriaceous; the gills are also coriaceous; and the trama is floccose. The plants are found growing on stumps, etc., and are most abundant in the tropics, where they become woody.

lenzitoid (len-zī'toid), a. [F. Lenzites + -oid.] Resembling in form or structure a fungus of the genus Lenzites.

Lenz's law. See law.

Leo (lē'ō), n. [L., a lion; a constellation; see lion.] 1. In astron., an ancient zodiacal constellation, the Lion, containing Regulus, a star of magnitude 1½, and two stars of the second magnitude. It is easily found, for the pointers of the Great Bear point southerly to its brightest star, distant about 45 degrees from the southernmost of them. Four stars in the body of Leo form a characteristic trapezium, and those about the neck and mane make a sickle. It is the fifth sign of the zodiac, its symbol as such being ♌, showing the lion's mane. See cut in next column.

2. In zool., the technical specific name [l. c.] of the lion, Felis leo, sometimes taken as a generic name [cap.], when the animal is called Leo africanus.—Leo minor, a constellation between Leo and the Great Bear, first introduced in 1690 by Hevelius.

leodt, n. A Middle English form of lede.

leoft, a. A Middle English form of lief.

leoht, a. and n. A Middle English form of light.

leont, n. A Middle English form of lion.

Leonardesque (lē-ō-nār-desk'), a. and n. [F. Leonardo (see def.) + -esque.] 1. a. In art, in the manner of Leonardo or Lionardo da Vinci, an illustrious Florentine artist, engineer, and man of letters (1452-1519).

2. n. A disciple or an imitator of Leonardo da Vinci; sometimes, a picture of the school of Leonardo.

Also Lionardesque.

leoned, a. See lionced.

leonicito (lē-on-sī'tō), n. [A dim. (not in Sp. use) of Sp. leon, a lion; see lion.] The lion-monkey of Humboldt, a kind of tamarin or marmoset, Midas leoninus.

Leonese (lē-ō-nēs' or -nēz'), a. and n. [F. Leonés, of Leon, < Leon, Leon; see def.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the city, province, or ancient kingdom of Leon in Spain, or its inhabitants.

2. n. sing. and pl. A native or an inhabitant, or natives or inhabitants, of the province or city of Leon in Spain.

leonhardtite (lē-on-hār'dīt), n. [Named after Prof. K. C. von Leonhard of Heidelberg (1779-1862).] A mineral closely related to laumontite, and probably a variety of it, differing only in having lost part of its water.

Leonia (lē-ō-nī-ā), n. [NL. (Ruiz and Pavon, 1799), named after D. Francisco Leon, who promoted the publication of Ruiz and Pavon's "Flora Peruviana et Chilensis."] A genus of South American trees, belonging to the order Violariæ and tribe Alsodeiæ. It is distinguished from Alsodeia, the type of the tribe, by having the five petals partly connected, the connective of the stamens not produced, and an indehiscent fruit. There are two species, natives of Brazil and Peru. One, L. glycyarpa, produces a fruit that is eaten by the Peruvians, who call the tree the achocón. This genus was formerly placed in the order Myrsinæ (Myrsinaceæ), and later made by De Candolle to constitute an order (Leoniaceæ) by itself.

Leoniaceæ (lē-ō-nī-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Alphonse de Candolle, 1844), < Leonia + -aceæ.] An order of plants, containing only the anomalous genus Leonia, now referred to the Violariæ.

Leonid (lē'ō-nīd), n. One of the Leonides.

Leonides (lē-on'ī-dēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. leo (n-), a lion, the constellation Leo (see lion), + -ides, pl. suffix; see -id, 1.] A name given to the group of meteors observed in the month of November each year, but occurring with extreme profusion about three times in a century: so called because they seem to radiate from the constellation Leo.

leonine (lē'ō-nīn or -nīn), a. and n. [ME. leonin, < OF. leoin, F. léonin = Sp. Pg. It. leonino, < L. leoninus, belonging to a lion, ML. also belonging to a person named Leo or Leontius or Leontinus (in which sense it is generally supposed to be used as applied to a form of verse (versus leontinus, OF. vers leonins, also leontinime, lionime, f. sing.), the person in this case being identified with Leo or Leontius or Leontinus, a canon of the Order of St. Benedict in Paris in the 12th century, or with other persons who are supposed to have invented or used this form of verse; but the adj. so applied is prob. to be taken literally), < leo (n-), a lion; see lion.] 1. a. 1. Pertaining to or resembling a lion; lion-like: as, leonine fierceness or rapacity.

So was he ful of leony corage.
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 656.

We almost see his [Londor's] leonine face and lifted brow.
Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 57.

2. In pros., consisting of metrical Latin hexameters or elegiacs (alternate hexameters and pentameters), in which the final word rhymes with the word immediately preceding the cesural pause or the middle of the line. The correspondence of sound between the terminations of the two halves of the pentameter is frequently imperfect, affecting unaccented syllables only, so as not to amount to a perfect rime. Leonine verses were extensively used in the middle ages, even as early as the eighth century. The following Latin version of "The devil was sick," etc., is a leonine elegiac couplet:

"Dæmon languēbat, monachus tunc esse volebat, Ast ubi convalescē, mansit ut ante fuit."

Although classical poets avoided in general the use of rime, yet occasional instances of it can be found in their writings, and sometimes even examples of true leonine verses, such as this from Ovid:

"Quot cælum stellas, tot habet tua Roma puellas."

The epithet leonine does not properly apply to other meters than those mentioned, nor to other distributions of rime.

3. [cap.] Pertaining to a person named Leo, particularly to several popes of that name; more specifically, of or pertaining to Leo I., the Great (pope from 440 to 461), who is said to have added certain words to the Roman canon of the mass, and whom some have even, without good reason, described as the author of the Roman liturgy. A Roman sacramentary extant in a manuscript assigned to the eighth century is known as the Leonine Sacramentary.—Leonine City, that part of the city of Rome which is west of the Tiber and north of Trastevere. It contains the Vatican, the Castle of St. Angelo, and the district between (known as the Borgo), and is inclosed within a separate line of walls. It was first fortified by Pope Leo IV. (847-55), whence the name.—Leonine monkey, the Macaca leoninus of Aracan.

II. n. A coin illegally imported into England by foreign merchants in the reign of Edward I. It was made of silver, alloyed, and was intended to circulate with the silver pennies then legally current. Probably so called because its obverse type was a lion.

leoninely (lē'ō-nin-li or -nīn-li), adv. In a leonine manner; like a lion.

Leonist (lē'ō-nist), n. [< ML. Leonista, said to be so named from one Leo, or from the city of Lyons, F. Lyon (< L. Lugdunum), conformed to lion, L. leo(n)-, a lion.] A name sometimes used for a member of the religious body known as the Waldenses.

Leontice (lē-on'ti-sē), n. [NL., < L. leontice, the wild hervil, < Gr. λεοντική, a plant also called κακλία; see Caecalia.] A genus of polypetalous herbs of the natural order Berberidaceæ and tribe Berberceæ. It is characterized by having from 6 to 9 sepals, 6 small spurred petals, 6 stamens, and an indehiscent bladderly capsule. There are 3 or 4 species growing in central Asia, herbs with tuber-bearing rhizomes.

Leontodon (lē-on'tō-don), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), in allusion to the toothed leaves, < Gr. λεων (leōn-), a lion, + ὄδον (ōdon-) = E. tooth.] A genus of composite plants of the tribe Cichoriaceæ and subtribe Hypochaeridaceæ. It is distinguished by the plumose pappus, naked receptacle, and smooth achenia. There are about 40 species. The common hawk-bit or fall dandelion of the northeastern United States is L. autumnalis, a native of Europe, naturalized in the United States. Popularly called lion's-tooth.

Leontopodium (lē-on-tō-pō'di-um), n. [NL. (Robert Brown), < L. leontopodium = Gr. λεοντοπόδιον, a plant, lit. lion's-foot, < λεων (leōn-), a lion, + πούς (pod-) = E. foot.] A small genus of composite plants of the tribe Inuloidaceæ and subtribe Gnaphaliaceæ. It is closely related to Gnaphalium and was formerly united with it, but is now separated from it on account of the sterile hermaphrodite flowers and undivided style. L. alpinum (Gnaphalium Leontopodium) is the edelweiss (which see).

Leonurus (lē-ō-nū'rns), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < Gr. λεων, lion, + νύρα, tail.] A genus of labiate plants of the tribe Stachydeæ. It is distinguished from Stachys by having the rootlets acutely three-angled at the top instead of rounded. There are 10 species, natives of extratropical Europe and Asia. They are erect herbs with cut leaves, having a close whorl of flowers in their axils. One species, L. Carduica, is a common weed called motherwort, naturalized from Europe in the eastern part of the United States.

leopard (lep'ārd), n. [Early mod. E. also libbard; < ME. lepard, lepart, lipard, leopard, leopard, leopard, also lebard, leppard, libard, libart, liberd, lyberde, lybart, etc., = D. luipaard = G. Dan. Sw. leopard, < OF. leopard, leopard, leopard, F. léopard = Pr. leopard, leopard, leopard = Sp. Pg. It. leopardo, < L. leopardus, < Gr. λεόπαρδος, λεοντόπαρδος, a leopard, < λεων (leōn-), a lion, + πάρδος, a pard; see lion and pard.] 1. The pard or panther, Felis pardus, the largest spotted eat of the Old World. It ranks third in size, strength, and ferocity among the Old World Felidæ, being exceeded only by the lion and tiger; but it is also inferior to the jaguar and cougar of America. The Himalayn ounce, Felis irbis, is about equal to it in size. A good-sized leopard is about 4 feet long without the tail, which is about 3 feet. The skull measures 9 inches in length by 5½ in breadth. The color is tawny, paler or whitish below, and nearly everywhere regularly and profusely spotted with black or blackish, the largest of these spots being cecliated or broken into rosettes. But the animal varies not less in color than in size. Some individuals are black, though even in these cases of melanism the characteristic studded pattern of coloration may be traced. The leopard is smooth-haired, without mane or beard, agile as well as sturdy, and of somewhat arboreal habits, like the jaguar and cougar. It inhabits wooded country throughout Africa and across Asia to Japan, Java, and some of the other islands, in this wide range running into many geographical varieties.

Leopard (Felis pardus).

It fortune Belphebe with her peers,
The woody Nympha, and with that lovely boy,
Waa hunting then the Labards and the Bearce, Spenser, F. Q., IV. vii. 23.

Her foot on one
Of those tame leopards. Kitten-like he roll'd
And paw'd about her sandal. Tennyson, Princess, iii.

2. In her., originally, a lion passant gardant. Thus, the three lions on the shield of England as it existed in the reign of Henry III. are spoken of as leopards. In later heraldry an attempt has been made to discriminate between the lion and the leopard, but the only tenable distinction is when the leopard is represented spotted, which is common in modern heraldry. The practical identity of the two bearings is shown in this, that a leopard rampant is said to be a leopard lionné, and a lion passant gardant is said to be a lion leopardé.

3. A gold coin, weighing from about 53 to 69 grains, struck by Edward III. and Edward the Black Prince of England, for circulation in Obverse. Reverse.

Leopard, British Museum.

France, and having on the obverse a lion passant gardant. In French heraldy this representation is described as a lion leopardé, whence the name of the coin.—American leopard, the jaguar, Felis onca.—Black leopard. See def. 1.—Hunting leopard. See hunting-leopard.—Snow-leopard, the ounce, Felis irbis.

leopard-cat (lep'ārd-kat), n. 1. The American ocelot, Felis pardalis.—2. A wild eat of India, Ceylon, Java, and Sumatra, Felis bengalensis, about 3 feet long including the tail, of a tawny color, white below, striped on the head and back, spotted on the sides.

leopardé (lep-ār-dā'), a. [Heraldic F., < leopard + -é, E. -ed.] In her., passant gardant: said of a lion. See leopard, 2.

leopardess (lep'ār-des), n. [< leopard + -ess.] A female leopard.

leopard-fish (lep'ārd-fish), n. The lesser wolf-fish, Anarrhichas minor or A. pantherinus, of the North Atlantic.

leopard-flower (lep'ārd-flon'ēr), n. A garden-flower from China, Belamcanda (Pardanthus) Chinensis, of the iris family. The perianth is spotted with purple, and the fruited receptacle resembles a blackberry, whence the plant is also called blackberry-lily.

leopard-frog (lep'ārd-frog), n. The American shad-frog, Rana hatercina: so called from its spotted coloration.

leopard-lily (lep'ārd-lil'i), n. A spotted variety of the liliaceous plant Lachenalia pendula, from the Cape of Good Hope.

leopard-moth (lep'ārd-mōth), n. A large black and white spotted moth of the family Cossidæ (Zeuzera pyrina or Z. œculi), common throughout Europe: an English collectors' name. The larva bores in the trunks of the elm, apple, pear, and plum.

leopard's-bane (lep'ārdz-bān), n. 1. A plant of the genus Doronicum.—2. A medicinal plant, Arnica montana.—3. Same as herb-paris.

leopard-seal (lep'ārd-sēl), n. A large spotted seal, Leptonychotes or Leptonychus weddelli, of the family Phocidæ and subfamily Stemorrhynchinae, inhabiting Patagonia. Also called sea-leopard.

leopard-tortoise (lep'ārd-tōr'tis), n. A tortoise, Testudo pardalis.

Leopardus (lē-ō-pār'dus), n. [L., a leopard; see leopard.] A classic name of the leopard, pard, or panther, sometimes used in zoölogy as a generic name of the large spotted cats.

leopard-wood (lep'ārd-wūd), n. The wood of Brosimum Aubletii. It is mottled with dark blotches, giving a fancied resemblance to the skin of a leopard. See snake-wood.

leopard, n. A Middle English form of leopard.

Leopoldinia (lē-ō-pōl-din'i-ā), n. [NL. (Martius, 1833), dedicated to the Empress Leopoldine, wife of Dom Pedro I., Emperor of Brazil.] A genus of Brazilian palms of the tribe Areceæ and subtribe Caryotidæ. The four species inhabit the northern parts of Brazil. They are ornamental in cultivation and have various economic uses. L. Piassaba is one of the best-palms which yield the piassaba-fiber.

leort, n. A Middle English form of leor.

leornt, v. A Middle English form of learn.

leeset, v. t. A Middle English form of leese.

lept. An obsolete strong preterit of leap. Chaucer.

Lepadicea (lep-a-dis'ē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lepas (Lepad-) + -icea.] In De Blainville's classification (1825), one of two families of his Nematopoda (the other being Bulanoideæ), containing the cirripods of the genera Lepas, Gymnolepas, Pentalepas, Polylepas, and Litholepas.

Lepadidæ (lep-pād'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepas (Lepad-) + -idæ.] A family of stalked thoracic cirripeds, typified by the genus Lepas, belonging to the order Thoracica of the subclass Cirripedia; the goose-mussels or barnacles. These crustaceans are free when larval, fixed to submerged objects when adult. Fixure is effected by the modification of the antennæ into a flexible fleshy peduncle, sometimes very short, and sometimes a foot in length. This supports the hard calcareous shell or capitulum, normally of five valves, compressed to a flattened form, whose two sides are drawn together by a single transverse muscle. From the opening between the long, slender, curved, and jointed legs resembling tentacles, which move at will with a sweeping motion. On each side of the body are several filamentous appendages, homologous with the gills of higher crustaceans and supposed to have a respiratory function. The alimentary canal is comparatively simple; there are three pairs of delicate mouth-parts; there is no heart or large blood-vessels. The Lepadidæ are mostly hermaphrodite, but in some species the animal of the normal form is strictly female, having one or more males of minute size and more simple organization lodged inside its shell. In others, which, though hermaphrodite, have the male organs less developed than the female, similar males are met with, and are termed complemental males.

Lepas, in diagrammatic section.
a, the cavity of the sac, lying over the labium; b, prosoma; c, carina; s, scutum; t, tergum; p, penis; g, gut-forming gland; h, duct connecting this with a, cement-duct and glands; l, at bottom of figure, antennæ.

Lepadite (lep'a-dit), n. [< NL. Lepadites, < Gr. λεπάς (lepad-), a limpet (see Lepas), + -ite.] A fossil supposed to be a kind of barnacle; an aptychus. See Lepadites.

Lepadites (lep-a-dī'tēz), n. [NL.: see lepadite.] A spurious genus of supposed fossil barnacles, based on the aptychi of certain fossil cephalopods, as ammonites. See aptychus. Schlotheim, 1820.

Lepadogaster (lep'a-dō-gas'tēr), n. [NL. (Risso, 1810), < Gr. λεπάς (lepad-), a limpet (see Lepas), + γαστήρ, the stomach.] A genus of gobiesoeiform fishes with an adhesive thoracic disk divided into two portions, the posterior of which has a free anterior margin. By means of this organ the fish attaches itself to stones and other objects, and is hence known as sucker. Several species occur in European seas; the most common are L. gouani and L. bimaculatus. Erroneously written Lepadogaster (Farrall, 1841) and Lepadogasterus (Gouan, 1770).

Lateral view.
Ventral view.
Lepadogaster ciliatus.

lepadoid (lep'a-dōid), a. and n. [< Gr. λεπάς (lepad-), a limpet (see Lepas), + εἶδος, shape.]

I. a. Resembling a goose-mussel; of or pertaining to the Lepadidae.

II. n. A member of the Lepadidae.
lepal (lē'pal), n. [< NL. as if lepalum*, < L. lepis, < Gr. λεπίς, a scale; the term. conforms to that of petal, sepal.] In bot., a barren transformed stamen.

leparti, n. An obsolete variant of leopard. Chaucer.

Lepas (lē'pas), n. [< NL., < L. lepas (lepad-), < Gr. λεπίς (λεπάδ-), a limpet, < λέπας, a bare rock, < λέπεω, strip, peel.] The typical genus of Lepadidae; goose-mussels proper. L. anatifera is a common species, usually found attached to floating or submerged objects, hanging in the water sometimes to the length of a foot or more. L. fascicularis is another well-known species, with a short footstalk. See barnacle, 2.

lepet, v. A Middle English form of leap.

Lepechinia (lep-e-kin'ī-ŷ), n. [< NL. (Willdenow, 1816), named after John Lepechin, a Russian botanist.] A genus of labiate plants of the tribe Satureineae, and type of the subtribe Lepechinieae. It is distinguished from the other members of the subtribe by having the corolla naked within and by the oblong parallel anther-cells. There are 2 species, natives of Mexico, herbs with small yellowish or white flowers in axillary whorls crowded in dense terminal spikes.

Lepechinieae (lep'e-ki-nī'ē-ē), n. pl. [< NL. (Benth and Hooker, 1876), < Lepechinia + -ae.] A subtribe of labiate plants of the tribe Satureineae, based on the genus Lepechinia, having a loose campanulate or broadly tubular calyx, a broad tubular and two-lipped corolla, and four perfect stamens. It embraces 3 genera besides the type, Dekania, Sphacela, and Hormium, natives of Mexico, California, South America, the Hawaiian islands, and Europe.

leper¹ (lep'ēr), n. [In def. 1 (where also formerly lepry, q. v.) < ME. lepre, < OF. lepre, F. lepre = Sp. Pg. It. lepra, < L. lepra, < Gr. λέπρα, leprosy, < λέπρος, scaly, < λέπος, a scale, < λέπειν, strip, peel, = Russ. lupite = Lith. lypti, peel. In def. 2, orig. leprous man, the form leper as applied to a person being more recent, and appar. developed, as seeming noun of agent in -er, from leprous.] 1†. Leprosy.

The lepre of him was clesid. Wyclif, Mt. viii. 2.
 When he was in his lustie age, -
 The lepre caught in his visage.

Gower, Conf. Amant., ii.

2. A person affected with leprosy.
 And, behold, there came a leper and worshiped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

Mt. viii. 2.

leper²†, n. An obsolete form of leaper. Piers Plowman.

leper-house (lep'ēr-hous), n. A hospital for the treatment of leprosy.

leperize† (lep'ēr-iz), v. t. [< leper¹ + -ize.] To strike with leprosy.

Moses, by Faith, doth Myriam leperize.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Triumph of Faith, iiiii, 7.

leperous (lep'ēr-us), a. See leprous.
lepid (lep'id), a. [= Sp. lépido = Pg. It. lepido, < L. lepidus, pleasant; cf. L. lepor, lepos (lepor-), pleasantness; no verb-root appears.] Pleasant; jocose. [Rare.]

As for the joyous and lepid consul, he gives himself no trouble upon any subject.

Sydney Smith, Peter Plymley's Letters, vii.

lepidēs, n. Plural of lepis.

Lepidinea (lep-i-din'ē-ē), n. pl. [< NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1821), < Lepidium + -inea.] A tribe of cruciferous plants distinguished by the usually incumbent or conduplicate cotyledons; the peppergrasses. The tribe embraces 25 genera, of which Lepidium is the type.

lepidity†, n. [< lepid + -ity.] Pleasantness; wittiness. Bailey, 1731.

Lepidium (lē-pid'i-um), n. [< NL. (Linnæus), < L. lepidium, < Gr. λεπίδιον, a plant, prob. garden-cress, pepperwort, also lit. a small scale, dim. of λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale; see lepis.] 1. A large genus of cruciferous plants, chiefly herbs, of the tribe Lepidinea, distinguished by the dehiscent pod, which is almost always two-seeded, and by the white flowers. About 100 species have been enumerated, which may be reduced to from 60 to 80, distributed over the warm regions of the world. They are commonly known as peppergrasses.

2†. In zool., a genus of thysanurous insects. Also written Lepidion. Menge, 1854.

lepidly† (lep'id-li), adv. [< lepid + -ly.] Wittily; pleasantly.

lepidocrocite (lep-i-dok'rō-sit), n. [< Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale (see lepis), + κρόκος, crocus, + -ite.] A variety of goethite occurring in columnar forms with a scaly or fibrous structure.

lepidodendroid (lep'i-dō-dēn'droid), a. [< L. lepidodendron + -oid.] Like plants of the genus Lepidodendron; having a scaly bark.

Lepidodendron (lep'i-dō-den'dron), n. [< NL., < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + δένδρον, a tree.] A common fossil plant of the Carboniferous coal-measures, supposed, in some cases at least, to have furnished an important constituent of the coal itself. By most fossil botanists Lepidodendron is considered to be closely allied to the club-mosses (Lycopodiaceae), now widely spread plants. The fossil club-mosses are, however, not identical in structure or external appearance with any now living, one important difference being the much larger size of the fossil forms. The surface of the stem of Lepidodendron is marked by peculiar, prominent, quincuncially arranged, and generally lozenge-shaped "leaf-cushions" (also called "bolsters" and "leaf-bases"), which are sometimes distinctly separated from each other, and sometimes confluent above and below, and which vary greatly in size and shape with the age of the plant to which they belong. The leaf-scars are also usually rhombic (sometimes heart-shaped), and are situated on the upper or central part of the cushion, and marked with vascular impressions or scars, which are usually three in number, the middle one being always the largest. The young twigs were clothed with long narrow leaves. The internal structure of the plant varies considerably with the species, of which great numbers have been described, based chiefly on the differences in form and size of the leaf-cushions and -scars, which are now generally considered as furnishing very unreliable data for specific distinction. The fossil Lepidodendra are chiefly casts of the exterior. These plants are very characteristic of the middle and lower divisions of the productive (Carboniferous) coal-measures, and are widely distributed over the world. One species of Lepidodendron (corrugatum, Dawson) is very characteristic of the Lower Carboniferous in America. In Europe this genus is especially developed in the lower parts of the coal-measures. Sternberg, 1820. See Sigillaria.

Lepidodendron Brittsii, from the coal-measures of Missouri. a, a group of four leaf-scars; b, one of the scars on a larger scale.

lepidoganoid (lep'i-dō-gan'oid), a. and n. [< Lepidoganoidei, q. v.] I. a. Pertaining to or having the characters of the Lepidoganoidei.
II. n. A fish of the group Lepidoganoidei.

lepidoganoidean (lep'i-dō-ga-noi'dē-an), a. and n. Same as lepidoganoidei.

Lepidoganoidei (lep'i-dō-ga-noi'dō-i), n. pl. [< NL., < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + < NL. ganoideus, ganoid; see ganoid.] In R. Owen's systems, an order or a suborder of ganoid fishes with regular scales instead of plates, as in the Placoganoidei. It is an artificial group, represented by the living amiids, lepidosteids, and polypterids, with many extinct relatives. In one of Owen's systems the Lepidoganoidei are the second suborder of the third order, Ganoidei, of fishes; in another, the first suborder of the eighth order, Ganoidei, divided into 8 families. The Lepidoganoidei as an order are sometimes divided into 5 suborders or families, Amiidae, Lepidosteidae, Lepidopleuridae, Crossopterygidae, and Acanthodidae. It is now obsolete.

lepidoid (lep'i-doid), a. and n. [< Lepidoidei, q. v.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Lepidoidei: as, a lepidoid fish; a lepidoid scale.
II. n. A member of the Lepidoidei.

Lepidoidei (lep-i-doi'dē-i), n. pl. [< NL., < Gr. λεπίδοειδής, scale-like, < λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + ειδής, form.] In Agassiz's classification (1833), a family of fossil ganoid fishes covered with large flat rhomboid enameled scales. It included forms now referred to several different families, as Acanthodidae, Dipteridae, Palæoniscidae, etc.

lepidolite (lep'i-dō-lit), n. [< Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + λίθος, a stone.] Lithia mica. This mineral is found in scaly masses, ordinarily of a violet or lilac color and containing a small percentage of lithia. It is often associated with the lithia tourmalin or rubellite, as at Rozena in Moravia, and Paris, Maine. See mica.

lepidomelane (lep'i-dō-me-lān'), n. [< Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + μέλας (μελαν-), black.] A species of the mica group (see mica), of a deep-black color, usually occurring in small, rather inelastic scales. It contains a large amount of iron.
lepidophæite (lep'i-dō-fē'it), n. [< Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + φαιός, dusky, + -ite.] A soft, scaly variety of wad containing copper.

Lepidophloios (lep'i-dō-floi'os), n. [< NL. (Sternberg, 1825); prop. Lepidophloius*, < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + φλοῖος, bark.] A genus of fossil plants of the coal-measures, closely related to Lepidodendron, with prominent (often very prominent) transverse rhombic leaf-cushions, at the lower end of each of which is a leaf-scar of the same shape, together with three smaller punctate vascular scars, the central one being the largest and triangular in form. This genus is found in various parts of Europe, in the United States, and in Canada.

Lepidophyllum (lep'i-dō-fil'um), n. [< NL., < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + φύλλον, leaf.] A supposed genus of fossil plants, to which have been referred leaves, blades, or bracts forming a part of the organs of fructification of Lepidodendron and Lepidophloios. Some species described under the name of Lepidophyllum are fragments of linear leaves of Lepidodendron.

Lepidopodidæ (lep'i-dō-pod'i-dō), n. pl. [< NL., < Lepidopus (-pod-) + -idæ.] A family of acanthopterygian fishes, typified by the genus Lepidopus, embracing scombroids of very elongate compressed form, and with a distinctly developed caudal fin. It includes several deep- and open-sea fishes.

lepidopter (lep-i-dop'tēr), n. [< NL. lepidopter, scaly-winged; see lepidopterous.] A lepidopterous insect. Also lepidopteran.

Lepidoptera (lep-i-dop'tē-rā), n. pl. [< NL., neut. pl. of lepidopterus, scaly-winged; see lepidopterous.] An order of hexapod insects, or true Insecta, with sutorial mouth-parts in the form of a spiral antlia, four similar membranous wings completely covered with scales, a fused prothorax, and perfect metamorphosis. These beautiful insects are known as butterflies and moths, the former being the Lepidoptera diurna, or Rhopalocera, and the latter the Lepidoptera nocturna, or Heterocera, respectively constituting the two suborders into which the order is now usually divided. In the adults the mouth is completely haustellate or antliate, the maxillæ being modified into a tubular sucking-proboscis, and the mandibles being rudimentary. The modified maxillæ have a pair of palps. The head is loosely attached to the thorax, and the long slender legs are very freely movable. The fore pair are rudimentary in some butterflies. The body is hairy; the prothorax has a pair of tippets or patagia, and the mesothorax a pair of scales, tegulæ, or pa-

Lepidoptera.

1. Butterfly—Hipparchia galathea, marbled white butterfly. 2. Hawk-moth or sphinx—Macroglossa stellatarum, humming-bird hawk-moth. 3. Moth—Abraxas grossulariata, magpie-moth. 4. Palpi and spiral nooth of butterfly. 5. Antennæ—a, butterfly's; b, sphinx's; c, moth's. 6. Portion of wing of cabbage-butterfly, with part of the scales removed. 7. Scales of same, magnified.

aptera. The pupa is obteched. The larva, known as a caterpillar, is mandibulate, having masticatory instead of sutorial mouth-parts, and is provided with from 4 to 10 prolegs or prop-legs besides the 6 true legs. The lip of the larva bears a double-orificed spinneret, a tubular organ through which passes the silk of which the cocoon is fabricated. Caterpillars are almost invariably vegetable-feeders, and often prove highly destructive. A few species are known to be carnivorous. Upward of 50,000 species are described. In the Linnean system, prior to 1753, the Lepidoptera consisted of the two genera Papilio and Phalaena, corresponding to the modern suborders Rhopalocera and Heterocera, or butterflies and moths; later, in the same system, of the genera Papilio, Sphinx, and Phalæna, corresponding to the Latreillian Lepidoptera diurna, crispicularia, and nocturna. Later writers divided the order into the families Papilionidae, Sphingidae, Ægeriidae, Zygonidae, Bombyciidae, Noctuidæ, Geometridæ, Pyralidæ, Tortricidæ, and Pineidæ; and nearly all of these have been further subdivided into other families.

lepidopteran (lep-i-dop'tē-ran), a. and n. [As lepidopterous + -an.] I. a. Same as lepidopterous.

II. n. Same as lepidopter.
lepidopterist (lep-i-dop'tē-ris-t), n. [< Lepidoptera + -ist.] One who is versed or engaged in the scientific study of Lepidoptera.

lepidopterous (lep-i-dop'tē-rus), a. [< NL. lepidopterus, scaly-winged, < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + πτερόν, a wing.] In entom., having scaly wings; specifically, pertaining to the Lepidoptera, or having their characters. Also lepidopteral, lepidopteran.

Lepidopus (le-pid'ō-pūs), n. [< NL., < Gr. λεπίς (λεπίδ-), a scale, + πούς (πόδ-) = E. foot.] 1. In ichth., the typical genus of Lepidopodidæ, having scale-like appendages in the place of ventral fins, whence the name. L. argenteus, of a silvery color, is the true scabbard-fish, a species of wide distribution in many seas.
2. A genus of crustaceans. Dana, 1847.

Lepidosauria (lep'i-dō-sā'ri-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + σαύρος, a lizard.] In some systems, a subclass or suborder of Reptilia, including reptiles with scales and plates, with limbs or without, and with the anal cleft transverse and the penis double. The group includes the ophidians and lacertilians, but not the crocodylians nor chelonians. Also called Ligotremata and Squamata.

Lepidosaurian (lep'i-dō-sā'ri-an), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Lepidosauria, or having their characters.

II. n. One of the Lepidosauria.

Lepidosiren (lep'i-dō-si'ron), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale (see lepis), + NL. Siren, a genus of amphibians.] I. a. A genus of dipnoan fishes, typical of the family Lepidosirenidae and subfamily Lepidosireninae, of an elongate form, as in the amphibian genus Siren, but with a scaly body. Formerly the Protopterus annectens of Africa was included in this genus, and the name lepidosiren is still loosely applied to that fish, though it is more properly restricted to the South American form for which the genus was originally instituted. L. paradoxa is the South American mudfish, about 3 feet long, found in the Amazon. Amphibichthys is a synonym.

Skull of Mudfish (Lepidosiren annectens), side view, the upper in longitudinal vertical section. (Cartilage dotted; membranes and bones shaded in lines.)
A, parieto-frontal bone; As, allisphenoid; Au, auditory chamber; B, superorbital; Br, branchiostegal rays; C, nasal; D, palato-pterygoid; E, vomerine teeth; Eo, exoccipital bone; EtA, ethmoid; Hy, hyoid; L, lacrymal; Mn, mandible; N, nasal sac; Op, opercular plate; Or, orbit; PS, cartilaginous presphenoidal region; Vo, vomer; A, quadrato-mandibular articulation; ch, notochord; x, x, parasphenoid; y, pharyngo-branchial; H, V, VII, exits of optic, trigeminal, and vagus nerves; 1, 2, first and second vertebrae.

II. a. A member of this genus.

Lepidosirenidae (lep'i-dō-si-ren'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepidosiren + -idae.] A family of dipnoan fishes, typified by the genus Lepidosiren. The body is eel-shaped; there are teeth in each jaw, a pair of lateral molars with strong cusps supported by vertical ridges and on the vomer a pair of conical ones; the dorsal and anal fins are long and confluent with the caudal; and the ventral and pectoral fins are almost reduced to long filaments. It is a small group of two genera, the South American Lepidosiren and the African Protopterus. Amphibichthys and Sirenia, 2, are synonyms.

Lepidosirenidae (lep'i-dō-si-re-nid'ē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lepidosiren + -idae.] An order referred by Melville to the amphibians: same as Sirenoidea.

Lepidosirenoid (lep'i-dō-si-re-noid), a. and n. [Lepidosiren + -oid.] I. a. Pertaining to the Lepidosirenidae, or having their characters.

II. n. A fish of the family Lepidosirenidae.

Lepidosistis (lep'i-dō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + -sistis.] In med., scaly disease: applied to ichthyosis, psoriasis, and pityriasis.

Lepidosperma (lep'i-dō-spēr'mā), n. [NL. (La Billardière, 1804), < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + σπέρμα, seed.] A genus of sedges of the tribe Rhynchosporaceae, distinguished by having subdistichous glumes and hard eroded seeds. There are about 40 species, inhabiting Australia, New Zealand, the Malay archipelago, and southern China. L. gladiatum, the sword-sedge of the sea-coast of extratropical Australia, is an important plant for binding sea-sand, and also yields a paper-material said to be as good as esparto.

Lepidosteil (lep-i-dos'tē-i), n. pl. [NL., pl. of Lepidosteus.] A group of ganoid fishes, founded by Agassiz in 1833: same as Lepidoidei.

Lepidosteid (lep-i-dos'tē-id), n. A fish of the family Lepidosteidae. Also lepidosteoid.

Lepidosteidae (lep'i-dos-tē'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepidosteus + -idae.] 1. A family of rhombogonoid fishes. They have lozenge-shaped scales, and fins with fulera. The dorsal and anal fins are placed far back, close to the caudal. The abdominal part of the spinal column is longer than the caudal part. Opercular gills or pseudobranchiae are present. The Lepidosteidae are characteristic of the fresh waters of North America, and are popularly known as garfishes, garpikes, bony pikes, and alligator-gars. They are noteworthy for many anatomical peculiarities, and as being the only living representatives of a once large and widely diffused order of fishes. One species has been reported from China.

2. In Huxley's and Zittel's systems, a suborder or order of ganoid fishes, containing the above family, then called Lepidosteini or Ginglymodi.

Lepidosteoid (lep-i-dos'tē-oid), a. and n. [NL., < Lepidosteidae.] I. a. Pertaining to the Lepidosteidae, or having their characters.

II. n. Same as lepidosteid.

Lepidosteoides (lep-i-dos-tē-oi'dē-i), n. pl. [NL., < Lepidosteus + Gr. εἶδος, form.] In Günther's system, a suborder of ganoid fishes having rhombic scales, generally fulerate fins, numerous branchiostegals, and no gular plate. It embraces the Lepidosteidae and numerous extinct forms.

Lepidosteus (lep-i-dos'tē-us), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + ὄστέον, a bone.] A genus of fishes with rhomboid scales as hard as bone, whence the name. The genus includes the North American garpikes or bony pikes, as L. osseus, the common long-nosed, and L. platydonus, the short-nosed garpike. The alligator-gar, L. tristychus, represents a section of the genus called Atractosteus. The genus is typical of the family Lepidosteidae. Originally spelled Lepistosteus (Lacépède, 1803).

Lepidostrobilus (lep-i-dos'trō-bus), n.; pl. lepidostrobili (-bi). [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + στρόβος, a twisting or whirling round: see strobile.] The fruit-cone of plants of the genus Lepidodendron. It corresponds closely in structure with the fertile spike of the living Selaginella. The

Lepidostrobilus macrolepidotus. (From Weiss's "Flora der Steinkohlenformation.")
Lepidostrobilus hastatus: a, an entire strobilus; b, a single scale.

spore-bearing leaves are attached to a central axis in a crowded spiral arrangement and their outer ends curve over so as to form an imbricated, diagonally arranged pattern, resembling that of the stem itself.

lepidote (lep'i-dēt), a. [Lepidosteus, sealy, < λεπίδιον, make scaly, < λεπίς (lepidō), a scale: see lepis.] In bot., covered with scurfy scales or scaly spots; leprous.

lepidoted (lep'i-dē-ted), a. [lepidote + -ed.] Same as lepidote.

Lepidurus (lep-i-dū'rus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + οὐρά, a tail.] A genus of phyllopodids of the family Apodidae (or Apusidae), related to Apus, but having a spatulate telson; the spoontails. L. conesi is a species abounding in pools in Montana, Utah, and elsewhere.

Lepiopomus (lep'i-ō-pō'mus), n. [NL., also Lepomus, prop. Lepidopomus*; < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + πῶμα, a lid, cover.] Same as Lepomis.

lepis (lē'pis), n.; pl. lepidēs (lep'i-dēz). [NL., < L. lepis, < Gr. λεπίς, a scale, rind, husk, flake, < λέπειν, peel, strip. Cf. Lepus.] 1. A scale, as that of a fish.—2. In bot., a thin flat membranous process or scale, attached by its middle, and having a lacerated irregular margin, such as covers the foliage of the oleaster.

Lepisma (le-pis'mā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1748), < Gr. λεπίσμα, that which is peeled off, peel, < λεπίζειν, peel, husk, < λεπίς, a scale, husk: see lepis.] The typical genus of Lepismatidae, having three long and four short caudal filaments, very long antennae, and the body flat and sealy. Several species of these bristletails occur about houses in warm or damp places, where they may be seen running swiftly when disturbed. In their movements and general habits they resemble cockroaches. L. saccharina is a common household pest in Europe and America, in damp, close rooms. L. domesticum, the fish-tail, is another household pest. L. quadriseptata is commonly observed on the walls of out-houses. In the United States these insects are commonly called fish-tail, silver-tail, and silverfish. They are fond of the glazed figures in wall-paper, of photographs, the paste of book-bindings, etc., and also injure silks and silk tapestries. They are most abundant where it is a little damp.

Lepismatidae (lep-is-mat'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepisma (+) + -idae.] A family of genuine thysanurous insects of the suborder Cimura, having long caudal stylets or filamentous appendages, long filamentous antennae, well-developed jaws and long palps, six legs, slender cylindrical or flattened body covered with metallic scales, and ten-jointed abdomen; the bristletails proper. They are found running swiftly about buildings, under stones, etc., and somewhat resemble cockroaches, though not nearly related to these orthopteran insects. Lepisma, Lepismima, and Maehilia are the representative genera. Also Lepismidae.

Lepistemon (lep-i-stē'mon), n. [NL. (C. L. Blume, 1826), < Gr. λεπίς, a scale, + στέμων, a stamen.] A genus of convolvulaceous plants of the tribe Convolvuleae, distinguished from Ipomoea by the dilatation of the base of the filaments into small arched scales. There are 5 species, having cordate three-lobed leaves and small yellowish flowers, all twining herba, natives of tropical Asia, Africa, and Australia.

Lepistemonæ (lep'is-tē-mō'nē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Miquel, 1856), < Lepistemon + -eae.] A tribe of plants of the order Convolvulaceae, established for the reception of the genus Lepistemon.

lepecyta (le-pos'i-tā), n. [NL.: see lepecyte.] An infusorian with a cell-membrane: distinguished from gymnocyta.

lepecyte (lep'ō-sit), n. [Lepocyta, < Gr. λεπός, a scale, husk, + κύτος, a hollow, a cavity: see cyte.] A nucleated cell with a cell-wall: distinguished from gymnocyte.

Lepomis (le-pō'mis), n. [NL. (Rafinesque, 1819), also Lepomus, emend. Lepidopomus (Jordan, 1878), prop. Lepidopoma*; < Gr. λεπίς (lepidō), a scale, + πῶμα, a lid, cover.] A genus of sunfishes of American fresh waters, having the operculum ending behind in a convex black flap, sometimes highly developed. They belong to the family Centrarchidae, and are nearly related to the black-bass. Upward of 30 species are described, some of them among the commonest and most familiar fishes of the United States, often called breem, as the blue or copper-nosed, L. gibbosus. The common sunfish, sunny, or pumpkin-seed is L. gibbosus, found from Maine to Florida and in the Great Lake region. The red-spotted sunfish is L. humilis, found from Kentucky to Kansas and Texas. L. cyanellus of the Great Lake region and thence to Mexico is the blue-spotted sunfish or reboyle. The two species in which the gill-flap is most highly developed are L. auritus and L. megalotis, both called long-eared sunfish.

Leporidae (le-por'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepus (Lepor-) + -idae.] A family of mammals of the order Rodentia or Glires and suborder Duplicidentata; the hares. The Leporidae, together with the Lagomiyidae, compose the suborder. The dental formula of Leporidae is: 2 incisors above and 1 below in each half-jaw, no canines, 3 preincisors in each upper and 2 in each lower half-jaw, and 3 molars above and below in each half-jaw—to all, 28. The milk-dentition is: 1, 3, pm, 3 = 3 x 2 = 18. There are in the adult 2 pairs, and in the young 3 pairs, of upper front teeth, the largest number found in this order. The gnawers are all alike rootless and mostly trillaminate; the skull is large, and noted for its many vacuities or fontanelles among the bones; clavicles are present, but rudimentary; the scapula has a metaconion; the tibia and fibula are united as in murine rodents; the radius and ulna are complete, but fixed; and the epinal column is remarkably long in the lumbar region. The hind limbs are disproportionately long, and the gait is more or less saltatorial. The hind as well as the fore feet are entirely furry, and the whole length of the metatarsus may be applied to the ground. There are 5 digits on the forefeet, 4 on the hind. The head is full and globose, with very long ears, large eyes, and prominent, mobile, cleft upper lip; there are no cheek pouches, and the inside of the month is partly furry. The tail is short and habitually recurved. The male organs are external; the uterus is two-horned, and the mammae are numerous—about 5 pairs. There is but one living genus, Lepus, but there are several extinct genera, as Palaeolagus, Panolax, and Praotherium. See hare, rabbit.

Skull of Arctic Hare (Lepus timidus, var. arcticus), from specimen in United States National Museum, Washington.

Many of these animals were sold as leporides or hybrids, produced by the union of the hare and rabbit; but the most careful experimenters have failed to produce any such hybrid. Encyc. Brit., XX, 193.

leporiform (lep'ō-ri-fōrm), a. [L. lepus (lepor-), a hare, + forma, form.] Shaped like a hare; resembling a leporide in form; lagomorphic.

leporine (lep'ō-rin or -rīn), a. [= Of. leporin, < L. leporinus, of a hare, < lepus (lepor-), a hare: see Lepus.] Pertaining to a hare; having the nature or qualities of the hare; lagomorphic.

lepothrix (lep'ō-thriks), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπός, a scale, husk, + θρίξ, hair.] The condition of a hair in which the scales of the entele are loosened and partially detached. Such hairs are found in the axilla.

lepped (lept). An obsolete or dialectal (Irish) past participle of *leap*¹. Spenser.

lepra (lep'rā), n. [L., < Gr. λεπρα, leprosy: see *leper*¹, leproy.] 1. In pathol., a chronic and almost uniformly incurable disease, caused by a well-determined bacillus, Bacillus lepra. It is characterized anatomically by the formation of nodules and diffuse masses of leprous tissue, distributed especially to the skin and along the nerves, but occurring elsewhere. Lepra begins slowly and haltingly with the ordinary signs of feeble health, and develops into one or the other of the two recognized types of the disease, or into a mixed form. In one type, lepra cutanea or lepra tuberculosa, the skin and mucous membranes are the principal places of deposit of leprous tissue, and there is formation of nodules, indolent ulcers, and cicatrices. The other form, lepra nervorum or lepra anaesthetica, in which the nerves are principally affected, is characterized by pains and anaesthesia in various nerve-regions (the motor paralysis being remarkably scanty), and by various dystrophies consequent upon the nervous lesions, bullous eruptions, spots of pigmentary surplus or deficit, glossy skin, muscular atrophy, and the loss of fingers and toes. Patients with lepra nervorum seem to live longer than those with lepra cutanea. Lepra is unknown among brutes. It is communicated from man to man, but seems usually to require extreme intimacy of association. Lepra has been prevalent in almost all countries of the world. At present it is frequent in many parts of Asia and Africa, and in some of the islands of the Pacific and Indian oceans. In Europe it occurs in Scandinavia, in Finland, in Iceland, and there is some in Spain. It prevails in many parts of South America, Central America, and Mexico, and in a number of the West Indian islands. In America north of Mexico there are some points of prevalence in the southern part of the United States, some among the Choctaw of the western coast, and some among the Scandinavian immigrants of the northwest. There are also some infected localities in New Brunswick, in Cape Breton, and in Greenland. Lepra cutanea is also called lepra Arabum, elephantiasis or elephantiasis Græcorum, and leprosy. Lepra nervorum is also called lepra nervosa, lepra mutilans, dry leprosy, joint-evil, and non-tuberculated lepra.

2. One of a class of scaly skin-affections, mostly psoriasis; lepra Græcorum. [Obsolent.]—

3. In bot., a scurfy or mealy matter on the surface of some plants.

Lepralia (le-prā'li-ä), n. [NL. (Johnston), < Gr. λεπρός, scaly; see *leper*¹.] 1. A notable genus of chitomatous polyzoans, of the family Eschariidae or Membraniporidae, of irregularly branched form with broad flattened divisions. L. pertusa is an Adriatic species.—2. [l. c.] A species of Lepralia. P. P. Carpenter.

lepralian (le-prā'li-än), a. [Lepralia + -an.] Pertaining to the genus Lepralia, or having its characters.

leprarioid (le-prā'ri-oid), a. [Lepraria (< Gr. λεπρά, leprosy) + -oid.] Resembling certain crustaceous lichens of a dust-like or leprose character, formerly considered to compose a genus Lepraria.

leprechawn, leprechawn (lep-rē-kān), n. [Also leprechawn, leprachawn, luprachawn, etc.; ult. < Ir. luchorpan, lucharban, lucharman, a pygmy sprite (see def.), lit. 'a little body'; < lu, little, small, + corpan, dim. of corp, < L. corpus, body; see corpse, corpse. Cf. Gael. lucharmunn, a pygmy, a dwarf, given as < luch, a mouse, + armunn, a hero, chief, but prob. a form of the Ir. word. The present form of the Anglicized name comes rather < Ir. leitibhragan, another name of the same fairy, appar. altered from the earlier name by popular etymology, as if < leit, half, + brög, shoe, + an, a man, this name being accompanied by the legend that the fairy spends his time in mending a single shoe (half a pair).] In Irish superstition, a pygmy sprite, supposed to grind meal, make shoes, and do other services for persons who treat him well, and, if spellbound by a fixed gaze, to give up an inexhaustible fairy purse.

The Ghosts, Gísnts, Pookas, Demons, Leprechawns, Banshees, Fairies, Witches, Widows, Old Maids and Other Marvels of the Emerald Isle.

Amer. Antiquarian, X., Index.

lepreyt, lepriet, n. See leprey.

leptic (lep'rik), a. [Gr. λεπτικός, of or for leprosy, < λεπρά, leprosy; see lepra, *leper*¹.] Of or pertaining to leprosy. Thomas, Med. Diet.

leprosarium (lep-rō-sā'ri-um), n.; pl. leprosaria (-iä). [ML.: see leproser.] A hospital for the treatment of leprosy.

leprose (lep'rōs), a. [LL. leprosus, leprosus; see leprosus.] In bot., scale-like or scurf-like; said of some crustaceous lichens whose thallus adheres to trees or stones like a scurf; lepidote.

leproser (lep'rō-se-ri), n.; pl. leproseries (-riz). [Gr. leproserie, F. leproserie, < ML. leprosaria, leprosarium, a hospital for lepers, < LL. leprosus, leprosus; see leprosus.] A hospital or home for lepers. N. Y. Med. Jour., XI., 275.

leprosied (lep'rō-sid), a. [leprosy + *-ed*².] Affected with leprosy.

leprosite (le-pros'i-ti), n. [= OF. leprosite, < ML. leprositat], leprousness, < LL. leprosus, leprosus; see leprosus.] 1. The state of being leprosy; leprousness.—2. A scaly condition.

For to say that Nature hsth an intention to make all metals gold, and that, if the crudities, impurities, and leprosites of metals were cured, they would become gold— all these are but dreams. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 326.

leprosy (lep'rō-si), n. [Formerly also leprosie; < OF. leprosic, leprosy, < ML. leprosia (found only in sense of 'a hospital for lepers'), < MGr. λεπρωσις, leprosy, < Gr. λεπρωσθαι, become leprosy, < λέπρα, leprosy; see lepra, *leper*¹, leprosus.] A name given to several different diseases. Regarding the leprosy of the Jews nothing certain is known. The term was probably applied to various cutaneous diseases, especially those of a chronic or contagious character. The term is now commonly restricted to lepra cutanea, or elephantiasis Græcorum. See lepra.—Black leprosy, a form of lepra exhibiting dark, livid patches.—Dry leprosy. See lepra.

leprosus (lep'rūs), a. [Also sometimes leperous; < ME. leprous, < OF. leprous, lepros, lepreux = F. lépreux = Sp. Pg. It. leproso, < LL. leprosus, leprosus, having leprosy, < L. lepra, leprosy; see lepra, *leper*¹, 1. The adj. is thus as if < *leper*¹, 1, + -us.] 1. Infected with leprosy.

Oure lorde hym comaunderd to make a table, in the name of that table at the whiche he was sette in the house of Symond leprose. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 59.

His hand was leprous as snow.

Ex. iv. 6.

2. Causing leprosy.

In the porches of my ears did pour
The leperous distilment. Shak., Hamlet, i. 5. 64.

3. Covered with white scales. (a) In bot., same as leprose. (b) In entom., covered with large, loose, irregular whitish scales, as the elytra of certain Coleoptera.—Leprous inflammation, inflammation caused by the presence of Bacillus lepre, and resulting in the formation of leprous tissue.—Leprous tissue, a tissue consisting of round cells, with some fusiform or branched, with scanty fibrillar intercellular substance, and well provided with blood-vessels. It forms nodules up to the size of a walnut, and diffuse masses. It may persist without change, it may ulcerate on violence, or it may atrophy, leaving a scar. It is formed under the influence of Bacillus lepre, and these bacilli are found in the tissue.

leprousness (lep'rūs-nes), n. The state of being leprous.

lepry (lep'ri), n. [Also lepric, leprey; < ME. lepry, lepric, < OF. lepric, leprosy; see *leper*¹.] lepry.

He made the blynde to se & heled some of lepry.

Joseph of Arimathe (E. E. T. S.), p. 38.

Their breath is contagious, their leprey spreading.

N. Ward, Simple Cobler, p. 18.

lepta, n. Plural of *lepton*¹.

Leptadenia (lep-ta-dē'ni-ä), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1809), < Gr. λεπτός, small, + ἀδή, a gland.] A genus of plants of the order Asclepiadaceæ and tribe Ceropegieæ, characterized by a double crown and a rotate corolla with filiform lobes. There are about 12 species, shrubs or climbers, with filiform leaves and small flowers, natives of tropical Asia and Africa and Madagascar. Endlicher made this genus the type of a further subdivision, Leptadenieæ.

Leptadeniæ (lep'tad-ē-ni'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, 1836), < Leptadenia + -æ.] A subdivision of asclepiadaceous plants, embracing the genera Leptadenia and Orphanthera, now included in the tribe Ceropegieæ.

Leptandra (lep-tan'drā), n. [NL. (Nuttall, 1818), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, small, + ἀνθή (ἀνθός), male (in mod. bot. stamen).] 1. A former genus of scrophulariaceous plants, now reduced to a section of Veronica.—2. [l. c.] The rhizome and rootlets of Veronica (Leptandra) Virginica. It is used as a cathartic.

leptandrin (lep-tan'drin), n. [Leptandra + *-in*².] A bitter glucoside, crystallizing in needles, obtained from Veronica (Leptandra) Virginica, and probably constituting the active principle of the drug leptandra.

Leptidæ¹ (lep'ti-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptis + -idæ.] A family of dipterous insects, typified by the genus Leptis, founded by Westwood in 1840. They are related to the Tabanidæ or horse-flies, but the simple and not annulate third joint of the antennæ has a styliiform bristle. With few exceptions, the species are unable to draw blood. They are about 200 in number, cosmopolitan, of moderate size, and rather sluggish; they sometimes prey on other insects. They are known as snipe-flies.

Leptidæ² (lep'ti-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptus, 1, + -idæ.] An old family of harvest-mites, based mainly or wholly on immature forms.

Leptidea (lep-tid'ē-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small.] 1. A genus of butterflies, now called Leucophasia. Billberg, 1820.—2. A genus of cerambycid beetles, having a few species natives of southern Europe and western Asia. Mulsant, 1829.

leptiform (lep'ti-fōrm), a. [Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + L. forma, shape.] Slender in shape; vermiform.

leptinid (lep'ti-nid), n. A beetle of the family Leptinidæ.

Leptinidæ (lep-tin'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptinus + -idæ.] A family of elavicorn beetles, typified by the genus Leptinus. They have the dorsal segments of the abdomen partly membranous, ventral segments free, tarsi five-jointed (at least one pair of tarsi), mentum transverse with hind angles prolonged, and palpi distant at base.

leptinolite (lep-tin'ō-lit), n. [Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + suffix -λίθος, a stone.] A name given by Barrois to a rock produced by the metamorphic action of granite on the adjacent schists, as seen in the French Pyrenees.

Leptinus (lep-ti'nus), n. [NL. (Müller, 1817), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small; see *lepton*¹.] A genus of beetles, formerly of the family Silphidæ, now giving name to the Leptinidæ. These minute beetles live in the trunks of old trees, under fallen leaves, and in decomposing vegetable matter. L. testaceus is common to Europe and North America, though specimens from the latter continent have been described as distinct, under the name L. americana.

Leptis (lep'tis), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1805), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate; see *lepton*¹.] The typical genus of Leptidæ. The species are of medium size, with short, sparse hair, of a yellowish-red color marked with black or brown. The larvae live in damp earth and in the burrows of May-beetles. About 30 European and 17 North American species are described.

Leptocardia (lep-tō-kār'di-ä), n. pl. [NL.] Same as Leptocardii.

leptocardian (lep-tō-kār'di-an), a. and n. [As Leptocardii + -an.] I. A. Pertaining to the Leptocardii, or having their characters.

II. A vertebrate of the class Leptocardii; a lancelet, branchiostome, or amphioxus.

Leptocardii (lep-tō-kār'di-i), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + καρδιά = E. heart.]

The lowest group of true vertebrates; a class or other high division of Vertebrata, to which different values have been assigned by naturalists; the lancelets. In the leptocardians the skeleton is notochordal, cranial, and membranocartilaginous; they have no brain, no jaws, contractile pulsating sinuses instead of a heart, colorless blood, confluent respiratory and abdominal cavities, and many branchial clefts through which water enters to be expelled by an opening in front of the vent. In the older systems the group was considered an order of fishes; by Johannes Müller and others, a subclass of fishes; now, it is generally regarded as a separate class of Vertebrata. Other names of the same group, in some of its acceptations, are Cirrostromi, Pharyngobranchii, Acrania, Entomocrania, Cephalochorda, and family Branchiostomidæ or Amphioxidae. Only about six species are known. Also Leptocardia. See cuts under Branchiostoma and lancelet.

leptocephalic (lep'tō-sef'al'ik or lep-tō-sef'al'ik), a. [As leptocephalus + -ic.] 1. Narrow, as a skull; having a narrow skull; characterized by or exhibiting leptocephaly.—2. In ichth., retaining a long, narrow skull, as certain flat-fishes whose skull does not undergo the special modification characteristic of the pleuronectids; leptocephaloid.

Indeed, there seems good reason to believe that many young flat-fish never undergo this change at all, but, swimming about freely in the open sea, assume that peculiarly elongated and strange form known as the leptocephalic.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXIX. 114.

Leptocephalidæ (lep'tō-sef'al'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptocephalus + -idæ.] 1. A supposed family of fishes of ribbon-like form, with a translucent body, a continuous vertical fin consisting of the united dorsal, caudal, and anal fins, a small head, and lateral branchial apertures. They live in the sea, and are considered to be immature fishes, mostly of the family Congridæ. Leptocephalus morrisii is the larval or immature form of Conger vulgaris. Also Leptocephalini (Bonaparte, 1837).

2. The family otherwise called Congridæ.

leptocephaloid (lep-tō-sef'al'oid), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Leptocephalidæ, or having their characters.

II. A fish of the Leptocephalus kind, as a larval conger.

Leptocephalus (lep-tō-sef'al'us), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + κεφαλή, head.] 1. A spurious genus of eel-like fishes, having a very thin diaphanous body, formerly regarded as a valid generic type and hence giving name to the Leptocephalidæ, but now generally considered to be the larval form of a conger.—2. [l. c.] The larval or aborted stage of the conger and allied fishes, when the body is much compressed and hyaline and no generative organs are developed.—3. The genus otherwise called Conger.

leptocephaly (lep-tō-sef'al'i), n. [Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + κεφαλή, head.] Narrowness of the skull; the condition of having or the possession of an extremely narrow skull.

Leptoceridæ (lep-tō-ser'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptocerus + -idæ.] A family of eaddis-flies or trichopteran neuropterous insects, typified by the genus Leptocerus, having long slim antennæ, whence the name. It was founded by Stephens in 1836. They have the palpi strongly hairy, ordinarily ascending and with the last joint long and simple, and the wings pubescent and generally narrow. The larval cases are tubular and free, and are found in both standing and running water. These insects are found all over the world; about 50 species are European; some exotic ones are among the largest of their tribe.

Leptocerus (lep-tos'e-rus), n. [NL. (Leach, 1817), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + κέρας, horn.] 1. The typical genus of Leptoceridae, having the neurulation of the fore wings different in the two sexes. The larvae are slender, and inhabit free tubular cases. There are 16 European species, and the genus is also represented in northern Asia and America.

2. A genus of euryliids, now called Naupaetus. Schönherr, 1826.

leptodactyl, leptodactyle (lep-tō-dak'til), a. and n. [leptodactylus, < MGr. λεπτοδάκτυλος, with slender toes (or fingers), < Gr. λεπτός, slender, + δάκτυλος, a finger or toe.] I. a. Having small or slim toes. Also leptodactylus.

II. n. A bird or other animal having slender toes.

leptodactylous (lep-tō-dak'ti-lus), a. [leptodactyl + -ous.] Same as leptodactyl.

Leptodera (lep-tod'e-ri), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + δέρμα, skin, hide.] A genus of vinegar-eels of the family Anguillulidae. L. oxyphila is the vinegar-eel formerly called Anguillula aceti. The same or a very similar species found in sour paste is L. glutinis. The form is as simple as possible, being cylindrical and tapering, the mouth a slight opening, and the length less than one twelfth of an inch.

Leptodora (lep-tod'ō-rā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + δόρα, a skin, hide.] The typical genus of Leptodoridae. L. hyalina is an example. Lilljeborg, 1860.

Leptodoridae (lep-tō-dor'i-dō), n. pl. [NL., < Leptodora + -idae.] A family of daphniaeous crustaceans, of the order Cladocera, represented by the genus Leptodora. The form is very peculiar; there are six pairs of ambulatory feet; the abdomen is very long and segmented, and there are no respiratory organs. There is a rudimentary shell in the female only. These water-flies grow to an inch in length, and occur in fresh water in both America and Europe.

Leptogaster (lep-tō-gas'tēr), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + γαστήρ, stomach.] 1. A genus of robber-flies or Asilidae, founded by Meigen in 1804, having the face very narrow and the abdomen long and slender, whence the name. There are about 12 European and nearly 20 North American species.—2. A genus of reduvioid heteropterous insects, containing one Madagascarean bug, L. flavipes. Signoret, 1860.—3. A genus of dragon-flies. Hagen, 1861.

Leptoglossa (lep-tō-glos'gū), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + γλῶσσα, the tongue.] 1. A division of Laertilia, including lizards with slender cleft protrusile tongue: same as Fissilingua.—2. In Cope's classification, a suborder of lizards.

leptoglossal (lep-tō-glos'al), a. [Leptoglossa + -al.] Having a slender tongue; specifically, of or pertaining to the Leptoglossa.

leptoglossate (lep-tō-glos'āt), a. and n. [Leptoglossa + -ate.] I. a. Pertaining to the Leptoglossa, or having their characters.

II. n. A lizard of the group Leptoglossa.

Leptoglossus (lep-tō-glos'us), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + γλῶσσα, the tongue.] 1. An important genus of coreoid bugs, having Leptoglossus phyllopus, highly magnified.

the hind tibiae usually expanded, erected by Guérin in 1830. The species are subtropical. L. phyl- opus is common in the southern United States, where it injures cotton-bolls and oranges.
215

2. A genus of Australian myzomeline birds. Swinson, 1837. See Acanthorhynchus, 1.

leptogonidium (lep'tō-gō-nid'i-um), n.; pl. leptogonidia (-i). [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + NL. gonidium.] Same as gonidium.

Leptolepida (lep-tō-lep'i-dō), n. pl. [NL., < Leptolepis + -idae.] A family of extinct amnioid fishes, typified by the genus Leptolepis, with the vertebrae ossified, the tail homocercal, the scales eyeloid, the fins without fulera, the dorsal fin short, and teeth in bands mostly minute, but some developed as canines in front. The family flourished in Liassic and Oolitic epochs.

Leptolepis (lep-tol'e-pis), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + λεπτός, a scale; see lepis.] The typical genus of Leptolepida, containing elupeciform fishes with small scales, whence the name.

leptology (lep-tol'ō-jī), n. [leptologia, minute description, also quibbling, < λεπτός, fine, minute, + -λογία, < λέγειν, speak; see -ology.] In rhet., minute and detailed description.

leptome (lep'tōm), n. [leptos, thin, fine, slender.] Same as basil, 2. Potonié.

Leptomedusa (lep'tō-mē-dū'sē), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, delicate, + NL. Medusa.] In Haeckel's classification of hydrozoans, the ealyptoblastic hydromedusans, as the campanularian and sertularian polyps, regarded as an order of Medusa. See Ealyptoblastea.

leptomedusan (lep'tō-mē-dū'san), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Leptomedusa, or having their characters; ealyptoblastic, as a hydromedusan.

II. n. One of the Leptomedusa; a ealyptoblastic hydromedusan.

leptomeninges (lep'tō-mē-nin'jōz), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, + μνίνηξ (μνινγγ-), a membrane; see meninx.] In anat., the pia mater and arachnoid.

leptomeningitis (lep-tō-men-in'jī'tis), n. [leptomeninges + -itis. Cf. meningitis.] In pathol., inflammation of the pia mater and arachnoid.

Leptomeria (lep-tō-mē'ri-ā), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1810), so called from the small delicate flowers; < Gr. λεπτός, small, slender, + μέρος, a part.] A genus of dioecytledonous apetalous plants, of the natural order Santalaceae and tribe Osyrideae, with minute hermaphrodite flowers crowded in terminal or lateral racemes or spikes, and small drupes, sometimes with a fleshy exocarp. Fourteen species are known, all natives of Australia, broom-like shrubs with angular or roundish twig-like branches, mostly destitute of leaves except on the young twigs. L. Billardieri is a pretty shrub, six feet high, with white flowers and greenish-red berry-like drupes, the pulp of which is pleasant, acid, and slightly astringent; the drupes are called native currants in New South Wales and Victoria. Remains of plants of this genus occur in considerable abundance in nearly all the deposits of the Tertiary age in Europe.

leptomorphic (lep-tō-mōr'fik), a. [leptos, thin, fine, + μορφή, form.] An epithet proposed by Gümbel to designate those mineral constituents of rocks which, although crystalline in structure, are not bounded by their own proper crystalline faces. It is nearly the same in meaning as the "allotriomorphic" of Rosenbush.

lepton (lep'ton), n.; pl. lepta (-tā). [lepton, a small coin, prop. neut. (see νόμισμα, coin) of λεπτός, thin, fine, slender, small, lit. peeled, stripped, < λέπειν, peel, strip. Cf. Lepas, lepis.] The smallest coin of modern Greece, equal to a centime. One hundred lepta make a drachma.

Lepton² (lep'ton), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτόν, neut. of λεπτός, fine, small, delicate.] The typical genus of Leptonidae. The shell resembles that of Kellia, is often minutely punctured, and has divergent teeth. There are many species. L. squamosum and L. convexum are British.

Leptonidae (lep-ton'i-dō), n. pl. [*Lepton*² + -idae.] A family of siphonate dimyarian bivalves, typified by the genus Lepton. They have the mantle extensible beyond the shell, and furnished with a row of filaments (one of which is enlarged and prolonged in front); a single short siphon; two branchiae, complete and separate; foot thick, tapering, and with a byssal groove; and equivalve subequilateral valves, gaping at the end, with an internal ligament and simple pallial impressions. There is one cardinal tooth on each side of the cartilage-pit (sometimes on one side only); of the lateral teeth there are on each side two or only one.

leptophloem (lep-tō-flō'em), n. [leptos, slender, + phloem.] A rudimentary phloem:

applied by Vaizey to the phloem of the inner tissue in the seta of some mosses. Compare leptoxylem.

Leptophloeum (lep-tō-flō'um), n. [NL. (Dawson, 1862), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + φλοῖς, bark.] A lycopodiaceous fossil plant, allied to Lepidodendron and found in the Devonian of Maine, New Brunswick, and the adjacent region of northeastern America, and also in beds of similar age in Australia. The stem is covered with broad rhombic leaf-bases or -caulitions, each with a single small vascular scar a little above its center, and above this a very slight furrow. This is a characteristically Devonian genus.

Leptoplana (lep-top'lā-nā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, delicate, + πλανητής, a wanderer, < πλάνω, wandering; see planct.] The typical genus of Leptoplanidae. L. tremettaris is a Mediterranean species.

Leptoplanidae (lep-tō-plān'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptoplana + -idae.] A family of digonoporous dendroecelous turbellarians, typified by the genus Leptoplana. It contains marine planarians with a flat, broad, and usually very delicate body without distinct cephalic region or tentacles, eyes more or less numerous, mouth usually in advance of the middle of the body, and the genital openings behind the mouth.

leptopod (lep'tō-pod), a. [leptopoda.] Slender-footed, as a member of the Leptopoda.

Leptopoda (lep-top'ō-dā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + ποδός (ποδός) = foot.] A group of rostriferous gastropods with the foot compressed and adapted for leaping, composed of the families Strombidae and Phoriidae. J. E. Gray, 1821.

Leptopodia (lep-tō-pō'di-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + ποδός (ποδός) = foot.] A Long-legged Spider-crab (Leptopodia sagittaria).

genus of spider-crabs, founded by Leach in 1814. They have a small triangular body with a long acute rostrum, and extremely long, slender legs. L. sagittaria, whose body is less than an inch broad, has legs nearly a foot long.

leptopodian (lep-tō-pō'di-ān), n. [Leptopodia + -an.] A crab of the family Leptopodiidae; a spider-crab or sea-spider.

Leptopodiidae (lep-tō-pō'di-ā-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptopodia + -idae.] In entom., a family of Heteroptera, represented by the genus Leptopus. Also Leptopoda.

Leptopodiidae (lep'tō-pō'di-ā-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptopodia + -idae.] A family of brachiurous deepod crustaceans, named from the genus Leptopodia; the spider-crabs.

leptoprosope (lep-tō-pros'ōp), n. [leptos, thin, narrow, + πρόσωπον, face; see Prosopis.] Narrowness of the face; the possession of or condition of having a long, narrow-faced skull.

leptoprosopic (lep'tō-pros'ōp'ik), a. [leptoprosope + -ic.] Having a long narrow face, as a skull.

The mid-facial index . . . could be accurately determined in the three Yapanese skulls, in which it is very constant and averages 54.2, making them dolichofacial, or leptoprosopic. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII. 23.

Leptops (lep'tops), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, narrow, + ὤψ, face, eye.] 1. A genus of fishes, the mud-eats, of the family Siluridae and subfamily Ictalurinae, with large flattened head, projecting lower jaw, and peculiar dentition. L. olivaris is a large catfish living on muddy bottoms of streams and lakes in the southern and western parts of the United States. Rafinesque, 1820.

2. In entom., a genus of snout-beetles, of the family Curculionidae, comprising many Australian species of large or medium size, whitish or brown color, with narrow linear vertical eyes and a distinct scutellum. Schönherr, 1834.

Leptoptila (lep-top'ti-lā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + πτερόν, feather.] A genus of American wood-pigeons, containing about a dozen species, whose outer primaries are incised, attenuate, and bistony-like at the end; the pin-wing doves. The tarsi are bare; the tail has 12 feathers; the lining of the wings is chestnut; the neck is iridescent; and there are no metallic spots. The genus is also called Engyptila. L. or E. albifrons is found in Texas and Mexico, L. jamaicensis in Jamaica.

Leptoptilus (lep-top'ti-lus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + πτερόν, feather.] A Lepton squamosum. f, foot; m, mantle; s, siphon; t, tentacular filament.

genus of storks of Asia and Africa, of the family Ciconiidae; the adjutants or marabouts. Also Leptoptilos. See cut under adjutant-bird.

Leptopus (lep'tō-pus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate, + ποῦς = E. foot.] In zool., a name of various genera. (a) The typical genus of Leptopidae or Leptopodidae, founded by Latreille in 1809, having the prothorax contracted into a neck, the antennae very slender, and the upper surface of the body often spinous. The species occur in France and Algeria. (b) A genus of dipterous insects of the family Dolichopodidae. Also called Xanthochlorus. Halday, 1857. (c) A genus of scarabaeid beetles. Dejean, 1833. (d) A genus of fishes. Rafinesque, 1815. (e) A genus of crustaceans. Lamarck, 1819. (f) A genus of birds. Fraser, 1844.

leptorrhine, leporrhine (lep'tō-rin), a. [< Gr. λεπτός, thin, small, slender, + ρίς (rh-), the nose.] 1. Having a small nose or slender snout: specifically applied to a fossil rhinoceros, Rhinoceros leptorrhinus.—2. Same as leptorhinian.

The average nasal index is 45.8, which places them in the leptorrhine group (below 45.0).

Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII. 22.

leptorhinian, leporhinian (lep-tō-rin'i-an), a. [< leptorrhine + -ian.] Having slender or narrow nasal bones, as a skull.

leptorhinc, leporhinc (lep-tō-rin'ik), a. [< leptorrhine + -ic.] Same as leptorhinian.

Leptoscopidae (lep-tō-skop'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptoscopus + -idae.] A family of trachinoid fishes represented by the genus Leptoscopus. (a) In a restricted sense it includes only fishes with an elongated antrorsiform body, median lateral line, long continuous dorsal and anal fins, and perfect ventrals with one spinous and five soft rays; (b) in a wider sense it is used for trachinoid fishes of the foregoing form with imperfect as well as with perfect ventral fins, and then divided into two subfamilies, Leptoscopinae and Dactyloscopinae.

Leptoscopus (lep-tōs'kō-pus), n. [NL., < Gr.

Leptoscopus macropterus.

λεπτός, thin, slender, + σκοπεῖν, view.] The typical genus of Leptoscopidae. Gill, 1859.

Leptosomatidae (lep'tō-sō-mat'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptosomus + -idae.] Same as Leptosomidae.

Leptosomidae (lep-tō-som'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptosomus + -idae.] A peculiar Madagascar family of picarian birds represented by the single genus Leptosomus, related to the Coraciidae or rollers. The feet are zygodactyl to some extent, but the outer toe is not completely reversed. The pterylosis is remarkable for the development of a pair of pygal powder-down patches. The plumage is aftershafted, and the loreal plumules form a tuft over each side of the base of the beak. The nostrils are median. The sexes are diverse.

Leptosomus (lep-tō-sō'mus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + σῶμα, body.] 1. The typical genus of Leptosomidae. L. discolor is the kirumbo. Vicillot, 1816. Also Leptosoma. Bonaparte, 1849.—2. A genus of euculionids, now called Rhandinotomus. Schönherr, 1826.

Kirumbo (Leptosomus discolor).

leptosperm (lep'tō-spēr'm), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + σπέρμα, seed.] A tree of the genus Leptospermum.

Leptospermeae (lep-tō-spēr-mē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1828), < Leptospermum + -ae.] Originally, a suborder, now reduced to a tribe of plants of the order Myrtaceae, based on the genus Leptospermum, chiefly characterized by the loculicidally dehiscent capsule. It embraces 33 genera, among which are Eucalyptus, Melaleuca, and Metrosideros.

Leptospermum (lep-tō-spēr'mum), n. [NL. (G. Forster, 1776), < Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + σπέρμα, seed.] A genus of plants, the type of the tribe Leptospermeae of the order Myrtaceae. It is distinguished by the generally staminate leaves, the stamens not exceeding the corolla, and the numerous ovules. There are about 25 species, shrubs or rarely small trees, with small rigid one- to three-nerved leaves and white flowers, natives of Australia, New Zealand, New Caledonia, and the Indian archipelago. See tea-tree and sandstay.

leptosporangiate (lep'tō-spō-ran'ji-āt), a. [< Gr. λεπτός, slender, + NL. sporangium + -ate.]

In bot., having sporangia formed from a single epidermal cell, as in the true ferns and in the Sabiniaceae and Marsileaceae. Compare eusporangiate.

Leptotraca (lep-tōs'trā-kā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, small, + δστρακον, a shell.] An order of Crustacea formed by Claus for the reception of the genus Nebalia and related extinct forms.

Leptothrix (lep'tō-thriks), n. [< Gr. λεπτός, slender, + θρίξ, hair.] 1. A group of bacteria originally regarded as a genus, comprising those having the form of an unbranched non-spiral filament, consisting of cylindrical cells joined end to end. L. buccalis, so called, lives on the mucous membrane, and in the fur of the teeth, under some conditions becoming parasitic on the teeth and causing decay. 2. [l. c.] Any bacterium having this form.

leptoxylem (lep-tō-zī'lem), n. [< Gr. λεπτός, slender, + E. xylem.] In bot., a rudimentary xylem.

Leptura (lep-tū'rā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, slender, + ὄψα, the tail.] A large genus of longicorn beetles of the family Cerambycidae. Some 75 species occur in North America north of Mexico. L. canadensis, about one half of an inch long, is brownish-black with yellow on the antennae and red on the elytra.

Lepturæ (lep-tū'rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1883), < Lepturus + -æ.] A subtribe of grasses founded on the genus Lepturus, having one or two stiff empty glumes much longer than the hyaline flowering ones. It embraces four genera besides Lepturus, all natives of the warmer parts of the Old World.

lepturid (lep'tū-rid), n. A member of the Lepturidae.

Lepturidae (lep-tū-ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptura + -idae.] A family of longicorn insects, typified by the genus Leptura. They have the head narrowed to a neck behind the eyes, which are rounded and do not envelop the base of the antennae; the front coxae conical; and the stridulating plate on the mesonotum divided by a smooth portion or by a furrow. These insects occur on flowers. Also written Lepturadæ, Lepturetæ, Lepturida, Lepturites.

Lepturinae (lep-tū-ri-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Leptura + -inae.] The lepturids rated as a subfamily of Cerambycidae.

Lepturus (lep-tū'rus), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1810), < Gr. λεπτός, slender, + ὄψα, tail (from the slender spikes).] A genus of grasses of the tribe Hordeae and type of the subtribe Lepturæ, characterized by the one- to two-flowered spikelet having one or two rigid outer glumes inclosing the thin pointless flowering glumes. There are about 6 species, natives of northern Europe and Africa, temperate Asia, Australia, New Zealand, and the islands of the Pacific. They are generally known as hard-grass, and also as snake's-tail.

Leptus (lep'tus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπτός, thin, fine, delicate; see Lepton?] 1. A generic name under which six-legged larval forms of various mites, chiefly of the family Trombididae, but also of Tetranychidae, have been grouped. L. autumnalis, a young tetranychid, is the cause of a cutaneous disease in man. L. americanus is a young trombidid. See harvest-tick. Latreille, 1806.

2. A genus of beetles of the family Cucujidae: same as Sylvanus. Dufschmidt, 1825.

Lepus (lē'pus), n. [NL., < L. lepus (lepor-), a hare. Cf. Gr. (Æolie) λεπρός, (Italic) λεβρός, a hare.] 1. The representative and only extant genus of Leporidae. There are about 30 species, of most parts of the world except Australia. South America has but one, the tapeti, L. brasiliensis. India and Africa have several, and North America the largest number. L. timidus is the common hare of Europe. L. cuniculus is the common rabbit, the original of the domestic varieties. The polar hare, white in winter, is L. timidus, var. arcticus. Several other species also turn white. L. americanus is the common varying hare of North America. L. campestris is the northern prairie-hare. L. callotis and L. californicus are two large southern hares of the same continent. L. aquaticus is the swamp-hare of the southern United States. L. palustris is the marsh-hare. The common wood-rabbit or molly cotton-tail of the United States is L. sylvaticus, of which there are several varieties in the West. See cuts under cottontail, hare, and jack-rabbit.

2. An ancient southern constellation, situated south of Orion and east of Canis Major. Its brightest star, of 2.7 magnitude, is in a line from the middle star of Orion's belt through the sword of Orion.

The Constellation Lepus.

Lepyridæ (lē-pir'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lepyryus + -idæ.] A family of coleopterous insects, named from the genus Lepyryus. Kirby, 1837.

Lepyryus (lep'i-ryus), n. [NL., < Gr. λεπυρός, in a rind or shell, neut. λεπυρόν, a rind, shell, < λέπος, a scale, rind: see lepis.] A genus of weevils or Curculionidae, having the rostrum subangulate and carinate below, and the legs rounded, not sinuate. They are rather large yellowish or grayish beetles, living upon various trees. The species are numerous, and belong to the northern portions of both hemispheres. L. colon is an ashy-gray species, about one third of an inch long, found in Europe and British America, especially upon willows.

leret. An obsolete form of *lear*¹, *leer*¹, *leer*³.

Lernæa (lēr-nē'ā), n. [NL., with ref. to the Lernæan hydra, < L. Lernæa, fem. of Lernæus: see Lernæan.] The typical genus of Lernæidae, formerly regarded as belonging to the group of nematoid intestinal worms. The male of L. branchialis is 2 or 3 millimeters long, the female twice as large. Also Lernæa.

Lernæan, Lernean (lēr-nē'an), a. and n. [< L. Lernæus, < Gr. Λερναῖος, Lernean, < Λέρνα, Λέρνη, > L. Lerna, Lerne, a locality in Argolis.] 1. a. 1. Pertaining to the marshy district and the lake and fountain called Lerna, in the region of Argolis in Greece, or to the ancient sacred grove in this district.

Opened the eye of his conscience to the hundred-headed injustice in the Lernean Marsh of Modern Society.

Theodore Parker, Ten Sermons on Religion.

2. [l. c.] Same as lernæoid.—Lernæan hydra, in Gr. myth., a monstrous nine-headed serpent inhabiting the Lernean marsh, killed by Hercules. See hydra, 1, and Hercules.

II. n. A member of the Lernæidae or Lernæoidea.

Lernæidae (lēr-nē'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lernæa + -idae.] A family of degraded parasitic crustaceans (fish-lice), of the order Siphonostoma, or giving name to a different order, Lernæoidea. The females of these fish-lice resemble worms rather than crustaceans. The body is unsegmented; there are processes upon the head; the mouth-parts are piercing, with a suckorial tube; and there are four pairs of small swimming-feet. They are found on the eyes, mouth, gills, and skin, and sometimes in the flesh of fishes. The small males are parasitic upon the females, and resemble crustaceans more than do the females. There are several genera, as Lernæa, Lernæocera, Lernæonema, Penella, Hæmobophes, etc. Also Lernæade.

lernæiform, lerneiform (lēr-nē'i-fōrm), a. [< NL. Lernæa + L. forma, form.] Having the form or characters of the Lernæoidea; resembling crustaceans of the genus Lernæa.

Lernæodea (lēr-nē-ōd'ē-ā), n. pl. Same as Lernæoidea.

lernæoid, lerneoid (lēr-nē-ōid), a. [< NL. Lernæa + Gr. εἶδος, form.] Pertaining to or having the characters of the Lernæoidea. Also Lernæan.

Lernæoidea (lēr-nē-ōi'dē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lernæa + Gr. εἶδος, form.] An order of Épizoa, containing those most degraded parasitic crustaceans whose bodies are worm-like and whose limbs are rudimentary, as in the families Chondracanthidae, Lernæidae, and Lernæopodidae. The limbs, when present, are simple inarticulate processes, serving only to fix the parasite on its host. The thorax is inarticulate and the abdomen usually rudimentary. These fish-lice, especially the females, exhibit the extreme of degradation and distortion of form. Also Lernæodea.

Lernæopoda (lēr-nē-ōp'ō-dā), n. [NL., < Lernæa + Gr. ποῦς (pod-) = E. foot.] The typical genus of Lernæopodidae.

lernæopodian (lēr-nē-ō-pō'di-an), n. [< Lernæopoda + -ian.] A fish-louse of the genus Lernæopoda, or some similar species.

Lernæopodidae (lēr-nē-ō-pō'di-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lernæopoda + -idae.] A family of degraded parasitic crustaceans, of the order Siphonostoma or Lernæoidea. The body consists of head and thorax with rudimentary abdomen, and there are no swimming-feet. The mouth-parts consist of mandibulate and suckorial parts, the maxillipeds attaining some size and serving in the female for attachment. The dwarfed males have clasping-feet, but no swimming-feet. There are several genera of these grotesque fish-lice, as Lernæopoda, Achtheres, Anchorella, Brachiella, etc.

Lernæa, Lernean, etc. See Lernæa, etc.
lerot (lē'rot), n. [F. lérot, dim. of loir, < L. glis (glir-), a dormouse: see Glis.] The garden-dormouse, Myoxus or Eliomys nitela, one of the larger dormice of southern Europe, about 6 inches long.

lerp (lērp), n. [Australian.] A manna said to be a secretion from an insect, found on the leaves of Eucalyptus dumosa when very small.

lerruck (lē'ruk), n. A dialectal form of laverock, for *lar*¹. [Orkney Isles.]

lerry, n. [Appar. a var. of *lear*¹, n.] Learning; lesson. Middleton, Blurt, Master-Constable, iii. 3.

Lerva (lér'vî), n. [NL. (Hodgson, 1837, as Lerva; Blyth, 1849, as Lerva), from a native name.] A genus of gallinaceous birds of the family Tetraonidae; the snow-partridges. L. niv- cola, the only species, ranges along the Himalayas into Tibet and China, at an altitude of from 7,000 to 14,000 feet, breeding near the snow-line. The plumage is variegated with chestnut-red, buff, black, and gray; the male is spurred, and weighs about 20 ounces. See snow-partridge. Also called Tetraoperdia.

Himalayan Snow-partridge (Lerva nivicolata).

les[†], adv. An obsolete form of less.

les^{2†}. A Middle English preterit of leese 1.

Lesbia (les'bi-ä), n. [NL., so called with reference to their brilliant metallic color; < L. lesbias or lesbia, a precious stone found in Lesbos; see Lesbian.] 1. A genus of Carabidae founded by Latreille in 1804. As now restricted, the genus enters the tribe Lesbiini of the subfamily Harpalinae unisetae, and is characterized by having short tibial spurs, distinct antennal scrobes, the first three joints of the antennae glabrous, and the head constricted behind the eyes. A great many species of rather small size occur in all parts of the globe, but they are especially numerous in the tropical and subtropical parts of the New World. Most of them are either of brilliant metallic color or beautifully variegated with bright contrasting colors. They are usually met with during the daytime on trees and low plants.

2. A genus of humming-birds, or Trochilidae, with long forked tail, containing such species as L. sylphii or L. gonldi.

Lesbian (les'bi-an), a. and n. [< L. Lesbius, < Gr. Λέσβιος, < Λέσβος, > L. Lesbos, Lesbos.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the island of Lesbos in the Aegean sea, which belonged in ancient times, together with the adjoining part of the coast of Asia Minor, to the district called Æolis, and was the home of a famous school of lyric poets, including Alexus, Sappho, and others. From the reputed character of the inhabitants and the tone of their poetry, Lesbian is often used with the implied sense of 'amatory' or 'erotic.' — Lesbian cyma. See cyma, 1.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Lesbos.

lesche (les'kē), n. [< Gr. λέσχη, a place for conversation, a public portico, club-room, etc., also conversation, discussion, < λέγειν, speak; see legend.] In Gr. antiqu., a building or covered portico frequented by the people for conversation or the hearing of news. Such edifices were numerous in Greek cities, and their walls were often decorated with historical and patriotic subjects by celebrated painters, as notably at Delphi.

Lescopteris (les-ki-rop'tē-ris), n. [NL., named after Leo Lesquereux, a Swiss-American paleobotanist.] A genus of fossil ferns established by Schimper (1869), which is related to Odontopteris by the mode of attachment of the lateral veins, and to Neuropteris by their direction, but differs from all the forms of the Carboniferous by its peculiar nervation. It occurs in the coal-measures of Ohio and Pennsylvania.

lese^{1†}. A Middle English form of leasc 1, etc., and leese 1.

lese^{2†}, v. t. [ME. lesen, < AS. lisan, lësan, lësan, loose, release, < leās, loose; see loose, -less.] To loose; deliver; release.

lese-majesty (lēz'maj'es-ti), n. [< F. lèse-majesté, < ML. lesa majestas, high treason: L. lesa, fem. of lesus, pp. of ludere, hurt (see lesion); majestas, majesty; see majesty.] In jurisprudence, any crime committed against the sovereign power in a state; treason. The Latin crimen lese majestatis denoted a charge brought against a citizen for acts of rebellion, usurpation of office, or general misdemeanors of a political character, which were comprehended under the title of offenses against the majesty of the Roman people. In the reign of Tiberius, according to Suetonius, it was lese-majesty to flog a slave or to change one's clothes in the presence of any image of the emperor. It also was lese-majesty to take into a latrine a ring or a piece of money bearing the effigy of Caesar. Also spelled leze-majesty.

lesion (lē'zhon), n. [< F. lésion = Sp. lesion = Pg. lesão = It. lesione, < L. lesio(n)-, an injury, < ludere, pp. latus, hurt. Cf. collide, elide, illide, collision, elision, illusion.] 1. A hurting; hurt; wound; injury. — 2. In civil law, the loss or injury suffered in a commutative contract by the party who does not receive an equivalent for what he gives. When the inequality amounts to more than one half of the value of what the party gives, it is called in French law lésion d'outre moitié du juste prix, in Spanish law lesión enorme, and, if very much more, lesión inordinada. When the inequality amounts to from one third to one quarter of the value of what the party gives, it is called in French law lésion du tiers au quart.

3. In pathol., any morbid change in the structure of organs. The term is not restricted to visible anatomical changes, but may be applied to such as are revealed solely by a disturbance of function.

When it [peritonitis] arises from a wound, it is probably not the simple injury to the peritoneum that causes the lesion. Quain, Med. Dict., p. 1131.

Focal lesion. See focal.

lesk, lisk (lesk, lisk), n. [ME. leske, < Dan. lyske = Sw. ljumske = MD. liesche, flank.] The groin or flank. [Prov. Eng.]

The laste was a litle name that lalde was be-nethe, His leskes laye alle lene and latheliche to schewe. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 3280.

Leskea (les'kē-ä), n. [NL. (Johann Hedwig, 1782), named after N. G. Leske (1757-86).] A genus of mosses, the type of the tribe Leskeae. It is marked by the narrowly lanceolate teeth of the outer peristome, the narrow and linear segments of the inner, the absence of cilia, and the oblong capsule, which is erect or somewhat arcuate. L. sericea, sometimes called golden moss, is very common in England, forming silky yellowish-green patches on ash-trees.

Leskeae (les-kē'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (W. P. Schimper, 1860), < Leskea + -ea.] A tribe of pleurocarpous Bryaceae or true mosses, embracing Leskea, its type, and a few other genera.

Leskia (les'ki-ä), n. [NL. (Robineau-Desvoidy, 1830), named after N. G. Leske.] 1. A genus of dipterous insects of the family Tachinidae. They are rather large bristly flies of dark-yellowish or greenish color, confined to Europe and Asia. The larvae are internal parasites of other insects. L. aurea of Europe infests the larvae of moths of the genus Sesia, and L. sericaria of Japan affects the silkworm of commerce with the disease known as uji. The latter species has been placed in a genus Ujimyia. See uji.

2. A genus of spatangoid sea-urchins having the mouth closed by triangular converging plates, as in L. mirabilis. J. E. Gray, 1851. Also called Palavostoma.

Leskiidae (les-ki'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leskia + -idae.] A family of spatangoid sea-urchins named from the genus Leskia. Also Leskiada.

Leskiinae (les-ki-i-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Leskia + -inae.] A subfamily of irregular sea-urchins, of the family Spatangidae.

Lesleya (les'le-yä), n. [NL., named after J. P. Lesley.] A genus of fossil ferns established by Lesquereux (1880). It is related to Neuropteris by some of its characters, and to Megalopteris by others. It differs from Glossopteris in that its venation is dichotomous and not reticulate. Two species have been described, one from the base of the Chester limestone in Illinois, the other from the bituminous coal of Kansas.

Leslie's cube. See cube.

Lespedeza (les-pē-dē'zä), n. [NL. (A. Michaux, 1803), named after D. Lespedez, the Spanish governor of Florida in the time of Michaux.] A genus of leguminous plants of the tribe Hedyosarceae, distinguished by the generally one-seeded and one-jointed pod and the pinnately trifoliate leaves without stipules. See hoopkoopplant, and Japan clover (under Japan).

less¹ (les), a. compar. [ME. lesse, lasse, < AS. læssa (= OFries. lessa), less, smaller, for læssa*, compar. (with superl. læstast, læstest, læst, > E. *least*¹, q. v.), from a positive prob. appearing in a deriv. form in Goth. læstus, weak (see *lass*², lazy), but associated in meaning with the unrelated lytel, little, small; see little. Cf. *less*¹, adv. Hence *lest*¹, unless, *less*².] 1. Not so much or so large; of smaller quantity, amount, bulk, or capacity; inferior in dimensions, extent, or duration: as, less honor or reward; less profit or possessions; less time; less distance; less scope or range; the reward is less than he deserves; a man of less courage or ability; an article of less weight or value.

It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which . . . is less than all the seeds that be in the earth. Mark iv. 31.

Thou . . . wouldst . . . teach me how To name the bigger light, and how the less, That burn by day and night. Shak., Tempest, l. 2. 335.

More glory will be won, Or less be lost. Milton, P. L., iv. 854.

The sea having lost to the north, and also to the west, on the side of the ancient causeway to the island, is the reason why the eastern port [of Pharos] at present is the less. Pococke, Description of the East, I. 3.

Even so late as less than half a century ago this region was still . . . most attractive. O. W. Holmes, Emerson, l.

2. Not so great, considerable, or important; of smaller scope or consequence; lower in the scale: as, St. James the Less; his honors are less than his deserts.

But he that is lessee in the kyngdom of hevenes is more than he. Wyclif, Mat. xl. 11.

Whan thise [tidings] were told to lesse & to more. William of Paterno (E. E. T. S.), l. 4768.

Look for no less [punishment] than death. Shak., W. T., ill. 2. 92.

What power shall stand in that frightful time when rebellion hath become a less evil than endurance? Macaulay, Conversation between Cowley and Milton.

Great tracts of wilderness, Wherein the beast was ever more and more, But man was less and less, till Arthur came. Tennyson, Coming of Arthur.

= Syn. Smaller, Less, Fewer. Smaller is rather more exact than less, but is used freely of persons and of things both concrete and abstract: as, a smaller man, aoul, size. Less is not used of persons: as, less trouble, happiness, size, degree; less of an evil. With reference to size and number, the proper words are smaller and fewer. "This apple is less than that," "There were less people there than I expected," are inelegant and erroneous, although similar expressions are often used both in speech and in writing. While the latter, however, is inexcusable, the former may be used sparingly without offense in certain collocations, especially in poetry. The allusion to the mustard-seed in Mark iv. 31 appears to be the only example in the Bible of the use of less in the sense of 'smaller in size.' In Shakspeare's plays the word occurs more than two hundred times, and in Milton's poems more than a hundred; in the former it is used only four or five times and in the latter three times in the sense of 'smaller in size,' and never in that of 'fewer.'

The razor's edge invisible, Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen. Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 258.

Of harmes two the lesse is for to chese. Chaucer, Troilus, ll. 470.

If we are mark'd to die, we are enow To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men the greater share of honour. Shak., Hen. V., iv. 3. 22.

less¹ (les), adv. compar. [ME. lesse, les, las, < AS. læs (= OS. les), compar. adv., associated with lessa, adj.: see *less*¹, a.] In a smaller or lower degree; to an inferior extent, amount, etc.; in a decreased or abated way or manner: as, less prudent; less carefully executed; to exaggerate less; to think less of a person.

Sche changyd hyr colour lesse and more. The Horn of King Arthur (Child's Ballads, I. 24).

His guide now led the way into another valley, where he would be less exposed to danger. Irring, Granada, p. 95.

My life I value less. Whittier, Mogg Megone, l.

Than yonder fool his gandy dress.

less^{1†} (les), v. [ME. lessen, lessen, < lesse, less; see less, a. Cf. lessen.] 1. trans. To make less; lessen.

If we thus do . . . we shal . . . with this unsmert flnde our hartes lighted, and thereby the griefe of our tribulation lessed.

Sir T. More, Cumfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 58.

II. intrans. To become less; lessen.

The day is gon, the moneth passid, Hire love encreseth and his lesseth. Gower, (Hallivell).

Lessen gan his hope and ek his myght. Chaucer, Troilus, v. 1438.

less^{2†} (les), conj. [An aphetic form of unless.] Unless. B. Jonson.

And the mute Silence hist along, Less Philomel will deign a song. Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 56.

-less. [ME. -les, -leas, < AS. -lēds = OS. -lōs = OFries. -las = D. -los = MLG. LG. -los = OHG. MHG. -lōs, G. -los = Tecl. -lauss = Dan. Sw. -lös = Goth. -laus, a suffix meaning 'free from, without,' orig. an independent word. AS. lēds, etc., free, loose, governing the genitive, as in drædama lēas, without joys, but becoming a mere suffix, as in endeleds, without end, endless, scamleds, without shame, shameless. See *leasc*², loose, a.] A common English suffix forming, from nouns, adjectives meaning 'without' (lacking, wanting, void of, destitute of) the thing or quality denoted by the noun: as, childless, without a child; fatherless, without a father; endless, without end; hopeless, without hope; leafless, without leaves; shameless, without shame; so motherless, penitless, faithless, godless, graceless, lawless, scitless, remedless, tasteless, etc. It is applicable to any noun of which absence or destitution may be asserted. It is opposed to -ful, and is usually equivalent to the negative un- 1 prefixed to an adjective in -ful, -y, *-ing*², or *-ed*², as unhopeful, unwitty, unending, unmatched, etc., equivalent to hopeless, witless, endless, matchless, etc. It is in some cases attached to a verb, or to a word rare as a noun while common as a verb, as in careless, doless, fadless, relentless, repenitless, shunless, etc.

lessee (lē-sē'), n. [OF. lessé, pp. of lessor, let, lease. F. laisser, let, leave; see *leasc*², v.] The person to whom a lease is granted; a tenant taking an estate by lease.

One [personage] is the lessee of the fishery, whose good will is of special importance.
E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 340.

lesseeship (le-sē'ship), n. [lessee + -ship.] The condition or state of being a lessee.

lesselt, n. Same as leffel. Bailey.

lessen (les'n), v. [less + -en. Cf. *less*¹, v.]

I. intrans. 1. To become less; contract in bulk, quantity, number, or amount; decrease; diminish; shrink.
Naught was 'twixt the sea and him at last,
Except a lessening belt of yellow sand.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 178.

2. To come to appear less from increase of distance.
In mounting up in antiquity, like hawks, they did not only lessen, but fly out of sight, even beyond the ken and cognizance of any record.
Fuller, Worthies, xvi.

A rustling as of wings in flight,
An upward gleam of lessening white,
So passed the vision, sound and sight.
Whittier, The Watchers.

II. trans. 1. To make less; diminish; reduce in number, size, degree, or quality.
Wickedness is by being acknowledged lessened, and doth grow by being hid.
Quoted in Hooker's Eccles. Polity, vi. 4.

Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look.
Shak., Hen. VIII., I. 1. 119.

2. To degrade; reduce in dignity; depreciate; disparage.
The making of new Lords lessens all the rest.
Selden, Table-Talk, p. 63.

3. To cause to appear less from increase of distance; specifically, in falconry, to soar above or beyond.
St. Paul chose to magnify his office when ill men conspired to lessen it.
Bp. Atterbury.

Our two sorrows
Work, like two eager hawks, who shall get highest;
How shall I lessen thine? for mine, I fear,
Is easier known than cur'd.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, iv. 1.

lessening (les'ning), n. [Verbal n. of lessen, v.] 1. The act or process of making or becoming less. Specifically—2. In falconry, a soaring flight.
A flight of madness, like a falcon's lessening, makes them the more gaz'd at.
Collier, Eng. Stage, p. 73.

lesser (les'er), a. [*less*¹ + *-er*³. This is the compar. *less*¹, with the reg. compar. *-er*³ superfluously annexed.] Less; smaller; minor.
God made . . . the lesser light to rule the night.
Gen. i. 16.

This is some monster of the isle with four legs. . . I'll pull thee by the lesser legs.
Shak., Tempest, ii. 2. 108.

[Lesser is not so common as less, but it is almost always used after the definite article, and in antithesis to greater, as well as in certain specific uses, as in lesser Armenia.—Lesser appoggiatura, in music, the short appoggiatura.—Lesser barbiton. Same as kitt.—Lesser Dionysia, Eleusinia, excommunication, George, etc. See the nouns.—Lesser line, the lesser of two lines whose squares are incommensurable, and the sum of whose squares is rational, while the rectangle is medial.—Lesser litaney. See litany.—Lesser sixth, third, etc., in music, a minor sixth, third, etc.

lesser† (les'er), adv. [lesser, a.] 1. In a smaller degree; less.
Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him
Do call it valiant fury.
Shak., Macbeth, v. 2. 13.

2. To less purpose.
I was an ear-witness
When this young man spoke lesser than he acted,
And had the soldier's voice to help him out.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, ii. 1.

lesses (les'ez), n. pl. [ME. lesses, < OF. (F.) laissées, dung, lit. leavings, < laissé, pp. of laisser, leave: see *lease*², v. t.] In hunting, the ordure or excrement of the boar, wolf, or bear.
And gif men speke and aske hym of the fumes, he shal clepe fumes of an hert croteyng, of a bukke and of the roo-bukke, of the wilde boor, and of blake beestys, and of wolves, he shal clepe it lesses.
MS. Bodl., 546. (Halliwell.)

lessness (les'nes), n. The quality or condition of being less; diminution; abatement; inferiority; insignificance; meanness. [Rare.]
In the original it hath no such relation to lessness or greatness of person.
Sir T. Wyatt, To the King, Feb. 3, 1540.

lesson (les'n), n. [ME. lessoun, lessun, lescun, < OF. leçon, F. leçon = Sp. lección = Pg. leção = It. lezione, < L. lectio(n)-, a reading, < OF. (F.) pp. lectus, read: see legend. Cf. lection, a doublet of lesson.] 1. A reading; a part of a book or writing read (originally aloud) at one time for information or instruction.
Of the worthi wedding was bi-fore granted
Bi-twene the mycde Meliors & the prince of Grece;
Now listenes, lef lordes, this lessoun thus I ginne.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), I. 1929.

Specifically—2. A portion of Scripture or other sacred writing appointed to be read during divine service. Lessons were used in the very early days of the Christian Church, being taken at first from the Old Testament, but to these were soon added selections from the New Testament, and later from the homilies of the fathers and from the Acts of Martyrs and Saints. In the Anglican Church the first lesson at morning or evening prayer is taken from the Old Testament (with inclusion of the books called the Apocrypha), and the second lesson from the New Testament. Those of the Roman Catholic Church include also lessons from the Acts of Martyrs and Saints, read on their memorial days. Also called lection.

3. Something to be learned at one time; a task assigned for study and recitation; a division of a text-book, or a particular portion of knowledge of any kind, constituting a single exercise for a pupil.
When baith bent down ower a braid page,
Wi' ae buk on our knee,
Thy lips were on thy lessoun, but My lesson was in thee.
Motherwell, Jeanie Morrison.

One lesson from one book we learn'd.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxix.

4. Instruction conveyed to a pupil at a set time: as, to give lessons in drawing or music.
"Tom, you needn't go; I'm sure you won't be called up at first lesson." Tom felt that he would risk being floored at every lesson for the rest of his natural school-life, sooner than go; so sat down.
T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, ii. 6.

5. Something learned, or that may be learned; a special piece of knowledge gained or imparted; an inculcation serving for guidance or for warning.
I lerned amonge Lumbardes and Jewes a lessoun,
To wey pens [pence] with a peys, and pare the heyest.
Piers Plowman (B), ii. 242.

Be not jealous over the wife of thy bosom, and teach her not an evil lesson against thyself.
Eccles. ix. 1.

O learn to love; the lesson is but plain.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 407.

The historian of true genius will choose for the employment of his genius scenes from history that may read good and noble lessons to the world that reads him.
Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 99.

6. Severe admonition; reproof; rebuke.
She would give her a lesson for walking so late.
Sir F. Sidney.

lesson (les'n), v. t. [lesson, n.] To give a lesson or lessons to; teach; instruct; prompt.
As you were lesson'd?
Shak., Cor., ii. 3. 185.

Spenser . . . on this occasion hurt the pride of Leicester, too haughty or too mortified to be lessoned by his familiar dependant.
I. Disraeli, Amen. of Lit., II. 123.

The boy is lessoned in good behaviour from his earliest years.
Nineteenth Century, XX. 45.

Lessonia (le-sō'ni-ä), n. [NL., named after R. P. Lesson, a French naturalist.] 1. A genus of South American muscivorous flycatchers, of the family Tyrannidae. L. nigra and L. orcas compose the genus. Swainson, 1831.—2. A genus of coelenterates. Eydoux and Souleyet, 1848.—3. A genus of seaweeds belonging to the Laminariaceae, closely allied to Macrocystis and Nereocystis. Bory de Saint-Vincent, 1829.

lessor (les'or), n. [OF. lessor, < lesser, lease: see *lease*², v. t.] One who grants a lease; the person who lets to a tenant.

lessow†, n. and v. A variant of leasow.

lest¹ (lest), conj. [Early mod. E. also least; < ME. leste, les the, < AS. thý læs the, the less that; thý, instr. of that, the, that; læs, adv. less; the, conj., that: see *the*², *less*¹, that.] For fear that; that . . . not; so that . . . not; as, he fled lest (or for fear that) he should be killed; take heed lest you fall (that you fall not).
I rede thee hence remove,
Least thou the price of my displeasure prove.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., February.

Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.
Gen. iii. 3.

lest^{2†}, lest^{3†}, etc. A Middle English form of *last*², *least*¹, *list*¹, *list*², and lust.

Lestes (les'tez), n. [NL., < Gr. ληστής (Ionic ληστής, Doric λαστής), a robber, < ληΐζειν, carry off as booty, < ληΐς, equiv. to Ionic λεία, ληΐη, booty, plunder. Cf. Leistes.] A genus of beautiful dragon-flies, of the family Agrionidae, established by Leach in 1817. They have a large oblong pterostigma, two antecubital transverse venules, broken fourth apical sector, simple postcostal space, and forcipated appendages in the male. L. eurina is blue, green, and violet.

Lestodon (les'tō-don), n. [NL., < Gr. ληστής, a robber, + ὄδοντος (ὄδοντ-) = E. tooth.] A genus of large extinct sloths, related to Mylodon. Gervais, 1855.

Lestornis (les-tōr'nis), n. [NL., < Gr. ληστής, a robber, + ὄρνις, a bird.] A genus of large odontornithic birds from the Cretaceous of Kansas, related to Hesperornis. The type is L. crassipes. Marsh, 1876.

Lestrinidæ (les-tri-dī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lestris (Lestrid)- + -inæ.] A subfamily of Laridæ, typified by the genus Lestris; the jagers or skuas.

The bill is epignathous, as in Larinus, but its covering is discontinuous, the upper mandible being saddled with a kind of cere beneath which the lateral nostrils open. The tail is nearly square, with the central rectrices long-exserted. The œca are long, the sternum is single-notched, and the pterylosis is peculiar in some respects. The leading genus is Lestris, from which Stercorarius or Megalestris is now often separated. The species are few, chiefly inhabiting sea-coasts and large inland waters of the northern hemisphere. They are rapacious and voracious birds, which attack and harass others, especially gulls and terns, to make them disgorge or defecate in order to feed upon the droppings. The subfamily is also called Stercorariinæ.

Lestris (les'tris), n. [NL. (Illiger, 1811), < Gr. ληστρίς, piratical, < ληστής, a robber: see Lestes.] The typical genus of Lestrinidæ, either held to be conterminous with the subfamily or restricted to the smaller species like L. pomatorhinus and L. parasiticus.

let¹ (let), v.; pret. and pp. let, ppr. letting. [ME. leten, laten (pret. let, leet, læt, pp. leten, laten, ileten), < AS. lætan, ONorth. lêta (pret. lêt, leót, leórt, pl. lêton, pp. læten) = OS. lātan = OFries. lêta = D. laten = MLG. lāten = OHG. lāzan, lāzzan, MHG. lazzen, G. lassen = Icel. lata = Dan. lade = Sw. lâta = Goth. lêtan, let; a reduplicating verb, as shown in the earliest forms of the pret. (AS. leórt, Goth. lailōt); prob. akin to *late*¹, and the related L. lassus, weary, faint, orig. ladtus*, in form a pp. from the root lad*: see *late*¹. *Let*¹ is thus ult. related to *let*², which is a causal verb from *late*¹.] I. trans. 1. To permit or allow (to be or to do), either actively or passively; grant or afford liberty (to): followed by an infinitive without to: as, to let one do as he pleases; to let slip an opportunity.

Pharaoh said, I will let you go. Ex. viii. 23.
The queen did let no man come in . . . but myself. Esth. v. 12.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay?
Shak., Sonnets, xlii.

My Shakespeare's curse on clown and knave
Who will not let his ashes rest!
Tennyson, To —, after reading a Life and Letters.

One that manures his ground well, but lets himselfe lie fallow and vntill'd.
Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Plaine Country Fellow.

2. Hence also much used as a kind of imperative auxiliary, with following infinitive, to form imperative first and third persons: as, let him be accursed (literally, allow him to be accursed); let them retire at once; let us pray; let me be listened to when I speak.

Dedications and panegyrics are frequently ridiculous, let them be addressed where they will.
Steele, Tatler, No. 92.

Now late vs leue all this as for a space.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), I. 568.

And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.
Gen. i. 3.

Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.
Mat. viii. 22.

Don't let na ascribe his faults to his philosophy.
Goldsmith, Good-natured Man, i.

3. To furnish with leave or ability by direct action or agency; enable, cause, or make to do (or to be): followed by an infinitive without to (except in the passive), or by a definitive adjective or adverb (with ellipsis of go, come, or get before the adverb): as, I will let you know my decision; let me understand your claim; to let a person in (come in or enter); to let a man out of prison.

In that mene tyme Alexander sent a lettre tille Olympas, his moder, and tille his mayster Arestotle, latand thame witte of the batelles and the dysses that they suffred.
MS. Lincoln, A. i. 17, f. 46. (Halliwell.)

There's a letter for you, sir, . . . if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.
Shak., Hamlet, iv. 6. 11.

4†. To leave; allow to remain or abide; suffer to continue or proceed.
And in that lawe thel leyue and leten hit for the beste.
Piers Plowman (C), xviii. 999.

That heart only which is ready to do, or let undone, all things for his neighbour's sake, is a pleasant thing in the sight of God.
Tyndale, Ans. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 102.

But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Shak., M. of V., iii. 2. 39.

5†. To leave the care or control of; commit or intrust; resign; relinquish; leave.
So high doctrines I lete to divines.
Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

If thou can stede welle ryde,
Wyth me thou shalt be lete.
MS. Cantab. F. i. 38, f. 92. (Halliwell.)

Christ had power to let his life and to take it again.
Tyndale, Ana. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 233.

But to her mother Nature all her care she letta.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 16.

6. To leave or transfer the use of for a consideration; put to rent or hire; farm; lease: often with out: as, to let a house to a tenant; to let out boats or carriages for hire.

Making great spoyle, and letting them out to farms to such as would giue most for them.

Stow, William Itufus, an. 1083.

They have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest.

Shak., T. of A., III. 5. 107.

This house is to be let for life or years;
Her rent is sorrow, and her income tears.

Quarles, Emblems, II. 10. Epig.

7. To cause: with an infinitive, without to, in a quasi-passive use (the original subject of the infinitive being omitted): as, to let make (cause to be made); to let call (cause to be called). It is sometimes joined with do, without change of meaning.

The white toone the queene Symyramus Leet dichen al about and walles make Ful hye.
Chaucer, Good Women, I. 709.

The Juge answered "Of this in his absence
I may not geve diffynyve sentence;
Lat do hym call, and I wol gladly heree."

Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, I. 173.

Faate by is Kyng Hieroudes Hows, that leet see the In-nocentea.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 89.

Than thei lete crie and enquere yef the man that hadde broght the lettere were yef in the town.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 290.

8. To allow or hold to be; regard; esteem.

Lo! he that leet hymselfen so kennyng,
And scorned hem that loves pynes dryen,
Was ful unwar that Love hadde his dwellyng Withinne the subtille stremes of hir eyen.

Chaucer, Troilus, I. 302.

Let alone (imperative), to say nothing of; not to mention; leaving out of question.

He told me that I should meet two men whom I am curious to see—Lord Plunket and the Marquess Wellesley:
let alone the Chancellor, who is not a novelty to me.

Macaulay, in Trevelyan, I. 113.

I wouldn't turn out a badger to you, let alone a man.

Laurence, Guy Livingstone, xvii.

Let be (imperative). (a) Cease; leave off. Also formerly labbe. [Arehaic.]

O had your tongue, ye lady fair,
Lat a' your folly be.

The Earl of Mar's Daughter (Child's Ballads, I. 172).

Let be therefore my vengeance to dissuade,
And read where I that faytour false may find.

Spenser, F. Q., III. II. 13.

The reat said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

Mat. xxvii. 49.

Forgive me,
I waste my heart in signs: let be.

Tennyson, Princess, vii.

(b) Leave alone; do not trouble or meddle with.

Freyre lordea, lete be the Quene, and go youre wey quyte, for I can you good thanke for that ye haue of hir pite, and gramercy for that curtesie.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), III. 591.

Let her rip, let it run its course, or do its best or worst.
[Slang, U. S.]

"Lordy massy," ses he, "ef she don't do nothin' mere'n take a walk 'long-side on him now an' then, why, I say, let 'er rip—sarves him right." H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 607.

Let me or us see, or let's see, let me or us consider or reflect.—Let seet. Same as let me (or us) see.

"Now let se," quod Merlin, "what ye will do, for now is ther on lesse." Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 357.

Quod the world to the child, "how many foolde
Hast thou brozgt richesse? now late se:
Thou schuldist deie for hunger and cooide
But y lente meete & clothe to thee."

Hymns to Virgyn, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 58.

To be let blood. See blood.—To let abe. See abe.— To let alone, to leave to himself or itself; leave undisturbed; avoid.

Ephraim is joined to idola: let him alone. Hos. iv. 17.

To let blood. See blood.—To let down. (a) To allow to descend; lower; give down: as, to let down a rope or a ladder.

He carryeth with him a long chayne, which hee letteth doone. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 79.

The steps of a fine belozenged carriage were let down with a bang. Thackeray, Newcomes, xlv.

There's ne'er such a cow l't Riding, if she'll only behave hersel'. She's a bonny lass, she is; let down her milk, there's a pretty! Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, xv.

(b) To bring down; cause to be depressed or lowered.

Every outlet by which he (Shaffesbury) can creep out of his present position is one which lets him down into a still lower and fouler depth of infamy.

Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

(c) In metal-working, to lower the temper of, as a tool or spring of steel which has been made flint-hard. The temper is reduced by heating, the attainment of the required degree of hardness being indicated by the color.—To let drive. See drive.—To let fall. (a) To drop; allow or cause to drop, droop, or hang down: as, to let fall a boat's oars (into the water, preparatory to rowing).

And therewith the Duke lete fall the ryng in to the see, the proesse and the cerymonyes wherof war to long to wryte. Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 12.

The goose let fall a golden egg. Tennyson, The Goose.

(b) To allow to escape one, as an expression; utter carelessly or incidentally.

Least of all would Mrs. D. have willingly let fall a hint of the aerial castle building which she had the good taste to be ashamed of. George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, ix.

To let fly. See fly, v. i.—To let go. (a) To loosen the hold upon; cease holding; cast loose: often (colloquially) followed by of: as, to let go a hammer; let go of my hand.
Also, colloquially, leave go. (b) To pass by or disregard.

But to let go the name, and come to the very nature of that thing which is thereby signified.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 2.

To let go amain. See amain.—To let in. (a) To admit; allow to enter. (b) To take in; cheat; swindle; involve in something undesirable: as, he let me in for ten dollars. [Slang.]

The farmer . . . persists in trying to convince himself that he was let in when he made himself liable for the tithes. Nineteenth Century, XXII. 262.

To let into, to admit to knowledge of; trust with.

As we rode side by side through the town, I was let into the characters of all the principal inhabitants whom we met in our way. Addison, The Tory Foxhunter.

Lady Teazle has lately suspected my views on Maria;
but she must by no means be let into that secret.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, iv. 3.

To let light off, to make light of; despise.

Whane the gonerance goth thus with tho the hous gie shulde,
And letith lyghte of the lawe and lesse of the peple,
And herkeneth all to honour and to eae eke.

Richard the Redeless, III. 281.

To let loose, to set free; release from restraint.

Thy master has let loose the boy I look'd for.

Fletcher, Pilgrim, iv. 3.

To let off. (a) To allow to go; excuse from service, task, or penalty: as, to let off a servant or a rogue. (b) To discharge with an explosion, as a fire-cracker.

I cannot bear people to keep their minds bottled up for the sake of letting them off with a pop.

George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xxxix.

To let one's self loose, to launch out unreservedly; indulge in unrestrained speech or conduct. [Colloq.]—
To let out. (a) To allow to pass out, as a prisoner.

And [he] seide than to the porter, "Lette oute, for it is tyme;" and the porter seide thei stode not oute of the yates till the kynge hadde commaunded.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 206.

(b) To allow to escape, as a confined fluid or a secret.

A spere thoru myn herte gan hoore, & leete oute the derwortheist ofte that enere was.

Hymns to Virgyn, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 52.

(c) To extend by lessening a seam or a tuck, as a garment or a sail. (d) To make narrower, as a seam; remove wholly or in part, as a tuck.—To let slide. (a) To leave out of consideration; pay no attention to. [Slang.]

Let the world slide: sessa! Shak., T. of the S., Ind., I. 1.

(b) To allow to slip away or escape; suffer to be lost.
[Slang.]

If California was going to cost the Union so much, it would be better to let California slide.

Quoted in Bartlett's Americanisms.

To let slip, to allow to escape; lose sight of.

The Duke of Newcastle, who never let slip an opportunity of being absurd, took it up as a ministerial point, in defence of his creature the Chancellor.

Walpole, Letters, II. 42.

To let the cat out of the bag. See cat.—To let well (or well enough) alone, to refrain from trying to improve that which is already tolerable; leave matters as they are.

=Syn. 6. Rent, Lease, etc. See hire 1.

II. intrans. 1. To permit or allow something to be done, occur, etc.: in certain colloquial phrases. See below.—2. To be rented or leased: as, this house lets for so much a year.

—To let in, to leak; allow something to enter, as water.

—To let on. (a) To allow (a matter) to be known; betray one's knowledge; followed by a clause with that, or used, by ellipsis, absolutely: as, if he asks you, do not let on that you were there. [Colloq.]

A weel-stockit mailen, himsel' for the laird,
And marriage aff-hand, were his proffers;
I never loot on that I kenn'd it, or ear'd,
But thought I might ha'e war offers.

Burns, Last May a Braw Wooer.

I saw the signal, for as quick as she was, but I never let on I saw it.

C. Reade, Love me Little, xiv.

(b) To pretend; feign; affect: as, let on that you did not hear. [Local.]—To let out. (a) To speak out; make something known. [Colloq.]

You bile the pot, and when I have had a sneke, I'll let out, but not afore.

Western Scenes.

(b) To strike out. [Colloq.]

At length, in a sort of frenzy, he took off his coat and began letting out at everybody around him, no matter whether his victims were on his side of the question or not.

Lester Wallack, Memories, p. 101.

(c) To be dismissed or concluded: as, school lets out at three. [Rural, U. S.]

Tom whispered to Barbara that he would go and see if the horse was all right, and would meet her at the door of the Mount Zion tent when meeting should let out.

E. Eggleston, The Graysons, x.

To let up, to cease; intermit; hold up; pause; rest: as,
the rain is beginning to let up; will that scold never let up?
[Colloq., U. S.] Also used imperatively.

The man lets up on his watchfulness.

Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XII. II. 5.

let¹ (let), n. [< let¹, r.] A letting for hire or rent. [Colloq., Eng.]

Till this coach-house . . . gets a better let, we live here cheap. Dickens, The Chinese, II.

let² (let), r. [< ME. letten, < AS. lettian (pret. lettete), make late, hinder (= OS. lettian = OFries. letta = D. letten = MLG. letten = OHG. lezzan, lezzan, lezzan, MHG. lezzen, letzen, hinder (ef. G. ver-letzen, hurt, injure), = Icel. letja, hinder, = Goth. latjan, tarry), < let, late, slow; see late¹. Cf. let¹.] I. trans. To delay; retard; hinder; prevent; stop. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Byeause of his siknesse,
Which letted him to doon his btynesse.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, I. 660.

The Duchesse Dowager was absolute in the lands of her dowrie, and hee could not let her to dispose of her own.

Bacon, Hen. VII., p. 129.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me!

Shak., Hamlet, I. 4. 85.

Sir King, mine ancient wound is hardly whole,
And lets me from the saddle.

Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

II. † intrans. 1. To delay; hesitate; waver; be slow.

"I may no lenger lette," quod he, and iyarde he pryked,
And went away as wynde, and there-with I awakid.

Piers Plowman (B), xvii. 349.

There was a proud & very profane yonge man, . . . and [he] did not let to tell them that he hoped to help to east halfe of them over board before they came to their jureys end. Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 75.

2. To forbear; cease; leave off.

Ne truly for my dethe I shal not lette
To ben her trewest servaunt and her knyght.

Chaucer, Complaint of Mars, I. 186.

When Collatibe unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white.

Shak., Inerece, I. 10.

3. To be a hindrance; stand in the way.

He who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. I Thea. II. 7.

let² (let), n. [< let², r.] A retarding; hindrance; obstacle; impediment; delay: now currently used only in the tautological phrase "without let or hindrance."

Whereto when as my presence he did spy
To be a let, he bad me by and by
For to alight. Spenser, F. Q., VI. II. 17.

It had been done ere this, had I been counsil;
We had had no stop, no let.

B. Jonson, Catiline, III. 3.

The conference with these Witches is one of the greatest letts to the proceeding of the Gospell amongst them.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 883.

-let. [< ME. -let, < OF. -let, m., -lette, f., prop. -el-et, being dim. -el + dim. -et. See examples.] A diminutive suffix, as in bracelet, hamlet, rivulet, etc., and other words from or based upon the French. It is also used as a purely English formative, as in armlet, kinglet, nolet, ringlet, etc., being often merely humorous. In eyelet and some other words the termination -let is not original.

let-alone (let 'a-lon'), a. and n. I. a. Passive; inactive: as, a let-alone policy; the let-alone treatment in medicine.

II. n. Forbearance. [Rare.]

The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Shak., Lear, v. 3. 79.

letch¹ (lech), r. t. [Also leach (and leche: see leach²); < ME. *leccen, < AS. leccan (= OIIG. leken, lechen, MHG. lecken), wet, moisten: see leak, r.] Same as leach².

letch¹ (lech), n. [< letch¹, r.] Same as leach².

letch² (lech), n. [Var. of leach², leche², ult. of lake¹, q. v.] An almost stagnant ditch. [Prov.
Eng.]

letch³ (lech), n. [*< leleh, lech, r.] Strong desire; an itching; a crotchet. [Rare or prov.
Eng.]

Then will the Earl take pity on his thralls,
And pardon us our letch for liberty.

Sir H. Taylor, Ph. van Artevelde, I., II. 6.

Some people have a letch for unmasking impostors, and for avenging the wrongs of others.

De Quincey.

letchery, letchery†, n. Obsolete forms of lecher, lechery.

letchy (lech'i), a. [< letch¹ + -y.] Same as leachy.

letet. Same as lait², let¹, and lethe¹.

letent. An old past participle of let¹. Chaucer.

letgamet, n. [ME., < let², v. + obj. game¹.] A spoil-sport; a hinderer of pleasure.

Dredeles it clere was in the wynde
Of every ple, and every lette-game.

Chaucer, Troilus, III. 527.

lethal (lē'thal), a. [= Sp. letal = Pg. lethal = It. letale, < L. letalis, improp. written lethalis, mortal, deadly, < letum, death, improp. written lethum, as associated with Gr. λήθη, forgetfulness: see *lethe*¹, *Lethe*².] Pertaining to or capable of causing death; deadly; fatal.

Thou wrapp'st his [man's] eyes in mists, then boldly lays Thy lethal gins before thy crystal gates.
Quarles, Emblems, ii. 3.

All persons who . . . are found in possession of . . . any lethal weapon.
Lindsay Act (1862), quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants [and Vagrancy, p. 365.

Starvation carried off all whom the lethal climate spared.
Nineteenth Century, XXI. 825.

lethality (lē-thal'i-ti), n. [F. léthalité = It. letalità; as lethal + -ity.] The quality of being lethal; deadliness.

The certain punishment being preferable to the doubtful lethality of the fetich, Atkins, Voyage to Guinea, p. 104.

letharget, n. An obsolete form of *lethargy*¹.

lethargia (lē-thär'ji-ä), n. [LL., < Gr. ληθαργία, lethargy: see *lethargy*¹.] In veg. pathol., a sluggish condition of buds or seeds which still possess vitality. It may sometimes be overcome by close pruning in the case of buds, or by the application of hot water or weak acids in the case of seeds.

lethargic (lē-thär'jik), a. [F. léthargique = Sp. letárgico = Pg. lethárgico = It. letárgico, < L. lethargicus, < Gr. ληθαργικός, drowsy, < λήθη, forgetful, ληθαργία, lethargy: see *lethargy*¹.] 1. Affected with lethargy; morbidly sluggish or drowsy; dull; torpid.

Sparta, Sparta, why in slumbers
Lethargic dost thou lie?

Byron, tr. of Greek War-Song.

The exiles of a year had grown familiar with the favorite amusement of the lethargic Indians; and they introduced into England the general use of tobacco.

Bancroft, Hist. U. S., I. 83.

2. Marked by lethargy or languor; manifesting sluggishness or apathy: as, lethargic movements; a lethargic government.

All the company are sitting in lethargic silence round the table.
Goldsmith, Citizen of the World, lviii.

The lethargic character of their ambassador here gives a very unhopeful aspect to a treaty on this ground.
Jefferson, Correspondence, I. 294.

3. Producing lethargy; causing languor or apathy; stupefying.

Too long Jove lull'd us with lethargic charms,
But now in peals of thunder calls to arms.

Pope, Iliad, xv. 876.

lethargical (lē-thär'ji-kal), a. [< lethargic + -al.] Same as lethargic. [Rare.]

Distracted persons, lethargical, apoplectical, or any way senseless and incapable of human and reasonable acts, are to be assisted only by prayers.

Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, v. 4.

lethargically (lē-thär'ji-kal-i), adv. In a lethargic or sluggish manner; torpidly.

Here in the gloom the pimper'd sluggards lull
The lazy hours, lethargically dull.

Fawkes, Voyage to the Planets.

lethargicalness (lē-thär'ji-kal-nes), n. The state or quality of being lethargic; unnatural drowsiness or sluggishness.

That thou mayest be the more effectually roused up out of this tepidity and lethargicalness.

Dr. H. More, Epistles to the Seven Churches, ix.

lethargicness (lē-thär'jik-nes), n. Same as lethargicalness.

A grain of glory, mixt with humbleness, Cures both a fever and lethargicness. G. Herbert.

lethargize (leth'är-jiz), v. t.; pret. and pp. lethargized, ppr. lethargizing. [< *lethargy*¹ + -ize.] To render lethargic; stupefy. Also spelled lethargise.

The lethargized is not less sick because he complains not so loud as the aguish. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 353.

All bitters are poison, and act by stilling, and depressing, and lethargizing the irritability. Coleridge.

lethargogenic (lē-thär-gō-jen'ik), a. [< Gr. ληθαργος, lethargy, + -γενής, producing: see -genous, -genic.] Giving rise to lethargy.

lethargus (lē-thär'gus), n. [NL. use of L. lethargus, lethargy: see *lethargy*¹.] Negro lethargy. See *lethargy*¹.

lethargy¹ (leth'är-ji), n. [Early mod. E. also lethargie, < ME. letharge, litarge, < OF. letharge, lethargie, litarge, F. lethargie = Sp. letárgia = Pg. lethárgia = It. letárgia, < LL. lethargia, < Gr. ληθαργία, drowsiness, < λήθη, forgetful (as a noun, ληθαργος, > L. lethargus, > It. Sp. letargo, lethargy), < λήθη, oblivion (see *Lethe*², n.), + άλγος, pain (άλγ- altered to αργ- to avoid recurrence of λ).] 1. A state of prolonged inactivity or torpor; inertness of body or mind; sluggishness; dullness; stupor.

He is fallen into a litarge, which that is a comune sykenesse to heres that ben desceyuyd.

Chaucer, Boethius, i. prose 2.

Europe lay then under a deep lethargy. Bp. Atterbury.

What means this heaviness that hangs upon me?
This lethargy that creeps through all my senses?

Addison, Cato, v. 1.

In a state of lethargy or inattentiveness a greater force of stimulus is needed to arouse the attention.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 88.

2. Specifically, in pathol., a disorder of consciousness, which consists of prolonged and profound sleep, from which the patient may be momentarily aroused, but into which he quickly sinks again. Quain.—3. The hibernation or winter sleep of an animal, or any other state of complete repose, as a period of summer lethargy observed in many insect-larvæ, the repose of many tropical animals during the dry season, etc.—Negro or African lethargy, a disease prevailing on the west coast of Africa, affecting negroes almost if not quite exclusively, and terminating after a course of some months almost invariably in death. It is characterized by fits of somnolence increasing in intensity and gravity, by enlargement of the lymphatic glands, and by more or less edema. Also called sleeping-sickness, sleeping-dropsy, netawan, and lethargus.

lethargy¹ (leth'är-ji), v. t. [< *lethargy*¹, n.] To make lethargic or dull. Churchill.

Either his notion weakens, [or] his discernings Are lethargied. Shak., Lear, i. 4. 249.

lethargy², n. Same as litharge.

lethe¹, n. [Also lete; < L. lethum, improp. spelling of letum, death. Cf. lethal.] Death. [Poetical.]

Here did'st thou fall; and here thy hunters stand, Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.

Shak., J. C., iii. 1. 206.

What more remains t' accomplish our revenge?
The proudest Nation [Troy] that great Asia nurs't
Is now extinct in lethe. Heywood, Iron Age, ii. 3.

Lethe² (lē'thē), n. [< L. Lethe (def. 1), < Gr. λήθη, forgetfulness, oblivion (λήθης ἵδιον, water of oblivion, name of a river in Lusitania; but no river called λήθη is mentioned by Greek writers), < λαθάνειν, latheîn, forget, akin to L. latere, lie hid: see latent.] 1. In Gr. myth.: (a) The personification of oblivion, a daughter of Eris. (b) The river of oblivion, one of the streams of Hades, the waters of which possessed the quality of causing those who drank of them to forget their former existence.

Your goodness is the Lethe
In which I drown your injuries, and now five Truly to serve you.

Far off from these a slow and silent stream,
Lethe, the river of oblivion, rolls
Her watery labyrinth. Milton, P. L., ii. 583.

2. A draught of oblivion; forgetfulness.

The conquering wine hath steep'd our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe. Shak., A. and C., ii. 7. 114.

3. In entom., a genus of nymphalid butterflies, with one species, L. europa, from the Malay archipelago. Hübner, 1816.

lethe³, a. and v. An obsolete variant of *lithe*¹.

Lethean (lē-thē'an), a. [< L. Letheus, < Gr. ληθαίος, of forgetfulness, < λήθη, forgetfulness: see *Lethe*².] Pertaining to the river Lethe; inducing forgetfulness or oblivion.

The soul with tender luxury you fill,
And o'er the sense Lethean dews distill.

Falconer, Shipwreck, iii.

Lethe'd (lē-thē'd), a. [< *Lethe*², q. v., + -ed.] Caused by or as if by a draught from Lethe; Lethean; oblivious: used only by Shakspeare, originally in the form Letheid.

Epiceuan cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite;
That sleep and feeding may prerogue his honour
Even till a Lethe'd dullness. Shak., A. and C., ii. 1. 27.

letheon (lē-thē-on), n. [NL., < Gr. λήθη, forgetfulness (see *Lethe*²), + -ον, for -one.] Ethyl ether when used as an anesthetic.

letheonize (lē-thē-on-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. letheonized, ppr. letheonizing. [< letheon + -ize.] To subject to the influence of letheon.

lether, a. See lither.

lethiferous (lē-thif'ē-rus), a. [= F. léthifère = Sp. letífero = Pg. lethífero = It. letifero, < L. lethifer, improp. spelled lethifer, deadly, < letum, death, + ferre = E. *bear*¹.] Deadly; bringing death or destruction.

Those that are really lethiferous are but excrescences of sin.
J. Robinson, Eudoxa (1658), p. 161.

Lethrus (leth'rus), n. [NL. (Scopoli, 1777); supposed to be for Olethrus, < Gr. ὀλεθρος, ruin, destruction, death.] A genus of scarabæoid beetles, of the family Aphodiidae, confined to eastern Europe and western Asia. They are noted for climbing up plants to cut off leaves and twigs, which they carry into their burrows to eat.

lethy¹, a. See lithy.

lethy² (lē'thi), a. [< *Lethe*² + *-y*¹.] Causing oblivion or forgetfulness; Lethean. [Rare.]

Thou dost upon a divell, not a woman,
That has bewitcht thee with her sorcerie,
And drown'd thy soul in lethy faculties.

Marston, Insatiate Countess, iv.

letifical (lē-tif'i-kal), a. [< letifice* (< L. letificus, making glad, < letus, glad, + facere, make) + -al.] Making glad. Bailey, 1731.

letificate (lē-tif-i-kāt), v. [< L. letificatus, pp. of letificare (> It. letificare = Sp. letificar), make glad, cheer, rejoice, < letificus (> Pg. letificio), make glad: see letifical.] I. intrans. To rejoice; be glad. Bailey, 1731.

II. trans. To make glad; gladden; cheer. Nares.

letification (lē-tif-i-kā'shon), n. [< letificate + -ion.] The act of rejoicing; festivity.

The last year we shew'd you, and in this place,
How the shepherds of Christ by thee made letification.

Candlemas Day (1512), Int.

Leto (lē'tō), n. [< Gr. Λητώ; cf. L. Latona.]

1. In Gr. myth., the mother by Zeus of Apollo and Artemis (Diana), to whom she gave birth on the island of Delos. She was a personification of the night and of the darkness, which is a necessary antithesis to the great twin deities of light, her children. She was called by the Romans Latona.

2. In entom., a genus of hepialid moths, with one species, L. vnus, of South Africa. Hübner, 1816.

let-off (let'ōf), n. [< the phrase let off: see *let*¹, v.] 1. An outlet; a vent.

Ah, the poor horses! how many a brutal kick and stripe they got, . . . just as a let-off for the angry passions of their masters. Religious Herald, June 2, 1887.

2. In power-loom weaving, any one of a variety of devices for feeding or letting off the warp from the beam or yarn-roll of a loom, as required by the winding of the cloth on the cloth-beam.

let-pass (let'pās'), n. 1. A passport or permit to pass, or to go or be abroad.

Three men found wandering without a let-passe were to be sent to the fleet to serve His Majesty.

A. H. A. Hamilton, Quarter Sessions, p. 218.

2. A pass or paper furnished to a vessel in order to prevent detention by a ship of war; a safe-conduct.

Lett (let), n. [< Lett. Latvi.] A member of a branch of the Lithuanian or Lettic race, inhabiting chiefly the Russian provinces of Courland, Livonia, and Vitebsk. The Letts call themselves Latvis. See Lithuanian.

letter¹ (let'er), n. [< *let*¹ + -er.] 1. One who lets or permits.

A provider slow
For his own good, a careless letter-go.

B. Jonson, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry.

2. One who lets for hire. [Rare.]

Aston, who calls her [Mrs. Bracegirdle] "the Diana of the Stage," says, "The most received Opinion is that she was the Daughter of a Coach Man, Coach maker, or Letter out of Coaches in the Town of Northampton."

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 25.

letter² (let'er), n. [< ME. lettere; < *let*² + -er.] One who lets, retards, or hinders.

letter³ (let'er), n. [< ME. lettre, letre, < OF. lettre, letre, F. lettre = Sp. letra = Pg. letra = It. lettera, < L. littera, littera, a letter, alphabetic character, in pl. a letter, epistle, also literature, history, letters; origin uncertain; perhaps, with formative -ter, from the root li* of linere, pp. litus, smear, spread, or rub over (see limiment), meaning a character graven (with a style) on a tablet 'smeared' with wax (the letters being, when necessary, erased by rubbing the wax with the end of the style), or a character 'smeared' or spread (with a reed or pencil) on parchment. (Cf. obliterate.) Hence also (from L. littera, littera) E. literal, literary, literate, litterate, alliterate, obliterate, transliterate, etc.] 1. A mark or sign used to represent a sound of the human voice; a conventional representation of one of the primary elements of speech; an alphabetical character.

And than he brought hym a bref all of brode letteres,
That was comly by craft a clerke for to rede.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 794.

He . . . from the cross-row plucks the letter G.

Shak., Rich. III., I. 1. 55.

Primitive picture ideograms have passed through the successive stages of phonograms and syllabic signs till they finally developed into letters.

Isaac Taylor, The Alphabet, I. 13.

2. In printing, a type bearing an alphabetical character: as, an initial letter; broken letters.—3. Alphabetical representation in general; characters used in writing or printing collectively; hence, in printing, movable type as constituting complete fonts: as, black-letter (either in manuscript or impression, or as type); plenty or scarcity of letter.

It [the Samaritan Pentateuch] seemed to me to be much later than that of Sir John Cotton's Library with us, because it was of a much smaller Letter, and more broken in the Writing, which was all I am capable to Judge by.

Letter, Journey to Paris, p. 132.

4. A missive communication made by the use of letters. Specifically—(a) A written message, notice, or other expression of thought sent by one person to another; an epistle; formerly in the plural with reference to a single communication.

Furst the Sowden sent his letters owt.
With messengers as fast as they cowde ride,
To kynges and to princes all about.

Generydes (E. E. T. S.), i. 1891.

Lo, heer the lettres seted of this thing,
That I mot bere with al the haste I may.

Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 638.

I have a letter from her,
Of such contents as you will wonder at.

Shak., M. W. of W., iv. 6. 12.

(b) An official or legal document granting some right, authority, or privilege to the person or persons addressed or named in it: as, letters patent; letters of administration.

5f. An inscription.

In al that lond magicien was noon
That coude expoune what this lettre mente,
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 218.

Be wryting of wees that wist I in dede,
With sight for to seche, of hom that suet after,
To ken all the craftes how the case felle,
By lokyng of lettres that lette were of olde.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 25.

6. Literal or exact meaning; un glossed signification; that which is most plainly expressed by the words used: as, to adhere to the letter of the text.

Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

2 Cor. iii. 6.

By the letter and written word of God, we are without exception in the state of death.

Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, i. 57.

The special abuse of reverence is idolatry, which is worshipping the letter instead of the spirit.

J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 165.

7. pl. Literaturo in general; hence, knowledge derived from books; literary culture; erudition: as, the republic of letters; a man of letters.

Pericles was an able minister of state, an excellent orator, and a man of letters.—Swift, Nobles and Commons, ii.

But the valuable thing in letters . . . is, as we have often remarked, the judgment which forms itself insensibly in a fair mind along with fresh knowledge.

M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, Int.

It [teaching] was wise in this, that it gave its pupils some tincture of letters as distinguished from mere scholarship.

Lowell, Oration, Harvard, Nov. 8 1886.

8. In musical notation, same as letter-name.—Ancillary letters. See ancillary.—Apostolic letters. See bull, 2.—Ascending letter, in printing. See ascending.—Body letter, that kind of type in which the main portion of a book or paper is printed. E. H. Knight.—Cacuminal letter. Same as cerebral letter.—Canine letter, canonical letters, capital letters, cerebral letter, characteristic letter, circular letter, commendatory letters, commercial letter, criminal letters. See the adjectives.—Communicatory letters. See commendatory letters, under commendatory.—Condensed letter, in printing. See type.—Dead letter, dead-letter office. See dead.—Descending letters, dismissory letter, dominical letter. See the adjectives.—Double letters, in printing, the characters ff, fl, fl, and fl cast as single types, to prevent the breaking of the back of the f, which when used separately interferes with every following ascending letter. The diphthongs ae and oe are also cast as double letters.—Ecclesiastical letters. See ecclesiastical epistles, under ecclesiastical.—Extended letter, in printing. See extend.—Inferior letter, in printing, a small letter printed at the bottom of the line.—Initial letter. See initial.—Kerned letter, a type in which some portion of the face overhangs the body, as the upper part of the letter f. Nearly all the long letters in italic and script fonts are kerned. E. H. Knight.—King's letter. Same as brief, 2(d).—Letter dismissory. Same as dimissory letter.—Letter missive. (a) A letter of an official character sent to or intended for different persons about some matter concerning all of them; specifically, among Congregationalists, an identical letter issued by a church, by a member or members of a church feeling aggrieved, or by persons desirous of forming a church, calling a council of churches for advice or aid upon the subject or subjects mentioned in the letter.

The council, being assembled as invited, is organized by being called to order by one of its older members, who reads the letter missive which is the authority for their procedure.

H. M. Dexter, Congregationalism, lii. § 1.

(b) In Eng. law: (1) A letter of courtesy written by the lord chancellor to any peer, peeress, or bishop against whom a bill is filed, informing the party of the complaint and requesting an appearance, sent in lieu of summons. (2) A letter from the sovereign addressed to a dean and chapter, naming the person whom they are required to elect as bishop. Also called royal letter. See extract under royal letter.—Letter of allotment, attorney, bailiery, credit, il- cence. See allotment, etc.—Letter of credence. See credence, 2.—Letter of marque. See marque.—Letter of mart. Same as letter of marque.—Letter of orders. See order.—Letter of recommendation. See recommendation.—Letters advocacy. See advocacy.—Letters clause or close, in Eng. law, letters in the name of the sovereign closed or sealed up with the royal signet or privy seal.—Letters of administration, the instrument by which the court having jurisdiction of intestates' estates authenticates the appointment of an administrator and authorizes him to proceed in the settlement of the estate.—Letters of administration with the will annexed, letters of administration in a case where there is a will but no executor, as where the will omits to provide one, or the one designated does not accept the trust, and it therefore becomes necessary to appoint an administrator to carry the will into effect.—Letters of caption. See caption.—Letters of collection, or letters of special administration, letters issued for the temporary purpose of enabling some one to collect and hold the assets, pending a controversy as to the right to have letters of administration or letters testamentary.—Letters of election, of exculpation, of fire and sword, or of horning, of legitimization. See ejection, exculpation, fire, etc.—Letters of intercommuning. See intercommune.—Letters of open doors. See open.—Letters overt. Same as letters patent.—Letters patent, an open letter under the seal of the state or nation, granting some property, right, authority, privilege, or title; more specifically, in modern law, such letters granting the exclusive right to use an invention or design. Letters patent are so called because they were commonly addressed by the sovereign to all subjects at large, and were not sealed up like a secret commission, but open, ready to be shown to whom it might concern.

By the story of dyvers letters patentes or charturs granted and confirmed by dyvers kynges of Yngland.

English Guilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 528.

With the exception of a few gaps in the reigns of John and Henry III., the letters-patent extend without break or flaw from the year 1200 to our own day. Unlike the close rolls, they are unsealed and exposed to view, hence their name.

Encyc. Brit., XX. 311.

Letters rogatory, an instrument by which a court of one nation informs a court of a foreign nation that a certain claim is pending in the first-mentioned court, in which the testimony of certain witnesses who reside within the jurisdiction of the foreign court is required, and the foreign court is requested to take their depositions, or cause them to be taken, in due course and form of law, for the furtherance of justice, usually adding to the request an offer on the part of the court making it to do the like for the other in a similar case. Benedict.—Letters secret, letters or documents closed and sealed, and not for general perusal: opposed to letters patent.

Two different methods of sealing documents, either closed or open for inspection, are recorded in the legal terms letters secret and "letters patent."

Encyc. Brit., XXI. 586.

Letters testamentary, the instrument by which a court of probate authenticates the appointment of an executor under a will, and authorizes him to proceed in the administration of the will.—Lingual letter. Same as cerebral letter.—Man of letters. See man.—Monitory, movable, nundinal, etc., letter. See the adjectives.—Open letter, a letter designed for several or many persons; a letter to be passed from hand to hand, or to be published; especially, a letter of private or personal import intended for general perusal.—Pacifical letter. See commendatory letters, under commendatory.—Proof before letter. See proof.—Provincial letter. See provincial.—Registered letter, a letter the address of which is registered at a post-office for a special fee, in order to secure its safe transmission, a receipt being given to the sender and by each postmaster and employe through whose hands it passes. In the United States the receipt of the person addressed is forwarded to the sender.—Ribbon letter, an ornamental type or character whose design is taken from a ribbon laid in the shape required, with its doublings, folds, etc.—Royal letter. Same as letter missive (b) (2).

The royal letters are a thing of course,
A king, that would, might recommend his horse (to be bishop),

And deans, no doubt, and chapters, with one voice,
As bound in duty, would confirm the choice.

Cowper, Troilus, l. 1416.

Signet letter. See signet.—Sunday letter. Same as dominical letter. See dominical.—Superior letter, in printing, a small letter printed at the top of the line.—Synodal letter. See bull, 2.—To expedite letters. See expede.—To gain or lose letters, in teleg., in A B C instruments, to indicate letters in advance of or behind the proper letter of the alphabet: said of the index when it is out of adjustment and points to the wrong part of the dial. The error may be continually one or more letters in advance or one or more letters behind the proper position, or it may be a varying one due to the index failing to make the proper steps.—To run one's letters, in Scots law, to exercise the right an accused person has (under certain restrictions) of having his case tried before the circuit court sittings in the locality in which the applicant is imprisoned. (See also drop-letter.)

*letter*³ (let'ér), v. t. [*letter*³, n.] To impress or engrave letters on; mark or stamp with a title or an inscription: as, to letter a book; a lettered stone or print.

And ye talk together still,
In the language wherewith Spring
Letters cowslips on the hill?

Tennyson, Adeline.

letter-balance (let'ér-bal'ans), n. A machine for weighing letters, printed matter, or small packages, for mailing.

letter-board (let'ér-bórd), n. 1. In printing, a strong movable board upon which types are placed for distribution or for temporary stowage.—2. The broad smooth board on the outside of a railroad-car, above the cornice and windows, on which is painted the name of the road or other legend. Also called frieze.

letter-book (let'ér-bük), n. A book in which letters are filed, or in which copies of letters are made, for preservation.

letter-box (let'ér-boks), n. A box to receive letters. (a) A locked box fastened to a wall or post in a public place, or conveniently placed for public use in a post office, in which letters are dropped to be collected and mailed at regular hours by the post-office carriers or clerks.

The lion's head which served as a letter-box has been immortalized in that paper (the "Guardian"). It was in imitation of the famous lion at Venice.

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, l. 221.

(b) One of a number of rented boxes in a post-office, in which letters are placed by the postmaster or clerk to be collected by the owners of the boxes at their convenience. More commonly called simply box.

Any body hesitates a little in reference to going behind the letter-boxes and assisting in sorting the mails.

W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 218.

(c) A box to receive letters, affixed at the entrance of a dwelling or place of business, usually upon the inside of the door, with a slit through which letters may be thrust in from without.

letter-carrier (let'ér-kar'i-ér), n. A man who delivers or collects letters in postal service; a postman.

letter-case (let'ér-kās), n. 1. A case for containing letters; hence, a portable writing-desk or portfolio.—2. In printing, a type-case. See case, 2, n., 6.

letter-clip (let'ér-klip), n. An implement, consisting of a pair of plates opening and closing on a spring, by means of which papers may be clasped firmly, so as to be hung up or kept together.

letter-cutter (let'ér-kut'ér), n. One who cuts letters in or upon a surface, as of stone or metal; specifically, in type-founding, a punch-cutter.

letter-drop (let'ér-drop), n. On a postal or mail railroad-car, a plate with an opening closed by a hinged flap, for receiving letters for the post along the route of the train.

lettered (let'éréd), a. [*letter*³ + -ed². Cf. literate.] 1. Literate; educated; versed in literature or science.

Lere it thus, lewede men, for lettred hit knoweth,
Than treuthe and trewe loue ys no tresour bettere.

Piers Plowman (C), ll. 135.

Arn. Monsieur, are you not lettered?
Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book.

Shak., L. L., v. 1. 48.

2. Of or pertaining to learning; marked by or devoted to literary culture: as, lettered ease or retirement.

And he, who to the lettered wealth

Of ages adds the fore unpriced.

Waltier, Last Walk in Autumn.

3. In zoöl. and bot., marked as if with letters; having spots which look like letters, or make the surface seem to be written over: as, the lettered tortoise (Emys scripta); the lettered chinamark (Diasemia literalis, a small brown British moth).

letterer (let'ér-ér), n. One who letters; one who marks or cuts the letters of an inscription, a title, or the like: as, a book-letterer.

letter-file (let'ér-fil), n. A device for holding letters for reference. It may be a rod or pointed hook of metal mounted on a stand, or a clip, case, box, or folio, with or without some arrangement to facilitate reference.

letter-founder (let'ér-foun'dér), n. Same as type-founder.

Our printing-house often wanted sorts, and there was no letter-founder in America. Franklin, Autobiog., p. 159.

letter-founding (let'ér-foun'ding), n. Same as type-founding.

letter-foundry (let'ér-foun'dri), n. Same as type-foundry.

letter-head (let'ér-hed), n. 1. A printed form of address or advertisement at the head of a sheet of letter-paper. Also called letter-heading.—2. A sheet of letter-paper so headed.

He drew up a note upon the "tavern" letter-head.

Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 649.

letter-heading (let'ér-hed'ing), n. Same as letter-head, 1.

lettering (let'ér-ing), n. [Verbal n. of *letter*³, r.] 1. The act of stamping or marking with letters.—2. The letters impressed or marked upon anything; any inscription, as on a sign-board, coin, or tombstone.

lettering-box (let'ér-ing-boks), n. A small case in which are kept the types used by bookbinders for lettering books.

lettering-tool (let'ér-ing-töl), n. In bookbinding, a small box of brass mounted on a handle of wood, in which types are fastened by means of a side-screw, used by the finisher in the lettering of books.

letterize (let'er-iz), v. i.; pret. and pp. letterized, ppr. letterizing. [< letter³ + -ize.] To write letters or epistles. Lamb. [Rare.]

letterleaf (let'er-léf), n. An orchid of the genus Grammatophyllum: so named from its figured leaves. Also called letter-plant.

letterless (let'er-les), a. [< letter³ + -less.] Unlettered; illiterate; not learned.

A meer daring letterless commander can, in a rational way, promise himself no more success in his enterprise than a mastiff can in his contest with a lion.

Waterhouse, Apology (1853), p. 125.

There was an illiterate generation, and a letterless race to be educated. The Century, XXVIII, 157.

letter-lichen (let'er-li'ken), n. A lichen of the genus Opographa. The apothecium assumes irregularly stellate or radiate forms, suggesting written characters. Also called scripture-wort.

letterling (let'er-ling), n. [< letter³ + -ling¹.] A little letter. Imp. Dict.

letter-lock (let'er-lok), n. A form of permutation-lock, in which the combinations are indicated by particular arrangements of pieces marked with letters.

lettern (let'ern), n. See lectern.

letter-name (let'er-nám), n. In musical notation, the alphabetic name or symbol of tones, of keys of the keyboard, of degrees of the staff, or of notes placed upon such degrees and representing such tones or keys. See keyboard, notation, staff. Also letter.

letter-office (let'er-of'is), n. A place for the deposit and distribution of letters; a post-office.

letteroni, n. An obsolete form of lectern.

letter-ornament (let'er-ór-ná-ment), n. A decoration made up of the forms of letters. In some letter-ornaments the letters are complete and legible, and usually, though not necessarily, forming words, as is common in Russian art and in modern art of the Levant, as on metal-work. In others the letters are modified or wholly changed for decorative effect, or parts only of the letters are given, as sometimes in Byzantine art and in European imitations of it, and also in early northern decoration, Anglo-Saxon, etc.

letter-paper (let'er-pá'pér), n. Paper for writing letters on; specifically, paper of an intermediate size between note-paper and foolscap, usually quarto, as distinguished from the octavo form of note-paper.

letter-perfect (let'er-pér'fékt), a. Perfect to the letter in committing anything to memory; having a part or a speech thoroughly memorized: used especially of actors.

letter-plant (let'er-plant), n. Same as letter-leaf.

letterpress (let'er-pres), n. and a. [< letter³, type, + press¹, print.] I. n. Letters or words impressed on paper or other material from printing-types; printed text: so called when subordinate to or in contrast with illustrations.

The letterpress with which the illustration is accompanied is no less interesting than the plate, and furnishes much valuable information. N. and Q., 7th ser., II, 360.

II. a. Consisting of, relating to, or employed in printing from types: as, letterpress printing.

letter-press (let'er-pres), n. [< letter³, a writing, + press¹, printing-machine.] A press for copying letters by transfer; a copying-press.

letter-punch (let'er-punch), n. A steel punch on the end of which a letter is engraved. Such punches are used for making matrices for printing-type, as well as for making an impression on metal, etc., when applied against the surface and struck with a hammer.

letter-rack (let'er-rak), n. 1. A tray divided into small compartments in which large types of wood are ranged.—2. A rack or small frame, usually ornamented, in which letters, arranged as answered and unanswered or otherwise, are kept.

letter-scale (let'er-skāl), n. Same as letter-balance.

letter-stamp (let'er-stamp), n. A stamp used in a post-office for canceling postage-stamps, or for stamping on letters or packages various notices or remarks, such as the place of mailing, instructions for the carrier, etc.

letterure, letturure, n. [ME., < OF. letterure, lettrure, letreüre, < L. litteratura, literatura, learning, letters, literature: see literature.] 1. Learning; letters; literature.

Al conne he letterure or conne he noon,
As in effect he shal fynde it al oon.

Chaucer, Prolog to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 293.

2. Writing; scripture.

"Lo!" seith holy letterure, "whiche lordes beth this shrewes!" Piers Plowman (B), x, 27.

letter-winged (let'er-wingd), a. Having the wings marked as if with letters: specifically said of a kite, Elanus scriptus. P. L. Selater.

letter-wood (let'er-wúd), n. The heart-wood of the South American tree Brosimum Aubletii. It is extremely hard, of a beautiful brown color with black spots, which have been compared to hieroglyphs; hence the name, which is also applied to the tree. Being rare and costly, the wood is used in cabinet-work for veneering only.

letter-writer (let'er-rí'tér), n. 1. One who writes letters; specifically, one whose profession it is to write letters for others.

The same desire impels thousands of people to write letters to the newspapers; but these letter-writers are not usually journalists. Athenæum, Jan. 14, 1883, p. 43.

2. A book containing rules and examples for the use of persons unskilled in the writing of letters.

Lettic (let'ik), a. and n. [< Lett + -ic.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Letts or their congeners; related to the Letts: as, the Lettic language; the Samogitians are a Lettic people. Lettic race is a general term for the Letts, Lithuanians, and Berussians or Old Prussians.

II. n. Same as Lettish.

lettice¹, n. An obsolete spelling of lettuce.

lettice², n. An obsolete form of lattice.

lettice³ (let'is), n. [Early mod. E. also lettice; < OF. letice, letisse, laitice, an animal of a very white color, supposed to be an ermine, also a white fur, < F. lait, < L. lac (lact-), milk: see lettuce.] A kind of fur, white or very light-colored, in use as late as the middle of the sixteenth century.

You shall charge your selmes with many [furs], . . . as good martens, miniuers, otherwise called Lettis.

Hakluyt's Voyages, l. 298.

lettice-cap¹, n. [Perhaps < lettice² + cap¹, in allusion to lettice-cap².] A soporific in which lettuce is supposed to have been a leading ingredient.

Bring in the lettice-cap. You must he shaved, sir; And then how suddenly we'll make you sleep!

Pletcher, Monsieur Thomas, lii, 1.

lettice-cap², n. [< lettice² (?) = lattice (see quot. from Nares), or lettice³, + cap¹.] A kind of cap.

A lettice-cap it wears and beard not short.

Shippe of Safegarde (1569).

A lettice-cap was originally a lattice-cap—that is, a net cap which resembles lattice work.

Nares.

Lettish (let'ish), a. and n. [< Lett + -ish¹.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the division of the Lettic or Lithuanian race distinctively called Letts: as, the Lettish language; Lettish customs.

II. n. The language spoken by the Letts, a branch of the Indo-European family, closely related to Slavonian or Slavic. Also Lettic.

lettre-de-cachet (let'r-dé-ka-shā'), n. [Fr.: lettre, letter; de, of; cachet, seal: see letter³, de², cachet.] See cachet.

letturure, n. See letterure.

Lettsonia (let-sō'mi-ā), n. [NL. (W. Roxburgh, 1824), named after J. C. Lettson, an English naturalist.] A genus of plants of the tribe Convolvuleæ, distinguished by the fruit, which is a soft, several-seeded berry. There are 32 species, found in eastern India, southern China, and the Malay archipelago, twining or climbing vines with alternate leaves and dense corymbose cymes in the axils. Some of the species are used medicinally. L. grandiflora is an evergreen shrub cultivated in greenhouses under the name of Lettson's tea-plant.

lettsonite (let'som-ít), n. [After W. G. Lettson, an English mineralogist.] A basic sulphate of copper, of a bright-blue color: same as cyanotrichite.

lettuce (let'is), n. [Early mod. E. also lettice; *< ME. letuce, < OF. laituce, letuce, usually laitue, letue, F. laitue (> D. latuw) = Sp. lechuga = It. lattuga = AS. lactuce = OHG. latuh, lattouch, lotoch, latohha, MHG. lateche, latech, latech, G. lattich = Sw. Dan. laktuk, < L. lactuca, lettuce, so called from its milky juice, < lac (lact-), milk: see lactate.] 1. A garden-herb, Lactuca sativa, a hardy annual, extensively cultivated for use as a salad. It is believed by some to be derived from L. Scariola (including L. virosa). There are many varieties of the garden-plant, which may be grouped as cabbage-lettuces, low forms with depressed cabbage-like heads, and Cos lettuces, erect-growing varieties having the head long and tapering downward.

The bason then being brought up to the bishop, he often dipped a large lettuce into it, and several times sprinkled all the people. Pococke, Description of the East, II, l. 18.

These are creeping Lettuces of a very milky Juice, like their Name. N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, l. 302.

Lettuce of lac derived is perchance;
ffor mylk it hath or yeveth abundance.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 51.

2. Any plant of the genus Lactuca; also, a plant having some resemblance to Lactuca.—Blue lettuce, a plant of the section Mulgedium of the genus Lactuca, with blue flowers. [U. S.]—Cabbage-lettuce, Cos lettuce. See def. 1.—Drumhead lettuce, a variety of cabbage-lettuce.—False lettuce. Same as blue lettuce.—Frog's lettuce, a species of pondweed, Potamogeton densus. [Prov. Eng.]—Garden-lettuce. See def. 1.—Indian lettuce, the American columbo, Frasera Carolinensis; also, the false wintergreen, Pyrrola rotundifolia.—Lamb's lettuce, corn-salad, Valerianella (which see).—Loafed lettuce. See loaf¹.—Prickly lettuce, Lactuca Scariola.—Sea-lettuce, the seaweed Ulva Lactuca. Also called lettuce-laver. [Eng.]—Wall-lettuce, Lactuca muralis. [Eng.]—Water-lettuce, Pistia Stratiotes of the tropics.—White lettuce, Prenanthes alba or kindred species. Also called lion's-foot, rattlesnake-root, etc.—Wild lettuce. (a) In England, Lactuca Scariola. (b) In America, Lactuca Canadensis. Also called trumpetweed and trumpet-milkweed. (c) Sometimes the same as blue lettuce.

lettuce-bird (let'is-bérd), n. The thistle-bird or common American goldfinch, Chrysomitris tristis. [Local, U. S.]

lettuce-opium (let'is-ō'pi-um), n. Lactucarium.

lettuce-saxifrage (let'is-sak'si-frāj), n. A plant of the Alleghany mountains, Saxifraga erosa, the leaves of which have sharply crose teeth.

letuary, n. See electuary.

let-up (let'up), n. [< let up, verb phrase under let¹, v.] A cessation of restraint or obstruction; release; relaxation; intermission, as of labor. [Colloq., U. S.]

Our little let-up Wednesday afternoons . . . is sure to come, while the let-ups we get other days, . . . you can't be sure whether you're going to get them or not.

The Century, XXVIII, 588.

leu (lā), n.; pl. lei (lē). [Rumanian.] A modern silver coin of Rumania, the unit of the monetary system, equivalent to the French franc, or about 19 United States cents.

Leucadendron (lū-ka-den'drŏn), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1809), irreg. < Gr. λευκός, white, + δένδρον, a tree.] A genus of plants of the order Proteaceæ and tribe Proteeæ, distinguished by having the regular dioecious flowers in heads in both sexes. There are about 70 species, shrubs and trees, natives of South Africa. L. argenteum, the silver-tree or witteboom, is native only on a slope of the Table Mountain near Cape Town, and has been nearly exterminated for fuel. Its white silvery leaves make it highly ornamental, and they are much used in Christmas decorations. Other species also are cultivated.

leucæmia, leucæmic. See leucemia, leucemic.

Leucania (lū-kā-nī-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white: see leucous.] A genus of noctuid moths founded by Hübner in 1816. It is characterized by full hairy eyes, smooth front, well-developed palpi, strong tongue, simple antennæ, hairy unarmed legs, rounded collar, quadrate slightly tufted thorax, and untufted abdomen. L. unipuncta is the adult of the well-known army-worm (which see). L. albilinea is the adult of the wheat-head army-worm, an insect which occasionally appears in great numbers and feeds upon heads of wheat and rye. There are two annual generations, and the insect hibernates as pupa underground.

Leucaniidæ (lū-kā-nī-ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leucania + -idæ.] A group of noctuid moths, represented by the genus Leucania, and regarded as a family. There are about 20 genera, widely distributed. Also called Leucanidæ.

leucaniline (lū-kan'i-lin), n. [< Gr. λευκός, white, + E. aniline.] A white crystalline substance (C₂₀H₂₁N₃) forming colorless salts, prepared by treating fuchsine salts with zinc-dust and hydrochloric acid. It yields rosaniline by oxidation.

Leucanthemum (lū-kān'thō-mum), n. [L., also leucanthemis, < Gr. λευκάνθημον, the camomile, < λευκός, white, + άνθημον, flower.] A section of the genus Chrysanthemum, embracing the species C. Leucanthemum (Leucanthemum vulgare), the oxeye daisy or whiteweed. It was retained as a genus by A. P. de Candolle (1837), with 20 species.

leucanthous (lū-kān'thus), a. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + άνθος, flower.] In bot., having white flowers.

Leucaster (lū-kas'tēr), n. [NL. (J. D. Choisy, 1849), < Gr. λευκός, white, + αστήρ, a star.] A genus of plants belonging to the family Nyctaginaceae and type of the tribe Leucastereae, distinguished by having but two stamens. The only species, L. caniflorus, is a native of Brazil, and is a half-twining shrub with entire alternate leaves, and white flowers in axillary cymes.

Leucastereae (lū-kas-tō'rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1880), < Leucaster + -ae.] A tribe of plants of the order Nyctagineae, distinguished by a subglobose achenium, which is free and inclosed by the base of the perianth, and a short curved or annular embryo. It includes the genera Leucaster (type of the tribe), Andradea, and Cryphaocarpus, tropical American trees or shrubs with alternate leaves.

leucaugite (lū-kā'jīt), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, bright, light, white, + αὐγίτης, see augite.] An aluminous variety of pyroxene, allied to augite, but containing very little iron, and hence of a white or grayish color.

leucemia, leucæmia (lū-sē'mi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + αἷμα, blood.] A disease characterized by a large excess of the white corpuscles of the blood, with hypertrophy of the spleen or the lymphatic glands, or changes in the bone-marrow. It is usually fatal. Also called leucocythemia.

leucemic, leucæmic (lū-sē'mik), a. [L., < leucemia + -ic.] Pertaining to or affected with leucemia.

With one exception, that of leucæmic blood (Scherer), no gluten has as yet been found in the fluids of the body. Frey, Histol. and Histochem. (trans.), p. 22.

leuch (lyō'h). A Scotch preterit of laugh.

leuchtenbergite (loiēh'ten-bērg-it), n. [Named after the duke Maximilian von Leuchtenberg.] A kind of chlorite of a white or greenish-white color, occurring in hexagonal plates or crystals.

leucin (lū'siu), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + -in.] A white pulverulent substance, amido-caproic acid (C₉H₁₁O₂NH₂), obtained by treating muscular fiber with sulphuric acid, and afterward with alcohol. It crystallizes in shining scales. It is one of the principal products of the decomposition of nitrogenous matter, and occurs normally in various tissues and fluids of the body, being also a product of the pancreatic digestion of the proteids. Also called aposepidin.

leucisciform (lū-sis'i-fōrm), a. [L., < NL. Leuciscus + L. forma, form.] Having the form of a fish of the genus Leuciscus; resembling a dace.

Leuciscina (lū-si-si'nā), n. pl. [NL., < Leuciscus + -ina.] In Günther's ichthyological system, the eighth group of Cyprinidae. They have the air-bladder divided into anterior and posterior portions; pharyngeal teeth developed in single or double series; the anal fin short or of moderate length (not extending forward to below the dorsal), with from 8 to 11 branched rays; the lateral line when complete running in or nearly in the middle of the tail; and the dorsal fin short, without osseous ray. The species are very numerous, and include the majority of the most familiar European and North American cyprinoid fishes, as the dace and roach.

Leuciscinae (lū-si-si'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Leuciscus + -inae.] In Jordan's ichthyological system, a subfamily of Cyprinidae, with the air-bladder next to the roof of the abdominal cavity, the dorsal fin short, median, and spineless, and the lower jaw normal. It embraces partly or wholly the Leuciscina and Abramidina of Günther; and by far the greater portion of the American as well as Eurasiatic cyprinoids belong to it.

leuciscine (lū'si-sin), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Leuciscinae, or having their characters; leucisciform.

II. n. One of the Leuciscina or Leuciscinae. Leuciscus (lū-sis'kus), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκίσκος, the white mullet, < λευκός, white: see leucous.] A genus of cyprinoid fishes to which various limits have been assigned, typical of the subfamily Leuciscinae. L. rutilus is the European roach. See ent under dace.

leucism (lū'sizm), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white: see leucous and -ism.] In zool., whiteness resulting from lack or loss of coloring; albinism, partial or complete: a technical term, correlated with melanism and crythrism. See albinism.

leucite (lū'sit), n. [So called from its whiteness; < Gr. λευκός, white, + -ite.] A mineral originally found in the recent volcanic rocks of southern Italy, especially at Vesuvius, disseminated through the lavas in crystals, usually trapezohedrons, or in irregular masses. It has also been observed similarly associated in some other regions, as the Eifel in Rhenish Prussia, the Leucite Hills of Wyoming, etc.; but it is in general of very limited occurrence. It is a silicate of aluminum and potassium, and has a white or grayish color. It was very early called white garnet, from its similarity to garnet in crystalline form; and it is also called amphigene. Leucite has excited much interest because of the phenomenon of double refraction which its crystals exhibit, this being at variance with the usually accepted isometric form. On account of these "optical anomalies," and because also of certain variations in external form, it has been referred to the tetragonal (or orthorhombic) system. Recent investigations have shown, however, that at a temperature of 500° C. it becomes isotropic, and hence it is inferred that when formed it was normally isometric, and that the observed variations in form and optical character have resulted from subsequent molecular changes.—Leucite rocks, a series of rocks closely allied to basalt, but containing leucite in the place of feldspar. These rocks are for the most part, so far as known, of very modern origin. They are particularly well developed in southern Italy and the Eifel. See leucitophyre, phonolite, and tephrite.

leucite-basalt (lū'sit-bā-sālt'), n. A rock closely resembling leucitophyre, but less coarsely granular in texture. Rosenbusch divides the leucite rocks into leucite-basalts and leucitites, the chief difference being that the former contain olivine, while the latter do not.

leucitic (lū-sit'ik), a. [L., < leucite + -ic.] Of or pertaining to leucite; containing or resembling leucite.

leucitite (lū'si-tīt), n. [L., < leucite + -ite.] The name given by Rosenbusch to varieties of leucite rock containing no olivine. Rocks of this type have been found in various parts of Italy, in the Cordilleran regions of the United States, and in the East Indies. Their composition is extremely variable, and they have not yet been fully worked out.

leucitoid (lū'si-tōid), n. [L., < leucite + Gr. εἶδος, form: see -oid.] In crystal., a tetragonal trisectahedron, or trapezohedron: so called as being a common form of the mineral leucite.

leucitophyre (lū-sit'ō-fir), n. [L., < leucite + Gr. φῑρεν, mix.] A crystalline-granular rock, differing from ordinary basalt chiefly in the presence of considerable leucite. The essential ingredients of leucitophyre are leucite, augite, olivine, and magnetite, the crystals of the first-named being sometimes as much as an inch in diameter.

leucoblast (lū'kō-blāst), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + βλαστός, germ: see blastus.] A germinal leucocyte, or the germ of a leucocyte.

leucocarpous (lū'kō-kār'pus), a. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + καρπός, fruit.] Having white fruit.

leucocholyt (lū'kō-kol-i), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + χολή, bile: see cholict. Cf. melancholy.] "White bile": a nonce-word, opposed to melancholy, "black bile."

Mine . . . is a white Melancholy, or rather Leucocholy for the most part; which, though it seldom laughs or dances, nor ever amounts to what one calls Joy or Pleasure, yet is a good easy sort of a state. Gray, Letters, I. 113.

Leucocoryne (lū'kō-kōr'i-nē), n. [NL. (Lindley, 1839), in allusion to the white flowers of some species, mounted on scapes; < Gr. λευκός, white, + κορυνή, a club.] A genus of liliaceous plants of Chili, of the tribe Allieae, or onion family. Three or four species are known, having narrowly linear, channeled, radical leaves, and simple leafless scapes bearing few white or blue flowers in terminal umbels. They are called white club-flowers.

leucocyte (lū'kō-sīt), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + κύτος, a hollow.] A white or colorless corpuscle of the blood or lymph.

leucocythemia, leucocythæmia (lū'kō-si-thō'mi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + κύτος, a hollow, + αἷμα, blood.] Same as leucemia.

leucocytic (lū'kō-sit'ik), a. [L., < leucocyte + -ic.] 1. Pertaining to leucocytes.—2. Pertaining to an excess of leucocytes; leucemic.

leucocytogenesis (lū'kō-si-tō-jen'e-sis), n. [NL., < leucocyte + Gr. γένεσις, production: see genesis.] The production of leucocytes, or white blood-corpuscles.

leucocytosis (lū'kō-si-tō'sis), n. [NL., < leucocyte + -osis.] The presence of an excessive number of white corpuscles in the blood, especially when merely the result of temporary causes and not produced by grave disease.

leucodermia (lū'kō-dēr'mi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + δέρμα, skin: see derm.] Abnormal lack of pigment in the skin. Also written leucoderma, leukoderma, leukodermia.—Leucodermia acquisita, vitiligo.—Congenital leucodermia, albinism.

leucodermic (lū'kō-dēr'mik), a. [As leucodermia + -ic.] Pertaining to or exhibiting leucodermia.

leucethiop (lū-sē'thi-op), n. Same as leucoethiops.

leucoethiop (lū'kō-ē'thi-op), n. [Also leucoethiop; < leucoethiops.] Same as leucoethiops.

leucoethiopic (lū'kō-ē-thi-op'ik), a. [L., < leucoethiops + -ic.] Pertaining to a leucoethiops or albino; pertaining to leucopathy.

leucoethiops (lū'kō-ē'thi-ops), n.; pl. leucoethiopes (lū'kō-ē-thi'ō-pēs). [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + Αἰθιοψ, an Ethiop, a negro: see Ethiops, Ethiop.] An individual of a dark-skinned race exhibiting albinism or a want of coloring matter in the skin and epidermic formations.

leucoindophenol (lū'kō-in-dō-fē'nol), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + E. indophenol.] Indophenol which has been reduced by glucose and caustic soda. It is a commercial article, forming a white paste soluble in pure and in acidified water. It is used in dyeing indigo-blue shades. Sometimes called indophenol white, or indophenol preparation.

Leucium (lū'kō'i-um), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < L. leucium, < Gr. λευκίον, name of several plants, the wallflower, snowflake, etc., lit. 'white violet,' < λευκός, white, + ἰον, violet.] A genus of plants of the family Amaryllidaceae and tribe Amarylleeae, distinguished by the long filaments and the equal segments of the perianth. There are 9 species. L. aestivum is the summer snowflake, and L. verinum, a smaller and earlier plant, the spring snowflake.

leucol (lū'kol), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + -ol.] An organic base obtained from coal-tar, isomeric with chinoline.

leucoline (lū'kō-lin), n. Same as leucol.

leucoma (lū'kō'mā), n. [NL., < Gr. λεῖκομα, a white spot in the eye, < λευκός, whiten, < λευκός, white: see leucous.] In pathol., a white opacity of the cornea of the eye, the result of inflammation. Also called albugo.

leucomaine (lū'kō-mān), n. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + E. (ptomaine).] A nitrogenous organic base or alkaloid produced in living animal tissues as a result of their activity; distinguished from a ptomaine, which is an alkaloid produced in the putrefactive decay of a dead tissue.

leucomatous (lū-kōm'ā-tus), a. [L., < NL. leucoma(t) + -ous.] Pertaining to or exhibiting leucoma.

leucomelanous (lū'kō-mel'ā-nus), a. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + μέλας (μελαν), black.] Having a fair complexion with dark hair.

Leuconaria (lū'kō-nā'ri-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Leucon(es) + -aria.] In Sollas's classification of sponges, a tribe of heterocæalous Calcispongiae, embracing recent and fossil forms whose canal system is of the eurypylous rhagonate type, divided into two families, Leuconidae and Filhardidae.

leuconate (lū'kō-nāt), a. [L., < Leucon(es) + -ate.] Pertaining to the Leucones, or having their characters; as, a leuconate canal system; leuconate type of structure.

Leucones (lū'kō-nēs), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white: see leucous.] A group of the chalk-sponges, or Calcispongiae, characterized first by great thickening of the ectodermal syncytium, so that the inhalent pores, such as exist in Ascones, lengthen into canals which may variously branch and anastomose, and secondly by final restriction to these canals of the endodermal cells, which at first form a continuous layer.

leucopathia (lū'kō-pā'thi-ā), n. [NL.: see leucopathy.] Same as leucopathy.

leucopathy (lū'kō-pā'thi), n. [L., < NL. leucopathia, < Gr. λευκός, white, + πάθος, affection: see pathos.] 1. The condition of being an albino; albinism.—2. Same as chlorosis.

leucophane (lū'kō-fān), n. [L., < MGr. λευκοφανής, appearing white, < Gr. λευκός, white, + φανής, < φαίνεσθαι, appear.] An imperfectly crystallized mineral, of a pale greenish or wine-yellow color. It is a fluosilicate of beryllium, calcium, and sodium, and is found in Norway. Also called leucophanite.

Leucophasia (lū'kō-fā'si-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + φάσις, appearance: see phase.] A genus of pierian butterflies of the family Papilionidae. Also called Leptidea. L. sinapis is a British species.

leucophilous (lū'kō-fī'i-lus), a. [L., < Gr. λευκός, white, + φίλος, loving.] Fond of light; light-loving; heliophilous.

leucophlegmacy (lū'kō-fleg'mā-si), n. [L., < Gr. λευκοφλεγματία (also λευκόν φλέγμα), the dropsy, < λευκοφλέγματος, suffering from white phlegm, < λευκός, white, + φλέγμα, phlegm: see phlegm.] In pathol., an inferred tendency to a dropsical state, as indicated by paleness, flabbiness, or redundancy of serum in the blood.

leucophlegmatic (lū'kō-fleg-mat'ik), a. [L., < Gr. λευκοφλέγματος, suffering from white phlegm:

see leucophlegmacy.] Of, pertaining to, or affected with leucophlegmacy.

leucophyll, leucophyll (lū'kō-fil'), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + φύλλον, leaf.] A chromogen believed to exist in the white corpuscles of an etiolated plant, which, under appropriate conditions, will give rise to chlorophyll. Sachs.

Leucophyllea (lū-kō-fil'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Benth and Hooker, 1876), < Leucophyllum + -ea.] A tribe of scrophulariaceous plants, typified by the genus Leucophyllum, and embracing also the genera Heteranthia and Ghiesbreghtia. They are herbs and shrubs of Texas, Mexico, and Brazil, with alternate leaves and bell-shaped corollas with the tube short.

Leucophyllum (lū-kō-fil'um), n. [NL. (Humboldt and Bonpland, 1809), < Gr. λευκός, white, + φύλλον, leaf.] A genus of plants of the family Scrophulariaceae, type of the Leucophyllea.

leucoplasia (lū-kō-plā'si-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + πλάσις, anything flat and broad.] In pathol., the occurrence of chronic white patches on the tongue and buccal mucous membrane. There is inflammation of the corium, with hypertrophy and perversion of growth of the epithelium. Also called ichthyosis lingua, tylosis lingua, and psoriasis lingua.

leucoplast, leucoplastid (lū'kō-plast, lū-kō-plas'tid), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + πλαστός, verbal adj. of πλάσσειν, form.] Same as amyloplast.

leucopterous (lū-kop'te-rus), a. [Gr. λευκός, white, + πτερόν, a wing, = E. feather.] Having white wings. Thomas, Med. Diet.

leucopyrite (lū-kō-pi'rit), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + E. pyrites.] A mineral (Fe₃As₄) of a color between white and steel-gray and of a metallic luster, consisting chiefly of arsenic and iron. It is related to loellingite (FeAs₂) and arsenopyrite (FeAs or FeAs₂, FeS₂).

Leucorhamphus (lū-kō-ram'fus), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + ῥάμφος, beak, bill.] A genus of toothed cetaceans, of the family Delphinidae, having no dorsal fin. These dolphins have hence been called Delphinapterus, but that name belongs to another genus. There are two species; L. peroni of the western coast of South America, black above and white below, with 44 teeth on each side of each jaw; and L. borealis of the same coast of North America, called the right-whale dolphin. See Delphinapterus, Delphinus.

leucorrhœa, leucorrhœa (lū-kō-rē'ā), n. [NL. leucorrhœa, < Gr. λευκός, white, + ῥοία, a flowing, < ῥέω, flow.] In pathol., a mucous or mucopurulent discharge of a white color from the vagina; fluor albus; the whites. Also called blemnellyria and colporrhœa.

leucorrhœal, leucorrhœal (lū-kō-rē'al), a. [Gr. λευκός, white, + ῥοία, a flowing, < ῥέω, flow.] In pathol., pertaining to or of the nature of leucorrhœa: as, leucorrhœal discharges.

leucoscope (lū'kō-skōp), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An optical instrument for testing the eyes for color-blindness, devised by Helmholtz.

Leucosia (lū-kō'si-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, whiteness: see leucosis.] 1. The typical genus of Leucosiidae. Fabricius, 1798. — 2. A genus of mollusks. — 3. A genus of bombycid moths of the family Liparidae, based upon the European L. salicis. Rambur, 1869.

leucosian (lū-kō'si-an), n. and a. [Gr. λευκός, white, + ἄν, a.] 1. n. A crab of the family Leucosiidae. 2. a. Resembling or related to crabs of the genus Leucosia; pertaining to the Leucosiidae.

Leucosiidae (lū-kō-si'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Leucosia + -idae.] A family of brachyurous decapod crustaceans, typified by the genus Leucosia, containing a number of genera of small crabs of compact rounded form and more or less porcellaneous test. Also Leucosiada.

leucosis (lū-kō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, whiteness, < λευκός, white, < λευκός, white: see leucous.] 1. Whiteness of skin; pallor. — 2. The formation or progress of leucoma.

leucospermous (lū-kō-spēr'mus), a. [Gr. λευκός, white, + σπέρμα, seed.] Having white fruit or seeds.

Leucospori (lū-kō-spō'ri), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λευκός, white, + σπόρος, seed.] A series of fungi in the large genus Agaricus, distinguished by their white spores.

Leucosticte (lū-kō-stik'tē), n. [NL. (Swainson, 1831), < Gr. λευκός, white, + στικτός, pricked, punctured, spotted, < στίξω, prick, puncture: see stigma.] A notable genus of fringilline birds, having an oblique ridge on the under mandible, and the plumage more or less rosy or silvery-gray. There are several species, chiefly of western North America, known as rosy finches. The best-known is L. tephrocotis, which is of a rich chocolate-brown color, much of the plumage skirted with a rosy tint, the ears silvery-gray, and the cap black. Its length is about 6½ inches.

leucostine (lū-kō'stin), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + στήν(ων), bone (?), + -ine.] A variety of trachyte.

Leucothoë (lū-kōth'ō-ē), n. [NL. (D. Don, 1834), < L. Leucothoë, < Gr. *Λευκοθήη, daughter of Orchemus, King of Babylon, and Eurynome.] A genus of ericaceous plants of the tribe Andromedaceae. The imbricated calyx does not become berry-like in the fruit, and the seeds are winged. There are about 9 species, shrubs with petioled, serrulate leaves and axillary or terminal spiked racemes of white waxy flowers gracefully arranged along the under side of the branches, natives of North America, Japan, and the Himalayas. Some of the species are ornamental, and known in gardens. L. acuminata of the South Carolina and Florida coast is called princewood. According to Schimper, 30 fossil species of Leucothoë occur in the Tertiary deposits of Europe, one in the Alciocene of Alaska, and one in the Dakota group (Middle Cretaceous) of Nebraska.

leucous (lū'kus), a. [Gr. λευκός, light, bright, white, akin to L. lucere, be light, and to E. light, q. v.] Light-colored; white; affected with leucism; albinotic: applied specifically to albinos.

leucoxene (lū'kok-sēn), n. [Gr. λευκός, white, + ξένος, a guest.] An opaque white substance often observed in thin sections of rocks, derived from the alteration of titanic iron. It is, sometimes at least, identical with titanite in composition.

leudt, leudet, a. Middle English forms of lewd.

leugh (lyuch or lyöch). A dialectal (Scotch) preterit of laugh.

leuke, a. An obsolete spelling of *lake*¹.

leukoderma, leukodermia, n. See leucodermia.

leunt, v. A Middle English form of lion.

leuset, v. An obsolete irregular spelling of loose. Elyot.

leuter, leuteet, n. Middle English forms of leatty.

leuzerit, n. A variant of *levernit*².

Lev. An abbreviation of Leviticus.

levant¹ (lev'ant), a. and n. [OF. levant, F. levant, a., rising, < L. levan(t)-, ppr. of levare, raise, refl. sc. levare, rise, < levis, light, not heavy (whence also ult. E. *lever*¹, levity, *levce*¹, *levce*², *levy*¹, *levy*², alleviate, *allege*², elevate, releasant, releive, relief, etc.), akin to *E. light*², q. v. Hence *levant*², *levant*³.] 1. a. 1. Rising. Minshew, 1617; Phillips, 1706. — 2. a. Eastern; coming from the direction in which the sun rises.

Forth rush the Levant and the Ponent winds, Eurus and Zephyr. Milton, P. L., x. 704.

3. [cap.] In geol., appellative of the fourth of Professor H. Rogers's fifteen divisions of the Paleozoic strata in the Appalachian chain, the names of which suggest metaphorically the different natural periods of the day. It is the equivalent of the lower part of the Upper Silurian, and represents the Onelia conglomerate and Medina sandstone of the New York Survey. See Medina sandstone, under sandstone. — Levant and couchant, in law. See couchant.

II. n. Same as lavant. [Local, Eng.]

levant² (lē-vant'), n. and a. [= D. levant = G. levant = Dan. Sw. levant, < F. levant = Sp. Pg. It. levante, < ML. levant(t)-, the sunrise, the east, the orient, prop. adj., rising, applied to the sun: see *levant*¹.] 1. n. 1. [cap.] The region east of Italy lying on and near the Mediterranean, sometimes reckoned as extending east to the Euphrates and as taking in the Nile valley, thus including Greece and Egypt; more specifically, the coast-region and islands of Asia Minor and Syria: a name originally given by the Italians. — 2. An easterly wind blowing up the Mediterranean; a levanter.

The Maestrale, the Bora, the Gregala, and the Levante, are polar currents (of wind) — the first about north-west, the second north, and the other two with more or less easterly.

Fitz Roy, Weather Book, p. 141.

3. Same as levant morocco. — Cloth of Levant¹, a cosmetic used by ladies in the sixteenth century. Nares.

To make a kind of . . . cloth of Levant, wherewith women do use to colour their face. Secretes of Alezis.

II. a. Of or pertaining to or obtained from the Levant. — Levant fever. See *fever*¹. — Levant morocco, in bookbinding, morocco of superior quality, having a large and prominent grain. It was originally made in the Levant, from the skins of Angora goats.

levant³ (lē-vant'), v. [Sp. levantar, raise, move, remove (levantar la casa, break up house, levantar el campo, break up camp), < levar, lievar, now llevar, raise, carry, < L. levare, raise: see *levant*¹, n.] 1. intrans. To run away; de-camp.

When he found she'd levanted, the Count of Alsace
At first turned remarkably red in the face.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 244.

II. trans. Used only in the imperative, in the exclamatory phrase levant me, a mild imprecation much like blow me! [Low.]

levator
Levant me, but he got enough last night to purchase a principality amongst his countrymen. Foote, The Minor, I.

levant³ (lē-vant'), n. [Gr. *levant*³, v.] A bet made by one who expects to evade paying if he loses. — To throw or run a levant, to bet without intention to pay. [Slang.]

Crowd to the hazard table, throw a familiar levant upon some sharp lurching man of quality, and, if he demands his money, turn it off with a loud laugh.
Cibber, Provoked Husband, I. (Davies).

levanter¹ (lē-van'tēr), n. [Gr. *levant*², n., + *-er*².] An easterly wind blowing up the Mediterranean from the direction of the Levant.

Let them not break prison to burst like a levanter, to sweep the earth with their hurricane.
Burke, Rev. in France.

levanter² (lē-van'tēr), n. [Gr. *levant*³, v., + *-er*¹.] 1. One who levants; one who runs away disgracefully. Specifically — 2. One who bets at a horse-race, and runs away without paying the wager lost. [Slang in both senses.]

levantine (lev'an-tin or lē-van'tin), a. and n. [= F. levantin (= Pg. Sp. It. levantino), pertaining to the Levant (fem. levantine, a silk cloth), < levant, the Levant: see *levant*², n.] 1. a. 1. Eastern; Oriental.

They (the seeds of Platanus) should be gathered late in Autumn, and brought us from some more levantine parts than Italy.
Evelyn, Sylva, xxii.

2. [cap.] Of or pertaining to the Levant. — 3. Designating a particular kind of silk cloth. See II., 3.

II. n. 1. [cap.] A native or an inhabitant of the Levant. — 2. [cap.] A vessel belonging to the Levant. — 3. A rich and stout silk material, characterized by having two faces of different colors or shades. Diet. of Needlework.

levari facias (lē-vā'ri fā'shi-as), [L. (NL.), cause to be levied: levari, pass. of levare, raise (see *levy*¹); facias, 2d pers. sing. pres. subj. (with impv. force) of facere, do, cause: see fact.] In law, a writ of execution issued to the sheriff, commanding him to levy the amount of a judgment out of the goods, etc., of the debtor.

levation¹ (lē-vā'shon), n. [= OF. levation = It. levazione, < L. levatio(n)-, a raising, < levare, pp. levatus, raise: see *levant*¹.] The act of raising; elevation; especially, the elevation of the Host.

Kneling, knocking on brestes, and holding vp of handes at the sight of the levation. Sir T. More, Works, p. 890.

By his gesture he will behave himself in such sort as rather shall make men the less to regard the mass, for he will not look up at the levation time, hold up his hands, nor strike his hands on his face.

J. Bradford, Works (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 302.

levator (lē-vā'tor), n.; pl. levatores (lev-ā-tō'rēz). [L., a lifter, < levare, raise: see *levant*¹. Cf. *lever*¹, ult. < L. levator.] 1. In anat., that which raises or elevates, as various muscles of the human body: opposed to depressor. — 2. A surgical instrument used to raise a depressed part of the skull. — Levator anguli oris, the lifter of the angle of the mouth. Also called canine muscle. — Levator anguli scapulae, the lifter of the angle of the scapula: in man, a distinct muscle arising from the cervical region of the spine and inserted into the scapula; in some animals, a part of the serratus magnus, as in the opossum. — Levator ani, the lifter of the anus, a sheet of muscular tissue chiefly forming the floor of the pelvic cavity. — Levator arcuum, in some of the lower vertebrates, as Menobranchius, one of the muscles suspending branchial arches to the parts above them. — Levator claviculae, the lifter of the clavicle, a muscle of many animals, not normally found in man, extending from the occipital bone and attached to the metacromion of the scapula. Also called trachelo-acromiatis. — Levator coccygis, the lifter of the coccyx, a considerable muscle having the office implied in the name, proceeding from the pelvis to the coccyx, and belonging to the general series of extensor muscles of the spine. It is well marked, for example, in birds. — Levatores costarum, twelve muscles on each side of the spine. Each passes from the transverse process of a vertebra to the rib below, being inserted between the tubercle and the angle. They raise the ribs. — Levator glandulae thyroideae, a muscle which occasionally passes from the hyoid bone to the thyroid gland. — Levator humeri proprius, the proper elevator of the humerus, a muscle of some animals, as the dog, resulting from union of fibers of the deltoid and sternomastoid, when the latter coalesces with the trapezius. — Levator labii inferioris, the elevator of the lower lip and chin, causing the lip to protrude, as in peunting. Also called levator menti. — Levator labii superioris, the elevator of the upper lip, exposing the canine teeth, as in grinning. From its action in dogs, it is sometimes called the snarling-muscle. — Levator labii superioris alicue nasi, the lifter of the upper lip and nostril, as in sneering; the sneering-muscle. — Levator menti. Same as levator labii inferioris. — Levator palati, the lifter of the soft palate, bounding the posterior naris externally, arising from the apex of the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and inserted with its fellow into the median line of the palate. — Levator palpebrae superioris, the lifter of the upper eyelid, antagonizing the orbicularis palpebrarum. — Levator propius alicue nasi, the lifter of the nostril; the dilator naris, anterior or posterior. — Levator prostatae, the lifter of the prostate gland, the anterior part of the levator ani, passing from the pubic ramus to the side of the prostate, and thence under the gland to a median raphe in front of the anus.

level. An obsolete variant of *leave*¹, *leave*², leave, *live*¹, and lie.

levecelt, n. A variant of lefoesel.

leveld, a. A Middle English form of leafed.

levedyt, n. A Middle English form of lady.

levee¹ (le-vō' or lev'ē), n. [*< F. levée, a raising, embanking, embankment, a levy (also formerly a rising, as of the sun): see levy*¹, the naturalized form of the word in E.] 1. An embankment on the margin of a river, to confine it within its natural channel: as, the levees of the Mississippi.

On the 15th of November, he had completed in front of New Orleans a levee, of eighteen hundred yards in length, and so broad that its summit measured eighteen feet in width. Gayarré, Hist. Louisiana, I. 382.

Hence—2. A landing-place for vessels; a quay, pier, or landing-stage. [Southern and western U. S. in both senses.]

levee² (le-vē' or lev'ē), v. t. [*< levee*¹, n.] To embank: as, to levee a river. [U. S.]

levee³ (le-vō' or lev'ē), n. [< F. lever (pron. le-vā'), a rising (of the sun), a rising (from bed), a morning reception (on rising), *< lever, raise, roll, rise: see levant*¹. The spelling levee was orig. intended to represent the F. pron. of lever. The word does not come from F. levée, which has not the meaning 'a reception.')] 1. The act or time of rising.

Nothing is more alluring than a Levee from a Couch in some Confusion. Congress, Way of the World, iv. 1.

I set out one morning before five o'clock, . . . and got to the sea-coast time enough to be at the sun's levee. Gray, To Mr. Nicholls.

2. A morning reception held by a prince or great personage; a morning assembly. The term is chiefly applied in Great Britain to the stated public occasions on which the sovereign receives such persons as are entitled by rank or favor to the honor. It is distinguished from a drawing-room in the respect that, whereas at a levee men alone appear (with the exception of the chief ladies of the court), both women and men attend a drawing-room. In old French usage, a levee (lever) was a reception of nobles by the king on his rising from bed, or during or immediately after the making of his toilet.

I humbly conceive the business of a levee is to receive the acknowledgments of a multitude. Spectator, No. 193.

Of the three levees in this street, the greatest is in this house. Watpole, To Mann, Nov. 30, 1743.

That 4th of August was the eve of Louis XVI.'s last levee—a brilliant spectacle, through which sad presages were felt and seen in many hearts and eyes. E. Dowden, Shelley, l. 7.

3. A general or miscellaneous assemblage of guests, without reference to the time of day; a reception: as, the president's levee.

He [Brougham] had a levee the other night, which was brilliantly attended—the archbishops, Duke of Wellington, Lord Grey, a host of people. Greville, Memoirs, March 15, 1831.

levee² (le-vō' or lev'ē), v. t. [*< levee*², n.] To attend the levee of; fasten one's self on, or pester, at levees. [Rare.]

Warm in pursuit, he levees all the great. Young.

levelful, a. [Also leaful, leaful; < leve, now *leave*², permission, + -ful. In the form leaful, leaful, appar. confused with lawful.] Allowable; permissible; lawful.

For levelful is with force force of showre. Chaucer, Prolog. to Reeve's Tale, l. 58.

Rich men sayen that it is both leaful and needful to them to gather riches together. Fox, p. 372. (Nares.)

level¹ (lev'el), n. and a. [< ME. level, level, livel, < OF. livel, liveau, leveal, later nivel, niveau, F. niveau (dial. leveau, levat, livé) = Sp. nivel, nivel-lo = Pg. livel, nivel = It. *livello, < L. libella, a balance, a level, dim. of libra, a balance, a level: see *libra, librate*¹, etc.] I. n. 1. An instrument for determining the plane of the horizon, or the plane perpendicular to the direction in which bodies fall under the action of gravity. The simplest instrument used for this purpose is the plumb-line. This is now superseded for most purposes by the* vided with a chamber so contrived that the length of the bubble can be altered. The spirit-level is usually reversed in use, and the mean of its two indications adopted. The spirit-level is an attachment of most geodetical instruments; and there is a special instrument called a level or leveling-instrument (which see).

Of alle kyne craftes Ich contreceteed here tooles . . . And cast out by squire both lyne and level. Piers Plowman (C), xii. 127.

In her lap she held a perpendicular or level, as the ensign of evenness and rest.

B. Jonson, King James's Coronation Entertainment.

2. An imaginary surface everywhere perpendicular to the plumb-line, or line of gravity, so that it might be the free surface of a liquid at rest. Every such surface is approximately that of an oblate spheroid, as the sea-level, for example, is; but for most of the purposes of ordinary life it is convenient, and occasions no sensible error, to confound this surface with its tangent plane at the point referred to—the plane of its horizon. The vertical distance from any given lower level (in the stricter sense of the word), A, to a given higher level, B, will vary with the latitude; but the work required to raise a given weight from A to B is everywhere the same. The level or horizontal surface is ordinarily spoken of as belonging to anything lying or moving upon it, or to a liquid whose free surface in equilibrium will coincide with a portion of it, and frequently indicates, in addition, some reference to some other object having the same or a different vertical elevation. Thus, we speak of the level of a station (often with reference to some standard of elevation), or of the level of the sea; a liquid is spoken of as finding its level; A is said to be on a level with B, or A and B are on a level or on the same level.

Each place is alternately elevated and depressed; but the ocean preserves its level. J. S. Mill, Pol. Econ., III. iii. § 1.

The highest flood-mark was on a level with the terrace round the house. Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xiv.

Hence—3. Figuratively, degree of elevation as regards standing, condition, or action; a height reached or aimed at, from a social, intellectual, or moral point of view. The idea of comparison, relativity, or parallelism is prominent in this as in the literal signification of the word; and a natural or normal level is often spoken of, after the analogy of a free liquid surface.

It was no little satisfaction to me to view the mixed mass of all ages and dignities upon a level, partaking of the same benefits of nature. Steele, Guardian, No. 174.

Foppish airs And histrionic mummery, that let down The pulpit to the level of the stage. Crocyer, Task, II. 564.

When merit shall find its level. F. W. Robertson.

A common level of interests and social standing fostered unconventional ways of thought and speech, and friendly human sympathies. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 205.

4. An extent of land-surface approximately horizontal and unbroken by irregularities; a plain.

We rode a league beyond, And o'er a bridge of pinewood crossing, came On flowery levels underneath the crag, Full of all beauty. Tennyson, Princess, III.

5. The point-blank aim of a missile weapon, including the line of fire and the range or distance the missile is carried without deflection; hence, purpose; aim.

As if that name, Shot from the deadly level of a gun, Did murder her. Shak., R. and J., III. 3. 103. Bring me within the level of your frown, But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate. Shak., Sonnets, cxvii.

Be the fair Level of thy Actions laid As Temperance wills, and Prudence may persuade. Prior, Solomon, III.

6. In mining, a drift or nearly horizontal excavation made in opening a mine. Levels are run to connect shafts and winzes, so as to open and make ready for stopping a certain amount of ground. In a mine regularly opened on a permanent vein, the levels are usually from 60 to 100 feet apart, but vary in position with the varying richness of the lode.

7. A leveling-instrument. See clinometer-level and leveling-instrument.—Aita's level, a modified water-level, in which the horizontal part of the tube is replaced by long india-rubber tubing, for carrying lines of level round corners.—Blind level. See blind.—Bricklayers' level, a plummet attached to a wooden T having a line through the attachment of the plumb-line perpendicular to the edge of the wood.—Carpenters' level. Same as bricklayers' level.—Day level, in mining, a level open to the surface at the side of a valley. Most mines have, when possible, at least one such level for drainage. Also called adit or rough.—Dead level, a stretch of land without hills, and very nearly horizontal; hence, absolute uniformity; unvarying sameness; monotony.

We bring to one dead level every mind. Pope, Dunciad, iv. 208.

All unnecessary rises and falls [in roads] should be avoided, but a dead level is unfavorable for drainage. Encyc. Brit., XX. 582.

Spirit-level, mounted for surveying

Flying level, in engin., a trial leveling over the track of a projected road, railroad, or canal, to ascertain the fitness of the ground.—Gunnery level, a brass instrument with a steel sliding arm and a spirit-level, used for obtaining the line of sighting points on a gun.—Hand-level, in mining, a level about four feet high and three feet wide, giving just room for a man to pass through in a constrained position, pushing a little wagon called a driving-wagon. [Yorkshire, Eng.]—Line and level. See *line*².—Lines of level, lines on a map representing the intersections of the surface of the ground with level surfaces; contour-lines.—Locke level (invented by John Locke), a tube, like a small spy-glass, held in the hand, and so contrived that when the bubble occupies the center of a small mirror within the tube, the axis of the instrument, the position of which is indicated by a cross-hair in the field, is level. This instrument, which is extremely convenient for field geologists, is used for getting the height of slopes of moderate extent by holding the instrument to the eye, noting the point in the ascending slope where, when the instrument is level, the cross-hair strikes the ground, then walking to that and repeating the process, until the spot is reached of which the height is desired. The result is given by multiplying the height of the observer's eye above the ground by the number of stations. Of course the instrument can be used only on a continuously ascending grade.—Masons' level. Same as plumbet level.—Mercurial level, a fluid-level in which mercury serves in place of water or alcohol in the tube or trough.—Reflecting level. Same as Locke level.—Self-recording level, a machine which when passed over the ground makes a profile or vertical section of a line of survey; a grade-indicator.—Surveyors' level, a telescope with a spirit-level attached, for measuring differences of elevation, in connection with a leveling-staff. For the Gravatt surveyors' level, see dumpy-level.—Water-level, a horizontal tube with two upright branches, mounted on a tripod, and partly filled with water, so that one can sight across from the surface of the water in one upright branch to that in the other. (See also artillery-level, batter-level, foot-level, spirit-level, T-level.)

Gravatt's Surveyors' Level.

II. a. 1. Lying in or constituting a horizontal surface; not having one part higher than another; horizontally even or flat; not sloping: as, level ground; a level floor or pavement.

The hill, syde lyeth to the mountayne warde, and that nedeth no walle, and it is dressed so yt it is levelled above and voughted throught vnder neth. Sir R. Guyfforde, Pylgrymage, p. 34.

O God! that one might read the book of fate, And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., III. 1. 47.

In the more level parts of Navarin Island, these hands of stratification were nearly horizontal. Darwin, Geol. Observations, II. 443.

2. Lying in such a surface that no work is gained or lost in the transportation of a particle from any one point of it to any other; equipotential.—3. Existing or acting in the same plane or course; continuing without change of relative elevation; even with something else.

Now shaves with level wing the deep, then soars Up to the tierce concave towering high. Milton, P. L., II. 634.

Round and full the glorious sun Walks with level steps the spray, Through his vestibule of Day. B. Taylor, Ariel in the Cloven Pine.

Its [Scripture] having some things in it hard to be understood implies that it has but some, and that most things in it are easy to be understood, lie open and level to the meanest understandings.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. ix. Where Pope, as in the "Rape of the Lock," found a subject exactly level with his genius, he was able to make what, taken for all in all, is the most perfect poem in the language. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 432.

The light thrilled towards her, fill'd With angels in strong level flight. D. G. Rossetti, The Blessed Damozel.

4. With reference to color, especially in dyeing, even; unbroken; uniform.

The perfection of cotton dyeing is to produce on these warps the same tone and depth of colour as are found on the worsted, so that the entire piece may appear level, and free from any checky character. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 222.

5. Equal in rank or degree.

And your conceal'd sins, though you work like moles, Lie level to their justice. Beau and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, l. 1.

Be level in preferments, and you will soon be as level in your learning. Bentley.

6. Well-aimed; direct; straight; in a right line; conformable.

Everything lies level to our wish. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 4. 7.

Level as a cannon to its blank. Shak., Hamlet, iv. 1. 42.

7. Steady; in equipoise. [Rare.]

Spirit-level. a, end view; b, side view (part shown in section).

bubble, or spirit-level, which consists of a frame of some kind firmly holding a glass tube, closed at the ends, nearly filled with anhydrous ether, or a mixture of ether and alcohol, and having its inner surface on the upper part ground into the form of the outer part of an anchor-ring. Fine levels have besides a graduated scale either on the glass or on a metallic rule set against it, so as to mark the precise position of the bubble. Most fine levels are pro-

It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come . . . from you, can thrust me from a level consideration [of the justice of a cause].

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., ii. 1. 124.

8. Well-balanced; of good judgment: as, a level head. [Colloq. or slang, U. S.]

There is a strong suspicion among men whose heads are level that this . . . performance is a bluff.

Bret Harte, Gabriel Conroy, xxxix.

Level crossing. Same as grade-crossing (which see, under crossing).—Level surface. Same as equipotential surface (which see, under equipotential).—To do one's level best, to do one's utmost. [Slang, U. S.]

"Now you have a position in society, you must assist in all good objects." . . . I said, "I'll do my Level Best, Doctor."

E. E. Hale, His Level Best.

—Syn. 1 and 2. Level, Flat, Even. In regard to the surface of land, flat is a depreciative word, indicating lowness or unattractiveness, or both; level conveys no slur, and is entirely consistent with beauty: as, flat marshes; level prairies. Flat is a rather more absolute word than level. That which is flat or level is parallel to the horizon; that which is even is free from inequalities: as, an even slope.

level¹ (lev'el), v.; pret. and pp. levelled or levelled, ppr. leveling or levelling. [*level*¹, n.] I.

trans. 1. To make horizontal; bring into a plane parallel to the horizon, as by the use of a leveling-instrument: as, to level a billiard-table.—2. To reduce or remove inequalities of surface in; make even or smooth: as, to level a road or walk.—3. To reduce or bring to the same height as something else; lay flat; especially, to bring down to the ground; prostrate.

All things were levelled by the deluge.

Bacon, Physical Fables, ix.

4. To reduce to equality of condition, state, or degree; bring to a common level or standing in any respect: as, to level ranks of society.

To level him with a headborough, beadle, or watchman, were but little better than he is; constable I'll able him.

Middleton, Changeling, i. 2.

This sense of mankind is so far from a levelling principle that it only sets us upon a true basis of distinction, and doubts the merit of such as become their condition.

Steele, Tatler, No. 69.

5. To direct to an object, in a particular line, or toward a purpose; point or aim.

For all his minde on honour fixed is,
To which he levels all his purposis.

Spenser, Mother Hub. Taie, l. 772.

The setting sun . . .

Against the eastern gate of Paradise
Level'd his evening rays.

Milton, P. L., iv. 543.

Such is the clamour of rooks, daws, and kites,
Th' explosion of the level'd tube excites,

Cowper, Hope, i. 350.

6. To adapt; suit; proportion: as, to level observations to the capacity of children.—7. In surv., to find the level or the relative elevation of by observation or measurement.

An ancient river-bed in the desert . . . will soon be levelled throughout its extent, and the conflict of opinion be settled by . . . a careful survey.

Science, VI. 516.

8. In dyeing, to make smooth and uniform. See *level*¹, a., 4.

This liquid [tartar] is employed by some dyers for leveling certain colours.

W. Crookes, Dyeing, etc., p. 549.

To level down or up, to lower or raise to the same level or status—to level up being used specifically of raising a lower person or class to the level of a higher.

Sir, your levelers wish to level down as far as themselves; but they cannot bear leveling up to themselves.

Johnson, in Boswell, an. 1763.

—Syn. 3. To raze, destroy, demolish.

II. intrans. 1. To be in the same direction with something; be aimed. [Rare.]

He to his engine flew, . . .
And rais'd it till it level'd right Against the glow-worm tail of kites.

S. Butler, Hudibras, II. iii. 443.

2. To point a weapon at the mark; take aim: as, he levelled and fired; hence, to direct a purpose; aim.

Thou lonely Venus:

With thy blind boy that almost nener misses,
But hits our hearts when he levels at vs.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 147.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 2. 19.

He lifts the tube, and levels with his eye;
Straight a short thunder breaks the frozen sky.

Pope, Windsor Forest, l. 129.

3†. To conjecture; attempt to guess.

So cunning that you can level at the dispositions of women whom you never knew.

Lydy, Euphues and his England, p. 239.

Bravest at the last,
She level'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.

Shak., A. and C., v. 2. 339.

4. To accord; agree; suit. [Rare.]

Such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.

Shak., Othello, l. 3. 239.

5. To work with a leveling-instrument; make the observations necessary for constructing a profile or vertical section of any line on the earth's surface, or for ascertaining the difference of elevation between two or more stations.

level², v. A corruption of *levy*¹.

From taking level by vnlawful measure.

Bretton, Pasquill's Procession, p. 8. (Davies.)

level-coil¹ (lev'el-koil), n. [Formerly also level-coyle; an aecom. form of OF. leve-cul, a game so called (see the def.), < lever, raise, + cul, buttock (< L. culus, the posteriors); lever le cul, in slang use, rise.] 1. An old Christmas game in which one player hunted another, the loser giving up his seat to the winner.

May we play not Level-coyl [read level-coyl]? I have not patience to stay till another match be made.

Shuffling [etc.] in a Game at Picquet (1659), p. 5.

Hence—2. Riotous sport of any kind.

Young Justice Bramble has kept level coy!

Here in our quarters, stole away our daughter.

B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, iii. 2.

Tav. How now! what coil is here?

Black. Level-coil, you see, every man's pot.

Beau. and Fl. (C), Faithful Friends, l. 2.

level-dyeing (lev'el-dī'ing), n. The process of dyeing evenly where, from the great affinity between the goods and the dye, the portion first dyed would absorb too much coloring matter. It is usually accomplished by adding to the bath a quantity of crystallized sulphate of soda (Glauber's salts).

leveler, leveller (lev'el-ēr), n. 1. One who levels or makes even; one who or that which brings or reduces to a level, or destroys by leveling: as, time is the great leveler.—2. One who desires or strives to bring men to a common level; one who would level social distinctions, or who disregards differences of rank or status.

Its structure strongly proves the truth of the maxim that princes are true levelers—real republicans—among themselves.

Brougham.

3. [cap.] One of a party which arose in the army of the Long Parliament about 1647. They professed a determination to level all ranks and establish equality in titles and estates throughout the kingdom. They were put down by Fairfax.

They were termed levelers upon a pretended principle which they espoused, to endeavour to obtain such an equal righteous distribution of justice in government to all degrees of people that it should not be in the power of the highest to oppress their inferiors, nor should the meanest of the people be out of capacity to arrive at the greatest office and dignity in the state.

Baker, Charles II., an. 1649.

4. A screw or other device fitted to the leg of a billiard-table or to any piece of apparatus for adjusting the table or apparatus to a true level.—5. An earth-scraper.

levelless¹, a. A variant of *levelless*¹.

level-headed (lev'el-hed'ed), a. Sensible; shrewd. [Colloq. or slang.]

It is to be regretted that the State Department loses the services of so competent and level-headed a chief.

The American, XIV. 341.

leveling, levelling (lev'el-ing), n. [Verbal n. of *level*¹, v.] 1. The act or process of reducing an uneven surface to a level or plane.—2. The art or operation of ascertaining the different elevations of objects on the surface of the earth; the art or practice of finding how much any assigned point on the earth's surface included in a survey is higher or lower than another assigned point.

It is a branch of surveying of great importance in making roads, determining the proper lines for railways, conducting water, draining low grounds, rendering rivers navigable, forming canals, and the like. The instruments commonly employed are a level or leveling-instrument and a pair of leveling-staffs. One of the staffs is held up vertically, resting upon the ground at the initial point. The observer then goes forward with his instrument for a convenient distance, makes his telescope level, and directs the rod-man to raise or lower the target until it is at the height of the telescope. This is called a back-sight. The height of the target on the rod is now read. The other rod has meantime been carried forward, and is observed in the same manner. This is called a fore-sight. The instrument is now carried forward and a back-sight is made on the last rod. When a bench-mark or other terminus is reached, all the fore-sights are added together, as well as all the back-sights, and the difference of the sums is the difference of elevation.

leveling-block (lev'el-ing-blok), n. In iron ship-building, a cast-iron platform made up of large rectangular castings having as many holes with centers from four to five inches apart cast in them as the castings can contain. The faces of the blocks are level. Pins with eccentric disks fitted to their heads are inserted into the holes. The disks have holes arranged with different degrees of eccentricity. The block or platform is used for bending frames, etc. A mold, to the form of which a frame is to be bent, is laid upon the block, and its form is traced by a chalk-mark. The pins are then arranged in the holes so that the heated iron frame may be bent upon them into the form of the trace. The temperature of the heating is indicated by orange-red; and by the use of various tools, with the pins and eccentric disks, the frame is quickly and accurately bent to the form of the trace.

leveling-instrument (lev'el-ing-in'strō-ment), n. An instrument for use in surveying, of different forms, but consisting essentially of a telescope carrying a parallel, rigidly connected, and sensitive spirit-level. The telescope is mounted on a stable stand, and is capable of adjustment in all directions by means of screws.

Leveling-instrument.

leveling-plow (lev'el-ing-plou), n. A plow adapted for leveling the ridges thrown up in some forms of cultivation in rows.

leveling-pole, leveling-rod (lev'el-ing-pōl-rod), n. Same as leveling-staff, 1.

leveling-screw (lev'el-ing-skrō), n. 1. In a mill, a screw in the hurst or frame on which a run of millstones is placed, used to give a vertical adjustment and bring it to an exact level. It acts against an iron plate set in a bedstone.—2. In a surveying or portable astronomical instrument, any one of the screws used for leveling the horizontal plate or that part of the instrument on which the horizontal angles are read off.

In most English theodolites and leveling-instruments there are two pairs of leveling-screws; in French and German instruments usually only three.

leveling-staff (lev'el-ing-stáf), n. 1. An instrument used in leveling, in conjunction with a leveling-instrument or with a spirit-level and a telescope. It is variously constructed, but consists essentially of a graduated pole with a vane sliding upon it so as to mark the height at any distance above the ground. See leveling, 2. Also called leveling-pole, leveling-rod, station-pole, or station-staff. 2. An instrument used to support a glass plate horizontally so that it can retain a fluid upon its upper surface. It is usually in the form of a tripod fitted with adjusting-screws or levelers.

levelism (lev'el-izm), n. [*level*¹ + -ism.] The leveling of distinctions in society, or the principle or doctrine of such leveling. [Rare.]

leveler, levelling. See leveler, leveling.

levelly (lev'el-li), adv. In a level manner; evenly; equally. [Rare.]

Neither would praises and actions appear so levelly concurrent in many other of the Grecians as they do in these.

Hobbes, tr. of Thucydides, ii.

levelness (lev'el-nes), n. The condition of being level; evenness; equality.

The river Tiber is expressed lying along, for so you must remember to draw rivers, to express their levelness with the earth.

Peacham, Drawing.

level-suset, level-sicet, n. [Appar. < OF. lever, raise, + sus, upon, over. Cf. level-coil.] Same as level-coil. Skelton.

By tragick deaths devlee

Ambitious hearts do play at level-sicet.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Decay.

leven¹ (lev'ēn), n. [Early mod. E. also levin, leaven; < ME. levene, levyn, lightning. No appar. source in AS., connection with AS. lig, lēg (E. lay), lightning, AS. liget, lēget (E. lait), lightning, AS. lēcht (E. light), light, or with lēoma (E. leam), gleam, being phonetically improbable.] Lightning. [Obscure or archaic.]

With wilde thunder dynt and fry levene

Moote thy weiked nekke be to-broke.

Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 276.

As when the flashing Levin haps to light

Upon two stubborne oakes.

Spenser, F. Q., V. vi. 40.

Leveling-staff (def. 2).

In Sinai's wilderness he saw
The Mount, where Israel heard the law,
Mid thunder-dint, and flashing levin.
Scott, Marmion, l. 23.

leven¹, v. [Early mod. E. also leaven; < ME. levenen, levynen, < levenc, lightning; see *leven*¹, n.] I. trans. To smite with lightning.
II. intrans. To flash; shine like lightning.

Thouret full throly with a thicke hallo;
With a leuennyng light as a low fyre,
Blaset all the brode see as it bren wold.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 1983.

leven², n. An obsolete form of leaven.
leven³ (lev'n), n. [Origin obscure.] A lawn; an open space between or among woods. [Scotch.]

And see ye not that braid braid road,
That lies across that lily leven?
Thomas the Rhymer (Child's Ballads, l. 111).

leven-brand^t, n. A bolt of lightning.
His burning levin-brand in hand he tooke.
Spenser, F. Q., VII. vi. 30.

levening^t, n. [Early mod. E. also leavning; < ME. levcning, levcnyng; verbal n. of *leven*¹, v.] Lightning.
Sins that the fire of gods and king of men
Strake me with thunder, and with leuening blast.
Surrey, Aeneid, ll.

lever¹ (lev'er or lē'vēr), n. [Formerly also leaver; < ME. leaver, levour, a lever, < OF. levcor, levcur, F. levcur, a lifter, a lever (also OF. and F. levier, a lever, with diff. suffix); < L. levator, a lifter, < levare, pp. levatus, raise; see *levant*¹.] 1. A simple machine, consisting of a bar or rigid piece of any shape, acted upon at different points by two forces which severally tend to rotate it in opposite directions about a fixed axis.

The bearing of this axis is called the fulcrum; of the two forces, one, conceived as something to be balanced or overcome, is termed the resistance, load, or weight, while the other, conceived as voluntarily applied, is termed the power. These are understood to act in the plane of rotation, and each perpendicularly to the line joining the point of its application to the fixed axis. The lengths of these two lines are termed the arms of the lever. If the load is ten times as great as the power, but the power is ten times as far from the fulcrum as the load is from the fulcrum—or, generally, if the two forces are inversely as their respective arms—then the lever is in equilibrium. This principle, beautifully demonstrated by Archimedes, was adopted by Lagrange as one of the two fundamental principles of statics, the other being the principle of the inclined plane. A lever is said to be of the first, second, or third kind, according as of the three points—the ful-

Lever.
F, fulcrum; P, power; W, load or weight. a and b are levers of the first kind, c and d of the second, and e and f of the third. In b, c, and f, the pulley is used in combination with the lever. g is a compound lever, or a combination of levers.

crum, the point of application of the load, and that of the power—the first, second, or third is between the other two. But this distinction is insignificant; and when these three points are the vertices of a triangle, and the lever is not in the form of a bar, which often happens, the distinction becomes confused. Among the innumerable examples of levers may be mentioned the steadyard, the crowbar, oars, and the bones of the human limbs.

A lever to uplift the earth
And roll it in another course.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, cxlii.

2. In special uses—(a) In surg., an instrument for applying power, as one of the arms of an obstetrical forceps, used in delivery as a tractor; the vectis. (b) In dentistry, an instrument used in extracting the stumps of teeth. (c) In a steam-engine, a bar used to control by hand the movement of the engine in starting or reversing it; a starting-bar. (d) In firearms, in some forms of breech-loaders, the piece by which the gun is opened or closed, as in the Douglas, Henry, and Maynard rifles. It may be a top, side, or under lever. E. H. Knight.—3. One of the chief supporters of the roof-timber of a house, being itself not a prop, but a part of the framework. Halliwel.—4. The lower movable beard of a barn-door. Halliwel.—5. The first row of a fishing-net.—6. Generally, a rod or bar.

There are certaine fish-shells, like Scalop-shells, found on the shore, so great that two strong men with a leaver can scarce draw one of them after them.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 504.

Arithmetical lever, a straight lever, arranged so that different known weights can be placed at different known distances, either for illustrating the principle of the lever, or for calculating the value of a sum of products of two factors.—Bent lever, a lever having arms bent at an angle, with the fulcrum at the angle.—Bent-lever balance. See tangent balance.—Catch-lever, a lever which carries a catch, as a part of the valve-gear of an engine.—Compound lever, a machine consisting of several simple levers combined together and acting on each other.—Continual lever, or perpetual lever, a term sometimes applied to the wheel and axle.—Crow's-foot lever, a compound lever used in the middle ages for bending the arbalist and for other purposes.—Goat's-foot lever, a lever formed of two parts, formerly used for bending the hand-bow, arbalist, or crossbow.—Heterodromous lever. See heterodromous.—Lever hand-car, a hand-car which is driven by means of levers attached to cranks.—Live lever. See live.—Universal lever, a contrivance by means of which the reciprocating motion of a lever is made to communicate a continuous rotary motion to a wheel, and a continuous rectilinear motion to anything attached by a rope to the axle of the wheel. (See also floating-lever, hand-lever.)

lever² (lev'er or lē'vēr), v. t. [*< lever*¹, n.] To act upon, as raising, lowering, etc., with a lever.

One of these locks they picked, and then, by levering up the corner, forced the other three.
R. L. Stevenson, François Villon.

lever², a. and adv. An obsolete comparative of lift.

leverage (lev'er- or lē'vēr-āj), n. [*< lever*¹ + -age.] 1. The action of a lever; the arrangement by which lever-power is gained.

The fulcrum of the leverage. I. Taylor.
2. Lever-power; the mechanical advantage or power gained by using a lever.

The puny leverage of a hair
The planet's impulse well may spare.
Whittier, The Waiting.

3. Figuratively, advantage for accomplishing a purpose; increased power of action.

A leverage is at once gained [by a certain procedure] for the removal of other obstacles and abuses.
D. A. Wells, Merchant Marine, p. 169.
Such men have the sensibilities that give leverage to the moralist.
W. R. Sorley, Ethics of Naturalism, p. 146.

lever-board (lev'er-bōrd), n. A corruption of lower-board. See lower-window.

lever-brace (lev'er-brās), n. A brace worked by a lever, which has usually a ratchet motion, as in the ratchet-drill.

lever-compressor (lev'er-kom-pres'or), n. A device for applying pressure to an object under the microscope. E. H. Knight.

lever-drill (lev'er-dril), n. A machine-tool in which the tool-spindle works with a spline in the socket of the wheel which rotates it, and is projected axially by a lever to bring it toward or away from its work. E. H. Knight.

leveret, n. A Middle English form of livrey.

lever-engine (lev'er-en'jin), n. In steam-engine, a modification of a side-beam engine, in which the beams are levers not of the first but of the second order, the piston-rod connection being at one end of the beams, the fulcrum at the other, and the crank-connection at some intermediate point. In this kind of engine the "throw" of the crank is always less than the stroke of the piston. Also called grasshopper-engine. See cut under grasshopper-beam.

lever-escapement (lev'er-es-kāp'ment), n. See escapement, 2.

leveret (lev'er-et), n. [< OF. levret (cf. equiv. levrctau, and levraut, F. levraut), a young hare, dim. of levre, F. lièvre = Sp. liebre = Pg. lebre = It. lepre, a hare, < L. lepus (lepor-), a hare; see Lepus. Cf. levrier.] A hare in its first year; a young hare.

leveret-skin (lev'er-et-skin), n. A name given to a Japanese ceramic glaze, usually deeply black, upon which thin silver lines are applied, having a fancied resemblance to hare's fur.

lever-faucet (lev'er-fā'set), n. An automatic faucet which closes by a spring and opens by means of a handle or lever. Car-Builder's Diet.

lever-frame (lev'er-frām), n. In a railroad hand-car, a wooden frame, shaped somewhat like a letter A, which supports the lever-shaft and lever on the platform. Car-Builder's Diet.

lever-hoist (lev'er-hoist), n. A form of lifting-jack employing a lever revolving or reciprocating on a fixed axis. A pair of short arms or stirrups are so attached to the lever that their ends fit into racks set upon both sides, and by catching upon the rack-teeth on alternate sides they enable the lever to raise a weight.

Leverian falcon. See falcon.

lever-jack (lev'er-jak), n. A lifting device. It consists of a post, a sliding-rack working in guide-ways formed in or attached to the post and carrying a step which supports the object to be lifted, a pawl pivoted to the post and engaging the sliding-rack to hold the latter from descending, and a lever which is pivoted to the post, and carries a pawl which engages the teeth of the rack and slides it upward, thus raising the weight.

leverock (lev'er-ok), n. A variant of laverock, for *lark*¹.

lever-press (lev'er-pres), n. In mach., any press in which power is applied to the "follower" or platen by means of a lever, or a combination of levers, as by a treadle, etc., as distinguished from a pendulum-, screw-, or fly-press. The name is applied more particularly, however, to presses which have only one lever of the second order, generally operated by weights hung upon the end of the lever, but sometimes by a screw used as a substitute for the weights.—Compound lever-press, a press comprising a system of compound levers.—Duplex lever-press, a press having two cam-faced levers drawn together by a screw.

lever-punch (lev'er-punch), n. In mach., any punch operated by lever mechanism; in particular, a punch operating upon the principle of the duplex lever-press.

lever-valve (lev'er-valv), n. A safety-valve kept down by the pressure of an adjustable weight. In locomotives a spring is substituted for the weight, and the pressure is regulated by a screw and indicated on a brass plate. See cut and safety-valve.

leverwood (lev'er-wūd), n. The hop-hornbeam or ironwood, Ostrya Virginica. See Ostrya.

levett (lev'et), n. [< F. lever, raise, < L. levare; see *levant*¹.] A musical call or strain intended to arouse or excite; a blast of a trumpet to awaken soldiers in the morning.

Come, sirs, a qualitt leet.
To waken our brave general! then to our labor.
Fletcher, Double Marriage, ll. 1.

Waked very early; and when it was time, did call up Will, and we rose, and musique (with a bandore for the base) did give me a levett.
Pepys, Diary, l. 335.

levetenant, n. Same as lieutenant.

levettest, n. pl. [Early mod. E., appar. irreg. (for the sake of the rhyme, in this one instance) < level, now *level*¹, + -ct.] Leavings.

Then gadder they vp their levettis.
Not the best morsels, but gobbetis,
Which unto power people they deale.
Royand Barlow, Rede me and be nett Wroth, p. 80. (Davies.)

leviable (lev'i-ā-bl), a. [*< levy*¹ + -able.] 1. Capable of being levied and collected.

Hence, M. Doniol's would-be purchaser is warned that it never can be worth his while to make improvements on his property, since they would only add to the standard of the fine leviable in these eventualities.
Maine, Early Law and Custom, p. 309.

2. That may be levied upon; capable of being seized upon execution.

leviathan (lē-vi'ā-than), n. [= F. leviathan = Sp. leviatán = Pg. leviathan, < LL. leviathan, < Heb. liryāthān, an aquatic animal (see def.); cf. Heb. lārā, cleave; Ar. laca, bend, twist.] 1. An aquatic animal mentioned in the Old Testament. It is described in Job xli apparently as a crocodile; in Isa. xxxvii. 1 it is called a piercing and a crook serpent; and it is mentioned indefinitely in Ps. lxxiv. 14 (as food) and Ps. clv. 26.

Hence, in modern use—2. Any great or monstrous marine animal, as the whale.
Wend we by Sea? the drad Leviathan
Turns upside-down the boiling Ocean.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ll., The Furies.

There leviathan,
Hugest of living creatures, on the deep Stretch'd like a promontory, sleeps or swims.
Milton, P. L., vii. 412.

3. Anything of vast or huge size.

The oak leviathans, whose huge ribs make Their clay creator the vain title take
Of lord of thee [the ocean].
Byron, Childe Harold, iv. 181.

Leviathan canvas, coarse canvas used for decorative needlework, the strands being made of two or even three threads each, laid side by side.—Leviathan wool, a soft and loosely laid wool or worsted, used for needlework on leviathan canvas.

levicellular (lev-i-sel'ū-lār), a. [< L. levīs, smooth, + NL. cellula, cell; see cellular.] Pertaining to or consisting of unstriated muscle-fiber.—Levicellular myoma, a myoma composed of smooth muscle-fibers.

levier (lev'i-ēr), n. [*< levy*¹ + *-er*¹.] One who levies. Imp. Diet.

levigable (lev'i-gā-bl), a. [< leviga(te)¹ + -ble.] Capable of being rubbed or ground down to fine powder.

levigate¹ (lev'i-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. levigated, ppr. levigating. [< L. levigatus, pp. of levigare (> It. levigare = Sp. Pg. levigar = F. leviger), make smooth, < levīs, erroneously lavīs (= Gr. laos, for lei*Fog; cf. equiv. poet. lav- pōs, for λερός*), smooth, + agere, do, make: see act. 1. To rub or grind to a fine impalpable powder, as in a mortar. See levigation.

The massicot [protoxid of lead] . . . is removed, ground, and levigated. . . . The product is minium, or red-lead. Spon's Encyc. Manuf., p. 1550.

2†. To plane; polish; make smooth.

When used levigated the organs, and made the way so smooth and easy that the spirits pass without any stop, those objects are no longer felt. Barrow, Works, III. ix.

Levigating-machine, levigating-mill, a mortar having a pestle fitted with a crank and mounted in a frame, for convenience in grinding drugs, paints, etc.

levigate¹ (lev'i-gāt), a. [= It. levigato = Pg. levigado, < L. levigatus, pp. of levigare, make smooth: see the verb.] Smooth as if polished; having a polished surface: applied in botany to leaves, seeds, etc. Also levigate.

levigate² (lev'i-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. levigated, ppr. levigating. [L. levigatus, made light, pp. of levigare, make light, < lēvis, light (see levity), + agere, do: see act.] To lighten; make light of; belittle the importance of. [Rare.]

Makes logic levigate the big crime small. Browning, Ring and Book, I. 42.

levigate² (lev'i-gāt), a. [L. levigatus, pp.: see levigate², v.] Lightened; alleviated. [Rare.]

Wherby his labours being levigate, and made more tolerable, he shal governe with the better aduise. Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, l. 2.

levigation (lev-i-gā'shon), n. [= F. levigation = Sp. levigacion = Pg. levigação = It. levigazione, < L. levigatio(n-), a smoothing, < levigare, pp. levigatus, make smooth: see levigate¹, v.] The act or operation of grinding or rubbing a solid substance to a fine impalpable powder. A mortar and pestle are commonly used in the process, and it is completed by allowing the coarser particles to settle in water, then decanting the latter, letting it stand till the fine powder has fallen to the bottom, and finally pouring off the water. In the chemical analysis of minerals this process is repeated until the mineral has been reduced to a sufficient degree of fineness, the coarser part being subjected to further pulverization after each separation by the aid of the water.

levin¹, n. See levin¹.

levin², n. An obsolete variant of leaven.

levine, n. See levyne.

levipede (lev'i-pēd), a. [L. levis, smooth, + pes (ped-), foot.] Smooth-footed.

levirate (lev-i-rāt), n. [= Sp. levirato, < NL. leviratus, < L. levir (= Gr. δαίρ, orig. δαίρ*, = Skt. dāvāra = AS. tācor = OHG. zeihur), a husband's brother, + -atus, E. -ate³.] The institution of marriage between a man and the widow of his brother or nearest kinsman under certain circumstances. Among the ancient Hebrews such marriage was required in case the brother died childless, for the purpose of continuing his family, the first-born son being the heir of the deceased husband. (Deut. xxv. 5-10; see also Mat. xxii. 24-26.) From the book of Ruth it appears that the obligation rested upon the nearest kinsman of the husband if there was no brother. It was counted disgraceful for a man to refuse to submit himself to it. A similar custom prevails in parts of India.

An institution . . . known commonly as the levirate, but called by the Hindus, in its more general form, the Niyoga. Maine, Early Law and Custom, p. 100.

leviratic (lev-i-rat'ik), a. [levirate + -ic.] Pertaining to the levirate.

leviratical (lev-i-rat'ik-al), a. [leviratic + -al.] Same as leviratic.

The first-born son of a leviratical marriage was reckoned and registered as the son of the deceased brother. Dean Afford.

leviration (lev-i-rā'shon), n. [Irreg. < levirate + -ion.] Leviratic marriage.

Leviostres (lev-i-res'trēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. lēvis, light, + rostrum, beak.] In ornith.: (a) In Merrem's classification, a group of birds, including the toucans, parrots, and some others, approximately equivalent to the order Psittaci plus the family Rhamphastide of modern authors. (b) In Blyth's system (1846), a series or superfamily group of his Picoides, consisting of the toucans, touracous, and colies, or Rhamphastide, Musophagide, and Coliide.

Leviticum (lē-vis'ti-kum), n. [NL. (W. D. J. Koch, 1825): see Ligusticum and lovage.] A genus of umbelliferous plants of the tribe Sceselineae and the subtribe Angeliceae, closely related to Angelica and Archangelica, but having the lateral wings of the fruit thickened. It embraces only a single species, L. officinale, the garden lovage. See lovage.

levitate (lev'i-tāt), v.; pret. and pp. levitated, ppr. levitating. [L. levitatio(s), lightness (see levity), + -ate².] I. trans. To cause to become buoyant in the atmosphere; make light, so as to cause to float in the air; deprive of normal gravity.

II. intrans. To act or move by force of levity—that is, by a repulsive force, contrary to gravity; overcome the force of gravity by means of specific lightness: especially, in recent use, said of a body heavier than the air, but supposed to rise in it by spiritual means.

That distinction between gravitating and levitating matter . . . which the phenomena of their [comets'] tails afford. Herschel, Pop. Lects., p. 140.

It is asserted that a man or a woman levitated to the ceiling, floated about there, and finally sailed out by the window. Huxley, Nineteenth Century, XXI. 201.

levitation (lev-i-tā'shon), n. [levitate + -ion.] 1. The act of making light; lightness; buoyancy.

The lungs also of birds, as compared with the lungs of quadrupeds, contain in them a provision distinguishingly calculated for this same purpose of levitation. Paley, Nat. Theol., xii. § 6.

2. Among Spiritualists, the alleged phenomenon of bodies heavier than air being by spiritual means rendered buoyant in the atmosphere.

The levitation in this case was by the bound Shaman in one lodge being found unbound in the other. Science, XI. 270.

levitator (lev'i-tā-tōr), n. [levitate(ion) + -or.] One who believes in the supposed spiritualistic phenomena of levitation, or professes to be able to exhibit them.

Theoretically, therefore, we can have no sort of objection to your miracle. And our reply to the levitators is just the same. Why should not your friend "levitate"? Huxley, Nineteenth Century, XXI. 202.

Levite (lē'vit), n. [= F. Lévite = Sp. Pg. It. Levita, < LL. Levites, Levita, < Gr. Λευίτης, a Levite, < Heb. Levi, one of the sons of Jacob.]

1. In Jewish hist., a descendant of Levi, one of the sons of Jacob; one of the tribe of Levi.

I have taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel; to you they are given as a gift for the Lord, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation. Num. xviii. 6.

2. Specifically, one of a body of assistants to the priests in the tabernacle and temple service of the Jews. This body was composed of all males of the tribe of Levi between 30 (or 25) and 50 years of age, exclusive of the family of Aaron, which constituted the priesthood. Originally they guarded the tabernacle, and assisted in carrying it and its vessels, and in preparing the corn, wine, oil, etc., for sacrifice; they furnished the music at the services, and had charge of the sacred treasures and revenues. After the settlement in Palestine they were relieved of some of these duties, but assumed those of religious guides and teachers. Later they were also the learned class, and became scribes, judges, etc. They were allowed no territorial possessions, except thirty-five cities in which they lived, supported by tithes on the produce of the lands of the tribes. The Levites were divided into three families, which bore the names of the sons of Levi—the Gershonites, the Kohathites, and the Merarites.

No Protestant, I suppose, will liken one of our Ministers to a High Priest, but rather to a common Levite. Milton, Touching Hirelings.

Hence—3. In the early Christian church, a deacon as distinguished from a priest.—4†. A priest; a clergyman: often in slight contempt.

A young Levite—such was the phrase then in use—might be had for his board, a small garret, and ten pounds a year. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., iii.

5†. A fashionable dress for women, introduced about 1780. It was satirized by Horace Walpole as resembling "a man's night-gown bound round with a belt."

Levitic (lē-vit'ik), a. [= F. levitique = Sp. levítico = Pg. It. levitico, < LL. leviticus, pertaining to the Levites, < Levites, Levita, Levite: see Levite.] Same as Levitical.

Levitical (lē-vit'ik-al), a. [Levitic + -al.] 1. Of, pertaining to, or peculiar to the Levites.—2. Of, pertaining to, or contained in the book of Leviticus: as, the Levitical law.

By the levitical law, both the man and the woman were stoned to death: so heinous a crime was adultery. Ayliffe, Parergon.

3. Priestly. [Rare.]

Austin . . . sent to Rome . . . to acquaint the pope of his good success in England, and to be resolved of certain theological, or rather levitical, questions. Milton, Hist. Eng., lv.

Levitical degrees, degrees of kindred named in Lev. xviii. 6-18, within which persons were prohibited to marry.—Levitical law, that part of the Mosaic law which related to the Levites; hence, that part which regulated the Jewish worship and ritual.

Leviticallly (lē-vit'ik-al-i), adv. After the manner of the Levites or of the Levitical law.

Leviticus (lē-vit'ik-us), n. [LL., prop. adj., se. liber, the book of the Levites: see Levitic.] A canonical book of the Old Testament, the third book of Moses or of the Pentateuch, containing principally the laws and regulations relating to the priests and Levites and to religious ceremonies, or the body of the ceremonial law. Abbreviated Lev.

Leviticism (lē'vit-izm), n. [Levite + -ism.] The doctrines and practices of the Levites.

leviton (lev'i-tōn), n. [ML. levito(n-), a sleeveless robe.] A sleeveless robe worn by Egyptian monks.

levity (lev'i-ti), n. [= OF. levite = Sp. levidad = Pg. levidad = It. levità, < L. levitatio(s), lightness, < lēvis, light, akin to Gr. λαχίς, light, and to E. light², q. v.] 1. Lightness of weight; relatively small specific gravity.

Their extreme minuteness and levity enable them [condia] to be dispersed and carried about by the slightest currents of air. Huxley, Biology, v.

2. A tendency to rise by a force contrary to gravity.

For positive levity, till I see it better proved than it hath hitherto been, I allow no such thing planted in sublunary bodies, the repellent gravity of some sufficing to give others comparative or respective lightness. Boyle, Notion of Nature, § 5.

The simple rise as by specific levity, not into a particular virtue, but into the region of all the virtues. Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 250.

3. Lightness of spirit or temper. Specifically—(a) Cheerfulness; ease of mind.

To what a blessed levity, . . . to what a cheerful lightness of spirit is he come that comes newly from confession, and with the seal of absolution upon him! Donne, Sermons, xxiv.

(b) Carelessness of temper or conduct; want of seriousness; disposition to trifle; inconstancy; volatilitv: as, the levity of youth.

The Censor, frowning upon him, told him that he ought not to discover so much levity in matters of a serious nature. Addison, Trial of Ladies' Quarrels.

= Syn. 3 (b). Levity, Volatility, Flightiness, Frivolity, Lightness. All these words are founded upon the idea of the lack of physical and, by figure, of mental and moral substance or weight, with a resulting ease in flying away from what is wise. The first three refer especially to outward conduct. Levity is a want of seriousness, temporary or habitual, a disposition to trifle with important interests. Volatility is that moral defect by which one cannot dwell long upon any one object of thought, or turns quickly from one source of pleasure to another: the word does not convey much opprobrium; in the young some degree of volatility is expected. Flightiness borders upon the loss of sanity in caprice or excitement of fancy; it is volatility in an extreme degree. Frivolity is a matter of nature, an inability to care about any but the most petty and trifling things. Lightness is not so strong as frivolity, but covers nearly the same ground; it emphasizes inconstancy.

levoglucose, lævoglucose (lē-vō-glū'kōs), n. [L. levus, left, + E. glucose, q. v.] In chem., same as levulose.

levogyrate, lævogyrate (lē-vō-jī'rāt), a. [L. levus, left, + gyratus, pp. of gyrare, turn round in a circle: see gyre, r., gyrate.] Causing to turn toward the left hand: as, a levogyrate crystal—that is, one that turns the rays to the right in the polarization of light. See dextrogyrate.

If the analyser [a slice of quartz] has to be turned towards the right so as to cause the colours to succeed each other in their natural order—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, violet—the piece of quartz is called right-handed, or dextrogyrate. If, however, the analyser has to be turned from right to left to obtain the natural order of colours, the quartz is called left-handed or levogyrate. Haydn.

levogyration, lævogyration (lē'vō-jī-rā'shon), n. [L. levus, left, + ML. gyratio(n-), gyration: see gyration.] Rotation of the plane of polarization to the left. See polarization.

levogyrous, lævogyrous (lē-vō-jī'rus), a. [L. levus, left, + gyrus, a turn, gyre: see gyre.] Same as levogyrate.

levorotatory, levorotatory (lē-vō-rō'tā-tō-ri), a. [L. levus, left, + rotatorius*, turning: see rotatory.] Same as levogyrate.

levulin (lev'ū-lin), n. [As levulose + -in².] A carbohydrate (C₆H₁₀O₅) occurring in the tubers of certain species of Helianthus.

levulinic (lev'ū-lin'ik), a. [levulin + -ic.] Derived from levulin.—Levulinic acid, an acid (C₆H₈O₆) obtained from levulin, levulose, cane-sugar, cellulose, and other similar substances, by boiling with a dilute mineral acid. It is a crystalline body, soluble in water.

levulose, lævulose (lev'ū-lōs), n. [L. levus, left, + -ale + -osc.] A sugar (C₆H₁₂O₆) isomeric with dextrose, but distinguished from it by turning the plane of polarization to the left. It occurs associated with dextrose in honey, in many fruits, and in other vegetable tissues. The mixture of these two sugars in equal quantities constitutes invert-sugar, which itself turns the plane of polarization to the left, the specific rotatory power of levulose being greater than that of dextrose. It is usually a thick syrup, having a taste as sweet as that of cane-sugar; it crystallizes with difficulty. Also called fruit-sugar.

levy¹ (lev'i), n.; pl. levies (-iz). [Early mod. E. also levay; < ME. levy, levay, < OF. levee, F. levée, a raising, an embankment (see levee), rising, breaking up, removal, a raising (of troops, of taxes, etc.), = Sp. levada, a rising, attack, = Pg. levada, a current of water, transport, = It. levata, raising, rising, departure, < ML. levata, something raised or levied, tax, exaction, quota, embarkment, prop. fem. of L. levatus, pp. of levare, raise: see levant 1.] 1. The act of levying; the raising or collecting of anything by authority or force; compulsory satisfaction of a requirement, claim, or demand: as, to make a levy of troops or taxes.

They have but two ways of raising money publicly in that country [Virginia]: viz., by duties upon trade, and a poll tax, which they call levies. Beverley, Virginia, iv. ¶ 18.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies. Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 62.

These are the sons of Christians taken in their childhood from their miserable parents, by a levy made every five years. Sandys, Traavales, p. 37.

2. Specifically, in law, a sufficient taking of possession of chattels, and assertion of authority, by a sheriff or similar officer, under color of legal process, to render the officer liable for trespass if he be not protected by process: as, a levy upon a debtor's property.

And the constable that doth not his devoir for the levy of the same, to lese to the said comyn tresour, vj. s. viij. d. English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 393.

3. That which is levied, as a body of troops, or the amount accruing from a tax or an execution.

And King Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel, and the levy was thirty thousand men. I Ki. v. 13.

The Danes were as superior to their opponents in tactics as in strategy. An encounter between the shire levies and the pirates was a struggle of militia with regular soldiers. J. R. Green, Conq. of Eng., p. 85.

Levy in kind, a tax or toll paid in produce or commodities, in lieu of money.—Levy in mass [F. levée en masse], a levy of all the able-bodied men of a country or district for military service.

levy¹ (lev'1), v.; pret. and pp. levied, ppr. levying. [Formerly also levay (and *leave*⁴, q. v.); < late ME. levyen; < levy, n., in part directly (prop. only in the obs. form *leave*⁴) < F. levier, raise: see *levy*¹, n., levant 1.] I. trans. 1†. To raise: as, to levy a siege.

Euphranor, having levied the siege from this one city, forthwith led his army to Demetrius. Holland.

2. To raise or excite; stir up; bring into action; set in motion: as, to levy war.

Never did thought of mine levy offence. Shak., Pericles, ii. 5. 52.

Yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife Among themselves, and levy cruel wars. Milton, P. L., ii. 501.

3. To raise by force or authority; gather or collect by compulsion: as, to levy troops; to levy taxes or tolls; to levy contributions.

And did he not, in his protectorship, Levy great sums of money through the realm? Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 61.

If his estate had been confiscated, he wandered about from bawn to bawn and from cabin to cabin, levying small contributions. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xii.

4. In law: (a) To commence enforcement of, as a legal process, by seizing property thereunder for the purpose of raising means for payment. (b) To erect or construct: as, to levy a mill; to levy a ditch. Imp. Dict.—To levy a fine, at common law, to commence an action on a suit for assuring the title to lands or possessions.

II. intrans. To make a levy.—To levy on, to seize, under color of legal process, for the purpose of raising means for payment.

levy² (lev'1), n. An obsolete form of *levée*².

levy³ (lev'1), n. [An abbr. of eleven-penny bit.] 1†. A coin, the Spanish real, or eighth part of a dollar (twelve and a half cents), formerly current in the United States. Also called an elevenpenny bit. See *flip*².—2. The sum of twelve and a half cents; a "bit." [Local, U. S. (Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia), in both uses.]

levyne (lev'in), n. [Also levine: so called from Levy, a crystallographer.] A mineral found in Ireland, the Faroe Islands, and some other places. It belongs to the zeolite group, and is a hydrated silicate of calcium and aluminum. It is related to chabazite.

lew¹, n. [< ME. lewe, lewe, < AS. hleōw, shelter, whence in the contr. form hleō, E. lee: see lee 1.] Shelter; a place sheltered from the wind. [Prov. Eng.]

lew² (lū), a. [< ME. lewe, lewe (= MD. laaw, D. laaw = OHG. lāo (lāw), MHG. lā (lāw), G. lau = Icel. hler, hljör, warm, mild; orig. with initial h, OHG. hlō*, whence OF. flō, soft. F. flou, soft, softness), warm, tepid. The asserted derivation from *lew*¹, n., a shelter, is not obvious. Cf. equiv. lew, now luke; and cf. also lew-warm.] 1. Warm; lukewarm; tepid. [Prov. Eng.]

Thou art lew [var. in one MS. lew], nether cold nether hot. Wyck, Rev. iii. 16.

2†. Weak: faint. Halliwel.

lew³, n. An obsolete variant of *lee*¹.

But true it is, to th' end a fruitfull lew May every Climat in his time renew.

Sylvester, Ir. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 4.

lewd (lūd), a. [< ME. lewde, leude, laude, lewed, unlearned, ignorant, < AS. læwed, unlearned, ignorant, lay; appar. orig. pp. of læwan, weaken, enfeeble, also betray, = Goth. læwjan, betray, < læw, an occasion, opportunity. The development of senses has been somewhat peculiar.] 1†. Ignorant; unlearned; illiterate.

Til laude men that er unknunnd, That can na Latyn understand.

Hampole, Trick of Conscience.

For bo he lewed man or ellis lewed,

He noot how soone that he shal been afered.

Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, l. 283.

This leude and learned, by common experience, know to be most trewe. Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 45.

2†. Lay, as opposed to clerical.

For if a prest be foul, on whom we truste, No wonder is a lewed man to ruste.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 502.

3†. Rude; homely; uncultivated.

The ryme is lyght and lewed.

Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1090.

4†. Worthless; useless.

Chastite with-oute charite worth cheynid in helle; Hit is as lewede as a lampe that no lyght ys ynne.

Piers Plowman (C), ii. 186.

5. Bad; vile; vicious; wicked. [Now only prov. Eng.]

I n'er gave life to lewed and headstrong rebels.

Fletcher, Loyal Subject, v. 7.

So since into his church lewed hirelings elmb.

Milton, P. L., iv. 193.

6. Lustful; wanton; lascivious; libidinous.

The daughters of the Phillistines, which are ashamed of thy lewed way. Ezek. xvi. 27.

Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies, To be admired of lewed unhallowed eyes.

Shak., Locrine, i. 392.

=Syn. 6. See list under lascivious. lewdly (lūd'li), adv. [< ME. lewedly; < lewed + *-ly*².] 1†. In a lewd manner; unlearnedly; ignorantly.

But Chaucer (though he can but lewedly On metres and on ryming craftly)

Hath seyde hem in swiche English as he can Of oide time.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Man of Law's Tale, l. 47.

2†. Vilely; viciously; wickedly.

A sort of naughty persons, lewedly bent, Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor. Shak., 2 Hen. VI., ii. 1. 167.

3. Lustfully; wantonly; lasciviously.

lewdness (lūd'nes), n. [< ME. lewednesse; < lewed + -ness.] 1†. Ignorance; folly.

Ye blynde beestis, ful of lewednesse.

Chaucer, Fortune, l. 68.

2†. Viciousness; wickedness.—3. Lustfulness; lascivious behavior; lechery.—Syn. 3. Impurity, unchastity, licentiousness, sensuality, debauchery.

lewdsbys (lūd'zbi), n. [< lewd, with term. as in rudesby, etc.] A lewd or lecherous person. Imp. Dict.

lewdster (lūd'stēr), n. [< lewd + -ster.] A lewd person; a lecher.

Against such lewdsters and their lechery Those that betray them do no treachery.

Shak., M. W. of W., v. 3. 23.

lewed, a. A Middle English form of lewd.

lewis (lū'is), n. [Origin uncertain. Cf. levis.]

1. A contrivance for securing a hold on a block of stone in order that it may be raised from its position by a derrick. It consists of two side-pieces which fit into a dovetail recess cut in the stone, and between which a ring-tongue is put and fastened in such a way that, when lifted, the lewis gets a firm hold by wedging itself in the dovetail.

2. A kind of shears used in cropping woolen cloth. [Eng.]

The flocks [for paper-hangings] are obtained from the woolen-cloth manufacturers, being cut off by their shearing machines, called lewis by the English workmen. Ure, Dict., iii. 479.

lewis-bolt (lū'is-bōlt), n. A wedge-shaped bolt which in use is inserted like the shank of a lewis in a hole drilled in a stone, and fastened therein by pouring melted lead into the unoccupied part of the hole; an eye-bolt similarly inserted, and used, like a lewis, for lifting heavy stones. See cut under bolt.

lewis-hole (lū'is-hōl), n. The hole which is drilled in a stone for the reception of a lewis.

The wells are almost entire, and perhaps the work of the Romans, except the upper part, which seems repaired with the ruins of Roman buildings, for the lewis-holes are still left in many of the stones.

Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, ii. 287. (Davies.)

Lewisia (lū-is'i-ā), n. [NL. (F. T. Pursh, 1814), named after Capt. M. Lewis, of the Lewis and Clark expedition to the Rocky Mountains.] A genus of polypetalous plants belonging to the natural order Portulacaceae, the purslane family, distinguished by having from 5 to 8 sepals and from 8 to 10 petals. There are but 2 species, herbs with narrow woolly leaves and handsome rose-colored flowers open only in sunshine, found only in northwestern North America. One species, L. rediviva, is used as food by the Oregon Indians. It is the bitter-root (racine amère) of the early French settlers, and is said to be very nutritious. It is also called tobacco-root, because when cooked it has a tobacco-like odor. These plants are hardy and ornamental in cultivation.

lewkt, a. A Middle English form of *luke*¹.

lewket, n. A Middle English form of leathy.

lewth (lūth), n. [Also spelled irreg. looth; < ME. lewth, < AS. hleōth, hleōth, shelter, < hleōw, shelter: see *lee*¹, n.] Shelter; warmth. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

lew-warm (lū'wārm), a. [Also spelled irreg. loo-warm, lu-warm; < *lew*² + warm. Cf. luke-warm.] Lukewarm; tepid. [Archaic.]

We found pieces of loo-warm pork among the salad, and pieces of unknown yielding substance in the raquet. R. L. Stevenson, Inland Voyage, p. 239.

lewzernet, n. A variant of *lucerne*².

lex (leks), n.; pl. leges (lĕ'jĕz). [L. lex (leg-), law, lit. that which lies or is laid down: see *law*¹ and *lie*², r. i.] Law: used in various phrases.—Lex domicilii, the law of the place of domicile.—Lex fori, the law of the jurisdiction where the action is pending.—Lex Gondobada. See Papian code, under code.—Lex Julia, a Roman law of the time of Augustus, regulating marriage, encouraging marriage portions, and discouraging celibacy.—Lex loci, the law of the place; local law.—Lex loci contractus, the law of the place where the contract is made.—Lex loci rei sitæ, the law of the place where the subject of action is situated.—Lex mercatoria, the law of merchants; the system of usages of commerce in force in commercial nations generally, and recognized by the courts as part of the law of the land.—Lex non scripta, the unwritten or common law.—Lex scripta, the written or statute law.—Lex talionis, the law of retaliation, providing that the punishment should be the same in kind as the crime, as an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, etc.

lex. An abbreviation of lexicon.

lexical (lek'si-kəl), a. [< lexic(om) + -al.] 1. Relating to or connected with the vocabulary of a language: as, lexical fullness; lexical knowledge.

The advance of Wycliffe upon Langland is chiefly grammatical, not lexical. G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., vii.

2. Of or pertaining to a lexicon.

lexically (lek'si-kəl-i), adv. In a lexical manner; according to lexical principles; as regards vocabulary.

The Anglo-Saxon is not grammatically or lexically identifiable with the extant remains of any Continental dialect. G. P. Marsh, Hist. Eng. Lang., p. 43.

2. Of or pertaining to a lexicon.

lexically (lek'si-kəl-i), adv. In a lexical manner; according to lexical principles; as regards vocabulary.

The Anglo-Saxon is not grammatically or lexically identifiable with the extant remains of any Continental dialect. G. P. Marsh, Hist. Eng. Lang., p. 43.

lexicographer (lek-si-kog'ra-fēr), n. [Cf. F. lexicographique = Sp. lexicográfico = Pg. lexicographo = It. lessicografico; < NL. lexicographus, < MGr. λεξικογράφος, one who writes a lexicon, < Gr. λεξικόν, a lexicon, + γράφειν, write: see graphic.] A compiler of a lexicon or dictionary; one employed in the making of a vocabulary or word-book of a language, and giving definitions, with or without other explanatory matter, in the same or another language.

Whether it be decreed by the authority of reason, or the tyranny of ignorance, that of all the candidates for literary praise the unhappy lexicographer holds the lowest place, neither vanity nor interest incited me to inquire. Johnson, Plan of Eng. Dict.

lexicographic (lek'si-kō-graf'ik), a. [= F. lexicographique = Sp. lexicográfico = Pg. lexicographico = It. lessicografico, < NL. lexicographicus, < lexicographia, lexicography: see lexicography and -ic.] Of or pertaining to lexicography.

lexicographical (lek'si-kō-graf'ikəl), a. [< lexicographic + -al.] Same as lexicographic.

lexicographically (lek'si-kō-graf'ikəl-i), adv. In a lexicographic manner; as regards lexicography.

lexicographist (lek-si-kog'ra-fist), n. [< lexicograph-y + -ist.] A lexicographer. [Rare.]

The good old lexicographist, Adam Littellton. Southey, The Doctor, clxxxiv.

lexicography (lek-si-kog'ra-fī), n. [= F. lexicographie = Sp. lexicografía = Pg. lexicographia = It. lessicografia, < NL. lexicographia, < MGr. as if λεξικογραφία*, < λεξικογράφος, one who writes a lexicon: see lexicographer.] 1. The art or science of compiling lexicons or word-books; the scientific exposition of the forms, pronunciation, signification, and history of words.—2. The act or process of making a dictionary.

Lewis.

Such is the fate of hapless lexicography that not only darkness, but light, impedes and distresses it: things may be not only too little, but too much known, to be happily illustrated. Johnson, Pref. to Dict.

lexicological (lek'si-kō-loj'i-kal), a. [< lexicology + -ic + -al.] Pertaining to lexicology; relating to the science of words: as, lexicological studies.

For every one of sixty-seven dialect centres, the author's lexicological collection contains three hundred and fifty articles. A. M. Elliott, Amer. Jour. Philol., IV. 488.

lexicologist (lek-si-kol'ō-jist), n. [< lexicology + -ist.] One who is skilled in lexicology.

lexicology (lek-si-kol'ō-ji), n. [< Gr. λεξικόν, a lexicon, + -λογία, < λέγειν, say: see -ology.] The science of words; that branch of learning which treats of the forms, derivation, signification, and relations of words.

lexicon (lek'si-kōn), n. [= F. lexique = Sp. lexico = Pg. lexicon = It. lessico, < ML. NL. lexicon, < Gr. (MGr.) λεξικόν (sc. βιβλίον, book), a lexicon, neut. of λεξικός, of words, < λέξις, a saying, speech, word, < λέγειν, speak: see legend.] A word-book; a vocabulary; a collection of the words of a language, usually arranged alphabetically and defined and explained; a dictionary: now used especially of a dictionary of Greek or Hebrew.

In the lexicon of youth which Fate reserves for a bright manhood, there is no such word as -fail.

Bulwer, Richelieu, II. 2.

= Syn. Dictionary, Glossary, etc. See vocabulary.

lexiconist (lek'si-kōn-ist), n. [< lexicon + -ist.] A writer of a lexicon. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

lexigraphic (lek-si-graf'ik), a. [< lexicography + -ic.] Pertaining to lexicography.

lexigraphical (lek-si-graf'i-kal), a. [< lexicographic + -al.] Same as lexigraphic.

lexigraphy (lek-sig'ra-fi), n. [(Cf. MGr. λεξιγραφία, equiv. to λεξικογράφος: see lexicographer) < Gr. λέξις, a word (see lexicon), + γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art or practice of defining words. [Rare.]

lexiphanic (lek-si-fan'ik), a. [< Gr. λεξιφάνης, a phrasemonger (found only as a proper name), < λέξις, a speech, word (see lexicon), + φαίνειν, show.] Bombastic; turgid; inflated. Campbell.

lexiphanicist (lek-si-fan'i-sizm), n. [< lexiphanic + -ism.] The habit of using a pompous or turgid style in speaking or writing. Campbell.

ley¹, v. An obsolete form of lay¹.

ley², n. An obsolete or dialectal form of lea¹, lay², and lyc³.

ley³ (lä), n. [Sp., lit. law, < L. lex (leg-), law: see law¹ and alloy², alloy.] Yield; produce; assay-value.

The costs of the Haciendas amount to 301,654 dollars; the produce, or ley, of each cargo averages 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ dollars.

Ward's Mexico, II. 511.

Ley de oro, percentage of gold contained in silver bullion. — Ley de plata, quantity of silver which the ore contains. — De buena ley, of superior quality: said of ores.

ley¹, n. See lea³.

Leyden jar, Leyden vial. See jar³.

Leydigian (li-dig'i-an), a. [< Leydig (see def.) + -ian.] Described by or named after F. Leydig, a German zoölogist, born 1821. — Leydigian organs, the antennal sense-organs of insects, minute sacs inclosed in membrane and communicating with branches of the antennal nerves, sometimes prolonged externally as papillae: regarded by Leydig as organs of smell, by others as auditory organs. Lefebvre and Gerstaecker support Leydig's view of their function.

leye¹, leye², etc. See ley¹, etc.

leyelond¹, n. An obsolete form of lealand.

leyert¹, n. An obsolete spelling of layer.

ley-pewter, n. Inferior pewter made for large vessels, having more lead and less tin than the superior qualities.

leysert¹, n. A Middle English form of leisure.

leystall¹, n. See laystall.

leyt¹, n. See leit¹.

leyvret¹, n. Same as layer.

leze-majesty, n. See lese-majesty.

L. H. In musical notation, an abbreviation for left hand.

L. H. D. An abbreviation of the Latin (New Latin) Litterarum humaniorum doctor, 'doctor of the more humane letters'—that is, of the humanities or of learning: a degree conferred by universities.

lherzolite (ler'zō-lit), n. [< Lherz (see def.) + Gr. λίθος, stone: see -lite.] A crystalline aggregate of olivin, enstatite, and diallage, with some picotite: a rock occurring about Lake Lherz and in the adjacent regions in the French Pyrenees. It has also been found in various other localities in Europe and North America. Some meteorites closely resemble lherzolite in mineralogical composition. See peridotite.

li¹ (lê), n. [Chin.] A Chinese weight, equal to the one thousandth part of a liang or ounce. A li of silver is nominally equal to the copper coin called a cash by Europeans in China, and ren by the Japanese.

li² (lê), n. [Chin.] A Chinese mile, equal to rather more than one third of an English mile, 27 $\frac{1}{2}$ li being equal to 10 miles.

Li. The chemical symbol of lithium.

Liabæ (li-ä'bê-ê), n. pl. [NL. (Cassini, 1826), < Liabum (see def.) + -æ.] A subtribe of composite plants of the tribe Senecionideæ, having the scales of the involucre imbricated in many series, the outer gradually shorter. It embraces five genera, of which Liabum is the type, all, with one exception, natives of tropical America and Mexico. The group was treated by Endlicher, De Candolle, and other botanists as a division of the subtribe Pectideæ under the tribe Vernoniaceæ, a classification still followed by some authors.

liability (li-ä-bil'i-ti), n.; pl. liabilities (-tiz). [< liable: see -bility.] 1. The state of being liable through obligation or duty; fixed or contingent responsibility; exposure to that which is or may be required: as, the liability of a principal for his agent's acts. In this sense, in law, it is sometimes used as including, and sometimes as excluding, contingent demands and unliquidated damages.

2. The state of being liable incidentally or by chance; exposure to that which is possible or probable; tendency; susceptibility: as, liability to accident or contagion; a physician's liability to broken rest.—3. That for which one is liable; that to which one is bound or exposed; a fixed or contingent obligation: as, to incur or assume a heavy liability (as for the payment of a debt or the performance of a service); the assets and liabilities of a bank.—Employers' Liability Act. See employer.—Individual liability, personal liability of one or more as individuals, as distinguished from official liability, as the liability of an executor, for instance, or as distinguished from the liability of a corporation of which persons are members, and for the debts of which they or some of them may become individually liable.—Limited liability, a principle of modern statute law, whereby, under certain conditions, participants in a partnership, joint-stock company, or other undertaking are held liable for joint debts or responsibilities only to the extent of their personal interest therein, or to such further extent as the law may prescribe, instead of to the full extent of their individual means, as at common law.

liable (li-ä-bl), a. [Not found in ME., being appar. a mod. formation, perhaps first in legal use; it is not clear whether it is a mere E. formation, < lie¹ + -able, meaning 'lying open' to obligation (cf. inelimable, < incline), or *< OF. as if liable, *< ML. as if ligabilis, < L. ligare (> F. lier), bind: see ligament, lien². No such OF. or ML. form has been found.] 1. Bound in law or equity; responsible; answerable: as, the surety is liable for the debt of his principal.

To Bridewell, to see the pressed men, where there are about 300. . . kept these three days prisoners, with little or no victuals, and pressed out, and, contrary to all course of law, without press-money, and men that are not liable to it. Peypis, Diary, II. 407.

A corporation is liable like an individual for its torts. Amer. Cyc., XV. 809.

2. Having an aptitude or tendency; subject; exposed, as to the doing or occurring of something evil, injurious, or erroneous: as, we are constantly liable to accidents; your plans are liable to defeat.

If here openly avouches, in a manner that is scarce liable to exception. Bacon, Physical Fables, II. Expl., note.

Yet, if my name were liable to fall
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. Shak., J. C., I. 2. 199.

Proudly secure, yet liable to fall
By weakest subtleties. Milton, S. A., I. 55.

Public conventions are liable to all the infirmities, follies, and vices of private men. Swift, Nobles and Commons, v.

3†. Subordinate; subject.

All that we upon this side the sea . . .
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed. Shak., King John, II. 1. 490.

Though they were objects of his sight, they were not liable to his touch. Addison, Spectator, No. 56.

4†. Fit; suitable.

Finding thee fit for bloody villany,
Apt, liable, to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death. Shak., K. John, IV. 2. 226.

= Syn. 2. Incident, Subject, Likely, etc. (see incident); Apt, Likely, etc. (see apt).

liableness (li-ä-bl-nes), n. The state of being liable; liability.

Now let it be considered what this brings the noble principle of human liberty to, particularly when it is possessed and enjoyed in its perfection, viz. a full and perfect freedom and liableness to act altogether at random. Edwards, On the Will, II. 13.

liaget, n. [< OF. F. liage, a binding, < lier, bind: see liable.] A league; an alliance.

liaison (li-ä-zōn'), n. [F., a union, an entanglement, = Pr. liazo = Sp. ligacion = Pg. ligação, < L. ligatio (n-), a binding: see ligation, of which liaison is but a F. form.] 1. A bond of union; an intimacy; entanglement; commonly, an illicit intimacy between a man and a woman.

He had liaisons with half the ladies in Rome. Froude, Caesar, p. 533.

2. In the French language, the linking or joining in pronunciation of a final consonant, usually silent, to the succeeding word when that begins with a vowel: for example, vous (vô) and avez, when coming together, are pronounced vô zavé.—3. In cooking, a thickening, generally of beaten eggs, intended to combine or amalgamate the ingredients of a dish.

Liana, liane (li-an'ä, li-an'), n. [< F. liane, a climbing or twining tropical plant, < lier, bind: see liable.] A general name for the climbing and twining plants in tropical forests which wind themselves round the stems of trees, often overtopping them and passing to other trees, or descending again to the ground.

Cliffs all robed in lianas that dropt to the brink of his bay. Tennyson, The Wreck.

liang (lyang), n. [Chin.] A Chinese ounce or tael. As used in commerce, it is one third heavier than the ounce avoirdupois, but the old standard was 579.84 grains troy; 16 liang make 1 kin or pound. (See catty.) It is divided into tenths called tsien (or mace), into hundredths called fun (or candareen), and into thousandths called li. See tael. Also spelled leang.

liar (li'är), n. [Prop., as in early mod. E., lier; early mod. E. also lyer, < ME. lygere, lygere, leghere, legher, etc., < AS. leogere (= leel. ljū-gari) (cf. equiv. D. leugenaar = MLG. loegenere = OHG. lugināri, lukināri, MHG. lügenere, G. lügner = Dan. lögner = Sw. lögnare, of diff. formation: see lain³), a liar, < leogan, lie: see lie² and -ar¹, -er¹.] One who lies; a person who knowingly utters falsehood; one who deceives by false report or representation.

The messenger was faule y-schent,
And oft y-cleped foule legher. Arthur and Merlin, p. 95.

Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false. Shak., M. W. of W., I. 1. 69.
And she to be coming and slandering me; the base little liar! Tennyson, The Grandmother.

The liar (Gr. ψευδόμενος), a Megaric sophism or logical puzzle, arising from the question whether a man who says he is lying is truly lying or lyingly telling the truth.

liard¹ (li'är), a. and n. [Also (Sc.) liart, ly-art; < ME. liard, < OF. liard, liart, liart = It. leardo (ML. liardus), liard, dapple-gray; as a noun, a gray horse.] 1. a. 1. Gray or dapple-gray: applied to a horse.

This carters thakketh his hors upon the croupe. . .
"That was wcl twight, myn owene lyard boy." Chaucer, Friar's Tale, I. 265.

Stedils stabilide in stallis, Lyarde and sore [sorrel]. MS. Lincoln, A. I. 17, f. 130. (Halliwell.)

2. Gray: applied generally.

Twa had manteeles o' doleful' black,
But ane wi' lyart linin'. Burns, Holy Fair.

II. n. 1. A dapple-gray horse.

He ligte adown of lyard, and ladde hym in his hande. Piers Plowman (B), xvii. 64.

2. The color gray or dapple-gray.

Colours nows to knowe attendeth ye:
The baye is goode coloure, and bronne purpure,
The lyarde and the white and browne is sure. Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 133.

[Obsolete or Scotch in all uses.]

liard² (liär), n. [F., < OF. liar, liard, liars, a small piece of money.] A small coin formerly current in France, from the fifteenth century,

"worth three deniers, or the fourth part of a sol." It was originally struck in silver, and afterward, from the reign of Louis XIV., in copper. The specimen illustrated weighs about 64 grains.

liard³ (li-är'), n. The tacamahac, or balsam-poplar, Populus balsamifera, of northern North America. [Canada.]

liar's-bench, n. A place in St. Paul's Cathedral in the sixteenth century, so called because it was said that the disaffected made appointments there. Nares.

liart, a. and n. See liard 1.
Lias (li'as), n. [< F. lias, OF. lias, lias, a hard freestone; prob. < Bret. liach, leach, a stone, = W. llech = Gael. leac, a stone (see cromlech).] In geol., the lower division of the Jurassic. It is particularly well developed in England, where it is distinguished by its wealth of organic remains, especially of ammonites, and where it is divided into three groups, each characterized by its assemblage of fossils, the rock being chiefly grayish limestones, shales, and marlstones. The Lias is hardly recognized as a distinct formation except in England and on the continent of Europe.

Liassic (li-as'sik), a. [< F. liassique; as Lias + -ic.] Belonging to the geological subdivision of the Jurassic called the Lias.

Liatris (li'a-tris), n. [NL. (J. C. D. Schreber, 1774); origin unknown.] A genus of composite plants of the tribe Eupatoriaceae and subtribe Liatris graminifolia.

 1, inflorescence; 2, lower part of plant with the corn-like rootstock; 3, antheridium; 4, flower; 5, corolla laid open; 6, bristle of the papus; 7, scale of the involucre.

Liatris graminifolia.
 1, inflorescence; 2, lower part of plant with the corn-like rootstock; 3, antheridium; 4, flower; 5, corolla laid open; 6, bristle of the papus; 7, scale of the involucre.

Adenostyleae; the button-snakeroots. They are perennial herbs, growing from large subterranean globose corms, with racemose or spicate heads of handsome rose-purple flowers.

lib (lib), v. t.; pret. and pp. libbed, ppr. libbing. [< D. lubben, MD. luppen, main, geld; see lop1. Cf. glib3.] To castrate. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

To capon, to geld, to lib, to spale. Florio.

lib² (lib), n. [A dial. var. of leap 2.] A basket. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

lib. An abbreviation of liber 1, 2.
libament (lib'a-ment), n. [< L. libamentum (cf. equiv. libamen), a drink-offering, < libare, pour out: see libate.] Same as libation.

This discourse being thus finished, we performed our oblations and libaments to the muses.
Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 652.

libanomancy (lib'a-nō-man-si), n. [< Gr. λιβανος (L. libanus), the frankincense-tree, & μαντεία, divination.] Divination by the burning of frankincense.

libanotophorous (lib'a-nō-tof'ō-rus), a. [< Gr. λιβανωφόρος, bearing frankincense, < λιβανωτός, frankincense (see libanotus), + φέρειν = E. bear1.] Bearing or producing frankincense.
 The libanotophorous region of the ancients.
Encyc. Brit., IX. 710.

libanotus (lib-a-nō'tus), n. [< Gr. λιβανωτός, frankincense, < λιβανος, the frankincense-tree.] Frankincense.

In that greater [altar] the Chaldeans burnt yearly in their sacrifices a hundred thousand talents of Libanotus.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 56.

libant (li'bant), a. [< L. liban(t)-s, ppr. of libare, take out a little taste: see libate.] Sipping; touching lightly. [Rare.]

She touched his eyelashes with libant lip,
 And breathed ambrosial odours o'er his cheek.
Landor.

libate (li'bāt), v.; pret. and pp. libated, ppr. libating. [< L. libatus, pp. of libare (> It. libare = Pg. Sp. libar), take out a little taste, sip, pour out, = Gr. λείβειν, pour out, make a libation of (wine or other liquor) in honor of a divinity.] I. intrans. To make a libation, as by pouring out wine.

II. trans. 1. To pour out, as wine or milk. —2. To make a libation to; honor with a libation. [Rare and incorrect.]

A son of Israel has no gods whom he can libate.
L. Wallace, Ben-Hur, p. 441.

libation (li-bā'shōn), n. [< F. libation = Sp. libación = Pg. libação = It. libazione, < L. libatio(n)-, a drink-offering, < libare, pp. libatus, pour out: see libate.] 1. The act of pouring a liquid, usually wine, either on the ground or on a victim in sacrifice, in honor of some deity. Libation was practised by the ancient Greeks and Romans on various occasions, both public and private; and the drink-offering of the Jews was of similar character.

2. The wine or other liquid poured out in honor of a deity; a drink-offering.

The goblet then she took, with nectar crown'd,
 Sprinkling the first libations on the ground.
Dryden, Æneid, l. 1031.

May every joy be yours! nor this the least,
 When due libation shall have crown'd the feast,
 Safe to my home to send your happy guest.
Pope, Odyssey, xiii.

libatory (li'bā-tō-ri), a. [< L. as if libatorius (cf. neut. libatorium, a libation-vessel), < libare, pp. libatus, pour out: see libant, libation.] Of or pertaining to libation.

libavius (li-bā'vi-us), n. [Named after the discoverer, A. Libavius, a German chemist (died 1616).] Tin chlorid, SnCl₄, a colorless volatile and fuming corrosive liquid, used in dyeing as a mordant.

libbard, n. An obsolete variant of leopard.

libbet, v. An obsolete form of live 1.

libbet (lib'et), n. [Formerly also lybbet; perhaps < lib1, in the sense 'lop,' orig. 'a piece lopped off.'] 1. A billet; a stick. [Prov. Eng.]

A besome of byrche, for habes verye fit,
 A longe lastinge lybbet for lubbers as meete.
Harmar, Caveat for Common Curstors (1547). (Nares.)

A little staffe or lybbet, bacillus.
Withals, Dict. (ed. 1608), p. 317. (Nares.)

2. pl. Rags in strips. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

libeccio (li-bech'ō), n. [< It. libeccio, < L. Libis, < Gr. Λιβ, the southwest wind: see Libyan.] The southwest wind.

Forth rush the Levant and the Ponent winds,
 Eurus and Zephyr, with their lateral noise, Sirocco and Libeccio.
Milton, P. L., x. 706.

libel (li'bel), n. [< ME. libel, < OF. libel, libeau, m., libele, libelle, F. libelle, f., = Sp. libelo = Pg. It. libello, m., < L. libellus, m., a little book, pamphlet, note, petition, letter, lampoon, libel, dim. of liber, a book: see liber1.] 1. A writing of any kind; a written declaration or certificate.

May I nat axe a libel, Sire Somonour,
 And answer there by my procurator
 To swiche thyng as men wole apposen me?
Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 297.

And it hath ben seid, whosoever levet his wyf, give he to hir a libel of forsaking [authorized version, "writing of divorcement"].
Wyclif, Mat. v. 31.

2. In admiralty law, Scots law, and Eng. eccles. law, a writing or document instituting a suit and containing the plaintiff's allegations.—3. A lampoon.

Plots have I isid, inductions dangerous,
 By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
 To set my brother Clarence and the King
 In deadly hate the one against the other.
Shak., Rich. III., l. 1. 33.

More sold things do not show the complexion of the times so well as Ballads and Libels.
Selden, Table-Talk, p. 68.

4. A defamatory writing made public; a malicious and injurious publication, expressed in printing or writing, or by signs or pictures, tending either to injure the memory of one dead or the reputation of one alive, and to expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule.

We have in a libel 1st, the writing; 2d, the communication, called by the lawyers the publication; 3d, the application to persons and facts; 4th, the intent and tendency; 5th, the matter—diminution of fame.

Burke, Powers of Juries in Prosecutions for Libels.
 Libel is defamation published by means of writing, printing, pictures, images, or anything that is the object of the sense of sight.
Cooley.

5. The crime of publishing a libel; as, he was guilty of libel.—6. In general, defamation; a defamatory remark or act; malicious misrepresentation in conversation or otherwise; anything intended or which tends to bring a person or thing into disrepute.

Dost not know that old Mansfield, who writes like the Bible, Says the more 'tis a truth, Sir, the more 'tis a libel?
Burns, The Reproof.

His conversation is a perpetual libel on all his acquaintance.
Sheridan, School for Scandal, l. 1.
Fox's Libel Act, an English statute of 1792 (32 Geo. III., c. 80) empowering a jury on the trial of a criminal libel to give a general verdict upon the whole issue, without being required by the court to find a verdict of guilty on proof of publication and of the sense ascribed in the information.—Libel Act, an English statute of 1843 (6 and 7 Vict., c. 96) which authorizes a defendant sued for libel to plead no malice, and that an apology was made. Compare Fox's Libel Act, above.—Syn. 4. See aspere and lampoon.

libel (li'bel), v.; pret. and pp. libeled or libelled, ppr. libeling or libelling. [= F. libeller = Sp. libelar, draw up a legal demand, libel; from the noun: see libel, n.] I. trans. 1. In admiralty law, Scots law, and Eng. eccles. law, to serve a libel upon; institute suit against; present a formal charge against for trial, as against a clergyman for conduct unbecoming his office, or against a ship or goods for a violation of the laws of trade or revenue. See libel, n., 2.—2. To defame or expose to public hatred or contempt by a malicious and injurious publication, as by a writing, picture, or the like; lampoon.

Thou shalt libel, and I'll cudgel the rascal.
B. Jonson, Poetaster, iv. 4.

But our work is neither to libel our Auditors nor to flatter them, neither to represent them as better nor worse than they are.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. iii.

II. intrans. To spread defamation, written or printed: with against.

What's this but libelling against the senate?
Shak., Tit. And., iv. 4. 17.

libelant, n. See libellant.

libeler, libeller (li'bel-er), n. [< libel, v., + -er1.] One who libels; a lampooner.

There is not in the world a greater error than that which fools are apt to fall into, and knaves with good reason to encourage, the mistaking a satirist for a libeller.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, Advertisement.

libelist, libellist (li'bel-ist), n. [< F. libelliste, a libelist, < libelle, a libel: see libel, n.] A libeler. Imp. Dict.

libella (li-bel'ā), n.; pl. libellæ (-ē). [L., level, water-level, dim. of libra, a balance: see libra. Hence ult. (< L. libella) E. level, q. v.] 1. A small balance.—2. An instrument for taking levels; a level.—3. [cap.] A southern constellation which Lacaille, after 1754, proposed to substitute for Triangulum Australe, which dates from the fifteenth century.—4. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of dragon-flies. Selys-Longchamps, 1840.

libellant (li'bel-ant), n. [< F. libellant, ppr. of libeller, draw up a legal demand, libel: see libel, v.] One who brings a libel or institutes a suit in a court, especially in an ecclesiastical or an admiralty court. Also libelant.

The counsel for the libellant contended they had a right to read the instructions.
Cranch.

libeller, libellist. See libeler, libelist.

libellous, libellously. See libelous, libelously.

Libellula (li-bel'ū-lā), n. [NL.; so called because they hold their wings extended like the leaves of a book; < L. libellulus, a very little book, dim. of libellus, a little book: see libel, n.] 1. A Linnean genus of pseudoneuropterous insects with mandibulate mouth and anal forceps. (a) A genus coextensive with Libellulina, Libellulidæ, or the modern suborder Odonata of the order Pseudoneuroptera. (b) A genus containing forms considered typical of the modern restricted family Libellulidæ. The abdomen is comparatively short, flattened, and tapering, and the male claspers are reduced. See cut under dragon-fly.

2. [i. e.] Any dragon-fly or libellulid.

libellulid (li-bel'ū-lid), n. A member of the family Libellulidæ.

Libellulidæ (li-be-lū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Libellula + -idæ.] A family of pseudoneuropterous insects of the group Libellulina or Odonata; the dragon-flies, devil's-darning-needles, or mosquito-hawks. (a) Coextensive with Libellulina, and divided into three groups, Agrionina, Libellulina, and Æschnina. Also Libellulina, Libellulidæ, Libelluloidæ. (b) Restricted to forms typified by the genus Libellula in a narrow sense, having the wings unequal, the triangles of the anterior wings dissimilar, and the anterior genital armature of the male free.

Libellulina (li-bel'ū-li-nā), n. pl. [NL., < Libellula + -ina.] A group of pseudoneuropterous insects; the dragon-flies. (a) A superfamily, same as Odonata, or as Libellulidæ in a broad sense, characterized by the long and more or less slender and cylindrical abdomen ending in an anal armature, an enormous head and thorax, the former globular with immense eyes, the latter square with its tergal parts small and its flank pieces enlarged and rising up in front to take the place of the aborted prothorax. The antennæ are short and setiform, and the mouth is not provided with palps. The wings are large, long, and approximately equal in size and shape. The tarsi are trimerous, and the second abdominal segment of the male is furnished with accessory genitalia. Metamorphosis is incomplete; the larvae are active, aquatic, and voracious; and the pupa resembles the larva. The Libellulina are composed of three families, named Libellulidæ, Agrionidæ, and Æschnidæ. (b) A subfamily, same as Libellulidæ in a narrow sense, or as Libellulina. See cut under dragon-fly.

Libellulinae (li-bel-ū-lī-nō), n. pl. [NL., < Libellula + -inae.] A subfamily of Libellulidae: same as Libellulina (b).

libelluline (li-bel'ū-lin), a. Of or pertaining to the Libellulina; resembling a dragon-fly. See cut under dragon-fly.

libelous, libellous (li'bel-us), a. [< libel + -ous.] Containing a libel; of the nature of a libel; defamatory; containing that which exposes to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule; as, a libelous picture.

It was the most malicious surmise that had ever been brewed, howsoever countenanced by a libellous pamphlet. Sir H. Wotton.

libelously, libellously (li'bel-us-li), adv. In a libelous manner.

liber (li'bēr), n. [< L. liber, the inner bark of a tree (cf. Gr. λερίς, a scale: see lepis), also, because such bark was once used for writing on (cf. book as related to beech, and paper as related to papyrus), a writing consisting of several leaves, a book, a division of a book. Hence library, etc.] 1. In bot., the inner bark of exogenous stems, lying next the cambium, and enveloped by the corky layer. When perfect it contains, besides parenchyma, sieve-cells and bast-cells, the last being the characteristic element. Also called bast and endoplœum. See bast 1, 2, and bark 2, 1.

2. A book: used in English especially with reference to the books in which deeds, mortgages, wills, and other public records are kept. Abbreviated l. and lib.

liber² (li'bēr), n. [Origin obscure.] See the quotation.

The roly horses have a peculiar kind of shafts, commonly made of iron, named libers, the purpose of which is to prevent the carriage from overrunning them. Ure, Dict., III. 333.

Liber³ (li'bēr), n. [L.] An ancient Italic divinity presiding over vineyards and wine: later identified by the Romans with the Greek Bacchus.

liberal (lib'e-ral), a. and n. [< ME. liberal, < OF. liberal, F. libéral = Sp. Pg. liberal = It. liberale, < L. liberalis, befitting a freeman, < liber (OL. laeber*, loebes), free; akin to libet, it pleases, Gr. λίπτεν, desire, Skt. √ lubh, desire, AS. leaf, dear, luftan, love: see leaf, *love*¹, *leave*². From the same L. source (liber, libet) are ult. E. liberate, liberty, libertine, libidinous, *liber*³, *libery*², deliver, etc.] I. a. 1. Befitting a freeman, or a state, condition, or situation free from narrow limitations; free in scope; of wide or ample range or extent; not narrowly limited or restricted; expanded; comprehensive: as, a liberal education; the liberal arts or professions; liberal thought or feeling; liberal institutions; a liberal policy in government; a liberal interpretation or estimate.

So wonderful were the graces of Solomon that they overcame the highest expectation, and the liberal belief. Ep. Hall, Contemplations, xvii. 6.

To love her [Lady Elizabeth Hastings] was a liberal education. Steele, Tatler, No. 49.

Now the perfection of man as an end and the perfection of man as a mean or instrument are not only not the same, they are in reality generally opposed. And as these two perfections are different, so the training requisite for their acquisition is not identical, and has, accordingly, been distinguished by different names. The one is styled liberal, the other professional education—the branches of knowledge cultivated for these purposes being called respectively liberal and professional, or liberal and lucrative, sciences. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaph., I.

The study of them [the classics] is fitly called a liberal education, because it emancipates the mind from every narrow provincialism, whether of egoism or tradition, and is the apprenticeship that every one must serve before becoming a free brother of the guild which passes the torch of life from age to age. Lovell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 177.

2. Free in views or opinions; expansive in purpose or aim; not narrow, bigoted, or intolerant; specifically, favorable to personal, political, or religious liberty; opposed to narrow conservatism or undue restriction: as, a liberal thinker; a liberal Christian; a liberal statesman; the Liberal party (in the politics of some countries).

It was a Scotchman, Buchanan, who first brought liberal principles into clear relief. Lecky, Rationalism, I. 150.

A livelier bearing of the outward man, . . . A bright, fresh twinkle from the week-day world, Tell their plain story;—yes, thine eyes behold A cheerful Christian from the liberal fold. O. W. Holmes, A Rhymed Lesson.

A Liberal leader here in England is, on the other hand, a man of movement and change, called expressly to the task of bringing about a modern organisation of society. M. Arnold, Nineteenth Century, XIX. 652.

3. Free in bestowal or concession; generously inclined; ready to impart or bestow; bountiful; munificent; magnanimous: followed by with or of before the thing bestowed, and to before the recipient: as, a liberal donor; to be liberal with one's money; to be liberal to an opponent in debate.

Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels, Be sure you be not loose. Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 1. 126.
Nature had been . . . liberal of personal beauty to her. Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 2.
Pure is the nymph, though liberal of her smiles. Couper, Task, iii. 712.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems or gold.
Whittier, An Autumn Festival.

4. Freely bestowed or yielded; marked by liberal or abundance; generous; ample: as, a liberal donation; a liberal harvest or flow of water; to make a liberal concession or admission.

But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand. Isa. xxxii. 8.

His wealth doth warrant a liberal dower. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., v. 5. 46.

5. Free in character or quality; candid; open; hence, with an added implication, unduly free; unrestrained; unchecked; licentious. [Obsol-lescent.]

For a tongue euer *liberal*l nourisheth folly. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 106.

Whether they cast any liberal looks towards any of the Kings women. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 368.

Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal villain, Confess'd the vile encounters they have had A thousand times in secret. Shak., Much Ado, iv. 1. 93.

Liberal Christianity, liberal theology, the doctrinal views respecting Christianity entertained by liberal Christians.—Liberal Christians, a general name assumed by certain Protestant denominations, especially the Unitarians and Universalists, who dissent from the principal tenets of what are commonly called the orthodox denominations.—Liberal party, a party united in advocacy of measures of progressive reform. As a distinctive designation in British politics, the name was adopted by the Whig party about 1830, to denote the body formed by the addition to their party of the Radicals. From that time it has been the name assumed by and usually given to that party which, in opposition to the Conservative party, has specifically devoted itself to the promotion of measures of progress and reform.—Liberal Union, in German politics, a party consisting of National Liberals who, chiefly because of adherence to doctrine of free trade, in 1880 withdrew their support from Prince Bismarck (Secessionists), together with other Liberals of similar views. In 1884 this party joined with the Progressists (Fortschrittler-partei) to form the German Liberal party.—Syn. 2. Catholic, tolerant.—3. Charitable, open-handed, free-handed.—4. Full, abundant, plentiful, unstinted.

II. n. 1. A person of liberal principles; one who believes in liberal reforms, or advocates intellectual, political, or religious liberty.—2. [cap.] Specifically, a member of a Liberal party in politics.

Most of those who now pass as Liberals are Tories of a new type. H. Spencer, Man vs. State, p. 1.

Constitutional Liberals, in Spanish politics, a party composed of former Republicans, who, under the leadership of Señor Sagasta, became supporters of the monarchical constitution established after the restoration of the Bourbon monarchy in Spain in 1874.—German Liberals, in German politics, a party of moderate Liberals, opposed to the policy of Prince Bismarck, formed in 1884 by the union of the Progressist party (Fortschrittler-partei) with the Liberal Union.—National Liberals, in German politics, a party which, before the creation of the German empire in 1871, advocated, along with progressive measures of reform, the completion of governmental unity in Germany. After that time it embraced those persons who, though of Liberal antecedents, continued in support of the later policy of Prince Bismarck.

Liberal-Conservative (lib'e-ral-kon-sēr'vativ), a. and n. I. a. In Great Britain, belonging to that wing or portion of the Conservative party which is most nearly in accord with the Liberals; occupying a position midway between that of the average Liberal and that of the average Conservative.

II. n. One who occupies the political position defined above.

Liberalia (lib'e-rā'li-ä), n. pl. [L., neut. pl. of Liberalis, < liber, Bacchus: see *liber*³.] An ancient Roman festival celebrated annually on March 17th, in honor of Liber and Libera.

liberalisation, liberalise, etc. See liberalization, etc.

liberalism (lib'e-ral-izm), n. [= F. libéralisme = Sp. liberalismo; as liberal + -ism.] 1. Liberal principles; the principles or practice of liberals; freedom from narrowness or bigotry, especially in matters of religion or politics.—2. Specifically, the political principles of a Liberal party.

The function of Liberalism in the past was that of putting a limit to the powers of kings. The function of true Liberalism in the future will be that of putting a limit to the powers of Parliaments. H. Spencer, Man vs. State, p. 107.

The effects of their [the Pedites] separation from official Liberalism . . . were early traceable. Gladstone, Gleanings, I. 127.

liberalist (lib'e-ral-ist), n. [< liberal + -ist.] A liberal.

liberalistic (lib'e-rā-lis'tik), a. [< liberalist + -ic.] Relating to or characterized by liberalism; conforming to liberal principles, especially in politics.

liberality (lib'e-ral'i-ti), n.; pl. liberalities (-tiz). [< ME. liberalite, < OF. liberalite, F. libéralité = Sp. liberalidad = Pg. liberalidade = It. liberalità, < L. liberalitas], a way of thinking befitting a freeman, generosity, < liberalis, befitting a freeman: see liberal.] 1. The quality of being liberal in thought or opinion; largeness of mind; catholicity; impartiality: as, liberality in religion or politics; he treats his opponent's views with great liberality.

Many treat the gospel with indifference under the name of liberality. J. M. Mason.

2. Freeness in imparting or yielding; disposition to give or concede; generosity; bounty; magnanimity: as, liberality in one's donations or concessions.

Among the comyns welth and conorde, And that our ryche men may vse liberalitye. Joseph of Arimathe (E. E. T. S.), p. 51.

In a bishop great liberality, great hospitality, actions in every kind great are looked for. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 24.

3. An expression or manifestation of generosity; that which is generously given.

Over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality, I'll mend it with a largesse. Shak., T. of the S., I. 2. 150.

A little before the Lord sent this rain of liberalities upon his people. N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 99.

=Syn. Bounty, Generosity, etc. (see beneficence), bountifulness; toleration, candor.

liberalization (lib'e-ral-i-zā'shōn), n. [< liberalize + -ation.] The act or process of liberalizing or making liberal. Also spelled liberalisation.

The end of education is the formation and liberalisation of character. The Academy, No. 875, p. 88.

liberalize (lib'e-ral-iz), v.; pret. and pp. liberalized, ppr. liberalizing. [= F. libéraliser = Sp. liberalizar = Pg. liberalisar; as liberal + -ize.] I. trans. To render liberal; enlarge the freedom or scope of; free from narrowness or prejudice: as, to liberalize the institutions of a country.

Grand, swelling sentiments of liberty I am sure I do not despise. They warm the heart, they enlarge and liberalize our minds; they animate our courage in a time of conflict. Burke, Rev. in France.

Some acquaintance with foreign and ancient literatures has the liberalizing effect of foreign travel. Lovell, Books and Libraries.

II. intrans. To become liberal. [Rare.]

After the rejection of the exclusive feature of the original plan, Mrs. Munger had liberalised more and more. Houells, Annie Kilburn, xvi.

Also spelled liberalise.

liberalizer (lib'e-ral-iz-ēr), n. One who or that which liberalizes, or makes liberal. Also spelled liberaliser.

Archery, cricket, gun and fishing-rod, horae and boat, are all educators, liberalizers. Emerson, Culture.

liberally (lib'e-ral-i), adv. In a liberal manner. (a) With a liberal scope or range; without narrowness or prejudice; impartially; freely. (b) With a liberal hand; bountifully; amply. (c) With undue freedom; licentious.

Liberal-Unionism (lib'e-ral-ū'nyōn-izm), n. The political attitude or opinions of the Liberal-Unionist party.

Liberal-Unionist (lib'e-ral-ū'nyōn-ist), n. and a. I. n. A member of that section of the Liberal party in Great Britain which from 1886, refusing to concur in Mr. Gladstone's policy of conceding home rule to Ireland, advocated the maintenance of the legislative union of 1801 essentially unimpaired, and therefore, from the importance they attached to the Irish question, made common cause with the Conservatives.

II. a. Of or belonging to the political party or section of the Liberal-Unionists.

liberate (lib'e-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. liberated, ppr. liberating. [< L. liberatus, pp. of liberare (> It. liberare = Sp. Pg. librar = F. libérer), set free, deliver, < liber, free: see liberal. Cf. *liber*³, *libery*², delivery.] 1. To set free; release from restraint or bondage; deliver: as, to liberate a slave or a prisoner; to liberate the mind from the shackles of prejudice.

It is an uneasy lot . . . to be present at this great spectacle of life and never be liberated from a small, hungry shivering self. George Eliot, Middlemarch, I. 307.

At last and forever I am mine and God's, Thanks to his liberating angel Death— Never again degraded to be yours. Browning, Ring and Book, I. 138.

2. To disengage; separate from something else: as, to liberate a gas from a solid. = Syn. 1. Emancipate, Manumit, etc. (see emancipate); Release, etc. (see disengage); disenthral, ransom, discharge, let go, turn loose.

liberate (lib'e-rāt), n. [< ML. liberata, delivery, livery; see livery².] In old Eng. law, a writ issued out of Chancery for the payment of pensions and similar royal allowances; also, a writ issued to the sheriff for the delivery of land and goods taken upon forfeits of recognizance. — liberate roll, the account kept in the old English exchequer of pensions and other allowances of money made under the great seal.

liberation (lib-e-rā'shōn), n. [< F. libération = Sp. liberación = Pg. liberação = It. liberazione, < L. liberatio(-n-), a freeing, < liberare, pp. liberatus, set free; see liberate, v.] The act of liberating or setting free; deliverance from restraint or confinement; enlargement; disengagement, as from constraint or obligation, or from mixture: as, liberation from prison or from debt; the liberation of a country from tyrannical government; the liberation of a gas.

liberationism (lib-e-rā'shōn-izm), n. [< liberation + -ism.] In British politics, the principles or opinions of the liberationists. Quarterly Rev., CLXII. 8.

liberationist (lib-e-rā'shōn-ist), n. [< liberation + -ist.] In British politics, one who is in favor of the disestablishment of the Church.

The object of the liberationists is sufficiently transparent. If the maintenance of the Established Church could be identified with the supremacy, it fall might be assured with the collapse of one political party. Quarterly Rev., CLXII. 3.

liberator (lib'e-rā-tor), n. [= F. libérateur = Sp. Pg. liberador = It. liberatore, < L. liberator, one who sets free, < liberare, pp. liberatus, set free; see liberate.] One who liberates or delivers; a deliverer.

He [Luther] was the great reformer and liberator of the European intellect. Buckle, Civilization, II. 534.

liberatory (lib'e-rā-tō-ri), a. [= F. libératoire; as liberate + -ory.] Tending to liberate or set free. [Rare.]

Liberian (li-bē'ri-an), a. and n. [< Liberia (see def.) (< L. liber, free) + -an.] I. a. Pertaining or relating to Liberia, a country on the western coast of Africa, colonized with liberated Africans by the American Colonization Society (beginning in 1822), and made a republic in 1847. II. n. An inhabitant of Liberia.

liberomotor (lib'e-rō-mō'tor), a. [Irreg. < L. liberare, free (see liberate), + motor, a mover.] Disengaging or setting free motor energy, as a nervous ganglion: correlated with recipiomotor and dirigomotor. See motor, a.

libertarian (lib-er-tā'ri-an), a. and n. [< libert(y) + -arian.] I. a. Of or pertaining to liberty, or to the doctrine of the freedom of the will (especially in an extreme form), as opposed to the doctrine of necessity; advocating the doctrine of free will: opposed to necessitarian.

I believe he [Dr. Alex. Crombie, author of an essay on philosophical necessity] may claim the merit of adding the word libertarian to the English language, as Priestley added that of "necessarian." Reid, Correspondence, p. 88.

The "power of acting without a motive," which Reid and other writers, on what used to be called the Libertarian side, have thought it necessary to claim. H. Sidgwick, Mind, XIII. 407.

II. n. One who maintains the doctrine of the freedom of the will (especially in an extreme form): opposed to necessitarian.

Though libertarians contend that it is possible for us at any moment to act contrary to our formed character and previous custom, still they and Determinists alike teach that it is much less easy than men commonly imagine to break the subtle unfeeling trammels of habit. H. Sidgwick, Methods of Ethics, p. 49.

libertarianism (lib-er-tā'ri-an-izm), n. [< libertarian + -ism.] The principles or doctrines of the libertarians. H. Sidgwick, Mind, XLI. 144.

liberticide¹ (lib'er-ti-sid or li-bēr'ti-sid), n. [= F. liberticide = Sp. liberticida, < L. liberta(-t)-s, liberty, + -cida, < cadere, kill.] A destroyer of liberty.

His country's pride The priest, the slave, and the liberticide, Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite. Shelley, Adonais, st. 4.

liberticide² (lib'er-ti-sid or li-bēr'ti-sid), n. [< L. liberta(-t)-s, liberty, + -cidium, < cadere, kill.] Destruction of liberty.

The principles of Christian morality and Christian philanthropy were violated in the maxims of liberticide which guided the dominant politics of the country. Whipple, Starr King.

libertinage (lib'er-tin-āj), n. [< F. libertinage; as libertine + -age.] 1. The character or belief of a libertine or free-thinker; laxity of opinion.

A growing libertinage, which disposed them to think slightly of the Christian faith. Warburton, Works, IX. xiii.

2. The conduct of a libertine or debauchee. Some fourteen years of squalid youth, And then libertinage, disease, the grave— Hell in life here, hereafter life in hell. Browning, Ring and Book, I. 150.

libertine (lib'er-tin), n. and a. [= F. libertin = Sp. Pg. It. libertino, < L. libertinus, a freedman, prop. adj., of or belonging to the condition of a freedman, < libertus, a freedman, < liber, free; see liberal, liberate, v.] In the later senses (4-7) the word logically depends on liberty, liberal. I. n. 1. In Rom. hist., a freedman; a person manumitted or set free from legal servitude.

By virtue of an act granted out of the senat, the libertines (i. e. the sonnes of freed-men) were enrolled into the fourre tribes of the citie. Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 1210.

2. A member of a Jewish synagogue mentioned in Acts vi. 9, probably composed of descendants of Jewish freedmen who had been expelled from Rome by Tiberius, and had returned to Palestine.

Then there arose certain of the synagoge, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, . . . disputing with Stephen. Acts vi. 9.

3. A freeman of an incorporate town or city. And used me like a fugitive, an inmate of a town, That is no city libertine, nor capable of their gown. Chapman, Hind, xv.

4. One who is free from or does not submit to restraint; one who is free in thought and action.

When he speaks, The air, a charter'd libertine, is still. Shak., Hen. V., I. 1. 48.

And though Rubens in his History is too much a Libertine in this respect, yet there is in this very place, which we now describe, much truth in the habit of his principal Figures, as of King Henry the Fourth, the Queen, her Son, the 3 Daughters, and the Cardinal. Lister, Journey to Paris, p. 39.

5. One who holds loose views with regard to the laws of religion or morality; an irreligious person; a free-thinker.

The second sort of those that may be justly number'd among the hinderers of Reformation are Libertines; these suggest that the Discipline sought would be intolerable. Milton, Reformation in Eng., I.

6. [cap.] A member of a pantheistic, antinomian sect which existed about 1530 in France and neighboring countries. The Libertines maintained that God alone exists, and that there is no distinction between right and wrong, since man, in obeying his own impulses, obeys God, who is in him, and consequently can never commit sin. The sect became grossly sensual, and finally disappeared.

That the Scriptures do not contain in them all things necessary to salvation is the fountain of many great and capital errors: I instance in the whole doctrine of the libertines, familists, quakers, and other enthusiasts, which issue in the corrupted fountain. Jer. Taylor.

7. A man given to the indulgence of lust; one who leads a dissolute, licentious life; a rake; a debauchee.

Like a puff'd and reckless libertine, Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads. Shak., Hamlet, I. 3. 49.

Libertines of Geneva, a body of avowed infidels and voluptuaries of the first half of the sixteenth century, who were evidently influenced by the sect mentioned above, if they were not representatives of it.

II. a. 1. Free; unrestrained. [Rare.]

I have rambled in this libertine manner of writing by way of Essay. Steele, Tatler, No. 172.

2. Licentious; dissolute; not under the restraint of or in accord with law or religion: as, libertine principles.

There are men that marry not, but chuse rather a libertine and impure single life than to be yoked in marriage. Bacon.

Panga arthritic, that infest the toe Of libertine excess. Cowper, Task, I. 100.

libertinism (lib'er-tin-izm), n. [< F. libertinisme; as libertine + -ism.] 1. The exercise of the privileges and rights of a libertine or freedman; exemption from servitude and its disabilities. [Rare.]

Dignified with the title of freeman, and denied the libertinism that belongs to it. Hammond, Works, IV. 486.

2. The state of being free or unrestrained in thought or action.

The genial libertinism of Horace. Sumner, Orations, I. 143.

3. Irreligiousness; regardlessness of the dictates of morality.

Ever since hath libertinism of all kinds promoted its interest, and increased its party. Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. iii.

4. The character or conduct of a libertine or rake; licentiousness; unrestrained indulgence of lust; debauchery; lewdness.

Libertism (lib'er-tizm), n. [< libert(y) + -ism.] Libertinism. [Rare.]

A writ of error, not of libertism, that those two principal leaders of reformation may not now come to be sued in a bill of licence, to the scandal of our Church. Milton, Judgement of Martin Bucer concerning Divorce.

liberty (lib'er-ti), n.; pl. liberties (-tiz). [< ME. liberte, libertee, < OF. liberte, F. liberté = Sp. libertad = Pg. liberdade = It. libertà, < L. liberta(-t)-s, OL. loeberta(-t)-s, freedom, < liber, free; see liberal.] 1. The state of being free, or exempt from external restraint or constraint, physical or moral; freedom; especially, exemption from opposition or irksome restraint of any kind.

The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Rom. viii. 21.

Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free. Gal. v. 1.

I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind, To blow on whom I please. Shak., As you Like It, II. 7. 47.

The natural liberty of man is to be free from any superior power on earth, and not to be under the will or legislative authority of man, but to have only the law of Nature for his rule. Locke, Of Government, II. iv. 22.

'Tis liberty alone that gives the flower Of fleeting life its lustre and perfume. Cowper, Task, v. 446.

The French notion of liberty is political equality; the English notion is personal independence.

Specifically—2. Freedom of the will; the power of election or free choice, undetermined by any necessity; exemption from internal compulsion or restraint in willing or volition.

Liberty . . . is the power a man has to do or forbear doing any particular action, according as its doing or forbearance has the actual preference in the mind. Locke, Human Understanding, II. xxi. 15.

Freedom from necessity is also called liberty of election, or power to choose, and implies freedom from anything invincibly determining a moral agent. It has been distinguished into liberty of contrariety, or the power of determining to do either of two actions which are contrary as right or wrong, good or evil; and liberty of contradiction, or the power of determining to do either of two actions which are contradictory, as to walk or to sit still, to walk in one direction or in another. Freedom from necessity is sometimes also called liberty of indifference, because, before he makes his election, the agent has not determined in favor of one action more than of another. Fleming, Vocab. Philos.

3. The condition of being exempt, as a community or an individual, from foreign or arbitrary political control; a condition of political self-government. Civil liberty implies the subjection of the individual members of a community to laws imposed by the community as a whole; but it does not imply the assent of each individual to these laws. An individual has civil liberty if he is a member of a community which possesses such liberty, and is in the enjoyment of the rights which the laws of the community guarantee him.

If not equal all, yet free, Equally free; for orders and degrees Jar not with liberty. Milton, P. L., v. 793.

Real liberty is neither found in despotism, nor in the extremes of democracy, but in moderate governments. A. Hamilton, Works, II. 416.

Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable. D. Webster, Second Speech on Foote's Resolution.

4. In law, freedom from all restraints except such as the lawful rights of others prescribe.—

5. Permission granted, as by a superior, to do something that one might not otherwise do; leave; specifically, permission granted to enlisted men in the navy to go on shore. Compare liberty-man.

There is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five till bell have told eleven. Shak., Othello, II. 2. 10.

There is no liberty for causes to operate in a loose and straggling way. Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, I. 18.

6. Immunity enjoyed by prescription or by grant; privilege; exemption; franchise: as, the liberties of the commercial cities of Europe.

It is the property of Englishmen, much more of religious Englishmen, and should be most of all of religious New Englishmen, to be tenacious and tender of their liberties. U. Oakes, Election Sermon (Tyler's Amer. Lit., II. 166).

7. A place or district within which certain special privileges may be exercised; the limits within which freedom is enjoyed by those entitled to it; a place of exclusive jurisdiction: generally in the plural: as, the liberties of a prison (the limits within which prisoners are free to move); within the city liberty; the Northern Liberties (a part of Philadelphia so named because originally consisting of districts having certain specific privileges).

We had told him that, if ours [our vessels] did trade within his liberties, they should do it at their own peril. Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 377.

Yet there are no people in the Liberty of Westminster that live in more credit than we do.

Footo, The Commissary, I.

We dropt with evening on a rustic town
Set in a gleaming river's crescent-curve,
Close at the boundary of the liberties.

Tennyson, Princess, I.

8. Action or speech not warranted by custom or propriety; freedom not specially granted; freedom of action or speech beyond the ordinary bounds of civility or decorum: as, may I take the liberty of calling on you?

This headstrong writer came; who, with a new-found art,
Made following authors take less liberty.

Dryden and Soame, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry, I. 130.
This Liberty of your Tongue will one Day bring a Confinement on your Body. Congreve, Love for Love, I. 3.

Aeres, I never saw him in my life.
Sir Luc. That's no argument at all—he has the less right then to take such a liberty. Sheridan, The Rivals, III. 4.

He was repeatedly provoked into striking those who had taken liberties with him. Macaulay.

9. In the manège, a curve or arch in a horse's bit affording room for the tongue.—At liberty. (a) Free from constraint; free: as, to set a person at liberty.

And yet within these five hours lived Lord Hastings, Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.

Shak., Rich. III., III. 6. 9.

(b) With freedom or power (to do something): as, he was not at liberty to disclose the secret.

I took one of the janizaries of the place, and paid him the usual Tribute, and found myself at perfect liberty to do what I pleased. Pococke, Description of the East, I. 9.

(c) Disengaged; not in use.

I dressed as well as I could for shivering, and washed when there was a basin at liberty.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, v.

Cap of Liberty. See cap and liberty-cap.—Civil liberty. See civil, and def. 3, above.—Forest liberties, Gallican liberties, jalliberties. See the qualifying words.—Liberties' Union Act, an English statute of 1850 (13 and 14 Vict., c. 105), providing for the incorporation of liberties with the counties in which they are situated.—Liberty hall. See hall.—Liberty of indifference. See quotation from Fleming under def. 1, and indifference.—Liberty of the press, freedom of the press from police restrictions of the right to print and publish; liberty to print and publish without previous permission from government. Liberty of the press is deemed to exist where the only restrictions on the right of publishing are amenability to judicial process for damages, or to punishment, after making an actionable or criminal publication, and amenability to judicial process to prevent intended publication on proof that it is injurious to rights of private property.—Liberty party in U. S. hist., a political party whose leading principle was the abolition of slavery. It arose about 1839, and nominated a candidate for President in 1840 and in 1844. From 1848 its members generally acted with the Free-soil and later with the Republican party.—Natural liberty, the power of acting as one thinks fit, without any restraint or control, unless by the law of nature. Blackstone. [Many writers, however, use natural liberty in the sense ascribed to civil liberty.]—Personal liberty, freedom from restraint of the person.—Political liberty, freedom from political usurpation; the condition of a people which participates in the making of its own laws, in a state which is not subject to foreign domination.—Religious liberty, the right of freely adopting and professing opinions on religious subjects, and of worshiping or refusing from worship according to the dictates of conscience, without external control.—To break liberty. See break.—Syn. Independence, etc. (see freedom); License, etc. (see leave 2, n.).

liberty-book (lib'ér-ti-buk), n. A book on a man-of-war which shows the length of liberty allowed, the time of returning, and the condition in which the man returned. Luce.

liberty-cap (lib'ér-ti-kap), n. A cap of the form known as the Phrygian, used as a symbol of political or personal liberty. The custom is taken from the supposed use of this cap as a token of the manumission of a slave in Rome. The red cap of the French extreme revolutionists (see bonnet-rouge) was identified with the Roman cap of liberty, which accordingly became the symbol of the French revolution.

liberty-man (lib'ér-ti-man), n. Naut., a sailor who has leave to go ashore; one who has been allowed a period of liberty for recreation.

It is a point with liberty-men to be pulled off and back by their shipmates.

R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 147.

liberty-pole (lib'ér-ti-pól), n. A tall flagstaff set up in honor of liberty, usually surmounted with the liberty-cap or other symbol of liberty. [U. S.]

The soldiers openly insulted the people, and in a few weeks cut down their liberty-pole.

Preble, Hist. of the Flag, p. 193.

libethenite (li-beth'en-it), n. [Libethen (see def.) + -ite 2.] The basic phosphate of copper, a mineral first found at Libethen in Hungary, having an olive-green color and crystallizing in the orthorhombic system. It is isomorphous with olivenite.

libidinist (li-bid'i-nist), n. [L. libido (libidin-), desire (see libidinous), + -ist.] One who is given to lewdness. [Rare.]

Nero, being monstrous incontinent himself, verily believed that all men were most foul libidinists.

P. Junius, Sin Stigmatized (1639), p. 350.

libidinosity (li-bid-i-nos'i-ti), n. [F. libidinosité; as libidinous + -ity.] The state or character of being libidinous; libidinousness.

libidinous (li-bid'i-nus), a. [F. libidineux = Sp. Pg. It. libidinoso, < L. libidinosus, libidinosus, full of desire, passion, or appetite, lascivious, < libido, lubido (libidin-, libidin-), desire, < libet, lubet, it pleases: see liberal.] Characterized by lust or lewdness; having or arising from an eager appetite for sexual indulgence; lustful; lewd; also, fitted to excite lustful desire.

It is not love, but strong libidinous will,
That triumphs o'er me.

Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, I. 1.

=Syn. Prurient, concupiscent. See list under lascivious.
libidinosly (li-bid'i-nus-li), adv. In a libidinous manner; with lewd desire; lustfully; lewdly.

libidinousness (li-bid'i-nus-nes), n. The state or quality of being libidinous; lustfulness; lewdness.

libken, libkint, n. [Appar. < live 1 (lib*) + ken 5.] A house; lodgings. [Old slang.]

To their libkens at the crackman's.

B. Jonson, Gipsies Metamorphosed.

These are the fees that I always charge a swell that must have his lib-ken to himself—thirty shillings a-week for lodgings, and a guinea for garnish; half-a-guinea a-week for a single bed. Scott, Guy Mannering, xlv.

liblongt, n. An obsolete form of live-long 2. Cotgrave.

Libocedrus (li-bō-sē'drus), n. [NL. (Endlicher, 1847); the first element is not obvious; the second is Gr. κέδρος, the cedar: see cedar.] A genus of coniferous trees of the tribe Cupressineae. It is closely related to Thuja, the arbor-vitæ, but distinguished from it by having only two fertile scales in the cone, and seeds united at the top. There are eight species, natives of Chili, California, China, Japan, New Zealand, and New Caledonia. L. deccurvens, the North American species, called white cedar, bastard cedar, post-cedar, and incense-cedar, is a large tree, sometimes 150 feet in height, ranging from Oregon to Mexico, with light, soft, durable wood. (See incense-cedar.) L. chilensis is the Chilian arbor-vitæ or alerce-tree.

libra (li'brā), n. [L. libra, a balance, a Roman pound (see livre); cf. Gr. λίτρα, a pound (see liter). Hence ult. livre, libella, level 1, etc.] 1. [cap.] An ancient zodiacal constellation, representing an ordinary pair of scales. This constellation was not commonly used among the Greeks, its place being occupied by the Chela, or Scorpion's Claws. It is found, however, in all the Egyptian zodiacs, going back to 600 B. C.; but there is reason to believe that it is not as old as the rest of the zodiac (that is, 2,000 years or more B. C.). Its principal stars, Kiifa borealis and Kiifa australis, 2.7 and 3.0 magnitude respectively, are at the base of an isosceles triangle of which Antares forms the vertex.

2. [cap.] The seventh sign of the zodiac, represented by the character ♎, which shows the scale-beam.—3. An Italian or Spanish pound. The Roman pound was 327 grains or 5,046 grains troy, and the Italian light-weight pounds seem to be derived from it, their heavy weights having another origin, as is shown in the following table:

	Libra.	Grains.	Libra.	Grains.
Grossa of Milan	11,776.7	Rome	5,234.0
Piccola of Milan	5,046.6	Messina	4,923.7
Naples	4,949.1	Tuscan	5,240.5
Piedmont	5,692.6	Grossa of Venice	7,363.0
Ragusa	5,772.7	Sattile of Venice	4,649.5

All these statements are taken from the work of the Russian Commission, and differ in some cases from Italian official figures. The Castilian libra was 7,101 grains; that of Portugal was 7,083.3 grains.

libral (li'bral), a. [L. libralis, of a pound weight, < libra, a pound: see libra.] Of or pertaining to a Roman libra or pound: as, the libral as, a Roman bronze coin weighing one pound or 12 ounces (compare as 4); the libral system, the Roman monetary system based on the libra or pound.

librarian (li-brā'ri-an), n. [In def. 1, < L. librarius, a transcriber of books, also a bookseller (> It. librajo = Sp. librero = Pg. livreiro, a bookseller, = OF. libraire, a bookseller, transcriber, a writer of books, F. libraire, a bookseller), < librarius, belonging to books: see library. In def. 2 as if directly < library + -an.] 1†. One who transcribes or copies books.

Charybdis thrice swallows, and thrice refunds, the waves: this must be understood of regular tides. There are indeed but two tides in a day, but this is the error of the librarian. Broome, Notes on the Odyssey.

2. The keeper or custodian of a library; one who has charge of the books and other contents of a library.

librarianship (li-brā'ri-an-ship), n. [librarian + -ship.] 1. The office of librarian.—2. The work of a librarian; the management of a library.

A very good basis for his modest plea for the recognition of librarianship as one of the learned professions. Science, VIII. 70.

library (li'brā-ri), n.; pl. libraries (-riz). [ME. libreric, < OF. librairie, librarie, libraire, a bookseller's shop, a bookcase, a library, F. librairie = Pr. librari = Sp. libreria (after F.) = Pg. livraria = It. libreria (after F.), a bookseller's shop, book-selling, also, in imprints, a publication-office, < L. libraria, a bookseller's shop, ML. a library, cf. L. librarium, a bookcase, fem. and neut. respectively of librarius, belonging to books, < liber, a book: see liber 1. For the Rom. word for 'library' in the usual E. sense, see bibliotheca.] 1. A place set apart for the keeping and use of books and other literary material; a room, set of rooms, or a building in which a collection of books for reading or study is kept.

His library (where busts of poets dead
And a true Pindar stood without a head)
Received of wits an undistinguished race.

Pope, Epol. to Satires, I. 235.

2. A collection of books, whether manuscript or printed, which may include also pamphlets, maps, and other literary material, intended for reading, study, or reference, as distinguished from a bookseller's stock, which is intended for sale. Libraries are of different kinds and classes according to the tastes of their owners, the readers for whom they are designed, their contents, and the manner in which they may be used, as private, public, special or professional, general, consulting or circulating, etc.

Knowing I loved my books, he furnish'd me
From mine own library with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Shak., Tempest, I. 2. 167.

Alexandrian library, a library at Alexandria (see Alexandrian), destroyed about 47 B. C. A supplementary or second library was in the Serapeum. This library (according to some writers who discredit its sacking by the Arabs) was entirely destroyed under Theophilus, A. D. 391.—Ambrosian, Cottonian, Laurentian, etc., library. See the adjectives.—Circulating library. (a) A library the books of which circulate among the subscribers; distinguished from a consulting or reference library, where books may be consulted, but from which they may not be taken away. (b) Specifically, a collection or stock of books kept exclusively for lending out, as a private enterprise, either for a fixed payment on each or for a periodical subscription.

library-keeper (li'brā-ri-kē'pēr), n. The custodian of a library: formerly used for the now current librarian, 2.

librate 1 (li'brāt), v.; pret. and pp. librated, ppr. librating. [L. libratus, pp. of librare, poise, weigh, balance, < libra, a balance: see libra.] 1. trans. To hold in equipoise; poise; balance.

II. intrans. To move as a balance; be poised.

The birds of the air librating over me served as a canopy from the rays of the sun. Beekford, Vathek, p. 193.

librate 2 (li'brāt), n. [ML. librata, the value of a pound (librata terre, appar. orig. a piece of land producing an annual rent of one pound), < L. libra, a pound: see libra.] 1. Land of the annual value of one pound.—2. A piece of land containing 4 oxgangs of 13 acres each. Minshew; Bailey.

The sheriffs were ordered to send [to a provincial council] all persons who possessed more than twenty librates of land. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 179.

libration (li-brā'shon), n. [F. libration = Sp. libracion = Pg. libração = It. libracione, < L. libratio (n-), a poising, < librare, pp. libratus, poise: see librate 1.] 1. The act of librating or balancing, or the state of being balanced; a state of equipoise; balance.—2. In astron., a real or apparent libratory or oscillating motion, like that of a balance before coming to rest.—Libration of the earth, a phrase used by some of the older astronomers to describe that feature of the earth's motion by which, while it revolves in its orbit, its axis constantly continues parallel to itself.—Libration of the moon, an apparent irregularity of the moon's motion, whereby those parts very near the border of the lunar disk alternately become visible and invisible, indicating, as it were, a sort of vibratory motion of the lunar globe. The libration of the moon is of three kinds: (a) libration in longitude, or a seeming vibratory motion according to the order of the signs, due to the fact that the angular motion of the moon in her orbit is not precisely uniform, as her rotation about her axis is; (b) libration in latitude, in consequence of her axis being inclined to the plane of her orbit, so that sometimes one of her poles and sometimes the other declines, as it were, or dips toward the earth; (c) diurnal libration, which is simply a consequence of the lunar parallax. In the last case, an observer at the surface of the earth perceives points near the upper edge of the moon's disk, at the time of her rising, which disappear as her elevation is increased; while new ones on the opposite or lower edge, that were before invisible, come into view as she descends toward the horizon. If the observer were placed at the earth's center he would perceive no diurnal libration.

libratory (lī'brā-tō-ri), a. [< *librate*¹ + -ory.] Balancing; moving like a balance as it tends to become stationary; oscillating.

Astronomers . . . ascribe to the moon a libratory motion, or motion of trepidation, which they pretend is from east to west, and from north to south, because that, at full moon, they sometimes discover parts of her disk which are not discovered at other times.

Diet. of Trevoux. (Latham.)

librettist (lī-brēt'ist), n. [< libretto + -ist.] A writer of librettos; one who writes the words for an extended musical composition.

Cambert . . . built his work on the Florentine model, and, encouraged by success, wrote several others, on the strength of which he, with his librettist Perrin, instituted the Académie Royale de Musique. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 87.

libretto (lī-brēt'ō), n. [It., dim. of libro, a book, < L. liber, a book; see *liber*¹.] 1. A book containing the words of an extended musical composition, like an opera or an oratorio.—2. The words themselves of such a work; the text.

libriform (lī'bri-fōrm), a. [< L. liber, inner bark, + forma, form.] Having the form of liber or bast.—Libriform cells or fibers, those wood-cells which resemble liber in being extremely thick-walled.

The wood of the beech consists of the usual elements—vessels, tracheides, libriform fibres, and wood parenchyma. Nature, XXXIX. 511.

librilla (lī-bril'ī), n. [ML., a balance (steelyard), a warlike engine, dim. of L. libra, a balance; see libra.] A fool's bauble.

libs (lībz), n. [L., < Gr. λίβη, the southwest wind, perhaps, like λίβη (λίβη), any liquid poured forth, a drop, stream, < λείβω, pour (so called because it brought wet).] The west-southwest wind. Shenstone.

Liburnian (lī-bēr'ni-an), a. and n. [< L. Liburnia, Gr. Λιβυρνια, Λιβουρνια, the country so called, Liburni, Gr. Λιβυρνοί, Λιβύρνοι, the inhabitants, an Illyrian people.] 1. a. In anc. geog., pertaining or relating to the country called Liburnia, on the eastern coast of the Adriatic sea, southeast of Istria, answering to parts of modern Fiume, Croatia, and northern Dalmatia.—Liburnian galley, a light, fast-sailing ship with two or more banks of oars, originally used by Liburnian pirates, and employed by the Romans at the battle of Actium and afterward as a war-ship.

II. n. In anc. hist., an inhabitant of Liburnia. Liburnians were much employed at Rome under the empire as porters and litter-bearers.

Libyan (līb'yan), a. and n. [< L. Libya, < Gr. Λιβύη, the northern part of Africa, west of Egypt; cf. L. Libs, Libys, < Gr. Λίβυς, a Libyan.] 1. a. 1. Of or pertaining to Libya. Libya was the ancient Greek name of that part of northern Africa which lies between Egypt and the Atlantic, but especially of the country immediately west of Egypt. The term was also used by the Greeks as the name of the whole continent of Africa.

2. Belonging to or concerning a branch of the Hamitic family of languages found in and about ancient Libya. Also called Berber.—Libyan sub-region, in zoögeog. See region.

II. n. A member of the primitive race inhabiting ancient Libya; a Berber.

Licania (lī-kā'ni-ī), n. [NL. (F. de Aublet, 1775); said to be a modification of calignia, the native name of these trees in Guiana.] A genus of rosaceous plants of the tribe Chrysobalanæ, distinguished by the small anthers, minute stamens, and one-celled ovary. There are about 35 species, trees or shrubs, natives of Guiana, the West Indies, and Brazil, with alternate simple leaves and small flowers. The wood is exceedingly hard. L. Guianensis is called Cayenne rose and Cayenne saffrafrax, pepperwood, and pottery-bark tree, names indicating its character and uses.

licca-tree (līk'ā-trē), n. A West Indian shrub or tree, Zanthoxylum sapindoides. Also called lignum-torum.

lice, n. Plural of *louse*¹.

licebane (līs'bān), n. The stavesacre, Delphinium Staphisagria, a species of larkspur.

licensable (līs'en-sā-bl), a. [< license + -able.] Capable of being licensed; suitable to be licensed; permitted by legal grant.

license, licence (līs'ens), n. [< ME. licence, < OF. (and F.) licencia = Sp. licencia = Pg. licença = It. licenza, < L. licentia, licence, < licen(t)-s, ppr. of licere, be allowed, be allowable; cf. linquere, Gr. λείπειν, leave; see delinquent, relinquish. Hence also (from L. licere) E. leisvre, licit, illicit, licentiate, etc.] 1. Authority or liberty to do or forbear some act; the admission of an individual, by proper authority, to the right of doing particular acts, practising a certain profession, or conducting a certain trade; a grant of authorization; a permit.

I will no longer dwell in this centre,
Wherefore, I you beseech, sith it is so,
That ye will graunte me licence for to go.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), I. 588.

A license

Which did not more embolden than encourage My faulting tongue. Ford, Perkin Warbeck, I. 2.

Very few of the Egyptians avail themselves of the license, which their religion allows them, of having four wives. E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, I. 162.

Specifically—(a) In the law of real property, authority to do an act or series of acts upon the land of the person granting the license, without, however, conferring on the licensee any estate in the land; as, a license to enter and shore up an adjoining building, or to take sand, or bore for oil; distinguished from easement. (b) In patent and copyright law, permission to use the invention patented, or published work copyrighted, without a grant of any proprietary rights therein. (c) In the law of municipal corporations and police power, permission from government to pursue a vocation or carry on acts which are prohibited to those not taking a license, the object being, by the prohibition and the conditions imposed on the permission, to regulate the extent or manner of doing what is licensed. (d) In international law, a safe-conduct granted by a belligerent state to its own subjects, to those of its enemy, or to neutrals, to carry on a trade which is interdicted by the laws of war, and operating as a dispensation from the penalties of those laws, with respect to the state granting it. Halleck. (e) Eccles., an authority to preach, but not to administer the sacraments, nor to represent the church as a clergyman in its ecclesiastical assemblies, which powers are conferred by ordination. The license is granted, frequently for a limited period only, by an ecclesiastical body, after examination of the candidate as to his fitness. The person licensed is termed a licentiate. In the Anglican Church, a deacon must procure a license from a bishop to enable him to preach, that power not being inherent in his office. A license from the bishop is also necessary to permit a man not in orders to act as lay reader.

2. A document or certificate conferring such authority or permission.—3. Unrestrained freedom of thought and action, especially the abuse of such freedom; excess of liberty; undue freedom; freedom misused in contempt of law and decorum; rejection of legal and moral control; libertinism.

Licence they mean when they cry liberty.

Milton, Sonnets, vii.

We have already all the liberty which freeborn subjects can enjoy; and all beyond it is but licence.

No more let Ribaldry with Licence writ

Usurp the Name of Eloquence or Wit.

Steele, Conscious Lovers, Prol.

4. An intentional departure from a rule or standard in art or literature; exceptional liberty taken for the sake of a particular purpose or effect; as, poetical or musical licence; to use licence in painting or sculpture.

Public transactions had generally been recorded in verse. The first historians might, therefore, indulge without fear of censure in the licence allowed to their predecessors the bardia. Macaulay, History.

High license, a license for the sale of liquor granted only at what is regarded as a high rate, and intended thereby to reduce the number and improve the character of the places so licensed. The principle of high license is regarded as an efficient agency for the promotion of temperance.

—Letter of license, an agreement between an embarrassed debtor and his creditors, that the latter shall for a time forbear to enforce their claims, and allow him meanwhile to carry on the business without molestation. The usual form in the United States is "a composition deed," by which the creditors commonly agree to receive part as payment in full, or to receive notes payable at future periods. A letter of license containing provisions that the business to be carried on under the inspection and control of a committee of the creditors is called a deed of inspectorship.

—License cases, the decision by the United States Supreme Court in three cases, in 1847 (5 How., 504), sustaining State laws requiring licenses to sell spirituous liquors, on the ground that the constitutional provision conferring on Congress the power to regulate commerce among the States does not restrict the power of a State to legislate on matters of police, public health, etc.—License in amortization, a license to convey lands to a corporation whose holding of lands was otherwise forbidden by the law of mortmain, because it involved a perpetuity.—Marriage license. See marriage.—Registrar's license, in Eng. law, a license issued by a superintendent registrar for a marriage without religious ceremony at the registrar's office or with religious ceremony in a dissenting chapel or in a church or chapel of the Church of England, but in the latter case only by a clergyman of that church and with consent of the minister.—Rod license, a license-tax paid by anglers for the privilege of fishing for salmon. [Canada.]—Special license, specifically, in Eng. law, a license obtained from the Archbishop of Canterbury, permitting specified persons to be married without publication of banns and at a time or place other than those prescribed by law.—Syn. Liberty, etc. (see *leave*², n.); laxity.

license (līs'ens), v. t.; pret. and pp. licensed, ppr. licensing. [< F. licencier = Pr. Sp. licenciar = Pg. licenciar = It. licenziare = ML. licentiaré, licence, < L. licentia, licence; see licence, n. Cf. *licentiate*¹, v.] 1. To grant authority to do an act which, without such authority, would be illegal or inadmissible; remove restrictions from by a grant of permission; authorize to act in a particular character: as, to license a man to keep an inn; to license a physician or a lawyer. Also licence.

In this Year Proclamation was made, whereby the People were licensed to eat white Meats in Lent.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 291.

The king's right of licencing, and of assenting or withholding assent to the election, was backed up by his power of influencing the opinion of the electors.

Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 381.

2. Generally, to permit to act without restraint; allow; tolerate; privilege: as, a licensed buffoon.

Jests like a licens'd fool, commands like law.

Donne, Satire, iv. 228.

From stage to stage the licensed earl may run.

Pope, Dunclad, iv. 587.

3. To permit an action of; grant liberty to for a particular proceeding.

I pray, Sir, licence me a question.

Chapman, May-Day, i. 1.

Licence my innocent flames, and give me leave to love such charming sweetness.

Steele, Lying Lover, i. 1.

4. To dismiss. [Rare.]

He would play well, and willingly, at some games of greatest attention, which shewed, that when he listed he could license his thoughts.

Sir H. Walton.

Licensed victualler. See victualler.—Power to license, conferred on a municipality, is generally understood to mean power to regulate by prescribing the conditions on compliance with which the thing shall be permitted, but not to imply the power absolutely to prohibit any useful business.

licensee (līs'en-sē'), n. [< license + -ee.] One to whom a license is granted. Also licencee.

licenser (līs'en-sēr), n. 1. One who licenses or grants permission; a person authorized to grant permission to others: as, a licenser of the press. Also licencer. In legal use often licensor.—2. Same as ensor, 2.

license-tax (līs'ens-taks), n. In the statutes of Wisconsin, an annual license-fee imposed on certain corporations, computed by a percentage of gross receipts, and taken in lieu of ordinary taxation.

The license-tax, as it is called there (in Wisconsin), applies to railroads, insurance, telegraph, and telephone companies. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXVIII. 464.

licensure (līs'en-sūr), n. [< license + -ure.] The granting of a license; the act of licensing, as of an unordained preacher in a church of the Presbyterian order. See *licentiate*¹, n. 1 (b).

licentiate¹ (līs'en'shi-āt), v. t. [ME. licenciat, pp.; < ML. licentiatius, pp. of licentiare, license; see license, v.] To give license or permission to; encourage by license.

All things be takin treuly as thai stotest, ay licenciat and lovit with al ledis.

Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), I. 101.

We may not hazard either the stifling of generous inclinations or the licentiating of anything that is coarse.

Sir R. L'Estrange.

licentiate¹ (līs'en'shi-āt), n. [< ME. licenciat = F. licencié = Pg. licenciado = Sp. licenciado = It. licenziato, < ML. licentiatius, pp. of licentiare, license; see licentiate, v.] 1. One who has license to practice an art or a profession.

The College of Physicians, in July, 1687, published an edict requiring all fellows, candidates, and licentiates to give gratuitous advice to the neighboring poor.

Johnson, Garth.

The licentiate Don Felix del Rey, a practising advocate before the royal courts of St. Domingo and Mexico.

Gayarré, Hist. Louisiana, II. 334.

Specifically—(a) A friar licensed by the Pope to hear confession, grant absolution, and inflict penance in any place independently of the local clergy.

He hadde power of confessionn.

As seyde himself, more than a curat,

For of his ordre he was licentiat.

Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., I. 220.

(b) In non-episcopal churches, as the Presbyterian, a person licensed to preach and perform the ordinary services of public worship, prior to being ordained as a pastor.

2. One who behaves in a licentious manner; one who transgresses the bounds of due restraint and decorum. [Rare.]

What is this but to baffle and affront that sacred power, which is entrusted to government, and to profess ourselves not libertines, but licentiates of disorder?

Bp. Hall, Sermon, Christian Liberty.

licentiate² (līs'en'shi-āt), n. [< ML. licentiatius, the condition of having a license, LL. freedom, license, < L. licentia, licence; see license, n., and *-ate*³.] The condition of having a license; specifically, in continental Europe, an academical dignity which intervenes between the baccalaureate and the doctorate, and is a step toward the doctor's degree.

licentiateship (līs'en'shi-āt-ship), n. [< *licentiate*¹, n., + -ship.] The condition or office of a licentiate.

licentiation (līs'en'shi-ā'shon), n. [< *ML. licentiatio(n.), < licentiare, license; see license, v.]

The act of licensing or permitting; the granting of a license or of licenses.

There is a tacit licentiation or permitting of error. Freeman, Sermons (1643), p. 35. (Latham.)

The system of medical licentiation is year by year becoming more stringent and more careful. Encyc. Brit., XI. 19.

licentious (li-sen'shus), a. [F. licencieux = Sp. Pg. licencioso = It. licenzioso, < L. licentiosus, full of license, unrestrained, < licentia, license: see license, n.] 1. Characterized by or using license; marked by or indulging too great freedom; overpassing due bounds or limits; excessive. [Now rare.]

For since the cheif grace of our vulgar Poesie consisteth in the Symphonie, as hath bene already sayd, our maker must not be too licentious in his concords. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 67.

The Throats and Lungs of Hawks, with voices more licentious than the loud Flounder-man's. Congreve, Way of the World, v. 5.

He is a very licentious translator, and does not recompense his neglect of the author by beauties of his own. Johnson, Stepmay.

Specifically—2. Unrestrained by law, religion, or morality; wanton; loose; dissolute; libidinous: as, a licentious person; licentious desires.

How dearly would it touch thee to the quick, Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious! Shak., C. of E., II. 2. 133.

Divinity itself, inculcating an abject reverence for the Court, gave additional effect to the licentious example of the Court. Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist.

= Syn. 2. Profligate, dissolute, debauched. See list under lascivious.

licentiously (li-sen'shus-li), adv. In a licentious manner; with too great freedom; especially, in contempt of law and morality; lasciviously; loosely; dissolutely.

licentiousness (li-sen'shus-nes), n. The state or character of being licentious; want of due restraint in any respect; especially, dissolute or profligate conduct; sexual immorality.

licet (li'set), n. [L. licet, it is permitted: see license.] A formal certificate of permission; authorization.

No faculty or investigator must be allowed to poach beyond the lines laid down by the great Kantean survey, even for an hypothesis or conjecture. It is the function of the philosopher to enforce the licet and non-licet of the code. Amer. Jour. Psychol., I. 152.

lich¹, n. An assimilated form of like¹.

lich², a. An obsolete assimilated form of like².

-lich¹, -liche¹. Middle English forms of -ly¹.

-lich², -liche². Middle English forms of -ly².

lichanos (lik'ā-nos), n. [Gr. λικανος (sc. χορδή, string), the string struck with the forefinger, and its note, prop. the forefinger, lit. (sc. δακτύλος, finger) the licking finger, < λείχειν, lick: see lick, v.] In anc. Gr. music, originally, the forefinger-string of the lyre, and the tone produced upon that string; later, the third tone from the bottom of the lowest and of the next to the lowest tetrachords of the recognized system of tones. See lyre and tetrachord.

Lichanotinae (lik'ā-nō-ti'ne), n. pl. [NL., < Lichanotus + -inae.] A subfamily of Lemuridae: same as Indrisinae. Also Lichanotina. J. E. Gray, 1825.

Lichanotus (lik-ā-nō'tus), n. [NL. (Illiger, 1811).] A genus of lemurs: same as Indris.

liche¹, n. An assimilated form of like¹.

liche², a. An obsolete assimilated form of like².

lichee, n. See lichi.

lichen (li'ken or lich'en), n. [= F. Pr. lichen = Sp. lichen = Pg. lichen = It. lichene, < L. lichēn, < Gr. λειχίν, also λειχίμ, a tree-moss, lichen, also a kind of liverwort, also an eruption on the skin, ringworm, tetter, perhaps < λειχέω, lick.] 1. In bot., a plant or vegetable growth

(the Collema, or jelly-lichen) form, when wet, a pulpy or gelatinous mass. Lichens are distributed through all lands, enduring great extremes of temperature and the severest drought, living often where nothing else can. They corrode the hardest rocks, thus contributing to the formation of soil. The lichens most useful for food are the Iceland moss (see Cetraria), the reindeer-moss (see

Lichens. c. Ruellia geographicā; d. Peltigera canina.

Cladonia and reindeer-moss, the manna-lichen (see Lecanora), and the rock-tripe (see Umbilicaria). Various lichens furnish the blue or purple dyestuffs known as archil, cudbear, and litmus. The Iceland moss has a demulcent worth; but for the most part the medicinal virtues of lichens are imaginary.

2. In pathol., an eruption of papules, of a red or pale color, which do not reach a vesicular or pustular stage. They may be in clusters or scattered, or disseminated over the surface of the skin; and may be attended with itching, as in lichen ruber, or may be quite free from it, as in lichen scrofulosorum.—Crab's-eye lichen, a name in the north of England for Lecanora pylaeosens, formerly used for dyeing.—Foliaceous lichen. See foliaceus.—Horsehair or horsetail lichen. See horsetail-lichen.—Wild lichen, a form of eczema.—Yellow wall-lichen (commonly wall-moss), Parmelia parietaria.

lichenaceous (li-ke-nā'shius), a. [< lichen + -aceous.] Having the characters of a lichen; belonging to the Lichenaceae or Lichenes.

lichened (li'kend or lich'end), a. [< lichen + -ed².] Covered with lichens, or appearing as if so covered: as, a lichened wall; the lichened tree-toad, Trachycephalus lichenatus.

Lichenes (li-kē'nēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of L. lichen: see lichen.] A division of cellular, mostly thalloid, cryptogamic plants, formerly regarded as constituting a distinct class, but now, in accordance with the theory of Schwendener and others, considered to be genuine fungi of the divisions Ascomycetes and Basidiomycetes. They exhibit a remarkable parasitism. "The host-plants are algae, growing as a rule in damp situations, but belonging to a variety of groups, frequently to the Chroococaceae and Nostocaceae, still more frequently to the Palmetaceae, sometimes to the Chroolepideae, rarely to the Conferaceae" (Goebel, Outlines of Classification, etc., p. 114). The algae, which are also known in a free state and separate from the fungi, are embraced by the hyphae of the lichen-fungus and the two elements together compose a thallus of definite form. A transverse section of a lichen-thallus shows the hyphae to be more or less closely interlaced about the algal cells or gonidia. This parasitism, which is without parallel in the animal kingdom or any other part of the vegetable kingdom, instead of resulting detrimentally to the algae, incites them to more rapid activity and more vigorous increase. The reproduction is characteristic of the particular class to which the fungus belongs, and in a few lichens examined by Stahl there is an adaptation for the supply of algae to the new lichen: algal cells, the offspring of the thallus-algae (gonidia), are cast off along with the spores, so that the germ-tubes of the spores find suitable hosts at once. Propagation is also abundantly carried on by means of soredia, or brood-buds, which consist of one or more algal cells, surrounded by the fungus-hyphae, which separate from the parent thallus. Lichens have been produced synthetically by Stahl and others by sowing the fungus-spores upon favorable algal cells, thus proving beyond question their dual nature. The older systematic lichenologists prefer to consider lichens as autonomous.

lichenian (li-kē'ni-an), a. [< lichen + -ian.] Of or pertaining to lichens. Amer. Naturalist, XXIII. 5.

lichenic (li-ken'ik), a. [< lichen + -ic.] Of or pertaining to or derived from lichens: as, lichenic acid.

lichenicolous (li-ke-nik'ō-lus), a. [< L. lichen, a lichen, + colere, inhabit.] Parasitic on lichens. Micros. Science, XXX., Index, p. 42.

licheniform (li'ken-i-fōrm), a. [< L. lichen, a lichen, + forma, form.] Resembling, or having the form of, a lichen; lichenoid.

Some of the inferior liverworts are quite licheniform, and are often mistaken for lichens.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Bot., § 188.

lichenin (li'ken-in), n. [< lichen, q. v., + -in².] A variety of starch obtained from Iceland moss and many other varieties of lichens. It is insoluble in cold water, but forms a jelly with hot water, and yields with iodine a dirty-blue color.

lichenism (li'ken-izm), n. [< lichen + -ism.] The habit of living in that union of fungus and alga which is supposed by many to constitute a lichen.

It is moreover quite conceivable that there are species of Algae which have become so adapted to lichenism that they can no longer attain their full development outside the Lichen-combination. De Bary, Fungi (trans.), p. 419.

lichenist (li'ken-ist), n. [< lichen + -ist.] A lichenologist.

It is only within the last thirty years that it [the origin of the gonidia] has been investigated by lichenists. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 556.

lichenographer (li-ke-nog'ra-fēr), n. One who describes lichens; one who is versed in lichenography.

lichenographic (li'ken-ō-graf'ik), a. [< lichenograph(y) + -ic.] Pertaining to lichenography.

lichenographical (li'ken-ō-graf'i-kāl), a. Same as lichenographic.

lichenographist (li-ke-nog'ra-fist), n. [< lichenography + -ist.] Same as lichenographer.

lichenography (li-ke-nog'ra-fi), n. [< Gr. λειχίν, a lichen, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] A systematic treatment or description of lichens; the descriptive portion of lichenology.

lichenoid (li'ken-oid), a. [< Gr. λειχίν, a lichen, + εἶδος, form.] In pathol. and bot., resembling lichen or a lichen; lichen-like; especially, in bot., resembling one of the foliaceous lichens; having a decumbent thallus, irregularly lobed.

lichenological (li'ken-ō-lōj'i-kāl), a. [< lichenology + -ic-al.] Of, pertaining, or relating to lichenology or the science of lichens.

From the time of Acharius, the father of lichenological science, different authors have proposed different classifications of lichens. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 550.

lichenologist (li-ke-nol'ō-jist), n. [< lichenology + -ist.] A specialist in lichenology; one who writes on the science of lichens.

lichenology (li-ke-nol'ō-jī), n. [< Gr. λειχίν, a lichen, + -λογία, < λέγειν, speak: see -ology.] That department of botany which treats of lichens.

Lichenops (li'ke-nops), n. [NL. (Commerson), < Gr. λειχίν, a tree-moss, lichen, + ὤψ, the face, countenance: see lichen.] A remarkable genus of South American clamatorial birds of the family Tyrannidae, containing a single species of flycatchers called Ada commersoni by Lesson, and now known as Lichenops perspicillata.

lichenose (li'ken-ōs or lich'en-ōs), a. [< lichen + -ose.] Having the characters of a lichen, or belonging to the Lichenes.

The simplest form under which lichenose vegetation occurs. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 552.

lichenous (li'ken-us or lich'en-us), a. [< lichen + -ous.] 1. Relating to, resembling, abounding in, or covered with lichens.

An effect something like that of a fine flower against a lichenous branch. George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xxxvi.

2. Pertaining to or of the nature of the disease called lichen: as, lichenous eruptions.

lichen-starch (li'ken-stārch), n. A kind of starch associated with lichenin in Iceland moss.

lich-fowl (lich'foul), n. [Lit. 'corpse-fowl' (cf. equiv. G. leichhuhn); < lich¹, like¹, + fowl¹.] The night-jar or goatsucker, Caprimulgus europæus: so called from an old superstition.

lich-gate (lich'gāt), n. [< lich¹ + gate¹.] A churchyard gate with a porch or shed forming a chapel either combined with it or contiguous to it, in which in England and on the continent it was formerly customary, and is still usual in some places, for a bier to stand during the reading of the introductory part of the service, before it is borne inside; a corpse-gate. It is very commonly nothing more than a simple shed under which is the gate. Also spelled, archaically, lychgate.

Lich-gate.

Yet to the lychgate, where his chariot stood, Strode from the porch. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

Lichens. a. Cladonia pyxidata; b. Cetraria cucullata.

of the group Lichenes, ordinarily recognizable by its dry aspect and gray, brown, greenish, or blackish color, and its appearance in crusts, scaly patches, or bush-like forms on trees, rails, rocks, etc. Lichens also grow on the ground, and some lichi (lî-chô'), n. [Also lichee, lechee, litchi.] A Chinese fruit, the product of the tree Litchi Chinensis (Nephelium Litchi). The most common variety is nearly round, about an inch and a half in diameter, with a thin and brittle red-colored shell, which is covered with wart-like protuberances. The pulp, when fresh, is white and nearly transparent, sweet and jelly-like, and contains a single shining brown seed. The fruit is borne in clusters. It is dried for preservation, the pulp shrinking away from the shell, and in this state it sometimes finds its way to western ports. See Litchi.

The lichi is the finest of Chinese fruits, having a white flesh with the taste of the best of grapes—excellent. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXVIII. 574.

lichinin (lî'ki-nin), n. [Lichen + -in.] Same as carrageenin.

lich-owl (lich'oul), n. [Also litch-owl; < *lich*¹ + owl.] A screech-owl, as supposed to bode death.

The shrieking lich-owl, that doth never cry
But boding death. Drayton, The Owl.

lichroad (lich'rôd), n. Same as lichway.

licht¹, v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal (Scotch) form of *light*¹.

licht², a. An obsolete or dialectal form of *light*². lichtly (licht'li), v. t.; pret. and pp. lichtlied, ppr. lichtlying. Same as lightly. [Scotch.]

lichwake (lich'wâk), n. [*Lich*¹ + wake.] See likewake.

lichway (lich'wâ), n. [*Lich*¹ + way.] The path by which the dead are carried to the grave. [Prov. Eng.]

lichwort (lich'wört), n. [*Lich*¹ + wort.] The wall-pellitory, Parietaria officinalis.

licible, a. [ME., < OF. licible (?), < L. licere, be allowed; see license.] Pleasant; agreeable.

Perceas as when the liche what thî wyf pley,
Thi conceyte holdeth it good and licible.
Oceve, MS. Soc. Antiq. 134, f. 259. (Halliwell.)

Licinian (lî-sin'i-an), a. [C. Licini(us) (see def.) + -an.] Pertaining to Caius Licinius Calvus Stolo, a Roman, tribune of the people about 376-367 B. C., noted as the promoter of the Licinian laws.—Licinian laws, several Roman laws passed about 367 B. C.—one for relief against usury, by allowing interest to be deducted from the principal, and the balance to be paid in equal instalments within three years; one restricting individual holdings of public land to about 333 acres each, and limiting the herds of any one person; and one providing that two consuls should be elected instead of military tribunes, two of whom must be a plebeian.

licit (lis'it), a. [ME. licite, lysscite, < F. licite = Sp. licito = Pg. It. licito, < L. licitus, lawful, permitted, allowed, pp. of licere, be lawful; see license, n.] Lawful; allowable; opposed to illicit: as, "licit establishments," Carlyle.

The kynge demaunded of them if it were a thyng ly- sette and lawful to beueue.

Berners, tr. of Froissart's Chron., II. 628.
To sensual vices she was so abandoned,
That lustful she made licit in her law,
To remove the blame to which she had been led.
Longfellow, tr. of Dante's Inferno, v. 60.

= syn. Legal, etc. See lawful.

licitation (lis-i-tâ'shon), n. [= F. licitation = Sp. licitacion = Pg. licitação, < L. licitatio(n)-, an offering of a price, < licitari, pp. licitatus, < liceri, bid on goods at an auction, licere, be for sale, offer for sale.] 1. The act of selling or exposing to sale by offering publicly to the highest bidder; an auction. Bailey. [Rare.] —2. In law, a sale, and partition and division of proceeds. [Rare.]

licitly (lis'it-li), adv. In a licit manner; lawfully.

The question may be licitly discussed.
Throckmorton, Considerations, p. 38.

licitness (lis'it-nes), n. The state or quality of being licit; lawfulness. [Rare.]

lick (lik), v. [ME. licken, < AS. liccan = OS. lekkon, likkôn = D. likken = MLG. LG. licken = OHG. leccôn, leccôn, leccôn, MHG. G. lecken = Dan. likke (< D. or LG.) = Goth. likkôn*, an unrecorded form (the prob. source, rather than the OHG., of It. leccare = Pr. liquar = OF. lecher, lekier, F. lécher, lick: see lech, lecher, lecherous, etc.), secondary to laigon, in comp. bi-laigon, lick; = Ir. lighim = O Bulg. lizati = Serv. Bohem. lizati = Russ. lizati = Lett. laizit, lick, = Gr. λεικειν, lick (cf. λεικος, dainty, lickerous), = L. tingere, lick, liquire, lick, = Skt. √lih, rih, lick.] I. trans. 1. To pass or draw the tongue over the surface of; rub with the tongue.

This lord comes, licks his hand, and protests to me.
Fletcher, Loyal Subject, III. 2.

I have seen an antiquary lick an old coin, among other trials, to distinguish the age of it by its taste.
Addison, Ancient Medals, III.

Crouches to the rod,
And licks the foot that treats it in the dust.
Cowper, Task, v.

2. To take into the mouth by lapping with the tongue; lap.

In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood.
I KI. xxi. 19.

3. To strike repeatedly by way of punishment; flog; chastise with blows; beat. [Colloq.]

I'm taud the muse ye ha'e neglectit;
An' gif it'a sae, ye aid be licked.
Burns, Second Epistle to Davie.

Who, if she dared to speak or weep,
He inatantly would lick her;
And oft (to use a Devonshire phrase)
The gentleman would lick her.
Walcot, Orson and Ellen, II.

I've tried to lick the badness out of him. . . . You can out of some boys, you know. The Atlantic, XLIX. 41.

Hence—4. To "beat" or overcome; gain a victory over; surpass; excel. [Colloq.]—5. In mech.: (a) To catch and retain (fiber), as the rollers of drawing-frames in a damp atmosphere. (b) To lap or scoop up; wipe off or transfer by intermittent contact, as in the device for lubrication called a licker. (c) To take up gradually and feed (fiber) into a carding-machine: said of the action of the card called the licker-in.—

To lick into shape, to give form or method to: in allusion to the ancient notion that the young bear is born shapeless and is licked into shape by its mother.
A bear's a savage beast, of all
Most ugly and unnatural;
Whelp'd without form, until the dam
Has lick'd it into shape and frame.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. III. 1308.

To lick the dust. (a) To be slain; bite the dust; perish in battle. (b) To prostrate one's self on the ground in token of utter submission; act abjectly and servilely.
They shall lick the dust like a serpent. Micah vii. 17.

To lick the spittle of, to fawn upon with servility; court by flattery or attentions; be meanly servile to. [Low.]

Hia (Pope's) heart too great, though fortune little,
To lick a rascal stateaman's spittle.
Swift, Libel on Delany and Carteret.

To lick up, to take up or remove by licking or as by licking; remove entirely.
They shall . . . lick up the dust of thy feet.
Isa. xlix. 23.

Then the fire of the Lord fell, . . . and licked up the water that was in the trench.
I KI. xviii. 38.

II. intrans. To gain the victory; be victorious: as, who licked? [Colloq.]

lick (lik), n. [Lick, v.] 1. A rubbing or drawing of the tongue over something.

He came galloping home at midnight to have a lick at the honey-pot.
Dryden, Amphitryon, II. 1.

2. A slight smear or coat, as of paint.
When sly Jemmy Twitcheer had smugged up his face
With a lick of court whitewash and pious grimace.
Gray, The Candidate.

3. A small quantity; as much as can be taken up by the tongue: as, a lick of sugar or of oatmeal. [Scotch.]—4. A place where salt is deposited at salt-springs, and where animals come, or might come, to lick it. [U. S.]

The woods are full of deer-paths which run to the streams and licks.
J. F. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, IV.

These clay licks were mere holes in the banks, and were in springtime visited by other animals besides goats.
T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXVI. 200

5. A blow; a stroke; hence, a trial or essay. [Colloq.]

He gave me a lick across the face.
Dryden.

I should like to go out to Colorado and have a lick at mining speculations.
The Century, XXVI. 276.

6. pl. A beating. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

An' monie a fallow gat his licks.
Burns, To William Simpson.

To give a lick and a promise of better, to do a piece of work in a slovenly fashion, with the implied purpose of making amends later. [Colloq.]

lick-box, n. [Lick, v., + obj. box.] Same as lick-dish.

Agamemnon a lick-box.
Urguhart, tr. of Rabelais, II. 30. (Davies.)

lick-dish (lik'dish), n. [Lick, v., + obj. dish.] A parasite. Also lick-sauce.

"Liar, liar, lick dish," a proverbial address to a liar, chiefly used at schools. It is an old saying, being found in the Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631, sig. I. ff. Halliwel.

licker (lik'er), n. [*ME. licker, likkare (= OHG. lecchari, MHG. G. lecker); < lick + -er.] 1. One who licks or laps up.—2. One who beats. [Colloq.]—3. A device attached to a rotating or sliding part of an engine or other machine, for taking up a small quantity of oil and conveying it to a bearing or journal to be lubricated. The oil thus licked up may be presented to the licker in an open vessel, or in some absorbent material like flannel or sponge, with which the licker comes in contact at each revolution or reciprocation of the part which carries it; and the licker may act either on the principle of a scoop or by capillary action in conveying the oil to the bearing needing lubrication. Such lickers are now common in high speed engines and other fast-running machines.

licker-in (lik'er-in'), n. The first roller-card of a carding-machine, which receives the lap or fleece from the feed-rolls, and delivers the fiber to the main carding-cylinder. The licker-in runs with less peripheral velocity than that of the main cylinder-card, hence the teeth of the latter continuously draw out or strip the fiber from the teeth of the licker-in as fast as it is received from the feed-rolls.

lickerish (lik'er-ish), a. [Formerly also liquorish; a corrupted form (as if < licker or liquor + -ish) of lickerous: see lickerous.] 1. Same as lickerous, 1.—2. Same as lickerous, 2.

It is never tongue-tied when fit commendation, whereof womankind is so lickerish, is offered unto it. Sir P. Sidney.
Short Taste of Pleasures, how dost thou torment
A liquorish Soul, when once inflam'd by thee!
J. Beaumont, Psyche, III. 1.

Their magazines are very often rified by bears, raccoons, and such like liquorish vermin. Beverly, Virginia, II. ¶ 18.

3. Such as to tempt the appetite; of dainty quality.
Like a sponge, you suck up lickerish wines.
Massinger, Virgin-Martyr, II. 1.

Wouldst thou seek again to trap me here
With lickerish baits, fit to ensnare a brute?
Milton, Comus, I. 700.

lickerishly (lik'er-ish-li), adv. [Formerly also liquorishly; < lickerish + -ly. Cf. lickerously.] In a lickerish manner; daintily.

lickerishness (lik'er-ish-nes), n. [Formerly also liquorishness; < lickerish + -ness. Cf. lickerousness.] The state or quality of being lickerish. (a) Niceness of palate; daintiness. (b) Eagerness; keen desire.

Lying to her dame in denying somewhat that in liquorishness she had taken away.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 115.

The minds (or rather fancies) of men have such a natural liquorishness after the knowledge of things strange and remote that they swallow nothing with so grateful a gusto as stories of things rare and unusual.

Bp. Parker, Platonic Philos., p. 82.

lickerous (lik'er-us), a. [Also liquorous (simulating liquor), lickorous, licorous, also likresus, etc.; < ME. likorous, lykerous, likrus, < OF. like-rous*, lekerous*, dainty (F. liqueureux, luscious, sweet), appar. an unassimilated form of lecherous* (> E. lecherous), dainty, wanton, cf. lecker, lekeur, unassimilated forms of lecheur, lechteur, a glutton, lecher: see lecher, lecherous. Hence, by corruption, the later form lickerish.] 1. Nice or fastidious in taste; dainty.

Syn women are wilfull & there wit changes,
And solkirus of lone in lityng of yowthe,
This wnarwes of wit wrixlis hys mynd,
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 444.

Let not sir Surfet sitten at thi bord;
Loue him not, for he is a lechour and lickerous of tonge.
Piers Plowman (A), VII. 253.

2. Having a keen relish; eager to taste or enjoy; keenly desirous.

Yonge clerkes that been lykerous
To reden artes that been curious.
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, I. 391.

3. Sensual; luxurious; wanton; lecherous.

Likerous folk, affyr that they ben dede,
Schul whirle aboute the erthe, alwey in payne,
Tyl manye a world be passed, out of drede,
And that forgevyn is here wickid dede.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, I. 79.

lickerously (lik'er-us-li), adv. [Also liquorously; < ME. likerously; < lickerous + -ly.] Hence, by corruption, lickerishly.] In a lickerous manner. Chaucer, Monk's Tale, I. 567.

lickerousness (lik'er-us-nes), n. [Also liquorousness; < ME. lickerousnesse; < lickerous + -ness.] Hence, by corruption, lickerishness.] The state or quality of being lickerous. (a) Keen appetite; longing; gluttonous craving.

A thief of veynsoun that hath foriaft
His lickerousnesse and al his olde craft Kan kepe a forest beat of any man.
Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, I. 84.

(b) Lasciviousness.

Venus me yaf my lust, my lickerousnesse.
Chaucer, Prologue to Wife of Bath's Tale, I. 611.

licker-up (lik'er-up'), n. See the extract.

The die is usually made of cast steel. When it is placed upon the anvil, and the plated metal is cut into pieces of proper size, the top of the die is then surrounded with a lute, made of oil and clay, for an inch or two above its surface; and the cavity is filled with melted lead. The under face of the stamp-hammer has a plate of iron, called the licker-up, fitted into it, about the area of the die. Whenever the lead has become solid, the hammer is raised to a certain height, and dropped down upon it; and as the under face of the licker-up is made rough like a rasp, it firmly adheres to the lead, so as to lift it afterwards with the hammer.

lickety-cut (lik'e-ti-kut'), adv. [lickety*, a vaguely imitative form based on lick, + cut.] Same as lickety-split.

So they went and pitched into the old chap, lickety-cut.
E. S. Phelps, Old Maid's Paradise, p. 157.

lickety-split (lik'ē-ti-split'), adv. [lickety* (see lickety-cut) + split.] Headlong; very fast. [Slang, U. S.]

I tell you if they didn't whip up an' go lickety-split down that 'ere hill.
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 358.

licking (lik'ing), n. [ME. licing*, AS. licung*, verbal n. of lician, lick see lick, v.] 1. The act of one who licks.—2. A beating; a thrashing. [Colloq.]

What, still at your tricking? . . .
I see you won't rest till you've got a good licking.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 320.

lick-pant, n. An obsolete spelling of liquor.

lick-pan (lik'pan), n. [lick*, v., + obj. pan.] A sycophant.

lickpenny (lik'pen'ni), n.; pl. lickpennies (-iz). [late ME. lickeny*; lick*, v., + obj. penny.] A greedy or covetous person; a grasper. [Scotch.]

You talked of a law-suit—law is a lick-penny, Mr. Tyrrel—no counsellor like the pound in purse.
Scott, St. Ronan's Well, xxviii.

lickplatter (lik'plat'ēr), n. [lick*, v., + obj. platter.] A sneaking parasite; a lickspittle.

He had a passion for independence, which, though pushed to excess, was not without grandeur. No lick-platter, no parasite, no toad-eater.
Bulwer, My Novel, vi. 23.

lick-sauce (lik'sās), n. [lick*, v., + obj. sauce.] Same as lick-dish.

lick-spigot (lik'spig'ot), n. [lick*, v., + obj. spigot.] A tapster or drawer.

Gnatho. Fill lick-spigot.
Drawer. Ad inum, air. Massinger, Old Law, iv. 1.

lickspittle (lik'spit'l), n. [lick*, v., + obj. spit-lee.] One who is abject enough to lick, as it were, another's spittle; a vulgar flatterer or parasite.

Stage coachmen were . . . comrades to gentlemen, lick-spittles to lords, and the high-priests of horse-flesh.
J. Hawthorne, Dust, p. 8.

lick-trencher (lik'tren'chēr), n. [lick*, v., + obj. trencher.] Same as lickplatter.

Art magnanimous, lick-trencher? Dekker, Satiromastix.

Licmetis (lik-mē'tis), n. [NL. (Wagler, 1830), Gr. λικμητός*, a winnowing, λικμῶν*, winnow, λικμός*, also λικνον, a winnowing-fan.] A genus of slender-billed white Australian cockatoos, as L. tenuirostris and L. pascinator. They live on bulbs and roots which they dig out of the ground.

licorice, liquorice (lik'ō-ris), n. [Formerly also licorice, licericce, licourize; ME. licorice*, licorris, lycoris, licoriz, etc., = D. lakkris, lakkeris = MLG. lackeritze = G. lakritze = Dan. Sw. lakrits, OF. licorice*, AF. lycoriss, later liquorice; also, in other OF. forms, recalisse, recolice, regolice, regalisse, rigalisse, riglisse, etc., = F. réglisse = Pr. regaleicia, reguleicia = Sp. regaliz, regaliza, regalicia = Pg. regaliz, regalico = It. regolizia, legorizia, liquirizia, LL. liquiritia*, ML. also liquiritium, corrupted from L. glycyrrhiza, Gr. γλυκύριζα*, the licorice-plant, lit. 'sweet root,' γλυκίς*, sweet, + ρίζα, root.] 1. A leguminous plant, Glycyrrhiza glabra, whose root yields the licorice of commerce. It is a perennial herbaceous plant growing 4 or 5 feet high, sparingly branched, with pinnate leaves and bluish pea-like flowers in spikes. The roots grow several feet long and an inch or more thick. Other plants of the genus are also called licorice.

In all theses for sayd yles ys growing wondyr myche licores, tyme, Sage, flyggs, Orygges, Pomgarnetta, smale Reysyns, which we call Reysce of Corsans.
Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 61.

2. An economic product, either the root of this plant or an extract from it. The former is called licorice-root or licorice; the latter is called stick-licorice, Spanish juice, or Italian extract of licorice, and is obtained by boiling the crushed root and evaporating the infusion, the residuum being rolled into sticks. The substance thus secured is dry and brittle, with a shining fracture, and when pure is entirely soluble in water, but is often grossly adulterated. Licorice is used medicinally chiefly as a demulcent, especially in bronchial affections. It is also employed in making confectionery, in brewing, and in the manufacture of tobacco. The extract is prepared extensively in Mediterranean Europe, and latterly in the United States from imported root.

But first he cheweth greyn and lycoriss
To smellen sweete.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 504.

Indian licorice. See Abrus.—Prickly licorice, Glycyrrhiza echinata, whose pods are bristly and whose root is used like that of G. glabra.—Wild licorice. (a) Same as Indian licorice. (b) The plant also called reed-harrow, Ononis arvensis. Its root is used by children in place of licorice. [Prov. Eng.] (c) In America, a member of the true licorice genus, Glycyrrhiza lepidota, found chiefly far northwest; also, Galium circeazans and G. lanceolatum, on account of a sweetish root. (d) In Australia, Teucrium corymbosum, a sort of germander.

licorice-mass (lik'ō-ris-mās), n. Same as licorice-paste.

licorice-paste (lik'ō-ris-pāst), n. Crude licorice.

licorice-vetch (lik'ō-ris-vech), n. A milk-vetch, Astragalus glycyphyllos: so called on account of its sweet root.

licorice-weed (lik'ō-ris-wēd), n. A wide-spread tropical plant, Scoparia dulcis.

licoroust, licorously, etc. See lickerous, etc.

licourt, n. An obsolete form of liquor.

licorizer, n. An obsolete form of licorice.

lictor (lik'tor), n. [L., an attendant on the Roman magistrates, perhaps lit. 'binder,' ligare* (√ lig), bind (with ref. to the fasces or 'bound' rods which they bore, or to binding culprits); otherwise licere*, summon.] Among the ancient Romans, one of a number of officers, required to be free-born (though freedmen were admitted to the office under the empire), whose functions were to attend a magistrate, bearing the fasces, in some cases with the ax and in others without it, in order to clear the way and enforce due respect, and also to arrest offenders and to scourge or behead condemned persons. Magistrates were entitled to a number of lictors according to their rank, a dictator having twenty-four, a consul twelve, a praetor six (at first only two within the city walls), etc. The Flamen Dialis, or priest of Jupiter, and the Vestals also had lictors, but it is believed, without fasces.

Lictors and rods, the emblems of their power.
Milton, P. R., iv. 65.

Ho, trumpets, sound a war-note!
Ho, lictors, clear the way!
The Knights will ride, in all their pride,
Along the streets to-day.

Macaulay, Battle of Lake Regillus.

Licuala (lik-ū-ā'li), n. [NL. (Thunberg, 1782), from the native Maecassar name.] A genus of palms of the tribe Corypheeae, distinguished by the terminal style, valvate corolla, and slightly coherent three-angled carpels. There are about 36 species, natives of tropical and eastern Asia, New Guinea, and northern Australia.

lid (lid), n. [ME. lid*, AS. hlið* (= OFries. hlið, lid = D. lid, lid, cover, = MLG. lidc, way, passage, = OHG. hliit, lit, MHG. lit, G. lid (in comp. augenlid, augenlied, eyelid), a lid, cover, = Icel. hlið, a gate, gateway, gap, breach, = Dan. Sw. led, wicket, gate), hliðan*, pp. hliðen, = OS. hliðan = OFries. hliðia, cover.] 1. A movable cover which closes an aperture or shuts in a cavity, and usually forms an integral part of the structure to which it belongs by being either attached or closely fitted to it: as, the lid of a tea-kettle, stove, chest, or desk.

My Lord, I broke my Glass that was in the Lid of my Snuff-box.
Congreve, Double-Dealer, i. 5.

2. In bot., the upper section of a pyxis, which separates by a transverse line; also, the hood of the leaf in the pitcher-plants; in mosses, the operculum.—3. An eyelid.

The flame of the taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peek her lids,
To see the enclosed lights. Shak., Cymbeline, ii. 2. 20.

4. In coal-mining, a short piece of timber placed on top of a prop to help in supporting the roof.

—5. A coverlet. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—

6. One of the covers or boards of a book: as, everything between the lids of the Bible. [Colloq.]—Graular lids. See granular.—Port-lid, one of two shutters, upper and lower, which together close a port-hole. Each shutter has a semicircular piece cut out of it, so that together they fit round the gun. Also called half-port.

lid-cells (lid'selz), n. pl. In bot., the terminal cells of the neck of an archegonium of a cryptogam, closing for a time its canal. Also called stigmatic cells.

lidded (lid'ed), a. [lid* + -ed.] Having a lid; covered by a lid. In mining, the top of the bearing part of a pipe is said to be lidded when its usual space is contracted to a small compass or width. Halliwell.

The Persian girl alone,
Serene with argent-lidded eyes.
Tennyson, Arabian Nights.

One minute a while his eyes remained Half lidded, piteous, languid, innocent.
Keats, Cap and Bells, st. 20. (Davies.)

lidden (lid'en), n. [A dial. form of leden, leden.] A saying, song, or story. [Prov. Eng.]

liddier (lid'ēr), a. A dialectal variant of lither. Also used adverbially.

The horses are grown aae liddier fat,
They downa stir out o' the sta'.
Dick o' the Cow (Child's Ballads, VI. 68).

lidderon, n. [ME. lidrone*; liddier*, lither.] A lazy fellow.

I love we schall laugh and hane likyng
To se nowe this lidderon her he leggis oure lawis.
York Plays, p. 298.

lid-flower (lid'flou'ēr), n. Any tree or shrub of the genus Calyptanthus, of the natural order Myrtaceae. The upper part of the calyx forms a lid, which falls as the flower opens.

Lidford law. See law.
ligger, n. An obsolete form of ledger.
lidgett (lij'et), n. [Also lidgett, equiv. to ligger, ledger: see ledger in a similar sense.] A gate. [Prov. Eng.]

lidless (lid'les), a. [lid* + -less.] Having no lid; especially, having no eyelids; hence, poetically, incapable of closing the eyes; sleepless; perpetually vigilant.

Doat imagine
We will but laugh into thy lidless eyes?
Shelley, Prometheus Unbound, i. 1.

An eye like mine,
A lidless watcher of the public weal.
Tennyson, Princess, iv.

lie (li), v. i.; pret. lay, pp. lain, prr. lying. [Early mod. E. also lye; ME. lien*, lyen, lygen, lyzen, also lygen, lyggen (> E. dial. lyg) (pret. lay, lai, ley, pl. lygen, leyen, laye, leye, pp. layn, leyn, leyen, yleye, etc.), AS. liggan* (pret. lag, pl. lāgon, pp. legen) = OS. lig-gian = OFries. liga, lidzia = D. ligger = MLG. ligger = OHG. ligan, lygan, lykan, MHG. lygen, lychen, G. liegen = Icel. liggia = Sw. ligga = Dan. ligge = Goth. ligan, lie, = OBulg. lezhati, lie, leshiti, lay oneself down, = Russ. lezhat, lie (etc.), the word having a wide development in the Slavic tongues, = L. leg, legih, in deriv. lectus, a bed (> E. lectual, etc.), lectica, a litter (> E. litter), = Gr. root λειχ in an old defective verb λεχεν* (aor. act. ἔλεξα, λέξα, fut. mid. λέξομαι, aor. mid. ἔλεξάμην, λεξάμην, aor. pass. ἔλεκτο, λεκτο, inf. λέχθαι, etc.), act. lay down (to sleep), pass. lie down, and in deriv. λέχος, a bed, λεκτρον, a bed (> ult. E. lectern, q. v.), λόχος, a lying in wait, ambush, a lurking-place, lair, etc.; not found in Skt. From the E. verb lie are derived many forms, some of them no longer felt to be connected with lie: namely, from AS., layl, allayl, belay, lavl, lawl, layer, ledge, ledge, ledge, ledge, ledge, ledge, etc.; from D. G. or Scand., leagner, beleagner, lager, log, log, low, etc.; from the L. and Gr. are lectual, litter, lectern, etc.] 1. To rest in a recumbent or prostrate position; remain or be held flatwise, lengthwise, or inclined on a supporting surface; recline or be prone or supine on something.

And some wolde munche hire mete al allene, Liggynge abedde. Chaucer, Troilus, l. 908.

In that Kyngdom lithe the body of seynt Thomas the Apostle, in flesche and Bon, in a faire Tomb.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 171.

When the kynge Rion felt hym so sore wounded, and saugh his felowea ly at crthe dede bledynge, he hadde grete drede. Merdin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 346.

If I do not gull him . . . do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. Shak., T. N., ii. 3. 148.

When the angel hath troubled the water, and made it medicinal for him that is first put in and no more, then to have lien many years in expectation, and still to lack a servant, or a friend to do that office, this is a misery.

Donne, Sermons, v.

In strong convulsions panting on the sands
He lies, and grasps the dust with dying hands.
Pope, Iliad, xvii. 367.

2. To be in a quiescent state; be or become quiet or inactive; remain passive or expectant.

Well it shewed by their armes that thei hadde not alwey lyen at reate. Merdin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 356.

The Wind lye, yet after a Storm the Sea will work a great while. Selden, Table-Talk, p. 82.

3. To lay or place one's self in a recumbent or prostrate position; take a reclining posture: often followed by down when entire prostration is intended: as, to lie back in a chair; to lie down on the ground.

And he [Eli] answered, I called not, my son; lie down again. 1 Sam. iii. 6.

His mother lay ewer her castle wa',
And she beheld balth dale and down.
Leesome Brand (Child's Ballads, II. 345).

From off the world I came, and lay
Upon the freshly-flower'd slope.
Tennyson, Miller's Daughter.

4. To have place, position, or direction; be situated, set, or settled; stay or abide: as, the Azores lie in the Atlantic ocean; the army lay in a fortified camp.

The napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes. John xx. 7.

And the Turkes mayne londe lithe with in li] or li] myle of them. Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 17.

Those happy climes that lie
Where day never shuts his eye.
Milton, Comus, l. 977.

The door is open, air; there lies your way.
Shak., T. of the S., iii. 2. 212.

Even when that good king lay in the Isle of Athelney, he had a Ridd along with him.

R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xlviii.

5†. To be confined or imprisoned.

Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;
I will deliver you, or else lie for you.
Shak., Rich. III., l. 1. 115.

6. To rest or remain in a state or condition; continue inactive or unchanged; as, to lie in soak; the land lies fallow.

All that Winter King Edward lay without any Molestation by the French King.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 122.

I feel a grudging
Of bounty, and I would not long lie fallow.
B. Jonson, Staple of News, l. 2.

A bow that lies a while unbent, and a field that remains fallow for a time, grow never the worse.
Howell, Letters, l. v. 2.

I have been told, too, there is a law of Charles the Fifth something like our statute of Mortmain, which has lain dormant ever since his time.

Addison, Remarks on Italy (ed. Bohn), l. 430.
As she lay, on that day,
In the Bay of Biscay, O.

A. Cherry, The Bay of Biscay (song).

7. To be in a certain direction; be present in a particular place or thing; be found; exist.

O Regan, General! . . .
O, that way madness lies; let me slum that.
Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 21.

He that thinks that diversion may not lie in hard labour forgets the early rising of the huntsman.
Locke.

Only in thy virtue lies
The saving of our Thebes. Tennyson, Tiresias.

8. To lodge; pass the night; sleep.

And Kay and Arthur hadde made her bedde atte the chamber dore of kyng Loo, in a corner, like as a squire shelde ty.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), ll. 180.

Look! here comes a pilgrim. I know she will lie at my house.
Shak., All's Well, iii. 5. 34.

We lay at St. Dizier the first night, and at Langres the second.
Gray, Letters, l. 31.

9. To rest; bear; press; weigh: with on or upon.

All the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him.
Dent, xxix. 20.

Though it should sleep for ever to the world,
It is a simple sin to hide myself,
Which will for ever on my conscience lie.
Beau, and Fl., Philaster, ii. 2.

The reason on their parts why she [the ship] stayed so long, was ye necessitie and danger that lay upon them.
Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 99.

10. In law, to be sustainable; be capable of being maintained: as, an action lies against the tenant for waste.

An appeal lies in this case. Parsons, C. J.

To lie along. (a) To be extended at full length.

As he lay along
Under an oak.
Shak., As you Like it, ii. 1. 30.

(b) Naut., to careen with the wind abeam, as a ship.—To lie along the land (naut.), to coast, keeping the land in sight.—To *lie at, to importune; urge.

She lay at me hard to turn aside with her, promising me all manner of content. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 138.

His mother and brother had lain at him, ever since he came into his master's service, to help him to money.
Exam. of Joan Perry (1676). (Harl. Misc., III. 549.)

To lie at anchor. See anchor.—To *lie at one's door. See door.—To *lie at one's heart, to be an object of affection, desire, or solicitude to one.

The Spaniards have but one temptation to quarrel with us, the recovering of Jamaica, for that has ever lien at their hearts.
Sir W. Temple.

To lie by. (a) [By, adv.] (1) To be laid aside, out of present use. (2) To rest; intermit labor; kee off: as, we lay by in the heat of the day.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the hillows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
Shak., Hen. VIII., iii. 1 (song).

(3†) Naut., same as to lie to.

We arrived at Righah that night, where we staid; it being the custom going up always to lie by at night, as there are many shoals in the Nile.

Pococke, Description of the East, l. 70.

(b) [By, prep.] (1) To remain with; be accessible to, or be in the keeping of: as, he has the documents lying by him.

'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you.
'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
Shak., T. of the S., ii. 1. 330.

(2) Naut., to remain near, as one ship to another at sea.—To *lie down, to be brought to bed; lie in. Compare Scotch downlying. [Obsolete or dialectal.]

There is in one of [the chests] . . . a rundlet of honey, which she desires may be sent to her against she lie down.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, l. 465.

To lie for, to lie in wait for; keep watch upon for a sinister purpose. See to lay for, under lay, v. i.

At this Corona we were advertised of certayne Turkes Fustis that lay for us in our way.
Sir R. Guyford, Pylgrimage, p. 11.

To lie hard or heavy on, upon, or (formerly) to, to oppress; burden.

Thy wrath lieth hard upon me. Ps. lxxxviii. 7.
Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclug my heart
Of what lies heavy to 't. Shak., Cor., iv. 2. 48.

To lie in, to be in childbed.

Val. Come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.
Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers.
Shak., Cor., l. 2. 86.

To lie in a nutshell. See nutshell.—To *lie in any one, to be in the power of; depend on; frequently in such phrase-forms as as much or as far as lies in one.

"O no, no, no," the sheriff said,
"Thou shalt on gallowes dye . . .
If ever in me it lie."
Robin Hood rescuing Will Stutly (Child's Ballads, V. 287).

Imitate him as much as in thee lies.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 358.

Nature, so far as in her lies,
Imitates God. Tennyson, On a Mourner.

To lie in the one's way. (a) To be ready at hand.

King. You have not sought it! how comes it, then?
Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., v. 1. 28.

(b) To be an obstacle or impediment: as, objections that lie in the way of adjustment.

That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Shak., Macbeth, l. 4. 50.

To lie in wait (formerly also in await), to wait for in concealment with hostile intent; lie in ambush.

These homicides aile
That in awaity bygnen to mordre men.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 404.

To lie low. (a) To avoid observation; conceal one's self. (b) To conceal one's views or intentions. [Slang].—To *lie off. Same as to lie by (a) (2).—To lie on or *upon. (a) See def. 9. (b) To be incumbent upon, as an obligation or a duty: as, it lies on the plaintiff to maintain his action.

This ceremony lay on me, which I performed with all the decency I could.
 Evelyn, Diary, June 2, 1672.

After the people were gone out of the chamber, it lay upon me from the Lord to speak to those two, the princess and the countess.
Penn, Travels in Holland, etc.

(c) To depend on. It nothing stands us
To chide him from our eaves; for he persists,
As if his life lay on 't. Shak., All's Well, iii. 7. 43.

(d) To importune; urge.

The old dotard, he that so instantly doth lie upon my father for me.
Gascoigne, Supposes, l. 1.

Dame Tullia lay ever upon him, and pricked forward his distempered and troubled mind.
Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 27.

To lie on hand, to be or remain in possession; remain unsold or undisposed of: as, goods that have lain long on hand.—To *lie on one's hands. (a) To remain unsold. (b) To be unemployed or remain unemployed; hence, of unoccupied time, with a qualifying word, as heavy, to cause ennuj; be tedious: as, the hours lay heavy on my hands.—To *lie on one's oars. See oar.—To *lie over. (a) To remain unpaid after the time when the payment is due, as a note in bank. (b) To be deferred to some future occasion, as a motion or resolution in a deliberative assembly.—To lie to (naut.), to come to a comparatively stationary position at sea; lie with the head as near the wind as possible, for safety in a gale, as a ship. A ship is said to lie to when her progress is checked by keeping the helm a-lee and countertracing the yards or taking in sail, or, if a steamer, by slowing down the engine—in all cases with the head to the wind.

About ten o'clock we got under way, but lay to for break-fast.
Lady Brassey, Voyage of Sunbeam, l. 1.

On the 10th of June the vessel lay to off Madras.
Trevelyan, Macaulay, l. 321.

To lie to one's work, to exert all one's strength or powers in the performance of one's task.

So many workers; and no mercenary mock workers, but real ones that lie freely to it; each patriot stretches himself against the stubborn globe; hews and wheels with the whole weight that is in him.
Carlyle.

To lie under, to be subject to; suffer; be oppressed by. They lie under the disadvantage of living like foreigners in their own country. Swift, Gulliver's Travels, iii. 10.

I lay under greater difficulties, as, in this journey, for certain reasons, I did not take my interpreter with me.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. l. 5.

To lie up, to lie at rest; abstain from work or usual activity; go into retirement or retreat.

There they [ships] must lie up, or be 3 or 4 Years in their return from a place which may be sailed in 6 Weeks.
Dampier, Voyages, II. iii. 24.

He has a bad cold—rheumatism—he must lie up for a day or two.
Dickens, Household Words.

The black bear lies up during the day in caves and amongst rocks.
W. W. Greener, The Gun, p. 595.

To lie upon the lurch. See lurch.—To *lie with. (a) To lodge or sleep with.

I lay with Cassio lately,
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep. Shak., Othello, iii. 3. 413.

(b) To have carnal knowledge of. [Archaic.]

Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.
Shak., M. W. of W., ii. 2. 295.

(c) To belong to; as, it lies with you to make amends. = Syn. Lie, Lay. "Lay is a transitive verb, and has for its preterit laid: as, he told me to lay it down, and I laid it down. Lie is intransitive, and has for its preterit lay: as, he told me to lie down, and I lay down. Some persons blunder by using laid for the preterit of lie: as, he told me to lie down, and I laid down. So persons often say, the ship laid at anchor; they laid by during the storm; the book laid on the shelf, etc. It is only necessary to remember, in all such cases, that laid is the preterit of lay and not of lie. This would save many respectable writers from a gross error which seems to be increasing among us." (Goodrich.) Similarly, laid is often erroneously used for lain: as, I had laid down; and lain is sometimes used for laid.

lie¹ (li), n. [< lie¹, v. Cf. lay¹, n.] 1. Manner of lying; relative direction, position, arrangement, etc. See lay¹, n., 4.

We shall be able, by a study of the position and lie of the earth in her orbit, to determine from what part of space these regular meteors . . . come.

J. N. Lockyer, Harper's Mag., LXXXVIII. 585.

The lie of the city [Bridisi] and its haven is truly a sight to be studied. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 312.

Mrs. Penton . . . went on with her darning. She had filled up all those great holes, doing them all the more quickly because she had studied the lie of them, and how the threads went, before.

Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xl.

2. The place where a bird, beast, or fish is accustomed to lie or lurk; haunt.

A salmon is said to be swimming when he is moving up the river from pool to pool. At other times he is usually resting in his "stand" or lie, or at most shifting from one stand in a pool to another.

Quarterly Rev., CXXVI. 359, note.

On our way home there lay a long narrow spinney which was a very favorite lie for woodcock, and generally held a pheasant or two as well. Harper's Mag., LXXVII. 1st.

3. In rail., a siding or short offset from the main line, into which trucks may be run for the purpose of loading and unloading; one of the different sets of rails at a terminus on which trucks stand while being loaded or unloaded.

lie² (li), v. i.; pret. and pp. lied, ppr. lying.

[Early mod. E. also lye; < ME. lien, lyen, ligen, lyzen, lezen (pret. lowe, also weak, lyzede, pp. lowen, i-loze), < AS. leogan (pret. leah, pl. lugon, pp. logen) = OS. logan = OFries. laga = D. liegen = MLG. legen, leigen = OHG. liogan, MHG. liegen, G. lügen, dial. liegen = Icel. ljuga = Dan. lyve = Sw. ljuga = Goth. liugan, lie, tell a falsehood, = OBulg. luguti = Russ. luigati, lie. Not found in L., Gr., or Skt. Iience lie², n., and ult. lain³, v. and u.] 1. To speak falsely; utter untruth for the purpose of misleading; make a misrepresentation consciously: followed by about, etc., and formerly (and still sometimes colloquially) by on.

If they on hire lye,
Wis himself shilde han the vileyny.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 20.

2. To make a false impression, either consciously or unconsciously; hold forth a misleading or deceitful appearance; act or manifest an untruth: used of both persons and things.

I trowe that countenance cannot lie
Whose thoughts are legible in the eie.
M. Roydon, Elegy, l. 107.

When London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head and lies.
Pope, Meral Essays, iii. 340.

To lie in one's teeth or in one's throat, to lie flagrantly and basely.

He will on Musgrave's body prove
He lies most foully in his throat.
Scott, L. of L. M., v. 20.

lie² (li), n. [Early mod. E. also lye; < ME. lie, lye, lize, < AS. lyge, lize = OHG. lugi, MHG. lüge, luc, G. lüge, lug = Icel. lygi, a lie; also, with diff. suffix, OS. lugina = D. leugen, logen = MLG. logen = OHG. lugin = Dan. Sw. lagn = Goth. liugan, a lie (cf. lain³); from the verb: see lie², v.] 1. A false statement made with the purpose of deceiving; an intentional untruth; a falsehood; the utterance by speech or act of that which is false, with intent to mislead or delude.

Tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false. . . Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 65.

It is the wilful deceit that makes the lie; . . . a man may act a lie, as by pointing his finger in a wrong direction, when a traveller inquires of him his road.

Paley, Moral Philos., III. l. 15.
Guido pronounced the story one long lie.
Browning, Ring and Book, l. 119.

A lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies.
Tennyson, The Grandmother.

2. That which is intended or serves to deceive or mislead; anything designed or adapted to produce false conclusions or expectations: as, this epitaph is a lie.

Sepulchral lies, our holy walls to grace.
Pope, Dunciad, l. 43.

Wishing this lie of life were o'er.
Trench.

A lie out of whole cloth, a story or statement wholly fabricated; a tissue of falsehood, without any foundation in fact.—To *give one the lie in his throat. See give¹.—To *give the lie to. See give¹.—White *lie, a well-meant falsehood; a lie uttered without evil intent, or without expectation of harm, and so supposed to be excusable; a polite or conventional phrase not strictly in accordance with fact, and not meant to be understood literally.

Have you great heroic virtues?—no?—then remember Ananias and Sapphira. They died for a single White Lie,—a White Lie as common as dirt.

C. Reade, White Lies, xlv.

=Syn. Untruth, deception. Compare fibl.

liest, n. An obsolete spelling of *lye*³.

liest, n. An obsolete form of *lee*¹.

liest, n. An obsolete form of *lee*⁵.

lié (li-ä'), a. [F. lié, pp. of lier, bind, < L. ligare, bind; see *lien*³.] In her, same as stringed.

lie-a-bed (li'ä-bed), n. One who lies long in bed in the morning. [Colloq.]

If you had got up time enough, you might have secur'd the stage, but you are a lazy lie-a-bed.

Foots, Mayor of Garratt, i.

David was none of your lie-a-beds. He rose at five in summer, six in winter.

C. Reade, Love me Little, x.

lieberkühn (lê'bér-kün), n. [Named after its inventor, J. N. Lieberkühn: see Lieberkühnian.] An annular reflector attached to the nose of the object-glass of a microscope for bringing the light to a focus on an opaque object.

Lieberkühnia (lê-bér-kü'ni-ä), n. [NL., < Lieberkühn: see Lieberkühnian.] A genus of imperforate foraminifers of the family Gromiidae. They have no test, and the pseudopodia are given off from only a small part of the body, the rest being naked and flexible.

Lieberkühnian (lê-bér-kü'ni-an), a. Pertaining to or named after Johann Nathanael Lieberkühn (1711-56), an anatomist of Berlin.—Lieberkühnian glands, the simple follicles or crypts of Lieberkühn, which stud nearly the whole tract of the small intestine. They are minute tubes with one blind end, the other opening into the intestine, where their orifices may be seen with a lens, like little dots between the villi. Their walls consist of a delicate basement membrane lined with columnar epithelial cells. The purpose served by their secretion is doubtful. They vary in length from $\frac{1}{16}$ to $\frac{1}{8}$ inch, with a diameter of $\frac{1}{16}$ inch.

liebigite (lê'big-it), n. [Named after Justus, Baron von Liebig (1803-73), a celebrated German chemist.] A hydrous carbonate of uranium and calcium occurring as an incrustation on uraninite.

lied (lêd), n. [G., = AS. leóth, a song: see *lay*³.] Properly, a German ballad, secular or sacred, fitted for singing or actually set to music. A volkstied is a lied whose origin is among the common people and is merely traditional; a volkstümliches lied is one that is deliberately written in the general style of a volkstied; a kunstlied is one that is designedly and obviously artistic rather than naive. The lied stands in the same relation to poetry and music in Germany as the chanson in France or the ballad in England. The term is also more or less extended to other than German songs.

Liederkrantz (lê'dér-krantz), n. [G., < lieder, pl. of lied, a song, + krantz, a garland: see crantz.] A German choral society, especially one composed of men only; a glee-club. See liedertafel.

liedertafel (lê'dér-tä'fol), n. [G., < lieder, pl. of lied, a song, + tafel = E. table.] A German choral society or glee-club of men; a liederkrantz; also, a social, informal meeting or rehearsal of such a society.

lie-de-vin (lê'dè-van'), n. [F.: lie, lees; de, of; vin, wine.] The color of the lees of wine, or a color supposed to be of that hue: a name given to a deep-red color in porcelains, etc.

lief (lêf), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also leaf, leafe; < ME. leaf, lese, leaf, leve, < AS. leof = OS. liof = OHFries. liaf = D. liet = MLG. lêf = OHG. liob, MHG. liep, G. lieb = Icel. ljúfr = Sw. ljuf = Goth. liubs, dear, beloved, = Bulg. liubú = Russ. liubú, dear (etc., being widely developed in Slavic); akin to L. lubet, libet, it pleases, Skt. \sqrt{tubh} , desire: see liberal. From the same root, and in close relation to lief, are belief, believe, *leave*¹, *leave*², *love*¹, and the disguised compounds furlough, leman, etc.: see these words. From the L. verb are ult. E. liberal, liberate, liberty, etc., *liver*³, *deliver*¹, *livery*²; etc.] I. a. 1. Beloved; pleasing; agreeable. [Obsolete or archaic.]

He aeyde, John, myn hooste, lief and deere.

Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 315.

Loue made the to me so leffe

That I [Christ] for the was Rente on Rood;

I auifyrde dethe to chaunge thy greffe.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 188.

A liefer lass than this had been Coridon had never seen.

Greene, Description of the Shepherd and his Wife.

And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up

My liefest liege to be mine enemy.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. l. 164.

Yet now, I charge thee, quickly go again,

As thou art lief and dest, and do the thing

I bade thee. Tennyson, Morte d'Arthur.

2†. Inclined; disposed; willing; having a preference.

Though I it aeye, I am not lief to gabbe.

Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 324.

Haue thou not to many wordis; to awere be thou not liefe; For alle such maners comen to an yuel pref.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 89.

Lief or loathit, willing or averse; ready or reluctant; willy-nilly.

Were hem lef other loth William at last

Keured with the kinges some out of the kene preac.

William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3624.

Cast in your nette: but be you liefe or lothe,

Hold you content as fortune list assue.

Sir T. More, To them that seke Fortune.

To have as lief, to have liefer (had as lief, had liefer or liever). See explanation of these phrases under have.—To have lieft [= D. lieftieben = G. liebhaben, etc.], to hold dear; love.

"Hadde I hym nevere lieft? By God, I wene

Yet hadde I nevere thyng so lieft!" quod she.

Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 869.

II. † n. One beloved; a darling.

Cryseyde, which that is thi lieft,

Now loveth the as wel as thou dost hire.

Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 611.

lieft (lêf), adv. [< lief, a.] Gladly; willingly.

Lief is peculiarly used (originally an adjective) in the constructions to have as lieft, to have liefer (had as lieft, had liefer or liever), etc. See under have.

lieftint, n. [Early mod. E. leafekyn, < MD. lieftken (= G. liebchen); as lieft + -kin.] Darling. Palsgrave, Acolastus.

liefsomet (lêf'sum), a. [Also dial. leesome, < ME. lefsam (= OHG. liebsam); < lieft + -somet.] Agreeable.

So forth I goe space to see that leesome aight,
And with a kisse, methinke, I say, welcome my lord, my knight.

Surrey, Complaint of the Absence of her Louer.

lieftenant, n. An obsolete form of lieutenant.

liege (lêj), a. and n. [< ME. lege, lige, lyge, liege, < OF. lige, liege = Pr. lige = It. ligio (ML. reflex ligius, legius), liege, free (AF. seignour lige, OF. lige seignur, liege lord, home lige, liege man, a liege lord being the lord of a free band, and his liege men privileged free men, bound to him, but free from other service, even that of their sovereign); < MHG. ledic, ledec, free, unhindered, empty, G. ledig, empty, vacant, = MLG. ledich, ledich = MD. ledich, idle, unemployed, = Icel. lidhuqr, free, unhindered (not found in Goth.); prob. formed (as an adj. in -ig, E. -y) from the noun remaining in ME. lethe, leisure, = MD. lede*, in neg. unlede, business, trouble. Cf. AS. unlæde = Goth. unlêds, poor, > unlêdi, poverty. The history of the word is incomplete.] I. a. 1. Free; specifically, free from obligation to service except as within the relations of lord and vassal: as, a liege lord, a liege man (correlative terms implying protection on the one side and service on the other, as against all other claims).

I schal loue him lelli as my lege brother.

William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 4128.

It hath pleased God to grant us a natural liege king and lord of our own nation.

Lattimer, 1st Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1549.

One would think that by this royal Patent, which gave him Power of Life and Death over the King's liege People, Sir W. Raleigh should become rectus in curia, and free from all old Convictions.

Howell, Letters, ii. 61.

2. Of or pertaining to the tie reciprocally connecting vassal and chief: as, liege vassalage.—Liege homage. See homage.—Liege lord. See II., 2.—Liege man. See liegeman.

II. n. 1. A liegeman; a subject; a vassal; hence, a law-abiding citizen; a peaceably disposed person: as, to disturb the lieges.

The sowdan and his baronage

And alle his lieges shude crysted be.

Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 142.

"For kings, and all that are in authority," we may yet enlarge, and pray for a peaceable reign, true lieges, strong armies.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 228.

2. A liege lord; one to whom another is bound in fealty or vassalage; a sovereign lord or feudal superior; a lord paramount.

Most mighty liege, and my companion peers.

Shak., Rich. II., l. 3. 93.

And glory to our sovereign liege, King Henry of Navarre.

Macaulay, Ivry.

liegedom (lêj'drum), n. [< liege + -dom.] Allegiance. [Rare.]

Sceptre, robe, and crown,

Liegedom and aignorie.

Scott, Bridal of Triermain, iii. 36.

liegeman (lêj'man), n.; pl. liegemen (-men). [< ME. lege man, liege man, orig. as two words: see liege and man.] A vassal; a subject; one bound to the service or support of a sovereign lord.

He moate thinke yt is his leege man,
And is his tresour, and his gold in cofre.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 379.

You shall become true liegemen to his crown.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., v. 4. 128.

liege-poustie (lêj'pous'ti), n. [< ME. (Sc.) liege poustee, < OF. liege poustee, free sovereignty: liege, free; poustie, < L. potesta(-s), power, sovereignty: see liege and poustie.] In Scots law, that state of health in which a person has full power to dispose, mortis causa or otherwise, of his heritable property.

lieger, n. An obsolete form of *ledger*¹.

lien¹ (li'en). An obsolete or archaic past participle of *lie*¹.

lien² (lê'en or li'en, commonly lèn), n. [< F. lien, a band, tie, = Pg. ligamen, a hindrance, band (to marriage), = It. ligame, a band, tie, < L. ligamen, a band, < ligare, bind, tie: see ligament.] 1. In law: (a) The right of a person having possession of the property of another to retain it until some charge upon it or some demand due him is satisfied; the right to enforce a charge upon a specific thing by withholding possession from the owner until the charge is satisfied. A particular lien is a right to retain a thing for some charge or claim growing out of the identical thing or connected with it; a general lien is a right to retain the thing for a general balance either of all accounts between the parties, without restriction, or of accounts of like transactions, or in the same line of business. At common law possession was essential to the existence of a lien; courts of equity extended the doctrine. Hence—(b) A right of a creditor to have a debt or charge satisfied by legal proceedings out of specific property or its proceeds, irrespective of having possession. Often called an equitable lien. Maritime liens, the creation of courts of admiralty, are also independent of possession. So are mechanics' liens, given by statute to mechanics, etc., for unpaid labor, on real property. See below.

Hence—2. A claim; occasion of demand; right to compensation.

The slightest thing will serve, in Italy, for a lien upon your exchequer. T. B. Altieri, Ponkapog to Pesh, p. 44.

Attorney's lien, the right of an attorney, which was established on equitable principles by the courts, and extended in some jurisdictions by statute, to have his compensation satisfied out of the cause of action or the judgment recovered by him, or by retaining his client's papers, even if this prevented his client from compromising and settling with the adversary.—Charging lien, the right of an attorney to have a lien created or declared as a charge upon a fund not in his possession, or upon a judgment or decree recovered by him.—Lien de droit, in French law, obligation; nexus.—Mechanics' lien, a lien on real property, given by statutes in most of the United States, to mechanics and material-men, for the price or value of improvements supplied by them, even though not contracted for directly by the owner. Two systems exist: in one (of which the law of New York is an example) the subcontractors and material-men are subrogated to the claim of the contractor against the owner, and may charge the land with liens up to the amount due from the owner to the contractor; in the other system (of which the Pennsylvania law is a leading example), the subcontractors and material-men are given a lien to the amount of what they have furnished, irrespective of the state of the accounts between the owner and the contractor, the theory of the law being that the contractor is the owner's agent for the purpose of employing labor and material.—Retaining lien, the right of an attorney to retain papers in his possession belonging to a client until his claim against the client for services has been satisfied.—Specific lien, a lien secured by a contract or a judgment, execution, attachment, or other legal proceeding, fastening it on a specific thing.—Vendor's liens, a class of equitable liens arising where a seller conveys land without being paid the price or taking security, and is allowed to have the land resold to raise it.

lien³ (li'en), n.; pl. lienes (li'e-nêz). [L.] The spleen. [Rare.]

lienculus (li-eng'kū-lus), n.; pl. lienculi (-li). [NL., dim. of L. lien, the spleen: see *lien*³.] One of the small separate masses of splenic tissue sometimes found about the spleen.

lien-holder (lên'hôl'dèr), n. One who holds a lien.

lieno-intestinal (li'e-nô-in-tes'ti-nal), a. Pertaining to the spleen and to the intestine; applied to a vein of the portal system, which brings blood from the spleen and intestine to the liver.

lienomalacia (li'e-nô-mā-lā'si-ä), n. [NL., < L. lien, the spleen, + Gr. μαλακία, softness, < μαλακός, soft.] In pathol., softening of the spleen.

lienor (lê'nor), n. One who has a lien.

lienteric (li-en-ter'ik), a. [< L. lientericus, < Gr. λιεντερικός, lienteric, < λιεντρία, lienteric; see lienteric.] Relating or pertaining to or affected with lienteric.

lienteric (li'en-ter-i), n. [= F. lienteric = Sp. It. lienteria, < Gr. λιεντρία, the passing one's food without digesting, < λεῖος, smooth, + έντερον, an intestine: see enteron.] In pathol., a form of diarrhea in which, from excessive peristalsis, the alimonts are discharged undigested, and with little alteration in either color or substance.

lier¹ (li'ér), n. [*< ME. lier; < lie¹ + -er¹. Cf. the variant forms ligger, lidger, ledger¹.] One who lies down; one who rests or remains.*

He wlat not that there were liers in ambush against him.
Joah. viii. 14.

lier^{2t}, n. An obsolete spelling of liar.

lier³, n. Same as leer⁷.

lierne (li-érn'), n. [F.; perhaps for lienne, the warp-thread in which the woof has not passed, < lier, < L. ligare, bind; see lien².] In archt., any rib in vaulting that does not rise from the impost, and is not a ridge-rib, but passes from a boss or intersection of the principal ribs to other secondary ribs. Vaults in which such ribs are employed are called lierne vaults.

lie-tea (li'té), n. [Pidgin-English.] Spurious or adulterated tea sometimes palmed off or attempted to be palmed off on the tea-market by Chinese dealers. It usually consists of willow or other leaves, with tea-leaves and broken stems, fired and prepared as gunflint tea.

lieu (lü), n. [< F. lieu, OF. liu, lou = Pr. luoc, loc = It. loco, luogo, < L. locus, a place; see locus.] Place; room; stead; now only in the phrase in lieu of, which is equivalent to instead of.

One would think it a very large offer to give so great a lieu for so small a service.
Bp. Andrews, Sermons, V. 543.
The topmost spire of the mountain was lilies in lieu of anow.
Tennyson, Voyage of Maeldune.

Lieut. An abbreviation of lieutenant as a title. lieutenancy (lü- or lef-ten'an-si), n.; pl. lieutenancies (-siz). [< lieutenant(t) + -cy.] 1. The office, authority, or incumbency of a lieutenant. — 2. The jurisdiction of a lieutenant; a district or territory over which a lieutenant exercises authority.

To this purpose were several other congratulations or addresses to the King (some before, some after this of Middlesex), viz. from Norwich, from Hereford, from the Lieutenancy of London.
Baker, Charles II., an. 1632.

3. Lieutenants collectively. [Rare.]

lieutenant (lü- or lef-ten'ant), n. [*Formerly also lieftenant, leftenant; < ME. levetenant, < OF. lieutenant, F. lieutenant = It. locotenente < ML. locum teneu(t)-s, one who holds the place of another: L. locum, acc. of locus, place; teneu(t)-s, ppr. of tenere, hold; see lieu and tenant. Cf. locum-tenens.] 1. In general, one who holds the place of another in the performance of any duty or function; one authorized to act in lieu of another, or employed to carry out his will or purposes; the substitute or representative of a superior.*

My ayster sone, Sir Mordrede hym selvene,
Salle be my lieutenant, with lordchipez ynewe,
Of alle my lele lege-mene, that my landez zemea.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 646.
Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.
Shak., Tempest, iii. 2. 18.

2. One who holds an office, civil or military, in subordination to or as the representative of a superior; an officer authorized to perform certain functions in the absence or under the orders of another: as, the lieutenant of the Tower of London; the lord lieutenant of Ireland or of an English county (considered the direct representative of the sovereign). Particularly—(a) In the army, a commissioned officer next in rank below a captain, and commanding the company in his absence. In the United States this officer is called first lieutenant, and has under him a subordinate officer called second lieutenant. (b) In the navy, a commissioned officer next in rank below a lieutenant-commander in the United States and a commander in Great Britain, and in both ranking with captains in the army. In the United States navy the term lieutenant (junior grade) has been substituted for the old term master, ranking with first lieutenants in the army. In the British navy the corresponding grade is called sub-lieutenant. In the British navy the lieutenants on board a ship are designated as first, second, third, etc. The term first lieutenant in the United States navy has been replaced by executive officer. (c) In the early days of the colony of Virginia, the chief officer of a county, corresponding somewhat to the lord lieutenant of an English county. Abbreviated, as a title, Lieut., Lt.—Field-marshal lieutenant. See field-marshal.—Lord lieutenant. See lord.

lieutenant-colonel (lü-ten'ant-kér-nél), n. A military officer next in rank below a colonel, and in some European armies commonly the actual commander of a regiment, the colonelship being honorary.

lieutenant-commander (lü-ten'ant-ko-mán'dér), n. A commissioned officer in the United States navy, of a grade intermediate between that of commander and that of lieutenant, and ranking with a major in the army.

lieutenant-general (lü-ten'ant-jen'er-ál), n. 1. A military officer ranking in the United States and British armies next below a general. In the German army he ranks below a general of infantry and above a major-general, and commands a division. The only persons who have hitherto held this rank in the United States army are Generals Washington, Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan. Gen. Scott held the rank of brevet lieutenant-general. See general.

2. In the proprietary government of Maryland, the deputy of the proprietor, who acted as governor of the province for him.—Lieutenant-general of the kingdom, a title sometimes held by a regent of France when there was no recognized king, or when the king was in a state of disability.

Lieutenant-governor (lü-ten'ant-guv'er-nor), n. An officer authorized to perform the functions of a governor in case of the absence, disability, or death of the latter, or in a subordinate governorship. In the United States the lieutenant-governor of a State has some independent duties, and is entitled not only to act as governor ad interim, but to succeed to the office if it becomes vacant during his electoral term. In some parts of the British empire a lieutenant-governor is the actual governor of a district or province, under a governor-general or other chief magistrate of the territory of which it is a part.

Lieutenant-governorship (lü-ten'ant-guv'er-nor-ship), n. [< lieutenant-governor + -ship.] The office of lieutenant-governor.

Lieutenantry (lü- or lef-ten'an-tri), n. [< lieutenant + -ry.] Lieutenancy.

If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry.
Shak., Othello, ii. 1. 173.

Lieutenantship (lü- or lef-ten'an-ship), n. [< lieutenant + -ship.] The state or office of a lieutenant; lieutenancy.

liever (li'év'er). Comparative of lief.

lievrite (li'év'rit), n. [Named after C. H. Lievrière, a French mineralogist (1752-1835).] Same as ilvaite.

life (lif), n.; pl. lives (livz). [*< ME. lif, lyf (dat. live), < AS. lif, life, = OS. lif, libh = OFries. lif = D. lijf, life, body, = MLG. lif = OllG. lib, lip, life, MHG. lip, life, body, G. leib, body, = lecl. lif (also lif), life, = Dan. liv = Sw. lif, life, = Goth. *leif (not found; cf. libains, life, from the same root, and fairhues = AS. feorh, life), lit. 'continuance,' associated with lifian, live, lit. remain, continue, < *lifian (pret. *lāf, pl. *lifon, pp. lifon), in comp. belifan = OS. bilibhan = OHG. biliban, MHG. beliben, bliben, G. bleiben, etc., = Goth. bileiban, etc., remain, be left (see leave¹), akin to G. λπαρής, persistent, persevering, λπαρεῖν, persist, persevere. Hence in comp. (orig. phr.) alive, by apheresis live².]

1. The principle of animate corporeal existence; the capacity of an animal or a plant for self-preservation and growth by the processes of assimilation and excretion, the permanent cessation of which constitutes death; that state of an animal or a plant in which its organs are in actual performance of their functions, or are capable of performing their functions, though the performance has not yet begun, or has begun but incompletely, or has been temporarily suspended; vitality.

Deed men he reistd from death to lyue.
Hymns to Virginia, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 47.

The Lord God . . . breathed into his nostrills the breath of life; and man became a living soul.
Gen. ii. 7.

Noble mother,
Can you kill that you gave life? are my years
Fit for destruction?
Fletcher, Bonduca, iv. 4.

Seeing, then, that in all cases we may consider the external phenomena as simply in relation, and the internal phenomena also as simply in relation, the broadest and most complete definition of Life will be—The continuous adjustment of internal relations to external relations.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 30.

Life is the state of an organized being in which it maintains, or is capable of maintaining, its structural integrity by the constant interchange of elements with the surrounding media.
O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 201.

2. Duration of the animate existence of an individual; the whole or any period of animate existence; the time between birth and death, or any part of it from a given point till death: as, life is but a span; to hold office for life.

Mannis lijf here is but a day
Agens the lijf that euer schal be.
Hymns to Virginia, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 84.

Health and long life to you, Master Silence.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 3. 54.

As men buy Leases, for three lives and downward.
Milton, Church-Government, ll., Int.

A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line—by deeds, not years.
Sheridan, Duenna, iv. 1.

3. The principle or state of conscious spiritual existence: as, the life of the soul.

'Tis life, whereof our nerves are scant,
Oh life, not death, for which we pant,
More life, and fuller, that I want.
Tennyson, Two Voices.

4. Duration of existence or activity in general; term of continuance, usefulness, or efficiency; the time during which anything lasts, or has force or validity: as, the life of a machine; the life of a lease; the enterprise had a short life.

In turning or planing steel the life of the tools used upon it is greatly increased if it has been thoroughly annealed.
C. P. B. Shelley, Workshop Appliances, p. 324.

In London, [electrical] lamps can now be obtained whose life is guaranteed for a thousand hours.
Science, IV. 391.

The life of a rope appears to be about a year and a half.
Rankine, Steam Engine, App., p. 669.

5. The state or condition of being alive; individual manifestation of existence: as, to save or lose one's life.

And yf they do any trespass wherof may fall peryll of lyf and lym [etc.].

Charter of London (Rich. II.), Arnold's Chron., p. 15.
I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserved with infamy.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 5. 83.

6. Embodied vitality; vital force in material forms; living beings in the aggregate: as, a high or a low type of life; the absence of life in the desert.

Full nature swarms with life.
Thomson, Spring, l. 137.
From the life that fills the flood
To that which warbles through the vernal wood.
Pope, Essay on Man, l. 215.

The noise of life begins again.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, xii.

7. A corporeal existence; a living being; one who or that which has life; a person: now used only with reference to persons as lost or saved, but formerly of a person generally: as, many lives were lost.

How louynge he is to eche lyf a londe and a watere.
Piers Plowman (C), xvi. 19.

An awful thought, a life removed,
The human-hearted man I loved.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, xlii.

8. Source or means of living; that which makes or keeps alive; vivifying principle; an essential vital element, as food or the blood.

Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.
Shak., T. and C., ii. 2. 194.

Genial Day,
What life, what life is in thy ray!
Moore, Lalla Rookh, The Fire-worshippers.

The warm life came issuing through the wound.
Pope, Iliad, iv. 609.

The Lord of all, himself through all diffus'd,
Sustains, and is the life of all that lives.
Cowper, Task, vi. 222.

9. A vital part of the body; a life-spot or vulnerable point.

The boat approached near enough to "aet" the hand-lance into her life, dispatching the animal [a whale] at a single dart.
C. M. Scammon, Marine Mammals, p. 25.

10. Condition, quality, manner, or course of living; career: as, high or low, married or single life; to lead a gay life; to amend one's life; the daily life of a community.

When they were alle come, thet ledde alle symple lyf and honeste.
Mertin (E. E. T. S.), l. 97.

They little differed for their manner of life from the very brute beasts of the field.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 4.

He hath a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly.
Shak., Othello, v. 1. 19.

It is like they might have lived here happily enough, had their inclinations led them to a quiet life.
Dampier, Voyages, II. l. 107.

11. In theol., that kind of spiritual existence which belongs to God, is manifested in Christ, and is imparted through faith to the believer; hence, a course of existence devoted to the service of God, possessed of the felicity of his fellowship, and to be consummated after death.

I am the resurrection and the life.
John xi. 25.

To be carnally minded is death; but to be spirually minded is life and peace.
Rom. viii. 6.

The soul flows into the human mind, and conveys with it the life which it receives, without interruption, from the Lord.

Swedenborg, Christian Psychology (tr. by Gorman), p. 70.

12. An account of a person's career and actions; a personal history; a biography: as, Plutarch's Lives; Johnson's Lives of the Poets.

Plutarch, . . . that writes his life,
Tells us that Cato dearly loved his wife.
Pope, Epilogue to Rowe's "Jane Shore."

13. Vivid show of animate existence; animation; spirit; vivacity; energy in action, thought, or expression: as, to put life into one's work.

Rem negligent aght. He goes carelessly about the matter. He puts no life into the matter. He doth it as though he cared not whether he did it or no.
Terence in English (1614). (Nares.)

They have no notion of life and fire in fancy and in words.
Felton.

Eyes of intense life looking out from a weary, beaten face.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, vii. 5.

14. An animating force or influence; anything that quickens or enlivens; a source of vital energy, happiness, or enjoyment; hence, that which is dear as life (in this sense often used as an epithet of endearment): as, he was the life of the company; his books were his life.

That is the only place of Trade in the Country, and Trade is the Life of a Chinese.
Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 15.

And Deborah, my Life, grief, you know, is dry; let us have a bottle of the best gooseberry-wine.
Goldsmith, Vicar, xvii.

15. The living form and expression; hence, reality in appearance or representation; living semblance; actual likeness: as, to draw from the life; he looks the character to the life.

There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion.
Shak., Much Ado, ii. 3. 110.

I would your lordship did but see how well
This fury doth become you! it doth awe
So near the life as it were natural.

Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, ii. 1.

The Ecce Homo, shut up in a frame of velvet, for the life and accurate finishing exceeding all description.
Evelyn, Diary, March 1, 1644.

16. An insurance on a person's life; a life-insurance policy.

He renewed two lives which had dropped.

Mrs. Henry Wood, The Channings, I. 243.

A case or matter of life and death, an extremely critical or pressing case, as one in which life is at stake.—Brethren and Clerks of the Common Life. See brother.—Canonical life. See canonical.—Change of life. See change.—Equal decrement of life. See decrement.—Expectation of life. See expectation.—For life. (a) For the whole term of one's existence: as, a pension for life; estate for life; imprisonment for life. (b) So as to save, or as if to save, one's life: as, to run for life; to swim for life.

As from a bear a man would run for life.

Shak., C. of E., iii. 2. 153.

High life. See high.—In life, in the world. [Colloq.]

"Hallo!" responded that gentleman, looking over the side of the chaise with all the coolness in life.

Dickens, Pickwick, I.

Life annuity. See annuity.—Life or lives in being, in law, a phrase used in limiting the power of grantor or testator to suspend the absolute power of alienation of property, the general policy of modern law being that such power shall not be suspended by putting property in trust or otherwise except for a period expressly limited so as to expire on the decease of the last survivor of specified persons in being at the time the will or deed takes effect. In some jurisdictions the limit is two lives or three lives.—Life of an execution, the period prescribed by law or by the terms of an execution within which it ought to be returned to the court.—Line of life. See line.—Organic life. (a) That life which is common to all organized beings, as animals and plants; life in an ordinary sense. (b) That life which belongs properly to the most vital organs, as the heart, brain, or lungs; distinguished from the more vegetative life of the organs of nutrition, for example, whose functions may be temporarily suspended without causing death.—Still life, in art. See still-life.—To bring to life, to restore (that which is apparently dead); revive; resuscitate.—To come to life, to revive as from apparent death; be reanimated: as, a drooping plant comes to life in water.—To the life, so as closely to resemble the original, as a picture; hence, exactly; perfectly: as, a portrait drawn to the life. [Life is used in a number of compounds the meaning of which in most cases is sufficiently obvious: as, life-consuming, life-preserving, etc.] = Syn. Animation, Life, Liveliness, etc. See animation.

life (lif), interj. An abbreviation of God's life, used as an oath: an interjection of impatience.

Life! had she none to gull but poor promoters?

Middleton, Chaste Maid, ii. 2.

She once had past that way; he heard her speak;

She scared him: Life! he never saw the like.

Tennyson, Princess, i.

life-and-death (lif'and-deth'), a. Noting a matter of life or death; critical; desperate.

The life-and-death struggle between the King and the Commons.
New Princeton Rev., IV. 145.

life-arrow (lif'ar'ō), n. An arrow carrying a line or cord, fired from a gun for the purpose of establishing communication between a vessel and the shore in cases of shipwreck. The arrow-head has large barbs, so that it may readily catch in the ship's rigging.

life-belt (lif'belt), n. An inflatable belt, generally of india-rubber, or a belt made of several pieces of cork fastened together, used to support the body in the water.

life-blood (lif'blud), n. and a. I. n. 1. The blood necessary to life; vital blood.

Patient the sickening victim eyed

The life-blood ebb in crimson tide

Down his clogg'd beard and shaggy limb.

Scott, L. of the L., iii. 3.

2. That which is essential to the existence or strength of something; that which constitutes or gives strength and energy. Also life's-blood, or, preferably, life's blood.

Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise.

Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iv. 1. 29.

Begone, sweet life-blood; if I should discern Thyself but touched for my sake, I should die.

B. Jonson, Poetaster, iv. 6.

3. In pathol., the more or less constant spasmodic quivering of the eyelid or lip: also called life's-blood, live-blood, and ello.

That curious muscular sensation or quiver, to which the vulgar give the name of live blood.

B. W. Richardson, Diseases of Modern Life, p. 163.

II. a. Necessary as blood to life; essential. [Rare.]

These devout prelates . . . set at nought and trample under foot all the most sacred and life-blood Laws, Statutes, and Acts of Parliament.

Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

life-boat (lif'bōt), n. A boat constructed for the special purpose of saving life at sea in stormy weather, especially in case of shipwreck. Life-boats are sharp at both ends, and those carried by ships are light and strong, and of great buoyancy, obtained either by air-chambers of metal or by cork cylinders under the thwarts. On the coasts of the United States and Great Britain and of some other countries, life-boats are stationed at intervals along the shore, to assist shipwrecked seamen. These boats vary in construction, according to the nature of the coast. On the sandy sea-coast of the United States a light surf-boat is used, while on the shores of the British Isles and on the great American lakes a much heavier boat is in common use.

life-breath (lif'breth), n. The breath of life; that which imparts or sustains life; a vivifying principle or agency. [Rare.]

The functions of the staff are the army's life-breath.

N. A. Rev., CXXVI. 454.

life-buoy (lif'boi), n. See buoy, 2.

life-car (lif'kär), n. A water-tight chamber used for conveying people ashore from a wreck. Connection between the shore and the ship is established by means of a line-throwing gun, and the car is drawn backward and forward along a guide-rope by means of cords manned on the wrecked vessel and on shore.

life-cord (lif'kōrd), n. Same as lifestring.

And to the brain, the soul's bed-chamber, went,

And gnaw'd the life-cords there.

Donne, Progress of the Soul.

life-cycle (lif'si'kl), n. The whole cycle or series of vital phenomena exhibited by an organism in its successive stages of development from the ovum; life-history.

life-day (lif'dä), n. [ME. lyfe-day, lyf-day, lif-dag, < AS. lyfdæg, lifetime, < lyf, life, + dæg, day, period.] Lifetime.

Preata huc menteyneth

To holde lemmanea and lotoheyes al here lyf-daves.

Piers Plowman (C), iv. 183.

life-drop (lif'dröp), n. A vital drop; a drop of one's heart's blood.

Thou know'at my deeda, my breast devoid of fear,

And hostile life-drops dim my gory spear.

Byron, Nisus and Euryalus, Paraphrase from Æneid, ix.

life-estate (lif'es-tät'), n. An estate the tenure of which is measured by the duration of a life. See estate for life, under estate.

life-everlasting (lif'ev-er-läs'ting), n. Cudweed or everlasting; the species of the genus Gnaphalium.

lifelul (lif'ful), a. [< life + -ful.] 1. Full of life; lively. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Tiberioa life-full eyes and well-fild vaines.

Marton, The Fawne, i. 2.

Thus he lifelul spake.

Keats, Endymion, i.

2. Giving life.

Like lyfull heat to nummed senses brought.

Spenser, F. Q., VI. xi. 45.

life-giving (lif'giv'ing), a. Giving life or spirit; having power to revivify or animate; inspiriting; invigorating.

Nor on the virtue thought

Of that life-giving plant, but only used

For prospect what well used had been the pledge

Of immortality.

Milton, P. L., iv. 199.

life-guard (lif'gärd), n. [= G. Leibgarde = Sw. lifgarde = Dan. livgarde, body-guard.] 1. A guard of the life or person; a guard that attends a prince or other person; a body-guard. In the British army the name Life Guards is given to two cavalry regiments forming, with the Royal Horse Guards, the Household Brigade, the body-guard of the sovereign.

And he's kill'd a' the king's life guards,

He's kill'd d' them every man O.

Sweet Willie and Lady Margerie (Child's Ballads, II. 54).

2. Brushes or some other device placed before the forward wheels of a locomotive to sweep small obstructions from the track.

life-history (lif'his'tō-ri), n. In biol.: (a) The series of vital phenomena exhibited by an organism in the course of its development from the egg to its adult state. The word refers especially to embryological and subsequent transformations or metamorphoses, if any occur. It incidentally includes the habits, manners, etc., of an organism during the period of its development.

The life-history of such an imaginary individual, that is to say, would correspond with all that was new, all that could be called evolution or development, in a certain typical series of individuals each of whom advanced a certain stage in mental differentiation.

J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 45.

(b) The written description of a life-history; morphological "natural history."

life-hold (lif'höld), n. Same as life-land.

life-insurance (lif'in-shör'ans), n. See insurance, 1.

life-interest (lif'in'tēr-est), n. An interest or estate terminating with the life of the person to whom it belongs.

life-land (lif'land), n. Land held on a lease for a life or lives. Also called life-hold.

lifeless (lif'les), a. [< ME. lifles, < AS. lyfledas (= OFries. lyftas = MLG. lyftōs = Sw. lyftōs = Dan. lyrlōs) (cf. equiv. D. levenloos, MHG. lebelōs, G. leblos, involving another but related noun), lifeless, < lyf, life, + less, E. -less.] 1. Deprived of life; dead; also, in a state of suspended animation.

There let his head and lifeless body lie,

Until the queen his mistress bury it.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 1. 142.

2. Not possessing life; inanimate; inorganic: as, lifeless matter.

Was I to have never parted from thy side?

As good have grown there still a lifeless rib.

Milton, P. L., ix. 1154.

3. Destitute of power, force, vigor, or spirit; wanting animation or vital energy; dull; heavy; inactive; vapid; insipid: as, a lifeless style of oratory; lifeless movements.

Description cannot auit itself in words

To demonstrate the life of such a battle [army]

In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Shak., Hen. V., iv. 2. 54.

4. Destitute of living beings.

Statues finished the lifeless spot with mimic representations of the excluded seas of men.

Walpole, Anecdotes of Painting, IV. vii.

= Syn. 1. Defunct. — 3. Inert, torpid, sluggish, spiritless, passive; flat, frigid, pointless.

lifelessly (lif'les-li), adv. In a lifeless manner; without vigor; dully; heavily; frigidly.

lifelessness (lif'les-nes), n. The state of being lifeless; destitution of life, vigor, or spirit; inactivity.

lifelike (lif'lik), a. Simulating or resembling life; giving the impression of real life: as, a lifelike portrait or narrative.

lifelikeness (lif'lik-nes), n. The quality of being lifelike; simulation of real life.

An absolute lifelikeness of expression.

Poe, Oval Portrait.

life-line (lif'lin), n. Naut.: (a) A rope stretched anywhere on a vessel for the safety of the men in bad weather or when they are manning yards: in the latter case it is stretched from the mast to the lift. (b) One of several lines attached to a life-buoy or life-boat, to enable a person in the water to reach the boat or buoy more readily.

lifelodet, n. [ME. lyfode, lyfode; < life + lode.] Hence, by confusion, the present form livelihood.] Conduct of life; means of living; support; sustenance.

This foule syn, accidie, is eek a ful greet enemy to the lyfode of the body.

Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

The Erth mynstrethe to us 2 thinges; oure lyfode, that comethe of the Erthe that we lye by, and oure Sepulture afre oure Deth.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 293.

lifelong (lif'lōng), a. [< life + long. Cf. live-long, an older form of the same word.] Lasting or continuing through life: as, a lifelong struggle with poverty; a lifelong friend.

lifelyl, a. and adv. An obsolete form of lively.

life-mortar (lif'mōr'tär), n. A mortar for throwing a rocket with a rope attached over a ship in distress near the shore.

lifent, v. t. An obsolete form of liven.

life-office (lif'of'is), n. An office where the business of life-insurance is transacted.

life-peer (lif'pēr), n. A peer whose peerage lapses at his death, not being hereditary. See lord of appeal in ordinary, under lord.

life-peerage (lif'pēr'ā), n. A peerage conferred only for the period of the recipient's life.

life-plant (lif'plant), n. A plant of the genus Bryophyllum (B. calycinum and B. proliferum), belonging to the Crassulaceae. The leaf emits roots when laid on damp earth.

life-preserver (lif'prē-zēr'vēr), n. 1. An apparatus of various forms, as a buoyant jacket or belt, or a complete dress, designed for the preservation of the lives of persons who, from shipwreck or other cause, are compelled to trust themselves to the water.—2. A weapon, as a pistol, or specifically a short stick with a loaded head, used for defense against assailants.

Life-preserver.

lifer (lif'ēr), n. One who receives or has received a sentence of penal servitude for life. [Slang.]

They know what a clever lad he is; he'll be a lifer; they'll make the Artful nothing less than a lifer.

Dickens, Oliver Twist, xlii.

Lifers cannot claim any remission, but their cases are brought forward at the end of twenty years, and considered on their merits.

Encyc. Brit., XIX, 756.

life-raft (lif'ráft), n. Naut., a raft-like construction designed to save life in case of shipwreck. That in most general use is composed of two water-tight cylinders of wood or metal, or of inflated india-rubber, connected by a wooden framework, and furnished with appliances for rowing and steering.

life-rate (lif'rát), n. The rate of payment on a policy of life-insurance.

life-rendering (lif'ren'dér-ing), a. Yielding up life. [Rare.]

To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms,
And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,
Repat them with my blood.

Shak., Hamlet, iv. 5, 146.

life-rent (lif'rent), n. A rent which one is entitled to receive for life, usually for support; a right which entitles a person to use and enjoy property during life, without destroying or wasting it.

life-renter (lif'ren'tēr), n. A person who enjoys a life-rent.

life-rentrix (lif'ren'triks), n. A woman who enjoys a life-rent.

Lady Margaret Bellenden, . . . life-rentrix of the barony of Tillietudien.

Scott, Old Mortality, li.

life-rocket (lif'rok'et), n. A rocket used to convey a rope to a vessel in distress, so as to establish communication between it and the shore.

liferoot (lif'rót), n. The golden ragwort, Senecio aureus: so named on account of supposed vulnerary and other properties.

life-saving (lif'sá'ving), a. Designed to save life; especially, designed to save those who are in danger of drowning.—Life-saving apparatus, all the materials, tools, and appliances used for the rescue of human life endangered by shipwreck or by fire, such as life-boats, wreck-ordnance, line-carrying projectiles, shot-lines, faking-boxes, life-cars, breeches-buoys, transportation-carts, life-buoys, life-preservers, hawsers, whip-lines, etc.—Life-saving gun, a light piece of ordnance used to shoot line-carrying projectiles from the shore to vessels in distress, to establish communication between them and the shore.—Life-saving mortar, a small mortar fitted for throwing a hooked projectile with a line attached from the shore to a ship. See life-saving service.—Life-saving projectile, a projectile which is used for the rescue of human life imperiled by fire or shipwreck.—Life-saving service, an organization for saving the lives of persons shipwrecked within reach of aid from the shore; in the United States, a division of the Treasury Department of the national government, having stations at short intervals along the shores of the ocean and the great lakes, provided with crews and life-saving appliances of all kinds. Similar organizations in other countries are chiefly maintained by voluntary private agencies.

life's-blood (lifs'blud), n. See life-blood, 2 and 3.

life-shot (lif'shot), n. A shot or bullet carrying a line, used in the same way and for the same purpose as a life-rocket.

life-signal (lif'sig'nál), n. In a life-saving buoy, a device for producing an inextinguishable chemical light, which is kindled automatically by the cutting loose of the buoy.

life-size (lif'siz), a. Of the same size as the (living) object portrayed.

The Roman senate decreed that his life-size statue should be sculptured and set up upon the Capitoline.

C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, Ist., p. lix.

lifesome (lif'sum), a. [life + -some.] Animated; gay; lively. [Rare.]

I wish for your sake I could be More lifesome and more gay.

Coleridge, Three Graves.

life-spot (lif'spot), n. In whaling, the vulnerable point behind the fin into which the lance is thrust to reach the "life" and kill the whale.

lifespring (lif'spring), n. The spring or source of life; anything regarded as essential to the sustentation of the life of either the body or the soul. Imp. Diet.

lifestring (lif'string), n. A nerve or string in the body imagined to be essential to life; hence, in the plural, the essential supports of life.

Breaking thy veins and thy life-strings w^t like pain & grief.

Sir T. More, Works, p. 77.

These lines are the veins, the arteries,
The undecaying lifestrings of those hearts.

Daniel.

life-table (lif'tā'bl), n. A statistical table exhibiting the probable proportion of persons who will live to reach different ages.

life-tenant (lif'ten'tant), n. The owner of a life-estate; one who holds lands, etc., for the term of his own or another's life.

lifetime (lif'tim), n. The time that one's life continues; duration of life.

And that Cuppe the Sonc schalle kepe to drynken of, alle his lif tyme, in remembrance of his Fadir.

Manderille, Travels, p. 310.

Let me for this life-time reign as king.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., i. 1, 171.

life-weary (lif'wēr'i), a. Tired of life; weary of living.

Let me have

A dram of poison, . . .

That the life-weary taker may fall dead.

Shak., R. and J., v. 1, 62.

life-work (lif'wérk), n. The work of a lifetime; the employment or labor to which one's life is or has been devoted.

lifodet, n. See lifelode.

lifyt, adv. An obsolete form of lively.

lift¹ (lift), n. [< ME. lift, lyft, lyst, < AS. lyft = OS. lyft = D. lycht = MLG. lycht, lyst, LG. lyst = OHG. MHG. G. lyst = Icel. lopt (pron. loft) = Dan. Sw. lyft = Goth. lyftus, the air, the sky: the orig. Teut. word for 'air,' and not found outside of Teut. Hence, through Scand., *lyft*², loft, lofty, aloft, etc.] The air; the atmosphere; the sky; the heavens. [Now only prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

When the lift grew dark, and the wind blew loud,

And gurlly grew the sea.

Sir Patrick Spens (Child's Ballads, III, 154).

It is the moon, I ken her horn,

That a blinkin' in the lift see his.

Burns, Oh, Willie Brew'd a Peck o' Maut.

lift² (lift), v. [< ME. listen, lyften (pret. lyft, lyst), < Icel. lypta (pron. lyfta) (= Sw. lyfta = Dan. lyfte, lift, MHG. G. lyften), lift, air, lift, 'raise in air,' < lopt (pron. loft) = Sw. Dan. lyft = MHG. G. lyst = AS. lyft, lift, the air: see *lift*¹.] I. trans. 1. To move or heave upward in space; bring to a higher place or position; raise; elevate: often followed by up: as, to lift a stone from the ground: to lift up one who has fallen.

When he was upon his Coursere, and wente to the Castelle, and entred in to the Cave, the Dragon lyfte up hire hed azenst him.

Manderille, Travels, p. 24.

He lift up his spear against eight hundred.

2 Sam. xxiii. 8.

He rises on the toe; that spirit of his

In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Shak., T. and C., iv. 5, 16.

Take her up tenderly,

Lift her with care.

Hood, Bridge of Sighs.

2. To bring to a higher degree, rank, or condition; make more lofty or considerable; elevate; exalt; raise to a high or a higher pitch or state of feeling, as the voice, the mind, etc.

In those means which he [God] by law did establish as being fittest unto that end, for us to alter any thing is to lift up ourselves against God, and as it were to countermand him.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iii. 10.

His [Joseph's] envious brethren treacherous' drift

Him to the stern of Memphis state had lift.

Sylvester, tr. of Dn Bartas's Weeks, i. 7.

And Jacob . . . lifted up his voice, and wept.

Gen. xxix. 11.

Lifted at length, by dignity of thought

And dint of genius, to an affluent life.

Cooper, Table-Talk, l. 676.

I remember Penn before his accusers, and Fox in the bail dock, where he was lifted up in spirit, as he tells us, and the Judge and the Jury became as dead men under his feet.

Lamb, Elia, p. 54.

3. To keep elevated or exalted; hold up; display on high: as, the mountain lifts its head above the clouds.

We saw

The long-roofed chapel of King's College lift

Turrets and pinnacles in answering files.

Wordsworth, Prelude, iii.

And, in dark firmaments of leaves,

The orange lifts its golden moons.

Lowell, An Invitation.

4. To take away; steal. See *lift*³. [Colloq.]—5. In mining, same as draw, 30.—6. To gather; collect: as, to lift rents.—7. To carve (a swan).

Lift that swanne.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 265.

8. To bear; support.

So downe he fell, that th' earth him underneath

Did grone, as feeble so great load to lift.

Spenser, F. Q., I. xl. 54.

To lift one's graith. See graith.—To lift one's hair, to scalp one. [Slang, western U. S.]—To lift the crib, in the Great Lakes fisheries, to gather in the netting of a crib or bowl of a pound-net; haul the pound, as would be said in New England.—To lift up the eyes, to look; raise the eyes; direct one's eyes, or, figuratively, one's thoughts.

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

Ps. cxxi. 1.

To lift up the head, to rejoice or exult.

Then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

Luke xxi. 28.

To lift up the horn, in Script., to vaunt one's self; behave arrogantly.

I said unto the fools, Deal not foolishly; and to the wicked, Lift not up the horn.

Ps. lxxv. 4.

= Syn. 1 and 2. Hoist, Heave, etc. See raise.

II. intrans. 1. To raise or endeavor to raise something; exert the strength for the purpose of raising something.

The mind, by being engaged in a task beyond its strength, like the body strained by lifting at a weight too heavy, has often its force broken.

Locke.

2. To rise or seem to rise; disappear in the air: as, the fog lifts.

No gladlier does the stranded wreck
See thro' the gray skirts of a lifting squall
The boat that bears the hope of life approach.

Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

3. Naut., to shake lightly in the wind: said of a sail when the wind blows on its edge at too small an angle to fill it.—To lift for dealing, in card-playing, to draw or cut for deal. Hallivell.

lift² (lift), n. [< *lyft*², v.] 1. The act or manner of lifting or raising; a raising or rising up; elevation.

In races it is not the large stride or high lift that makes the speed.

Dacon, Dispatch (ed. 1887).

A lift of the fog favored us at last, and we ran into the little harbor.

B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 15.

Paris had received one of those momentary lifts of which she went through several before her final exaltation.

E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 8.

Some boughs of the asples were beginning to lose the elastic upward lift of their prime, and to hang looser and limper with the burden of their foliage.

Houells, Annie Kilburn, xv.

2. Assistance by, or by means of, lifting; hence, assistance in general; a helping hand: as, to give one a lift (a help on one's way) in a wagon.

Much watching of Louisa, and much subsequent observation of her impenetrable demeanour, which keenly whetted and sharpened Mrs. Sparsit's edge, must have given her, as it were, a lift in the way of inspiration.

Dickens, Hard Times, li. 10.

A lady in a dog-cart warned us of rain, and offered us a lift, which we refused heroically.

Harpur's Mag., LXXVII, 945.

3. A rise; degree of elevation; extent of rise, or distance through which anything is raised.

All of these valves have cages in which they work and which also act as stops, which prevent them from rising from their seats further than a certain distance. This distance is called their lift, and the successful working of the pumps depends very much on the amount of lift which the valves have.

Forney, Locomotive, p. 117.

Here and there in the land were sharp lifts where rocks cropped out, making miniature cliffs overhanging some portions of the brook's course.

The Century, XXXI, 108.

Specifically—(a) The extent of rise in a canal-lock: as, a lift of ten feet. (b) In mining: (1) The distance from one level to another. (2) The distance through which the piston of an ore-stamp rises and falls.

4. A rise in state or condition; promotion; advancement: as, to get a lift in the army for bravery.—5. Elevation of style or sentiment; action of lifting or elevating, as the mind. [Rare.]

The voice of the orator ceased, and there was perfect silence. It seemed as if could never be broken. The lift was altogether too great for immediate applause.

Josiah Quincy, Figures of the Past, p. 109.

6. Anything which assists in lifting, or by which objects are lifted. Specifically—(a) A hoisting-machine or other device for raising or lowering persons or things vertically from a lower to a higher level or vice versa. (See elevator, 4.) A lift in a canal is a large machine-elevator sometimes used instead of a lock.

The Times establishment is altogether too conservative to introduce elevators except in their publication department, where the lifts are employed for carrying the forms up and down and for similar heavy work.

T. C. Crawford, English Life, p. 110.

An elaborate arrangement of lifts by which actors can suddenly appear or vanish through the stage floor.

Encyc. Brit., XXIII, 225.

(b) In mining, a set of pumps.

The separate pumps in an engine-shaft are placed one above another; each set constitutes a lift, and the water is raised from the sump or fork to the surface by several repetitions of the same process.

Callon, Lectures on Mining (tr. Le Neve Foster and Galloway), II, 350.

(c) A handle, knob, or other device attached to windows and window-blinds to afford a hold in raising or lowering them.

Car-Builders' Diet. (d) One of the steps or grooves of a cone-pulley. The speed of the hoist is varied by changing the belt from lift to lift.

(e) The long stock or rod of a deep well-pump. (f) In a ship's rigging, one of the ropes connecting the ends of a yard with a masthead or cap. By means of such ropes the yards are squared or trimmed—that is, brought into and held in a position at right angles with the mast. (g) A machine for exercising the body by the act of lifting. Also called lifting-machine and health-lift. (h) In a lathe and in other machine-tools, any one of the ledges, flats, or grooves on or in the periphery of the headstock-pulley, and of a similar pulley of the shaft or countershaft from which power is taken. These lifts are so proportioned and arranged that shifting the belt from a lift of a given diameter to one of a smaller diameter on the headstock-pulley compels it to be also shifted from a lift of smaller to one of larger diameter on the countershaft-pulley. Thns several definite changes of speed of rotation may be obtained with the same belt.

7. That which is lifted or is to be lifted. Specifically—(a) A weight to be raised; as, a heavy lift. (b) A gate without hinges, which must be lifted up in order to remove or open it. In some parts of England and the United States the projecting ends of the bars are let into mortise-holes in the posts, into and out of which the gate must be lifted. Also called lift-gate, lifting-gate.

8. In a boot or shoe, one of the thicknesses of leather which are pegged together to form the heel; a heel-lift.—Dead lift. (a) A lift made in the most difficult circumstances, as of a dead body; a direct lift without the assistance of leverage or any other mechanical appliance. (b) A last resort; a desperate emergency.

The physician
Helps ever at a dead lift.

Beau. and Ft., Thierry and Theodoret, II. 1.

Here is some of Hannibal's medicine he carried always in the pomel of his sword, for a dead lift.

Shirley, Maid's Revenge, III. 2.

On the lift, on the point of leaving; ready to depart; in a figurative sense, at the point of death. [Southern U. S.]

I can conceive of but one extenuation. Bolus was on the lift for Texas, and the desire was natural to qualify himself for citizenship.

Flush Times of Alabama.

De ole ox is done took sick, and is on de lift.

C. D. Warner, Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 486.

Topping-lift (naut.), a rope used to support or raise the outer end of a spanker-boom or a lower studding-sail-boom.

lift³ (lift), v. [Commonly supposed to be ult. akin to Goth. hlifan, steal (> hliftus, a thief), = L. elepere = Gr. κλέπ-ειν (aor. pass. κλεπῆσαι), steal (see cleptomani, klept). But the word is not found in this sense in ME. or AS., and this fact and the associations of the word make it clear that *lift*³, remove, take away, steal, is simply a use of *lift*², raise; see *lift*².] I. trans. To remove surreptitiously; take and carry away; steal; purloin; as, to lift cattle.

Common thief! . . . No such thing; Donald Bean Lean never lifted less than a dove in his life; . . . he that lifts a dove from a Sassenach laird is a gentleman drover.

Scott, Waverley, xviii.

The cut in question is lifted from the pages of the Scientific American, but I suspect that its reputed author in turn lifted it from the pages of the Engineer.

The Engineer, LXV. 424.

II. † intrans. To practise theft; steal.

The lifting law, says Dekker, "teacheth a kind of lifting of goods cleane awaye."

Belman of London (1608). (Halliwel.)

One other peculiar virtue you possess, in lifting, or leifer-du-main.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, I. 1.

lift^{3†} (lift), n. [*lift*³, v.] A thief. Davies.

Though you be crossbites, foys, and nips, yet you are not good lifts: which is a great help to your faculty, to filch a bout of satten or velvet.

Greene, Thieves Falling Out (Harl. Misc., VIII. 389).

lift^{4†}, a. An obsolete form of *left*¹.

liftable (lif'ta-bl), a. [*lift*² + -able.] Capable of being lifted.

lift-bridge (lif'trij), n. A bridge which may be raised to admit of the passage of a boat. Such bridges are sometimes used upon canals, when the roadway is but a little higher than the water-level.

lifter¹ (lif'tēr), n. [*lift*² + -er.] 1. One who lifts or raises anything.

Thou, O Lord, art . . . my glory, and the lifter up of my head.

Ps. iii. 3.

2. That by means of which something is lifted; an instrument or contrivance for lifting, as a hoisting-apparatus or elevator, a curved arm in a steam-engine for lifting the puppet-valve automatically, a bucket-wheel for raising pulp in a paper-mill, a kitchen utensil for lifting the lids of a stove, etc.

lifter² (lif'tēr), n. [*lift*³ + -er.] A thief; one who lifts a thing for the purpose of purloining it. In the quotation from Shakspeare the word is used punningly, Troilus having been praised for his power in lifting.

Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Shak., T. and C., I. 2. 129.

I am dead at a pocket, sir: why, I am a lifter, master, by my occupation.

Greene, Jamea IV., III.

lift-gate (lif'tgāt), n. Same as *lift*², 7 (b).

lift-hammer (lif'tham'ēr), n. A form of tilt-hammer in which the alternate action of a spring in raising the hammer, and of the foot in the opposite direction through treadle-mechanism, imparts the blow in forging. See oliver.

lifting (lif'ting), n. [Verbal n. of *lift*², v.] 1. The act of raising or rising.

A summer bird, which . . . sings
The lifting up of day. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., IV. 4. 93.

2. A lift; aid; assistance. [Rare.]

I cannot forbear doing that author the justice of my public acknowledgments for the great helps and liftings I had out of his incomparable piece. Swift, Tale of a Tub, v.

3†. An attempt; a tentative attack. Davies.

There had been some liftings at him in the Court by Sir John Cook, who had informed against him to the Lord Treasurer then being.

Heylin, Life of Laud, p. 180.

lifting-bar (lif'ting-bār), n. 1. In a knitting-machine, a horizontal bar which, moving parallel to itself and vertically, systematically and simultaneously raises the jacks.—2. In the Jacquard loom, a bar which carries and raises the lifting-jacks.

lifting-blade (lif'ting-blād), n. In the Jacquard loom, an iron rule-like blade or plate which receives the lifting-wires when they are raised.

lifting-bridge (lif'ting-brij), n. A drawbridge the whole or a section of which may be raised by one end to clear the space beneath it.

lifting-day (lif'ting-dā), n. Easter Monday or Tuesday. See heaving-days. [Prov. Eng.]

lifting-dog (lif'ting-dog), n. In mach., a device in the nature of a pawl, clutch, or gripper, by the action of which a lifting movement is effected. See dog.

lifting-gate (lif'ting-gāt), n. Same as *lift*², 7 (b).

lifting-gear (lif'ting-gēr), n. In a steam-boiler with an interior or inclosed safety-valve, the mechanism for lifting the valve from its seat. In one form of this gear the principal parts are a lever of the second order, a rod connected with the lever and the valve proper, and a screw passing through a nut in the side of the boiler and a wedge to the lever, by which the latter is actuated. In another form the lever is actuated by a rod passing out through a stuffing-box, and provided with a lifting-handle.

lifting-hitch (lif'ting-hich), n. A hitch adapted for slinging an object by a rope, so that it can be hoisted.

lifting-jack (lif'ting-jak), n. A form of jack adapted for lifting. See *jack*¹, 11 (b).

lifting-machine (lif'ting-mā-shēn'), n. Same as health-lift.

lifting-piece (lif'ting-pēs), n. A device for raising the hammer of a clock in striking.

lifting-rod (lif'ting-rod), n. In a steam-engine with puppet-valves, a rod which, receiving motion from the rock-shaft, imparts motion to the lifter of a puppet-valve.

lifting-screw (lif'ting-skrō), n. A contrivance for raising weight by means of a screw; a jack.

lifting-set (lif'ting-set), n. A series of pumps by which water is raised from the bottom of a mine by successive lifts. E. H. Knight.

lifting-tongs (lif'ting-tōngz), n. sing. and pl. A form of tongs with concave jaws for grasping and lifting crucibles.

lifting-wire (lif'ting-wir), n. In the Jacquard loom, one of the wires which form the pattern by operating the warp-threads.

lift-latch (lif'tlach), n. A door-fastening consisting of a latch which is raised by turning a knob.

lift-lock (lif'tlok), n. A canal-lock which lifts a boat confined in it by flotation from one level to a higher level when water is allowed to flow into the lock.

lift-pump (lif'tpump), n. Any pump that is not a force-pump.

lift-tenter (lif'ten'tēr), n. In mach., the governor of a windmill that is employed in driving grinding-stones, designed to regulate the distance between the upper and the lower stone according to the velocity.

lift-wall (lif'twāl), n. The cross-wall of a lock-chamber in a canal.

lig (lig), v. i. An obsolete or dialectal form of *lie*¹. ligament (lig'a-ment), n. [F. ligament = Sp. ligamiento, ligamento = Pg. It. ligamento, < L. ligamentum, a tie, band, < ligare, bind. Cf. *lien*².] 1. A connecting tie or band; anything that binds objects or their parts together; any bond of union, material or immaterial.

Common and described prayers are the most excellent instrument and act and ligament of the communion of saints.

I find here a man, a woman, a child, amongst whom and myself there exist the closest ligaments.

Hawthorne, Scarlet Letter, IV.

2. Specifically—(a) In anat., a band of connective tissue serving to bind one part to another. Most ligaments have a particular shape, site, and office, and consequently receive special names. See prærae following. (b) In conch., a band of uncalcified chitinous cuticular substance which unites the valves of a bivalve shell. It is usually elastic, and so disposed that when the valves are closed it is either compressed or put upon the stretch, in either of which opposite cases it antagonizes the action of the adductor muscles and tends to divaricate the valves.

Conchologists commonly draw a distinction between an internal and an external ligament; but, in relation to the body of the animal, all ligaments are external, and their internality or externality is in respect of the hinge-line, or the line along which the edges of the valves meet.

Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 406.

Acromioclavicular ligaments, alar ligaments, angular ligament. See the adjectives.—Annular ligament of the stapes, the capsular ligament connecting the foot of the stapes with the margin of the fenestra ovalis.—Arcuate ligament. See arcuate.—Atlo-axoid ligament. See atlo-axoid.—Broad ligament. (a) Of the liver, the falciform or suspensory ligament, consisting of two layers of peritoneum, passing between the liver and the diaphragm. (b) Of the uterus, the fold of peritoneum which extends from the uterus to the pelvis on either side.—Burns's or Hey's ligament, the upper border of the saphenous opening in the fascia lata of the thigh; the femoral ligament or falciform process. Also called femoral ligament of Hey.—Camper's ligament. See triangular ligament of the urethra, under triangular.—Capsular ligament. See capsular.—Central ligament. See central.—Check-ligaments, two stout fibrous cords, one on each side, passing from the occipital condyles and margin of the foramen magnum to the odontoid process of the axis, thus limiting or checking the rotation of the head upon the axis. Also called lateral or alar odontoid ligaments.—Ciliary, conoidal, coraco-acromial, coracoclavicular, coracobumeral ligament. See the adjectives, and cut under knee-joint.—Coracoid ligament, a fibrous band converting the suprascapular notch into a foramen.—Coronary, costocolic, cotyloid, crucial ligaments. See the adjectives.—Deltoid ligament, the internal lateral ligament of the ankle-joint.—Falciform ligament. See falciform.—Femoral ligament of Hey. Same as Burns's ligament.—Gastrospenic ligament. See gastrospenic.—Gimbernat's ligament, that portion of Poupart's ligament which is reflected along the iliopectineal line.—Glenoid ligament, a fibrocartilaginous band surrounding the glenoid fossa of the scapula.—Hey's ligament. Same as Burns's ligament.—Hyo-epiglottic, iliofemoral, iliolumbar, intermuscular ligaments. See the adjectives.—Ligament of Winslow, the principal ligament of the back of the knee-joint, largely derived from expansion of the tendons of muscles, especially of the semimembranosus.—Ligament of Zinn, a fibrous band attached to the border of the optic foramen, whence the recti muscles of the eyeball arise.—Ligaments of the diaphragm. See diaphragm.—Lumbosacral ligament. See lumbosacral.—Mucous ligament, a ligament traversing the synovial cavity of the knee from the anterior wall of the synovial membrane to the intercondylar notch of the femur.—Nuchal ligament. See ligamentum nucha, under ligamentum.—Odontoid ligaments. See check-ligaments.—Oribicular ligament, a circular band of fibers confining the head of the radius in the lesser sigmoid cavity of the ulna.—Poupart's ligament, the thickened lower border of the aponeurosis of the external oblique muscle of the abdomen, continuous with the fascia lata of the thigh, extending from the anterior superior iliac process of the ilium in the line of the groin to the spine of the os pubis; the crural arch, beneath which emerge the great vessels and nerves of the front of the thigh, and just above which is the inguinal canal for the spermatic cord, or for the round ligament of the uterus.—Rhomboid ligament, the costoclavicular ligament.—Round ligament. (a) Of the hip, a short, stout fibrous cord connecting the cavity of the acetabulum with the depression upon the summit of the head of the thigh-bone. (b) Of the liver, the imperious cord formed by the umbilical vein, passing from the navel to the under surface of the liver. (c) Of the uterus, a rounded cord on each side between the layers of the broad ligament, passing from the upper part of the womb to the internal abdominal ring and thence through the inguinal canal to the labia majora, consisting of fibrous, areolar, and some muscular tissue, with vessels and nerves inclosed in a fold of peritoneum. It corresponds in part to the spermatic cord of the male.—Stellate ligaments, the anterior costovertebral ligaments.—Stylohyoid ligament, the representative in man of the epiphyseal bone of some mammals, situated between the stylohyal and ceratohyal elements of the hyoid arch.—Suspensory ligament. (a) Of the liver. See broad ligament (a). (b) Of the mammae, processes of the superficial thoracic fascia entering and supporting these glands. (c) Of the penis, the fibrous attachment of the root of the organ to the symphysis pubis. (d) Of the spleen, a fold of peritoneum connecting the spleen with the diaphragm.—Tarsal ligament. See palpebral ligament, under palpebral.—Transverse ligament of the atlas, a stout cord extending across the ring of the atlas, and holding the odontoid process of the axis in place. Its rupture, as in hanging, causes instant death from impact of the odontoid process upon the medulla oblongata.—Trapezoid ligament, the squarish portion of the acromioclavicular ligament.—Vesico-umbilical ligament, the urachus.—Y-ligament of Bigelow, the lower forked part of the iliofemoral ligament.

Left Innominate Bone of Man, showing Pp, Poupart's ligament; Il, ilium; Is, ischium; Pb, pubis; A, acetabulum.

(a) Of the liver, the imperious cord formed by the umbilical vein, passing from the navel to the under surface of the liver. (c) Of the uterus, a rounded cord on each side between the layers of the broad ligament, passing from the upper part of the womb to the internal abdominal ring and thence through the inguinal canal to the labia majora, consisting of fibrous, areolar, and some muscular tissue, with vessels and nerves inclosed in a fold of peritoneum. It corresponds in part to the spermatic cord of the male.—Stellate ligaments, the anterior costovertebral ligaments.—Stylohyoid ligament, the representative in man of the epiphyseal bone of some mammals, situated between the stylohyal and ceratohyal elements of the hyoid arch.—Suspensory ligament. (a) Of the liver. See broad ligament (a). (b) Of the mammae, processes of the superficial thoracic fascia entering and supporting these glands. (c) Of the penis, the fibrous attachment of the root of the organ to the symphysis pubis. (d) Of the spleen, a fold of peritoneum connecting the spleen with the diaphragm.—Tarsal ligament. See palpebral ligament, under palpebral.—Transverse ligament of the atlas, a stout cord extending across the ring of the atlas, and holding the odontoid process of the axis in place. Its rupture, as in hanging, causes instant death from impact of the odontoid process upon the medulla oblongata.—Trapezoid ligament, the squarish portion of the acromioclavicular ligament.—Vesico-umbilical ligament, the urachus.—Y-ligament of Bigelow, the lower forked part of the iliofemoral ligament.

ligamenta, n. Plural of ligamentum. ligamental (lig-a-men'tal), a. [ligament + -al.] Same as ligamentous. [Rare.] ligamentary (lig-a-men'ta-ri), a. [ligament + -ary.] Same as ligamentous.

ligamentous (lig-a-men'tus), a. [= F. ligamenteux = Sp. Pg. It. ligamentoso; as ligament + -ous.] Of or pertaining to a ligament; composing a ligament: as, ligamentous tissue; a ligamentous connection or attachment.

ligamentously (lig-a-men'tus-h), adv. By means of a ligament.

Being also connected ligamentously with the scapulae. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 609.

ligamentum (lig-a-men'tum), n.; pl. ligamenta (-tū). [L.: see ligament.] A ligament. The names of the ligaments here given are commonly written in the Latin form.—Ligamentum subdura, the yellowish elastic ligaments connecting the laminae of vertebrae with one another.—Ligamenta vaginalia, the sheathing ligaments, strong fibrous bands which form sheaths for the flexor tendons of the fingers and toes.—Ligamentum Botalli. See ductus Botalli, under ductus.—Ligamentum dentarium or denticulatum, a narrow serrated fibrous band on each side of the spinal cord, separating the anterior from the posterior roots of the spinal nerves.—Ligamentum mucosum, a mucous ligament.—Ligamentum nuchae, a mass of yellow elastic fibrous tissue in the median line of the back of the neck of many animals, as the ox, serving by its elasticity to assist in the support of the head. It is rudimentary or wanting in man, in whom it is represented merely by an aponeurosis. It is readily seen in a neck of lamb as served on the table: called by butchers fixax, fixax, packwax, parwax, paywax, schit-leather, etc.—Ligamentum patellae, the ligament of the kneecap, the tendon of insertion of the great extensor muscles which lie upon the front of the thigh.—Ligamentum pectinatum iridis, the connection of the circumference of the iris with the cornea.—Ligamentum spirale, the spiral ligament of the cochlea.—Ligamentum teres, the round ligament of the hip-joint.

Ligamentum Nuchae of the Ox (shown by the shaded part of the figure).

ligan (li'gan), n. [In this form, and according to the def. ('a thing tied,' etc.), < OF. li-gain, an assumed var. of lain, lien (= Pg. ligame, etc.), a band, tie, < L. ligamen, band, tie: see *lien*². But ligan is appar. a sophisticated form, feigning a connection with L. ligare, bind, as above, or with E. lie, lig, D. ligen, etc., of the older form lagan (formerly also lagon, lagam), < OF. lagan, also lagand, lagant, laguen, waifs or wreckage east ashore, a seigniorial right claimed to such wreckage; perhaps of LG. origin, from the verb cognate with *E. lie*¹.] In lav, anything sunk in the sea, but tied to a support at the surface, as a cork or buoy, in order that it may be recovered. See flotsam and jetsam.

Jetsam is where goods are cast into the sea, and there sink and remain under water; flotsam is where they continue swimming on the surface of the waves; ligan is where they are sunk in the sea, but tied to a cork or buoy in order to be found again. Blackstone, Com., I. viii.

ligance, n. A variant of legiance, for allegiance.
ligate (li'gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. ligated, ppr. ligating. [L. ligatus, pp. of ligare, tie, bind: see ligament.] To bind with a ligature; tie.

The possibility of ligating the ruptured artery could not, under the circumstances, be entertained. Medical News, LIII. 78.

ligation (li-gā'shon), n. [= OF. ligation (vernacularly liaison, F. liaison) = Sp. Pg. ligacion, ligazon, < LL. ligatio(-n-), a binding, < ligare, pp. ligatus, bind: see ligament.] A tying or binding, or the state of being tied or bound; constriction by a ligature or bond; especially, in surg., the operation of tying an artery to prevent hemorrhage, as after amputation, etc.

It is the ligation of sense, but the liberty of reason. Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, II. 11.

ligator (li-gā'tor), n. [L. ligator, < L. ligare, tie, bind: see ligament.] In surg., an instrument used to place and fasten a ligature. E. H. Knight.

ligature (lig'ā-tūr), n. [L. ligatura = Sp. Pg. ligadura = It. ligatura, < LL. ligatura, a band, < L. ligare, bind: see ligament.] 1. Anything that serves for tying, binding, or uniting, as a cord or bandage; hence, any binding, restraining, or uniting agency or principle.

Religion is a public virtue; it is the ligature of souls, and the great instrument of the conservation of bodies politic. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1855), I. 81.

The many ligatures of our English dress check the circulation of the blood. Spectator.

Ligatures of race and family and family affections bind them together. Bushnell, Nature and the Supernat., vi.

Specifically—2. In surg.: (a) A cord for tying a blood-vessel, particularly an artery, to prevent hemorrhage. (b) A cord or wire to remove tumors, etc., by strangulation.—3. The act of binding; ligation.

Any stoppage of the circulation will produce a dropsy, as by strong ligature or compression. Arbutnot, Diet.

4. The state of being bound or consolidated.

Send and gravel grounds easily admit of heat and moisture, for which they are not much the better, because they let it pass too soon, and contract no ligature. Mortimer, Husbandry.

5. Impotence supposed to be induced by magic.—6. In music: (a) In medieval musical notation, one of various compound note-forms designed to indicate groups of two or more tones which were to be sung to a single syllable—that is, similar to a group of slurred notes in the modern notation. Ligatures are often difficult to decipher, on account of the doubtfulness not only of the pitch of the tones intended, but of their relative duration. (b) In modern musical notation, a tie or band; hence, a group of notes slurred together, intended to be sung at a single breath or to be played as a continuous phrase. (c) In contrapuntal music, a syncopation.—7. In printing and writing, a type or character consisting of or representing two or more letters or characters united. In type-founding the ligatures ff, fl, fl, fl are made on account of the kern or overhanging top of the letter f. Six others were formerly made with the similarly shaped long s, now disused—th, th, f, f, fl, fl; and there was also a ligature of (i). A still larger number of ligatures were used in old fonts of Greek type, all of which are now generally discarded. In medieval curative or minuscule manuscripts, especially of Greek, ligatures are very numerous, and in the earlier printed editions about fifty such characters are of frequent occurrence. Some of the Greek ligatures and of the elements composing them seem to have originated in tachygraphic or shorthand characters. See tachygraphy.—Ligature forceps. See forceps.

ligature (lig'ā-tūr), v. t.; pret. and pp. ligatured, ppr. ligaturing. [L. ligatura, n.] To compress or tie by means of a ligature, in any sense; ligate.

If the sino-auricular junction of the heart of the turtle be ligatured under favorable circumstances, the action of the auricles and ventricle, temporarily arrested, may be resumed. Science, XI. 80.

ligeance, ligeancy, n. Variants of legiance, for allegiance.

ligget, v. t. A Middle English form of *lie*¹.
liggement, n. An obsolete form of ledgment.
ligger (lig'ēr), n. [L. ligger, var. of ligere.] lier: see *lier*¹, and cf. lig, *lie*¹. Hence by assimilation lidger, ledger: see *ledger*¹.] 1. The horizontal timber of a scaffolding; a ledger.—2. A nether millstone.

The stones which composed these primitive . . . mills . . . were two: an upper stone or runner, and a nether, called in Derbyshire a ligger, from the old word lig, to lie. Archaeologia (1785), VII. 20.

3. A plank placed across a ditch as a pathway.—4. A coverlet for a bed.—5. A line with a float and bait used for catching pike.—6. A spent salmon; a kipper or kelt. [Prov. Eng. in all senses. Hallivell.]

light¹ (lit), a. [L. lucida, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), leucos, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine, in luz (luc-), light, lucere, be light (see lucifer), lucidus, light, clear (see lucid), lumen, light (see lume, *loom*², luminous, illumine, etc.), luna, the moon (see luna, lunar, etc.); = Gr. √ λυκ, shine, in λευκός, light, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), λεῖπτερον, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine. Hence *light*¹, v., *lighten*¹, enlighten, etc.; but *light*¹, n., is of different terminal formation: see *light*¹, n.] 1. Bright; clear; not dark or obscure: as, it begins to be light (said of the morning); a light apartment.

Even the night shall be light about me. Ps. cxxxix. 11.
O, now be gone: more light and light it grows. Shak., R. and J., III. 5. 35.

2. Pale or whitish in color; applied to colors, highly luminous and more or less deficient in chroma: as, a light complexion; a light pink.

The boy was so light-eyed and light-haired that the . . . rays appeared to draw out of him what little colour he ever possessed. Dickens, Hard Times, I. 1.

Sweet-hearted, you, whose light-blue eyes
Are tender over drowning flies.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, xvi.

Light green, light green 8. Same as acid-green.—Light meat. See meat.

light¹ (lit), v.; pret. and pp. lighted (less properly lit), ppr. lighting. [L. lucida, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), leucos, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine, in luz (luc-), light, lucere, be light (see lucifer), lucidus, light, clear (see lucid), lumen, light (see lume, *loom*², luminous, illumine, etc.), luna, the moon (see luna, lunar, etc.); = Gr. √ λυκ, shine, in λευκός, light, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), λεῖπτερον, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine. Hence *light*¹, v., *lighten*¹, enlighten, etc.; but *light*¹, n., is of different terminal formation: see *light*¹, n.] 1. Bright; clear; not dark or obscure: as, it begins to be light (said of the morning); a light apartment.

But, natheles, it was so fair a syghte
That it made alle her hertes for to lighte.
Chaucer, Squire's Tale, l. 888.

And that shall be the day, when'er it lighte,
That this same child of honour and renown . . .
And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
Shak., I Hen. IV., iii. l. 2. 138.

2. To catch fire; kindle, as something to which fire is applied.

II. trans. 1. To make light; give light to, or shed light upon, literally or figuratively; provide with light; illuminate; irradiate: as, to light an apartment; a smile lighted up his countenance.

And after that hire lokynge gan she lyghte
That never thoughte hym seen so good a sighte.
Chaucer, Troilus, l. 293.

And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Shak., Macbeth, v. 5. 22.

That one great eye (in the Pantheon) opening upon heaven is by far the noblest conception for lighting a building to be found in Europe. J. Ferguson, Hist. Arch., I. 311.

From the *light*ense, clear, star-sown vault of heaven,
Over the lit sea's unquiet way.
M. Arnold, Self dependence.

2. To kindle; ignite; cause to burn, either literally or figuratively: as, to light a fire or a match; to light the torch of rebellion.

Whome we folowyd to all the holy plays with in the same Monastery, with candles light (lit or lighted) in our hands. Torkington, Diary of Eng. Travell, p. 47.

With better flames than these, which only be lighted to plunge in Darkness you and me.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, II. 114.

light¹ (lit), n. [L. lucida, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), leucos, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine, in luz (luc-), light, lucere, be light (see lucifer), lucidus, light, clear (see lucid), lumen, light (see lume, *loom*², luminous, illumine, etc.), luna, the moon (see luna, lunar, etc.); = Gr. √ λυκ, shine, in λευκός, light, bright, white (see leucous, and words in leuco-), λεῖπτερον, see, αυφλῆκη, twilight; cf. Ir. lōche, lightning, lōn, gleam, Gael. leus, light, lō, daylight, lōchran, a light, lamp, W. lugg, light; O Bulg. luha, beam of light, luna, the moon; = Skt. √ luc, shine. Hence *light*¹, v., *lighten*¹, enlighten, etc.; but *light*¹, n., is of different terminal formation: see *light*¹, n.] 1. That which makes things visible; in physics, that form of energy which, acting upon the organs of sight, renders visible the objects from which it proceeds. The now abandoned emission or corpuscular theory, which was advocated by Newton, represented light as consisting of minute material particles emitted by the luminous body and traveling through space in all directions from it, with immense velocity; the sensation of sight being due to the action of these particles upon the eye. According to the undulatory theory, which is now generally accepted, light is a kind of undulatory motion produced by the luminous body in the particles of an elastic, imponderable medium called the luminiferous ether (see *ether*¹, 2), which is supposed to fill all space, as also the interstices of all bodies. This motion is propagated in waves (see vibrate) in all directions from the luminous body, and with a velocity in a vacuum of about 186,000 miles per second. The rays sent out or radiated in straight lines from the luminous body differ in wave-length, although apparently propagated with the same velocity; the eye is sensitive to those only whose wave-lengths are included between certain narrow limits, namely, those corresponding to red and violet light (see spectrum). Light is, then, a part of the kind of energy called radiant energy (see radiant energy, under energy, and radiation). The electromagnetic theory of light, proposed by Maxwell, supposes light (or, more generally, radiant energy) to be an electromagnetic disturbance propagated by vibrations at right angles to the direction of the ray, and taking place in the same ether the strains or vibrations of which serve to propagate electromagnetic induction. In confirmation of this theory, it is found that the experimentally determined velocities of the propagation of light and of electromagnetic induction are nearly the same. The principal phenomena of light are grouped under the following heads: (1) Absorption, or the transformation of the vibration of the ether into the molecular vibrations of the body upon which the light falls or through which it passes. The effect of the absorption of part of the light-rays by a body is to give it color; thus, grass is green because it sends back to the eye only the rays which together produce the effect of green, the other rays being absorbed; and a piece of red glass owes its color to the fact that it transmits only that part of the light whose combined effect upon the eye is that of red. According to the degree of absorption of light, a body is said to be transparent, translucent, opaque, etc. Connected with absorption are the phenomena of fluorescence and phosphorescence. (2) Reflection, or the sending back of the light-rays by the surface on which they fall into the medium through which they have come. The laws of reflection explain the action of plane, concave, and convex mirrors (see mirror). The irregular reflection, scattering, or diffusion of the light from the surfaces of bodies serves to make them visible to the eye. (3) Refraction, the breaking or change of direction of the ray as it passes from one medium into another of different density. This may be single or double, the latter when the ray is separated into two rays. The principles of refraction explain the use of lenses (see lens), with the various instruments in which they form the essential part, as the microscope, telescope, etc. (4) Dispersion, or the separation of rays of different wave-length, as when a pencil of white light passes through a prism, and a spectrum showing the successive colors is produced (see spectrum and spectroscope). (5) Interference, or the mutual action of different waves, producing such phenomena as Newton's rings, the colors of thin plates, and the colored figures of uniaxial and biaxial crystals. A special case is that of diffraction. (6) Polarization, or that change in a light-ray which limits its vibrations to one plane—a change produced by reflection and double refraction, and leading to a wide range of beautiful phenomena. See further under each of these terms.

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun. Eccl. xi. 7.

Hail, holy Light! offspring of heaven first-born, . . . Bright effluence of bright essence increate. Milton, P. L., III. 1.

It is possible to produce darkness by the addition of two portions of light. If light is a substance, there cannot be another substance which when added to it shall produce darkness. We are therefore compelled to admit that light is not a substance. Clerk Maxwell, Heat, p. 216.

No one who has studied the subject can doubt . . . that light really consists of a change of state propagated from point to point in a medium existing between the luminous body and that which the light affects. Stokes, Light, p. 25.

2. In physiol., the sensation produced by the action of physical luminosity upon the organ of vision. See color.—3. Illumination or enlightenment as an effluence or a result; radiation from or to anything, in either a physical or a moral sense; luminosity; glow; radiance: as, the light of the sun, of a taper, or of a glow-worm; to be guided by the light of reason; to shed new light on a subject.

Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us. Ps. iv. 6.

Wearing the white flower of a blameless life, Before a thousand peering littlenesses, In that fierce light which beats upon a throne, Tennyson, Idylls of the King, Ded.

Men and women who have developed power of mind and heart by simple fidelity to truth and conscience, until they have become sources of light and comfort to all the neighborhood. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 43.

4. The state or condition of being visible; exposure to view; hence, public observation; publicity: as, his misdeeds have come to light.

The better to follow the good, and avoid the evil, which in time must of force bring great things to light. Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), i. 6.

A doleful story you shall heare, In time brought forth to light. The Children in the Wood (Child's Ballads, III. 129).

Oh, spring to light, auspicious Babe, be born! Pope, Messiah, l. 22.

5. That which gives light; a source of illumination; a body that emits or transmits rays of light, as the sun, the moon, a star, a beacon, a candle, etc.; in pyrotechnics, any piece of fireworks which burns brightly.

And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night. Gen. i. 16.

The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight. Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 180.

The lights of heav'n (which are the world's fair eyes) Look down into the world, the world to see. Sir J. Davies, Nosce Teipsum.

That on a certain night they laye an Image in a bed, and number a set bead-roll of lamentations; which being ended, light is brought in. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 89.

More than two thousand churches in England have lights upon the Altars. F. G. Lee, Directorium Anglicanum, p. 46, note.

Hence—6. Figuratively, a source of mental or spiritual illumination; one who or that which enlightens, as an eminent teacher; anything which diffuses knowledge, instruction, or information; a guiding power or principle; also, a source of cheerfulness or joy.

The Lord is my light and my salvation. Ps. xxvii. 1.

The woman where we lodged was an ancient, grave, and serious person, to whom we declared the testimony of the light, shewing her the difference betwixt an outside and an inside religion, which she received with much kindness. Penn, Travels in Holland, etc.

One who has not these previous Lights is very often an utter Stranger to what he reads. Addison, Spectator, No. 291.

But who shall comfort the living,
The light of whose homes is gone?
Bryant, Autumn Walk.

7. Means of communicating light or fire; something to kindle with: as, to give one a light for a cigar.—8. A lighthouse: as, Fastnet light; Sandy Hook light.

From Kingston Head and from Montauk light
The spectre kindles and burns in sight.
Whittier, The Palatine.

9. That which admits light; a medium or an opening for the entrance of light, as a window, or a pane or compartment of a window: as, a window consisting of three lights; a light of glass.

The lights, doors, and stairs [were] rather directed to the use of the guest than to the eye of the artificer. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, l.

10. The manner in which the light strikes upon an object or a picture; also, an illuminated part of an object or picture; the part which lies opposite the point or place from which the light comes or is supposed to come.

Never admit two equal lights in the same picture. Dryden, tr. of Dufresnoy's Art of Painting.

11. The point of view from which, or position in which, anything is looked at or considered; the side or features to which attention is paid; aspect.

Consider then, and judge me in this light;
I told you, when I went, I could not write.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 27.

12. In law, the right to have one's windows unobscured by obstructions on the part of one's neighbors.—13. In painting, a small patch or surface of very light color, as white, used in a design, to diversify the effect of the darker colors.—14. A torch-bearer; a link-boy.

I went to my lodgings, led by a light, whom I put into the discourse of his private economy, and made him give me an account of the charge, hazard, profit, and loss of a family that depended upon a link. Steele, Spectator, No. 454.

Aberration of light. See aberration, 5.—Accidental, albo-carbon light. See the qualifying words.—Ancient light, in law, a window receiving light over the land of another than the owner of the house benefited, which, by reason of uninterrupted enjoyment for twenty years or more, has become established as an easement, imposing a servitude of light and air over such adjoining land. The English law, followed in a few of the United States, establishes such a right by lapse of time, unless the enjoyment was under written permission; but it does not include a right of prospect. In other States such a right cannot be claimed by prescription, but only by contract.—Artificial light. See artificial.—Axis of a beam of light. See axis.—Beale light, a form of Argand burner in which combustion is promoted by a current of air under pressure.—Bengal light, in pyrotechnics, a vivid and sustained blue light used in signaling and displays of fireworks. It is composed of antimony 1 part, sulphur and meal powder each 2 parts, and nitrate of soda 3 parts, pulverized, mixed, and pressed into shallow vessels. E. H. Knight.—Between the lights, between daylight and artificial illumination; in the twilight.

I was still busy between the lights, singing and working by the window. Dickens, Bleak House, xvii.

Between two lights, between two days; under cover of darkness; in the night: as, he was forced to leave town between two lights. [Colloq.]—Blue light, a composition which burns with a blue flame, used as a night-signal in ships or for military purposes, etc. The color is due to the admixture of ammoniacal copper-sulphate in the composition.—Boccius light, a form of gas-burner in which a pair of concentric metallic cylinders are placed over the flame inside an ordinary lamp-chimney, to reduce the combustion and give a more brilliant light.—Bude light, an exceedingly brilliant light, produced by directing a current of oxygen gas into the interior of the flame of an Argand lamp or gas-burner. See Bude burner, under burner.—Calcium light. See calcium.—Catadioptric light, a light used in lighthouses, in which are combined the catoptric and dioptric systems.—Catoptric light, a light in which the beam is produced by reflection. See catoptric.—Chatham light, a kind of flash-light produced by blowing a mixture of pulverized resin and magnesium-dust through the flame of a spirit-lamp. It is used for military signals.—Children of Light. See child.—Cockshut, colored, converging light. See the qualifying words.—Collection of light. See collection.—Common light. Same as white light (a).—Decomposition of light. See decomposition.—Deviation of a ray of light. See deviation.—Diffusion of light, the irregular reflection or scattering of the light from the surface of a body not absolutely smooth. The light is called diffused light.—Dioptric light, a light in which the beam is produced by refraction, not by reflection. See dioptric system, under dioptric.—Divine light, that illumination which proceeds directly from God.—Double lights, in lighthouses, lights on different levels, either in one tower at different heights or in two towers.—Drummond light. Same as calcium light.—Electric light. See electric.—Equation of light. See light-equation.—Fixed light, in lighthouses, a light which is maintained steadily without change, in contrast with revolving or intermittent lights.—Floating light, a light displayed at the masthead of a vessel or light-ship anchored near a reef, shoal, or channel where there is no suitable foundation for a lighthouse.—Friends of Light. See Free Congregations, under congregation.—Ground lights, a row of lights used on a stage to light the base of a scene.—High light, in art, any part or point in a picture upon which the light falls or glances in full force and without shadow: as, the high lights in a portrait, or in a study of still life.—Homogeneous light, light which is all of one color, or, more strictly, of one wave-length; monochromatic light.—Incandescent light. See electric light, under electric.—Increate light. Same as divine light.—Inner or inward light, spiritual illumination; knowledge divinely imparted; specifically, as used by the Society of Friends, the light of Christ in the soul.—Intermittent light, in lighthouses, a light which appears suddenly, remains constant for a short interval, and then suddenly disappears, the light being alternately displayed and hidden by the motion of circular shades in front of the reflectors.—Law of absorption of light. See law.—Leading lights, lights in different towers to indicate to seamen a certain course, channel, or danger. E. H. Knight.—Lead lights. See lead.—Light-elasticity, the elasticity of the luminiferous ether, upon which the velocity of light-propagation depends. This is ordinarily conceived of as being modified by the nature of the particular ponderable medium under consideration. Thus, the ratio of the velocities of light in water and glass (or the inverse ratio of their refractive indices) expresses also the ratio of the light-elasticity in each case. In crystallized media the light-elasticity may differ in different directions in the same substance, and its character determines whether these media are isotropic, uniaxial, or biaxial. See refraction, and axes of light-elasticity (under axis).—Light of nature. (a) Intellectual perception; that faculty of the mind by which certain truths appear evident, or clear and distinct, independently of experience. The phrase was used by Descartes in this sense. Leibnitz remarks that there are certain innate truths, called instincts, which do not belong to the light of nature, because they are obscure. (b) In theol., the capacity which belongs to man of discovering some of the truths of religion without the aid of revelation: opposed to divine light.—Light-registering apparatus, an automatic device for recording the amount of light falling upon any particular spot during small fixed intervals. E. H. Knight.—Magnetization of light. See magnetization.—Monochromatic light. See monochromatic.—New Lights, a name sometimes given to persons who have seceded from a church, or formed a new religious connection, on account of some new view of doctrine or duty. See Campbellite, 1.—Northern lights, the aurora borealis.—Oxycalcium light. Same as calcium light.—Oxyhydrogen light. See oxyhydrogen.—Red light, a light colored by strontium.—Revolving light. In lighthouses, a light alternately displayed and concealed by the revolution of a frame with three or more sides fitted with large reflectors so arranged that those on each side have their axes parallel. The light appears, gradually increases to full strength, and gradually disappears as the opaque sides of the frame intervene between it and the observer.—The Lights. (a) The Jewish feast of the Dedication or Encenia. (b) In the Greek Church, the feast of the Epiphany, or manifestation of Christ to the world, especially at his baptism. The name also refers to the illumination (baptism) of believers, and to the great number of lights carried at the ceremony of the benediction of the waters (see water) on the day of that feast, symbolical of illumination and baptism.—To bring to light. See bring.—To see the light, to come into view; to be made public; to be brought forth.

Why am I asked what next shall see the light? Pope, Prolog. to Satires, l. 271.

To stand in one's own light, to be the means of preventing one's own advantage, or of frustrating one's own purposes.

Even from the first
You stood in your own light and darkened mine. Tennyson, Princess, lv.

White light. (a) In physics, the light which comes directly from the sun, and which has not been decomposed as by refraction in passing through a transparent prism. (b) A light produced artificially, and used for signals, etc. (See also arc-light, flash-light).—Syn. 1 and 2. Flash, Blaze, etc. See flame, n.

light² (lit), a. and n. [< ME. light, licht, ligt, lyht, lyht. < AS. leoht, rarely leht, lyht (orig. lyht), = OS. lyht* (in comp. lyhtlik, lyht) = OFries. lycht = D. lyt = MLG. lycht = OHG. lyhti, lyht, MHG. lyhte, G. leucht = Icel. lyttr = Sw. lytt = Dan. lyt = Goth. lyhts, lyht; perhaps orig. lynt*, lyent* (with orig. pp. suffix -t), akin to Lith. lyngvus = L. lucis, earlier lucis, orig. lenhvis* (?) = Gr. ελαχίς = Skt. raghu, light. From the L. form lucis are ult. E. levity, levitate, leaven², lever¹, levee¹, levee², levy¹, levy², alleviate, allege², etc.] I. a. 1. Having little or relatively little actual weight; not burdensome; not cumbersome or unwieldy: as, a light load; light weapons.

This dragon no man cowde wite where Merllu it hadde, and it was mervellouse light and mevable; and when it was set on a lance he behelde it for grete mervelle. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), l. 116.

It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it Under a cloak that is of any length. Shak., T. G. of V., III. 1. 129.

The strong and cumbersome arms the valiant wield,
The weaker warrior takes a lighter shield. Pope, Illiad, xiv. 442.

2. Having little weight as compared with bulk; of little density or specific gravity; not heavy, either absolutely or relatively: as, feathers and cork are light; oil is lighter than water.

Along the quiet air,
Come and float calmly off the soft, light clouds,
Such as you see in Summer. Bryant, A Winter Piece.

3. Of short weight; weighing less than the proper or standard amount: as, to use light weights in trade; light coin.

You allow some grains to your gold before you call it light: allow some infirmities to any man before you call him ill.
Donne, Sermons, xiv.

Good ye are and bad, and like to colms,
Some true, some light. Tennyson, The Holy Grail.

4. In cooking, not heavy or soggy; spongy; well raised: said of bread, cakes, and the like.

To begin, then, with the very foundation of a good table,—Broad: What ought it to be? It should be light, sweet, and tender.

H. B. Stowe, House and Home Papers, x.

5. Lacking that which burdens or makes heavy; hence, free from burden or impediment; unencumbered: as, light infantry; the ship returned light.

He died for heaviness that his cart went light.
Milton, On Old Habdon, li.

I would teach them that my arm is heavy, though my purse be light.
Hawthorne, Twice-told Tales (My Kinsman).

6. Not heavy in action or effect; lacking force or intensity; moderate; slight; buoyant; agile; sprightly: as, a ship of light draft; light of foot; a light hand; light sleep; a light wind; light comedy.

This city must be famish'd,
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., l. 4. 68.

A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dash'd the dew.
Scott, L. of the L., l. 18.

You are young, Miss, and I should say a light sleeper.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xvi.

7. Not weighty; of little import or consequence; trivial; unimportant: as, a light remark; light reading; a light fault.

Seemeth it to you a light thing to be a king's son-in-law?
1 Sam. xviii. 23.

Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. Shak., Othello, lii. 3. 322.

To throw all Europe into confusion for a purpose clearly unjust was no light matter.
Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

8. Not burdensome, hard, or difficult; easy to perform, to endure, to digest, etc.; slight; inconsiderable: as, light work; light punishment; a light repast; a light wine.

It is lighter to leue in three lounely persones
Than for to louye and leue as wel lorettes as lele.
Piers Plowman (B), xvii. 43.

Our light affliction . . . worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.
2 Cor. iv. 17.

You shall presently have a light supper, and to bed.
Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 234.

The light wines of Bordeaux began to be familiar to almost every table.
J. McCarthy, Hist. Own Times, xii.

9. Not weighed down; free from care or annoyance; cheerful; jubilant: as, a light heart.

Priam, at the prayer of the prize kinglyes,
Deliver the lady with a light wille,
In eschaunge of the choise, that chaped before.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7903.

What sadness can I have? No; I am light,
And feel the courses of my blood more warm
And stirring than they were.
Beau. and Fl., Maid's Tragedy, lii. 2.

Although I did not give way entirely to such hopeful thoughts, I was still very light in spirits and walked upon air.
R. L. Stevenson, Merry Men.

10. Lacking moral or mental gravity; characterized by or exhibiting levity; volatile; capricious; frivolous: as, a light mind; light conduct.

Carols and rounds and such light or lascivious Poemes.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 60.

Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light.
Shak., Hamlet, li. 2. 420.

These light vain persons still are drunk or mad
With surfeitings and pleasures of their youth.
Sir J. Davies, Immortal, of Soul, xxx.

Her light head quite turned
In this court atmosphere of flatteries.
Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 56.

Hence — 11. Given to levity of conduct; loose in morals; wanton; unchaste.

A light wife doth make a heavy husband.
Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 130.

It's fitting that thae wha hae had a light and evil life, and abused charity when they were young, suld aiblins come to lack it when they are old. Scott, Antiquary, xxi.

The ghawazee, clad in light garments, that cling to them, sprawl easily, and sport with one another till the guests are assembled. . . . These are the light women of Egypt; and there are none lighter on the face of the globe.
C. W. Stoddard, Maahallah, xviii.

12. Having a sensation of lightness; giddy; dizzy; hence, flighty in mind; delirious.

It seems his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Shak., C. of E., v. 1. 72.

13. Adapted for or employed in light work.
A deaf serving woman and the light porter completed
Mrs. Sparsit's empire. Dickens, Hard Times, ii. 1.

14. Quickly passing; fleeting; transitory.
Fortune unfaithful favored me with lyght goodes.
Chaucer, Boethius, l. meter 1.

15. Without substance; not nutritious or satisfying. [Rare.]

Our soui loatheth this light bread. Num. xxi. 5.

16. Weak; sickly. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]—
A light hand. See hand.—Light artillery, battery, cavalry. See the nouns.—Light carbureted hydrogen. See carbureted.—Light comedian, an actor of light comic parts.—Light in hand. See hand.—Light literature. See literature.—Light marching order (milit.), the condition of troops equipped with arms, ammunition, canteen, and haversack, but without overcoat, blanket, or knapsack.—Light metal. See metal.—Light sails, top-gallantsails, royals, flying-jib sails, and studdingsails.—Light soil. See soil.—To let light off. See let.—To make light of, to treat as of little consequence; disregard.—To set light by (formerly of), to undervalue; slight; treat as of no importance.

All their exhortations were to set light of the things in this world, to count riches and honours vanity.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, Pref., viii.

The Art you speak of is not to be set light by; it is as Praise-worthy sometimes to run away nimbly as it is to fight stontly. N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, l. 35.

II. n. pl. The lungs, especially of a brute animal (most frequently in the phrase liver and lights): so called from their lightness.

*light*² (lit), adv. [< ME. lichte, lichte, < AS. leóhte (= OS. lihto = D. ligt = MLG. lichte = OHG. lihto, MHG. lichte, G. leicht = Dan. let = Sw. lätt), lightly, < leóht, light; see *light*², a. 1. Not heavily; not with full weight or force.

Light lay the years upon the untroubled head.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, l. 157.

2. Lightly; cheaply. Hooker.—3. Easily; readily; nimbly.

Yow oghte ben the lyghter merceable.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 410.

Every elf and fairy sprite
Hop as light as bird upon brier.
Shak., M. N. D., v. 1. 401.

4. With light or easy effort; without requiring or exerting much power: as, a light-running wagon or machine.

*light*² (lit), v. t. [< ME. lichten, lychten, līchten, lihten, lyhten, make light (less heavy), < AS. lihtan (also in comp. alihtan, gelīhtan, > E. *alight*²), make light, alleviate, leóhtian, become light (= OFries. liehta, līta = D. lihten = MLG. lihten = OHG. lihtan, lihtjan, MHG. lihten, G. liechten (after LG.) = Icel. lætta = Sw. lätta = Dan. lette, make light, lift, disburden), < leóht, liht, light; see *light*², a. Cf. *alight*². Cf. also *light*³. 1. To make light or less heavy; lighten; ease of a burden. [Obsolete or colloq.]

The lettres of syr Lucins lyghttys myne herte.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 251.

If we do thus do, . . . we shal with this comfort finde our hartes lighted, and thereby the griefe of our tribulation lessed.
Sir T. More, Comfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 53.

Now that the shearing of your sheep is done,
And the washed flocks are lighted of their wool.
B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, l. 2.

2. To deliver, as of a child. [Prov. Eng.]

Faste besyde that Chirche, a 60 Fedme, is a Chirche of Seynt Nicholas, where our Lady rested hire, after sche was lyghted of our Lord. Mandeville, Travels, p. 71.

And I shalle say thou wast lyght
Of a knave-childe this nyght.
Towneley Mysteries, p. 107. (Halliwel.)

To light along (naut.), to move (a cable or sail) along by lifting or carrying it. Totten.—To light up (naut.), to loosen, slacken, or ease off: as, light up the jib-sheets.

*light*³ (lit), v. t.; pret. and pp. lighted (often lit), pp. lighting. [< ME. lihten, liechten, lyhten, lihten, lyhten, lihten, < AS. lihtan, lihtan (also in comp. alihtan, gelīhtan, > E. *alight*³), dismount (from a horse), = Icel. lætta, dismount, stop, halt, lit. make light, relieve of a burden, a particular use of lihtan, make light; see *light*², v. Cf. *alight*³. 1. To get down or descend, as from horseback or from a carriage; dismount; alight. [In this sense now usually alight; but light is still used in some parts of the United States.]

Down of his hors Aurelius lighte anon.
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 455.

Yonder . . . Urania lighted; the very horse methought bewailed to be so disburdened. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, l.

And, when I mount, alvay may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly light!
Shak., Blch. II., l. 1. 82.

My lord, the count's sister, being overtaken in the streets with a great hail-storm, is light at your gate, and desires room till the storm be overpast.
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, li. 1.

2. To settle down, as a bird from flight; come to rest; hence, to fall, drop, or spring (upon something): as, bees light among flowers; he lit on his feet; trouble shall light upon him.

The firsten shot [it] was to neir,
It lighted all to schort.
Battle of Balrinnes (Child's Ballads, VII. 225).

The wrongs you do these men may light on you,
Too heavy too. Fletcher, Pilgrim, l. 2.

The curse of Cain
Light on his head who pierced thy innocent breast.
Shelley, Adonais, xvii.

On the tree-tops a crested peacock lit.
Tennyson, Enone.

3. To come by chance, fall, or happen (upon something): followed by on or upon, formerly sometimes by of.

It, before their goods are all sold, they [the Chinese] can light of Chapman to buy their ships, they will gladly sell them also.
Dampier, Voyages, II. l. 136.

He lighted on the Wills of several persons bearing the same names as the poet. Dyce, Pref. to Ford's Plays, p. vii. What is that which I should turn to, lighting upon days like these?
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

4. To drop or fall, as if unexpectedly; be brought or drawn: followed by into.

When the Hierarchy of England shall light into the hands of busie and audacious men, . . . much mischief is like to ensue.
Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

They shall light into atheistical company. South.

To light out, to go away; especially, to depart in haste or without notice; make off; abscond; "skip." [Slang, U. S.]

If I had anuff money to go to New Orleans like a gentleman, I'd just light out some night.
The Century, XXXVI. 80.

lightable (lit'a-bl), a. [< *light*¹, v., + -able.] Capable of being lighted.

light-apostrophe (lit'a-pos'trō-fē), n. In bot., see *apostrophe*¹, 2.

light-armed (lit'ärmd), a. Armed and accoutred in a manner convenient for active and desultory service: said of troops.

Light-armed troops
In coats of mail and military pride.
Milton, P. R., iii. 311.

light-ball (lit'bäl), n. Milit., a pyrotechnic preparation, composed of saltpeter, sulphur, resin, and linseed-oil, used by soldiers to afford light for their own operations. Light-balls are made on frames of iron and caovas, of different sizes, for burning a certain number of minutes. They differ from fire-balls in containing no provision for causing destructive explosion.

light-barrel (lit'bar'el), n. Milit., an empty powder-barrel, with holes in it, filled with shavings soaked in tar, used to light up a trench or breach.

light-boat (lit'böt), n. Same as light-ship.

light-box (lit'boks), n. Naut., same as light-room, 1.

lightbrain (lit'brän), n. A light-headed or weak-minded person.

Being as some were, light-braines, rannagates, unthriftes, and riotours.
Martin, Marriage of Priestes, l. i. iii. (1554). (Latham.)

light-course (lit'körs), n. A copper band, from 15 to 18 inches deep, on the top of the pan used in clarifying sugar. Its function is to keep the scum from boiling over.

light-dues (lit'düz), n. pl. Duties or tolls levied on ships navigating certain waters, for the maintenance of lighthouses; light-money.

*lighten*¹ (lit'tn), v. [< ME. lihtnen, lihtnenen, lihtnen, become light; with suffix -n, E. *-en*¹ (1), formative of passive verbs, < *light*¹, a., light; see *light*¹, a. Cf. *alighten*¹, enlighten. Hence *lightening*¹, *lightning*¹.] I. intrans. 1. To become light or lighter; grow light or clear up; brighten: as, the sky lightens.

No motion, save alone
What lightens in the faid east
Of rising worlds by yonder wood.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, ev.

After sixty years, the ardent words of a lovely girl are not quite so quick and spirit-stirring as when, fresh from the fancy or the heart, they lived and lightened on the page.
E. Doueden, Shelley, II. 373.

2. To emit flashes of lightning; shoot out as lightning; flash. See *lightning*¹.

The lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven shineth unto the other part. Luke xvii. 24.

This dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars.
Shak., J. C., l. 3. 74.

II. trans. 1. To make light or bright; give light to; light up.

God, who lightned Eden with his Rays.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., Eden.

The Lord will lighten my darkness. 2 Sam. xxii. 29.

A key of fire ran all along the shore,
And lightened all the river with a blaze.
Dryden, Annus Mirabilis, st. 231.

lighten
2. To illuminate mentally or spiritually; enlighten.
Saving grace is the gift of the Holy Ghost, which lighteneth inwardly the minds, and inflameth inwardly the hearts of men. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v., App. 1.
Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., ii. 1. 208.

3. To send forth like lightning. [Rare.]
Behold his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth Controlling majesty. Shak., Rich. II., iii. 3. 69.

lighten² (lī'tn), v. [< ME. lightenen; < light² + -en¹ (3). Cf. alighten².] I. intrans. To become light or less heavy.

Thaire suete songe made my herte to lighten.
Book of the Knight of La Tour Landry, p. 1.

II. trans. 1. To make light or less heavy; reduce in weight; relieve of weight; as, to lighten coin by clipping or abrasion; to lighten a load or a ship.

As the ships of the company were large, and could not pass without being lightened, a small vessel (fante) was left stationed on the Balize bar, to receive part of the cargoes. Gayarré, Hist. Louisiana, I. 501.

2. To make less burdensome or oppressive; alleviate: as, to lighten the cares of life.

Then first of all his minde was at ease, and free to rejoice, lightened of all manner burden and care.

When I contemplate that infinite Advantage he hath got by this Change and Transmigration, it much lightens the Weight of my Grief. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 7.

3. To cheer; gladden.
A trusty villain, sir, that very oft . . .
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
Shak., C. of E., I. 2. 21.

It takes so very little to lighten hearts of seventeen and eighteen!
Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xi.

4. To make lighter in color or shade: as, to lighten the background of a picture.

lighten³ (lī'tn), v. i. [< light³ + -en¹ (3). Cf. alighten³.] To descend; settle down; light.

O Lord, let thy mercy lighten upon us, as our trust is in thee. Book of Common Prayer (Ch. of England), Te Deum.

lightening¹ (lī'tning), n. [Verbal n. of *lighten*¹, v.: see *lightning*¹.] 1. A becoming light; the break of day. See *lightning*¹, 1.—2†. See *lightning*¹, 2.—3. A brightening up, as of the mind or spirit. [Rare.]

You gave me good warning to take heed and beware, lest after a lightening I catch a foil.
J. Careless, in Bradford's Works (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 356.

4. In metal, the sudden brightening of the color of silver during cupellation when the metal reaches the point of greatest purity.

lightening² (lī'tning), n. [Verbal n. of *lighten*², v.] The act or fact of becoming or making light or less heavy.

light-equation (lī'tē-kwā'shən), n. The correction for the effect on astronomical phenomena, especially eclipses of Jupiter's satellites, of the time required by light to traverse the space between the planet and the earth. This is combined with aberration (which see).

lighter¹ (lī'tēr), n. [= D. leichter = G. leuchter; as light¹, v., + -er¹.] 1. One who or that which lights or illuminates; specifically, a torch or an electric device for lighting candles or gas-jets. A simple form of lighter is a strip of paper rolled into a tapering tube.

Twisting up a piece of waste paper into a lighter.
Wilkie Collins, Hide and Seek, ix.

An electric lighter attached to the gas fixture suddenly flashed brightness over a most curious place.
Weekly American (Waterbury, Conn.), Aug. 27, 1886.

2†. pl. Blinkers for a horse.
Ye'll take the bridle frae his head,
The lighters frae his e'en.
Blanchefleur and Jellyflossie (Child's Ballads, IV. 298).

lighter² (lī'tēr), n. [= D. lighter; as light² + -er¹.] A boat or vessel, commonly an open flat-bottomed barge, but sometimes decked, used in lightening or unloading and also in loading ships, and for receiving and transporting for short distances passengers or goods, or materials of any kind, usually in a harbor.

Some pretty presentation, which we have addressed and conveyed hither in a lighter at the general charge, and landed at the back door. B. Jonson, Masque of Augurs.

The boatmen jump into the water and push the lighters against the stone stairs, while we unload our own baggage.
B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 19.

lighter³ (lī'tēr), v. [< lighter², n.] I. trans. To convey or transport in or as in a lighter, as goods or cargo.

And our effects of some three or four tons were lightered ashore by means of the Indian canoes.
The Century, XXX. 739.

II. intrans. To be employed in the business of transporting goods by means of a lighter.

The vicissitudes of business in their respective vocations—lightering, mule-driving, peddling, or bar-keeping, as the case may be.
J. W. Palmer, The New and the Old, p. 207.

lighter³ (lī'tēr), n. Same as lighter.

lighterage (lī'tēr-āj), n. [< lighter² + -age.] 1. The act of unloading cargo into a lighter.—2. The price paid for unloading a ship by means of a lighter, or for conveying goods or merchandise in lighters.

The lighterage, carriage and porters' due.
Report to Lord Burleigh in 1583 (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 46).

lighterman (lī'tēr-mān), n.; pl. lightermen (-men). [= D. ligterman; as lighter² + man.] A man who manages a lighter; one employed on a lighter.

A poor lighterman, sir, one that hath had the honour sometimes to lay in the king's beer there.
B. Jonson, Masque of Augurs.

lighter-screw (lī'tēr-skrō), n. A screw for the adjustment of the relative distances of the grinding surfaces of a pair of millstones.

lighter-staff (lī'tēr-stāf), n. In a grain-mill, a lever which supports and controls the adjustable end of the bray-plank or bridgetree, to which it is connected at one end by a stirrup, while its other end receives the lighter-screw or a counterbalance weight. E. H. Knight.

light-fingered (lī'ting'gērd), a. 1. Light in touch with the fingers, as in playing the piano.—2. Dexterous in touching and taking; thievish; addicted to petty thefts: applied particularly to pickpockets.

Our men contented themselves with looking after their goods (the Tonquinese being very light-fingered), and left the management of the Boats entirely to the Boats crew.
Dampier, Voyages, II. 1. 14.

Great is Apollo with his golden shell,
The gift of Hermes in his infancy,
And great is Hermes' self, light-fingered god.
R. H. Stoddard, Arcadian Idyl.

light-foot (lī't fūt), a. Nimble; light-footed. [Poetical.]

There she alighted from her light-foot beast.
Spenser, F. Q., III. iv. 7.
Light-foot Iria brought it yester-eve.
Tennyson, Æneid.

lightfoot† (lī't fūt), n. Venison. [Old cant.]
"Wife," quoth the miller, "fetch me forth lightfoote,
And of his sweetness a little we'll taste."
A fair ven'son pastye brought she out presentlye.
The King and the Miller of Mansfield (Child's Ballads, [VIII. 30]).

light-footed (lī't fūt'ed), a. Light of foot; stepping or skipping lightly or nimbly, as in running or dancing.

Wood-nymphs mixed with her light-footed Fauns.
Drayton, Polyolbion, xi. 135.

A fairy Prince with joyful eyes,
And lighter-footed than the fox.
Tennyson, The Day-dream (The Arrival).

lightful¹ (lī't fūl), a. [< light¹, n., + -ful.] Full of light; bright. [Rare.]

Whose lightful presence giveth suddaine flight
To . . . sleepe.
Marston, Sophonisba, I. 2.

lightful² (lī't fūl), a. [Irreg. < light², a., + -ful.] Light; cheerful. [Rare.]

Tho' my heart was lightful and joyous before, yet it is ten times more lightsome and joyous now.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, II. 60.

lightfulness (lī't fūl-nes), n. The quality of being lightful, in either sense. [Rare.]

The eternal Intelligence . . . needs no recording of opinions to confirm his knowledge, no more than the sun wants wax to be the fuel of his glorious lightfulness.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, III.

light-handed (lī't hān'ed), a. 1. Having light hands; soft, delicate, or dexterous in touch or manipulation.—2. Having or bringing little in the hands: as, to come home light-handed.—3. Insufficiently supplied with hands or assistants, as a ship or a factory; short-handed.

light-headed (lī't hēd'ed), a. 1. Disordered in the head; giddy or dizzy; hence, flighty; delirious.

When Belvidera talks of "lutes, laurels, seas of milk, and ships of amber," she is not mad, but light-headed.
Walpole.

Some doubted and were sore afraid
That she had grown light-headed with her woe.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 152.

2. Thoughtless; volatile; frivolous.
If the man be graue, his speech and stile is graue: if light-headed, his stile and language also light.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 124.

These often overturn a thick-witted or a light-headed man.
The Century, XXVI. 369.

light-headedness (lī't hēd'ed-nes), n. The state or quality of being light-headed; dizziness; flightiness; wandering; delirium.

So lovely a voice uttering nothing but the incoherent ravings of light-headedness.
Miss Burney, Cecilia, x. 9.

light-hearted (lī't hār'ted), a. Having a light heart; free from grief or anxiety; cheerful.

He whistles as he goes, light-hearted wretch,
Cold and yet cheerful.
Couper, Task, iv. 12.

=Syn. Gladsome, joyous.
light-heartedly (lī't hār'ted-li), adv. In a light-hearted manner; with a light heart.

light-heartedness (lī't hār'ted-nes), n. The state of being light-hearted or free from care or grief; cheerfulness; playfulness.

These "gabes," as they are called, are merely frolicsome braggadocio, spoken in light-heartedness, and not intended to convey any serious intention.
Encyc. Brit., XX. 652.

light-heeled (lī't hēld), a. 1. Nimble or lively in walking or running; swift of foot.

The villain is much lighter-heel'd than I.
Shak., M. N. D., III. 2. 416.

2†. Of loose character.
She is sure a light heeld wench.
The Bride, 1640, sig. G. (Halliwell).

light-horse (lī't hōrs), n. Light-armed cavalry.

One hundred Men at Arms, and Six hundred Light-Horse, led by the Earl of Warwick.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 303.

Ludovic comes forth with his army, and with his light horse begins the charge.
Coryat, Crudities, I. 119.

light-horseman (lī't hōrs'mān), n. A light-armed cavalry soldier.

lighthouse (lī't hōus), n. A tower or other structure exhibiting a light or lights, for the purpose of indicating the presence of rocks, shoals, or other dangers to navigation, or for the guidance of mariners when approaching or sailing along a coast, entering a harbor, or navigating a river or other body of water. Lighthouses were formerly illuminated simply by means of a wood- or coal-fire, and afterward by candles and lamps. Coal-fires continued in general use till after the middle of the eighteenth century, and in some places many years later. The lamps in the lanterns of lighthouses in the United States are, for the most part, mechanical oil-lamps fitted with Argand burners, and employed with simple reflectors or with some form of the Fresnel lantern. Electric lighting has been tried in some lighthouses, but found objectionable on account of the depth of shadow produced by it in their immediate vicinity. In order that lighthouses may be distinguished by night, their lights vary in power, color, number, position, etc. As regards power, they are classified as of the first, second, third, or fourth order: the first two being employed in coast-lighthouses, and the others as sound-harbor, or river-lights. They may be fixed, revolving, flashing, or intermittent, in either single or combined colors: thus, a light may show two white flashes and a red flash followed by an interval of darkness, or the red and white flashes may alternate. These changes are obtained by various contrivances for causing the lenses, reflectors, or screens to travel in a circular path around the lamp, or to pass before it. Some lighthouses are painted with bands of color, or bear some other distinguishing mark, that their identity may be easily established in the daytime.

Lighthouse on Alligator Reef, Florida Reefs.

They saw . . .
The lamp-fire glimmer down from the tall lighthouse tower.
Whittier, Tent on the Beach.

Lighthouse Board, a board of commissioners attached to the Treasury Department of the United States government, having supervision of the lighthouse system of the United States. It consists of nine members: three civilians (the Secretary of the Treasury, the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, and a scientist), three naval officers, and three officers of the Corps of Engineers of the Army.

lighthouseman (lī't hōus-mān), n.; pl. lighthousemen (-men). A keeper of a lighthouse.

The manners and ways of coastguardsmen, lighthousemen, and other amphibious creatures.
Athenæum, No. 3200, p. 257.

lighting¹ (lī'ting), n. [< ME. lihtinge, lihtinge, < AS. lihtung, lihtung, lihting, lihting, leohhtian, verbal n. of lihtan, leohhtan, light, shine, illuminate: see *light*¹, v.] 1. The act of making light or becoming light. See *light*¹, v. 2. The act of igniting or illuminating: as, the lighting of a fire; street-lighting.

Electric lighting and working of railways and tramways are upon a commercial and useful stage.

Nature, XXXVII, 303.

3. In metal-working, same as annealing.

lighting² (lī'ting), n. [< ME. lihting*, < AS. lihting, a making or becoming light, alleviation, verbal n. of lihtan, lehtan, make light, leohhtian, become light: see *light*², v.] The act of making or becoming light or less heavy. See *light*², v.

lighting³ (lī'ting), n. [Verbal n. of *light*³, v.] The act of alighting, as from flight.

Ere long it was noticed that in the process of lighting (of various birds) there was, very commonly, a conspicuous flashing-out of white on wings or tail, or on both.

Amer. Naturalist, XXII, 202.

light-iron (līt'ī'ern), n. An iron stand serving to hold a candle or a lamp: an early utensil, kept in use in some localities until lately.

light-keeper (līt'kē'pēr), n. The person who has charge of the light in a lighthouse or lightship.

I reached Dublin on the evening of the 5th, and, without giving the lightkeeper any warning of my visit, went straight to the lighthouse.

Nineteenth Century, XXIV, 67.

light-legged (līt'leg'ed or -legd), a. Nimble; swift of foot.

Lightlegged Pas has got the middle space.

Sir P. Sidney.

lightless (līt'les), a. [< ME. lightless, < AS. leohhtles, without light, < leohht, light, + -les, = E. -less; see *light*¹, n., and -less.] Without light; giving no light; dark.

Upon the changeunge of the moone,
Whan lightless is the world.

Chaucer, Troilus, iii, 550.

The lightless fire,

Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire.

Shak., Lucrece, l, 4.

These large lightless waves of the sun . . . are frequently called obscure or invisible heat.

Tyndall, Forms of Water, p. 13.

lightly (līt'li), adv. [< ME. lightly, lihtliche, lihtliche, < AS. leohhtlic (= OFries. lichtelik = D. lichtelijk = MLG. lichteliken = OHG. lihtliho, MHG. lihtliche, G. leichtlich), in a light manner, < leohhtlic, a., light, < leohht, light, + -lic = E. -ly.] 1. Not heavily; with little weight or force; not oppressively or severely: as, to tread lightly; to punish lightly; his cares sit lightly upon him.

When at the first he lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun.

Isa. ix, 1.

That the King's hands may not be rudely tied by others, he must consent to tie them lightly himself.

Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

2. With little effort; without difficulty; easily.

And verily you shall not lightly find in all the city any thing that is more commodious . . . (than) these gardens.

Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii, 2.

They come lightly by the malt, and need not spare it.

Scott.

And, pushing his black craft among them all,
He lightly scatter'd theirs.

Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

3. Without good reason; upon slight grounds; readily.

My wife is in a wayward mood to-day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger.

Shak., C. of E., iv, 4, 6.

4. With little regard; slightly; indifferently.

Then, and long afterwards, colonial property was lightly esteemed.

Bancroft, Hist. U. S., II, 362.

5. Parsimoniously; niggardly.

They are but lightly rewarded.

Shak., L. L. L., l, 2, 157.

6. Without deliberation; heedlessly; inconsiderately.

Matrimony . . . is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly or lightly.

Book of Common Prayer, Solemnization of Matrimony.

They choose the Tranibores yearly, but lightly they change them not.

Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii, 3.

7. In a light-hearted manner; cheerfully; cheerily; airily; with levity.

I'll lightly front each high emprise
For one kind glance of those bright eyes.

Scott, L. of the L., l, 24.

The seventy years borne lightly as the plue Wears its first down of snow in green disdain.

Lowell, Bankside, iii.

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

Lightly he answered her, and smile or kiss

Would change their talk to idle words of bliss.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II, 274.

8. With agility; nimbly; quickly.

It booted not to think that throw to beare,

But grownd he gave, and lightly lept areare.

Spenser, F. Q., II, xi, 36.

Watch what thou seeest, and lightly bring me word.

Tennyson, Morte d'Arthur.

9†. Commonly; usually.

The folk of that Contree ben lightly dronken, and han but litille appetyt to mete. Mandeville, Travels, p. 157.

Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Shak., Rich. III., iii, l, 94.

The great thieves of a state are lightly the officers of the crown.

B. Jonson, Discoveries.

lightly (līt'li), r. t.; pret. and pp. lightlied, ppr. lightlying. [< lightly, adv.] To make light of; slight; disparage. Also lightly. [Seeteh.]

I drew me near to my stairehead,

And I heard my sin lord lightly me.

Lord Jamie Douglas (Child's Ballads, IV, 138).

His House, whose front vpreard so high and eaven,
That lightlied earth, and seemed to threat the heaven.

T. Hudson, tr. of Du Bartas's Judith, l, 78.

light-maker (līt'mā'kēr), n. That which yields light, as a heavenly body. Wyclif.

lightman (līt'mān), n. A linkman.

The stars might go to sleep a-nights,

And leave their work to these new lights;

The midwife moon might mind her calling,

And noisy lightman leave his bawling.

Tom Brown, Works, IV, 255.

light-minded (līt'mīn'ded), a. Of light mind; unsteady; volatile; capricious.

He that is hasty to give credit is lightminded.

Ecclus. xix, 4.

light-mindedness (līt'mīn'ded-ness), n. The quality of being light-minded; inconsiderateness; capriciousness.

The singular light-mindedness with which a king of France bestows upon a Lombard adventurer a county in the very heart and centre of his own kingdom.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLI, 411.

light-moderator (līt'mod'ē-rā-tōr), n. An attachment for a microscope to secure a white light on an object when examined by artificial light. It consists of two disks of colored glass, one blue, the other red, mounted on a stand for convenience in adjustment.

light-money (līt'mūn'ē), n. Money levied for the maintenance of lighthouses; light-dues.

Apart from the Sound dues themselves, there were charges of light-money, pass-money, etc., which caused a delay at Elnoroe. E. Schuyler, Amer. Diplomacy, p. 308.

lightness¹ (līt'nes), n. [< ME. lightnes*, < AS. lihtness (= OHG. lihtnissa), lightness, brightness, < leohht, liht, light: see *light*¹, a., and -ness.] The state or quality of being light or bright.

lightness² (līt'nes), n. [< ME. lightnesse, lightnesse (= MLG. lichtnisse); < *light*², a., + -ness.] 1. The state or quality of being light in weight; lack of heaviness or gravity: as, the lightness of a burden; the lightness of cork or of hydrogen.

Its [cork's] specific lightness, combined with strength and durability, recommends it above all other substances for forming life-buoys, belts, and jackets.

Encyc. Brit., VI, 402.

2. In cookery, sponginess; the state of being well raised; freedom from sogginess.

This matter of lightness is the distinctive line between savage and civilized bread.

H. B. Stowe, House and Home Papers, x.

3. Freedom from heaviness or clumsiness in act or execution; dexterity; nimbleness; agility: as, lightness of touch in painting or music; lightness of foot in running or dancing.

Somtyme, to shewe his lightness and maistrye,
He pleyeth Herodes upon a scaffold hie.

Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l, 197.

He [Rab] . . . trotted up stairs with much lightness, and went straight to that door.

Dr. J. Brown, Rab and his Friends.

4. Inconstancy; unsteadiness; fickleness.

Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.

Shak., 3 Ilen. VI., iii, l, 89.

5†. Levity; wantonness; unchastity.

That modesty may more betray our sense

Than woman's lightness?

Shak., M. for M., II, 2, 169.

Ready to sprinkle our unspotted fame
With note of lightness?

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v, 3.

6†. Light-headedness.

And he, repulsed — a short tale to make —
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness.

Shak., Hamlet, II, 2, 149.

= Syn. 3. Briskness, sprightliness, ease, facility, swiftness.

— 4. Volatility, Fricolity, etc. (see levity), instability, giddiness, airiness.

lightning¹ (līt'ning), n. [Also in the first sense lightening, after the present form of the verb, but according to the orig. type lightning; < ME. lightning*, lightnyng, illumination, verbal n. of lightnen, lightnen, illuminate: see *lighten*¹. Cf. *lightning*¹.] 1. A becoming light or bright; a flashing of light: in this sense usually lightening.

Be the lightnyng of a sterre,

To Jhesu alle thre presentis thei bronzte.

Hyans to Virgyn, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 45.

The great brand

Made lightnings in the splendor of the moon.

Tennyson, Passing of Arthur.

2. A sudden illumination of the heavens caused by the discharge of atmospheric electricity from one cloud to another or from a cloud to the earth; a flash of light due to electricity in the atmosphere. The lightning-flash may have a length of a mile or even more, and commonly takes an irregular direction (forked lightning), the path of the electrical discharge being that of the least resistance. In sheet-lightning no definite spark is seen, but a general illumination over a broad surface; it is commonly due to the reflection by the clouds of the discharge proper. This is called summer lightning or heat-lightning when the storm is at a great distance, so that only the broad flashes of light are seen, usually near the horizon, and unaccompanied by thunder. Sheet-lightning is also described as occurring when there is neither storm nor cloud; if such cases be authentic, it is probably due to a weak electrical discharge in the air at a considerable altitude. In globular lightning or globe-lightning, which is a rare phenomenon, the discharge takes a spherical form (fire-ball), sometimes apparently a foot or more in diameter, and lasts for a number of seconds, descending slowly to the earth, and often exploding with a loud report. The discharge of frictional electricity in the laboratory gives phenomena similar in kind to those of lightning, and the "brimstone odor" which sometimes accompanies the latter (due to the formation of ozone) is often observed.

In lyknesse of a lightnyng he lygte on hem alle,

And made hem konne and knowe alkyng langagea.

Piers Plowman (B), xix, 197.

And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Shak., J. C., i, 3, 50.

Mr. A. S. Barker photographed outside objects on an excessively dark night by the light of lightning alone. The wind was strong, and the interesting feature was brought out, when the plates were developed, that the foliage had perceptibly moved during the exposure. The flash must therefore have a measurable interval, probably decidedly longer than the thousandth or ten thousandth of a second, as got by Wheatstone. Amer. Meteor. Jour., III, 101.

Jersey lightning, apple-jack or peach-brandy (as made, or alleged to be made, in New Jersey); very crude and bad whisky. [Slang, U. S.]

lightning^{2†}, n. [Same as *lightening*².] A becoming light or less heavy; an exhilaration of the spirits. [Perhaps really the same as *lightening*¹, the senses being easily interchanged.]

How oft when men are at the point of death

Have they been merry! which their keepers call

A lightning before death. Shak., R. and J., v, 3, 90.

lightning-arrester (līt'ning-a-res'tēr), n. An apparatus used for protecting telegraph or telephono lines, offices, instruments, and operators from lightning-discharges. It usually consists of two wires or plates placed in close proximity, one of them connected to an earth-plate and the other to the line. The opposed surfaces of the plates are sometimes covered with sharp corrugations in directions at right angles to each other, and sometimes filled with sharp points which face each other and increase the power of the instrument.

lightning-bug (līt'ning-bug), n. A firefly or phosphorescent beetle of the family Lampyridae, related to the European glow-worms. Two common species are Pyracontena angulata and P. borealis.

The genera Phengodes, Zarhipis, Microphotus, and Pleotomus have more or less wingless, degraded, larviform females, which are luminous in abdominal patches. The males of the same genera are winged, and resemble the common lightning-bugs, giving a more or less intense flash-light. Another lightning-bug of the eastern United States is Photuris pennsylvanica, about half an inch long, of a yellowish color with a few ill-defined lines of black or brown; both sexes have wings and long elytra, and the luminous larva has a brush-like anal leg. A third species, common in parts of the Mississippi valley, is Photinus pyralis, which has blackish-brown elytra margined with pale yellow, and a yellow prothorax with a central black spot. The two last-named belong to the subfamily Lampyrinae.

lightning-conductor (līt'ning-kōn-duk'tōr), n. Same as lightning-rod.

lightning-discharger (līt'ning-dis-chār'jēr), n. Same as lightning-arrester.

Lightning-bug, or Firefly (Photuris pennsylvanica). a, larva (line shows natural size); b, leg of larva, magnified; c, beetle.

lightning-print (lit'ning-print), n. A branched or tree-like marking sometimes found on the skin of men and animals and on clothing struck by lightning, or in the neighborhood of the stroke, and popularly supposed to be an impression of the images of surrounding objects. That this is the case is highly improbable, and the few well-authenticated instances yet remain to be accounted for.

lightning-proof (lit'ning-pröf), a. Safe or protected from lightning.

lightning-protector (lit'ning-prö-tek'tör), n. Same as lightning-arresier.

lightning-rod (lit'ning-rod), n. A pointed, insulated metallic rod erected to protect a building or a vessel from lightning; a lightning-conductor. Lightning-rods are attached to buildings and other structures for two purposes: (1) to prevent as far as possible sudden discharges of electricity from clouds to earth through or in the neighborhood of the building; (2) to form a line of least resistance for any such discharge, should it take place, and thus prevent damage to the building. In order that a lightning-rod may be efficient for the first purpose, it is provided with one or more (preferably several) sharp points at its upper end, with the view of gradually discharging the electricity of the surrounding atmosphere to earth. (See power of points, under point.) With regard to the most efficient form for a lightning-rod to fulfil the second purpose for which lightning-rods are erected, there have been great differences of opinion. Recent developments of electrical theory and experiment indicate that the form of the conductor is the most important element, the particular kind of metal being of comparatively little account. The conductor should be in the form of a ribbon or a thin tube, or consist of a number of separate thin wires not spun together to form a rope. The object is to obtain a conductor having small self-induction, which is the main impediment to a sudden rush of electricity. Care is also taken that the rod or conductor be well connected to earth, either through wet soil or through a network of water-mains.

lightning-tube (lit'ning-tüb), n. Same as fulgurite.

light-o'-love (lit'o-luv'), n. [From the phrase light of love, i. e. trifling or capricious in love.]
1. A light, capricious woman; a wanton coquette.

So, my queen, you and I must part sooner than perhaps a light-o'-love such as you expected to part with a—likely young fellow. Scott.

2. An old dance-tune.

Clap us into Light-o'-love; that goes without a burden; do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

Shak., Much Ado, fil. 4. 44.

light-organ (lit'ör'gau), n. In entom., one of the luminous organs of certain insects, situated in the thorax or abdomen.

light-room (lit'röm), n. 1. A small apartment next to the magazine in a ship of war, in which lights for illuminating the magazine are placed behind thick glass windows, to avoid danger from carrying fire among the explosives. Also called light-box.—2. The room at the top of a lighthouse containing the lighting apparatus.

light-ship (lit'ship), n. A vessel riding at anchor and displaying a light for the guidance of mariners, in a position where the bottom or the depth would render a fixed lighthouse-structure impracticable. Light-ships have only such masts and sails as will enable them to reach a port if driven by storms from their anchorage.

Light-ship.

light-shot, n. In Anglo-Saxon times, a contribution of wax payable to the church three times yearly.

lightsome¹ (lit'sum), a. [*< light*¹, a., + -some.] Emitting or manifesting light; luminous; not dark. [Now chiefly poetical.]

However dark the habitation of the mole to our eyes, yet the animal itself finds the apartment sufficiently lightsome. Goldsmith, Vicar, vi.

If thou would'st view fair Melrose aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight;
For the gay beams of lightsome day
Gild but to flout the ruins gray.

Scott, L. of L. M., il. 1.

lightsome² (lit'sum), a. [*< light*², a., + -some.] Having the quality of lightness or buoyancy; light-hearted; cheerful or cheering; gay; airy; sportive.

It suiteth so fitly with that lightsome affection of joy wherein God delighteth when his saints praise him.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity.

This new should make you lightsome, bring joy to you, Fletcher, Loyal Subject, il. 1.

Pope's understanding was no less vigorous . . . than his fancy was lightsome and sprightly.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 410.

lightsomely (lit'sum-li), adv. In a lightsome manner.

lightsomeness¹ (lit'sum-nes), n. The state or quality of being lightsome or of emitting or showing light, luminousness. [Rare.]

It is to our atmosphere that . . . the lightsomeness of our air and the twilight are owing.

G. Cheyne, Philos. Prin. of Nat. Religion.

lightsomeness² (lit'sum-nes), n. The quality of being lightsome or not heavy.

Drayton could write well, and had an agreeable lightsomeness of fancy.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 138.

light-spirited (lit'spir'i-ted), a. Having a light or cheerful spirit.

light-struck (lit'struk), a. In photog., injured by exposure to actinic light; fogged, as a sensitized plate which has been insufficiently protected from light, or has been used in apparatus leaking light.

light-tight (lit'tit), a. Impervious to light; excluding the light perfectly. Compare air-tight.

light-vessel (lit'ves'el), n. Same as light-ship.

light-wave (lit'wäv), n. A wave of the luminiferous ether; a wave of light.

light-weight (lit'wät), n. In sporting, a man or an animal of a certain weight prescribed by the rules, between that of the middle-weight on one hand and that of the feather-weight on the other; hence, any person of light weight or of comparatively little importance.

light-winged (lit'winged), a. Having light or fleet wings.

Light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid. Shak., Othello, i. 3. 269.

light-witted (lit'wit'ed), a. Having a feeble or weak intellect.

For light-witted or drunken, sure, men will name thee in talke. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 82.

lightwood¹ (lit'wüd), n. [*< light*¹, n., + *wood*¹.] Any wood used in lighting a fire; kindlings; especially, in the southern United States, very resinous pine wood.

They [Indians] make a hearth in the middle of their canoe, raising it within two inches of the edge; upon this they lay their burning lightwood, split into small shivers, each splinter whereof will blaze and burn, end for end, like a candle. Beechley, Virginia, li.

A negro woman on her knees was hastily lighting a fire on the broad hearth with fat lightwood, and in another moment there was a strong aromatic odor, and the brilliant blaze. Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 243.

Lightwood knot. (a) A pine knot used for kindlings. (b) The ruddy duck, Erythraura rubida: so called from its toughness. [New Berne, North Carolina.]

lightwood² (lit'wüd), n. [*< light*², a., + *wood*².] An inappropriate colonial name for the Australian tree Acacia Melanoxydon, more properly called blackwood.

lightwood³ (lit'wüd), n. [*< light*³, a., + *wood*³.] Same as coachwood.

lighty (lit'ti), a. [ME. lighty, ligti; *< light*¹, n., + -y.] Full of light; illuminated; not obscure.

The lantern of thi bodi is thine ygh; if thin ygh be symple, al thi body schal be lighty, but if it be weyward, al thi body schal be derkful. Wyclif, Luke xi. 34.

Ligia (lij'i-ä), n. [NL., < L. Ligia or Ligia*, < Gr. Λίγία, a water-nymph, fem. of λύγίς, clear-voiced.] 1. A Fabrician (1798) genus of isopod crustaceans, now referred to the family Oniscidae. It contains certain sea-slaters, as L. oceanica. Also Lygia.—2. The typical genus of Ligiinae or Ligiidae, having a few European and Asiatic species. Duponchel, 1829.

Ligiidae (li-ji'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Ligia + -idae.] The Ligiinae rated as a family. Usually called Ligiidae.

Ligiinae (lij-i-i'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Ligia + -inae.] A subfamily of geometrid moths, typified by the genus Ligia: also named Ligiidae as a family of Geometrinae or Phalanes. It is widely distributed, and contains 7 genera of moths, with the body stout, front prominent, palpi variable, antennae stout, pectinate in the male, thorax very short, wings entire and unmarked or very slightly speckled, tarsi spinose, and hind tibiae four-spurred. Usually called Ligiinae.

lignaget (li'näj), n. A Middle English form of lineage.

lignaloës (lig-nal'öz), n. [< ME. ligne aloës, < OF. lignaloës, lignaloës, ligne aloës, lingaloës, lingaloël, etc., < L. lignum aloës: lignum, wood; aloes, gen. of aloe, aloes; see aloes.] 1. Aloeswood or agallochum: same as aloes, 2.—2†. A bitter drug: same as aloes, 1.

The woful teres that they leten falle

Aa hitte weren out of teres kynde,

For peyne, as is ligne aloës [var. lignum aloës] or galle. Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 1187.

lignatile (lig'na-til), a. [< NL. lignatilis, < L. lignum, wood. Cf. saxatile.] In bot., growing on wood; lignicole.

lignet, n. A Middle English form of *line*².

ligneous (lig'nē-us), a. [= Sp. ligneo = Pg. It. ligneo, < L. ligneus, wooden, < lignum, wood: see lignum.] Consisting of or resembling wood; wooden; woody; in bot., having a wood-like texture; woody, as distinguished from herbaceous. Also lignose.

For it may be they [shoots of vines and roots of red roses], being of a more ligneous nature, will incorporate with the tree itself. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 504.

Ligneous galls, in entom., galls which are hard and inelastic, resembling wood in structure.—Ligneous marble, wood coated or prepared so as to resemble marble.

lignescence (lig-nes'ent), a. [< L. lignum, wood, + -escent.] Tending to be or become ligneous or woody; somewhat woody.

lignicole (lig'ni-köl), a. [< L. lignum, wood, + colere, dwell.] Same as lignicole.

lignicoline (lig-nik'ö-lin), a. [< lignicole + -ine.] Growing upon wood, as some mosses, lichens, and fungi.

ligniferous (lig-nif'er-us), a. [< L. lignifer, < lignum, wood, + ferre = E. *bear*¹.] Producing or yielding wood.

lignification (lig'ni-fi-kä'shon), n. [= F. lignification = Pg. lignificação; as lignify + -ation: see fiction.] The act of lignifying, or the state of being lignified; the process of becoming or of making woody: an alleged conversion of animal matter into wood, not confirmed by scientific investigation.

ligniform (lig'ni-förm), a. [= F. ligniforme, < L. lignum, wood, + forma, form.] Like wood; resembling wood.—Ligniform asbestos. See asbestos, 3.

lignify (lig'ni-fi), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. lignified, ppr. lignifying. [= F. lignifier = Pg. (refl.) lignificar, < L. lignum, wood, + facere, make: see fy.] To convert into or become wood; make or grow woody.

As internal cells grow older the protoplasm disappears, the cellulose lignifies, and a more framework of woody cells is left. S. B. Herrick, Wonders of Plant Life, p. 6.

The object is, in brief, what appears to be a lignified serpent formed between the outer bark and the wood—in the cambium layer, in fact—of a native tree known as the Ipé mistm. C. V. Riley, Sci. Amer. Supp., Feb. 17, 1883.

Lignified cells, in phys. bot., vegetable cells whose walls have been indurated and more or less thickened by the deposition of lignin, thus being converted into woody fiber.

lignin (lig'nin), n. [< L. lignum, wood, + *-in*².] An organic substance which forms the characteristic part of wood-cells, bast-cells, and all woody fibers, making the greater part of the weight of most dry wood. It is superadded to the cellulose of primitive cells by deposition on their walls. It is harder and more elastic than the latter, and absorbs comparatively little water. Its chemical composition is not satisfactorily made out; but it differs from cellulose in being soluble in Schultze's macerating mixture and in potassium hydrate, but not in cupro-ammonium. It has sometimes been called xylogen. See lignified cells, under lignify.

ligniperdous (lig-ni-pér'dus), a. [< L. lignum, wood, + perdere, destroy; cf. F. ligniperdes, insects destructive of wood.] Destructive of wood; injurious to timber; specifically applied to various insects, crustaceans, and mollusks.

lignite (lig'nit), n. [< L. lignum, wood, + *-ite*².] Brown-coal; imperfectly formed coal, or that in which the original form of the wood is so distinctly preserved that it can be easily recognized by the unaided eye. Lignite usually contains considerably more hygroscopic water than does true coal, and is inferior to the latter as a fuel. It contains decidedly more oxygen than true coal, and in its general chemical composition stands midway between coal and wood. It is not limited to any particular geological formation, but is more abundant in the more recent strata. The fossil fuel of the Tertiary is almost all lignite; and in the Tertiary coal, where the vegetable structure may not perhaps be distinctly recognizable, the presence of 10 or 12 per cent. of water is an indication of imperfect conversion of the material into coal. There are, however, Tertiary coals which are nearly as free from water as those of Carboniferous age usually are, as, for instance, some of the coal of southern Colorado, which is either of very early Tertiary or late Cretaceous age.

lignitic (lig-nit'ik), a. [< lignite + -ic.] Consisting of or containing lignite.—Lignitic group. Same as Laramie group (which see, under group).

lignitiferous (lig-ni-tif'er-us), a. [< lignite + L. ferre = E. *bear*¹.] In geol., lignite-bearing; containing beds of lignite or brown-coal, as certain strata.

lignitize (lig'ni-tīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. lignitized, ppr. lignitizing. [< lignite + -ize.] To convert into lignite.

A large log two feet in diameter, and completely lignitized, was also seen. Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., XXXI, 203.

lignivorous (lig-niv'ō-rus), a. [= F. lignivore; < L. lignum, wood, + vorare, eat, devour.] Wood-eating; living in and devouring wood, either in a growing tree or in cut timber, as the larvae of many insects; xylophagous.

lignose (lig'nōs), a. and n. [< L. lignosus, woody; see lignous.] I. a. Same as lignous.

II. n. An explosive mixture consisting of wood pulp saturated with nitroglycerin. It has fallen into disuse on account of the special danger attending its use.

lignous (lig'nus), a. [= F. ligneux = Pg. lignoso; < L. lignosus, like wood, < lignum, wood; see lignum.] Ligneous.

Their lignous fibers with continuous length, Equivalent, compact, a bony strength.

Brooke, Universal Beauty, iii.

lignum (lig'nūm), n. [L., wood as used for fuel (or rarely for making tables, etc.); prob. 'that which is gathered' (see for firewood), < legerē, gather; see legend.] Wood, as contrasted with soft tissues or with bark; that part of exogenous plants which comprises the albumen and the duramen.—Lignum crucis, wood of the cross; ecclē., a relic asserted to be a piece of the true cross, or a decorative object containing such a relic.

lignum-aloes (lig'nūm-al'ōz), n. Same as lign-aloes.

lignum-vitæ (lig'nūm-vī'tē), n. [NL., < L. lignum, wood, + vita, gen. of vita, life; see vital.]

1. The tree Guaiacum officinale, or its hard and durable wood; also, G. sanctum. See Guaiacum.—2. A name of several other trees of which the wood is more or less similar to that of G. officinale. That of Guiana is Izora triflorum, also called haekia; that of Queensland, Vitex lilywood, etc. of the Verbenaceæ. Acacia falcata and Eucalyptus polyanthema of New South Wales have likewise received the same name; and so has Melanorrhoe usitata, the black-varnish tree of Burma and Pegu.—Bastard lignum-vitæ, Sarcophalus taurinus of Jamaica, belonging to the Rhamnaceæ.—Hickory lignum-vitæ, Acacia falcata of New South Wales.—White lignum-vitæ, Badiera diversifolia of the Polygalæ, found in Jamaica.

lignin (lig'nō-in), n. [Formation not obvious.] That part of petroleum which has a boiling-point between 90° and 120° C.

ligula (lig'ū-lā), n.; pl. ligule (-lē). [NL., < L. ligula, a var. of lingula, a little tongue, tongue of a shoe, strap, etc., a spoon, spoonful; dim. of lingua, tongue; see lingual.] 1. In bot., same as ligule.—2. In entom.: (a) A fleshy, membranaceous, or horny anterior part of the labium, attached to the inner surface of the mentum, by which it is sometimes entirely concealed; the terminal or distal one of the three component parts of the labium. In the Hymenoptera it is developed into a long tongue-like organ, split into three parts, of which the outer two are called the paraglossæ and the intermediate one the glossæ or lingua. (See cut under Hymenoptera.) Sometimes the term ligula is applied to the united palpi or palpus-bearing lobes of the labium, which cover and conceal the true ligula. In the Coleoptera the ligula is properly the central division of the labium, between the paraglossæ; but, as the latter are often wanting, the term ligula has come to be used synonymously with labium, where the term labium is used as applying only to the anterior division, excluding mentum and submentum. See cut under mouth-parts. (b) A process on the elytra of certain beetles. See elytral.—3. In anat., a band of white nervous substance bordering the membranous covering of the posterior part of the fourth ventricle of the brain on each side, and extending from the elytra to the striæ acusticæ, where it winds around the restiform bodies. Also called tania ventriculi quarti, ala pontis, and ponticulus.—4. [cap.] A genus of simple cestoid worms, type of the family Ligulidæ, having an unsegmented elongated body with two lateral depressions at the head end, and numerous sets of sexual organs in longitudinal series opening on the median line of the body. These endoparasites inhabit fishes and amphibians, and acquire their matured character in water-birds.

5. [cap.] A genus of mollusks.

ligular (lig'ū-lār), a. [< ligul(e) + -ar.] Of or pertaining to a ligula; consisting of ligulæ; strap-like.

As occasional appendages . . . must be mentioned stipules, ligular structures, and wood-like outgrowths.

Sachs, Botany (trans.), p. 191.

Ligularia (lig'ū-lār'i-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Ligula + -aria.] The Ligulidæ rated as an order of the class Cestoidæ.

ligulate (lig'ū-lāt), a. [< ligula + -ate.] 1. In bot.: (a) Strap-shaped: said chiefly of the rays of the tubuliferous and the corollas of the liguliferous Compositæ. (b) Furnished with a ligule: as, a ligulate grass; having a ligulate corolla: as, a ligulate flower; having ligulate flowers: as, a ligulate head.—2. In zool., strap-shaped: specifically applied (a) to the cochlea of vertebrates below mammals, in distinction from helicine or helicoid; (b), in entomology, to parts which are long, narrow, flat, and parallel-sided or nearly so, as the tongue of a butterfly.

ligulated (lig'ū-lāt-ed), a. Same as ligulate.

ligule (lig'ūl), n. [< ligula, q. v.] In bot., one of several strap-shaped organs or parts. (a) The blade formed by the corolla in some or all the florets of numerous composite plants. See Ligulifloræ. (b) The membranous appendage which projects from the summit of the leaf-sheath in many grasses. (c) The name is extended by Gray to certain outgrowths, analogous to the last, from the inner side of some petals (for example, those forming the crown in Silene), and also of some filaments (as in the stamens of dodder). (d) In Selaginella and Toxites, a peculiar membranous scale or tongue arising from the upper surface of the leaf above the sporangium when that is present. Also ligula.

Ligulidæ (li-gū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Ligula + -idæ.] A family of cestoid worms, typified by the genus Ligula.

Ligulifloræ (li-gū'li-flō'rē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candoille, 1838), fem. pl. of liguliflorus; see liguliflorus.] A suborder of Compositæ. The florets of the compound flowers are ligulate and hermaphrodite.

liguliferous (li-gū'li-flō'rūs), a. [< NL. liguliflorus, < L. ligula, a strap, + flos (flor-), a flower; see ligula and flower.] In bot., having heads composed exclusively of strap-shaped florets.

liguliform (li-gū'li-fōrm), a. [< L. ligula, a strap, + forma, form.] In entom., strap-shaped; flat and parallel-sided.—Liguliform tongue or lingua, a tongue or lingua which is rather short, flat, and partly free from the labium, and not concealed within the mouth, as in most wasps.

Ligurian (li-gwō'ri-an), a. and n. [< Liguri (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Alfonso Maria da Liguri (1696–1787), an Italian bishop and saint, founder of the order of Redemptorists.

II. n. Same as Redemptorist.

Liguorist (li-gwō'rist), n. [< Liguri (see Ligurian) + -ist.] Same as Redemptorist.

ligure (lig'ūr), n. [< LL. liguricus, lycuricus, lycurian, lycurium, < LG. λυγίριον, Gr. λυγκοίριον (Theophrastus), λυγκοίριον, λυγγοίριον, λυγγοίριον, λαγγοίριον, λαγοίριον, a sort of gem (Septuagint, tr. Heb. leshem); origin obscure; appar. (in the form λυγκοίριον, the other forms being then corruptions), < λυγέ (λυγκ-), a lynx, + οίριον, urine, an etym. accompanied by, and perhaps originating, the statement that the gem was believed to be lynx's urine petrified. The origin has also been referred to L. Liguria (Gr. Λιγυρία, Λιγυστική) in northern Italy; see Ligurian.] Some precious stone. The word is used in the authorized version of the Old Testament to translate leshem, the Hebrew name of one of the twelve precious stones set in the breastplate of the Jewish high priest (Ex. xxviii. 19, xxxix. 12). The ligure has been identified by some with the jacinth, but by others with the opal or with the tourmalin.

And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst. Ex. xxviii. 19.

Ligurian (li-gū'ri-an), a. and n. [< L. Liguria (Gr. Λυγυρία, Λιγυρία), < Ligures (Gr. Λίγυρες, Λίγυρες), pl. of Ligus (Ligur-) or Ligur, a people in northern Italy. Cf. Ligusticum and larage, from the same ult. source.] I. a. Pertaining to Liguria, an ancient district on the coast of northwestern Italy and southeastern France, including Nice, the south of Piedmont, Genoa, part of Parma, etc. In the present kingdom of Italy Liguria is a compartimento or department comprising the provinces of Genoa and Porto Maurizio.—Ligurian bee, Apis ligustica, the Italian honey-bee, indigenous to the south of Europe.—Ligurian Sea, the Gulf of Genoa.

II. n. One of a race inhabiting in ancient times a great part of northwestern Italy, especially in the neighborhood of Genoa, and occupying also much of southeastern Gaul. The Ligurians seem to have been ethnically distinct from Iberians, Gauls, and the main stock of Italian tribes. They were subjugated by the Romans during the second century before the Christian era.

ligurinus (li-gū'rī-nus), n. [NL., < L. Ligurius, Ligurian; see Ligurian.] 1. An old name of the green linnet, or siskin, now commonly called Chrysomitris spinus. Hence—2. [cap.] (a) A genus of fringilline birds having the siskin as its type. Brisson, 1760. (b) Another genus of birds having as type the greenfinch, Loxia chloris of Linnæus. Koch, 1816.—3. [cap.] A genus of spiders. Karsch, 1878.

ligurite (li-gū'rīt), n. [= F. ligurite, < L. Liguria, name of a district of Italy (see Ligurian), + -ite.] A variety of sphene or titanite, occurring in oblique rhombic prisms of an apple-green color.

ligurrition (li-gū-rish'on), n. [< L. ligurilio(n)-, ligurritio(n)-], a fondness for dainties, < ligurire, ligurrive, be fond of dainties, liek, lit. desire to liek, desiderative of lingere, liek; see liek.] The act of lieking. [Rare.]

The emptying of wine-glasses and the ligurrition of dishes. P. W. Farrar, Julian Home, p. 94.

Ligusticum (li-gus'ti-kūm), n. [NL. (Linnæus), < L. ligusticum, a plant indigenous to Liguria, lovage, < Ligusticus (Gr. Λιγυστικός), Ligurian, < Ligus, Ligur, a Ligurian; see Ligurian. See larage, ult. < L. ligusticum.] A genus of umbelliferous plants belonging to the tribe Seselinæ, subtribe Selinæ, distinguished by an ovate or oblong fruit with numerous oil-tubes, and by having seeds with a flat or slightly concave face. There are about 25 species, which are found throughout the whole northern hemisphere. L. Scoticum, the Scotch lovage, is sometimes used as a pot-herb. It is common on northern shores, in America reaching south to Rhode Island. L. acetalifolium, called wonda and angelica, has a large root with the strong aromatic odor and taste of Angelica.

ligustrine (li-gus'trin), n. [< Ligustrum + -in.] The bitter principle of the privet, Ligustrum vulgare.

Ligustrum (li-gus'trum), n. [NL. (Linnæus), < L. ligustrum, privet.] A genus of plants belonging to the order Oleaceæ and the tribe Oleineæ, distinguished by the induplicate corolla and the terminal panicles of the flowers. There are about 25 species, natives of temperate and tropical Asia, of Europe, and of Australia. They are shrubs with opposite entire smooth leaves. L. vulgare, the common privet, makes neat hedges, bearing clipping well, hence called privet and privet. The hard white wood, though small, serves some purpose in turnery, the twigs have been used in Belgium in tanning, and the bark yields the bitter principle ligustrin. The Japan privet, L. japonicum, with broader, evergreen leaves, is a cultivated species, which, like the former, will grow in shade, and may be used for hedges.

Ligyris (lij'ī-rus), n. [NL., < Gr. λυγρίς, the plant, flexible.] A genus of scarabs, of the subfamily Plynastrinæ. It is an important group, confined to North and South America and the West Indies. Four species inhabit the United States. L. rugiceps is the greatest enemy of the sugar-cane in Louisiana, and also injures corn. L. bituberculatus is injurious to the sugar-cane in South America. Burmeister, 1847.

likt, n. A Middle English form of *like*¹.

likable (li'ka-bl), a. [Also likeable; *< like*³, v., + -able.] Of a nature to attract liking; apt to be liked: as, a likable disposition.

Harry was liked because he was likable. Thackeray, Virginians, xliii.

Ferris, the consul, is meant to be a good fellow in intention, and a likable one in person. S. A. Rev., CXX, 213.

We cannot make much out of his military services, but he [Franklin Pierce] is a likeable man, and has as much of "Young America" as we want.

Marcy, in Curtis's Buchanan, II, 33.

likableness (li'ka-bl-nes), n. The quality of being likable. Also spelled likeableness.

The agreeableness of a thing depends not merely on its own likeableness, but on the number of people who can be got to like it. Ruskin.

likamt, n. [F. dial. leccam; < ME. likam, licam, likame, licame, lykam, lykame, lycome, lighame, licham, lichame, etc., < AS. lichama, lichoma (= OS. likhama = OFries. lirkhoma, lichma = D. licham, licheham = MLG. licham, lichame = OHG. lirkhama, lichamo, MIHG. lichame (also OHG. lirkhama, lirkhama, MIHG. lichame, G. leichnam) = Icel. likamr, likami = Sw. (obs.) lekamen = Dan. legeme), body, lit. 'body-covering,' < lie, body, + hama, a covering; see *like*¹ and *hame*¹. The compound has a poetical aspect, and doubtless originated in poetical use, like the equiv. AS. flāschoma, 'flesh-covering,' bāncōsa, 'bone-chamber,' bānfāt, 'bone-vessel,' bānhūs, 'bone-house,' bānloca, 'bone-chest,' etc.] The human body.

As ascres and eremites that holden hem in hure cellys, Coueytunge nogt in contrea to carien a-boute For no lykerouse lyfode hure lykame to plese. Piers Plowman (C), l. 32.

Eue, thou art to blame, To this entysed thou me, Me shamca with my lyghame. York Plays, p. 25.

like¹ (lik), n. [< ME. like, lyke, in southern use assimilated lich,liche,lyche. < AS. lic, the body (the living body, but also sometimes a dead body), = OS. lirk = OFries. lirk = D. lirk = MLG. lirk, lich, ent., = OHG. lirk, n., f., MIHG. lich,liche, f., G. leiche, f., the body, a dead body, = Icel. lik = Sw. lik = Dan. lig, a dead body, = Goth. leik, the body, flesh. From this noun, besides the assimilated form *lich*¹, and the compounds likam and likewake, lich-wake, liehgate, etc., are ult. derived *like*², a. and n., (prob.) *like*³, v. and n., with their derivatives, and the suffixes *-ly*¹, *-ly*², as well as the terminations of each, *every*¹, such (Se. sic), thilk, which (whilk, etc.) 1. Body; form; the body of a human being or of any animal.

That in a mannes lyke
The devot to this mayden com.
MS. Coll. Trin. Oxon. 57. (Halliwell.)

Thanne hadde Witte a wyf was hote dame Studie,
That lene was of here and of liche bothe.
Piers Plowman (B), x. 2.

Out of her womanishe hende
Into a briddes like I finde
She was transformed forth withall.
Gower, Conf. Amant., v.

2. A dead body; a corpse.

Ear on the morn, when it was day,
Three likes were ta'en frae the castie fair;
Sir Oluf the leal, and his bride sae fair,
And his mither, that died w' sorrow and care.
Sir Oluf and the Elf-King's Daughter (Child's Ballads, I. 301).

like² (lik), a. and n. [< ME. like, lyke, lijk, lyk, also assimilated lich, liche, lyche; not, as stated in the dictionaries, < AS. lic*, like, there being no such AS. adj., but, by aphesis, in later ME., from the earlier ME. alike, ilyke, alyche, alike, alyke, alyche, etc., < AS. gelic, etc., like (gelica, n., one like), the numerous ME. forms being merged in E. alike: see alike, where the relation to *like*¹, AS. lic, body, is explained.] 1. a. 1. Of similar form, appearance, or quality; of corresponding kind, amount, extent, degree, etc.; corresponding; equal or equivalent; analogous; agreeing in some noticeable respect: as, territory of like extent; two men of like pursuits and tastes.

Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are.
Jas. v. 17.

If the men be both nought, their praiers be both like.
Sir T. More, Cumfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 44.

But thou and I are one in kind,
As moulded like in nature's mint.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxxix.

In proportion as the like units of an aggregate are exposed to unlike forces, they tend to form differentiated parts of the aggregate. H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 455.

2. Having resemblance; similar in any respect; resembling: followed by to or a dative case (sometimes by as), the word or phrase governed by to being, however, often omitted: as, they are like (to each other) as two peas. [Like is frequently affixed to nouns to form adjectives denoting resemblance or in the manner of, as childlike, magnet-like.]

It was nocht no humayn body lyke,
But more better senned a thyng angell-lyke.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 937.

He was lothly to looke on;
He was lyker a devill then a man.
Bevis of Hampton. (Halliwell.)

Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods?
Ex. xv. 11.

But thou art the likest Auld Maitland
That ever I did see.
Auld Maitland (Child's Ballads, VI. 224).

Ros. O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!
Prin. Anything like?
Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 39.

Come back into memory, like as thou wert in the day-spring of thy fancies.
Lamb, Christ's Hospital.

3. Likely; liable. [Archaic or provincial.]

Or that wayneris in wer what shall worthe of;
Liker at the last end in langore to bide,
And turne unto torior, then any triet loye.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 2254.

He is like to die for hunger in the place where he is.
Jer. xxxviii. 9.

Who was dead,
Who married, who was like to be.
Tennyson, Audley Court.

Had like, with a present or past infinitive, a colloquial expression for was likely, came near: as, the wall had like to fall (or to have fallen) upon me; he had like to be (or to have been) defeated.

Forth is at Bury; but he fell so between two forms as he had like, between both, to have fallen back to Boxford.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 405.

Yet they adventured to go back; but it was so dark, and the flood was so high, that, in their going back, they had like to have been drowned nine or ten times.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 173.

Something like, used elliptically, something like the thing desired or aimed at; what one wants: as, that is something like.—Such like, of that kind: a pleonasm for either such or like.

Ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.
Mark vii. 8.

They found a large crucifix, copes, rich vestments, beads, and heaps of such like trumpery.
Walpole, Letters, II. 16.

To feel like, to have inclination for; be disposed to: followed by a verbal noun in *-ing*¹: as, he felt like refusing. [Colloq.]

He did not feel like returning to his solitary room.
R. B. Kimball, Was He Successful?

To look like, to show likelihood or probability of; be in a state for: as, the weather looks like clearing. [Colloq.] = Syn. Allied, cognate, analogous, parallel.

II. n. A person or thing resembling another; a counterpart; a resemblance; a similar character, condition, or example.

His living like saw never living eye.
Spenser, F. Q., I. vii. 8.

He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.
Shak., Hamlet, i. 2. 188.

Your ladye has a steed,
The like o' him 'a no in the land o' Leed.
Wiltie's Ladye (Child's Ballads, I. 164).

What more natural then every like to produce his like, man to beget man, fire to propagate fire?
Milton, Church-Government, i. 4.

Like cures like, a popular translation of the homeopathic maxim similia similibus curantur, literally 'like things are cured by like things'.—The like, whatever is similar or akin to that which has been named; something of a similar or comparable character.

I am a stranger to any ceremonies used by them in Marriage, or at the Birth of a Child, or the like, if they use any.
Dampier, Voyages, II. l. 50.

He is master of a certain set of words, as Unity, Style, Fire, Phlegm, Essay, Natural, Turn, Sentiment, and the like.
Addison, Sir Timothy Tittle.

There are one or two fragments of columns and the like put to new uses.
E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 63.

like² (lik), adv. [< ME. like, lyke, by aphesis for alike: see alike, adv., and cf. *like*², a.] 1. In the same or a similar manner; equally; correspondingly.

The thirde daye that thise children rode to-geder lyke as that ye haue herde.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 191.

Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him.
Ps. ciii. 13.

How then can they, like wretched, comfort me?
The which no less need comforted to be.
Lady Penbrooke (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 261).

2. In the manner of; in the same way as.

Be strong, and quit yourselves like men. 1 Sam. iv. 9.

Like one in prayer I stood.
Longfellow, Voices of the Night, Pref.

In the honest bosom of this heroic Dutchman dwelt the seven noble virtues of knighthood, flourishing among his hardy qualities like wild flowers among rocks.
Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 293.

Who the rôle of the priest and the soldier unites,
And, praying like Aaron, like Joshua fights!
Wittier, From Perugia.

[This use of like is so nearly prepositional that the word as properly receives the name of preposition in it as do, for example, save, during, except, in their prepositional constructions.]

3. Likely; probably.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will), I 'd have it copied.
Shak., Othello, iii. 4. 190.

4. As it were; so to speak: used after clauses or phrases with a signification similar to that of like suffixed to nouns. See *like*², a., 2. [Colloq. or provincial.]

They say she was out of her mind like for six weeks or more.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxxv.

A drop of good beer puts new sap into a man. It oils his joints like.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 263.

like blazes. See *blaze*¹.—Like fun. See fun.—Like mad. See *mad*¹.

like² (lik), conj. [< *like*², adv.; being in part an abbr. of like as.] As; as if. This use is commonly condemned as incorrect, and is generally unacknowledged in dictionaries. It occurs several times in Shakspeare, and not unfrequently in modern writers, and is common in colloquial and provincial usage: as, he limped like he had been hurt.

But, like in sickness, did I loathe this food.
Shak., M. N. D., iv. 1. 178.

Through which they put their heads, like the Gauchos do through their cloaks.
Darwin, Jour. of a Naturalist, x.

Like for as is never used in New England, but is universal in the South and West. It has on its side the authority of two kings (ego sum rex Romanorum et supra grammatam), Henry VIII. and Charles I. This was ample, without throwing into the scale the scholar and poet Daniel.
Lowell, Introd. to Biglow Papers.

like²⁺ (lik), v. t.; pret. and pp. liked, ppr. liking. [= D. lijken = MLG. lijken = G. gleichen = Goth. galeikon, liken, compare; from the adj.; see *like*², a. Cf. lijken.] To regard or describe as resembling; liken; compare. [Rare, liken being the form in common use.]

And like me to the peasant boys of France,
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 6. 48.

like³ (lik), v.; pret. and pp. liked, ppr. liking. [< ME. lijken, lyken, < AS. lician, lican, please (= OS. likōn = OFries. likia = D. lijken, suit, = OHG. licēn, lican, MHG. licēn, be like, suit, please, = Icel. lika, please, like, = Goth. leikan, also in comp. galeikan, please); prob. < lic, body, form: see *like*¹. The exact transition of sense is not clear; appar. 'be the form' (for a person—governing the dative), i. e. the form or thing desired. It is usually explained as directly from *like*², a., 'to be like or suitable' (for a person); but the adj. does not exist in the earliest tongues (Goth., AS., and OHG.) except in the full form (Goth. galeiks, AS. gelic, OHG. galih), from which the verb without the prefix (Goth. leikan, AS. lician) could hardly be derived, except by assuming an aphesis impossible at this early period.] I. trans. 1†. To please; be pleasing to; be agreeable to; suit; satisfy: used impersonally, and followed by an object, originally dative, of the person.

I wol you tell a lital thing in proae,
That oughte liken you.
Chaucer, Prolog. to Tale of Melibeeus, l. 20.

I wol ne neuer no werke bigynne,
Lord, but gif it lyke thee.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 252.

The music likes you not.
Shak., T. G. of V., iv. 2. 56.

So soon as we are past through the town, I will endeavour by such discourse as best likes you to pass away the time till you come to your ilk quarters.
Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 227.

[This impersonal construction with the indirect object of the person gave way, in early modern English, to a personal construction, the person being taken as the subject and the thing as the direct object. See def. 2.]

2. To regard with favor; be well affected toward; be pleased with; take pleasure in.

And tho that lykys with me to lende, and trewly tent to me will take.

Sall wonne in weith withoutyn ende.
York Plays, p. 9.

If I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.
Shak., Lear, i. 4. 144.

He first deceas'd; she for a little try'd
To live without him, lik'd it not, and died.
Sir H. Wotton, Death of Sir Albert Morton's Wife.

"Be reasonable, Louis—be patient! I like you because you are patient."

"Like me no longer, then—love me instead."
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xxvii.

I like a monk; I like a cow!;
I love a prophet of the soul.
Emerson, The Problem.

3. To agree with, as food or drink. Halliwell.

[Prov. Eng.] = Syn. 2. Like, Love; be fond of, relish, fancy. Like and love differ greatly in strength or warmth, and may differ in kind. Like may be feeble and cool, and it never has the intensity of love. We may like or even love a person; we only like the most palatable kind of food. With an infinitive, like is the common word, love being appropriate only in the hyperbole of poetical or rhetorical feeling.

II. intrans. 1†. To be suitable or agreeable; give satisfaction.

Come, boys, sing cheerfully; we shall ne'er sing younger. We have chosen a loud tune too, because it should like well.
Fletcher (and others), Bloody Brother, iii. 2.

2. To be pleased or suited; choose: used absolutely, but formerly sometimes followed by of.

But when the nightiest began to like of the Christian faith, by their means whole free states and kingdoms became obedient unto Christ.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, viii. 6.

You have been somewhat bolder in my house
Than I could well like of.
Middleton, Chaste Maid, v. 2.

He may either go or stay, as he best likes.
Locke.

3. To thrive; grow. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

like³ (lik), n. [< *like*³, v.] A liking; a fancy; an inclination: used chiefly in the phrase likes and dislikes.

She used to say, "It was not her likes, but her husband's, or she'd have had me back."

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 561.

The editor of a magazine should be above personal likes and dislikes, and write articles upon their merits.
G. W. Curtis, Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 475.

like⁴ (lik), v. i. [< *like*², a., 3.] To be likely; chiefly or only in the preterit liked, equivalent to had like. See *like*², a. [Rare.]

He probably got his death, as he liked to have done two years ago, by viewing the troops for the expedition from the wall of Kensington-Garden.

Walpole, Letters, II. 193. (Davies.)

likeable, likeableness. See likable, likableness.

likehood (lik'hūd), n. [= D. getijckheid = MHG. gelicheit, glicheit, G. gleichheit = Dan. lighed = Sw. likhet; as *like*² + -hood.] Likelihood. [Very rare.]

likelihood, n. [ME. liklihed; < likely + -head. Cf. likelihood.] Same as likelihood. Chaucer.

likelihood (lik'li-hūd), n. [< likely + -hood.] 1. The state of being likely or probable; probability; likeness; premise.

What likelihood of his amendment?
Shak., Rich. III., i. 3. 33.

By all likelihood these Ridges of Mountains do run in a continued Chain from one end of Peru and Chili to the other.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 95.

We were looking for an anchoring-place where there was a likelihood of fishing.
Froude, Sketches, p. 72.

2. Promising state or appearance; standing; consideration. [Archaic.]

Left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iii. 2. 45.

3. That which is probable; a probability; an indication.

Likelihoods are those [arguments] that often hit the truth, and yet are not always so; as thus: Soche a young manna talketh often and that alone with such a young maide. Ergo, he is in love with her.

Sir T. Wilson, Rule of Reason.

Against which testimonies, likelihoods, evidences, and apparent actions of his own, being so abundant, the bare denyall of one man, though with imprecation, cannot in any reason countervaille.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xii.

4†. Likeness; resemblance; similarity.

There is no likelihood between pure light and black darkness, or between righteousness and reprobation.
Raleigh.

likelihood (lik'li-nes), n. [< ME. likliness, lyklinesse; < likely + -ness.] The condition or quality of being likely. (a) Probability. (b) Suitableness; agreeableness. (c) Likeness.

That the knew not his favours likelihoods,
For many scarres and many hoary heares.
Spenser, F. Q., V. vii. 39.

likely (lik'li), a. [< ME. likli; by apheresis for *likli, < AS. geliclic, likely, apt, < gelic, like; see like², a., and -ly¹.] 1†. Similar; congenial; kindred.

Love is a celestiall harmonie
Of likely hartis.
Spenser, In Honour of Beautie, l. 198.

2. That may be suitable; preferred for a particular reason or purpose; fit or adapted, or giving promise of being so: as, a likely subject for satire.

In that batell Darell was Baner,
And, as the story seith in euerie wise,
He was a likely knight for that office.
Gentrydes (E. E. T. S.), l. 2107.

Venator. Now Piscator, where will you begin to fish?
Piscator. We are not yet come to a likely place.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 61.

The swag-shopkeepers can always find customers "for anything likely," with the indispensable proviso that it is cheap.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, l. 487.

3. Having likeness to truth; that seems or that may be true; credible; probable: as, a likely story.

Most likely 'tis for you.
Shak., Cor., i. 2. 16.
Sore hath been their fight,
As likeliest was when two such foes met arm'd.
Milton, P. L., vi. 688.

It seems likely that he was in hope of being busy and conspicuous.
Johnson, Otway.

Hence—4. Within the limits of probability; having a tendency; so situated or constituted that he or it will probably be or do something indicated: followed by an infinitive.

Many things happen, not likely to ensue from any promises of antecedencies.
Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., ii. 6.

The election of the speaker showed that the duke was not likely to have his own way in the assembly.
Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 348.

It is proverbial that, if a man does not care for himself, he is not likely to care much for other people.
Foster, Shaftesbury and Hutcheson, p. 97.

5†. Liable to happen or come about; in prospect or expectation.

Have you heard of no likely was toward, 'twixt the Duke of Cornwall and Albany?
Shak., Lear, ii. 1. 11.

Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., l. 3. 63.

6. Such as may be liked; likable; pleasing; agreeable; commendable; promising; good.

Thou art as likely a fellow as any is in the company.
Middleton (and others), The Widow, l. 2.

Those argent fields more likely habitants,
Translated saints, or middle spirits, hold.
Milton, P. L., iii. 400.

From 30 to 60 likely young horses.
Mass. Mercury, April 29, 1796.

He it was who had let her know when Haytersbank Farm had been to let, esteeming it a likely piece of land for his uncle to settle down upon.

Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, iv.

His wife was that Cack was a . . . likely young man, and his time was a very respectable woman.

H. B. Stone, Oldtown, p. 11.

=Syn. 4. Apt, Likely, etc. See apt.

likely (lik'li), adv. [< likely, a.] Probably; as may reasonably be supposed.

like-minded (lik'min'ded), a. Having a like disposition or purpose; animated by the same spirit or temper; having the same or similar thoughts and tendencies.

Full ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.
Phil. ii. 2.

liken (li'kn), v. t. [< ME. liknen, lyknen, likenen = MLG. likenen = Dan. ligne = Sw. likna; as like², a., + -en¹ (3). Cf. like², v.] 1†. To make like; cause to resemble.

I will her liken to a laddie worm,
That warps about the stone.
The Laddie Worm of Spindleston-heugh (Child's Ballads, l. 282).

It is remarkable how exactly the occasional deviations from its fundamental principles in a free constitution, and the temporary introduction of arbitrary power, liken it to the worst despotisms.
Brougham.

2. To represent, declare, or describe as like or similar; compare.

Lillwhite was hurliche to likne the heurde [lady];
Where is ther lengged in lond a Lady so sweete?
Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. E. T. S.), l. 195.

Men may well lykne that Bryd [the phoenix?] unto God;
he cause that there nys no God but on.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 48.

And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God?
Mark iv. 30.

Well may the preacher and the ploughman be likened together.
Latimer, Sermon of the Plough.

likeness (lik'nes), n. [< ME. liknesse, liknes, lyknes, by apheresis from liknes, < AS. gelicnes, rarely licnes (= OS. gelienassi, gelicnessi, gelicnussi = D. gelikenis = MLG. likenisse = OHG. gelihmissi, gelihnissi, chilihmissa, MHG. gelichnisse, gelichnusse, G. gleichnis), form, semblance, image, likeness, < gelic, like, alike; see alike, like², a., and -ness.] 1. The state of being like or alike; the relation of two or more objects which agree in respect to some quality; similitude; similarity; resemblance.

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.
Gen. i. 26.

I see thee what thou art, and know
Thy likeness to the wise below,
Thy kindred with the great of old.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxiv.

While Spalato is putting on the likeness of a busy modern town, Traù has nothing to show but its ancient memories.
E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 180.

2. That which resembles something else; an express representation or copy; an effigy; especially, a portrait of a person, or a representation of an animal or other object.

What seem'd his head
The likeness of a kingly crown had on.
Milton, P. L., ii. 673.

Here, take my Likeness with you, whilst 'tis so.
Cowley, The Mistress, My Picture.

likeroust, a. See likerous.

likewake (lik'wak), n. [Also lykewake, also assimilated liekewake (also by corruption lake-wake, latewake); < ME. *likewake, lykewak, liekewake; < like¹, lieh, a dead body, + wake, a watching; see like¹ and wake¹, n.] A watch over a dead body.

Ne how Arcyte is brent to asshen colde,
Ne how that lieh-wake was yholda
Al thilke night, ne howe the Greke pleye
The wake-pleyea, ne kepe I nat to seye.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 2100.

The night it is her low lykewake,
The morn her buriall day.
Young Benjie (Child's Ballads, II. 303).

likewise (lik'wiz), adv. [Abbrev. of in like wise. Cf. Dan. ligervis.] In like manner; moreover; also; too.

The same Thursdaye we sayled, styll trausersynge ye see ayenst ye wynde; and so lyke wyse we ydye ye nyght fol-lowynge.
Sir R. Guyfforde, Pygrymage, p. 61.

Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.
Luke x. 37.

As there were many reformers, so likewise there were many reformations.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, l. 4.

likin (li'kën'), n. [Chin., < li, the thousandth part of a tael, + kin, money.] A tax, originally of one cash per tael on the value of all sales, imposed by the people of China upon themselves, in order to make up the deficiency in the land-tax, during the Taiping rebellion (1850-64). It was to be set apart for military purposes only, and was intended to be merely a temporary measure. It is still levied, however, and has been recognized in treaties by the foreign nations trading with China. The rate varies at the different barriers all over the country; but foreign-owned goods are exempted from this and other local exactions by transit passes, which are issued by the customs authorities on the payment of a commutation of 2½ per cent. ad valorem. Also spelled lekta.

There were imposed special taxes, or likin dues [in China], on many commodities.
U. S. Cons. Rep., No. 70 (1886), p. 260.

liking (li'king), n. [< ME. liking, likinge, lykynge; verbal n. of like³, v.] 1. The state of being pleased with something; favor; approval; inclination; pleasure: as, one's liking for a friend; he took a liking to the place.

Yours lykynge is that I shal telle a tale.
Chaucer, ProL. to Pardoner's Tale, l. 160.

That liked, but had a rougher task in hand
Than to drive liking to the name of love.
Shak., Much Ado, I. 1. 302.

Friendships begin with liking or gratitude.
George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xxxii.

2. A favorable or pleasing condition; attractive appearance; comeliness; in general, appearance. [Obsolete or archaic.]

They not onely gine it no manner of grace at all, but rather do disfigure the stuffe and spili the whole workmanship, taking away all bewtie and good liking from it.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 115.

Their young ones are in good liking.
Job xxxix. 4.

I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking.
Shak., M. W. of W., II. 1. 57.

On liking, on trial or probation; on approval: as, to engage a servant on liking.

Forced with regret to leave her native sphere,
Came but a while on liking here.
Dryden, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 153.

Pray excuse him, madam; . . . he [the waiter] is a very young man on liking, and we don't like him.

Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, iv. 4.

=Syn. 1. Predilection, attachment, etc. See love¹.

liking† (li'king), a. [< ME. likinge, lykynge; ppr. of like³, v.] Pleasing; comely; good-looking.

I wot no lady so liking.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 568.
She, thus in blake, lykynge to Troilus,
Over alle thinge, he stod for to beholde.
Chaucer, Troilus, l. 303.

likingly†, adv. [< ME. likingly; < liking, a., + -ly².] Pleasantly; agreeably.

Myn herte fill down vnto my too
That was woont sitten ful likingly.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 91.

likingness†, n. [ME. likingnes; < liking, a., + -ness.] Pleasingness.

This hauk of herte in zouthie y-wysa
Pursueth cure this feisaunt hen;
This feisaunt hen is likingnes.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 93.

lil, a. See lil³.

lilac (li'lak), n. and a. [Formerly also lilach, lelack; dial. laylock; = F. lilas, < Sp. lilac = Pg. lilaz = Bulg. lilak, ljuleka = Bohem. lilak = Pol. lilak = Turk. leilag, < Ar. lilak, < Pers. lilaj, lilanj, lilang, lilae (f), prop. the indigo-plant, with alteration of the initial consonant, < nilah (also nil = Hind. Ar. nil), the indigo-plant (nilak, bluish), < Skt. nila, dark-blue indigo, nili, indigo-plant. Cf. anil.] I, n. 1. A shrub of the genus Syringa. See Syringa. The common lilacs are S. vulgaris and S. Persica, with their varieties; they abound, especially the former, as ornamental plants, cultivated for their beauty and fragrance. S. vulgaris is the larger species, having heart-shaped leaves and large thyriform clusters of purple flowers—the ordinary purple lilac or Scotch lilac, or, with white flowers, the common white lilac. There is also a blue-flowered variety. S. Persica, the Persian lilac, is a smaller, slender shrub, with looser panicles and pale flowers, blooming later, and also having a white variety. Countess Josika's lilac, S. Josikaea, discovered by the Countess von Josika in Transylvania, is a tall shrub with elliptical-lanceolate wrinkled leaves and bluish-purple scentless flowers. The Himalayan lilac, S. Knodii, is large, with dense panicles, but is not preferred to the common lilac. The lilac was formerly called pipe-tree or pipe-priests, and blue-jeep, on account of the large pith that could easily be bored out of the straight shoots to make pipe-stems. The common lilac has febrifugal properties. (See lilacine.) An oil is extracted from it for use in perfumery. The name lilac has also been given to various plants having some resemblance to the true lilac (see phrases below).

A fountain of white marble with a lead cesterne, which fountain is set round with six trees called lelack trees.
Survey of Nowshah Palace, 1650 (Archæologia, [V. 434]. (Darcia).

2. The color of the common lilac-blossom; a pale-purple color. A color-disk composed of one half artificial ultramarine, one sixth Chinese vermilion, and one third white will give a lilac.—African lilac, Melia Azedarach.—Australian lilac, the labiate plants Prostanthera violacea and P. lusanthos.—Charles X. lilac, the variety grandiflora of S. vulgaris, a form with particularly large and fine panicles.—German lilac, an old provincial name for a valerian, probably the red valerian, Centaurea rubra.—Hungarian lilac. Same as Countess Josika's lilac. See def. 1.—Indian lilac, the crape-myrtle, Lagerstræmia Indica, a beautiful lythraceous shrub from China, bearing large rose-colored flowers. It is hardy in the latitude of Washington, D. C. Sometimes, also, Melia Azedarach.—Victorian lilac. See Hardenbergia.—West Indian lilac, Melia Azedarach.

II. a. Of the light-purple color of the flower of the common lilac.

So Willy and I were wedded; I wore a lilac gown;
And the ringers rang with a will, and he gave the ringers a crown.
Tennyson, The Grandmother.

lilaceous (li-lä'shius), a. [< lilac + -eous (ac-com. to -aceous).] Of the color of lilac: as, the lilaceous throat of a humming-bird.

lilac-gray (li'lak-grä), n. A very pale violet color. A color-disk composed of one third artificial ultramarine and two thirds white might be called a lilac-gray.

lilacine (li'lä-sin), n. [< lilac + -ine².] In chem., a bitter principle found in the lilac.

lilac-mildew (li'lak-mil'dü), n. A fungus, Microsphaera Friesii, infesting the leaves of the lilac.

lilac-rust (lil'ak-rust), n. Same as lilac-mildew.
lilacthroat (lil'ak-thrôt), n. A humming-bird of the genus Phicolema.

lilburn, n. [Origin obscure; perhaps < lile, contr. of little, + ME. burn, berne, etc., a man; see bern.] A heavy, stupid fellow. Halliwel.

Ye are such a calfe, such an asse, such a blocke,
 Such a lilburne, such a hoball, such a lobcocke.
Udall, Roister Doister, iii. 3.

lile, a. A dialectal contraction of little. Compare lills.

Liliaceæ (lil-i-ã'sê-dê), n. pl. [NL. (S. Endlicher), < L. Lilium, q. v., + -aceæ.] An order of monocotyledonous plants, characterized by the regular symmetrical and almost always hexandrous flowers, with a non-glumaceous perianth which is free from the generally three-celled ovary. There are, with one exception, six stamens, one before each division of the perianth. The fruit is a pod or berry containing from few to many seeds having a small embryo in copious albumen. It is a large order dispersed widely round the world, and containing about 2,300 species of herbs, shrubs, and trees. Many genera, as Lilium, Tulipa, Hyacinthus, furnish beautiful garden-flowers; some, as Allium, yield esculent bulbs; a few, as Aloe, supply important medicines; and Phoridium and a few others yield a textile fiber.

lilaceous (lil-i-ã'shius), a. [< LL. lilaceus, of or belonging to a lily, < L. lilium, a lily; see lily.] Pertaining to or characteristic of lilies, or plants of the order Liliaceæ; lily-like.

lillet, n. An obsolete spelling of lily.

lilied (lil'id), a. [< lily + -ed.] 1. Abounding in or embellished with lilies.

By sandy Ladon's lilied banks.
Milton, Arcades, i. 97.

2. Resembling lilies, especially in color.

She was the fairest of all the lilied brood.
J. Wilson, Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, p. 6.

Shrinking Caryatides
 Of just-tinged marble, like Eve's lilied flesh Beneath her Maker's finger. Browning, Sordello.

liliform (lil'i-fôrm), a. [< L. lilium, lily, + forma, form.] Having the general form of a lily-flower. [Rare.]

liliformed (lil'i-fôrm'd), a. [< liliform + -ed.] Same as liliform.

Pateres of glazed ware with broad flattened rims of tasseled or liliformed patterns found at Canterbury.
Jour. Brit. Archæol. Ass., XII. 73.

Lilium (lil'i-um), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < L. lilium, a lily; see lily.] A genus of plants of the order Liliaceæ, belonging to the tribe Tulipeæ, distinguished from the related genera by the versatile anthers. The flowers are either erect or nodding, and have as a rule a funnel-shaped perianth of six segments, with six stamens and a three-lobed stigma. There are about 45 species, found in the northern temperate regions of the world. They all have scaly bulbs, some of which are edible, as those of L. Martagon, eaten by the Cossacks, and those of L. tigrinum (the tiger-lily) and others in China and Japan. Their chief value, however, lies in the beauty of their flowers. For the species, see lily.

lill† (lil), v. i. and t. [Early mod. E. lylle; a var. of loll.] To loll.

Dreadfull Cerberus
 His three deformed heads did lay along, . . .
 And lilled forth his bloody flaming tongue.
Spenser, F. Q., I. v. 34.

lill² (lil), n. [Origin obscure.] 1. One of the holes of a wind-instrument. [Scotch.]—2. A small pin. Draper's Dictionary.

lill³, lil (lil), a. A dialectal contraction of little. Also lile. [Southern U. S.; in negro use.]

Lille lace. See lace.

Lilibullero, Liliburlero (lil'i-bu-lê-rô, -bêr-lê-rô), n. Originally, it is said, a watchword of the Irish Roman Catholics in their massacre of the Protestants in 1641; afterward, the name of a song burlesquing the former, said to have been written by Lord Wharton, which was extremely popular in England during and after the revolution of 1688, having the refrain "Lero, lero, lili burlero," etc.

Lilliputian (lil-i-pû'shan), a. and n. [< Lilliput (see def.) + -ian.] I. a. 1. Pertaining to Lilliput, an imaginary kingdom described in Swift's "Travels of Lemuel Gulliver," or to its people, feigned to be pygmies about six inches high. Hence—2. Of minute size.

II. n. 1. An inhabitant of the imaginary kingdom of Lilliput.—2. A person of diminutive size; a very small dwarf.

lillypilly (lil'i-pil-i), n. [Australian.] A tree of the myrtle family, Eugenia Smithii (Acmena floribunda), found in Australia. It is a slender but sometimes tall tree, with terminal panicles of abundant white flowers, and a very hard and heavy wood. Also called Australian myrtle.

lilt (lilt), v. [< ME. liltten, hultten; origin obscure.] I. trans. 1†. To sound.

Loude alarom vpon launde lilted was thenne.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 1207.

2. To sing or play in snatches, and with easy, tripping grace, as a song or a tune; utter or pour forth with sprightliness, animation, or gaiety.

Our Jenny sings aatly the "Cowden Broom knowes,"
 And Roale *lilt*s awiftly the "Milking the ewe."
Ramsay, Gentle Shepherd, ii. 4.

The Muse shall . . .
 Such enchantment lilt to thee
 That thou shalt hear the life-blood flow
 From farthest stars to grass-blades low.
Lowell, To the Muse.

II. intrans. 1. To sing or play a tune in a sprightly, tripping manner; utter musical sounds flowingly and cheerfully.

Lassea a' litting before the break of day.
Jane Elliot, Flowers of the Forest.

Mak' haste an turn king David owre,
 An' lilt wi' holy clangor.
Burns, The Ordination.

2. To do anything with dexterity or quickness; spring; hop. [Rare.]

Whether the bird flit here or there,
 O'er table lilt, or perch on chair.
Wordsworth, The Redbreast.

lilt (lilt), n. [< lilt, v.] 1. A snatch of a cheerful, lively song; a short, smooth-flowing, tripping air or tune.

The blithest *lilt*s that e'er my lugs heard aung.
Ramsay, Poems, II. 390.

Hence—2. Cadence; rhythmic swing or flow.

This faculty of hitting on the precise lilt of thought and measure that shall catch the universal ear and sing themselves in everybody's memory is a rare gift.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 336.

The lilt and melody of Shelley, joined to precision of thought and outline. Stedman, Poets of America, p. 165.

lilting (lil'ting), a. [< ME. lilting; ppr. of lilt, v.] Played or sung in an animated manner; giving lively utterance to a lilt or song.

Many a flowte and lilting horne,
 And pipes made of greene corne.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1223.

lily (lil'i), n. and a. [Formerly also lilly, lillie; < ME. lilie, < AS. lilic, lilige = OS. lilli = D. lilie = OHG. lilja, MHG. lilje (also gilje), G. lilie = Icel. lilja = Dan. lilie = Sw. lilja = F. lis = OSp. lilito, Sp. Pg. lirio (Sp. also lis, < F.) = It. giglio (> Croatian zhilj) = Pol. lilija, lilia = Serv. liljan = Russ. lilija = Hung. liliom, < L. lilium = Serv. lir, lizer, < Gr. λεῖπιον, a lily.] I. n.; pl. lilies (-iz). 1. A plant of the genus Lilium, or its flower. In the four native species of the eastern United States the perianth is colored from Lily (Lilium superbum).

 1. Upper part of the plant with flowers. 2. Lower part of the plant with bulbs. a, stamen; b, pistil; c, fruit.

yellow to scarlet, with purple or brown spots on the inside. They are: the wild orange-red lily, L. Philadelphicum, with flowers erect and sepals not recurved, common in sandy soil; the Southern red lily, L. Catesbaei, with solitary erect flowers and recurved sepals; L. Canadense, with several nodding flowers and the sepals recurved, common in the north; and the American Turk's-cap or swamp-lily, L. superbum, with a pyramidal panicle, often with 20 or sometimes even 40 blossoms, found on low grounds at the north. Among the eight species of the Pacific slope are the Washington lily, L. Washingtonianum, often with as many as 20 large and fragrant white flowers, becoming purplish in a thyrsoid raceme; the panther-lily, L. pardalinum; and Humboldt's lily, L. Humboldtii. Among European species are the Martagon lily, L. Martagon, found wild in Europe and in Siberia, and cultivated from time immemorial, the varietal differing in color; the bulb-bearing lily, L. bulbiferum, with orange-red flowers and bulbets in the axilla of the upper leaves, a plant of the region of the Alps, long known to gardeners; and the white or Madonna lily, L. candidum, also called annunciation lily, found wild in the northern Mediterranean countries. Among the fine Asiatic lilies are the lance-leaved or spear-leaved lily, L. speciosum (lanceifolium), from Corea and Japan, with white flowers more or less suffused or spotted with pink, and with the lower part of the sepals covered with papillae; the giant lily, L. giganteum, the largest of the genus, from the Himalayan region; and the tiger-lily, L. tigrinum, so called from its spots, a plant introduced from China and known everywhere. There are many other less-known lilies.

Softur then watur or eny lcolour,
 Or dewz that lith on the lille flour,
 Was Cristea bodi in blod colour.
Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 139.

Lay her in lillies and in violets.
Spenser, Epithalamion, l. 302.

2. Any one of many plants resembling the lily.—3. The end of a compass which points to the north; so called from being frequently ornamented with a lily or fleur-de-lis.

If we place a needle touched at the foot of tonga or andirons, it will obvert or turn aside its lille or north point, and conform its cusps or south extrem with the andiron.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 2.

African lily, a plant of the genus Agapanthus.—Atamasco lily, Zephyranthes Atamasco. See Zephyranthes, and also Amaryllis.—Belladonna lily. See Amaryllis.—Blackberry lily, Belamcanda (Parthenoclis) Chinensis, of the iris family.—Calla lily. See calla, 3.—Day-lily. See Hemerocallis.—Fleur-de-lis of three lilies. See Fleur-de-lis.—Florentine lily. See giglio.—Jacobæa lily, Sprekelia formosissima.—Knight's-star lily. See Hippeastrum.—Lent-lily, the daffodil.—Lilies of France, the fleurs-de-lis which constitute the distinctive armorial bearing of the ancient royal family of France, and figured on the French royal standard.

But Magua is pledged not to anly the lilies of France.
Cooper, Last of Mohicans, xvii.

Lily of the flag, in her, a fleur-de-lis, as borne in the arms of France.—Mexican lily, Amaryllis reginae, a plant with beautiful scarlet flowers.—Pond-lily, the spatterdock, genus Nuphar (Nymphaea); also, the common species of Nymphaea (Castalia).—Water-lily, most often Nymphaea (Castalia). See water-lily.—Yellow lily, the gold-lily. See def. 1, above.

II. a. Resembling a white lily, especially in purity; pure; unsullied.

By Cupid's dove,
 And so thou shalt! and by the lily truth
 Of my own breast, thou shalt, beloved youth!
Keats, Endymion, iv.

Elaine, the lily maid of Astolat,
 High in her chamber up a tower to the caat Guarded the sacred shield of Lancelot.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

lily-beetle (lil'i-bê'tl), n. A beetle, Crioceris merdiger.

lily-enclinite (lil'i-en'kri-nit), n. Same as stone-lily. See enclinite.

lily-faced (lil'i-fâst), a. Pale-faced; affectedly modest or sensitive.

Like a squeamish dame,
 Shrink and look lily-faced.
J. Baillie.

lily-handed (lil'i-hân'ded), a. Having white, delicate hands; hence, effeminate.

No little lily-handed Baronet he,
 A great broad-shoulder'd genial Englishman.
Tennyson, Princess, Conclusion.

lily-hyacinth (lil'i-hi'ã-sinth), n. A bulbous perennial plant with blue flowers, Scilla Liliohyacinthus.

lily-iron (lil'i-i'êrn), n. In whaling, the detachable barbed head of a harpoon. There are two barbs, and between them, a little to one side and at an angle with the axis of the head, is fixed the harpoon-shank, which carries the line. The harpoon, owing to this peculiarity of form, penetrates the whale's body in a curved course, and thus secures a firm hold.

lilyliver (lil'i-liv'êr), n. A white-livered person; a coward.

I always knew that I was a lily-liver.
Thackeray, Roundabout Papers, xii.

lily-livered (lil'i-liv'êrd), a. White-livered; cowardly.

Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
 Thou lily-liver'd boy.
Shak., Macbeth, v. 3. 17.

lily-of-the-valley (lil'i-ôv-thê-val'i), n. See Convallaria.

lily-pad (lil'i-pad), n. The broad leaf of a water-lily, especially as it lies upon the water in its place of growth. [U. S.]

A deer had been down to eat the lily-pads at the foot of the lake the night before.
C. D. Warner, Backlog Studies, p. 145.

lily-star (lil'i-stâr), n. Same as feather-star.
lily-white (lil'i-whit), a. [< ME. lilwhite, lilie-whyte; < lily + white.] White as a lily. [Poetical.]

Lord Ronald brought a lily-white doe
 To give his cousin, Lady Clare.
Tennyson, Lady Clare.

limb, n. An obsolete but historically more correct spelling of *limb*¹.

Lima (lī'mā), n. [NL. (Bruguières, 1791), appar. so called from the shape of their shells, < L. lima, a file.] 1. A genus of bivalve mollusks, typical of the family Limidae. The obliquely oval shell gapes anteriorly and has a straight toothless hinge, Lima squamosa. Lima (Plagiotoma) cardiformis.

and the mantle-margin is cirrose. L. hians swims easily like a scallop, with a flapping movement of the valves, spins a byssus, and sometimes builds a nest or burrow. The genus was formerly placed with the scallops in Pectinidae.

2. [l. c.] A member of this genus.

Lima bark. See bark 2.

Limaceæ (lī-mā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lamarek, 1809), < Limax (Limac-) + -ea.] A family of gastropods, typified by the genus Limax, including all the naked terrestrial gastropods. By later systematists its constituents have been distributed among the families Limacidae, Arionidae, Vitrinidae, Testacellidae, and Onchidiidae.

limacel, limacelle (līm-ā-sel'), n. [< F. limacelle, dim., < NL. Limax (Limac-), q. v.] The small internal shell of the genus Limax. It has a subquadrangular form, and has no spine, but a marginal nucleus near the posterior end.

limaceous (lī-mā'shi-us), a. [< L. limax (limac-), a snail, slug, + -ous.] Like a slug; of or relating to the Limacidae.

Limaces (lī-mā'sēz), n. pl. [NL., plural of Limax.] Same as Limaceæ. Férussac, 1819.

limacian (lī-mā'shi-an), n. [< L. limax (limac-), a snail, slug, + -ian.] A limacid; a slug, or some related pulmobranchiate.

limacid (līm'ā-sid'), n. A gastropod of the family Limacidae; a slug.

Limacidae (lī-mā'sī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limax (Limac-) + -idae.] A family of land-snails or terrestrial pulmonate gastropods, typified by the genus Limax, accepted with various limitations, sometimes merged in Helicidae; the slugs. In a strict sense now current, the Limacidae are those land-gastropods which have a naked body, the mantle being small, narrow, anterior, and shield-like; the shell reduced to a rudiment and concealed under the mantle; the jaw ribless; and the teeth of three kinds — a central tricuspid, laterals of same height as the central and bicuspid or tricuspid, and marginals differing from the laterals and acuteate, unicuspid, or bicuspid. Wider limits and vaguer characters were assigned to the Limacidae by older authors. The species are of nearly world wide distribution, but most numerous in temperate parts of the northern hemisphere. The slugs of gardens and damp places are familiar examples.

Limax sowerbyi, crawling and at rest.

limaciform (lī-mā'sī-fōrm), a. [< L. limax (limac-), a snail, slug, + forma, form.] Resembling a slug; limaceous. Specifically applied in entomology to certain ovate herbivorous larvae with short or obsolete legs, and having the body covered with a kind of slime, as those of certain Tenthredinidae.

Limacina¹ (lī-mā-sī'nā), n. [NL., < L. limax (limac-), a snail, + -ina.] A genus of pteropods, typical of the family Limaciniidae. L. borealis is one of the animals which form brit or whale-food. Cuvier, 1817.

Limacina antarctica.

Limacina² (lī-mā-sī'nā), n. pl. [NL., < Limax (Limac-) + -ina.] 1. Same as Limacina. Wiegmann, 1832; Macgillivray, 1843. — 2. A subfamily of Helicidae, restricted to the genus Limax: same as Limacinae. J. E. Gray, 1840.

Limacinae (lī-mā-sī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Limax (Limac-) + -inae.] 1. A subfamily of land-snails referred to the family Helicidae, typified by the genus Limax, and variously limited. It is nearly or quite the same as Limacidae. — 2. A family of pteropods containing the genera Limacina and Atlanta. Férussac, 1821.

limacine (līm'ā-sin), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Limacinae or Limacidae, or having their characters; limaciform; limaceous.

II. n. A slug of the subfamily Limacinae or family Limacidae.

Limacinea (lī-mā-sin'ē-ā), n. pl. [NL.] 1. In De Blainville's classification (1825), the third family of his Pulmobranchiata, distinguished from Auriculacea and Limnacea, and containing the genera Succinea, Bulimus, Achatina, Clausilia, Pupa, Helix, Testacella, Parmacella, Limacella, Limax, Onchidium, etc. It is thus an enormous group, equivalent to the suborder Geophila or Stylomatophora, now divided into many modern families, and no longer in use.

2. Same as Limaceæ. Reeve, 1841.

limacinian (lī-mā-sin'ī-an), n. [< limacine + -ian.] A slug or slug-like animal; any limacine.

limacinid (lī-mā-sī'nid), n. A pteropod of the family Limaciniidae.

Limaciniidae (lī-mā-sin'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limacina + -idae.] A family of thecosomatus pteropods, typified by the genus Limacina, with fins attached to the sides of the body and united ventrally by operculigerous lobes, and with a spiral or subspiral shell coiled toward the left. It contains many species, living near the surface of the ocean in different parts of the world. See cut under *Limacina*¹.

Limacodes (lī-mā-kō'dēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λεῖμαξ (> L. limax), a slug, snail (see Limax), + ειδός, form.] A genus of moths sometimes giving name to a family Limacodidae. In Latreille's classification it was put in his third section (Pseudobombyces) of nocturnal Lepidoptera, and characterized by "having the cocoon pillars like wood-lice," whence the name. It is now referred to Arctiidae. L. testudo and L. asellus are examples.

Limacodidae (lī-mā-kōd'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limacodes + -idae.] A family of moths named from the genus Limacodes. The antennae are not pectinated, and the larvae are onisciform. Also called Cochleapodidae, or abandoned to Arctiidae.

limacoid (līm'ā-kōid), a. and n. [< NL. Limax (Limac-) + -oid. Cf. Limacodes.] I. a. Pertaining to the Limacidae or Limacodea, or having their characters.

II. n. A slug of the family Limacidae.

Limacodea (lī-mā-kōi'dē-ā), n. pl. [NL. (Fitzinger, 1833), < Limax (Limac-) + Gr. ειδός, form.] Same as Limaceæ.

limaçon (līm'ā-sen), n. [F., a snail, < L. limax (limac-), a snail.] 1. Any univalve shell. — 2. A curve, invented and named by Pascal, generated from a circle by adding a constant length to all the radii vectors drawn from a point of its circumference as an origin, taking proper account of negative radii vectors. It is a Cartesian, having cusps on the circular points; and it has a single bitangent, which is always real. It has three varieties, all of which are unicursal curves of the fourth order. One of these is the cardioid, which is a single form lying between the other two. It is of the third class. It has no node, but a cusp at the origin, and has no inflections. (See cut under cardioid.) All other limaçons are of the fourth class. Those lying outside of the cardioid have the origin as an acnode, and two real inflections; those lying within the cardioid have a cunode at the origin, and two imaginary inflections. For a crunodal limaçon, see Cartesian, n. 2.

Limadæ (līm'ā-dē), n. pl. See Limidæ.

limailt (lī-mā'lt'), n. [ME., also lymailt, lymaille, < OF. limaite, F. limaille (= Sp. limalla = Pg. limatha), filings, < limcr, file, < L. limare, file: see limation.] Filings of any metal.

Acnodal Limaçon.

Therein put was of silver lymaille
An ounce, and stopp'd was, withouten sayle,
The hole with wax, to kepe the lymail in.
Chaucer, Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 151.

Limapontia (lī-mā-pon'tsi-ā), n. [NL. (Forbes, 1832), < Limax + Gr. πόντος, sea.] A genus of slug-like nudibranchiates, typical of the family Limapontiidae.

Limapontiidae (lī'mā-pon-ti'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limapontia + -idae.] A family of nudibranchiate gastropods, typified by the genus Limapontia. The species are slug-like, with a flat head prolonged laterally into simple tentacles, dorsal anus, and no branchiae; the radula has a single row of teeth. They are inhabitants of the coast of the North Atlantic. Also Limapontiidae.

limation (lī-mā'shōn), n. [< LL. limatio (n.), a diminishing (lit. prop. a filing), < L. limare, pp. limatus, file (see limē), < lima, a file: see lima.] The act of filing or polishing. [Rare.]

limature (lī'mā-tūr), n. [= OF. limature, limure = Sp. Pg. limadura = It. limatura, < L. limatura, filings, < limarc, file: see limation.] 1. The act of filing. — 2. Filings; particles removed by a file. [Rare.]

lima-wood (lē'mā-wūd), n. See brasil, 2.

Limax (lī'maks), n. [NL., < L. limax, a slug, snail, kindred with L. limus, slime, mud; cf. Gr.

λίμνη, a marsh.] 1. The typical genus of Limacidae, formerly of great extent and heterogeneous composition, now restricted to the slugs which are without a caudal mucous pore, with a concealed quadrate non-spiral shell or limacel, and a smooth jaw. — 2. [l. c.] In early systems of classification, as the Linnean, the animal or soft body of any univalve, considered apart from its shell, which latter was otherwise classified.

limb¹ (līm), n. [Early mod. E. lim, lym, lymme; < ME. lim, < AS. lim (pl. limu, leomu) = Icel. limr = Sw. Dan. lem, a limb, member of the body.] 1. A part or member of an animal body distinct from the head and trunk; an appendicular member; a leg, an arm, or a wing: often limited in meaning to the leg, at present general out of affected or prudish unwillingness to use the word leg.

He was a moche man and a longe,
In every lym styff and stronge.
M.S. Cantab. Fl. II. 38, l. 74. (Hallivell.)

Some han here Armes or here Lymes alle to broken, and some the sides. Manderlyle, Travels, p. 175.

Of corraige haughty, and of limb
Herole built. Milton, P. L., ix. 481.

I lastly was with Curtis, among the floating batt'ries,
And there I left for witness an arm and a limb.
Burns, Jolly Beggars, I am a Son of Mars.

"A hit of the wing, Roxy, or of the — under limb?"
The first laugh broke out at this.

O. W. Holmes, Elsie Venner, vii.

2. The branch of a tree: applied only to a branch of some size, and not to a small twig. — 3. The part of a bow above or below the grip or handle. — 4. A thing or person regarded as a part of something else; a part; a member: as, a limb of the devil; a limb of the law.

Crye we to Kynde that he come and defende vs,
Foles, fro this fendes lymes for Piers lone the Plowman.
Piers Plowman (B), xx. 70.

That little limb of the devil has cheated the gallowes.
Scott.

5. A mischievous or roguish person, especially a young person; an imp; a scapegrace; a scamp. [Colloq.]

I had it from my maid Joan Hearsay; and she had it from a limb o' the school, she says, a little limb of nine year old.
B. Jonson, Staple of News, iii. 2.

Exarticulate limbs. See exarticulate. — Syn. 1. See member.

limb¹ (līm), v. t. [< *limb*¹, v.] 1. To supply with limbs.

As they please,
They limb themselves, and colour, shape, or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.
Milton, P. L., vi. 352.

2. To dismember; tear or carve off the limbs of: as, to limb a turkey; to limb a tree.

It [a dam] seemed to be built principally of alder poles well limbed off, and placed, roughly speaking, side by side.
Harpur's Mag., LXXXIII. 231.

limb² (līm), n. [< F. limbe = Sp. Pg. It. limbo, < L. limbus, a border, edge, fringe, belt, the zodiac (in NL. esp. the border or outer edge of the sun or moon). Cf. limbus, limbo.] 1. In astron., the border or outermost edge of the disk of the sun or moon.

The star once risen, though only one man in the hemisphere has yet seen its upper limb in the horizon, will mount and mount, until it becomes visible to other men, to multitudes, and climbs the zenith of all eyes.
Emerson, Misc., p. 188.

2. The graduated edge of a circle or other astronomical or surveying instrument, etc. — 3. In zool., the lateral area or marginal band of the cephalic shield of trilobites on either side of the thoracic region. — 4. In bot., the border or upper spreading part of a monopetalous corolla, or of a petal or sepal.

limbat (līm'bat), n. A cooling periodical wind in the island of Cyprus, blowing from the north-west from eight o'clock in the morning until noon or later.

limbate (līm'bāt), a. [< LL. limbatus, edged, < L. limbus, a border, edge: see *limb*².] 1. In bot., bordered: said especially of a flower, etc., in which one color is surrounded by an edging of another. — 2. In zool. and anat., having a limb or limb; bordered; margined: said of various parts and organs.

limb-bearing (līm'bār'ing), a. Furnished with or supporting limbs: said of those segments in arthropods or articulated animals which bear true jointed appendages or their homologues, as the thoracic segments which bear the legs and the cephalic segments which bear the palpi and antennae.

limbec, limbeck (līm'bek), n. [Also limbeke; contr. of alimbec*, alembeic, q. v.] 1. A still.

This blood, together with the opened veins, were stilled in a vessel of lead, drawn thorow a Limbeck.
Sandys, Travailles, p. 168.

2. In her., the representation of an alembic or still used as a bearing.

limbeck, limbeck† (lim'bek), v. t. [limbec, limbeck, n.] To strain or pass through a still.

The greater do nothing but limbeck their brains in the art of alchemy.
Sandys, State of Religion.

limbed (lim'bd), a. [limb¹ + -ed².] Having limbs: used mostly in composition with adjectives: as, strong-limbed, large-limbed, short-limbed.

Timorously hastening from the sickly pale face or feeble limbed suter.
Hakluyt's Voyages, p. 8.

Innumerable living creatures, perfect forms,
Limbd and full grown.
Milton, P. L., vii. 456.

limber¹ (lim'bér), a. [Also formerly or dial. limmer; appar. for limper*, < limp¹ + -er, with freq. (adj.) force.] Easily bent; flexible; pliant; lithe; yielding: as, a limber rod; a limber joint.

You put me off with limber vows.
Shak., W. T., i. 2. 47.

I could skip
Out of my skin now, like a subtle snake,
I am so limber.
B. Jonson, Volpone, iii. 1.

limber¹ (lim'bér), v. t. [limber¹, a.] To cause to become limber; render limber or pliant. [Rare.]

Her stiff hams, that have not been bent to a civility for ten years past, are now limbered into courtesies three deep at every word.

Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, III. 356.

limber² (lim'bér), n. [Also dial. limmer; prob. < Icel. limar, limbs, boughs, branches (hence in E. shafts), pl. of lim, foliage, < limr, a limb (branch): see limb¹.] 1. The shaft or thill of a wagon: usually in the plural.—2. The fore part of the carriage of a field-gun or cannon, consisting of two wheels and an axle, with a framework and a pole for the horses. On the top of the frame are two ammunition-chests (or sometimes one), which serve also as seats for two artillerymen. The limber is connected with the gun-carriage properly so called by an iron hook called the pinde, fastened into an eye in the trail or block which supports the cannon in the rear. When the gun is brought into action, it is unlimbered by unfastening the block from the pinde and laying it on the ground.

Limber.

3. Naut., a hole cut through the floor-limbers as a passage for water to the pump-well.

limber² (lim'bér), v. t. and i. [limber², n.] To attach the limber to, as a gun; fasten together the two parts of a gun-carriage, in preparation for moving away: often with up.

The enemy soon limbered up and fled west.
N. A. Rev., CXXVI. 244.

limber-board (lim'bér-bórd), n. Naut., a short plank placed over a limber-hole to keep out dirt, etc.

limber-box (lim'bér-boks), n. Same as limber-chest.

limber-chain (lim'bér-chān), n. 1. In artillery, a keep-chain which goes round the pinde and confines the trail to the limber, preventing its flying off the limber-hook. Farrow, Mil. Encyc.—2. Naut., a chain lying in the limber-holes of a ship so as to be drawn to and fro to clear the holes.

limber-chest (lim'bér-cest), n. In artillery, the box for ammunition placed on the limber of a field-piece. Sometimes called limber-box.

Some of . . . [the Confederates], springing nimbly on his limber-chests, shot down his horses and then his men.
The Century, XXXVI. 103.

limber-hole (lim'bér-höl), n. Same as limber², 3.

limberness (lim'bér-nes), n. The quality of being limber or easily bent; flexibility; pliancy.

limber-strake (lim'bér-strāk), n. The plank in the floor of a vessel nearest the keelson.

limb-girdle (lim'gér'dl), n. In anat., the bony or gristly apparatus by which a limb is attached to the trunk; the basis of the appendicular skeleton; the shoulder-girdle or hip-girdle; the pectoral or pelvic arch.

limb-guard (lim'gärd), n. Defensive armor for the legs and arms.

limbi, n. Plural of limbus, 2.

limbic (lim'bik), a. Having the character of or pertaining to a limbus or border; bordering; marginal.—limbic lobe, in anat. See lobe.

limb-meal† (lim'mél), adv. [ME. limmele, timemele, < AS. limmætum, limb by limb, < lim, limb, + mælum, dat. pl. of mæl, a portion, meal: see meal², -meal.] Limb by limb; limb from limb piecemeal.

O that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal.
Shak., Cymbeline, ii. 4. 147.

limbo (lim'bō), n. [Orig. in the phrase in limbo, which is wholly L. (ML.): L. in, in; limbo, abl. of limbus, a border, edge, in ML. a supposed region on the border of hell: see limbus. The prep. in being taken as E., the L. abl. noun came to be used as an E. noun.] 1. A supposed border-land of hell; a region which has been believed by many to exist on the borders of hell, and to be the appointed abode of those who have not received the grace of Christ while living, and yet have not deserved the punishments of wilful and impenitent sinners. See the phrases.

What! heris thou noxt this vggely noyse,
Thes lurdans that in limbo dwelle,
Thei make menyng of many joles,
And musteres grete mirthe thame emell.
York Plays, p. 378.

O, what a sympathy of wee ts this,
As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!
Shak., Tit. And., iii. 1. 149.

The gate of Dante's Limbo is left ajar even for the ancient philosophers to slip out.

Lovell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 113.

2. Any similar region apart from this world.

A limbo large and broad, since call'd
The Paradise of Fools.
Milton, P. L., iii. 495.

3. A prison or other place of confinement; any place where things of little or doubtful value are deposited or thrown aside.

He threw it therefore into a limbo of ambiguities.
Bushnell, Nature and the Supernat., v.

Quarantine is a sort of limbo, without the pale of civilized society.
B. Taylor, Lands of the Sarscen, p. 23.

There is a limbo of curious evidence bearing on the subject of pre-natal influences.

O. W. Holmes, Elsie Venner, Pref.

Limbo of infants (limbus infantium or infantium), in Rom. Cath. and scholastic theol., the appointed place after death of infants who die without receiving baptism.—Limbo of the fathers or of the patriarchs (limbus patrum), the place (the outermost circle of hell) where it has been believed the spirits of the righteous who died before the death of Christ were confined until his descent into hell. It has been identified with the "prison" of the spirits to whom Christ preached when "put to death in the flesh" (1 Pet. iii. 18–20).

limb-root (lim'röt), n. In anat., the part of the skeleton which bears a limb. Thus, the pectoral and pelvic arches, or shoulder- and hip-girdles, are the limb-roots respectively of the fore and hind limbs: the actinosts of some fishes are limb-roots.

Limburger cheese. See cheese¹.

limburgite (lim'berg-it), n. [Limburg, a former duchy, now divided between Belgium and the Netherlands, + -ite².] The name given by Rosenbusch to a rock which is related to peridotite, and consists chiefly of olivin and augite with some magnetite and apatite in a variable but largely vitreous magma. It is essentially a basalt destitute of feldspathic constituents. To specimens of this rock from Bohemia the name of magma-basalt was given by Boficky.

limbus (lim'bus), n. [L., a border, edge, ML. esp. as in def. 1 of limbo: see limbo, limb².] 1. Same as limbo, 1.

What thsanne, is limbus lorue, allas!
Garre Satan helpe that we were broken,
This werke is werse thanne euer it was.
York Plays, p. 384.

2. Pl. limbi (-bi). In anat., a border.—Limbus infantium or infantium. See limbo of infants, under limbo.—Limbus laminae spiralis, the membranous spiral cushion resting on the border of the osseous spiral lamina of the cochlea. It extends from the attachment of the membrane of Reissner and terminates externally in a crest overhanging the spiral groove.—Limbus pallialis, the pallial border; the edge of the mantle or mantle flap of a mollusk.—Limbus patrum. See limbo of the fathers, under limbo.

lime¹ (lim), n. [ME. lim, lym, < AS. lim, bitumen, cement, glue, = D. lijm = MLG. lim = OHG. lim, G. leim, glue, = Icel. lim = Sw. Dan. lim, lime, glue; akin to AS. lām, E. loam, to Icel. leir, etc., clay, mud (> E. lair³), and prob. to L. limus, slime, mud; cf. L. linere, smear: see liniment, letter³.] 1. Any viscous substance; especially, a viscous substance laid on twigs for catching birds; bird-lime.

You must lay lime to tangle her desires.
Shak., T. G. of V., iii. 2. 68.

2. An alkaline earth of great economic importance. It is the oxid of the metallic base calcium; but neither this metal nor its oxid occurs in nature in the uncombined condition, although existing in enormous quantity in various combinations. Lime as artificially made for use in the arts is prepared by calcining limestone or marble, or sometimes sea-shells, in properly constructed furnaces, known generally as lime-kilns, or simply kilns. By this process the carbonic acid is driven off from the lime, and the latter remains as an infusible amorphous substance, which is white when pure limestone has been employed. In this condition it is commonly known as quicklime. When exposed to the air it attracts moisture and falls into powder, with greater or less rapidity according to the humidity of the atmosphere and the quality of the lime. This process is called air-slaking. For use in preparing mortar lime is slaked by the addition of water, which is absorbed with avidity and with considerable evolution of heat. Lime may be so slaked that if packed in tight barrels immediately after the slaking it will keep for months without serious change or injury; in most cases, however, the lime is slaked with the addition of a large quantity of water, and is then immediately mixed with the amount of sand deemed suitable for making the desired quality of mortar. (See mortar.) There are few limestones which do not contain a greater or less quantity of sand and clay or of silicates of various bases mixed with the calcareous material. The lime as prepared from various qualities of rocks varies in character with the nature and amount of this foreign admixture. Limestone containing less than 5 or 6 per cent. of impurities yields a rich or, as it is often called, a "fat" lime; with more than that amount the lime is poor, and does not augment in bulk to any considerable extent when slaked with water. When the amount of silica, alumina, etc., in the limestone is increased to above 15 per cent., the lime made from it begins to acquire the property known as "hydraulicity," or of hardening, or "setting," as it is technically called, under water. (See cement, 2.) By far the most extensive use made of lime is as the chief ingredient in mortar; but there are many other purposes to which it is applied when a strong and cheap base is desired. It is of importance in tanning, in various processes of chemical manufacture, as in the preparation of ammonia and the caustic alkalis and of bleaching powder, for fertilizing or ameliorating land, for purifying gas, and for various other purposes. Sulfate of lime, or gypsum, is found in the form of alabaster and of scienite. It is ground and roasted at a low heat to make plaster of Paris, and is used for molding and statuary, and also as a fertilizer. For notices of the nature and distribution of the most important salts of lime, see, for the carbonates, calcite, aragonite, limestone, and marble; for the sulphates, anhydrite, gypsum, and plaster of Paris (under plaster); for the phosphates, apatite and phosphorite. For the presence and action of lime in natural waters, see water, and also stalagmite and stalactite.—Chlorid of lime. Same as calc chlorata (which see, under calc¹).—Cream of lime. See cream¹.—Hydraulic lime. See hydraulic.—Lime cartridge. See cartridge.—Milk of lime. See milk.—White lime, a solution or preparation of lime used for whitewashing; a variety of white-wash. (See also gas-lime.)

lime¹ (lim), v. t.; pret. and pp. limed, ppr. liming. [ME. limen, < AS. limjan (= D. lijmen = OHG. limjan, MHG. limen, G. leimen = Dan. lime = Sw. limma), smear with lime, < lim, lime: see lime¹, n.] 1. To smear with a viscous substance for the purpose of catching birds.

For who so wol his bondis lyme,
They mosten be the more unclene.
Gower, (Halliwell).

York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Hlave all limed bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., ii. 4. 54.

Hence—2. To entangle; insnare; encumber.

O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,
Art more engaged!
Shak., Hamlet, iii. 3. 68.

True—we had limed ourselves
With open eyes, and we must take the chance.
Tennyson, Princess, iii.

3. To apply lime to; in a special use, to manure with lime, as soil; throw lime into, as a pond or stream, to kill the fish in it.

Encouragement . . . to improve [land] by draining, marling, and liming.
Sir J. Child, On Trade.

4. To sprinkle with slaked lime, as a floor; treat with lime; in leather-manuf., to steep (hides) in a solution of lime in order to remove the hair.—5†. To cement.

I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., v. 1. 84.

lime² (lim), n. and a. [A corruption of lime⁴ for orig. lind: see lind.] I. n. A tree of the genus Tilia, natural order Tiliaceae; the linden.

II. a. Of or pertaining to the tree so called.—Lime hawk-moth, Smerinthus tilix, whose larva feeds on the lime.

lime³ (lim), n. [F. lime, < Pers. limū, a lemon, a citron: see lemon.] 1. A tree, a variety of Citrus medica. The sour lime (var. acida) has a globose fruit, smaller than the lemon, with thin rind, and yields an extremely acid juice. (See lime-juice.) It is cultivated in southern Europe, India, Florida, etc. The sweet lime of India is the variety Limetta.

2. The fruit of the lime-tree.

The ruddier orange and the paler lime.
Cowper, Task, lii. 573.

Indian wild lime. See Limonia.—Ogechee lime, the sour tupelo, Nyssa capitata, found in parts of the southern United States. Its large acid fruit is made into a conserve called Ogechee limes.—Wild lime, Zanthoxylum Pterota, a small tree with a hard, close-grained, reddish-brown wood, found in tropical America and extending into the southern United States.

lime¹ (līm), n. [Also leam, liem*, lyam; < OF. liem, also lien, F. liem = Pr. liam = Pg. liame, ligame = It. legame, ligame, < L. ligamen, a band; see *lien*² (another form of the same word) and ligament.] A cord for leading a dog; a leash. Hence limier, *limmer*³, limehound.

My hound then in my lyam, I by the woodman's art
Forecast where I may lodge the goodly high-palm'd hart.
Drayton, Muse's Elysium, vi.

lime², n. [ME. lime, lyme, < OF. lime* (?), limit, < L. limes, limit: see limit.] Limit; end.

Rygt as we cloye zet the same,
And herratter shulde withoughte lyme.
Chron. Vidoun, p. 4. (Halliwell.)

lime³, v. t. [< OF. limier, F. limier = Pr. Sp. Pg. limar = It. limare, < L. limare, file, < lima, a file.] To file; polish.

It was like a lymed [var. a thynge of] glas,
But that it shoon full more clere.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1124.

limeball-light (līm'bal-līt), n. Same as calcium light (which see, under calcium).

lime-boil (līm'boil), n. In calico-bleaching, the passing of the goods through milk of lime. Also called lime-bowk.

lime-burner (līm'bēr'nēr), n. One who burns limestone to form lime.

lime-bush (līm'būsh), n. A bush smeared with lime.

He's flown to another lime-bush; there he will flutter as long more, till he have ne'er a feather left.
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, iii. 1.

lime-catcher (līm'kach'ēr), n. In a steam-engine, a form of filter to intercept the lime in the feed-water, and thus prevent the deposit of scale in the boiler. It consists of a cage filled with loose charcoal or other material, inclosed in the dome of a steam-boiler and in communication with it. The feed-water is admitted above the filter, through which it trickles down, leaving its lime and other impurities in the charcoal. Also called lime-extractor.

lime-cracker (līm'krak'ēr), n. In cement-works, a mill in which crude plaster and calcined limestone are coarsely ground. It is made of chilled iron, and its core and teeth are removable in sections, so that separate parts can be repaired when affected by wear.

lime-dog (līm'dog), n. A limehound.

lime-feldspar (līm'feld'spār), n. See feldspar.

lime-floor (līm'flōr), n. A floor made of lime mortar beaten and smoothed to an even surface.

limehound (līm'hound), n. [Also leamhound; so called as being led by a lime or loam; < *lime*⁴ + hound. Cf. *limmer*³ and *lym*².] A dog used in hunting the wild boar; a limmer.

But Talus, that could like a lime-hound winde her,
And all things secrete wisely could bewray,
At length found out whereas she hidden lay.
Spenser, F. Q., v. ii. 25.

lime-juice (līm'jōs), n. The juice of the limo, used for much the same purposes as lemon-juice. It is especially in favor as an antiscorbutic, and forms a part of the outfit of vessels bound on long voyages, especially for arctic regions.

lime-juicer (līm'jō'sēr), n. A British sailor: so called because he is obliged by law to use lime-juice at sea as an antiscorbutic. [Amer. naut. slang.]

You lime-juicers have found that Richmond is taken.
International Rev., XI, 52b.

lime-kiln (līm'kil), n. [Formerly also limekill; < *lime*¹ + kiln.] A kiln or furnace in which lime is made by calcining limestone or shells.

lime-light (līm'līt), n. Same as calcium light (which see, under calcium).

lime-machine (līm'mā-shēn'), n. In gas-manuf., a machine for purifying gas by causing it to pass through lime.

Limenitis (līm-e-nī'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. Λιμνίτις, an epithet of Artemis, lit. of harbors, < λίμνη, a harbor, haven.] A genus of nymphalid butterflies, having the head narrower than the thorax, the antennæ nearly as long as the body, and ample wings without ocelli. L. camilla and L. sibylla are brownish-black European species with white markings, notable for their graceful flight. L. uranula and L. artemis are found in the middle and eastern portions of the United States. L. sibylla is the white admiral of English collectors. L. disippus is a very common North American butterfly, also called Basilarchia archippus (not to be confounded with Danais archippus, now called Anosia plexippus). See cut under disippus.

lime-ointment (līm'oint'ment), n. In phar., an ointment consisting of 4 parts of slaked lime, 1 part of lard, and 3 parts of olive-oil.

lime-pit (līm'pit), n. A limestone-quarry.

lime-powder (līm'pou'dēr), n. The crackled limo resulting from air-slaking.

lime-punch (līm'punch), n. A punch in which lime-juice is substituted for lemon-juice.

limert, limeret, n. Middle English forms of *limmer*³.

Limerick hook, lace, etc. See hook, lace, etc.

lime-rod (līm'rod), n. [ME. lymrod; < *lime*¹ + rod.] A twig smeared with bird-lime. Also lime-twig, and formerly limeyard.

The egle of biak therin,
Caught with the lymrod.
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 894.

limes (līm'mōz), n.; pl. limites (līm'i-tōz). [L., a cross-path, balk, boundary, limit: see limit, n.] 1. In anat., one of two distinct tracts of the lateral root of the olfactory lobe of the brain, distinguished as limes alba and limes cinerea. Wilder and Gage, Anat. Tech., p. 480.—2. In zool., a boundary; a line of division or separation between two parts or organs.—Limes facialis, in ornith., the facial boundary, or facial outline; the line or limit of the feathers all around the base of the bill. It forms in different groups of birds various salient and reentrant angles, of some significance in classification. The most constant alliances are the frontal points, or antice. See antice.

lime-sink (līm'singk), n. A rounded hole or depression in the ground in limestone districts.

lime-sour (līm'sour), n. In calico-bleaching, same as gray sour (which see, under gray).

lime-spreader (līm'spred'ēr), n. In agri., a perforated box on wheels, or a special form of cart, for distributing lime over land.

limestone (līm'stōn), n. Rock consisting wholly or in large part of calcareous material or carbonate of lime. Where, as is often the case, there is some carbonate of magnesia mixed with the lime, the rock is called dolomite limestone, and from this there may be a gradual transition to dolomite. Marble is the name given to the more crystalline limestones, and especially to such as are solid and handsome enough to be used for ornamental purposes or in costly buildings. Limestones are classed as silicious or argillaceous, according to the amount of sand or silica or of clay they contain. They are of many shades of color, reddish, grayish, and slate-colored tints being the most common. Many marbles, however, are either pure white or slightly clouded with tints of gray, red, or brown; but some are so dark as to appear when polished almost black. The limestone of the fossiliferous stratified groups is generally admitted to have been the result of organic agencies, just as limestone deposits are seen forming at the present time from the debris of coral growth. The crystalline varieties of limestone and marble which occur in the azoic or archæan rocks are by some believed to be a chemical precipitate or aggregation, while others consider their existence proof that these rocks, in which no fossils have yet been found, are metamorphosed sedimentary beds, and that this limestone is also the result of organic life.—Baculite limestone. See baculite.—Bala limestone, in geol., a bed of limestone which is an important and very fossiliferous member of the Lower Silurian series in North Wales.—Bastard, bituminous, burnt limestone. See the adjectives.—Bird's-eye limestone, a part of the Black River limestone, one of the subgroups into which the Lower Silurian has been divided by the New York geologists; so called because it has crystalline points scattered through it which have a fancied resemblance to the eyes of birds.—Carboniferous limestone. Same as mountain limestone.—Chazy limestone, in geol., the name given by the New York Geological Survey to a member of the Lower Silurian series lying next below the Trenton group. The most abundant and interesting fossil which it contains is the Maclurea magna, which is a conspicuous object in the black marble quarried at Isle La Motte in Lake Champlain, and in other localities, and used extensively for floor-tiles in halls and public buildings, in square slabs or tiles alternating with those of white marble.—Corniferous limestone. See Helderberg limestone.—Dudley limestone, a highly fossiliferous limestone belonging to the Silurian system, occurring near Dudley in England, and equivalent to the Wenlock limestone. It abounds in beautiful masses of coral, shells, and trilobites. Also called Dudley rock.—Fontainebleau limestone, a variety of calcite from Fontainebleau, in rhombohedral crystals peculiar in containing a large amount (about 60 per cent.) of sand as impurity.—Galena limestone, the dolomitic rock, of Lower Silurian age, in which the lead ore of the Upper Mississippi lead region chiefly occurs. The formation has a maximum thickness of about 250 feet, and is in large part almost a pure dolomite.—Granular limestone. See granular.—Helderberg limestone, a name derived from the Helderberg mountains in New York, applied to rocks partly of Upper Silurian and partly of Devonian age. The Lower Helderberg limestones include four groups of limestone-beds, distinguished from one another by their fossil remains. Among these groups is the economically important one affording hydraulic cement—the Tentaculite or water-lime group. The Upper Helderberg is more generally called the corniferous limestone. In Canada this rock is, in part at least, a source of petroleum which is of considerable economic importance. It forms with the Schoharie and Canada-gall grits the lowest division of the Devonian series as tabulated by the New York geologists.—Industrial limestone. See industrial.—Jura limestone, the limestone rock of the Jura mountains, which corresponds to the Oolite of British writers. It is composed of limestones of various qualities, clays, marls, and sandstones.—Keokuk limestone, one of the divisions of mountain limestone, of importance in the Mississippi valley. It lies between the Burlington and St. Louis limestones. In this group the geode-bed occurs. See geode.—Magnesian limestone, a carbonate of lime containing some carbonate of magnesia. When the two are present in the necessary proportion to form dolomite (54.35 of the former to 45.65 of the latter), the rock is usually called by that name. See dolomite.—Mountain limestone, the lowest of the three groups into which the entire Carboniferous series in England is divided. It is overlain by the millstone grit, and over this are the coal-measures proper. These general divisions hold good over a large part of Europe, and to a considerable extent in the eastern and north-eastern United States. Even in China there is a limestone formation corresponding in geological position and fossil contents with the mountain limestone of England. Wherever it occurs, this formation is characterized by similar fossils. Among these the most abundant forms are—trilobites, especially the wide-spread genus Fusulina; crinoids, in great variety and beauty; brachiopods, especially of the genera Productus and Spirifer; corals, among which the genus Lithostrotion is conspicuous; ganoid and selenichian fishes; and also the earliest amphibians known. The trilobites, very characteristic of groups lower than the Carboniferous, have in the mountain limestone almost entirely died out. This formation is of great interest in the Mississippi valley, on account of the extent of territory which it covers and its extraordinary wealth of fossil remains. In various parts of the world, notably in Scotland and in some parts of the Appalachian coal-field, the mountain limestone contains workable beds of coal. Also called carboniferous limestone. See carboniferous.—Niagara limestone, an important member of the Upper Silurian series, largely developed in the vicinity of Niagara Falls, and further west. The Medina sandstone, the Clinton group, and the Niagara shale and limestone together form the "Niagara period" of Dana. The Niagara group contains large numbers of corals, crinoids, brachiopods, and trilobites. It is nearly the equivalent of the Wenlock group of English geologists. Near Lockport, New York, this rock contains many geodes lined with crystals of dog-tooth-spar (calcite), pearl-spar, and other minerals. The rocks of the Niagara period are overlain by the Silurian group, and this latter by the Lower Helderberg rocks.—Nummulitic limestone. See Foraminifera.—Trenton limestone, a rock of Lower Silurian age, finely exhibited at Trenton Falls, New York, and hence so named by the geologists of the New York Survey. It is also an important member of the series further west than New York, and south through the Appalachian range. It is generally a highly fossiliferous rock, rich in crinoids, brachiopods, trilobites, cephalopods, and gastropods. The Trenton and Black River limestones, together with the Utica slates and the Hudson River or Cincinnati group, constitute the "Trenton period" of Dana. See marble.

limestone-meter (līm'stōn-mē'tēr), n. An instrument for determining the proportion of calcareous matter in soils.

lime-tree (līm'trē), n. Same as *lime*².—Lime-tree winter moth. See moth.

lime-twig (līm'twig), n. [< ME. lime-tweig; < *lime*¹ + *twig*¹.] A twig smeared with bird-lime; hence, that which catches; a snare; a beguiling trick or device.

I doubt his lime-twigs catch not;
If they do, all 'a provided.
Fletcher and Shirley, Night-Walker, iv. 2.
Enter'd the very lime-twigs of his spells,
And yet came off.
Milton, Comus, l. 64b.

limetwig (līm'twig), v. t.; pret. and pp. limetwigg, ppr. limetwigg. [< lime-twig, n.] To beset with lime-twigs or snares; entangle or retard.

Not to have their consultations lime-twigged with quirks and sophisms of philosophical persons.
L. Addison, Western Barbary, Pref.

lime-vial (līm'vī'vl), n. A vial of quicklime intended for incendiary purposes: an object supposed to be represented by a large bulbous mass on the end of an arrow in some medieval pictures.

lime-wash (līm'wōsh), n. A coating given with a solution of lime; whitewash.

limewash (līm'wōsh), v. t. [< lime-wash, n.] To whitewash.

Even in Cornwall and North Devon, moorstone cottages look very "defected" unless they are lime-washed.
Contemporary Rev., LI, 237.

lime-water (līm'wā'tēr), n. A saturated aqueous solution of lime. It is astringent and alkaline, and when added to milk it prevents the formation of dense curd. It is used in diarrhea and vomiting, and as an external application to ulcers, etc. It is also employed in the clarification of coarse sugar.

limewort (līm'wōrt), n. An old name of the catch-fly, Silene Armeria, and of one or two other plants.

limeyard, n. [ME. limgerd; < lime + *yard*¹.] Same as lime-rod.

I like it to a lym-gerde to drawn men to hell,
And to worchipe of the fend to wratthen the soules.
Piers Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), l. 564.

Limicola (līm-mīk'ō-lē), n. [NL., < L. limus, mud (see *lime*¹), + colere, inhabit.] A genus of small broad-billed sandpipers of the family Scolopacidae, having as type Tringa platyrhyncha. Koch, 1816.

Limicolæ (līm-mīk'ō-lē), n. pl. [NL., pl. of Limicola.] 1. In ornith., an order or a suborder of birds, a part of the old order Grallæ or Grallatores, including most of those wading birds the few (usually four) young of which run about at birth, as distinguished from those of the heron tribe, which are reared in the nest, or of the rail tribe, which lay numerous eggs. It is called the "plover-snipe group," and embraces the families Charadriidae and Scolopacidae, or plovers and snipes, and their allies, as sandpipers, curlews, godwits, avocets, stilts, turnstones, oyster-catchers, etc. It is approximately equivalent to the Longirostris and Presbitros of Cuvier. In Sundevall's system it is restricted to the snipes, tattlers, sandpipers, stilts, and avocets, and is thus little more extensive than the family Scolopacidae. Also called Debitirostris.

2. In Vermes, a group of chaetopod worms containing those Scolecina which are maritime and characterized by having the looped canals highly developed and differentiated as seminal ducts: distinguished from ordinary earthworms or Terricolæ.

limicolæ (lim'i-kōl), a. Same as limicoline.

limicoline (li-mik'ō-lin), a. and n. [As Limicola + -ine.] I. a. Living on or in mud; specifically, of or pertaining to the Limicolæ, in either sense of that word. It is a common epithet of the large group of birds known as shore-birds, bay-snipe, etc.

II. n. In ornith., a member of the Limicolæ.
limicolous (li-mik'ō-lus), a. [As Limicola + -ous.] Living in mud; limicoline.

In many limicolous forms, as in earthworms.

Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 678.

Limidæ (lim'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lima + -idæ.] A family of monomyarian acephalous bivalves or lamellibranch mollusks, typified by the genus Lima, having the mantle-margins fringed with tentacular filaments, the foot finger-like, the lips tentaculate, and the shell obliquely oval, with the umbones eared, the anterior side gaping, and the posterior rounded. They live in the sand and generally burrow, but are able to move like scallops through the water by rapidly opening and closing the valves. Many of them attach themselves by a byssus and form a sort of nest. The animal is generally of an orange or bright-red color. The species are numerous, and occur in most seas. Also Limidæ. See under Lima.

liminal (lim'i-nal), a. [< L. limen (limin-), threshold (cf. eliminate), + -al.] Pertaining to the threshold or entrance; hence, relating to the beginning or first stage; inceptive; inchoative.

Every stimulus must reach a certain intensity before any appreciable sensation results. This point is known as the threshold or liminal intensity.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 114.

The liminal difficulties cannot be evaded without the most disastrous consequences to the body of the exposition.
Mind, IX. 428.

liming (li'ming), n. [Verbal n. of *lime*¹, v.] 1. The operation of treating with lime, or of sprinkling with slaked lime; in leather-manuf., the steeping of hides in a solution of lime to remove their hair.—2. In bleaching, a solution of lime in water.—3. The smearing of twigs with lime to catch birds; bird-liming.

limit (lim'it), n. [< ME. limite, lymyte, < OF. limite, F. limite = Sp. limite = Pg. It. limite, < L. limes (limit-), a cross-path or balk between fields, hence a boundary, boundary line or wall, any path or road, border, limit; cf. limen, a threshold. Cf. *lime*⁵.] 1. A definite terminal or border line; a boundary; that which bounds or circumscribes in a material manner; as, the northern limit of a field or town; the limits of a country.

Which place be the lymytes or endes of the Holy Lande the longest waye.

Sir R. Guyforde, Pylgrymage, p. 42.

Here, the double-founded stream,

Jordan, true limit eastward. Milton, P. L., xii. 145.

Nor ceas'd her madness and her flight before

She touch'd the limit of the Pharian shore.

Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., i.

The spectrum extends in both directions beyond its visible limits.

Tyndall, Light and Elect., p. 66.

2. A terminal line or point in general; the extent or reach beyond which continuity ceases; a fixed term or bound as to amount, supply, continuance, inclusion, or the like: used of both material and immaterial things; as, to reach the limit of one's resources; the limit of vision or of resistance; to set limits to one's ambition.

All kinds of knowledge have their certain bounds and limits.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, i. 14.

Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Shak., Rich. III., iii. 3. 8.

The Limits of my Paper will not give me leave to be particular in Instances of this kind.

Addison, Spectator, No. 207.

Not without a few falls in the wrestle with Nature do we learn the limits of our own power, and the pitiless immensity of the power that is not ours.

J. R. Seeley, Nat. Religion, p. 27.

3. That which is within or defined by limits; confine; district; region.
At length into the limits of the north
They came, Milton, P. L., v. 755.

The archdeacon hsth divided it

Into three limits very equally.

Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iii. 1. 73.

The voyageur here also generally holds his place in the front rank, explores and reports the quality and quantity of timber in certain limits or lots.

Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 650.

4†. A logical term. See the quotation.

In this proposition, every man is a sensible body; these two words, man and sensible body, are the terms, limits, or bounds, whereof as the said proposition is compounded, so into the same it is to be resolved, as into his uttermost parts that have any signification.

Blundeville, Arte of Logicke (1619).

5. In math., the precise boundary between two continuous regions of magnitude or quantity; especially, the point at which a variable upon which some function depends passes through infinity. It is frequently said to be the value that a variable quantity may indefinitely approach but can never reach—a definition which, as tacitly assuming that the variable depends upon another which increases by successive finite steps, introduces an inessential element, while altogether overlooking the essential one of continuity.

6†. A limb, as a limit or extremity of the body.
Hurr'd
Here to this place, if the open air, before
I have got strength of limit.

Shak., W. T., iii. 2. 107.

Thought it very strange that nature should endow so fair a face with so hard a heart, such comely limits with such perverse conditions.

Tilana and Theseus, bl. lett., cited by Steevens. (Nares.)

Ecliptic limits. See ecliptic.—Equation of limits. See equation.—Limit of a planet. Its greatest heliocentric latitude.—Limit of distinct vision. The smallest or greatest distance from which the image of an object can be fixed upon the retina.—Limit of elasticity. See elasticity.—Limit of the roots of an equation. A value greater than the greatest root or smaller than the smallest.—Limits of a prison, jail limits, or simply limits. See jail.—Limits of integration. See integration.—Magnetic limit. See magnetic.—Method or doctrine of limits. The doctrine that we cannot reason about infinite and infinitesimal quantities, that phrases in mathematics containing these and cognate words are not to be understood literally, but are to be interpreted as meaning that the functions spoken of behave in certain ways when their variables are indefinitely increased or diminished, and that the fundamental formulæ of the differential calculus should be based upon the conception of a limit. (See def. 5. above.) The first of these positions is not now tenable: the hypothesis of infinite and infinitesimal quantities is consistent, and can be reasoned about mathematically. But the doctrine of limits should be understood to rest upon the general principle that every proposition must be interpreted as referring to a possible experience.

The problems to which this method is applied belong to three types: the summation of series, the problem of tangents, and the problem of quadratures. (See series and problem.) It is essentially the same as Newton's method of prime and ultimate ratios. Its rival is the method of infinitesimals, which is almost excluded from the textbooks at present, but is more in harmony with recent advances in mathematics.—Three-mile limit. See mile.

= Syn. 1. Confine, termination, bound, preclude, boundary, frontier (see boundary); restriction, restraint, check.

limit (lim'it), v. [< ME. limiten, < OF. limiter, F. limiter = Pr. Sp. Pg. limitar = It. limitare, < L. limitare, bound, limit, fix, determine, < limes (limit-), a boundary, limit: see limit, n. Cf. delimit.] I. trans. 1. To restrict within limits; bound; set bounds to.

They . . . limited the Holy One of Israel. Pa. lxxviii. 41.

In all well-instituted commonwealths, care has been taken to limit men's possessions.

Swift, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2. To assign to a limit or confine; fix within a limit; allot.

Limit each leader to his several charge.

Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 25.

The hopes and fears of man are not limited to this short life, and to this visible world.

Macaulay, Gladstone on Church and State.

3. To fix as a limit; assign exclusively or specifically. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Again, he limiteth a certain day. Heb. iv. 7.

And, as you do answer, I do know the scope

And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Shak., K. John, v. 2. 123.

Their time limited them being expired, they returned to ye ship.

Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 82.

Limiting case of a hypothesis involving continuity, a case which is indefinitely near to cases which conform to the general conditions, and also to cases which violate these conditions. Thus, a tangent to a circle is a limiting case of a secant. See limit, n. 5.—Limiting points, with reference to the system of circles having a given radical axis, two points which have the same polars with reference to all the circles.

II. † intrans. To exercise any function, as begging, within a limited district: as, a limiting friar.

They go ydely a limiting abroad, living upon the sweat of other mens travels. Northbrooke, Dicing (1577). (Nares.)

limitable (lim'i-ta-bl), a. [< limit + -able.] Capable of being limited, circumscribed, bounded, or restricted.

limitaneous† (lim-i-tā'nē-us), a. [< L. limitaneus, situated on the borders, < limes (limit-), a boundary, limit: see limit, n.] Pertaining to limits or bounds. Bailey, 1731.

limitarian (lim-i-tā'ri-an), a. and n. [< limitary + -an.] I. a. Tending to limit or circumscribe.

II. n. One who limits; in theol., one who holds that a part of the human race only are to be saved: opposed to universalist. Imp. Diet.

limitary (lim'i-tā-ri), a. and n. [= F. limitaire, preliminary, < L. limitaris, that is on the border, < limes (limit-), a boundary, limit: see limit, n.] I. a. 1. Marking or maintaining a limit or boundary; limiting; restrictive.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains, Proud limitary cherub. Milton, P. L., iv. 971.

Statements so palpably limitary of the Divine supremacy as I found on the face of Revelation.

H. James, Sub. and Shad., p. 123.

2. Subject to limitation; restricted within limits; limited.

What no inferior limitary king
Could in a length of years to ripeness bring,
Sudden his word performs.

Pitt, tr. of First Hymn of Callimachus to Jupiter.

A philosopher should not see with the eyes of the poor limitary creature calling himself a man of the world.

De Quincey, Opium Eater.

II. † n. 1. That which constitutes a limit or boundary, as a stretch of land; a border-land.

In the time of the Romans this country, because a limitary, did abound with fortifications.

Fuller, Worthies, Cumberland.

2. Same as limiter, 2. Heylin, Life of Laud, p. 210.

limitate (lim'i-tāt), a. [< L. limitatus, pp. of limitare, bound, limit: see limit, v.] In bot., bounded by a distinct line, as the hypothallus in some lichens.

limitation (lim-i-tā'shon), n. [< ME. limitacion (in sense 6), < OF. limitacion, F. limitation = Sp. limitacion = Pg. limitação = It. limitazione, < L. limitatio(n-), a bounding, < limitare, pp. limitatus, bound: see limit, v.] 1. The act of bounding or circumscribing; the fixing of a limit or restriction.

Mercy to him that shows it is the rule
And righteous limitation of its act,
By which Heav'n moves in pard'n'ing guilty man.

Cowper, Task, vi. 596.

The checks naturally arising to each man's actions when men become associated are those only which result from mutual limitation.

H. Spencer, Man vs. State, p. 101.

2. The condition of being limited, bounded, or circumscribed; restriction.

Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation?
Shak., J. C., ii. 1. 283.

3. An opposing limit or bound; a fixed or prescribed restriction; a restraining condition, defining circumstance, or qualifying conception: as, limitations of thought.

Titus Quintus understood that he was appointed to have command of the army, without any other limitation than during the pleasure of the senate.

Raleigh, Hist. World, v. iv. § 14.

We are under physiological and cerebral limitations; limitations of association, want, condition.

Rushnell, Nature and the Supernat., p. 51.

Every limitation of a power is a prohibition to transcend it; for, if it had not that effect, it would not be a limitation.

N. A. Rev., CXXXIX. 157.

4†. That to which one is limited; that which is required as a condition.

You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice.

Shak., Cor., ii. 3. 145.

God, then, not only framed Nature one,
But also set it limitation
Of Forme and Time.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 1.

5. In law: (a) The period of time prescribed by law after which an action cannot be brought. Since the investigation of controversies becomes more difficult with the lapse of time, and long delay to one may imply either that satisfaction has been received or that all claim is abandoned, and as it is vexatious to revive stale claims, the law allows fixed periods, varying with the nature of the grievance, within which, if at all, a claimant must apply to the courts. The statutes fixing these periods are called statutes of limitations. From the limitation prescribed for actions to recover real property, it follows that a practically secure title to land can be acquired by mere adverse possession for a sufficient time. (b) In the law of conveyancing, the carving out of an estate less than a fee simple absolute (see *fee*²); the prescribing of an ulterior direction for the devolution of an estate in case the estate of the primary grantee shall fail. If a deed or will gives property to A limiting his estate to his life, and on his death giving the property to B, the gift to B is a limitation, or limitation over. If the property is given to A so long as she remains unmarried, adding that in case she marries the property is to go to B, the added clause is a conditional limitation, or a limitation over dependent on a condition. If a condition only is prescribed without adding a limitation over, the property will, if the condition be valid, revert to the donor or his heirs.

6†. The particular district in which a limiter or begging friar was allowed to beg for alms.

Ther wolketh now the lymytour hymself, . . .
And seyth his matyns and his hooly thynges
As he gooth in his lymytacoun.

Chaucer, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 21.

A limitour of the Grey Friars, in the course of his limitation, preached many times, and had but one sermon at all times.

Latimer, Misc. Sel.

Some [pulpits] have not had foure sermons these fiftene or sixtene years since Friers left their limitations.

B. Gilpin, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1552.

Collateral limitation a limitation dependent on some collateral event.—Conditional limitation. See def. 5.—Four years' limitation law, a name by which the United States Tenure of Office Act (United States Congress, March, 1867) is sometimes known. See tenure.—Limitation of the Crown Act, an English statute of 1701 (12 and 13 Wm. III., c. 2) which vested the succession to the crown in the Princess Sophia of Hanover and her heirs, being Protestants. Also called the Act of Settlement, and the Succession to the Crown Act.—Statute of limitations. See def. 5.—Words of limitation, words in a deed or will taken as indicating the nature or kind of estate the donee is vested with, by stating who shall or may take after him.

limitative (lim'i-tā-tiv), a. [= F. limitatif = Sp. Pg. limitativo; as limitate + -ive.] Limiting; fixing limits; restrictive.

Limitative notions which have a negative value, in so far as they keep open a vacant space beyond experience, but do not enable us to fill that space with any positive realities.

Encyc. Brit., XVI. 84.

Limitative judgment, in logic, a name given by Kant to an affirmative limited proposition, such as "Every man is a non-dog," in order to make up the triad of foris—affirmative, negative, limitative—under the category of quality.

Much acumen has been expended even in recent times in vindicating the limitative form of judgments, but I can see in it only an unmeaning product of pedantic ingenuity.

Nettleship, fr. of Lotze's Logic, I. li. § 40.

limited (lim'i-ted), p. a. and n. I. p. a. 1. Confined within limits; narrow; circumscribed.

After this great affront to the King, is Mountford sent over again into Gascony, though with a more limited authority.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 84.

2†. Allotted or appointed.

I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service.

Shak., Macbeth, li. 3. 56.

3. In railroading, restricted as to number of ears (weight), or to the carrying of first-class passengers; said of a train.—Limited adjunct, an adjunct that agrees with the subject in regard to some part, nature, time, place, or respect.

Mortality is the absolute adjunct of man, whilst immortality is the limited; because man is not absolutely immortal, but only as to the soul.

Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman.

Limited company, fee, function. See the nouns.—Limited divorce. See divorce, 1.—Limited jurisdiction, liability, mail, monarchy, partnership, problem, ticket, train, univocation, vote, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. A limited express-train: as, the Chicago limited. [Colloq., U. S.]

Let the great steamship founder, the limited crash through a trestle.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXX. 577.

limitedly (lim'i-ted-li), adv. In a limited manner or degree; with limitation.

The constitution of such an nifty doth involve the vesting some person or some number of persons with a sovereign authority, . . . to be managed in a certain manner, either absolutely, according to pleasure, or limitedly, according to certain rules prescribed to it.

Barrow, Unity of the Church.

limitedness (lim'i-ted-nes), n. The state of being limited. Johnson.

limiter (lim'i-tēr), n. [ME. limitour, lymytour, < OF. limitour, limiteur, < ML. limitator, a friar licensed to act within certain limits, lit. one who limits, < L. limitare, limit, bound: see limit, v.] 1. One who or that which limits or confines.

They so believing, as we hear they do, and yet abolishing a law so good and moral, the limiter of sin, what are they else but contrary to themselves?

Milton, Tetrachordon.

2†. A friar licensed to beg, collect convent-dues, preach, or perform other duties within certain limits, or in a certain district.

A Frere ther was, a wantoun and a merye,
A lymytour, a ful solempne man. . . .
He was the beste beggere in his hous.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T. (ed. Morris), l. 260.

'Twas but getting a Dispensation from the Pope's limiter, or Gatherer of the Peter-Pence.

Selden, Table-Talk, p. 101.

limites, n. Plural of limites.

limit-gage (lim'it-gāj), n. A gage which is used for determining whether pieces do not exceed or fall below a certain specified range of dimension. Car-Builder's Dict.

limitless (lim'it-less), a. [Limit + -less.] Having no limits; unbounded; illimitable.

Now to this sea of city-commonwealth,
Limitless London, am I come obscured.

Sir J. Davies, Wittes Pilgrimage, sig. H, 4 b.

=Syn. Boundless, unlimited, illimitable, infinite.

limitour, n. A Middle English form of limiter.

limit-point (lim'it-point), n. A point on a line or other spread, such that within every interval within which it is contained there lie an infinity of points of a given manifold. The limit-point may or may not belong to this manifold.

limma (lim'ä), n. [L., < Gr. λείμμα, a remnant, somewhat less than half a major tone, a monosemic pause, < λείπειν, leave.] 1. In the Pythagorean system of music, the smaller half-step or semitone, being the remnant of a perfect fourth after subtracting from it two whole steps or "tones": $\frac{4}{3} \div (\frac{2}{1})^2 = \frac{2}{3}$. A limma and an apotome together made a "tone": $\frac{2}{3} + \frac{1}{4} = \frac{11}{12} \times \frac{2}{1} = \frac{11}{6}$. Also called Pythagorean semitone or hemitone.—2. In pros., a monosemic empty time or pause; a time equal to one mora or someion, existing in the rhythm, but not expressed by a syllable in the words. The limma is indicated by a mark like a caret (^, taken from the initial λ or λ of λείμμα). The pause at the end of a trochaic dimeter or tetrapody catalectic (see the lines quoted under catalectic) is an example, — — — — — A, the scantleonic line being — — — — —. Also written leinna. See paux.

limmer¹ (lim'er), a. An obsolete or dialectal form of *limber*¹.

They have their feet and legs limmer, wherewith they crawl.

Holland.

limmer² (lim'er), n. 1. A dialectal variant of *limber*².—2†. Naut., a man-ropo at the side of a ladder.

limmer³ (lim'er), n. and a. [Formerly also lymmer; in def. 1 also leamer; < ME. limer, limere, lymere, < OF. liemier, F. limier, a large dog, lit. a dog held in a leash, < OF. liem, F. lien, a leash: see *lime*⁴, *lien*². Cf. limchound.] I. n. 1†. A limchound; in general, a hound; in a later use, a mongrel hound.

A gret route
Of hunte and eke of foresteres,
With many rayles and lymeres.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 362.

A dogge engendred betwene an hounde and a mastive, called a lymmer or mungrell.

Elyot, In v. Hybris. (Halliwell.)

Hence—2. A low, base, or worthless person; a scoundrel; as applied to a woman, in a milder sense, a jade. [Now Scotch and North. Eng.]

To satisfie in parte the wrong which had bene offered him by those lymmers and robbers. Holinshed, Hist. Ireland.

The nurrice was a faine limmer
As e'er hung on a tree.

Larkin (Child's Ballads, III. 95).

Thieves, limmers, and broken men of the Highlands.

Scott.

II. † a. Base; low.

Then the limmer Scottes . . . burnt my guddes, and made deadly feede on me, and my barnes.

Bullein's Dialogue (1573), p. 3. (Halliwell.)

Hence with 'em, limmer lown,

Thy vermin and thyself.

B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, li. 1.

limmock (lim'ok), a. [limmer¹, limber¹ with substituted term. -ock.] Very limber. [Prov. Eng.]

limn (lim), v. [ME. limnen, contr. of luminen, an aphetic form of enluminen, < OF. enluminer, < L. illuminare, enluminare, illuminate, burnish, limn: see illumine, illuminate.] I. trans. To represent by painting or drawing; depict; delineate; hence, to describe vividly or minutely. [Archaic or poetical.]

It were impossible
To limn his passions in such lively colours
As his own proper suffrance could express.

Ford, Lover's Melancholy, lii. 3.

II. † intrans. To practise drawing or painting, especially in water-colors.

Yesterday begun my wife to learn to limn of one Browne, and by her beginning, upon some eyes, I think she will do very fine things, and I shall take great delight in it.

Pepys, Diary, II. 234.

Limnæa (lim-nā'sē-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Brongniart, 1817), for Limnæacea*, < Limnæa + -acea.] In De Blaiuville's classification (1825), the first of three families of his Pulmobranchiata, containing pulmonate gastropods of the genera Limnæa, Physa, and Planorbis in a broad sense; the pond-snails, now divided into two families, Limnæidae and Physidae.

limnæan (lim-nā'sē-an), a. and n. [Limnæa + -an.] I. a. Of or relating to the Limnæa.

II. n. A gastropod of the group Limnæa; any pond-snail.

limnæaceous (lim-nā'shius), a. Same as limnæan.

Limnædia (lim-nā'di-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh.] A genus of phyllopod crustaceans, with a thin flexible bivalve carapace of oval form, and from 18 to 26 segments which bear limbs. L. agassizi is found in pools in New England.

Limnædiacea (lim-nā'di-ä'sē-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Limnædia + -acea.] Same as Limnædiida.

Limnæidiæ (lim-nā'di-ä-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnædia + -idæ.] A family of phyllopod or branchiopod crustaceans, typified by the genus Limnædia. The test is soft and bivalved, there are numerous pairs of plicopods or swimming-feet, the antennæ are large, the antennulæ are small, and the large telson has a pair of appendages. In the male one or two pairs of feet are chelate. The leading genera are Limnædia, Limnætia, and Estheria. See Estheriada.

Limnæa (lim-nē'ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λίμνη, of or from a marsh, < λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh.] A genus of Limnæida, typical of the subfamily Limnæinæ. In these pond-snails the shell is a slender dextral spiral with a large body-whorl and aperture, of a light, thin, horny texture. There are many species. L. stagnalis is a common one. They live in ponds, and are almost exclusively vegetarian. The genus is cosmopolitan, and reaches its highest development in North America. Also erroneously Limnea, Lymnæa, Lymnæa, Lymnæus.

Limnææna (lim-nē-an'ä), n. pl. [NL. (Lamarck, 1812), < Limnæa + -ana.] A family of tracheolipod mollusks, typified by the genus Limnæa, containing all the limnophilous gastropods, now differentiated into the families Limnæidae and Physidae.

Limnæidæ (lim-nē-ä-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnæa + -idæ.] A family of basomatoporous pulmonate gastropods, with diversiform tentacles, eyes at the inner or posterior bases of the tentacles, simple upper jaw as well as lateral ones, wide seriform marginal teeth of the radula, and generally a spiral shell; the pond-snails. They inhabit fresh waters, especially of temperate and northern countries, and are of cosmopolitan distribution. More than 600 species are described, most of which belong to the genera Lymnæa, Planorbis, and Ancylus. They are divided by the shape of the shell into Limnæinæ, Planorbina, and Ancylina.

Limnæinæ (lim-nē-ä-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnæa + -inæ.] The typical subfamily of Limnæidæ, including those pond-snails whose shell is a long spiral.

Limnæine (lim-nē-in), a. [Limnæine.] Of or relating to the Limnæinæ.

Limnanthæ (lim-nan'thē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (R. Brown, 1833), < Limnanthes + -æa.] A tribe of plants of the order Geraniaceæ, characterized by regular flowers with valvate sepals, small glands alternating with the petals, and beakless carpels. It embraces the two genera Limnanthes and Flörkea, with four species, all natives of North America. The group was given ordinal rank by some of the earlier botanists.

Limnanthemum (lim-nan'thē-mum), n. [NL. (Gmelin, 1769), < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + ἄνθεμον.] A genus of plants of the order Geraniaceæ and tribe Ményantheæ, distinguished by the indehiscent fruit and cordate leaves. There are about 26 species (perhaps reducible to 13), distributed throughout the temperate and tropical regions of the world. They are aquatic perennials, with floating leaves on very long petioles, and yellow flowers. One beautiful species, L. nymphæoides, is a native of Europe and Asia, and goes by the names of fringed bog-bean or buck-bean, fringed water-lily, water-fringe, and marsh-flower. (See bog-bean.) L. lacustrinum of the eastern United States is the common floating-heart.

Limnanthes (lim-nan'thēz), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1833), < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + ἄθος, a flower.] A genus of plants of the order Geraniaceæ, type of the tribe Limnantheæ, and distinguished from Flörkea, the other genus of the tribe, by having five petals instead of three.

Limnea, n. See Limnæa.

limner (lim'nēr), n. [ME. limnore, lymenour, luminour, short for enluminour, < OF. enluminer, < ML. illuminator, illuminator, limner: see illuminate and limn.] One who limns; an artist or delineator; more especially, one who paints portraits or miniatures. [Archaic or poetical.]

Johannes Dancastre, lymenour.

English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 9.

Pond-snail (Limnæa stagnalis).

Limnæa stagnalis, seen from below.

That family had lately got their pictures drawn by a limner, who travelled the country, and took likenesses for fifteen shillings a head. Goldsmith, Vicar, xvi.

Limnetis (lim-nō'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. λιμνήτις, fem. of λιμνήτης, living in marshes, < λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh.] One of the three leading genera of Limnadiidae (or Estheriidae), having a bivalve carapace, numerous body-segments, and the foliaceous appendages of typical phylo-pods. L. brachyura is an example. The males of these water-fleas may be even more numerous than the females, contrary to the rule among related forms. See Limnadiidae, and cut under Estheriidae.

Limnetis brachyura: upper left-hand figure, male; upper right-hand figure, female—in both the left side of the carapace cut away; lower left-hand figure, larval form; lower right-hand figure, same further advanced. A, antennules; A' and A'', antennae; C, head; C', body; D, carapace; M, mandibles; a', great plate covering mouth; o, eye.

Limning (lim'ning), n. [Verbal n. of limn, v.]

1. The act of delineating, as by means of pencil or brush.—2. That which is limned; a delineation, literally or figuratively. [Rare.]

There is nothing in either of the former two [panels with the portraits of the king and queen] which could not have been copied by a Fleming from a limning made in Scotland years before. Athenaeum, No. 3199, p. 221.

limnite (lim'nit), n. [< Limn(wa) + *-ite*².] 1. A fossil of the genus Limnaea or some similar shell. Also lymnite.—2. Yellow ocher or brown iron ore, containing more water than limonite. It consists of oxid of iron 74.8 and water 25.2.

Limnobates (lim-nob'ā-tēz), n. [NL. (Burmeister, 1835), < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + βάτης, one that treads, < βαίνω, walk, step.] The typical genus of Limnobatidae, containing such species as L. lineata of the United States.

Limnobotidae (lim-nō-bat'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Douglas and Scott, 1865), < Limnobotas + -idae.] A family of aquatic Heteroptera, represented by the genus Limnobotas alone, whose species are commonly found in ponds in Europe and North America. These water-bugs have the head horizontal, as long as the thorax, with the antennae inserted at the end of the widened front, the first joint stoutest and shortest, the third longest.

Limnochares (lim-nok'ā-rēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λιμνοχαρίς, delighting in marshes (epithet of a frog), < λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + χαίρω, rejoice, delight (> χαρά, delight).] 1. A genus of water-mites or aquatic acarids of the family Hydrachnidae, or giving name to the Limnocharidae. Latreille, 1796.—2. A genus of heteropterous insects: same as Hydrometra.

Limnocharidae (lim-nō-kar'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnochares + -idae.] A family of tracheate Acarina, with the skeleton composed of sclerites embedded in a soft skin, palpi raptorial, stigmata near the rostrum, legs of six or more joints, fitted for crawling organs, and habits of life wholly or partly aquatic.

Limnocochlides (lim-nō-kok'li-dēz), n. pl. [NL. (Latreille, 1825), < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + κοχλίας (κοχλιδ-), a small snail: see Cochlides.] A family of pulmoniferous gastropods, combining the Limnaea and Auriculacea.

Limnocyon (lim-nos'i-on), n. [NL., < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + κύων, a dog.] A genus of fossil carnivorous mammals from the Eocene of America, belonging or related to the Hycenodontidae. O. C. Marsh, 1872.

Limnohyidae (lim-nō-hi'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnohyus + -idae.] A family of extinct Eocene hoofed quadrupeds of suilline character, founded by Marsh for the reception of the genus Limnohyus.

Limnohyus (lim-nō-hi'us), n. [NL., < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + ὑς, a pig, hog (= L. sus = *E. sou*²).] The typical genus of Limnohyidae. O. C. Marsh, 1872.

Limnophagæ (lim-nof'ā-jē), n. pl. [NL., fem. pl. of limnophagus: see limnophagous.] See Cyprinodontidae limnophagæ, under Cyprinodontidae.

limnophagous (lim-nof'ā-gus), a. [< NL. limnophagus, < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh (confused with L. limus, mud), + φαγεῖν, eat.] Mudd-eating; specifically, of or pertaining to the Cyprinodontidae limnophagæ.

Limnophila (lim-nof'i-lā), n. pl. [NL. (Hartmann, 1821), neut. pl. of limnophilus: see limnophilous.] A division of pulmoniferous gastropods, containing the fresh-water basomatoplorous forms: same as *Hygrophila*².

Limnophilidae (lim-nō-fil'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnophilus + -idae.] A family of trichopterous neuropterous insects, or caddis-flies, typified by the genus Limnophilus, having the maxillary palps of the male three-jointed, scarcely pubescent, and like those of the female. The habits of the larvæ vary; some live in rapid streams, others in standing water, and others in moss at the roots of trees. Their cases are always free. The group is nearly confined to the temperate and boreal regions of the northern hemisphere.

limnophilous (lim-nof'i-lus), a. [< NL. limnophilus, < Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + φιλος, loving.] Fond of ponds or pools, or living in them: said of various animals, especially mollusks and insects.

Limnophilus (lim-nof'i-lus), n. [NL.: see limnophilous.] 1. The typical genus of Limnophilidae, having the anterior wings mostly narrow, with straight costa and truncate apical margin. It is abundantly represented in Europe, North America, and Asia by species which extend far north and mostly inhabit still water. Given in this form by Burmeister, 1839, after Limnophilus of Leach, 1817.
2. A genus of reptiles. Fitzinger, 1843.

Limnoria (lim-nō'ri-ā), n. [NL. (Leach, 1815), < Gr. λιμνώρεα, in myth, a daughter of Nereus and Doris, < λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, sea.] The typical genus of Limnoriidae. L. lignorum or terrebrans is the common gribble, a minute isopod highly injurious to submerged woodwork.

Limnoriidae (lim-nō-ri'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limnoria + -idae.] A family of isopods represented by the genus Limnoria; the gribbles. By means of their trenchant mandibles they eat their way into submerged wood, and are numerous enough in many waters to do great damage to wharves and shipping on both coasts of America and on European coasts.

Limnospiza (lim-nō-spi'zā), n. [< Gr. λίμνη, a pool, lake, marsh, + σπίζα, a finch.] A genus of fringilline birds: same as Embernagra.

Limnodoreæ (li-mō-dō'rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1833), < Limnorum + -eæ.] A subtribe of orchidaceous plants of the tribe Neottieæ, with simple erect stems, usually leafy, and rhizomes without tubers. It embraces 5 genera, Limnorum being the type, all terrestrial (not epiphytic) herbs, growing outside the tropics in both hemispheres.

Limnorum (li-mō-dō'rūm), n. [NL. (Richard, 1818), < L. limnorum, < Gr. λιμνόρορον, λεμνόρορον, a wild plant, not identified.] A genus of orchidaceous plants of the tribe Neottieæ, type of the subtribe Limnodoreæ. There is but one species, L. abortivum, which is found in the Mediterranean region and in central Europe. It grows to the height of 1 or 2 feet, and has a purplish stem and rather large purple flowers in a simple loose spike. It is believed to be partially parasitic on the roots of shrubs. It is sometimes cultivated.

Limoges enamel. See enamel.

limont, n. An obsolete form of lemon.

Limonia (li-mō'ni-ā), n. [NL. (Linnæus), < F. limon, < Pers. limūn, the lemon, citron: see lemon.] A genus of spiny shrubs from tropical Asia, belonging to the order Rutaceæ, tribe Aurantieæ. They are distinguished by having flowers with a 4- or 5-lobed calyx and from 8 to 10 stamens. The leaves are compound, with from 3 to 8 leaflets. The Javanese employ the extremely acid pulp of the fruits of L. acidissima as a substitute for soap, and on the coast of Malabar they are used medicinally. This species is sometimes called the musk-deer plant. L. carnosia yields the kekiam-fruit of Bengal, and L. monophylla is known as Indian wild lime.

limonin (lim'ō-nin), n. [< NL. limonum (F. limon), lemon, + *-in*².] A bitter crystallizable matter (C₂₂H₅₀O₁₃) found in the seeds of oranges, lemons, etc.

limonite (li'mō-nit), n. [= F. limonite; as Gr. λεμόν, a marshy meadow, a meadow, + *-ite*².] An important iron ore which is found earthy, concretionary, or mammillary and fibrous. Its brownish-yellow streak distinguishes it from hematite. It forms the bog-iron of existing marshes. Its color varies from dark brown to ochre-yellow. It consists of sesquioxide of iron 85.6 and water 14.4. Also called brown hematite and brown iron ore.

limonitic (li-mō-nit'ik), a. [< limonite + -ic.] Consisting of limonite, or resembling it in appearance.

Limosa (li-mō'si-ā), n. [NL., < L. limosa, fem. of limosus, muddy: see limous.] A genus of wading birds of the family Scolopacidae, having the bill a little recurved; the godwits. They are among the largest of the family, and resemble curlews, but the bill is not decurved. L. agoecephala is the common black-tailed godwit; L. hæmastica is the Hudsonian godwit; L. jesso is the great marbled godwit. There are other species. See godwit.

Bar-tailed Godwit (Limosa lapponica).

limose (li'mōs), a. [< L. limosus, muddy: see limous.] Same as limous.

Limosella (li-mō-sel'ā), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1737), so called from their place of growth, < L. limus, mud.] A genus of small ereeping or floating herbs of the order Scrophularineæ and tribe Gratiolææ, characterized by having the leaves in clusters, the calyx 5-toothed, and the 4 stamens with the anthers confluent 1-celled. There are 5 or 6 species, found throughout the warm and temperate regions of the earth. L. aquatica is known as mudwort or mudweed. The American plant is the variety tenaxifolia, found in tidal mud northward on the Atlantic coast.

Limosina (li-mō-si'nā), n. [NL. (Macquart, 1835), < L. limosus, muddy (see limose, limous), + *-ina*¹.] A genus of Muscidae. Also called Coprina.

Limosinæ (li-mō-si'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Limosa + -inæ.] A subfamily of birds of the family Scolopacidae; the godwits. G. R. Gray.

limosis (li-mō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λιμός, hunger, + -osis.] In med., a depraved or morbidly ravenous appetite caused by disease.

Limosugæ (li-mō-sū'jē), n. pl. [NL., < L. limus, mud, + sugere, suck.] In Nermet's classification of birds, a group of his Rusticoleæ, including such birds as curlews, snipes, sandpipers, and plovers, and thus nearly coextensive with the Limicoleæ of authors.

limoust (li'mus), a. [< ME. limous, < OF. limoux = Sp. Pg. It. limoso, < L. limosus, muddy, slimy, < limus, mud, slime: see *lime*¹.] Muddy; slimy; thick.

If water ther be limous or enfecte

Admyntry of salt wol it correcte.
Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 176.

That country . . . became a gained ground by the mud and limous matter brought down by the river Nilus.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vi. 1.

limp¹ (limp), a. [Not found in ME.; appar. < AS. lemp*, in comp. lemphtalt, lemphatt, earliest form laemphtalt, glossing ML. turdus (see lourd), appar. 'awkward,' but lit. 'lame,' < lemp* + halt, halt, lame; cf. leel, lempinn, or lempiligr, pliable, gentle. The adj. is prob. connected with the verb *limp*², q. v. Cf. *limber*¹.] 1. Lacking stiffness or firmness; weak in fiber or texture; flexible; limber; flaccid: applied to things or persons.

The chub eats waterish, and the flesh of him is not firm, limp and tasteless. I. Walton, Complete Angler.

Limpe linen betokens a desponding spirit.

T. Winthrop, Cecil Dreeme, iv.

Her verses on the bombardment of Copenhagen were . . . as limp and incoherent as Shelley's own of the same date. E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 103.

2. Lacking stability or firmness of character; inefficient; incapable.

A kind Providence furnishes the limpest personality with a little gum or starch in the form of tradition.
George Eliot, Middlemarch, I. 25.

limp caac. See *caac*².

limp¹, v. i. [< *limp*¹, a.] To be inadequate or unsatisfactory. Stanhurst.

limp² (limp), v. i. [Not found in ME. or AS.; = LG. limpen = MHG. limphen, limp; cf. G. dial. lampen, hang down loosely, > lampecht, flaccid, limp; cf. mod. leel, limpa, limpness, weakness; W. lleipr, flabby, llybin, limber, llypa, limp; perhaps ult. connected (as a nasalized form) with *lap*², Skt. √ lamb, hang down. Prob. connected with the adj. *limp*¹, q. v.; but the relations of these and the other forms are not clear, the records being too scanty to determine.] To move with a halting or jerky step; walk lame: often used figuratively: as, a limping argument; limping verses.

limp

Pluck the lined crutch from thy old limping sire.
Shak., T. of A., IV. 1. 14.
 The commentator will lend a crutch to the weak poet, to help him to limp a little further than he could on his own feet.
Pope, To Warburton, Sept. 20, 1741.
 The unfortunate divine, whom we left limping with a sprained ankle into the breakfast-room of the Inn.
Peacock, Headlong Hall, II.

limp² (limp), n. [< limp², v.] A halting step;
 the act of limping.

limp³ (limp), v. [ME. limpen (pret. lomp, also weak limpale, pp. lumpen), < AS. limpian (pret.
lump, lomp, pp. lumpen*; also in comp. gelim- pan, belimpan), happen, befall, pertain, = OHG.
limphan, limpfan, MHG. limfen, become, suit.]
I. intrans. To happen; befall; chance.
 "Al iord!" quath Ioseph, "how may this be?"
Joseph of Arimathea (E. E. T. S.), I. 213.

II. trans. To come upon; meet.
 The fyfte was Josue, that joly mane of armes,
 That in Jerusalem ofte fulle nyche joye tymppede.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 3416.

limp⁴ (limp), n. [Prob. < limp¹, a.] A scraper of board or sheet-iron shaped like half the head of a small eask, used for scraping the oro off the sieve in the operation of hand-jigging.

limpardt, n. [< limp² + -ard.] A cripple.
 What could that gouty limpard have done with so fine a dog?
Urquhart, tr. of Itabels, f. 39. (Davies.)

limper (lim'për), n. One who limps; a lame person.

limpet (lim'pet), n. [< ME. lempet, a limpet, appar. orig. a lamprey, < AS. lempedu, another form of lampreda, a lamprey; see lamprey. It can hardly be connected with L. lepas (lepad-), < Gr. λεπάς (λεπαδ-), a limpet; see Lepas. Cf.
limpin.] I. A marine dogoglossate gastropod with an open conical shell imperforate at the apex. The species mostly belong to the families Patel- lidae and Acanthidae; the best-known is Patella vulgata, the common limpet of northern Europe. This inhabits rocky coasts, and selects a site on intertidal rocks, which it uses as a resting-place and wears down into a cavity, making short excursions in search of food, which consists chiefly of algae. Limpets are noted for sticking closely to rocks by means of their adhesive foot, which acts as a sucker, bringing considerable atmospheric pressure to bear upon their shells, which latter, moreover, fit tightly in consequence of the evenly rounded aperture. Large numbers are collected for fish-bait, and they are also used as food by the poor. See bonnet limpet, keyhole limpet, slipper limpet.
 Ho stuck like a limpet to a rock.
Scott, St. Ronan's Well, xxxi.

And on thy ribs the limpet sticks,
 And in thy heart the scrawly snail pisy.
Tennyson, The Sailor Boy.

2. Some mollusk resembling the foregoing, at least in shape of the shell.—Cup-and-saucer lim- pet. See cup-and-saucer.—Duck's-bill limpet, a limpet of the family Pisirellidae and genus Parnophorus, having an imperforate shell covered by the mantle.—False lim- pet, one of the Acanthidae.—Foolacap-limpet, a shell of the genus Pileopsis (which see).—Fresh-water limpet, a species of Ancylus.

limpid (lim'pid), a. [< F. limpide = Sp. limpido = Pg. It. limpido, < L. limpidus, clear, bright;
 cf. Gr. λαμπειν, shine, λαμπρος, bright; see lamp.
 Cf. also lymph.] Characterized by clearness or transparency; translucent; crystal-clear;
 lucid; as, a limpid stream; a limpid style.

Filter this solution through cap-paper, to have it clear and limpid.
Boyle, Works, I. 708.

And witness be what splendid Princes are
 The stars which move about this limpid sphere.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, II. 201.

A beautiful limpid lake, which is fed by a rivulet flowing down from unseen sources in the rock.
D. G. Mitchell, Bound Together.

Turn those limpid eyes on mine,
 And let me read there, love, thy fairest soul!
M. Arnold, The Buried Life.

limpidity (lim'pid-i-ti), n. [< F. limpidité = It.
limpidità, < LL. limpidita(-s), clearness, < L. lim- pidus, clear, limpid; see limpid.] Limpidness.

limpidly (lim'pid-li), adv. In a limpid manner;
 transparently; clearly; lucidly.

Goethe himself, limpidly perfect as are many of his shorter poems, often fails in giving artistic coherence to his longer works.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 295.

limpidness (lim'pid-nes), n. The state of being limpid; clearness; transparency; lucidity.

limpint, n. [Cf. limpet.] A limpet. Nares.
 Tellina, mytilus. τελινα, μυτιλος. Athenæo. A limpin.
Nomenclator.

limpingly (lim'ping-li), adv. In a limping or halting manner; lamely.

limpitude (lim'pi-tūd), n. [< L. limpitudo, clearness, < limpidus, clear, limpid; see limpid.]
 The quality of being limpid; limpidness. Bail- ley, 1727.

limpkin (lim'kin), n. A local (Florida) name of the crying-bird or courlan, Aramus giganticus.
 See courlan, Aramus.

limply (limp'li), adv. In a limping manner.

limpness (limp'nes), n. The quality of being limp or flaccid; weak pliancy.

There are several replicas of rough sketches, which were probably made by Webb, as they show a limpness of method quite unlike the alashing draughtmanship of Isigo.
Portfolio, No. 234, p. 113.

The moral laxity and limpness which may be remarked in the lower classes in Russia.
D. M. Wallace, Russia, p. 545.

limpsy (limp'si), a. [< limp¹ + -sy, equiv. to
 -y¹.] Limp; flaccid. [Colloq., New Eng.]

Someh'n' or other 's bon a usin' on her up, for she was all wore out, and looked sort o' limpsy, as if there wa'n't no starch left in her.
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 584.

Limulidæ (li-mū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Limulus +
 -idæ.] The limulus family; a family of gigantostracous or paleocaridan crustaceans of the order Pœcilopoda, Merostomata, or Xiphosura (or Xiphura), exemplified by the genus Limulus.

limulite (lim'ū-lit), n. [< Limulus + -ite².] A fossil limulid or some similar organism.

limuloid (lim'ū-loid), a. and n. [< Limulus +
 -oid.] I. a. Pertaining to or having the characters of Limulus; related to or resembling a limulus; pœcilopodous; merostomatous; xiphu-rous.

In the Coal-measures no fewer than three genera and eight species of small Limuloid Crustaceans have been met with.
Encyc. Brit., VI. 662.

II. n. A limuloid crustacean; a pœcilopod, merostome, or xiphure.

Limulus (lim'ū-lus),
n. [NL., < L. limulus, somewhat askance,
 dim. of limus, askancee.] 1. The representative genus of Limulidæ. L. poly- phemus is the common horseshoe- or king-crab of the Atlantic coast of North America; L. mo- tucanus is found on the Pacific coast of Asia.
Limulus is the only living form of the order to which it belongs.

Limulus rotundus (king-crab) (ventral view).
B. Cephalic shield, covering anterior division of the body; b. posterior division of the body; c. base of telson;
d. subfrontal area; e. antennules of antennæ; f. one of the series of ambulatory legs; g. operculum; h. bran-chiferous appendages.

2. [l. c.] Any crust-
 acean of the genus Limulus.

limy (lī'mi), a. [< lime¹ + -y¹.] 1.
 Smear'd with lime;
 viscous; glutinous.
 Striving more, the more in laces strong Himselfe he tide, and wrapt his wings twaine
 In limie snares the subtil loopes among.
Spenser, Mulopotmos, I. 429.

2. Containing lime; as, a limy soil.—3. Resembling lime; having the qualities of lime.

lin¹ (lin), v. [Se. also lecn; < ME. linnen, < AS.
linnan (pret. lann, pp. lunnen) (= lecl. linna), also in comp. belinnan, blinnan (> ME. blinnen, E. bliin, q. v.), cease.] I. intrans. To cease;
 stop; rest.
 Set a heggar on horseback, he'll never lin till he be a gallop.
B. Jonson, Staple of News, IV. 1.
 So they shall never lin,
 But where one ends another still begin.
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastoral, II. 1.

II. trans. To cease from.
 Their tongues will never lin wagging, master.
Middleton (and others), The Widow, v. 1.
 Yea, they and their Seminaris shame not to profess, to pettillon, and never lin penning our eares.
Milton, Church-Government, II., Con.

lin², linn (lin), n. [Also lyn, lynn; early mod.
E. linne; *< ME. lynn; prob. (a) in def. 1 < AS.
 (North.) hlynn, a torrent (cf. hlym, hlynn, sound, noise, elamor, hlyman, roar; related like hlim- me, a torrent, hlimman, roar, elang); (b) in def.
 2, prob. < Gael. linne = Ir. linn = W. llyn, a pool.
 The forms and senses mix; whether they are
 ult. from one source is not clear. Cf. also lecl.
lind, a well, spring, brook.] 1. A cataract or waterfall.
 We heard nought but the roaring linn,
 Among the braes sea scroogie.
Burns, What will I do gin my Hoggie die?

2. A pool; particularly, a pool below a fall of water.
 I saw a river rin
 Outoure a steiple rock of stane,
 Syne lychtit in a lin.
Cherrie and Slae, st. 6.

The nearest to her [Tovy] of kin
 Is Toothy, tripping down from Verwin's rushy lin.
Drayton, Polyolbion, v. 113.

The shallowest water makes maist din,
 The deepest pool the deepest linn.
Fair Helen (Child's Ballads, II. 209).

3. The face of a precipice; a shrubby ravine.
 He took her in his arms twa,
 And threw her o'er the linn.
Young Benjie (Child's Ballads, II. 301).

Duncan sigh'd baith out an' in,
 Spak' o' lowpin' owre a linn.
Burns, Duncan Gray.

[Now rare or local in all uses.]

lin³, n. A Middle English form of lin¹.

Lina (lī'nā), n. [NL. (Megerle, 1823), < Gr. λινον, flax; see lin¹.] A genus of leaf-beetles or ehrysomelida, with short antennæ, tibiae externally grooved, and pronotum laterally projected. It is represented in all parts of the world; about 30 species are known, of which 8 inhabit the United States, as L. scripta, the cottonwood leaf-beetle, which often does great damage by defoliating the groves of Populus monilifera in the Western States, and also feeds in the larval state on willows.

Linaceæ (lī-nā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1835), < Linum + -acæ.] A synonym of Lineæ, still much used.

linaceous (lī-nā'shins), a. Of or pertaining to the natural order Linaceæ.

linaget, n. An obsolete form of lineage.

linaloe (lin-ā-lō'ē), n. [Also linaloc; a Mex.
 name.] A fragrant Mexican wood obtained from species of Bursera, used to a limited extent in making furniture, and yielding a substance employed in perfumery.

linament (lin'ā-ment), n. [< L. linamentum, linen stuff, < linum, flax; see lin¹.] In surg., lint; a tent for a wound.

Linaria (lī-nā'ri-ā), n. [NL. (A. L. de Jussieu, 1789), < L. linum, flax, + -aria.] 1. A genus of herbs, rarely shrubs, of the order Scrophu- larinææ and tribe Antirrhinææ, characterized by a spurred corolla with a prominent palate, and stamens in which the anther-cells are distinct; toad-flax. There are 130 species, found in the warm and temperate regions of the northern hemisphere and of South America. See cancerwort, Kenilworth ivy.

2. In ornith.: (a) A genus of linnets, including
L. canubina, the common linnet of Europe, and sundry related species, as the twite, the redpoll, etc. Brisson, 1760. Also called Li- nota, Egiothus, and by other names. See cut under linnet. (b) [l. c.] A bird of this genus.
 (c) [l. c.] The Linnean specific name of the mealy redpoll, Fringilla linaria (Egiothus canu- scens), of northern Europe; more frequently applied of late years to the common redpoll of Europe and America, Linota rufescens, now usually called Egiothus linaria or Acanthis linaria.
 See cut under redpoll.—3. A genus of worms.

linarite (lin'ā-rit), n. [< Linæus, a town in Spain, + -ite².] A hydrated sulphate of lead and copper, occurring in deep azure-blue monoclinic crystals.

linative, n. A corrupt form of lenitive.

lince (lins), n. [Var. of linch¹.] A bank of sod between terraces formed on a hillside by the ancient mode of plowing strips and leaving banks of sod between them; also, the strip or terrace of arable soil between two such banks. [Prov.
Eng.]

lincelst, n. pl. [Also lintels, and lints; origin obscure; prob. OF.] Tares in corn. Halliwell.

Linceus, n. See Lyneus.

linch¹ (linch), n. [*< ME. linch, lynch, < AS.
hline, a ridge of land, a balk. Hence the surname Linch, Lynch.] 1. A ridge or balk of land; any bank or boundary for the division of land.—2. A ledge; a right-angled projection.
 —3. A narrow and steep bank or footpath.—
4. A small inland cliff, generally one that is wooded.—5. A hamlet. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.] (Halliwell.)

linch² (linch), v. [Origin obscure; cf. link⁴.]
I. intrans. To prance about in a lively manner.
 Cheval coquefineux, a linching horse.
Hollyband, Dictionnaire (1593). (Halliwell.)

II. trans. To beat or chastise. Urry's MS.
additions to Ray. (Halliwell.) [Prov. Eng.]

linchet (lin'chet), n. [Also lynchet; < linch¹ +
-et.] A ridge or terrace seen on the slopes of the Chalk, Oolitic, and Liassic escarpments in various parts of England, especially in Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire, Wiltshire, and Somerset.
 The origin of the lincets has never been made entirely clear. It is probable that most of them are artificial constructions, and that they were made for convenience in cultivating the hill-slopes on which they occur. Also called linch. Used chiefly in the plural. [Local, Eng.]

Many terraces are still cultivated, but every farmer I have met with has assured me that there is now, and has been from time immemorial, a general desire to plough down the lynchets (as they are locally called), and that formerly their number was much greater than at present.
Mackintosh, Scenery of England and Wales, p. 89.

linch-hoop (linch-'hōp), n. [< linch-(pin) + hoop¹.] A ring on the spindle of a carriage-axle, held in place by the linch-pin.

linch-pin (linch-'pin), n. [Also (simulating link¹) dial. linkpin (early mod. E. also linpin, linpinne, lyppyn), with loss of the appar. pl. suffix -s; prop., as formerly, linspin, lit. 'axle-pin,' < linse (obs.), axle, + pin¹: see linse and pin¹.] A pin inserted in the spindle of the axle of a vehicle to prevent the wheel from slipping off. Also axle-pin.

But if the rogne have gone a cnp too far,
Left out his linchpin, or forgot his tar,
It [a carriage] suffers interruption.

Copper, Progress of Error, l. 441.

Linckia (ling-'ki-ä), n. [NL., named after the German naturalist J. H. Linck (1674-1734).] The typical genus of Linckidae. Nardo, 1834.

Linckia (ling-'ki-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Linckia + -idae.] A family of starfishes, of the order Asteroidea, whose skeleton is composed of rounded or elliptical ossicles, either contiguous or united by rods. There are no spines, the body being smooth or only granular. L. guildingi inhabits Florida and the West Indies; L. unifasciata ranges from California to Peru. Also Linckidae.

Lincoln green. See green¹.

Lincoln's finch. See finch¹.

Lincolnshire cheese. See cheese¹.

lincture (lingk-'tūr), n. [< ML. "linctura, < L. lingere, pp. linctus, lick; < Gr. λείγω, lick; see lick¹.] A medicine to be taken by licking or sucking; a substance of the consistence of honey, used for coughs, etc.

Confections, treacle, mithridate, eclegmes, or linctures, etc.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 371.

linctus (lingk-'tus), n. [NL. linctus, a licking, < L. lingere, pp. linctus, lick; < Gr. λείγω, lick; see lick¹.] Same as lincture.

lind¹ (lind), formerly and prob. still dial. also lind, n. [< ME. lind, lunde, lynde, < AS. lind, also lunde = D. lunde = MLG. lunde = OHG. linta, MHG. G. lunde = Icel. Sw. Dan. lind, lind, linden (in AS. also a shield, as made of lind); prob. connected with lind², lithe. G. dial. lind, bast, Icel. lindi, girdle (orig. of bast), are derived from the name of the tree. Cf. linden. Hence by corruption lind², lime².] Same as linden, l. [Obsolete or local.]

Be ay of chiere as light as leef on lynde.

Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l'Envoy, l. 34.

Was nener lef vp-on lynde lyghter thereafter.

Piers Plowman (C), ii. 152.

lind², a. [ME. lynd; a var. (due perhaps to the cognate Icel. lind or Dan. lind) of lithe, soft, gentle: see lithe¹.] Soft; gentle.

Be not proud, bot meke & lynd,

And with this better go thou be-lynd.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 21.

lind-coal, n. [ME. lynde-cole.] Charcoal made of the wood of the linden-tree: as, "half an unce of lynde-cole," MS. Soc. Antiqu. 101, f. 76. (Halliwell.)

linden (lin-'den), a. and n. [Formerly also lynde; < ME. linden, < AS. linden (= G. linden), of the lind, < lind, lind, + -en: see lind¹ and -en². As a noun the word is modern, being, like aspen, orig. only adj.] I. a. Of the linden.

II. n. 1. A tree of the genus Tilia; the lime-tree. The common European linden is T. Europaea. An oil, used by perfumers, is distilled from its flowers. The American linden is T. Americana, and is also called base-wood, bee-tree, etc.

The linden broke her ranka and rent

The woodbine wreaths that bind her,

And down the middle, buzz! she went

With all her bees behind her.

Tennyson, Amphion.

2. A shield made of linden-wood; any shield: a modern use, translating the Anglo-Saxon lind, used poetically for a shield. See shield.

The shields placed in the graves were the ordinary lindens, of which no part commonly remains but the metal-boss handle.
Hevitt, Ancient Armor, l. 78.

silver-leafed linden, Tilia argentea, of Hungary.

linden-tree (lin-'den-trē), n. Same as lind¹, linden.

Lindera (lin-'dēr-ä), n. [NL. (C. P. Thunberg, 1784), named after John Linder, a Swedish botanist of the early part of the 18th century.] A genus of lauraceous trees or shrubs of the tribe Litseaeeae, having diœcious flowers surrounded by involucre, and often nine stamens having two-celled anthers. There are about 60 species, found in North America and in tropical and eastern Asia as far as Japan. L. Benzoin of North America, called spice-bush, wild allspice, and benjamin-bush, has a pleasant aromatic scent and taste, especially its bark and berries.

lindo (lin-'dō), n. [NL., < Sp. Pg. It. lindo, fine, beautiful, pretty.] One of the brilliantly colored thick-billed tanagers of South America; a bullfinch tanager of the genus Euphonia.

lind-tree, n. [ME. lunde-tre, lyn-tre; < lind¹ + tree.] Same as lind¹, linden-tree. Turner, Herbal.

line¹ (lin), n. [< ME. line, lin, lyn, < AS. lin, flax, linen, = OS. OFries. līn = D. lijn = MLG. līn = OHG. MHG. lin, G. lein = Icel. līn = Sw. Dan. lin, flax, = Goth. lein, linen (not recorded in sense of 'flax'); cf. OF. F. lin = Sp. It. lino = Pg. linho, < L. linum = Gr. λίνον = ÖBulg. linū = Lith. linai = Ir. lin, lion = W. lin = Bret. lin, flax (in L., LGr., etc., also linen, a linen garment, a thread, line, cord, rope, etc.); not found in Skt., etc. It is probable but not certain that the Teut., Slav., etc., forms are derived from the L. or Gr. Hence (from AS. lin) linen, lint¹, linseed, linnel¹, etc., and ult. (from L. linum) E. lince², lince³, etc.] 1. Flax. [In the general sense obsolete or provincial.]

He dronk never cidre ne wyn,

Ne never wered clooth of lyn.

Cursor Mundi. (Halliwell.)

Specifically, in technical use—(a) Flax of the longer and fine staple, separated from the shorter by the hackle and prepared for spinning. (b) A hat-makers' pad or brush, now usually of padded velvet, for smoothing the nap of hats.

2. Cloth of flax; linen.

Throughout all parts of Fraunce they weave line and make sailes thereof.
Holland, tr. of Pliny, xix. 1.

Nor anie weaver, which his worke doth boast,

In dieper, in damaake, or in lyne.

Spenser, Mnipiotmos, l. 364.

Little he was, and ever wore a breastplate made of linne.
Chapman, Iliad, ii. 459.

3. Linen apparel; apparel generally.

line² (lin), n. [(a) < ME. line, lyne, a cord, a net, a snare, < AS. līne = D. lijn = OHG. līna, MHG. līne, G. leine = Icel. līna = Dan. line = Sw. lina, a cord, rope; mixed with (b) ME. line, lyne, ligne, < OF. ligne, F. ligne = Pr. ligna = Sp. línea = Pg. linha = It. linea = D. MHG. G. Sw. Dan. līne, a line (mark), < L. linea, also līna, a linen thread, a string, line, feature, outline, line of descent, etc., orig. fem. of līneus (= Gr. λίνεος, λίνος), of flax, linen, < linum, flax, linen: see line¹. It is uncertain whether the words of the first group (a) are Teut. derivatives of the Teut. form line¹, or are borrowed or adapted from L. linum, flax, linen, a linen thread, cord, rope, or, less prob., like the words of the second group (b), from the deriv. linea. The two groups are entirely confused in E.: see line¹.] 1. A thread, string, cord, or small rope of any kind, especially one designed for some particular use, as a fishing-line, measuring-line, clothes-line, a bowline, a hauling-line, etc.

Sowe hem [linul] by a lyne other a threed.

Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 85.

Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Job xxxviii. 5.

The lines were out upon the poles—they were painted green and were square—and on the lines hung half the family linen.
W. Besant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 86.

Specifically—(a) A cord used as a guide or marker in stonework or carpentry; a chalk-line or marking-line. (b) pl. A lot or portion marked off by or as by a measuring-line; hence, fortune; condition.

The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places.

Ps. xvi. 6.

The old seaman paused a moment. "It is hard lines for me," he said, "to leave your honour in tribulation."

Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. iii.

(c) pl. The reins or thongs by which one guides a horse in driving. [U. S.]

2. Anything which resembles a thread or string in tenuity and extension.

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Shak., J. C., ii. 1. 108.

Specifically—(a) A thread-like mark, as one made with a pen, pencil, or graving-tool; a mark having length with little appreciable breadth; a stroke; a score. (b) In musical notation: (1) One of the horizontal strokes or marks that constitute the staff. The usual staff consists of five such lines, that for Gregorian music of four, while larger numbers of lines have also been used. The lines are numbered from below upward. The lines and the spaces between them are collectively called degrees. The pitches to which the several degrees are assigned depend upon the clef and the signature placed at the head of the staff. When it is necessary temporarily to increase the compass of the staff above or below, added or ledger lines are used, which are numbered up or down from the staff proper. See notation, staff, and ledger. (2) A short dash or stroke used in figured bass to indicate that a tone of a previous chord is to be continued without regard to its harmonic connection into a second chord. See figured bass, under bass. (3) A wavy horizontal mark, preceded by the letters Sea, added above or below a passage to indicate that it is to be played an octave above or below the pitch at which it is written. The end of such a transposition is indicated by the word loco, 'in place,' or simply by the termination of the line. (4) A wavy vertical mark to the left of the notes of a chord, to indicate that the chord is to be played arpeggio. (c) A seam or furrow on the face or hands. Such seams in the hands are the basis of palmistry. See phrases below.

And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time, . . .

O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,

Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen.

Shak., Sonnets, xix.

3. In math.: (a) The limit of a surface; a length without breadth. These definitions, cited as well known by Aristotle, may be more precisely expressed thus: a part or the whole of the intersection of two surfaces; a continuum of points extended in only one dimension at each point. (b) In higher geom., a right line, ray, or axis; a curve of the first order. This use of the word is inaccurate but common, and can give rise to no inconvenience, since a line in sense (a) is usually called a curve in higher geometry, except a broken line, which is not considered.

4. Outline; contour; lineament; configuration: as, a ship of fine lines.

The lines of my body are as well drawn as his.

Shak., Cymbeline, iv. 1. 10.

5. A limit; division; boundary.

The Hellenes always drew a sharp line between themselves and the barbarians, a term by which they designated all non-Hellenic people.

W. E. Hearn, Aryan Household, p. 262.

6. A row; a continued series or rank: as, a line of trees or of buildings.

We past long lines of northern capes.

Tennyson, The Voyage.

(a) A straight row of letters and words between two margins: as, a page of thirty lines.

And yet I would I had o'erlooked the letter. . . .

Lo, here in one line is his name twice writ.

Shak., T. G. of V., l. 2. 123.

(b) In poetry, a succession of feet (colon or period), consisting of words written or printed in one row; a verse. A line or verse is no definite prosodic group of feet, but may consist of a single colon or of two cola, the ordinary width of a page or column generally limiting its length. Short verses or cola are sometimes printed as single lines, or combined in pairs to constitute one line. The name line is sometimes extended to verses slightly exceeding the printed line in length, but marked by indentation and want of initial capital as one verse. In ancient prosody a line (versus, στίχος) was conventionally determined to be a dactylic meter or period, or a monocolic period of eighteen or more more in magnitude. A shorter period was called a colon or a comma. Abbreviated l.

Waller was smooth; but Dryden taught to join

The varying verse, the full resounding line.

Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. l. 268.

Hence—(c) pl. Any piece of writing, as a letter, or an actor's part in the dialogue of a play; specifically, a short or occasional poem, or poetry in general.

Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devised?

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 2.

(d) A short letter—one as it were consisting of only a line of writing; a note: as, I received a line from my friend.

(e) pl. Same as marriage lines. [Colloq.]

"How should a child like you know that the marriage was irregular?" "Because I had no lines!" cries Caroline. . . . "And our maid we had then said to me, 'Miss Carry, where's your lines? And it's no good without.' And I knew it wasn't."

Thackeray, Philip, xii.

(f) A row or rank of soldiers drawn up with an extended front: distinguished from column. (g) A disposition of ships at regular intervals, either at anchor or under way. See line of battle. (h) pl. A punishment in English schools, consisting in requiring the student to commit a certain number of lines of Latin or Greek verse to memory.

7. A continuous or connected series, as of progeny or kin, descending from a common progenitor: as, a line of kings; the male line.

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that heroic line.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 78.

8. A series of public conveyances, as coaches, steamers, packets, and the like, passing to and fro between places with regularity: as, a line of ships to New Zealand; the Cunard line.—9. A railroad, or a continuous part of a railroad: as, a main line, branch line, through line.—10. A telegraph-wire between stations, forming with them the circuit.—11. In com.: (a) An order given to an agent or commercial traveler for goods. (b) The goods received upon such order. (c) The stock on hand of any particular class of goods.—12. In her., the division or demarcation between a bearing and the field, or between one bearing and another when one is charged upon the other. The ordinaries and subordinaries are the bearings whose lines are most commonly varied. See dancetté, dovetailed, embatted, engrailed, indented, inected, nebulé, ragulé, and undé or wavy.

13. In fort.: (a) A trench or rampart. (b) pl. A series of field-works, either continuous or with intervals. Wilhelm, Mil. Diet.—14. Milit., in the British army, the regular infantry, as distinguished from cavalry, artillery, militia, volunteer corps, etc. (in some cases, however, including the ordinary regiments of cavalry); in the United States army, the infantry, cavalry, and artillery of the regular army. The combatant officers in the navy are called officers of the line, as distinguished from the non-combatants, or officers of the staff. Thus, the line officers are admirals, commodores, captains, commanders, lieutenant-commanders, lieutenants, lieutenants (junior grade), ensigns, and midshipmen. Mates, boatswains, and gunners are also line officers, but not in the line of promotion.

It is now generally conceded that the law contemplates that the fighting portion of the army, as cavalry, artillery, infantry, and engineers, . . . constitutes the line of the army. W. H. M. Diet.

15. The course in which anything proceeds or which any one takes; direction given or assumed; as, a line of policy or of argument; to mark out a line of travel or of conduct; to pursue a certain line of business or of art.

If I chance to make an excursion into the matters of the Commonwealth, it is not out of curiosity, or busy-bodiness to be meddling in other men's lines. Fidler, Church Hist., II. ix. 23.

He is uncommonly powerful in his own line, but it is not the line of a first-rate man. Coleridge.

I am now sending back to Belle Plain all my wagons for a fresh supply of provisions and ammunition, and propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer. U. S. Grant, To Gen. Halleck, May 11, 1864.

16. A unit of length, the twelfth of an inch, or sometimes the tenth of an inch. As a subdivision of an English inch it was never common and is now obsolete. The Paris line, a unit formerly much used throughout Europe, is the twelfth part of a French inch, equal to 0.0888 of an English inch, or 2.256 millimeters.

17. The equinoctial line; the equator.

Twenty of the dog-days now reign in a nose; all that stand about him are under the line. Shak., Hen. VIII., v. 4. 44.

Abdominal line. See abdominal.—Absorption-lines. See absorption.—Aclinic, adiabatic, agonic, Alamanian, atmospheric, basi-aleolar, basic, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Asymptotic line, a curve upon a surface the envelop of normal sections, having infinite radii of curvature. Not to be confounded with asymptotical lines.—Basibregmatic line, the line joining the basion and bregma.—Becket-line, a short piece of rope used to form a becket or bight on a longer or larger line, such, for example, as is used in rigging a trawl.—Breeding in the line. See breeding.—Broken, bulkhead, cardiac line. See the qualifying words.—Casting-line, a line, from 7 to 9 feet long, made of several gut-lengths, attached to the rod-line in angling, and having the drops fastened to it.—Check-line, a line attached to a fishing-line fastened to an outrigger, by which the fishing-line is drawn in to the boat without disturbing the outrigger.—Circular, concluding, contingent, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Curved line, a line whose direction continuously changes along its length.—Curved line of the ilium, inferior, middle, and superior, the lines on the dorsum ilii, marking off the origins of the gluteal muscles. Also called linea glutea.—Curved lines of the occipital bone, the curved lines on the outer surface of the occipital bone; a superior, median, and inferior are distinguished. Also called linea nucha.—Cutting-down line. See cutting.—Cyclifying, dimidiate, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Datum-line. See datum.—Directed right line, dislocated line, dotted line. See direct, dislocate, dot.—Dobie's line. See membrane.—Double line, in entom., a line formed of two generally unequal lines which are close together and parallel.—Equinoctial line, the celestial equator; also, the terrestrial equator; in the latter sense commonly called the line.—Equipotential, focal, full line. See the adjectives.—Facial line of Camper. See cranionometry.—Fiducial line. (a) The straight edge of the middle of a plane-table. (b) The initial line of a graduated circle or vernier. (c) Any line which is intended to be taken as a standard straight line.—Fraunhofer's lines. See spectrum.—Frontal minimum line, the shortest horizontal line drawn between the temporal crests of the frontal bone.—Generating line. See generate.—Geodesic, gingival, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Geodetic line, a curve upon a surface any arc of which between points not too remote is the shortest path on that surface between those points. The osculating plane of a geodetic line at any point is there normal to the surface.—Geometrical line, an algebraic curve.—Gunter's line. (a) A logarithmic line on Gunter's scale, used in performing the multiplication and division of numbers mechanically by means of dividers. Also called line of lines and line of numbers. (b) A sliding scale corresponding to logarithms, for performing these operations by inspection without dividers. Also called Gunter's sliding rule.—Hard lines. See def. 1(b).—Helispherical line. Same as loxodromic line.—Horizontal line. See horizontal.—Hour-lines, in dialing, the common sections of the hour circles of the sphere with the plane of the dial.—Ilipectineal line, in anat. See ilipectineal.—Imaginary, isochimal, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Index of a line. See index.—Initial line. See polar coordinates in a plane, under coordinate.—Isoacial, isodynamic, isogonic lines. See the adjectives.—Iso-phasal line, a line drawn in the plane of the imaginary variable through all values which correspond to values of the function having one value of the argument.—Iso-timal line, a line drawn in the plane of the imaginary variable through all values which correspond to values of the function having one modulus.—Lateral line, in ichth., a longitudinal line along each side of many fishes, marked by the structure or color of the skin, or by both. It consists of a row of tubes or pores, mostly on scales, extending from the head to or toward the tail. The pores are the ducts of muciferous glands whose product is excreted on the sides of the fish. The modifications of the lateral line are innumerable, and often afford classificatory characters. Thus, the line is more or less nearly parallel with the outline of the back in most scanthopterygian fishes, and with the outline of the belly in cyprinoids and many other malacopterygian fishes. The line is well shown in the cuts under caplin, haddock, and hake (which see).—Leger line. See leger.—Lesser line. See lesser.

—Line abreast. See abreast.—Line and level, a plumb-line; hence, rule; method.

This decencie is therefore the line & level for all good makers to do their business by. Pultenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 218.

We steal by line and level. Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 230.

Line at infinity, the aggregate of all points in any plane at an infinite distance from any given origin. It is called the line at infinity because represented by a line in a perspective projection; for in such a projection every straight line is projected into a straight line, and no other curve or locus is so projected, generally speaking.—Line coordinates. See line-coordinates.—Line drawing. See drawing.—Line geometry. See geometry.—Line of apsides. (a) In anc. astron., the line through the perigee and apogee of a planet's orbit. (b) In mod. astron., the line through the perihelion and aphelion; the major axis of the orbit.—Line of ascent. See ascent.—Line of battle, the line formed by the ships of a fleet or by an army when or as when in readiness for action.—Line of bearing, a line formed by the ships of a fleet in which each ship bears by compass in a prescribed direction from the next ahead or astern or on either side.—Line of beauty, in art, a line of undulating curvature which, it has been maintained, must enter as a potent factor in all graceful combinations of line and form. Different artists have given it different forms, but it is most commonly considered as a curve of contrary flexure resembling a very slender elongated letter S.—Line of center, in mach. (a) A straight line joining the centers of two wheels in gear. E. H. Knight. (b) The dead line; that line in which a crank and the connecting-rod stand when their axes form a straight line.—Line of coincidence, collimation, counter-approach. See coincidence, etc.—Line of consanguinity, a family relationship between two persons; it is either descending (the relationship of a person to his descendant), ascending (the relationship of a person to his ancestor), or transversal (the relationship of a person to a descendant of one of his progenitors).—Line of curvature, a line traced upon any surface such that the normals at any two successive points meet one another. Through each point of every surface there are two lines of curvature which are perpendicular to each other.—Line of Daubenton. See cranionometry.—Line of defense. See defense.—Line of dip, in geol., a line in the plane of a stratum, or part of a stratum, perpendicular to its intersection with a horizontal plane; the line of greatest inclination of a stratum to the horizon. See dip.—Line of direction. (a) See direction. (b) A line laid down in surveying; the bearing.—Line of distance. See distance.—Line of equilibrium, a curve every point on which is a point of equilibrium.—Line of fire, flotation, flow. See fire, etc.—Line of force. (a) A straight line through the point of application of a force and in the direction of its action. (b) A curve whose tangent everywhere coincides with the direction at the point of tangency of a force distributed through space. Maxwell, following a hint from Faraday, supposes these lines so drawn that the number per unit of area normal to them in the neighborhood of a point shall measure the intensity of the force at that point.—Line of health, or line of the liver (hepatic line), in palmaristry, a line beginning at the wrist, near the line of life, and running upward to the base of the fourth finger.—Line of life, in palmaristry, a line starting near the wrist, skirting the base of the thumb, and terminating between the thumb and the line of the head.—Line of lines, line of numbers. Same as Gunter's line (a).—Line of motion. (a) A curve imagined to be so drawn in a fluid that the direction at any point is that of the motion of the fluid at the same point; a line of flow. Lamb. (b) The path of a particle of a moving fluid. Basset.—Line of nodes. See node.—Line of Saturn, or line of fate, in palmaristry, a line beginning near the wrist, and running up the middle of the hand toward the base of the second finger.—Line of spherical curvature, a line every point of which is an umbilic on the surface.—Line or curve of swiftest descent. Same as brachistochrone.—Line of the hand, in palmaristry, a line beginning between the thumb and forefinger, and extending across the central part of the palm of the hand, parallel to the line of the heart.—Line of the heart, in palmaristry, a line passing across the hand, skirting the mounts of Mercury, Apollo, Saturn, and Jupiter.—Line of the sun or line of fortune, in palmaristry, a line running upward to the base of the third finger.—Lines of level. See level.—Lines of operation (with), all lines of communication by which an army may reach an enemy's base of operations. A simple line of operations is one by which the divisions of an army are kept together, or within supporting distance of each other. The roads forming this line are nearly parallel, quite close together, and have no impassable obstructions between them. A double line of operations is one in which a divided army follows two sensibly parallel roads so far apart that the two sections of the army cannot be assembled upon the same day on the same field of battle. Double lines of operation may be either converging or diverging, according as they approach each other or draw wider apart as they advance. An accidental line of operations is adopted when an army is compelled to abandon the line of operations proposed in the original plan and take up another. A temporary line of operations (also called manoeuvring line) is one which deviates from the line of movement adopted in the general plan of the campaign. When the movement is completed the general line is resumed. An interior line of operations is one which lies between the double lines of an enemy and enables the army following it to fall upon and defeat the parts of the enemy's army in succession. In such a case the double lines are said to be exterior lines.—Logistic, loxodromic, magistral, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Marriage line, a marriage certificate. [Colloq., Eng.]—Mason and Dixon's line, the boundary between Pennsylvania on the north and Maryland on the south (lat. 39° 43' N.), partly surveyed by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon between 1763 and 1767, and afterward completed by others; celebrated before the extinction of slavery as a line of demarcation between the free and the slave States.—Medial, median, meridian, etc., line. See the adjectives.—Multiple lines. See multiple.—Naso-aleolar line, nasoabstular line. See cranionometry.—Natural line of sight. See sight.—Newton's line, in surg., a line drawn from the anterior superior spine of the ilium to the most prominent part of the tuberosity of the ischium. In the course of this line lie the center of the acetabulum and the summit of the trochanter major of the femur.—Neumann lines. See meteorite.—Nodal, objective, occult, etc., lines. See the adjectives.—Oblique line of the lower jaw, an oblique line beginning below the mental foramen and passing upward and backward to the anterior border of the coronoid process.—Officer of the line. See def. 14.—Organs of the lateral lines, in ichth. See mucous canals, under mucous.—Parasternal line, the line drawn on the surface of the chest perpendicularly downward from the junction of the middle and inner thirds of the clavicle.—Polar line, the intersection of consecutive normal planes to a skew curve. This is the name given by Monge (droit polaire), but Mannheim's axis of curvature is preferable.—Popliteal line, a line passing downward and inward on the upper part of the posterior surface of the tibia; it gives origin to the soleus muscle.—Quadrate line, in anat., the linea quadrata (which see, under linea).—Redan line, a series of redans connected by straight curtains. Mahan, Milit. Engineering.—Right line. See right.—Ship of the line. See ship.—Shotted line, a fishing-line to which split shot are attached as sinkers. Shotted casting-lines are also used in special cases for fly-fishing.—Spiric line, a bicircular quartic having an axis of symmetry. Such a curve is a plane section of an anchor-ring, or torus, and indeed of four different ones, though all may be imaginary.—Stream-line, in hydrodynamics: (a) A line of motion in a fluid whose motion is steady. Stokes. (b) The actual path of a particle or molecule in a fluid mass.—Supracondylar lines of the femur, the two lines into which the linea aspera divides below.—Telegraph-line, telephone-line. See telegraphy, telephony.—Temporal inferior line, the lower of the two curving ridges which pass back from the external angular process of the frontal bone over the frontal and parietal bones. Also called lower temporal ridge.—Temporal lines, the two curving ridges which pass back from the external angular process of the frontal bone over the frontal and parietal bones. The upper, the superior temporal line or upper temporal ridge, is the line of attachment of the temporal fascia, while the lower marks the upper boundary of the attachment of the temporal muscle.—The line. Same as equinoctial line.—To draw the line. See draw.—To drop a line. See drop.—To give line. See give, p. 1.—To give one line, to allow one apparent freedom or opportunity of action, with a view to securing an ultimate advantage; in allusion to the angler's playing of a hooked fish.

Wherefore should the Ministers give them so much line for shifts and delays? Milton, Reformation in Eng., l.

It's policy to give 'em line. Dickens, Hard Times, li. 8.

To keep a line, in archery, to shoot in the vertical plane of the gold of the target.—To make even lines. See even.—To part a line, to break it, as when a whale runs so fast as to break the whale-line. Also to part a warp.—To sound a line, to go down when harpooned and carry the line with it: said of a whale.—To sound all line, to go down so far as to take out all the line from the boat: said of a whale.—To stop a line, to confine or fasten a rope, usually by means of a smaller one. Thus, to stop the line to the harpoon-staff is to fasten the line to the handle by passing one or more turns of rope-yarn around both line and pole, and confining the ends by knotting them together.—To wet one's line, to put one's fishing-line to use; to fish.—Trapezoid line, the line of attachment of the trapezoid ligament on the under side of the outer part of the clavicle.—Visual line. Same as visual axis (which see, under axis).—Vortex-line, a curve imagined to be so drawn in a fluid that its direction is everywhere that of the instantaneous axis of molecular rotation at that point.—Wallace's line (so named after Alfred R. Wallace, who defined it), in zoogeog., a line assumed to separate the Indomalayan from the Austromalayan zoological region or faunal area. It passes between Borneo and Celebes, through the strait of Macassar, southward between Bali and Lombok, northeastward between Mindanao and Gilolo. This line divides the shallow waters of the Indomalayan region from the much deeper Austromalayan seas; and the character of the fauna is quite different on the two sides of it.—White line, in printing, a blank line; a blank space equal in depth to the space occupied by a line of reading in any given size of type. [In geometry curve is often used instead of line, so that phrases not found above should be sought under curve.]

line² (lin, r; pret. and pp. lined, ppr. lining. [F. ligner = Sp. linear = It. lineare (cf. D. lijnen, liniëren = G. liniren = Dan. liniere = Sw. liniera), line, < L. lineare, reduced to a straight line, ML. draw lines upon, < linea, a line: see line², n. In defs. 6, 7, the senses touch those of line³, v.] I. trans. 1. To draw lines upon; mark with lines or thread-like strokes: said of some decorative processes, and also of the effects of age, fatigue, etc., on the human countenance.

Some wood engravers are but too apt to pride themselves on the delicacy of their lining, without considering whether it be well adapted to express their subject. Chatta, Wood Engraving, p. 584.

The simple operation of lining the edge of a plate is executed by female hands. Art Journal, N. S., IX. 267.

2. To delineate; draw; paint. [Rare.]
All the pictures fairest lined
Are but black to Rosalind.
Shak., As you Like it, iii. 2. 97.

3. To give out, line by line; read one or two of the lines or strophes of (a metrical hymn) in public worship before singing. The custom of lining out the hymns originated at a time when printed books were scarce, and when congregational singing could be secured in no other way; it is now nearly unknown. The reading was done by the clerk, by a deacon, or by the officiating clergyman himself. In New England it was sometimes called deaconing. Usually with out.

In large coloured churches [in the South] it is still the practice to line out the hymns, because few of the congregation can read. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLIII, 361.

4. To measure, as land, with a line; or fix the boundaries of. [Scotch.]—5. To bring into line or aline; hence, to arrange; marshal; employ in service.

No actor of American birth and training can be lined to this class of work. Philadelphia Times, March 21, 1886.

6. To place something in a line along; arrange something along and within for security or defense: as, to line works with soldiers.

Line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage. Shak., Ilen. V., ii. 4. 7.

Not feeble years, nor childhood stay'd, but all Alike impatient through'd to line the wall.

Hoole, tr. of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, xxxv.

The spears that line
Baronial halls the opprobrious insult feel.

Wordsworth, Eccles. Sonnets, i. 37.

7. See the quotation.

Cunning mules [when hobbled] . . . soon learn to lift both forefeet at a time and gallop off; hence they are lined, that is, the forefoot is tied to the hindfoot on the same side, so that the step is very much shortened and their gait reduced to a kind of pace.

S. De Vere, Americanisms, p. 131.

Lining out stuff, the operation of drawing lines on boarding or planking, to guide the cutting of it into thinner pieces.—To line bees, to track wild bees to their nests by following them in the line of their flight.—To line men (milit.), to dress or arrange a body of men so that they shall collectively form an even line or lines.

II. intrans. To fish with a line. [Rare, U. S.]

The squeteague is taken both by lining and seining.

J. V. C. Smith, Fishes of Massachusetts.

line³ (lin), v. t.; pret. and pp. lined, ppr. lining. [ME. linen, cover on the inside, double; prob. orig. double with linen, < linē, linen: see linē, n.] 1. To cover the inside of (some object, as a garment, a utensil, etc.) with some material other than that of which the object lined is made.

Coach with purple lin'd, and mitres on its side.

Cowper, Tirocinium, l. 369.

Hence, by extension—2. To fill the inside of; wad; stuff: as, to line a purse or a pocket with money.

What
If I do line one of their hands?

Shak., Cymbeline, ii. 3. 72.

By this rich purse, and by the twenty ducats
Which line it, I will answer for thy honesty.

Ford, Fancies, iii. 1.

No bridegroom's hand be mine to hold
That is not lined with yellow gold.

Waltter, Maid of Attitash.

3†. To cover; pad.

Their smoothed tongues are lined all with guyle.

Gascoyne, Hearbes, Council to Master Barthol. Withipoll.

Son of sixteen,

Pluck the lined crutch from thy old limping sire.

Shak., T. of A., iv. 1. 14.

4. To impregnate: said of animals.

It would with the utmost Diligence look for a Dog that upon all Accounts was of a good Breed, to line her, that he might not have a Litter of Mongrels.

N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, II. 160.

5†. To aid. [Rare.]

Whether he was combined
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage.

Shak., Macbeth, i. 3. 112.

To line one's jacket. See jacket.

line⁴ (lin), n. An obsolete form of linē, line².

linea (lin' ē-ā), n.; pl. lineæ (-ē), [L.: see linē, n.] In zool. and anat., a line; a linear mark or trace, whether of impression or expression.—Linea alba, the white line, the median longitudinal line of connective tissue running from the pubis to the sternum.—Linea aspera, the rough line, a prominent longitudinal ridge on the back of the femur. It divides above into three lines running to the great trochanter, lesser trochanter, and spiral line, and below into two lines running to the inner and outer condyles.—Linea costocartilaginis, a line marking the junction of the ribs with their cartilages, drawn from the sternoclavicular articulation to the tip of the eleventh rib.—Linea fusca, a median line of darker pigmentation extending upward from the pubis to the umbilicus or beyond, developed in pregnant women. Also called pigmented abdominal line.—Linea glutæa posterior, anterior, and inferior respectively, the superior, middle, and inferior curved lines of the dorsum illi.—Linea iliopectinæa, the iliopectineal line (which see, under iliopectineal).—Linea innominata, the brim of the true pelvis, formed by the promontory of the sacrum and the rounded angle between the upper and anterior surfaces of the lateral divisions of the first sacral vertebra, the iliopectineal line, and the upper border of the os pubis.—Linea lateralis, in ichth., the lateral line (which see, under line²).—Linea mylohyoidea, the mylohyoid ridge on the inner surface of the lower jawbone.—Linea nuchæ inferior, the line, curved, of occipital bone, inferior.—Linea nuchæ mediana, the external occipital protuberance, running in the middle line from the external occipital crest to the foramen magnum.—Linea nuchæ superior or suprema, the line, curved, of occipital bone, superior.—Linea parasternalis, a line drawn on the surface of the chest from the junction of the inner and middle thirds of the clavicle perpendicularly downward.—Linea quadrati, the line of insertion of the quadratus femoris muscle.—Linea semilunaris, the curved tendinous line on the outer border of the rectus muscle, extending from the cartilage of the eighth rib to the pubis. Also called linea Spiegelii.—Linea splendens, the shining line, a median lengthwise band along the anterior surface of the pia mater of the spinal cord.—Linea transversæ. (a) Of the abdomen, the tendinous intersections in the course of the rectus muscle of the abdomen. (b) Of the fourth ventricle, the striæ acusticæ (which see, under stria).

Lineæ (lin' ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1813), < Linum + -æ.] An order of polypetalous exogenous plants, typified by the genus Linum, belonging to the cohort Geraniales. It is characterized by regular flowers, with imbricate sepals, and an entire ovary which is from three- to five-celled, usually with two ovules in each cell, having a fleshy albumen. The order embraces about 235 species, divided among 15 genera, which have been grouped under 4 tribes. They are herbs, rarely trees, usually with alternate leaves, and are widely dispersed throughout the world. Also Linaceæ.

lineage (lin' ē-āj), n. [Prop., as orig., linage (mod. pron. li' nāj); the spelling lineage simulates line², lineal, etc., and the pron. has been altered to suit lineal, etc.; < ME. linage, lynage, lynage, < AF. OF. linage, F. lignage (cf. Pg. linhagem), linage, < lignē, < L. linea, a line: see linē, n.] Line of descent from an ancestor; hence, family; race; stock.

Of his lynage am I, and his offspring,

By verrey lynge, as of the stok roial.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 693.

He was of the house and lynage of David. Luke ii. 4.

Believe me, he is well-bred,

And cannot be but of a noble lynage.

Beau. and Fl., Wit without Money, i. 2.

Hither he brought a joyous dame,

Unknown her lynage or her name.

Scott, Rokeby, vi. 12.

= Syn. Genealogy, etc. (see pedigree), birth, extraction, ancestry, family, descent.

lineal (lin' ē-āl), a. [= F. lineal = Sp. Pg. lineal = It. lineale, pertaining to a line, < L. linealis, < linea, a line: see linē, n.] 1. Of or pertaining to a line or length; extending in a line; involving the single dimension of length: as, lineal measure; a lineal foot. [In the physical sense lineal and linear are often used interchangeably, but a differentiation is commonly made. Compare linear.] Lineal walks immediately enveloped the slight scene.

Walpole, Anecdotes, IV. vii.

An inch is the smallest lineal measure to which a name is given.

O. Gregory, Mathematics, p. 120.

2. Proceeding in a direct or unbroken line; hereditary; unbroken in course: distinguished from collateral: as, lineal descent; lineal succession.

The house of York,

From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 166.

3. Pertaining or relating to direct descent; hereditary in quality or character; having an ancestral basis or right.

The lineal glory of your royal house.

Shak., Rich. III., iii. 7. 121.

Millions shall spring from our loins, and trace back with lineal love their blood to ours.

R. Choate, Addresses, etc., p. 104.

4†. Allied by direct descent.

For only you are lineal to the throne. Dryden.

lineal measure, warranty, etc. See the nouns.

lineality (lin' ē-āl' i-ti), n. [lineal + -ity.]

The state of being lineal, or in the form of a line. Wright. [Rare.]

lineally (lin' ē-āl-i), adv. In a lineal manner; in a direct line: as, one who is lineally descended from the Conqueror.

From whose race of old

She heard that she was lineally extract.

Spenser, F. Q., III. ix. 38.

lineament (lin' ē-ā-ment), n. [F. lineament = Sp. lineamiento = Pg. lineamento = It. lineamento, feature, < L. lineamentum, a line, feature, < lineare, reduce to a straight line, ML. draw lines upon: see line².] A feature or detail of a body or figure considered as to its outlines or contour; linear formation of a part, as in the human face; hence, a particular physical feature or characteristic; sometimes, a distinguishing characteristic or quality in general: used chiefly in the plural.

The lineaments of the body do disclose the disposition and inclination of the mind in general.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 184.

Examine every married lineament,

And see how one another lends content.

Shak., R. and J., i. 3. 83.

line-and-line (lin' and-lin'), a. With edge exactly to edge: a term characterizing the adjustment of a slide-valve without lead: as, a line-and-line setting. See lead¹, n., 8.

The valve is supposed to be set without any lead, or line-and-line, as it is called, at full stroke. That is, the steam edges of the valve correspond with the steam edges of the part at the beginning of the stroke.

Forney, Locomotive, p. 237.

linear (lin' ē-ār), a. [= F. linéaire = Sp. Pg. lineal = It. lineare, < L. linearis, belonging to a line, < linea, a line: see linē, n. Cf. lineal.]

1. Of or pertaining to a line or lines; composed or consisting of lines: as, linear drawing; linear perspective.—2. Relating to length only; specifically, in math. and physics, involving measurement in one dimension only, or a sum of such measurements; involving only straight lines; unidimensional; of the first degree: as, linear numbers; linear measure. A plane is said to be a linear locus, because of the first order; expansion, if considered in one dimension only, the others being neglected, is termed linear expansion.

The linear expansion of metals heated between the freezing and boiling points of water varies from one to three parts in 1,000.

W. B. Carpenter, Energy in Nature, p. 49.

3. In bot., zool., and anat., like a line or thread; slender; very narrow and elongate: as, a linear leaf.—4. In pros., consisting in or pertaining to a succession of single verses all of the same rhythm and length; stichic: as, linear composition; "Paradise Lost" is linear in composition.

Linear algebra, a system of algebra in which every expression equals a linear expression in certain units.—Linear class of functions, a number of functions produced from one another by addition, by subtraction, and by multiplication by constants.—Linear coefficient of expansion. See coefficient.—Linear complex, congruence, content. See the nouns.—Linear demonstration, a proof drawn from the consideration of a geometrical diagram, without the use of algebra or trigonometry.—Linear differential equation, an equation in which the differential coefficients and dependent variables are not multiplied into themselves or into one another: thus, is a linear partial differential equation.—Linear drawing. See drawing.—Linear dyadic. See dyadic.—Linear ensemble. See ensemble. 3.—Linear equation, in math., an equation of the first degree between two variables: so called because every such equation may be considered as representing a right line.—Linear function, a function resulting from the performance of the operations of addition, subtraction, and multiplication by constants upon the variables.—Linear geometry, group, integral, etc. See the nouns.—Linear heraldry, heraldry of the more elaborate sort, in which a number of ordinaries and their bearings are combined to produce varied escutcheons.—Linear numbers, in math., such numbers as have relation to length only, as a number which represents one side of a plane figure. If the plane figure is a square, the linear side is called a root.—Linear perspective, that branch of perspective which regards only the positions, magnitudes, and forms of the objects delineated: distinguished from aerial perspective, which considers also the variations of the light, shade, and color of objects, according to their different distances and the quantity of light which falls on them.—Linear problem, a problem that may be solved geometrically by the intersection of two right lines, or algebraically by an equation of the first degree.—Linear space, a uniaxial space the points of which may be uniquely represented by value-systems of the coordinates, without the exception of any point-equations or loci-values.—Linear transformation, a transformation from one set of variables to another connected with them by linear equations.—Linear units, units of length.

$$t D_x^2 y + x D_y^2 y = 0$$

linear-acute (lin' ē-ār-ā-kūt'), a. [L. linearis, linear (see linear), + acutus, sharp: see acute.]

In bot., narrow and very gradually tapering to a point, as a leaf; acuminate.

linear-ensate (lin' ē-ār-en'sāt'), a. [L. linearis, linear (see linear), + ensis, a sword.] In bot., having the form of a long narrow sword.

linearity (lin' ē-ār' i-ti), n. [linear + -ity.]

The state or condition of being linear.

The linearity of the differential equation depends upon this physical fact, etc.

Airy, Optics, § 12.

linear-lanceolate (lin' ē-ār-lan'sē-ō-lāt'), a. [L. linearis, linear (see linear), + LL. lanceolatus, armed with a little lance or point: see lanceolate.] In bot., lanceolate and very slender; narrow and parallel-sided in the middle, and tapering to a slender base and an acute tip.

linearly (lin' ē-ār-li), adv. In a linear manner; with lines.

linear-oblong (lin' ē-ār-ob'lōng), a. Oblong and very narrow.

lineary (lin' ē-ār-i), a. [L. linearis, belonging to a line, < linea, a line: see linē, n. Cf. linear.] Linear. Holland.

lineatē (lin' ē-āt'), v. t. [L. lineatus, pp. of lineare, reduce to a straight line, ML. draw lines upon, < linea, a line: see linē, n.] To draw; delineate. Davies.

Linear Leaf of Pycnanthemum tinifolium.

Life to the life the Chessboard lineates.

Sylvester, Memorials of Mortalitie, st. 8.

lineate (lin'ē-āt), a. [L. lineatus, pp.: see the verb.] Marked with lines, especially with longitudinal and more or less parallel lines: as, a lineate leaf. In describing sculpture, a surface is said to be lineate when it has fine elevated or depressed longitudinal lines more or less parallel and separated by regular intervals. Also lined.

lineated (lin'ē-ā-ted), a. Same as lineate.
lineation (lin'ē-ā-shon), n. [L. lineatio(n-), a drawing of a line, < lineare, pp. lineatus, reduce to a line: see lineate, v.] 1. A marking by lines; disposition or arrangement of lines. The lineation of the naerona surface may perhaps be thus accounted for. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 505.

2. In zool., one or more line-like marks on a surface; the appearance or form of a lineated surface: as, the lineation of the thorax of a fly. There are in the horny ground two white lineations, with two of a pale red. Woodward.

3t. Mensuration. Halliwel (spelled lineation).
line-conch (lin'kongk), n. A large gastropod, fasciolaria distans, marked by several black lines revolving on the whorls of the shell. [Florida.]

line-coördinate (lin'kō-ōr'di-nāt), n. One of a set of quantities, commonly three in a plane, or six in space, defining the position of a line. The ordinary line-coördinates are u, v, w, in the equation $uz + vy + vx = 0$, where x, y, z are the trilinear coördinates of a point in a plane. When these are taken as constant, while u, v, w are variable, the equation restricts a line to passing through that point, and any set of values of u, v, w define a line. The above equation determines the incidence of the point on the line, whether u, v, w or x, y, z, or both, be variable. The precise geometrical significance of the line-coördinates depends upon that of the point-coördinates. The six line-coördinates in space are generally termed ray-coördinates.

lined¹ (lind), p. a. Same as lineate.
lined² (lind), p. a. 1. Having a lining.—2. Impregnated. See *line*³, v., 4.—3. Supplied with money. [Rare.]

I am given out to be better lined than it can appear to me report is a true speaker; I would I were really that I am delivered to be! Marry, what I have (be it what it will) I will assure upon my daughter at the day of my death. Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, fl. 1.

Lined gold. See gold. line-density (lin'den'si-ti), n. The limiting ratio of the electricity on an element of the line to the length of that element when the element is diminished without limit. Clerk Maxwell, Eleet. and Mag.

line-engraving (lin'en-grā'ving), n. 1. The process of engraving in lines: commonly synonymous with steel or copperplate engraving. See engraving.—2. An engraved plate or a print representing its subject chiefly or wholly by lines.

Drawings, both in crayon and black lead, line engraving, and etchings were within the compass of most people's purses. J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 48.

line-equation (lin'ē-kwā'shon), n. An equation between the coördinates of lines, these being usually tangents of a plane curve.

line-fish (lin'fish), n. A fish, such as the cod, haddock, and halibut, which is taken with the line: opposed to net-fish.

line-fisherman (lin'fish'ēr-man), n. One who fishes with hook and line; a hook-and-line man.

line-fishing (lin'fish'ing), n. The act or art of fishing with hook and line; angling; distinguished from net-fishing.

Lineidæ (li-nō'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lineus + -idæ.] A family of rhyneocœlous turbellarians, typified by the genus Lineus; the sea-longworms, or marine nemerteans. They have an extremely long slender form, unarmed proboscis, elongated cephalic ganglion, and long slits on each side of the head.

lineiform (lin'ē-i-fōrm), a. [L. linea, line, + forma, form.] Linear in form; linear.

line-integral (lin'in'tē-gral), n. In math., the integral along any curve of a vector quantity distributed through space resolved along that curve. Thus, if the vector is a force, the line-integral is the work gained in passing over the curve.

linelet (lin'let), n. [*L. line*² + -let.] A minute or very short line.

The peculiar arrangement of the leading lines (usually two) and train of linelets . . . is fully shown in the diagram. Nature, XXXIX. 370.

linesman (lin'man), n.; pl. linemen (-men). 1. A person who carries the line in surveying, etc.—2. One employed in duties relating to the line of a railroad, telegraph, or telephone; one who attends to keeping the parts of the line, as the rails, posts, wires, etc., in proper condition.—3. A line-fisherman.

linen (lin'en), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also linnen; < MF. linen, lynen, also linnen, < AS. līnen (= OS. līnin = OFries. līnnen = D. linen = MLG. linen = OIlg. MHG. linen, G. leinen, linnen = Dan. linned = Sw. linne), of flax, linen, < lin, flax, + -en: see *line*¹ and *-en*². The noun is now generally regarded as the orig. form, its connection with the obs. *line*¹ being no longer generally recognized. Cf. woolen, woollen, a. and n., < wool.] 1. a. 1. Made of the fibers of flax: as, linen thread; linen cloth.

And David was girded with a linen ephod. 2 Sam. vi. 14.

2. Resembling linen cloth; white; pale. Those linen cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. Shak., Macbeth, v. 3. 16.

Fair linen cloth, in the Anglican Ch., the cloth used at the celebration of the eucharist to cover the consecrated elements after communion; the post-communion veil.—Fair white linen cloth, in the Anglican Ch., the outer altar-cloth, spread over the other altar-cloths at the time of celebration. It usually covers little more than the top of the altar, and hangs down about two feet at each end.—Linen damask. See damask, 1 (d).—Linen diaper, linen cloth woven in the same way as damask, but having a small set pattern of diagonal squares or the like: used for towels, children's clothing, etc.—Linen embroidery, a kind of fancy work made by drawing the threads from a piece of linen, except from the space comprised within the linea of a pattern, so that the pattern remains in solid surface relieved upon the openwork ground from which threads have been withdrawn.—Linen pattern. Same as linen-scroll.

II. n. 1. A fabric of linen yarn or thread; cloth woven from the fibers of flax; in the plural, linen cloth in general; manufactures of flax-fiber: as, Irish linens. The principal fabrics included in the term linens are lawn, cambrie, batiste, damask, diaper, and glass-cloth, besides the heavy qualities known as toweling, shirting, sheeting, etc.

2. Collectively, articles of linen fabric, or by extension (in modern use) of linen and cotton, or of cotton alone for household use, as table-cloths, napkins, etc. (table-linen), sheets and pillow-cases (bed-linen), towels, etc., or for underwear (body-linen), etc.

In any case, let Thisby have clean linen. Shak., M. N. D., iv. 2. 40.

Let's go to that house, for the linen looks white and smells of lavender, and I long to lie in a pair of sheets that smell so. J. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 77.

3. Linen thread.—4. Cloth made of hemp. [Rare.]—5t. pl. Sails. [Rare.]

Down with the main mast, lay her at hull, Farle up her linens, and let her ride it out. Fletcher, Sea Voyage, l. 1.

Carbonized linen. See carbonize.—Cream-twilled linen, a wide linen cloth used as a foundation for embroidery.—Danubian linen, a name given to ornamental damask for table use, having borders, etc., in red. These linens are of Austrian manufacture, and were introduced about 1873.—Diamond linen. See diamond.—Fossil linen, a variety of hornblende with soft and flexible parallel fibers.

linen-draper (lin'en-drā'pēr), n. A person who deals in linen goods and related articles.

I am a linen-draper bold, As all the world doth know. Cropper, John Gilpin.

linener† (lin'en-ēr), n. [L. linen + *-er*¹.] Same as linen-draper.

Have council of tailors, lineners, lace-women, embroiderers. B. Jonson, Epicœne, lt. 3.

linenmant (lin'en-man), n. Same as linen-draper.

linen-muslin (lin'en-muz'lin), n. Same as leno.
linen-panel (lin'en-pan'el), n. A panel decorated with a linen pattern.

linen-prover (lin'en-prō'vēr), n. A small microscope used in commerce for counting the threads in linen fabrics, and thus determining their fineness.

linen-scroll (lin'en-skrōl), n. In arch., a form of curved ornament employed to fill panels: so called from its resemblance to the convolutions of a folded napkin. It belongs peculiarly to the latter part of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sixteenth century. The figure shows the scroll from a panel in Layer Marney Hall, in the county of Essex, England.

Linen-scroll

lineograph (lin'ē-ō-grāf), n. [L. linea, a line, + Gr. γράφειν, write.] An instrument for drawing lines of defined character.

lineola (li-nē-ō-lā), n.; pl. lineolæ (-lē). [L., a little line, dim. of L. linea, a line: see *line*².] In anat. and zool., a small or fine line or lines; a lineolet.

lineolate (lin'ē-ō-lāt), a. [L. lineolatus, < LL. lineola, a little line: see lineola.] In zool. and bot., marked with fine or obscure lines; diminutively lineate.

lineolated (lin'ē-ō-lā-ted), a. Same as lineolate.
lineolet (lin'ē-ō-let), n. [L. lineola + -et.] In entom., a short or minute line.

lineolar (lin'ē-ō-lin'ē-ār), a. [L. linea, a line, + linearis, of a line: see linear.] In math., linear with respect to each of two different variables or sets of variables.

lineopolar (lin'ē-ō-pō'lār), a. [L. linea, a line, + NL. polaris, polar: see polar.] In math., produced by taking the (n - 1)th polar of a locus with respect to a function of the *n*th order: so called because such a polar of a point is a line. Thus, the lineopolar envelop of a line with respect to a cubic is a conic which is the envelop of the lines that are the second polars of the points of the first line.

line-pin (lin'pin), n. In bricklaying, a pin of wire pointed at one end, and usually having an eye or loop on the other end, used as a support for the line or cord by which the bricklayer aligns his work.

liner¹ (lī'nēr), n. [*L. line*² + *-er*¹.] 1. A person employed in drawing or painting lines, as in decorative art.—2. A ship of the line; a man-of-war.

Fancy the sensations of a man fighting his frigate desperately against overwhelming odds, when he sees the outside of a huge liner, with English colours at the main, looming dimly through the smoke! Lawrence, Sword and Gown, xvii.

3. A vessel regularly plying to and from certain ports; especially, a vessel belonging to one of the regular steamship lines: as, a Liverpool and New York liner.—4. In base-ball, a ball knocked or thrown with much force nearly parallel to the ground: as, he struck a liner to second base.—5. A ball, marble, or the like that strikes or remains on some certain line of demarcation used in a game.

liner² (lī'nēr), n. [*L. line*³, v., + *-er*¹.] 1. One who or that which lines. Specifically—2. A vessel of smooth material fit for holding liquids, etc., fitting within an ornamental exterior and made movable for facility of emptying, cleansing, etc. Thus, in ornamental table-ware, a basket of metalwork or a jardinière of fine porcelain has a liner to contain fruit or earth for the plants.

3. In math., a thin plate of metal, paper, leatheroid, etc., placed under some movable and adjustable part—a gib for example—to set up the part toward its bearing after it has been worn away as much as the thickness of the plate.

The École Industrielle des Vosges exhibits a pattern of an 8-foot flywheel that is well made, and a connecting rod end, the double set of keys and gibs dispensing with the use of liners, while enabling the wear to be taken up without altering the length of the rod. Sci. Amer., N. S., LXI. 83.

The barrels are bored up within three inches of the muzzle with a fine-boring bit, using a spill and liners as already described. W. W. Greener, The Gun, p. 237.

4. In marble-working, a long slab of marble to which the backs of small marble tiles, etc., are secured by plaster while being polished.

Linerges (li-nēr'jōz), n. [NL., < Gr. λινοργής, wrought of flax, < λίνον, flax, + ίργειν*, work: see *line*¹ and work.] A genus of discoid jellyfishes, typical of the family Linergida, or the thimblefishes. The bell has the shape of a thimble.

Thimblefish (Linerges mercurius)

Linergidæ (li-nēr'ji-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Linerges + -idæ.] A family of Discomedusæ with simple quadrangular manubrium without mouth-arms, simple quadrate mouth, 8 marginal bodies, 8 tentacles, 16 marginal flaps, broad radial pouches, branched sack-shaped flap-canals, and without ring-canal. See Linerges.

line-riding (lin'rī'ding), n. The act of making on horseback the circuit of the boundary of a cattle-drift, in order to keep the cattle within bounds, and recover those that may have "drifted" or strayed. [Western U. S.]

Line-riding is very cold work, and dangerous, too, when the men have to be out in a blinding snowstorm. T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 668.

line-rocket (lin'rok'et), n. In pyrotechnics, a rocket, usually of small size, with a running connection by which it can be movably attached to a line or wire, along which when fired it is caused to run.

linesman (linz'man), n.; pl. linesmen (-men). Milit., a private in the line; an infantryman.

If not perhaps as tall as our ordinary linesmen, he [the Persian soldier] is as heavy and as strongly built.

Westminster Rev., CXXVIII. 458.

line-squall (līn'skwāl), n. In meteor., a squall occurring along the axis of a V-shaped barometric depression, generally secondary to a large cyclonic area, consisting of a violent straight blow of cold air, usually from the northwest, accompanied by rain or snow and a sudden rise of the barometer: so called by Abercromby. The Iowa squall or derecho is a line-squall.

line-storm (līn'stōrm), n. A storm popularly supposed to occur at the time the sun crosses the equator; hence, any heavy storm that occurs within a week or ten days of the equinoxes; an equinoctial storm. [Local, New Eng.]

Along their foam-white curves of shore
They heard the line-storm rave and roar.

Whittier, The Palatine.

Lineus (līn'ē-us), n. [NL., < L. linea, line: see *line*².] The typical genus of Lineida. L. marinus or L. longissimus is one of the narrowest of organisms for its length, growing to be 12 or 15 feet long and only half an inch or so broad.

line-wire (līn'wīr), n. In teleg., the wire which extends between and connects the stations of a telegraph-line, and transmits the electric current or impulse from station to station.

ling¹ (līng), n. [< ME. leng, leenge, < AS. leng* (not recorded) = MD. lenghe, tinghe, D. leng = G. länge, leng (also lang, langfisch) = Icel. langa = Norw. langa, lona = Dan. lange = Sw. lång, a ling: so named from its length, < AS. lang, etc., long: see *long*¹. Cf. linger, from the same source.] 1. A European gadoid fish, Molva molva or M. vulgaris (called by Cuvier Lota molva). It has an elongate form, a short anterior and long posterior dorsal fin, long anal fin, separate convex caudal Ling (Molva vulgaris).

fin, normal ventral fins, and several large teeth in the lower jaws and vomer, besides a band of small teeth in the jaws and vomer. The ling inhabits the seas of northern Europe, and attains a length of 4 feet. Great numbers of them are caught for food, and either used fresh or salted and dried for future consumption.

2. An American gadoid fish, Lota maculosa, better known as the burbot, and also called lawyer and lake-lawyer.—3. A chiroid fish, Ophiodon elongatus, better known as cattus-coel.—4. Same as bay-cod.—5. Same as conger-eel, 3.

ling² (līng), n. [< ME. lyng, < Icel. lyng = Dan. lyng = Sw. lyng, heath.] Common heather, Calluna vulgaris.

ling³ (līng), n. [Chin.] The water-chestnut of China, Trapa bicornis, largely used in China for food.

-ling¹. [< ME. -ling, -lyng, < AS. -ling (= OS. OFries. -ling = OHG. -ling, MHG. -linc, G. -ling = Icel. -lyng = Goth. -lyngs), a suffix (orig. a compound suffix, < -l + -ing³) denoting origin, or having a dim. force, as in deorling, darling, corthling, earthling, hjrting, a hireling, geongling, a youth, gadeling, a companion, etc.] A termination having usually a diminutive or depreciative force, occurring in designations of persons, as darling, earthling, *gadling*¹, *gadling*², groundling, hireling, lordling, stripling, underling, worldling, etc., or of young animals, etc., as duckling, gosling, kidling, killling, starling, firstling, nestling, yearling, etc.

-ling². [< ME. -ling (also -lignes), < AS. -ling, -līnga, -lūnga, an adverbial termination as in backling, backling, grundlinga, grundlunga, from the bottom, equiv. to -unga, -inga, as in callunga, entirely, færinga, suddenly, etc., orig. a case of -ung, -ing, suffix of verbal nouns: see *ing*¹. Cf. -long.] An adverbial suffix, forming adverbs from nouns, as in backling, darkling, groveling, headling, sideling, halfling, etc. It also appears with an added adverbial genitive suffix, -lings, as in backlings. In dialectal use it is often -lin, -līn. In some words it appears in the variant form -long, as in headlong, sidelong. It is not now used in the formation of new words.

linga (līng'gā), n. Same as lingam.

lingam (līng'gam), n. [Skt. (stem linga, neut. nom. lingam), a mark, a token; especially, the male generative organ.] In Hind. myth., the male organ of generation, worshiped as being representative of the god Siva or of the generative power of nature; a phallus. Also linga.

ling-berry (līng'ber'ē), n. 1. The crowberry, Empetrum nigrum.—2. The cowberry, Vaccinium Vitis-Idaea.—3. The fruit of the ling. [Prov. Eng. in all senses.]

ling-bird (līng'bērd), n. The meadow-pit of Europe, Anthus pratensis: so called as frequenting the moors where the ling or heather grows.

linge (līng), v. i. [< ME. lengen, linger: see linger. Cf. *lingy*².] To work hard. [Prov. Eng.]

lingel¹ (līng'gl), n. [Also linge, dial. liniel, formerly also lintel, lindle, < ME. lingel, lyngel, lynzelle, irreg. lyniof (by error inniof)—Prompt. Parv.), < OF. ligniol*, lignoul, F. lignoul, a shoe-latchet, < L. lineola, dim. of linea, line: see *line*².] 1. A shoe-latchet. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]—2. A shoemaker's thread of hemp rubbed with rosin. Percy.

The Shoemaker maketh Slippers . . . of leather (which is cut with a Cutting-knife) by means of an Awl and Lingel.
Comenius, Visible World, p. 97.

Where sitting, I espy'd a lovely dame,
Whose master wrought with lingel, and with aul,
And under ground he vamped many a boot.

Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, v. 3.

3. Anything of considerable length; a considerable length of anything. [Scotch.]

lingel², n. See *linge*².

lingence¹ (līng'jens), n. [< L. lingen(t)-s, pp. of lingere, lick: see lincture.] A liquid medicated confection taken by licking; a lincture.

A stick hereof [licorice] is commonly the spoon prescribed to patients, to use in any lingences or loaches.
Fuller, Worthies, Nottinghamshire.

linger (līng'gēr), v. [< ME. lengeren*, tarry (= G. ver-längern, prolong), freq. of lengen, tarry, < AS. lengan, prolong, put off (= OHG. lenjan, lengan, lengen, MHG. lengen = D. lengen = MLG. lengen = Icel. lenja = Sw. för-länga = Dan. for-lenge, lengthen), < lang, long: see long, *long*¹.] 1. trans. 1. To make long; prolong; protract; delay; put off; defer.

It shall cause things to have good success, and that matters shall not be lingered forth from day to day.

Lattimer, 2d Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

He goes into Mauritania, . . . unless his abode be lingered here by some accident.

Shak., Othello, iv. 2. 231.

We linger time; the King sent for Philaster and the headsman an hour ago.

Beau. and Fl., Philaster, v. 1.

2. To spend in an inactive or tedious manner; drag: with out, and sometimes away.

Now live secure, and linger out your days.

Dryden, Death of Purcell.

Better to rush at once to shades below,
Than linger life away, and nourish woe.

Pope, Odyssey.

II. intrans. To remain in a place or a state for an unusual, undue, or unexpected length of time; defer action, movement, decision, etc., either from inclination or necessity; hold back; tarry; delay; loiter.

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

Shak., Othello, v. 2. 88.

He, he sure,

Will not connive or linger, thus provoked.

Milton, S. A., 1. 466.

This palace . . . really deserves no small place in the history of Romanesque art. It shows how late the genuine tradition lingered on. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 251.

lingerer (līng'gēr-ēr), n. One who lingers.

lingerie (F. pron. lan-zhè-rè'), n. [F., a linen-warehouse, linen goods, linen underwear, < linger, a dealer in linen goods, < linge, linen, flax, < L. linum, flax, linen: see *line*¹.] Linen goods; linen underwear, especially as used by women; also, collectively, all the linen, cotton, and lace articles of a woman's wardrobe.

lingering (līng'gēr-īng), p. a. Drawing out in time; remaining long; protracted; dilatory in action: as, a lingering illness; lingering poisons.

My griefs not only pain me

As a lingering disease,

But, finding no redress, ferment and rage.

Milton, S. A., 1. 618.

lingeringly (līng'gēr-īng-lī), adv. In a lingering manner; with delay; slowly; tediously.

lingerly (līng'gēr-lī), adv. Lingeringly; slowly. [Rare.]

Sometimes, preoccupied with her work, she sang the refrain very low, very lingerly; "A long time ago" came out like the saddest cadence of a funeral hymn.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, iii.

linget (līng'get), n. See lingot.

lingism (līng'iz'm), n. [< Ling (Peter Henrik Ling (1776-1839), a Swedish poet, who proposed the method) + -ism.] In therap., the Swedish movement-cure; kinesitherapy.

linglet¹, n. See *lingel*¹.

linglet², lingel² (līng'gl), n. [< L. lingula, dim. of lingua, tongue: see lingual. Cf. ligule.] A little tongue or thong of leather, as a lace used in uniting leather bands.

lingo¹ (līng'gō), n. [Prob. a vulgar or cant corruption of L. lingua, tongue, speech: see lin- gual, a.] Language; speech; especially, a peculiar kind of speech, more or less unintelligible; a dialect.

Well, well, I shall understand your Lingo one of these Days, Conslr; in the mean while I must answer in plain English.

Congree, Way of the World, iv. 4.

He's a gentleman of words; he understands your foreign lingo.

Sheridan, St. Patrick's Day, i. 1.

Norman French, for example, or Scotch down to the time of James VI., could hardly be called patois, while I should be half inclined to name the Yankee a lingo rather than a dialect.

Lowell, Biglow Papers, 2d ser., Int.

lingo² (līng'gō), n. [Also lingoa; a native name.] A large leguminous tree, Pterocarpus Indicus, or its wood. See kiaboooa-wood.

lingot¹ (līng'got), n. [< OF. lingot (ML. lingotus), an ingot: see ingot.] A small mass of metal showing the form of the mold in which it is cast, often tongue-shaped; an ingot. Also linget.

Among the Lacedemonians iron lingots quenched with vinegar that they may serve for no other use (bath been used for money).

Camden, Remains.

ling-pink (līng'pīngk), n. Same as ling. [North. Eng.]

Brakes of ling-pink, faintly scented, a feast for every sense.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Robert Elsmere, xi.

-lings. See *ling*².

lingthorn (līng'thōrn), n. A British starfish, Luidia fragilissima, of the family Asteriidae.

lingua (līng'gwā), n.; pl. linguæ (-gwē). [L.: see lingual, tongue.] 1. The tongue; a tongue.

Specifically, in entom.: (a) The central lobe of the ligula when this has two lateral lobes or paraglossae, as in Hymenoptera and many Coleoptera. Kirby applied the term to the whole ligula. Also called glossa. (b) The tubular proboscis of Lepidoptera, formed of the united and elongated maxilla. This tongue-like organ is sometimes several inches long, and in repose is coiled spirally beneath the head. Also called anthera. (c) The hypopharynx, or a tongue-like prolongation of its apex. Huxley. [Rare.] 2. A language.—Frenum linguæ. See frenum.—Ichthyosis linguæ, psoriasis linguæ, tylosis linguæ. Same as leucoplastic.—Liguliform lingua. See liguliform.—Lingua Franca. [NL., It., etc., lit. the Frank language.] (a) A mixed language or jargon used by Frenchmen, Spaniards, Italians, etc., in intercourse with Arabs, Moors, Turks, and Greeks. It is Italian mixed with Arabic, Turkish, Greek, etc. Hence—(b) Any hybrid tongue used similarly in other parts of the world; an international dialect.

What concern have we with the shades of dialect in Homer or Theocritus, provided they speak the spiritual lingua franca that abolishes all alienage of race, and makes whatever shore of time we land on hospitable and homelike?

Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 177.

Lingua geral [Pg., lit. general language], in Brazil, the language of the Guarani Indians: so called because used by Indians throughout Brazil in intercourse with other tribes, and also in dealings with the whites.—Lingua rustica [L., lit. rustic language], the form of ancient Latin as spoken by the common people: so called in contradistinction to classic Latin. It retained numerous archaisms throughout the classical period, and it, rather than the literary form of Latin, has been regarded by many as the source of the vernacular part of the modern Romance languages.—Os linguæ. See linguale.

linguacious¹ (līng'gwā'shus), a. [< LL. linguax (linguac-), loquacious, < L. lingua, tongue: see lingual, a.] Talkative; loquacious. Bailey, 1727.

linguadental (līng'gwā-den'tal), a. and n. [Prop. linguidental*: < L. lingua, tongue (see lingual, a.), + dens (dent-), a tooth: see dental.] Same as dentilingual.

lingual (līng'gwāl), a. and n. [= F. Sp. Pg. lingual = It. linguale, < NL. lingualis, of the tongue, < L. lingua, OL. dingua = E. tongue: see tongue.] 1. a. 1. In anat. and zool.: (a) Of or pertaining to the tongue; glossal. (b) Of or pertaining to a lingua or any tongue-like part. See phrases.—2. Pronounced by or chiefly by the tongue: variously applied to sounds made with the tip or forward part of the tongue, as t, d, etc. (also called dental), or especially to the peculiar Sanskrit ṭ, ḍ, etc. (also called cacuminal, cerebral), forming a distinct class from the Sanskrit dentals, and pronounced with the tip of the tongue drawn back.—3. Relating or pertaining to utterance, or of the use of the tongue in speaking: as, lingual corruptions of words or language.

Here indeed becomes notable one great difference between our two kinds of civil war: between the modern lingual or Parliamentary-logical kind, and the ancient or manual kind in the steel battlefield.

Carlyle, French Rev., II. 1. 2. (Davies.)

Lingual appendages, the paraglossae, or membranous outer lobes of the ligula.—Lingual artery, a branch of the external carotid, supplying the tongue and associate parts. It is in man the usual second branch of the carotid, arising between the superior thyroid and the facial; its termination is the ramus artery.—Lingual ganglion, lobule, etc. See the nouns.—Lingual nerve, the gustatory nerve, a portion of the third or inferior maxillary division of the trigeminal or fifth cranial nerve, supplying the tongue.—Lingual ribbon, in gastropodous mollusks, an expansive surface which bears the teeth; the radula or odontophore.—Lingual teeth, the rasping points or processes of the radula or lingual ribbon of a mollusk.—Lingual vein, the vein corresponding to the lingual artery.

II. n. A letter pronounced in the manner described in I., 2.

linguale (ling-gwā'lē), n.; pl. lingualia (-li-jī). [NL. (sc. os, bone), neut. of lingualis; see lingual.] The bone of the tongue, more fully called os linguae or os linguale; the hyoid bone, or os hyoides. See hyoid, n.

lingualis (ling-gwā'lis), n.; pl. linguales (-lēz). [NL. (sc. musculus, muscle); see lingual.] The proper muscle of the tongue; the muscular substance of the tongue which is not definitively attached to surrounding bony parts.

lingually (ling-gwā'l-i), adv. In a lingual manner; as relates to language.

Linguatula (ling-gwāt'ū-lī), n. [NL., dim., < L. linguatus, tongue, < lingua, tongue; see lingual.] A genus of worm-like entoparasitic Arachnida, remarkable among air-breathing arthropods in having the appendages reduced to two pairs of minute hooks. The genus, containing some 20 species, is otherwise known as Pentastoma or Pentastomum, and with some writers constitutes an order, Pentastomidea or Pentastomida, of the class Arachnida. L. tenuis is 3 or 4 inches long.

Linguatulidæ (ling-gwā-tū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Linguatula + -idæ.] The only family of tonguelets or five-mouths, typified by the genus Linguatula, and constituting the order Linguatulina of the class Arachnida.

Linguatulina (ling-gwāt'ū-li-nā), n. pl. [NL., < Linguatula + -ina.] A group, ordinal or other, of entoparasitic vermiform arachnidans, represented by the family Linguatulidæ, related to the mites or acarids, bear-animalcules or Arctisea, and Pyemogonidæ; the tonguelets, tongue-worms, or five-mouths. In their mode of parasitism they singularly resemble cestoid worms, being found in the sexless or larval state in the lungs and liver of herbivorous animals, whence they are imported by carnivores, including man, in whose digestive and other passages they develop. The tonguelets are worm-shaped, ringed, and flattened; in the young state, when they resemble acarids, they have four legs, but when matured they have no external organs excepting two pairs of small hooks on the head, and a mouth. These hooks can be retracted into sheaths, the four openings of which, with the mouth, make five holes in the head, whence the alternative name of the creatures, five-mouths or Pentastomum. Another name is Acanthochea, from the sheathing of the hooks. See cut under Pentastomida.

lingue (ling-gwā), n. [Chilian.] A Chilian tree, Persea lingue, attaining a height of 90 feet. Its wood is valuable for use in furniture-making, and its bark for tanning.

linguet, n. [< L. lingua, tongue, + E. -et.] Tongued.

Honey-lingued Polyhymnia.
Middleton, World Tost at Tennia.

linguet (ling-gwet), n. Satae as lanquet (b).
linguiform (ling-gwi-fōrm), a. [< L. lingua, tongue (see lingual, a.), + forma, form.] Shaped like a tongue; linguulate: specifically, in entomology, said of processes or parts that are flat, somewhat linear, and rounded at the tip.

linguist (ling-gwist), n. [= F. linguiste = Sp. linguista = Pg. It. linguista, < L. lingua, the tongue; see lingual, a.] 1. A person skilled in the use of languages; one who can speak several languages.

See Out. Have you the tongues?
Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy. . . .
First out. By your own report
A linguist. Shak., T. G. of V., iv. 1. 57.

2. A student of language; a philologist.—3t. A master of language or talk; a ready converser or talker.

Artamockes, the linguist, a bird that imitateth and useth the sounds and tones of almost all the birds in the country.
Harriott, Virginia (1588).

Ill dispute with him;
He's a rare linguist. Webster.

linguist (ling-gwis-tēr), n. [< linguist + -er.] A dabbler in linguistics; a student of philology; a linguist. [Rare.]

Though he [Chaucer] did not and could not create our language (for he who writes to be read does not write for linguists), yet it is true that he first made it easy, and to that extent modern.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 265.

linguistic (ling-gwis'tik), a. [= Sp. linguístico; < linguist + -ic.] Of or pertaining to language, or to the study of languages: as, linguistic knowledge.

linguistically (ling-gwis'ti-kal-i), adv. In a linguistic manner or relation; as regards language or linguistics.

linguistics (ling-gwis'tiks), n. [Pl. of linguistic; see -ics.] The science of languages, or of the origin and history of words; the general and comparative study of human languages and of their elements. Also called comparative philology.

In linguistics . . . language itself, as one of the great characteristics of humanity, is the end, and the means are the study of general and comparative grammar.

G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., II.

linguistry (ling-gwis-tri), n. [< linguist + -ry.] Linguistics. [Rare.]

lingula (ling-gū-lī), n.; pl. lingule (-lē). [NL. use of L. lingula, ligula, dim. of lingua, tongue; see lingual. Cf. ligule, ligule.] 1. A little tongue or tongue-like part or process; a ligula. Specifically—(a) In embryol., a cartilaginous strap or bridge on each side of the end of the notochord, connecting the trabecula cranii with the parachordal cartilage or basilar plate of the skull of the early embryo. (b) In anat., the posterior division of the anterior medullary velum or valve of Vlösssens, marked by three or four transverse gray laminae, often regarded as the first lobe of the vermis superior of the cerebellum.

2. In zool.: (a) [carp.] The typical genus of Linguulidæ. The species are numerous; they are mostly fossil, and go back to the Cambrian group, but several are still living. They are found in the sand of the seashores of most parts of the world, living buried in the sand about low-water mark. One is common on the coast of North Carolina. Its shell is bivalve, about an inch long, flattened, each valve shaped like the bottom of a smoothing-iron, and the two valves working loosely upon each other sidewise, not opening and shutting like those of bivalve mollusks. From the pointed end protrudes a stalk or peduncle from an inch to several inches long, of stiff gristly consistency, and this organ may be incased in a tube formed of sand, like the case of a tube-worm. The broad end of the shell is fringed with little processes. The shell is thin and of a horny texture. The appearance of a lingula is thus somewhat like that of a stalked barnacle or scorn-shell (Lepas), though the animal has no special affinity with a cirriped. The living American lingulas are now placed in a restricted genus Glottidia, the one above described, best known as L. pyramidata, being now called G. aulebari. See cut under Linguulidæ. (b) Pl. lingulas (-līz). Any species of the genus Lingula or family Linguulidæ; a linguilid or tongue-shell.—Frenula linguæ. See frenula.—Lingula sphenoidalis, a small tongue-like process of the sphenoid bone on the outer side of the groove for the carotid artery.

lingular (ling-gū-līr), a. [< lingula + -ar.] Of or pertaining to a lingula, especially that of the cerebellum.

In the child at birth the lingular folia are rounded and distinct.
Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VII. 126.

lingulate (ling-gū-līt), a. [< L. lingulatus, tongue-shaped, < lingula, dim. of lingua, tongue; see lingula, lingual.] Formed like a tongue; strap-shaped; ligulate.

Linguulidæ (ling-gū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lingula + -idæ.] A family of lyopomatous brachiopods, with an elongate peduncle passing out between the valves or through a narrow channel in the hinge-margin, the bruchial appendages fleshy and forming separate coils directed upward, the valves oblong or subcircular, and the shell horny. About 15 genera are referred to the family, all but two of which (Lingula and Glottidia) are extinct. See Lingula, 2 (a).

Lingula anatina.
A, ventral valve, with mantle-fringe; B, ventral valve, with mantle turned back; C, dorsal valve, with part of mantle cut away. a, a, anterior, and a, posterior adductor muscles; b, brachial vessels; c, capsule of pedicle; d, intestine; E, liver; m, mantle-margin; n, visceral sheath; e, esophagus; p, posterior, p', central adjusters; r, anterior retractors or occlusors; r', posterior adjusters; s (central) stomach; s', marginal setae; v, vent.

linguliferous (ling-gū-lif'e-rus), a. [< NL. lingula + L. ferre = E. bear.] Containing or abounding in remains of lingulas.

linguloid (ling-gū-loid), a. [< Lingula + -oid.] Resembling or belonging to the genus Lingula: as, linguloid shells.

lingwort (ling-wért), n. The white hellebore, Veratrum album.

lingy (ling'j), a. [< ling + -y.] Abounding in ling; heathy.

His cell was upon a lingy moor.
T. Ward, England's Reformation, p. 396. (Davies.)

lingy (lin'ji), a. [With altered vowel as in linger, < long + -y.] In second sense cf. ling, linge; in third sense cf. linger.] 1. Tall; limber; flexible.—2. Active; strong; able to bear fatigue.—3. Idle; loitering. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.] (Halliwell.)

linhay (lin'hā), n. [Also linny; appar. < lean + hay; equiv. to lean-to, dial. linter.] An open shed attached to a farm-yard. [Eng.]

I went to the upper linhay, and took our new light pony-sled.
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xlv.

liniation, n. See lineation.

linigerous (li-nij'e-rus), a. [< L. liniger, linen-wearing (< linum, flax, linen; see lincl), + gerere, bear.] Bearing flax; producing linen.

liniment (lin'i-ment), n. [< F. liniment = Sp. linimento, linimiento = Pg. It. linimento, < LL. linimentum, a soft ointment, < linere, rarely linire, smear. Cf. letter], perhaps from the same source.] In med., a liquid preparation for external application, especially one of an oily consistency.

This Fuller's-earth, Cimolia, is of a cooling nature, and, being used in the forme of a liniment, it statch immoderate sweats.
Holland, tr. of Pliny, xxxv. 17.

linimentum (lin-i-men'tum), n.; pl. linimenta (-tā). [LL.: see liniment.] In phar., a liniment: the official name.

linin (li'nin), n. [< L. linum, flax (see lincl, n.), + -in.] The crystallizable bitter principle of Linum catharticum, or purging-flax.

lining (li'ning), n. [Verbal n. of line, v.] The act of measuring, as land, with a line; a fixing of boundaries; specifically, permission granted by a dean of guild to erect or alter a building according to specified conditions. [Scotch.]

lining (li'ning), n. [Verbal n. of line, v.] 1. The covering of the inner surface of anything, as of a garment, a box, a wall, or the like. The word is applicable especially when the inner face is formed of different material from that forming the body or exterior.

Was I deceived, or did a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night?
Milton, Comus, l. 222.

Specifically—(a) In mit. engin., a wooden sheeting to support the top and sides of the galleries and the sides of the shafts of a mine. (b) In carp., the inside boarding, or the felt fabric, paper, or other material, put on the inside of walls, floors, partitions, etc. (c) In metal-working, the fire-brick or other refractory material placed within a blast-furnace or converter to resist high temperature. (d) The puddling or tenacious clay put on the back of a dam or the embankment of a canal to prevent the infiltration of water. (e) A piece of canvas sewed on any part of a sail to preserve it against injury by chafing. Tribune Book of Sports, p. 282.

2. In a figurative use, contents.
The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers. Shak., Rich. II., i. 4. 61.

My money is spent;
Can I be content
With pockets depriv'd of their lining?
The Lady's Decoy; or, Man-Midwife's Defence (1738), p. 4
(N. and Q., 7th ser., VI. 205).

3. The jacket of a steam-boiler or cylinder: an inverted use.—4. In marble-working, the process of cementing back to back with plaster of Paris two pieces of marble, so that they can be ground on two or on all four faces, as if they were one piece.—Basic lining. See basic.

lining-brush (li'ning-brush), n. A brush for marking lines; specifically, in theaters, a brush for painting wrinkles on the face.

lining-felt (li'ning-felt), n. See felt.

lining-nail (li'ning-nāl), n. A small nail with a hemispherical head, used in upholstery-work.

lining-paper (li'ning-pā'pēr), n. Any paper used as a lining. Specifically—(a) In bookbinding, the plain or ornamented paper pasted on the inside of the cover, which aids in connecting the book proper with its binding. (b) In building, paper (generally made waterproof) fastened to the studding of frame buildings before nailing on the weather-boarding. It is more commonly called sheathing. Such paper is also used under slates and shingles in roofing.

lining-strip (li'ning-strip), n. One of a series of wooden or metal strips fixed on the inside of freight- or baggage-ears to protect the ear from injury by the freight. Car-Builder's Dict.

liniscus (li-nis'kus), n.; pl. linisci (-i). [NL., < Gr. λίσιος, dim. of λίον, a line, cord; see line.] In ornith., one of the little lines or traces which form reticulations on the tarsal envelop. [Rare.]

link (līnk), n. [< ME. lenke*, < AS. hlence = Icel. hlekk = Sw. länk = Norw. länk, a link, = Dan. lænke, a chain; cf. MHG. gelanc, gelenke, a hending, esp. the main bend or joint of the body, G. gelenk, a joint (knuckle, wrist, or other joint of the body), also a link, ring; from a noun not found in AS., but represented by E. lank = OHG. hlanca, lanca, lancha, MHG. lanke, the hip, loins, the bend of the body (> MHG. G. lenken, bend, turn); see lank.] 1. One of the rings or separate pieces of which a chain is composed. In ornamental chain-making, any member of the chain, of whatever form, as a plaque, a bead, etc., is called a link.

Nor sirless dungeon, nor atrong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit.

Shak., J. C., i. 3. 94.

Untwining his gold chain from his neck, Balafre . . . said, . . . "Then look that none of the links find their way to the wine-house." Scott, Quentin Durward, v.

2. Anything doubled and closed together like a ring or division of a chain.

Now, sir, a new link to the hocket must needs be had.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 1. 23.

Then down cam Queen Marie
Wi' gold links in her hair.

Mary Hamilton (Child's Ballads, III. 329).

3. Anything which serves to connect one thing or one part of a thing with another; any constituent part of a connected series.

As nature has framed the several species of beings as it were in a chain, so man seems to be placed as the middle link between angels and brutes. Spectator, No. 408.

4. A division, forming the hundredth part, of the chain used in surveying and for other measurement. In Gunter's chain of 66 feet the link is 7.92 inches. The chain of 100 feet, with link of a foot, is used in the United States exclusively in engineering work, and often in surveying.

5. One of the divisions of a sausage made in a continuous chain. [Colloq.]

Then followed seven camels loaded with links and chitterlings, hog's puddings and sausages.

Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, ii. 2. (Davies.)

6. Any rigid movable piece connected with other pieces, generally themselves movable, by means of interlinked open ends or pivots about which it can turn.—7. In a steam-engine, the link-motion.—Link cent. See cent.—Missing link.

(a) Something lacking for the completion of a series or sequence of any kind; a desiderated connecting-link. The term has been used especially with reference to animal forms not found in the supposed succession of development from primordial germs by natural variation and "the survival of the fittest." (b) In zool., specifically, an unknown hypothetical form of animal life in any evolutionary chain or series, assumed to have existed at some time and thus to have been the connecting-link between some known forms; especially, an anthropomorphic animal supposed to have been derived from some simian and to have been the immediate ancestral stock of the human race; hence, humorously, an ape or monkey taken as itself the connecting-link for which Darwinians seek. See Atalus.

The lowest races of men will soon become extinct, like the Tasmanians, and the highest Apes cannot long survive. Hence the intermediate forms of the past, if any there were, become of still greater importance. For such missing links, we must look to the caves and later Tertiary of Africa. O. C. Marsh, Proc. of Amer. Ass. for Adv. of Sci., 1877, p. 256.

link¹ (lingk), v. [< link¹, n.] I. trans. To unite or connect by or as if by a link or links; unite by something intervening; unite in any way; couple; join.

They're so link'd in friendship
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iv. 1. 116.

In notes with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness long drawn out.

Milton, L'Allegro, l. 135.

Link towns to towns with avenues of oak.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 260.

Linked ring. See ring.

II. intrans. To be or become connected; be joined in marriage; ally one's self; form a union.

Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,
Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iii. 3. 115.

The flickering fairy-circle wheel'd and broke Flying, and link'd again. Tennyson, Guinevere.

link² (lingk), n. [A dial. and more orig. form of linch¹, q. v.] 1. A crook or winding of a river; the ground lying along such a winding; as, the links of the Forth. [Scotch.]—2. pl. A stretch of flat or slightly undulating ground on the sea-shore, often in part sandy and covered with bent-grass, furze, etc., and sometimes with a good sward, on part of it at least. [Scotch.]—Links goose. See goose.

link³ (lingk), n. [A corruption of lint², orig. lunt, a torch: see lunt.] A torch made of tow or hards, etc., and pitch, carried for lighting the streets, formerly common in Great Britain, and still used in London in fogs.

There was no link to colour Peter's hat.
Shak., T. of the S., iv. 1. 137.

Those that, seeking to light a Lynke, quenched a Lamp.
Lyly, Euphues and his England, p. 240.

This place is so haunted with bats that their perpetual fluttering endanger'd the putting out our linkes.
Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 7, 1645.

link³ (lingk), v. i. [< link³, n.] To burn or give light. [Prov. Eng.]

link⁴ (lingk), v. i. [Origin obscure; cf. linch².] To go smartly; trip along; do anything smartly and quickly. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

They reel'd, they set, they cross'd, they cleeckit,
Till lika carline swat and reekit,
And coost her duddies to the war,
And linket at it in her sark. Burns, Tam o' Shanter.

linkage (ling'kāj), n. [< link¹ + -age.] 1. A system of connected links; a combination of pieces pivoted together so as to turn about one another in parallel planes of rotation. Sometimes the meaning is extended to embrace cases where the motions are not in parallel planes; and such a linkage is termed a solid, as opposed to a plane linkage.

In Chapter xi. we arrive at the study "beam linkages"—that is, "flat static structures containing beam links."
The Engineer, LXVIII. 207.

Kemp's Linkage for trisecting an angle.

2. The state of being linked together.

Brühl showed that in case of "double-linkage" each such carbon-atom has a refraction equivalent to about 6.1.
Jour. Franklin Inst., CXXIII. 74.

Complete linkage, a linkage whose parts are so jointed that they can move only in one way relatively to one another.—Primary, secondary, etc., linkage, a linkage which has one, two, etc., degrees of freedom more than a complete linkage.

link-block (lingk'blok), n. In steam-engines, the block attached to a valve-stem, and actuated by the link-motion.

linkboy (lingk'boi), n. A boy or man who carries a link or torch to light passengers in the streets of a city. Improved street-lighting has made the employment of linkboys generally unnecessary; but they are still required in London during the dense fogs frequently occurring there.

Then shalt thou walk, unharm'd, the dangerous night,
Ner need th' officious link-boy's smoky light.
Gay, Trivia, iii. 114.

He had . . . brought a four-wheeled cab, accompanied by two linkboys with blazing torches, up to the stage-door.
W. Black, Prince Fortunatus, xix.

linkister, n. A corrupt form of linguister.

There was one Redman suspected to have betrayed their pinnace, for he, being linkister (because he could speak the language), and being put out of that employment for his evil carriage, did bear ill will to the master.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 290.

link-lever (lingk'lev'er), n. In a steam-engine, a lever by which the link of a link-motion valve-gear is controlled by the attending engineer; in particular, the reversing-lever of a locomotive engine.

linkman (lingk'man), n.; pl. linkmen (-men). A man employed to carry a link or torch to light passengers. See linkboy.

link-motion (lingk'mō'shon), n. 1. A system of pieces pivoted together, and turning about pivots attached to a fixed base, all the rotations being in the same plane or parallel planes, so that all the points describe definite curves; a complete linkwork. Link-motions have been deeply studied by mathematicians, especially since 1864, the date of the discovery of the Peaucellier cell. The problems involved are exceedingly difficult, as well as practically of no little importance. Any algebraic curve whatever may be drawn by a suitable link-motion. See Peaucellier cell, under cell.

Specifically—2. In steam-engines, a system of gearing for controlling the valves for the purpose of starting or reversing the engine, and for controlling the cut-off. See valve-gear. The link-motion combines in itself a variable cut-off by which the expansion of the steam can be diminished or increased as the resistance to the engine increases or diminishes, and reversing mechanism whereby the engine may be caused to reverse the motion of its crank-shaft as desired in locomotives, marine engines, and some kinds of stationary engines.

Starting ahead or astern is effected by link-motion.
Lucas, Seamanship, p. 225.

linkpin (lingk'pin), n. A dialectal variant of linch-pin.

link-rooming (lingk'rō'ming), n. Naut., the operation of filling up the spiral depressions of a rope by means of chains wound into these depressions. The chains thus inserted make the surface of the rope more uniform, and protect the softer parts from abrasion.

linkwork (lingk'wérk), n. A linkage pivoted to a fixed base.—Complete linkwork, a linkwork whose parts can move but in one way relative to the base; a link-motion.

linn, n. See lin².

Linnæa (li-nē'æ), n. [NL. (Gronovius, 1742), named after Linnaeus, a celebrated naturalist:

see Linnean.] A genus of caprifoliaceous plants of the tribe Linocieræ. It is characterized by lanceolate calyx-lobes, drooping three-celled many-seeded fruit, and long two-flowered peduncle. The only species is L. borealis. See twain-flower.

linnæite (li-nē'it), n. [< Linnaeus (see Linnean) + -ite².] A native sulphid of cobalt, of a tin-white color, crystallizing in octahedral crystals, also occurring massive. Siegenite is a nickeliferous variety.

Linnean, Linnæan (li-nē'an), a. [< Linnaeus (see def.) + -an.] Pertaining to Carolus Linnaeus or Carl Linné (called Carl von Linné when ennobled in 1761), a celebrated Swedish naturalist (1707–78).—Linnean system, in bot., the system of classification introduced by Linnaeus. This was the artificial, as contrasted with the later-developed natural system of Jussieu. Its fundamental division is into 24 classes, the last of which consists of plants without stamens and pistils, the Cryptogamia, the other 23 being the Phanerogamia. The latter classes are based on the stamens, their number, insertion, connection with each other, etc. The orders are founded mostly on the number of styles or stigmas, some of them on characters relating to the fruits, others again on the number of stamens in classae which are not defined by the stamens, and some on other considerations. The Cryptogamia were divided into Filices (ferns), Musci (mosses), Algae (including, besides the seaweeds, the Hepaticae, Lichenes, etc.), and Fungi (the mushrooms, etc.). This gave a definite and convenient scheme, of no scientific value in classification, but exceedingly useful in its day as a key to the nomenclature of botany. Compare Jussieuan.

linnet, a. and n. An obsolete spelling of linen.

linnet (lin'et), n. [< ME. linet, lynet, < AS. tinete, a linnet; mixed in ME. with OF. linot, F. linot, m., linotte, f., a linnet; so called from their feeding on flaxseed, < L. linum, flax; see lin¹, n. Cf. the related linwhite¹. Cf. G. hänf-ling, a linnet, < hanf, hemp.] 1. A small song-bird, Linaria or Linota cannabina, of the family Fringillidae, inhabiting parts of Europe, Asia, and Africa. It is about 5½ inches long, and 9½ in extent of wings. The plumage is streaked with various gray, Linnet (Linota cannabina).

brown, and flaxen shades; the male in summer has the poll and breast rosy or red. The linnet is called gray, brown, and red or rose, according to sex and season; it has also many local or dialectal names. The yellow-billed linnet, mountain-linnet, or twice is another species of the same genus, L. flavirostris or L. montium. There are yet other species, and sundry related birds also are called linnets, as the redpolls of the genus Egithus. The bird called pine-linnet or pine-finch in the United States is a siskin, Chrysomitris pinus.

2. An ore which contains phosphate intermixed with carbonate of lead in variable proportions: so called on account of the linnet-like color due to the presence of the phosphate. [Prev. Eng. (Derbyshire).]—Chevy, French, red, red-headed, and rose linnet, the redpoll.—Seven-colored linnet, the goldfinch, Carduelis elegans.

linnet-finch (lin'et-finch), n. Same as linnet, 1.

linnet-hole (lin'et-hól), n. [*< linnet, a corruption of F. luncte, + hol¹.] One of the circular or semicircular holes in the upper part of the sides of a glass-melting furnace, through which flame and smoke pass into the arch.

linot, n. [< F. linon, lawn; see linon.] A silk gossamer stuff. Davies.

He absolutely insisted upon presenting me with a complete suit of gauze lino.
Mme. D'Arblay, Diary (1780), l. 310. (Davies.)

Linociera (li-nō-si'e-rä), n. [NL. (O. Swartz, 1797), named after G. Linocier, a French physician.] A genus of oleaceous trees or shrubs of the tribe Oleineæ. It is characterized by long linear petals, free or sometimes united in pairs, a hard drupeaceous fruit, and flowers usually growing in lateral cymes. The leaves are opposite and entire. There are about 40 species, found throughout all the tropical regions of the globe. L. incarsata of Jamaica, a large tree with panicles of white flowers, is called snowdrop-tree. L. ligustrina, of the same and other West Indian Islands, is called Jamaica rosewood.

linoleic (li-nō'lē-ik), a. [< L. linum, flax, + oleum, oil. Cf. linoleum.] Related to, existing in, or containing the oil of linseed.—Linoleic acid, an acid found in linseed-oil and other drying-oils, forming with glycerol the glycerid linolein.

linolein (li-nō'lē-in), n. [< linole(ic) + -in².] The glycerid of linoleic acid; the constituent of linseed-oil and other drying-oils on which their drying property depends.

linoleum (li-nō'lē-um), n. [A trade-name, intended to mean 'linseed-oil cloth'; < L. linum, flax, + oleum, oil; see line¹ and oil.] A kind of floor-cloth made of linseed-oil which has been oxidized to a dense rubber-like consistency. This is accomplished in various ways, usually by allowing the oil to flow very slowly over a large concrete floor across which warm air is blown. This material is ground up with cork-entrings, passed through iron rollers, and attached to a coarse canvas. The back of the canvas receives a coat of paint.

linon (lin'ōn), n. [F., lawn, fine linen, < lin, < L. linum, flax, linen; see line¹.] Lawn. [Trade use.]

linota (li-nō'tā), n. [NL., < F. linot, a linnet; see linnet.] Same as Linaria, 2 (b).

linous (lī'nūs), a. [< line² + -ous.] Relating to or in a line. Sir J. Herschel. [Rare.]

lin-pin (lin'pin), n. Same as linch-pin. [Prov. Eng.]

linguet (ling'kwet), n. 1. A tongue; a lanquet. —2. The piece of a sword-hilt which turns down over the mouthpiece of a scabbard.

linsang (lin'sang), n. [E. Ind.] 1. A kind of civet-cat found in Java, etc., banded with black and white, and having 38 teeth, Prionodon (Linsang) gracilis. A related African species, Prionodon (Poiana) richardsoni, is known as the Guinea linsang.—2. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of Viverride, now commonly called Prionodon.

linset, n. [ME., < AS. lynnīs (pl. lynnīs), glossing L. (ML.) axedo, corruptly axedo, an axle, = D. luns, lens = MLG. lunsse, lusse, LG. lunsse = OHG. lunsia, MHG. luns, lunsse, G. linsse, OHG. also lun, luns, MHG. lun, luns, OHG. also lunnig, MHG. lūnne, MHG. also lūner, linch-pin (root uncertain); some uncertainty exists as to the forms.] An axle. William de Shoreham, Poems (ed. Wright), p. 109.

linseed (lin'sēd), n. [Formerly also lintseed; < ME. linsede, linsede, lynesede, < AS. linsēd, flaxseed, < lin, flax, + sēd, seed; see line¹ and seed.] The seed of lint or flax; flaxseed.

Nowe sum in soite ydounge lynsee sowe,
X bussheles serreth for an aere lande.
Fful subtil flaxe and snal therof wol growe.
Palladius, Inuabondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 80.

linseed-cake (lin'sēd-kāk'), n. The solid mass or cake which remains when oil is expressed from flaxseed. It is much used as food for cattle and sheep. Also called oil-cake.

linseed-meal (lin'sēd-mēl'), n. The meal of linseed or flaxseed, used for poultices and as a cattle-food.

linseed-mill (lin'sēd-mil), n. A form of mill for grinding flaxseed.

linseed-oil (lin'sēd-oil'), n. A drying-oil produced by the pressure from linseed, varying in color from light amber to dark yellow. Cold-drawn or cold-pressed linseed-oil is obtained from the crushed seeds without heat. Raw or ordinary linseed-oil is produced by steaming the crushed seeds before expressing the oil. The yield is from 20 to 25 per cent. of oil. Bofed linseed-oil is obtained by boiling the raw oil with latherge, sugar of lead, or some similar substance, the result being a dark oil drying more rapidly than the raw oil. Linseed-oil is used as a vehicle for colors by painters, for printing-inks, varnishes, linoleum, etc.

linselt, n. [< OF. linsel, linsel, linsiel, m., linen cloth; cf. linselle, linselle, f., also linsol, linsol, linsol, linsuel, etc., a linen cloth or sheet, F. linsell, a winding-sheet, < L. linteolum, dim. of linteum, linen (see linteric), < L. linum, flax, linen; see line¹. Cf. linsley-woolsey.] A cloth of wool and linen mixed together; a garment of such cloth. Richardson.

Casting a thyn course lynsele ore his shoulders,
That torne in peeces trayld upon the ground.
Cornelia (1594).

linsley (lin'si), n. [A corruption of linsel. In part an abbr. of linsley-woolsey.] 1. Cloth made of linen and wool; linsley-woolsey.

O haud awa thae linen sheets
And bring to me the lynsele clouts
I ha been best used in.
Earl Richard (Child's Ballads, III. 400).

In 1704 was advertised "Three Suites of Hanging: one of Forrest Tapistry, one of clouded Camlet, and one of blue Printed linsley."

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 64.
2. In coal-mining: (a) A peculiar kind of clayey rock; bind. (b) A streaky sandstone. [Eng.]

linsley-woolsey (lin'si-wūl'si), n. and a. [Early mod. E. linsley-woolsey, linsleywoolsey, linsleywoolsey, linsleywoolsey; < lato ME. linsley woolsey; < linsel + wool; the term -sey being a reduction of -sel in the first element, repeated in the second, and perhaps due in part to imitation of jersey and kersey.] 1. n. 1. A coarse and stont material of which the warp is linen and the woof woolen.

To weave all in one loom,
A web of lynse [lynse in Dyce's ed.] woolse.
Skelton, Why Come you not to Court? l. 128.

These are the arts we think most fit to go together: . . .
Linsley weavers; Tike weavers; Silk weavers; lynseley woolsey weavers.

His wares consist of hose—lynseley woolsey, for making petticoats. . . and all sorts of small wares.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 420.

2. A similar material into which cotton enters either with or without linen. The attempt has been made to reserve the word linsley for a mixture of linen and wool and woolsey for a mixture of cotton and wool. The compound term would then signify a stuff made of all three materials in certain proportions.

3. Inferior fabrics of doubtful or uncertain materials: a term of depreciation.—4. Anything unsuitably mixed; a farrago of nonsense; jargon; gibberish.

What linsley-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again?
Shak., All's Well, iv. 1. 13.

II. a. 1. Made of linen and wool mixed.—2. Of different and unsuitable parts; neither one thing nor another; ill-assorted.

And Balaams wages doe moue many still to make such linsley-woolsey marriages. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 38.

A lawleas linsley-woolsey brother,
Half of one order, half another.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. iii. 1227.

No flimsy linsley-woolsey scenes I wrote,
With patches here and there like Joseph's coat.
Churchill, The Apology.

lintstock, lintstock (lin't-, lint'stok), n. [Early mod. E. also linstock, linstoke; for lintstock, < D. lontstok, < lont, a match for firing cannon, + stock, stick; see lunt and stock.] A pointed staff with a crotch or fork at one end to hold a lighted match, used in firing cannon.

A linstoke fell into a barrel of powder, and set it on fire together with the vessel. Stone, Queen Elizabeth, an. 1563.

And the nimble gunner
With linstock now the devilish cannon touches,
And down goes all before them.
Shak., Hen. V., III. (cho.)

lint¹ (lint), n. [Also dial. linnet; appar. < ME. lin, flax (see line¹, n.). Cf. Dan. linned, linen cloth.] 1. Flax. [Obsolete or local.]

I haue aene flax or lynt growyng wilde in Sommerset shyre.
Turner, Herbal.

The frugal wife, garrulous, will tell
How 't [cheese] was a townmond and, sin' lint was 't the bell.
Burns, Cottar's Saturday Night.

2. A floeculent material procured by raveling or scraping linen, and used for dressing wounds and sores; charpie.—3. Raw cotton that has been ginned and is ready for baling.—4. Fluff; flue.

He's brushing a hat almost a quarter of an hour, and as long a driving the lint from his black cloaths with his wet thumb.
Sir R. Howard, The Committee, ii.

5. A net.—6. The netting of a pound or seine. E. H. Knight.—7. A kerchief or net for the head.

There's never lint gang on my head,
Nor kame gang in my hair.
Lord Livingston (Child's Ballads, III. 348).

lint², n. An obsolete variant of lunt.

lint-doctor (lint'dok'tor), n. In calico-printing, a knife-edged scraper arranged on the delivering side of a calico-printing machine, in such relation with the printed web that it scrapes off and retains loose lint, fluff, or fragments of threads which might otherwise adhere to and disfigure the fabric.

lintel¹ (lin'tel), n. [< ME. lintel, lyntell, < OF. lintel, F. linteau = Sp. lintel, dintel, < ML. linteulus, head-piece of a door or window, for "limitellus, dim. of L. limes (limit-), a boundary, border (cf. limen, a threshold); see limit. Cf. linterin.] In arch., a horizontal piece of timber or stone resting on the jambs of a door or window, or spanning any other open space in a wall or in a columnar construction, and serving to support superincumbent weight.

When he com to the halle dore he wrote letters on the lyntel of the dore in Grew. Martin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 436.

At the bottom of the steps is a roundheaded doorway, not, it is true, surmounted by a true arch, but by a curved lintel of one stone.

J. Ferguson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 232.
The immense darning doors with gratings over the lintels.
G. W. Cable, Old Creole Days, p. 247.

lintel², n. See lingel¹.

linter¹ (lin'tēr), n. [< lint¹ + -er¹.] A machine for stripping off the short-staple cotton-fiber which adheres to cotton-seed after ginning, preparatory to extraction of oil from the seed. The cotton thus removed is used in the manufacture of cotton batting and for other purposes. Also linter-machine.

linter² (lin'tēr), n. A corrupt dialectal form of lean-to.

linterin, n. [A var. of lintel, appar. by confusion with OF. linter, linter, a threshold, as if < ML. "limitarium, < L. limes (limit-), bound, limit, but with sense of L. limen (limin-), threshold; see lintel.] Same as lintel.

And with the blood thereof [a lamb] coloured the post and linter of the doors. Raleigh, Hist. World, II. iii. 4.

I read these two verses written in golden letters upon the Linterne of the dore, at the entering into the Inne. Coryat, Crudities, I. 15.

lintie (lin'ti), n. [Dim. of linnet¹, or a reduction of the equiv. lintwhite.] The linnet. [Seotch.]

But I dinna see the broom Wf its tassels on the lea,
Nor hear the lintie's sang
O' my ain countrie. R. Giffen.

lintseed¹, n. An obsolete form of linseed.

lintstock, n. See linstock.

lintwhite (lint'hwit), n. [< ME. (Sc.) lyntquhite, corrupted from AS. lincwige, lincwige, a linnet, so called from frequenting flax-fields, < lin, flax (see line¹, and cf. linnel), + -wige, -twige (seen also in thisteltwige, a linnet), of uncertain origin.] 1. A linnet. Also linterwhite. [Prov. Eng. and Seotch.]

Of Larkes, of lynkehytteez, that lufflyche songene.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 2674.

In vain to me, in glen or shaw,
The mavis an' the lintwhite sing.
Burns, Again Rejoicing Nature Sees.

Her song the lintwhite awelleth.
Tennyson, Claribel.

2. A skylark or wood-warbler. [Prov. Eng.]

lint-white (lint'hwit), a. [< lint¹ + white.] As white as lint or flax; flaxen.

Lassie wf the lintwhite locks, . . .
Wit thou be my dearie, O?
Burns, Lassie wf the Lintwhite Locks.

linter-white, n. Same as lintwhite.

Linum (lī'nūm), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), < L. linum = Gr. λίνον = W. lin, flax; see line¹.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants, of the natural order Linac, tribe Eulinee. They are herba, often slightly woody, characterized by regular five-parted flowers, with often showy but fugacious petals, usually yellow or blue in color, and by entire sepals and leaves. There are about 100 species, growing in both hemispheres, many of which are ornamental. L. usitatissimum is the flax of commerce, and the seeds of the same are the source of linseed oil. L. perenne, called perennial flax, is a very handsome blue-flowered species, abundant in the northern parts of the United States, and having a wide distribution through Europe and Asia.

liny (lī'ni), a. [< line² + -yl.] Full of lines; resembling a line; marked with lines.

Then there rose to view a fane
Of liny marble. Keats, Sleep and Poetry.

Shaping their eyes long and liny, partly because of the light.
T. Hardy, Far from the Madding Crowd, viii.

Linyphia (li-nif'i-ā), n. [NL., < MGr. λινύφια, λινύφια, λινύφια, weaving linen, < Gr. λίνον, flax, linen, + φάειν, weave; see weare.] 1. A Latreillean genus of spiders of the family Theridiidae. L. marmorata is noted for its large domed web, under which it lies in wait for its prey to be entangled in a maze of threads that reach two or three feet upward in the bush. L. communis constructs a double web, with one sheet over the other, and hides between the two.

2. [l. c.] A spider of this genus.

Liocephalus (li-ō-sef'a-lus), n. [NL. (J. E. Gray, 1827, as Leiocephalus); < Gr. λείος, smooth (= L. levis), + κεφαλή, head.] A genus of American iguanoid lizards, having no anal or femoral pores, and the back and tail crested. There are many species, natives of tropical America and the West Indies, known as roquets, as L. carinatus, the keeled roquet.

Liodera (li-ō'dē-rā), n. [NL. (Fitzinger, 1843), also Liodera; < Gr. λείος, smooth, + δέρμα (for δέρμα), skin.] A genus of South American iguanoid lizards, containing such as L. chilensis, L. gravenhorsti, and L. gracilis. Also spelled Leiodera.

Liodere (li-ō-dēr), n. A lizard of the genus Liodera. Also spelled leiodere.

Liodermatidæ (li-ō-dēr-mat'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Owen, 1841), < Liodermatus, the typical genus (< Gr. λείος, smooth, + δέρμα (dēpar-), the skin, + -idæ.] A family of holothurians, commonly called Molpadiidae. Also Liodermati.

Liodon (li-ō-don), n. [NL., < Gr. λείος, smooth, + δόκις (dōv-) = E. tooth.] A genus of Cretaceous mosasaurian or pythonomorphie reptiles, with smooth compressed teeth fitted for cutting, and lenticular in sectional outline. The original species was described by Owen in 1841, from the Chalk of Norfolk. Large forms abounded in America during the same period. L. proriger of the Kansas beds was 75 feet long. L. dyspeler was still larger. Also spelled Leiodon.

Lioglossa (lī-ō-glos'ā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λειό-γλωσσος, smooth-tongued, < λειός, smooth, + γλῶσσα, the tongue.] A primary division of octopod cephalopods, characterized by the non-development of a radula. The only known forms belong to the family Cirroteuthidae. Also spelled Leioglossa.

lioglossate (lī-ō-glos'āt), a. [As Lioglossa + -ate¹.] Smooth-tongued; having no radula, as a member of the group Lioglossa. Also spelled leioglossate.

Lirolepis (li-ol'e-pis), n. [NL., < Gr. λειός, smooth, + λείπις, a scale, rind, husk; see lepis.] A genus of acrodont agamoid lizards, having the skin of the sides expansible into wing-like organs supported on long spurious ribs, the scales small and ecarinate, the tympanum naked, and femoral pores present. L. sulcatus is a flying-dragon of the Malay peninsula and China, about 20 inches long. Also spelled Leiolepis.

liomyoma (lī'ō-mī-ō'mā), n.; pl. liomyomata (-mā-tā). [NL., < Gr. λειός, smooth, + NL. myoma.] A myoma composed of smooth (that is, non-striated) muscle-fiber. Also spelled leomyoma.

lion (lī'on), n. [Early mod. E. also lyon; < ME. lion, lyoun, lyoun, liun, also leon, leoun, leun, < AF. liun, OF. lion, leon, F. lion = Pr. leo = Sp. leon = Pg. leão = It. leone, lione = AS. leō (gen. dat. león, dat. also leone, leonan) = OS. leo = OFries. lawa, NFries. leuwe = D. leuwe = MLG. lauwe, LG. louwe, lauwe = OHG. lewe, lowo, MHG. lewe, lowe, lōwe, G. löwe = Icel. leō, león, ljón = Sw. lejon = Dan. løve (cf. OBulg. lŭv = Bulg. lŭv = Serv. lav = Bohem. lev = Pol. lew = Russ. levŭ = Lith. levas, lavas = Lett. lawas, all < OHG.) = Croatian lijun = Albanian luan, < L. leo (leōn-), < Gr. λέων (leōn-), a lion; prob. of Semitic or Egyptian origin; cf. Heb. labī, OEgypt. labu, Coptic laboj, a lion.] 1. A quadruped of the genus Felis, F. leo, the largest of all carnivorous animals, distinguished by its tawny or yellow color, a full flowing mane in the male, a tufted tail, and the disappearance

3. [cap.] In astron., a constellation and sign of the zodiac. See Leo, 1.

Now next at this opposition,
Which in the signe shal be of the Leoun.
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 330.

4. In her., a representation of a lion used as a bearing. There are various attitudes in which it is represented forming as many different bearings, viz.: passant, passant gardant or leopardé, passant regardant, rampant, rampant gardant, rampant regardant, salient, combatant (when two lions are rampant and face to face, also called counter-rampant), statant, statant gardant, sejant, couchant, and coward. (See these words.) Further modifications of these bearings may exist, but are rare. Anciently the blazon was "a lion" only when the creature was rampant; when passant gardant, as on the shield of England, it was called lion leopardé, and also leopard. The lion is always langued and armed gules unless the field is gules, when it is langued and armed azure.

No Mon hedde scheid of schrifte;
The denel stod lyk a lyon rampaunt.
Hoby Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 145.

zit to knaw neidful is xv maneris of lionys in armys.
Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), l. 98.

5. (a) A gold coin current in Scotland from the time of Robert III. to the reign of James VI.: so called from the lion on the obverse of the coin.

Under Mary it was worth 44 shillings Scotch; under James VI. (when it was called the lion noble), 74 shillings Scotch. Half-lions were also coined. (b) A copper coin: same as hardhead, 2.—6. An object of interest and curiosity; especially, a celebrated or conspicuous person who is much sought by society or by the public in general: as, to visit the lions of the place; such a one is the lion of the day. The use is an extension of lion in its literal sense, with reference to the lions formerly kept at the Tower in London. See the first quotation.

The lions of the Tower are the origin of that application of the term lion to any conspicuous spectacle or personage which has long since become universal.

Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., iv.
Such society was far more enjoyable than that of Edinburgh, for here was not a lion, but a man. J. Wilson.

After dinner the palanquins went forward with my servant, and the captain and I took a ride to see the lions of the neighborhood. Macaulay, in Trevelyan, I. 324.

A lion in the way. (a) A danger or obstacle to be faced and overcome.

Lancelot shouted, "Stay me not!
I have been the sluggard, and I ride apace,
For now there is a lion in the way."
Tennyson, Holy Grail.

(b) An imaginary danger, trumped up by cowardice or sloth.

The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way; a lion is in the streets. Prov. xxvi. 13.

They fear'd not the bug-bear danger nor the lyon in the way that the sluggish and timorous Politician thinks he sees. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

American lion, mountain lion. Same as cougar.—Blanch lion. See blanch.—British lion, the lion as the national emblem of Great Britain.

The British Lion . . . cannot always have a worthy enemy to combat, or a battle royal to deliver. Thackeray, Virginians, lxi.

Lion dollar. See dollar.—Lion of Cotswold or Cotswold lion, a sheep. [Prov. Eng.]

Lo then the mystery from whence the name
Of Cotswold lions first to England came.
Harrington, Epiqr., B. iii. Ep. 18. (Nares.)

Lion of St. Mark, a symbolical lion represented as winged, and holding an open book, on which is written par tibi, Marce, Evangelista meus, or a part of this. It is the characteristic device of Venice. The full heraldic description requires a sword with the point uppermost above the book on the dexter side and a glory surrounding the whole. The lion also is sejant; but in artistic representations this is continually departed from.—Lion's provider. (a) A popular name for the jackal. (b) Any humble friend or follower who acts as a sycophant or foil to another.—Lion's share, the largest share; an unduly large share; usually, any excessive appropriation made by one of two or more persons from something in which all have an equal right or interest, but sometimes without any invidious sense; as, the lion's share of attention. The phrase alludes to Aesop's fable of the lion, who, hunting in partnership with the fox and wolf, claimed one third of the prey as his agreed portion, one third by right of sovereignty, and the other third on general principles.—Lion tricorporate, in her., a bearing representing three rampant bodies of lions springing or proceeding from the three corners of the escutcheon and having a common head affronté.—Order of the Lion, the name of several orders in Germany, etc.; especially, an order founded in 1815 by William I., first king of the Netherlands, and continued by the later kings. It is an order for civil merit. The badge is a star of eight points, having in the central medallion a rampant lion and crown, and a golden W between each two arms.—To put one's head into the lion's mouth, to put one's self in a position of great danger, as in the power of an enemy.

Lion-ant (lī'on-ānt), n. Same as ant-lion.

Lionardesque (lī'ō-nār-desk'), a. and n. Same as Leonardesque.

lioned, leoned (lī'-, lō'onst), a. [< OF. lioncel + E. -ed².] In her., adorned with lions' heads, as a cross the ends of which terminate in lions' heads.

lioncel, lioncelle (lī'on-sel), n. [< OF. lioncel, lioncel, F. lionceau (= Sp. leoncello = It. leoncello, lioncello, dim. of lion, leon, a lion: see lion.] In her., a small or young lion used as a bearing. When a number of lions are represented on the same field or ordinary, they are assumed to be lioncels and are blazoned as such. Also lionel.

lion-dog (lī'on-dog), n. A variety of dog with a flowing mane.

lion-dragon (lī'on-drag'on), n. In her., an imaginary beast having the fore part of a lion ending in the hind part of a wyvern.

lionel (lī'on-el), n. [< OF. lionnel, lionnel, lionneau, etc., dim. of lion, a lion: see lion.] 1. A lion's whelp; a young lion.—2. In her., same as lioncel.

lioness (lī'on-es), n. [ME. lionesse, leonesse, leonys, lyoneys, < OF. (also F.) lionnesse (= It. leonesa, lionessa), fem. of lion, lion: see lion.] 1. The female of the lion.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets.
Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 17.

The gaunt lioness, with hunger bold,
Springs from the mountains tow'rd the guarded fold.
Pope, Iliad, x. 214.

2. A woman who is an object of public interest and curiosity; rarely, a boldly conspicuous woman. See lion, 6.

For the last three months Miss Newcome has been the greatest lioness in London.

Thackeray, Newcomes, xii. (Davies.)
"Now, boys, keep your eyes open, there must be plenty of lionesses about;" and thus warned, the whole load, including the cornepone player, were on the look-out for lady visitors, profanely called lionesses.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Oxford, xxv. (Davies.)
The reaction against the over-sentimentalism of 1830 which found expression in the Lionesses of 1840—devoted to masculine sport—who, in their turn, were swept away by the storm of '48. Westminster Rev., CXXVII, 951.

lionet (lī'on-et), n. [< lion + dim. -et.] A young or small lion.

He himself thrust just into the press, and, making force and fury wait upon discretion and government, he might seem a brave lion who taught his young lionets how, in taking of a prey, to join courage with cunning.
Str P. Sidney, Arcadia, iii.

lion-heart (lī'on-härt), n. One who has great courage.

lion-hearted (lī'on-här'ted), a. Having a lion's heart or courage; brave and magnanimous: as, Richard the lion-hearted (Richard Cœur de Lion—King Richard I. of England).

Arabian mothers long awed their infants to silence with the name of the lion-hearted Plantagenet.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., i.

lion-hunter (lī'on-hun'ter), n. 1. One who pursues the lion as a beast of the chase.—2. A person given to the pursuit or lionizing of notabilities. See lion, 6.

One of the greatest dangers to all genius is that of being robbed of its vital strength by velvety-pawed lion-hunters.
Harpur's Mag., LXXVIII, 417.

lionise, v. See lionize.

lionism (lī'on-izm), n. [< lion + -ism.] The practice of lionizing; the treating of persons or things as lions in the figurative sense; the pursuit or adulation of celebrities. See lion, 6.

An anecdote or two may be added to bear out the occasional references to the honours and honours of lionism which they contain.

Chorley, Mem. of Mrs. Hemans, ii. 25. (Davies.)
All common lionism, which ruins many men, was nothing to this.
Carlyle.

lionize (lī'on-iz), v.; pret. and pp. lionized, pp. lionizing. [< lion + -ize.] I. trans. 1. To treat as a lion, or as an object of curiosity and interest. See lion, n., 6.

Can he do nothing for his Burns but lionise him?
Carlyle, Past and Present, iv. 6.

Tennyson hates being lionized.
Caroline Fox, Journal, p. 272.

Besides this, however, . . . [Liszt] allowed himself, with his usual good nature, to be lionised, and dragged from concert to concert.
Fortnightly Rev., XL, 357.

2. To exhibit objects of curiosity to. [Rare.]

He had lionised the distinguished visitors during the last few days over the University.
Disraeli, Lothair, xxiv. (Davies.)

3. To visit or explore as a sight-seer: as, to lionize Niagara. [Rare.]

Head of Lion (Felis leo), from photograph by Dixon, London.

of the feline markings in both sexes before they arrive at maturity. The largest are from 8 to 9 feet in length. The lion is a native of Africa and the warm regions of Asia. He preys chiefly on five animals, avoiding carrion unless impelled by extreme hunger. He approaches his prey with stealthy movements, crouching for the spring, which is accompanied with a terrific roar. The whole frame is most powerful and impressive, giving with the large head and ample mane that majestic appearance to the animal from which he derives his title of "king of beasts." Of the African lion there are several varieties, as the Barbary, Gambian, Senegal, and Cape lions. The Asiatic varieties are generally distinguished as the Bengal, the Persian or Arabian, and the maneless lion of Gujerat.

The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravins. Nahum ii. 12.

2. Figuratively, a lion-like person; a man possessing the courage, fierceness, etc., of a lion.

There were about two hundred men on horseback, armed with firelocks; all of them lions, if you believed their word or appearance. Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 170.

For eight days I had been lionizing Belgium under the disadvantages of continual rain.

C. A. Bristed, English University, p. 129.

II. intrans. To visit the lions or objects of interest or curiosity in a place.

Also spelled lionise.

lion-leopard (li'õn-lep'ãrd), n. In her., same as lion leopardé. See leopard, 2.

lion-like (li'õn-lik), a. Resembling a lion; having the strength or courage of a lion.

Our first acquaintance was at sea, in fight Against a Turkish man-of-war, a stout one,
Where lion-like I saw him shew his valour.

Fletcher, Wife for a Month, v. 3.

lion-lizard (li'õn-liz'ãrd), n. A species of basilisk, Basiliscus americanus: so called from the crest (or mane) on its back and tail.

lionly (li'õn-li), a. [lion + -ly]. Like a lion; fierce.

The Church coveting to ride upon the lionly form of jurisdiction makes a transformation of her self into an Ass.

Milton, Church-Government, ll. 3.

lion-monkey (li'õn-mung'ki), n. Same as marikina.

lionné (F. pron. lë-o-nã'), a. [F., < lion, lion; see lion.] In her., rampant gardant: said of a leopard. See under leopard, 2.

lion-poisson (F. pron. lë-õn'pwo-sõn'), n. [F., < lion, lion, + poisson, fish.] In her., same as sea-lion.

lion's-ear (li'õnz-ãr), n. 1. A plant of the genus Leonotis.—2. One of various composite plants of the genera Culcitium and Espeletia.

lion's-foot (li'õnz-füt), n. One of various plants. (a) Leontopodium alpinum, from the appearance of its clustered heads. (b) The lady's-mantle, Alchemilla vulgaris, from the shape of the leaf. Also called lion's-paw. (c) The white lettuce, Prenanthes alba, and also P. serpentina.

lion's-heart (li'õnz-hãrt), n. An American plant, the false dragon's-head, Physostegia Virginica.

lion's-leaf (li'õnz-lãf), n. Any plant of the genus Leontice, especially L. Leontopetalum, from a fancied resemblance of the leaf to the print of a lion's foot.

lion's-mouth (li'õnz-mouth), n. A popular name of the snapdragon, Antirrhinum majus, and of several other plants with two-lipped flowers. [Prov. Eng.]

lion's-tail (li'õnz-tãl), n. The plant Leonotis Leonurus. See Leonotis.

lion's-tooth (li'õnz-tõth), n. A plant of the genus Leontodon; also, the common dandelion.

lion's-turnip (li'õnz-tãr' níp), n. The plant Leontice Leontopetalum.

lion-tailed (li'õnz-tãld), a. Having the tail tufted like a lion's: applied by Pennant to species of the genus Macacus.—Lion-tailed baboon, the wanderer.

lion-toothed (li'õnz-tõtht), a. Having teeth like those of a lion.

Liotheidæ (li-õ-thë'i-dë), n. pl. [NL., < Liotheum + -idæ.] A family of mallophagous insects or so-called bird-lice, differing from the true lice, and typified by the genus Liotheum. They have stout four-jointed antennæ, a generally trilobate head, conspicuous maxillary palps, and two-jointed or one-jointed tarsi. They infest the plumage of birds, but they are also found in the fur of quadrupeds. Also spelled Leiotheidæ.

Liotheum (li-õth'ë-um), n. [NL., < Gr. λεῖος, smooth, + (θ) θεῖν, θεῖν, run.] The typical genus of Liotheidæ. Also Leiotheum.

Liothrix (li'õ-thrìks), n. [NL. (H. E. Strickland, 1841); orig. Leiothrix (Swainson, 1831); < Gr. λεῖος, smooth, + θρίξ (τριχ-), hair.] A genus of turdiform passerine birds. The genus was based upon Porus furcatus of Temminck, now known as Liothrix lutea, one of the Indian hill-tits. Also called Callipyga.

Liota (li-õ'ti-ã), n. [NL., < Gr. λεῖος, smoothness, < λεῖος, smooth.] The typical genus of Liotiidæ. These shells have the horny operculum spirally dotted with shelly substance, and the mouth ends in a round varix. Also spelled Leiotia.

Liotiidæ (li-õ-ti'i-dë), n. pl. [NL., < Liota + -idæ.] A family of rhipidoglossate gastropods, typified by the genus Liota, associated by most authors with the Trochidæ or Delphinulidæ. Also spelled Leiotiidae.

Liotrichi (li-õ'tri-kì), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λεῖος, smooth, + θρίξ (τριχ-), hair.] A name applied by Huxley (in the form Leiotrichi) to one of the two primary groups into which the races of men are considered to be divisible, the other being Ulotrichi. The Liotrichi are those with smooth hair, and are divisible into four secondary groups: the Australoid, the Mongoloid, the Xanthochroic, and the Melanochroic. See these words.

Liotrichidæ (li-õ'tri-k'i-dë), n. pl. [NL., < Liothrix + -idæ.] A family of birds of uncertain character. (a) Approximately the same as Liotrichinæ, including some 50 or 60 hill-tits of Asia, having a varied and often brightly colored plumage, feeding on berries and insects. Liothrix, Brachypteryx, Pterythrix, etc., are leading genera. (b) Extended to include many other birds, as the American wrens and mocking-thrushes, etc. California, 1847. Also spelled Leiotrichidæ.

Liotrichinæ (li'õ-tri-k'i-në), n. pl. [NL., < Liothrix + -inæ.] A subfamily of birds, typified by the genus Liothrix; the hill-tits: originally made by Swainson in 1831 a subfamily of Ampelidæ in the form Leiotrichinæ. Also spelled Leiotrichina.

liotrichous (li-õ'tri-kns), a. [liotrich, smooth, + θρίξ (τριχ-), hair.] Having smooth hair; of or pertaining to the Liotrichi. Also spelled leiotrichous.

liour, liouret, n. [liour, lyouwe, lyere, < OF. liure, lieure, lioure, a binding, band; in cookery, a thickening; < L. ligatura, a binding; see ligature.] 1. Binding or edging, as of curtains and hangings.

Beddys . . . that hengt shalle be with hole syour,
With crotchettis and loupys sett on liour.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 313.

2. In cookery, a thickening, or a thick preparation.

And make a tyoure of brede and blode, and lye hit therwith.

Liber Cure Cocorum, p. 32.

lip (lip), n. [lip, lyp, lippe, lyppe, < AS. lippa, lippe = OFries. lippa, Fries. lippe = MD. lippe, D. lip = MLG. LG. lippe (> G. Dan. lippe, lip, = OF. lippe, lype, lippe, a lip, esp., as F. lippe and ML. lipium, a thick under lip; cf. Sw. lipp = Dan. læbe, lip, appar. < I.G., but modified by L. labium); with orig. formative -ja (and akin to OHG. lefs, leps, MHG. lefs, lefs, lefse, G. lefze, with var. OHG. leppur = OS. lepur, lip, with orig. formative -as), = L. labium (> Sp. Pg. labio), lip, with var. labrum (= OHG. lefs, leppur, above)] (> It. labbro = Sp. Pg. labro = F. lèvre), lip; cf. Gael. liob (perhaps < E.), Lith. lupa, Hind. lubb, Pers. lab, lip. Connection with lap (L. lambere, etc.) is improbable; the phonetic conditions do not agree, and it is not the lips, but the tongue, that 'laps.' 1. One of the two edges or borders of the mouth; one of the two fleshy or muscular parts composing the opening of the mouth in man and many other animals, and covering the teeth.

All they that see me laugh me to scorn;
they shoot out the lip, they shake the head.

Ps. xxii. 7.

He that loves a rosy cheek,
Or a coral lip admires.

Carex, Disdalin Returned.

2. pl. Figuratively, the organs of speech as represented by the lips; speech or utterance as passing between the lips and aided by them.

A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips.

Prov. xvii. 4.

His lips are very mild and meek.

Tennyson, Two Voices.

So gently blending courtesy and art
That wisdom's lips seemed borrowing friendship's heart.

O. W. Holmes, A Portrait.

3. Impudent or abusive talk. [Slang.]

I told him that I didn't want none of his lip.

F. R. Stockton, Rudder Grange, p. 99.

4. Anything resembling a lip in position or relation; the edge or border of anything; a margin: as, the lip of a vessel; the lips of a wound.

Now wet the lip of the phial.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xx.

Between the town of Brill, upon the southern lip of this estuary, and Maastandshuis, . . . the squadron suddenly appeared.

Motley, Dutch Republic, II. 352.

The cannon's brazen lips are cold.

Whittier, To Pina IX.

5. In bot.: (a) Either of the divisions of a bilabiate corolla. The two are distinguished as upper (the superior or posterior, next the axis) and lower (the inferior or anterior, away from the axis). (b) In orchids, one of the petals differing from the other two in shape. It is really the upper, but by a half-twist of the ovary has become as if anterior or lower.—6. In zool., any lip-like part or organ.

See labium and labrum for technical usages.—7. In a lip-anger, the blade at the end which cuts the chip after it has been circumscribed by the spur.—8. In a turbine water-wheel, a rim which closes the joint between the barrel and the curb. E. H. Knight.—9. In a vehicle, a projecting part of the bolster; a cuttoo-plate. E. H. Knight.—10. In organ-building, one of the flat vertical surfaces above or below the mouth of a flue-pipe, called respectively the upper lip and the lower lip. The upper lip is always sharp-edged, and the current of air in the pipe is so directed against it as to be thrown into vibration. See pipe and organ.

11. In music, the power or facility of adjusting one's lips to the mouthpiece of a metal wind-instrument so as to produce tones; embouchure. Since the pitch and quality of tones produced upon such instruments depend upon the strength, endurance, and flexibility of the player's lips, the term is used in a general sense to indicate his method and style.—Columellar lip. See columellar.—Curl of the lip. See curl.—Lip drill. See drill.—Lip-glue. See mouth-glue, under glue.—The calves of the lips. See calves.—To bite the lip. See bite.—To hang the lip, to be silent or sulky.

Par. How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something.

Shak., T. and C., III. 1. 152.

To keep a stiff upper lip, to keep up one's courage, as under adversity or trying circumstances; struggle against despondency. [Colloq.]—To make a lip, to pout the under lip in silliness or contempt. [Archaic.]

A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician.

Shak., Cor., II. 1. 127.

To present the cup to one's lips. See cup. lip (lip), v.; pret. and pp. lipped, ppr. lipping. [lip, n.] 1. trans. 1. To touch with the lip or lips, as in kissing; reach with the lip or border. [Chiefly poetical.]

A hand that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Shak., A. and C., II. 5. 30.

When
A stone is thrown into some sleeping tarn,
The circle widens till it lip the margin.

Tennyson, Pelleas and Ettarre.

No good sheep-dog ever so much as lips a sheep to turn it.

R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xiii.

2. To utter with the lips; speak. [Rare.]

I heard my name
Most fondly lipp'd.

Keats, Endymion, I.

3. To notch, as the edge of a sword or knife. [Now only Scotch.]

In these daies the maner is lightly to barbe and pluck off with a sarding hook the beards or strings of the root, that being thus nipped and lipped (as it were) they might nourish the body of the plant.

Holland, tr. of Pliny, xix. 6.

II. intrans. In music, to apply one's lips to the mouthpiece of a metal wind-instrument so as to produce tones; also, to use one's lips in some particular manner: as, to lip well or badly.

lipæmia (li-pë'mi-ã), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + αἷμα, blood.] In pathol., the presence of an excessive quantity of fat in the blood.

Lipangus, n. See Lipaugus.

Lipari (lip'ã-ri), n. Wine produced in the Lipari Islands, north of Sicily, both red and white, and of many grades of excellence. It is in demand in Naples at prices high for Italian wine, but is rarely exported.

What can make our fingers so fine?
Drink, drink wine, Lipari-wine.

The Slighted Maid, p. 83. (Nares.)

Liparia (li-pã-ri-ã), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1771), so called from the shining leaves; < Gr. λεπρός, oily, shining, sleek, < λεπός, fat, lard.] A genus of South African leguminous plants of the tribe Genisteæ, and type of the subtribe Lipariææ. They are shrubs with simple, entire, coriaceous, shining leaves, without stipules, and having bright-yellow flowers in terminal heads, surrounded by large bracts forming an involucre. One of the lower lobes of the calyx is large and petaloid, and the stamens are diadelphous.

Lipariidæ (li-par'i-dë), n. pl. Same as Lipariidæ.

Lipariidæ (lip-ã-ri-d'i-dë), n. pl. [NL., < Liparis (-id-) + -idæ.] 1. A family of acanthopterygian fishes, represented by the genus Liparis, embracing cottoids with oblong or elongated antrosiform body, the head unarmed and enveloped by the skin, a long dorsal fin with anterior spines scarcely differentiated, a long anal fin, and ventrals united to form a circular sucker. The numerous species, of several genera besides Liparis, inhabit cold and temperate seas, chiefly of the northern hemisphere, and attain a moderate or only small size. They are popularly known, in common with many other fishes, as suckers, and are also called snail-fishes and sea-snails.

2. A family of bombycid moths, typified by the genus Liparis (named in the form Lipariidæ by Boisduval in 1834), having the proboscis short or obsolete, and the female rarely wingless. The larvae are free, usually live in trees, have hairs arising in bundles from tubercles, and are mostly dark-colored; they pupate in a loose cocoon usually interspersed with hairs. The family is wide-spread. There are about 60 genera, species of which are variously known as siparis, vaporera, etc.

Liparidina (lip'ã-ri-d'i-nã), n. pl. [NL., < Liparis (-id-) + -ina.] In Günther's ichthyological system, the second group of his family Disco-boli: same as Lipariidæ and Lipariidæ, 1.

Liparidinæ (lip'ã-ri-d'i-në), n. pl. [NL., < Liparis (-id-) + -inæ.] A subfamily of Cyclopteri-dæ, equivalent to the family Lipariidæ. Also Liparina.

Lipariææ (lip-ã-ri'ë-ë), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham, 1845), < Liparia + -ææ.] A subtribe of plants of the tribe Genisteæ and order Leguminosæ. It includes South African genera characterized by the absence of stipules and by the free vexillary stamen which is rarely joined to the others above the opening of the tube of the corolla. The subtribe includes the type Liparia and five other genera.

Liparinæ (lip-a-rī'nē), n. pl. Same as Lipari-dinæ.

Liparis (lip'a-ris), n. [NL., < Gr. λιπαρός, oily, shining, sleek; see Liparia.] 1. In ichth., a genus of fishes, so called by Artedi in 1738 from the soft smooth skin, typical of the family Liparididae, having the ventral disk well developed. The type of the genus is Cyclopterus liparis of Linnaeus.—2. In entom., a genus of arctiid moths, founded by Oehsenheimer in 1810. It is a comprehensive group, much broken up of late years, all the British species having been placed in other genera. The gipsy-moth is L. (Oenaria) dispar. L. monacha is one whose larva is injurious to trees, especially conifers.

3. A genus of orchidaceous herbs, some terrestrial and some epiphytes, belonging to the tribe Epidendrea. It is characterized by small flowers growing in racemes, the anthers having four pollinia, and a column which is rather long and sometimes winged above. There are about 120 species, found in all warm and temperate regions. L. Lesellii in England is sometimes called fen-orchis.

liparite (lip'a-rīt), n. [So called from the Lipari Islands in the Mediterranean.] A name applied by Roth to the rock called rhyolite by Von Richter. See rhyolite.

liparocele (lip'a-rō-sēl), n. [< Gr. λιπαρός, oily, fatty (see Liparia), + κήλη, a tumor.] Same as lipoma.

Lipauginæ (lip-ā-jī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lipaugus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Cotingidae, including a number of South American cotingine birds of plain coloration, like the species of Lipaugus. P. L. Selater, 1862.

Lipaugus (li-pā'gus), n. [NL. (Boie, misprinted Lipaugus and so used by some ornithologists): so called as being a very plain-colored genus among a number of brilliant relatives, < Gr. λιπαυής, having lost its light or splendor, < λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, + ἀνή, brilliance, splendor.] The typical genus of Lipauginae, based upon Muscicapa simplex of Liechtenstein, a cotingine bird of Brazil.

lip-bit (lip'bit), n. A brace-bit with a cutting lip which projects beyond the end of the barrel.

lip-born (lip'bōrn), a. Coming from the lips only; not arising from the heart; not cordial or genuine.

Why had he brought his cheap regard and his lip-born words to her who had nothing patry to give in exchange? George Eliot, Middlemarch, lxxx. (Davies.)

lip-cell (lip'sel), n. In bot., one of a group of cells in the sporangia of some ferns between which the dehiscence begins. They have lignified walls, and number from two to four.

lip-clip, n. A kiss. Halliwell. [Old slang.]

lip-comfort (lip'kum'fērt), n. Utterance of words of comfort or consolation, especially of an insincere kind or unaccompanied by practical assistance.

Promises

Are but lip-comforts.

Fletcher (and another?), Prophetess, ii. 1.

Lip-comfort cannot cure me. Pray you, leave me

To mine own private thoughts.

Massinger, Maid of Honour, iii. 1.

lip-comforter (lip'kum'fēr-tēr), n. One who consoles or comforts with mere empty talk.

Reverend lip-comforters, that once a week

Proclaim how blessed are the poor.

Southey, Soldier's Funeral.

lip-devotion (lip'dē-vō'shōn), n. The utterance of prayer by the lips, especially without genuine desire.

We saw those large marble stayres, 23 in number, which are never ascended but on the knees, some lip-devotion being used on every step. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 20, 1644.

Lip-devotion will not serve the turn; it undervalues the very thing it prays for. South, Sermons, VI. 386.

lippe (lip), n. [< ME. lippe*, lippe, < OF. lippe, lippe (ML. lippa), a large piece, a good bit or morsel, a monthful.] A piece, bit, or fragment; a portion. [Prov. Eng.]

As me were leuere, by oure lordie, a lippe of godes grace Thus al the kynde witt that ge can bothe and connyng of goure bokes. Piers Plowman (C), xii. 226.

lipet, n. [ME., dim. of lippe.] A portion.

Of every disse a lipet ont to take.

Lydgate, Minor Poems, p. 52. (Halliwell.)

lip-fern (lip'fērn), n. A fern of the genus Cheilanthes: in allusion to the lip-like indusium.

lip-fish (lip'fish), n. A labroid fish.

Many wrasses are readily recognized by their thick lips, the inside of which is sometimes curiously folded: a peculiarity which has given to them the German name of lip-fishes. Encyc. Brit., XIXV. 686.

lip-good (lip'gūd), a. Good in profession only.

His grace is merely but lip-good.

B. Jonson, Sejanus, i. 2.

liphæmia (li-fē'mi-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + αἷμα, blood.] Deficiency or poverty of blood. Also spelled leiphæmia.

lip-head (lip'hed), n. A head of a bolt or analogous metal object which projects toward one side only; used in angles and other situations where there is not room for a head symmetrical all around.

lip-homage (lip'hom'āj), n. Homage rendered by the lips only; insincere professions of devotion.

It [devotion to science] is not a mere lip-homage, but a homage expressed in actions.

H. Spencer, Education, p. 91.

lip-hook (lip'hūk), n. 1. In angling, the upper hook of a gang, which is put through the lips of live bait, as a minnow, closing the mouth but leaving the gills free for respiration: used on spinning-tackles, etc.—2. A kind of grapple used by whalers for towing a dead whale to the ship.

lip-labor (lip'lā'bōr), n. A laboring merely with the lips; labor that consists in promises and professions.

When these actions fail of their several ends, . . . aims are misspent, fasting is an impertinent trouble, prayer is but lip-labor. Jer. Taylor, Holy Living, i. 2.

lip-laborious (lip'lā-bō'ri-us), a. Abounding in mere verbal professions; hypocritical.

The lower the times grew, the worse they were at the bottom: the Bramins grew hypocritical and lip-laborious. Lord, Hist. Banians (1630), p. 86. (Latham.)

lip-language (lip'lang'gwāj), n. In the instruction of the deaf and dumb, oral or articulate language, to be understood by watching the motion of the lips, in contradistinction to the language of signs or of the fingers.

liplet (lip'let), n. [lip + dim. -let.] A little lip.

Lipobranchia (li-pō-brā'ki-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + L. branchium, arm.] In Haeckel's system of classification, a primary group of Echinodermata, consisting of the sea-nereis (Echinida) and the sea-cucumbers (Holothuria), which are called armless echinoderms in distinction from the ringed-arms or Colobranchia.

lipobranchiate (li-pō-brā'ki-ät), a. [< Lipobranchia + -ate.] Pertaining to or having the characters of the Lipobranchia; armless; rayless; having no brachia.

Lipobranchia (li-pō-brang'ki-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + βράγχια, gills.] In Lankester's classification, one of three grades of the class Arachnida, contrasted with Embolobranhia and Delobranhia, and composed of the weasel-spiders, harvestmen, false scorpions, and mites, or the four orders Galeodina, Opilionina, Pseudoscorpionina, and Acarina.

lipobranchiate (li-pō-brang'ki-ät), a. [< Lipobranchia + -ate.] Of or pertaining to the Lipobranchia.

Lipocephala (li-pō-sef'a-lä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lipocephalus: see Lipocephalus.] Lankester's name of the lamelibranchs or bivalve mollusks, contrasted with the Glossophora, regarded as a branch of Mollusca, and divided into Isomya, Heteromya, and Monomya.

lipocephalous (li-pō-sef'a-lus), a. [< NL. lipocephalus, < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + κεφαλή, head.] Headless, as a bivalve mollusk; acephalous; of or pertaining to the Lipocephala.

lipofibroma (li'pō-fi-brō'mä), n.; pl. lipofibromata (-mä-tä). [NL., < Gr. λίπος, fat, + NL. fibroma.] In pathol., a lipoma in which there is a considerable amount of connective tissue. Also called adipofibroma.

lipogastria (li-pō-gas'tri-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + γαστήρ (γαστρ-), stomach.] Atrophy of the primary enteric cavity.

lipogastrosis (li'pō-gas-trō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + γαστήρ (γαστρ-), stomach, + -osis.] Absence of a stomach; specifically, in sponges, absence of the paragaster, with the development of diverticula, which form a system of canals replacing the original enteric cavity.

Lipogastrosis . . . may be produced by the growing together of the roots of the choanosomal folds, thus reducing the paragaster cavity to a labyrinth of canals. Sollas, Encyc. Brit., XXII. 616.

lipogastrotic (li'pō-gas-trot'ik), a. [< lipogastrosis (-ōt-) + -ic.] Having no stomach; specifically, in sponges, having no paragaster; characterized by or exhibiting lipogastrosis.

lipogenesis (li-pō-jen'ō-sis), n. [< Gr. λίπος, fat, λαρδ, + γένεσις, origin: see genesis.] The formation of fat.

The effective agent in lipogenesis . . . also favors the formation of uric acid. Quain, Med. Dict., p. 1053.

lipogenous (li-pōj'e-nus), a. [< Gr. λίπος, fat, + γενής, producing: see -genous.] Pertaining to the formation of fat; forming or tending to form fat; developed in fat.

Lipoglossa (li-pō-glos'sä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + γλῶσσα, tongue.] A grade or series of Mollusca, represented by a class (Scolecomorpha) containing the genus Neomenia (or Solenopus), as alone distinguished from the Echinoglossa (gastropods, cephalopods, etc.). E. R. Lankester.

Lipoglossæ (li-pō-glos'sē), n. pl. [NL., fem. pl.: see Lipoglossa.] In Nitzsch's classification (1829), a major group of birds, typified by the kingfishers (Alcedinidae), and including the hornbills (Bucerotidae) and hoopoes (Upupidae), in all of which the tongue is very small.

lipoglossate (li-pō-glos'sät), a. [As Lipoglossa + -ate.] Having a small tongue, or none; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lipoglossæ.

lipogram (li'pō-gram), n. [< Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + γράμμα, a letter, < γράειν, write. Cf. lipogrammatic.] A writing from which all words containing a particular letter are omitted, as the several books of the Odyssey of Tryphiodorus, in the first of which, it is said, there was no A, in the second no B, etc. Similarly, poems have been written in English avoiding the use of e, which is the most frequent of all English letters, while, on the other hand, pieces also have been written containing only one vowel, as e.

lipogrammatic (li'pō-gra-mat'ik), a. [< Gr. λιπογράμματιος, λιπογράμματιος, with a letter left out, < λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + γράμμα, a letter. Cf. lipogram.] Pertaining to the writing of lipograms; also, of the nature of a lipogram.

The Greeks composed lipogrammatic works, works in which one letter of the alphabet is omitted.

I. Disraeli, Curios. of Lit., I. 335.

lipogrammatism (li-pō-gram'a-tizm), n. [< lipogrammatic + -ism.] The art or practice of writing lipograms.

Lipogrammatism does not affect the rhythm or metre of verse. G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xxv.

lipogrammatist (li-pō-gram'a-tist), n. [< lipogrammatic + -ist.] One who writes lipograms.

The lipogrammatists or letter-droppers of antiquity . . . would take an exception, without any reason, against some particular letter of the alphabet, so as not to admit it once in a whole poem. Addison, Spectator, No. 59.

lipoma (li-pō'mä), n.; pl. lipomata (-mä-tä). [NL., < Gr. λίπος, fat, + -oma.] In pathol., a tumor formed of fatty tissue. Also called adipoma and liparocele.

lipomatosis (li-pō-ma-tō'sis), n. [< lipoma (-t) + -osis.] The excessive growth of fatty tissue in the body or any of its parts.

lipomatous (li-pōm'a-tus), a. [< lipoma (-t) + -ous.] Pertaining to or of the nature of a lipoma.

lipomyxoma (li'pō-mik-sō'mä), n.; pl. lipomyxomata (-mä-tä). [NL., < Gr. λίπος, fat, + μύξα, mucus, + -oma.] In pathol., a tumor composed partly of fatty and partly of mucous tissue.

Liponema (li-pō-nē'mä), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + νῆμα, a thread.] The typical genus of Liponemidae.

Liponemidæ (li-pō-nem'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Liponema + -idæ.] A family of Hexactinida, with numerous perfect septa and with marginal tentacles transformed by retrogression into short tubes or into stomidia. Of the three genera united as Liponemidae, Liponema comes near the Discosomidae, as its stomidia may be divided into principal and accessory stomidia; Polystomidium has an endodermal muscle and marginal spherules; and Polysiphonia, with its mesodermal circular muscle, resembles the Paractidae.

lipopod (li'pō-pōd), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Lipopoda.

II. n. One of the Lipopoda.

Lipopoda (li-pōp'ō-dä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] A prime division of Rotifera, called a class and contrasted with Parapodiata, and divided into the orders Platima, Bdelligrada, and Rhizota.

Lipoptera (li-pōp'te-rä), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λπεῖν, leave, be lacking, + πτερόν, a wing, = E. feather.] A genus of pupiparous parasitic dip-terous insects of the family Hippoboscidae. The species are at first winged and live on birds; afterward they seek quadrupeda and lose their wings, whence the name. Also Lipoptera.

lip-ornament (lip'ôr-nâ-ment), n. An object inserted in the lip as an ornament, as is customary among many savage races; a labret.

Lipostoma (li-pos'tô-mâ), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + στόμα, mouth.] Same as Lipostomata.

Lipostomata (li-pô-stô'ma-tâ), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + στόμα, mouth.] The mouthless orifice of Protozoa; the sporezoans or gregarines: opposed to Stomatophora. Originally Lipostoma. E. R. Lankester.

lipostomatous (li-pô-stô'mâ-tus), a. [As Lipostomata + -ous.] Mouthless; astomatous; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lipostomata.

lipostomia (li-pô-stô'mi-â), n. [NL.] Same as lipostomy.

lipostomosis (li-pô-stô-mô'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + στόμα, mouth.] Absence of a mouth, stoma, or oral orifice; specifically, in sponges, lack of an oscule; the state of being lipostomatous.

lipostomotic (li-pô-stô-mô'tik), a. [As lipostomosis + -ic.] Having no stoma, mouth, or oral orifice; specifically, in sponges, having no oscule; characterized by or exhibiting lipostomosis.

lipostomous (li-pos'tô-mus), a. [As lipostomatous.] Having no mouth; lipostomatous.

lipostomy (li-pos'tô-mi), n. [NL. Lipostomia, < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + στόμα, mouth.] Atrophy of the mouth; an astomatous condition.

lipothymia (li-pô-thim'i-â), n. [NL., also written leipothymia.] Same as lipothymy.

lipothymic (li-pô-thim'ik), a. Same as lipothymous.

lipothymous (li-pô-thi-mus), a. [Also written leipothymous; < Gr. λεπθυμος, fainting, in a swoon, < λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, + θυμος, life, soul.] Pertaining to or given to swooning; fainting.

lipothymy (li-pô-thi-mi), n. [Also written leipothymy; < NL. lipothymia, < Gr. λεπθυμία, fainting, a swoon, < λεπθυμος, fainting, in a swoon: see lipothymous.] In pathol., fainting; syncope.

In lipothymy or swoonings he used the friction of this finger [the ring-finger] with saffron and gold. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 4.

lipotype (li-pô-tîp), n. [As λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + τύπος, impression, type.] In zoolog., a type or form of animal life which distinguishes a given faunal area by its absence therefrom. Gill.

Lipotyphla (li-pô-tif'lâ), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, be lacking, + τυφλός, blind (with ref. to the blind gut, NL. cæcum).] In some systems of classification, a division of the mammalian order Insectivora, including those forms which have no cæcum, as distinguished from the Menotyphla, which have a cæcum. Gill.

lipotypic (li-pô-tîp'ik), a. [As lipotype + -ic.] Having the character of a lipotype.

lipoxenus (li-pôk'se-nus), a. [As λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, + ξένος, host, + -ous.] In bot., deserting its host. A term descriptive of some parasitic fungi, which, after a certain period, leave their host and complete their development independently, living entirely upon a reserve of food earlier appropriated from the host plant. De Bary, Fungi (trans.), pp. 338, 466.

lipoxeny (li-pôk'se-ni), n. [As lipoxenus + -y.] In bot., the desertion of its host by a parasitic fungus. See lipoxenus. De Bary.

lipped (lipt), a. [As lip + -ed.] 1. Having lips; also, having a raised or rounded edge resembling a lip; having lips of a kind specified: often used in composition.

Come on, you thick-lipped slave. Shak., Tit. And., iv. 2. 175.

A virgin purest lipp'd, yet in the lore Of love deep learned to the red heart's core. Keats, Lamia, i.

2. In bot., same as labiate.—3. In ichth., specifically, thick-lipped; labroid: applied to the wrasse or rockfish family.—Lipped and harled, built, as a wall, of stones without mortar, but with the joints afterward filled with mortar, and the whole surface plastered over with what is called rough-cast or harling. [Scotch.]

lippen (lip'n), v. [ME. lippen, trust: origin obscure.] I. trans. To intrust. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

II. intrans. To trust; rely or depend: with to or on: as, do not lippen to him; I was lippening on you. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Na, I had far rather Tib Mumpa kenned which way I was gawn than her—though Tib's no muckle to lippen to neither. Scott, Guy Mannerling, xxii.

lippening (lip'ning), a. [Appar. ppr. of lippen, peculiarly used (?).] Occasional; accidental. [Scotch.]

I aye telled the gudeman ye meant weel to him; but he takes the tout at every bit lippening word. Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, xii.

lipper¹ (lip'er), n. Same as leaper.

lipper² (lip'er), n. [Appar. < lip + -er.] 1. A thin piece of blubber cut in oblong shape, with slits in it, used to wipe up gurry or slumgullion from the deck of a whaler.

A lipper is a piece of thin blubber of an oblong shape, with incisions in one end for the men to grasp. Fisheries of U. S., v. ii. 287.

2. A large metal ladle used for scooping up the oil from the deck of a whaler. Fisheries of U. S., v. ii. 287.

lipper³ (lip'er), v. t. [As *lipper*², n.] To wipe with a lipper: followed by off: as, to lipper off the deck.

lipper³ (lip'er), a. and n. [Origin obscure.] I. a. Wet; rainy. [Prov. Eng.]

II. n. The spray from small waves, in either fresh or salt water. Halliwel. [North. Eng.]

Lippia (lip'i-â), n. [NL. (Linneus), named after Augustus Lippi, a French physician and traveler in Abyssinia.] A genus of plants of the tribe Verbeneæ, characterized by a small membranaceous two- to four-toothed calyx, a four-lobed corolla, and a dry indehiscent fruit. They are shrubs, or rarely herbs, bearing small flowers in spikes or heads. There are about 90 species, found in all warm regions, but especially abundant in America. L. citriodora is the lemon-scented verbena. See verbena.

lippie, n. See *lippy*².

lippling (lip'ing), n. [As lip + -ing.] The formation of a lip-like projection.

The articular cartilage appears to have been squeezed out by pressure, so as to produce a "lip" or ridge around the margin. This lippling has a superficial resemblance to the condition seen in early rheumatoid arthritis. Lancet, No. 3423, p. 933.

lippitude (lip'i-tûd), n. [= F. lippitude = It. lippitudine, < L. lippitudo, inflammation of the eyes, < lippus, blear-eyed.] Soreness of the eyes; blearedness; lippitudo.

lippitudo (lip-i-tû'dô), n. [L.: see lippitude.] In pathol., the presence of a gummy or crusty accumulation along the edges of the eyelids.

lip-plate (lip'plât), n. The hypostome of trilobites.

lip-protector (lip'prô-tek'tor), n. A shield to protect the lip from injury during dental operations.

lippy¹ (lip'i), a. [As lip + -y.] Full of lip (see lip, n., 3); impertinent and voluble in speech; saucy. [Slang.]

lippy², lippie (lip'i), n. [A dim. of lip*, var. of leap.] An old Scotch dry measure, the fourth part of a peck: same as forpet. The lippy was the sixteenth part of the firiot, which was the fourth part of the boll. For the different sizes of those measures, see firiot and boll.

"Brave words," . . . answered the Miller; "nevertheless, to speak my mind, a lippy o' bran were worth a bushel o' them." Scott, Monastery, xiv.

lip-reading (lip'rê'ding), n. Reading or understanding what another says by observing the movements of his lips: used in regard to the instruction of the deaf and dumb.

lip-reward (lip'rê-wârd), n. An empty promise. Davies.

To every act she gives huge lip-reward, Lash of oaths, as falsehood of her faith. G. Markham, Sir R. Grinville (Arber Rep.), p. 56.

lip-righteousness (lip'ri'chus-nes), n. Mere profession of righteousness. Davies.

Dost thou think To trick them of their secret? for the dupes Of humankind keep this lip-righteousness. Southey, Thalaba, v.

lip-salve (lip'sâlv), n. 1. In phar., a cosmetic ointment for the lips.

Rose and white lip-salves were used as now. J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 123.

2†. Figuratively, soft and flattering speech.

Spencer, that was as cunning as a serpent, finds here a female wit that . . . taught him not to trust a woman's lip-salve, when that he knew her breast was fill'd with rancour. E. Fennell, Hist. Edw. II., p. 91.

lipsanthea (lip'sa-nô-thê'kâ), n. [NL., < NGr. λείψανθήκη, < Gr. λείψανον, a relic, a thing left (< λείπειν, leave), + θήκη, a shrine.] A shrine for relics; a reliquary.

lipset, v. A Middle English variant of lisp. Chaucer.

lip-service (lip'sêr'vis), n. Service with the lips or in pretense only; insincere profession of good will or devotion.

The Reply here and there just purports to offer a lip-service that in heart it withdraws. Gladstone, Gleanings, I. 184.

lipsey (lip'si), v. A dialectal variant of lipse, lisp.

lip-spine (lip'spîn), n. In conch., a spine on the lip of a shell.

lip-tooth (lip'tôth), n. In conch., a tooth on the lip of a shell.

Many individuals of Triodopsis tridentata from eastern North Carolina occur without the lip-teeth characteristic of the genus Triodopsis. E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 178.

lipwingle (lip'wing'gl), n. A dialectal variant of lapwing.

lip-wisdom (lip'wiz'dum), n. Wisdom in talk without corresponding practice.

I find that all is but lip-wisdom, which wants experience. Sir P. Sidney.

lip-wise (lip'wîz), a. Garrulous. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

lip-work (lip'wêrk), n. 1. Lip-labor. Milton. —2. The act of kissing. B. Jonson.

lip-working (lip'wêr'king), p. a. Professing with the lips without corresponding practice; lip-laborious.

Their office is to pray for others, and not to be the lip-working deacons of other mens appointed words. Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

liquable (lik'wa-bl), a. [= Sp. licuable = It. liquabile, < LL. liquabilis, that may be melted or dissolved, < L. liquare, melt: see liquate.] Capable of being liquefied or melted.

liquament (li-kwâ'ment), n. [L., a liquid mixture, a sauce, < liquare, make liquid, dissolve: see liquate.] A liquid sauce.

And make liquamen castimoniai OI peris thus. Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 90.

liquate (lik'kwât), v.; pret. and pp. liquated, ppr. liquating. [As L. liquatus, pp. of liquare (> It. liquare = Sp. licuar), make liquid, melt, dissolve, < liquere, be fluid: see liquid.] I. trans. To melt; liquefy; specifically, in metal., to separate, as one metal from another less fusible, by applying just sufficient heat to melt the more easily liquefiable, so that it can be run off from the other. Also cliquate.

II. intrans. To become liquefied or dissolved; melt.

liquation (li-kwâ'shon), n. [= F. liquation = Sp. licuacion, < LL. liquatio(n-), a melting, < L. liquare, pp. liquatus, melt, dissolve: see liquate.] 1. The act or operation of liquating or melting.—2. The condition or capacity of being melted: as, a substance congealed beyond liquation.—3. The separation of metals differing considerably in fusibility by subjecting them, when contained in an alloy or mixture, to a degree of heat sufficient to melt the most fusible only, which then flows away, or liquates, from the unmelted mass. This process is of great antiquity, and was up to 1836 extensively used at Mansfeld in Prussia, in the treatment of argentiferous copper and lead ore. Lead containing antimony and some other metals is also partially freed from these and prepared for further treatment by a process of liquation. Also cliquation.

liquation-furnace (li-kwâ'shon-fêr'nâs), n. In metal., a furnace specially adapted to liquation.

liquation-hearth (li-kwâ'shon-hârth), n. In metal., a hearth specially adapted to liquation.

liquefacient (lik-wê-fâ'shiënt), n. [As L. liquefacien(t)-s, ppr. of liquefacere, make liquid, dissolve, < liquere, be fluid or liquid, + facere, make. Cf. liquefy.] That which liquefies or serves to liquefy; in med., an agent, as mercury or iodine, used to produce liquefaction of solid depositions.

liquefaction (lik-wê-fâk'shon), n. [= F. liquefaction = Sp. liquefacción = Pg. liquefacção = It. liquefazione, < LL. liquefactio(n-), a melting, < L. liquefacere, pp. liquefactus, melt: see liquefacient.] 1. The act or process of liquefying, or of rendering or becoming liquid; reduction to a liquid state. The liquefaction of solids is effected by the application of heat or by solution (see solution), that of gases by cold or pressure, or by both combined (see gas).

By the liquefaction of two pieces of ice by mutual friction Davy proved that the accepted theory, which identified the objective correlative of the sensation with a subtle fluid (caloric), permeating bodies and forced out of them by friction, could not possibly be true. Mind, XII. 560, note.

2. The state of being liquefied or melted.

liquefactive (lik-wē-fak'tiv), a. [< liquefac-(ion) + -ive.] Pertaining to or producing liquefaction.

The more longitudinal and diffuse gummous infiltrations undergo liquefactive necrosis much more slowly.

Med. News, LIII. 507.

liquefiable (lik-wē-fī-ā-bl), a. [< F. liquéfiable; as liquefy + -able.] Capable of being liquefied, melted, or changed to a liquid state.

liquefier (lik-wē-fī-ēr), n. One who or that which liquefies.

liquefy (lik-wē-fī), v.; pret. and pp. liquefied, ppr. liquefying. [< OF. liquefier, F. liquéfier, < L. liquefieri, become liquid, pass off, liquefacere (< It. liquefare), make liquid, melt, < liquere, be fluid or liquid, + facere (pass. fieri), make: see liquid and -fy. Cf. liqueficient.] I. trans. To make liquid; melt, as a solid, or compress, as a gas, into a liquid state.

Their stony ribs
And m'n'ral bowels, liquefied by fire,
O'erwhelm the fields, by Nature left unbleas'd.
Glover, Athenaid, l.

II. intrans. To become liquid.

The disposition not to liquefy proceedeth from the easie emission of the spirits, whereby the grosser parts contract.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 840.

The blood of St. Januarius liquefied at the approach of the saint's head.

Addison, Travels in Italy.

liqueescence, liqueescency (li-kwes'ens, -en-si), n. [= Sp. liqueescencia; as liqueescen(t) + -ce, -cy.] The condition of being liquefcent; aptness to melt; the state of becoming liquid.

liqueficient (li-kwes'gnt), a. [= Sp. liqueficiente, < L. liqueficient(-is), ppr. of liquefere (< Pg. liqueficer), become fluid, < liquere, be fluid: see liquid.] Having a tendency to liquefy; melting; becoming liquid: as, a substance naturally liqueficient.

At the end of our path a liqueficient
And nebulous lustre was born. Poe, Ulalume.

liqueur (li-kér'), n. [F.: see liquor, n.] 1. An alcoholic drink, usually sweet and of high flavor and perfume; a cordial.

Bitters form a class of liqueurs by themselves, claiming to possess certain tonic properties and a medicinal value.

Encyc. Brit., XIV. 686.

Especially—(a) A strong and sweet wine like those grown in some southern places, such as Lunel, Alicante, and Cyprus, which are also called liqueur vines. (b) A spirituous compound based upon brandy or pure alcohol, and wholly artificial in its composition. These liqueurs are in a certain sense the successors of those of the middle ages, which were supposed to be universal remedies. Their modern use is almost exclusively the gratification of the palate. See curaçao, Benedictine, chartreuse, maraschino, eau-de-vie de Dantzic (under eau-de-vie), anisette, and cordial.

Liqueurs may be distinguished as of three qualities: first, the ratafia, or simple liqueurs, in which the sugar, the alcohol, and the aromatic substances are in small quantities; such are anise-water, noyan, the apricot, cherry, &c., ratafia. The second are the oils or fine liqueurs, with more saccharine and spirituous matter, as the anisette, curaçao, &c. The third are the creams or super-fine liqueurs, as rosoglio, maraschino, Dantzic water, &c.

Pop. Encyc.

(c) A mixture prepared for the purpose of dosing champagne, the effervescence and sweetness of the wine depending much upon its composition. It consists either of wine or of fine brandy, or of a mixture of the two, with pure rock-candy dissolved in it.

2. Same as liqueur-glass.

liqueur-cup (li-kér'kup), n. A very small goblet, usually of silver or of silver gilt, used for the same purpose as a cordial-glass.

liqueur-glass (li-kér'glás), n. A very small drinking-glass intended for liqueurs or cordials; a cordial-glass.

liqueuring (li-kér'ing), n. [< liqueur + -ing.] The process of qualifying wine by means of liqueur, as in the making of champagne.

The liqueuring is regulated by a machine, by which the quantity is measured to a nicety.

Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 606.

liquiblet, n. [ME., appar. for liquable: see liquable.] A fusible metal.

ge schal vndirstonde that wryn not aloonly holdith in It the propertes of gold, but myche more the propertes of alle liquibles. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 7.

liquid (lik'wid), a. and n. [< ME. liquide, < OF. liquide, F. liquide = Sp. liquido = Pg. It. liquido, < L. liquidus, fluid, liquid, moist, < liquere, be liquid, be fluid; cf. Skt. √ ri or ri, flow, run.] I. a. 1. Composed of particles that move freely among each other on the slightest pressure; of a fluid consistence; flowing, or capable of flowing; not fixed or solid.

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
Shak., Othello, v. 2. 280.

The fields of liquid air, enclosing all,
Surround the compass of this earthly ball.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., l. 60.

Hence—2. Clear or transparent, like a liquid: as, liquid eyes; liquid depths.—3. Tearful.

She . . . turned her face, and cast
A liquid look on Ida, full of prayer.
Tennyson, Princess, lv.

4. Sounding smoothly or agreeably to the ear; devoid of harshness: as, liquid melody.

Lull with Amella's liquid name the Nine,
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. l. 31.

Make liquid treble of that bassoon, my throat.
Tennyson, Princess, ii.

5. Pronounced with a smoothly sonorous and freely continuable sound: as, a liquid letter.

See II., 2.—Liquid ammonia. See ammonia, 1.—Liquid confections. See confection.—Liquid debt. (a) In Scots law, a debt the amount of which is ascertained and constituted against the debtor, either by a written obligation or by the decree of a court. (b) See debt.—Liquid glue, measure, etc. See the nouns.—Liquid verb, in Gr. gram., a verb the stem of which ends in a liquid (λ, μ, ν, ρ).

II. n. 1. A substance of which the molecules, while not tending to separate from one another like those of a gas, readily change their relative position, and which therefore retains no definite form, except that determined by the containing receptacle; an inelastic fluid. The differentiation of a liquid as an incompressible fluid is not strictly correct, experiment having shown that liquids are compressible to a very limited extent. See fluid.

2. In gram., a smoothly flowing sound or letter. The name liquids (ὑγρά, sc. συμφωνοῦν or στοιχεῖα, ὑγρά being neuter plural of ὑγρός, liquid, pliant, easy) was given by Greek grammarians, as early as the second century B. C., to l, m, n, r (λ, μ, ν, ρ)—that is, to consonants not mutes or sibilants—on account of their smooth and flowing sound and the pliancy with which they coalesce in pronunciation with a preceding mute. It was adopted by Roman grammarians (liquida, sc. consonantes or litteræ), and has since remained in common use. The classification is not now approved as scientific, and is obsolete.—Amniotic liquid. See amniotic.—Burnett's liquid, a solution of zinc chloride, used by Sir William Burnett, for preserving timber, canvas, and cordage from dry-rot, mildew, etc. It is also employed as an antiseptic to preserve dead bodies, and for disinfecting hospitals, ships, etc.—Diffusion of liquids. See diffusion.—Dutch liquid. See Dutch.

liquidable (lik'wi-dā-bl), a. [= F. liquidable = Sp. liquidable; as liquid(ate) + -able.] Capable of being liquidated.

Liquidambar (lik'wid-am'bār), n. [NL. (Linneus), < L. liquidus, liquid, + ML. ambar, amber, amber: see liquid and amber².] 1. A genus of dicotyledonous trees of the natural order Hamelidææ, distinguished by monocæcious flowers without petals, growing in heads and surrounded by an involucre of four bracts. The carpels of the fruit are tipped by long, persistent styles, and the leaves are palmately lobed and deciduous. There are two species—one, L. orientale of Asia Minor, furnishing the balsam called liquid storax; the other, L. styraciflua of the warmer parts of North America, extending as far north as Connecticut, Ohio, etc., abundant and at its best on bottom-lands in the South. The latter is a large tree with handsome, shining, star-shaped leaves. In hot regions it extends a gum, sometimes called copalm (a name also given to the tree) or copal-balsam, used in the preparation of chewing-gum, and to some extent in medicine as a substitute for storax. The tree is variously named sweet-gum, star-leaved gum, liquid-amber (liquidambar) or amber, red-gum, and bitled, as well as copalm. From the corky ridges of its branches, it has been called alligator-tree. Fossil remains of the genus are found in the Tertiary deposits of Europe, Greenland, Alaska, California, and Colorado, and also in Japan, and one species occurs in the Cretaceous of Kansas and Nebraska. Sixteen fossil species have been described. 2. [l. c.] A tree of this genus.

Branch of Liquidambar styraciflua.

liquidambar (lik'wid-am'bār), n. Same as liquidambar, 2.

liquidate (lik'wi-dāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. liquidated, ppr. liquidating. [< ML. liquidatus, pp. of liquidare (< It. liquidare = Pg. Sp. liquidar = F. liquider), make liquid, make clear, clarify, < L. liquidus, liquid: see liquid, a.] 1. To make clear or plain; clarify; free from obscurity. [Obsolete or rare.]

A senseless jumble, soon liquidated by a more egregious act of folly, the King with his own hand crowning the young Duke of Warwick King of the Isle of Wight.

Walpole, Anecdotes of Painting, I. II.

All new laws . . . are considered as more or less obscure and equivocal until their meaning be liquidated and ascertained by a series of particular discussions and adjudications.

Madison, The Federalist, No. xxviii.

2. To clear up; reduce to order or precision; settle the particulars of; adjust: as, to liquidate the affairs of a bankrupt firm. See liquidation.—3. To clear off; settle; pay: as, to liquidate a debt or a mortgage.—4. To make less harsh and offensive: as, to liquidate the harshness of sound. Imp. Dict.—Liquidated damages. See damage.

liquidation (lik'wi-dā'shen), n. [= *F. liquidation = Sp. liquidación = Pg. liquidação = It. liquidazione, < ML. as if liquidatio(n)-, < liquidare, pp. liquidatus, liquidate: see liquidate.] The act of liquidating; the act of adjusting debts, or ascertaining their amount or the balance of them due. In a more general sense, the act or operation of winding up the affairs of a firm or company by getting in the assets, settling with its debtors and creditors, and apportioning the amount of each partner's or shareholder's profit or loss, etc.—Signing in liquidation, the act of the partner who is entrusted with the business of liquidation, in signing for the firm when necessary for that purpose. It is indicated by his writing the name of the firm and adding the words in liquidation.

To go into liquidation, to refrain from new business, and continue business only for the purpose of getting in the assets, paying obligations, and dividing the surplus, if any.

liquidator (lik'wi-dā-tōr), n. [= F. liquidateur = Sp. liquidador; as liquidate + -or.] One who or that which liquidates or settles; specifically, in Great Britain, in com., an officer appointed to conduct the winding up of the affairs of a firm or company, to bring and defend actions and suits in its name, and to do all necessary acts on behalf of the firm or company: called a receiver in the United States.

liquidise, v. t. See liquidize.

liquidity (li-kwid'i-ti), n. [= F. liquidité = It. liquidità, < LL. liquiditas(-is), liquidity, < L. liquidus, liquid: see liquid, a.] 1. The state or quality of being liquid; fluid consistence; capacity of flowing freely.

The spirits, for their liquidity, are more uncapable than the fluid medium, which is the conveyer of sounds, to persevere in the continued repetition of vocal airs.

Glanville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, iv.

2. The quality of being smooth, flowing, and agreeable: said of sound, music, etc.

liquidize (lik'wi-diz), v. t.; pret. and pp. liquidized, ppr. liquidizing. [< liquid + -ize.] To make liquid; liquefy. Also spelled liquidise. [Rare.] liquidly (lik'wid-li), adv. In a liquid or flowing manner; smoothly; flowingly.

liquidness (lik'wid-nes), n. The state or quality of being liquid; fluency.

liquidogenic (lik'wi-dē-jen'ik), a. [< L. liquidus, liquid, + √ gen, produce, + -ic.] Giving rise to liquids or forming fluid substances. [Rare.]

It is suggested, as a working hypothesis, that fluids are formed of molecular groups which may be called liquidogenic molecules.

Nature, XXXVIII. 91.

liquid-refrigerator (lik'wid-rē-frīj'ē-rā-tōr), n. In brewing, an apparatus for cooling wort; a wort-refrigerator. It consists of a shallow tank, or a series of such tanks, through which is laid a pipe for cold water, the circulation of which cools the wort.

liquor (lik'or; L. pron. li'kwōr), n. [Early mod. E. also liquore; the spelling with qu is a mod. accom. to the orig. L., without change of the reg. E. pronunciation; < ME. licour, licour, licure, licur, < AF. licur, OF. licor, licour, liqueur, liqueur, F. liqueur = Sp. Pg. licor = It. liquore, < L. liquor, fluidity, liquidness, a fluid, a liquid, < liquere, be fluid or liquid: see liquid, 1.] A liquid or fluid substance, as water, milk, blood, sap, etc.

This flooring wol be blak and wynter warme,
And licoure shedde.

Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 13.

From silver spouts the grateful liquors glide,
While China's earth receives the smoking tide.
Pope, R. of the L., III. 109.

2. A strong or active liquid of any sort. Specifically—(a) An alcoholic or spirituous liquid, either distilled or fermented; an intoxicating beverage; especially, a spirituous or distilled drink, as distinguished from fermented beverages, as wine and beer.

Fetch me a stoup of liquor. Shak., Hamlet, v. 1. 68.

(b) A strong solution of a particular substance, used in the industrial arts. The liquor of any substance is that substance held in solution, and the word used absolutely has meanings differing according to the industry in which it is used. (c) An elixir.

I, and my six servants, are not able to make of this precious liquor so fast as it is fetched away from my lodging by gentlemen of your city. B. Jonson, Volpone, II. 1.

Hence—(d) Any prepared solution, as a sugar solution for claying the loaves, or a solution of a dye or mordant.

(e) A dilution, as in liquor ammoniac. [In technical Latin phrases pronounced l'kwôr, as in liquor ammi, liquor potassæ, etc.]—Ammoniacal liquor. See ammoniacal.

Black liquor. See black-liquor.—Bolled-off liquor, the sappy liquid which has been employed for the purpose of removing the silk-gum from raw silk previous to dyeing. It is a slightly alkaline and more or less concentrated solution of silk-gum. It is added to the dye-bath in dyeing silk, in order that the coloring matter may be attracted more slowly and evenly by the silk, and it also preserves the luster of the latter.—Gas-liquor. See gas.—In liquor. (a) Drunk. (b) Measured (in selling) with their natural juice, as oysters: opposed to solid. [U. S.]—Liquor ammi, the amniotic liquid. See amniotic.—Liquor coelarium, liquor ventriculorum cerebri, the serous fluid in the ventricles of the brain. See coelia.—Liquor Cotunnii, the fluid of Cotunnus; the perilymph of the ear.—Liquor Morgagni [so called from G. B. Morgagni, 1682-1771], a small quantity of liquid which frequently collects after death between the back of the lens and the capsule. Also called humor or aqua Morgagni.—Liquor of flints. See flint.—Liquor of Libarius, a solution of bichlorid of tin.—Liquor sanguinis, the plasma of the blood.—Liquor Scarpeæ, Scarpa's fluid; the endolymph of the ear.—Liquor sili-cum. Same as liquor of flints.—Malt liquors, liquors brewed from malt.—Red liquor, a crude aluminum acetate prepared from pyroligneous acid, used as a mordant in calico-printing.—Spirituous liquors, liquors procured by distillation.—The grand liquor, the great elixir, or aurum potable, of the alchemists. Nares.

Where should they find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em? Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 280.

Vinous liquor, liquor made from grapes; wine. Liquor (lik'ôr), v. [cf. liquor, n.] I. trans. 1†. To moisten; drench.

The stranger reply'd, "I'll liquor thy hide, If thou offer'st to touch the string." Robin Hood and Little John (Child's Ballads, V. 217).

2†. To rub with oil or grease; anoint; lubricate.

Cart-wheels squeak not when they are liquored. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 117.

If it should come to the ear of the court . . . they would melt me out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's boots with me. Shak., M. W. of W., IV. 5. 100.

3. To treat with a liquor; apply liquor or a solution to, as in various manufacturing operations. Liquoring sugar, in refineries, consists in pouring on the top of the molds a solution of pure sugar, which, percolating through, removes all remaining coloring matter.

By this alternate steaming and liquoring, the goods are . . . thoroughly cleansed. W. Crookes, Dyeing and Calico-printing, p. 47.

4. To give liquor to; supply with liquor for drinking. [Obsolete or colloq.]

O, the musicians, Master Edward, call 'em in, and liquor 'em a little. Middleton (?), Puritan, v. 1.

II. intrans. To drink; especially, to drink spirits: often with up. [Slang.]

If he had said "Come, boys, liquor up!" they would have thought his manner perfect; but he bowed blandly to Jake Hogan, and said, "Have something to drink, won't you?" E. Eggleston, The Graysons, xix.

liquor-gage (lik'ôr-gāj), n. A gagers' measuring-rod for ascertaining the depth of liquid in a cask or tank.

liquorice, n. See licorice.

liquorish¹, liquorishly, etc. Obsolete spellings of lickerish, etc.

liquorish², n. An obsolete form of licorice.

liquorist (lik'ôr-ist), n. [cf. liquor + -ist.] A maker of liquor or cordials. [Rare.]

The manufacture of these liquors constitutes the trade of the "compounder" or liquorist. Spons' Encyc. Manuf., I. 225.

liquorous, liquorously, etc. Variant spellings of lickerous, etc.

liquor-pump (lik'ôr-pump), n. A portable pump used to draw liquor from a cask, a barrel, or the like.

liquor-thief (lik'ôr-théf), n. A tube used to lift a small quantity of liquor from a cask through the bung-hole; a sampling-tube.

lira¹ (lê'ra), n.; pl. lire (-re). [It. (= F. livre). < L. libra, a balance, a pound: see libra, livre.] 1. A modern silver coin of the kingdom of Italy, divided into 100 centesimi, and worth a franc, or about 19 United States cents.—2. A gold coin of Turkey, otherwise called a Turkish pound, equal to $4.40.

lira² (lê'ra), n. [It., < L. lyra: see lyre.] A lyre; formerly, also, some related instrument. The name has been loosely applied to many instruments of the viol class, and to others having a resonance-box resembling that of the violin and violoncello; also to an instrument in which the tones are produced by properly tuned steel bars fastened in a lyre-shaped rim and struck with a hammer.—Lira da braccio, an obsolete variety of tenor viol, having seven strings.—Lira da gamba, an obsolete variety of violoncello, having fourteen or sixteen strings.—Lira pagana, rustica, or tadesca, a hurdy-gurdy.

lire¹, n. An obsolete form of leer.

lire² (lir), n. [cf. ME. lire, lyre, < AS. lira, flesh, brawn.] Flesh; brawn. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

lire³, n. [Origin obscure.] A cloth manufactured in England in the fifteenth century, and apparently a valuable and rich fabric.

lirella (li-rel'ä), n. [NL., dim. of L. lira, a furrow.] In bot., the narrow furrowed apothecium of some lichens, as in the genus Graphis.

lirellate (li-rel'ät), a. [cf. NL. lirella + -ate¹.] In bot., narrow with a longitudinal furrow; having the character of a lirella: said of the apothecia of some lichens.

lirelliform (li-rel'i-fôr-m), a. [cf. NL. lirella, a little furrow, + L. forma, form.] In bot., lirellate; narrow and furrowed.

lirelline (li-rel'in), a. [cf. NL. lirella + -ine².] In bot., lirellate; having the character of a lirella.

liricon-fancy, liricumfancy (lir'i-kon-fan'si, lir'i-kum-fan'si), n. [Also liricumfancy; a loose compound, appar. ult. based on Gr. λειριον, lily, + φαντασία, fancy.] The lily-of-the-valley, Convallaria majalis.

The tufted daisy, violet, heartsense, for lovers hard to get; The honey-suckle, rosemary, Liricumfancy, rose-parsley. Poor Robin (1746). (Nares.)

liriodendrin (lir'i-ô-den'drin), n. [cf. Liriodendron + -in².] A stimulant tonic with diaphoretic properties, prepared from the bark of Liriodendron Tulipifera.

Liriodendron (lir'i-ô-den'dron), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < Gr. λειριον, a lily (see lily), + δένδρον, a tree.] 1. A genus of North American trees, consisting of a single species, belonging to the order Magnoliacea, tribe Magnolieæ, characterized by extrorse anthers and a sessile gynophore; the tulip-trees. The carpels have two ovules, and the fruits are like samaras. The tree often attains a height of over 100 feet, has a close bark, large four-lobed leaves, and solitary terminal greenish-yellow flowers, shaped somewhat like a tulip and consisting of three sepals and six petals. The wood is light-yellow or brown with white sapwood, light and soft, not strong, and close- and straight-grained. The tulip-tree reaches its greatest development in the lower Wash valley and along the western slopes of the Alleghania southward. It is the sole remaining representative of a nearly extinct type which was formerly abundant, not less than 17 fossil species being known, the greater part occurring in the Cretaceous formation in New Jersey, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, Greenland, and Bohemia, with a few in the Tertiary, chiefly of Europe.

Flowering Branch of Liriodendron Tulipifera, the tulip-tree. a, a stamen; b, fruit; c, a carpel.

2. [l. c.] A tree of this genus.

liripipe¹, n. [Also liripippe, lerripippe = MD. lierepîpe; < ML. liripippium: see liripippium.] Same as liripippium.

liripionated (lir-i-pip'i-ô-nâ-ted), a. [cf. OF. liripion, liripium (see liripippium), + -ate¹ + -ed².] Hooded; wearing the liripippium.

Master Janotus, . . . liripionated with a graduate's hood, . . . transported himself to the lodging of Gargantua. Uryhart, tr. of Rabelais, I. 18. (Daries.)

liripippium (lir-i-pip'i-um), n.; pl. lirippia (-i). [= OF. lirippion (see liripoo), < ML. lirippium, prob. a corruption of LL. cleri ephippium, comparison of a cleric: cleri, gen. of clerus, a clergyman, a cleric; ephippium, < Gr. ἐπίπριος, a saddle-cloth: see ephippium.] A hood of a particular form formerly worn by graduates; in later times, a scarf or an appendage to the hood, consisting of long tails or tippets, which passed round the neck and hung down to the feet, and was often jagged. See tippet.

With their Aristotle's breech on their heads, and his liripippium about their necks. Bechvie, I. 7 (cited by Capell). (Nares.)

liripoopt (lir'i-pöp), n. [Also lirri-poopt, lirry-poopt; in defs. 2, 3, practically an independent word, of a slang nature, and subject to arbitrary variation, as lerripoopt, lerripoope, lyrripoopt, etc.; < OF. lirippion, lirippion, a graduate's hood: see liripippium.] 1. Same as liripippium.—2. A degree of learning or knowledge worthy the wearer of a liripoopt; acuteness; smartness: a smart trick. [Slang.]

Thou must be skilled in thy lockick, but not in thy lirry-poopt. Lyly, Sapho and Phao, I. 3.

I will teach thee thy lirry-poopt after another fashion than to be thus malpertic coeking and billing with me that am thy gouernour. Stanhurst, Descrip. of Ireland, VI.

3. A silly person: as, "a young lirry-poopt," Beau. and Fl. [Slang.]

lirk (lêrk), v. t. [cf. ME. lyrken; cf. lirt, lirp.] 1†. To jerk.

I lyrke hyme up with my bond, And pray hyme that he wolle stond. MS. Porkington, 10. (Halliwel.)

2. To crease; rumple; cause to hang in loose folds. Halliwel. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

lirk (lêrk), n. [cf. lirk, v.] A crease; a rumple; a fold. Halliwel. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

The hills were high on ilka side, And the bought 't the lirk o' the hill. The Broom of Cowdenknows (Child's Ballads, IV. 45).

lironite (li-rok'ô-nî-t), n. [Said to be < Gr. λειρος, pale, + κωνία, κόνις, powder, + -ite².] A hydrated arseniate of copper, occurring in sky-blue or verdigris-blue crystals in several mines in Cornwall.

lirp (lêrp), v. i. [cf. lirt, lirk.] 1. To snap the fingers.—2. To walk lame. Somerset. (Halliwel.)

lirp (lêrp), n. [cf. lirp, v.] A snap, as of the fingers.

A lirp or clack with ones fingers ends, as barbers doe give. Florio.

lirt (lêrt), v. t. [cf. lirk.] To toss. [Prov. Eng.]

Lirus (lî'rus), n. [NL., < Gr. λειρος, pale, delicate, var. of λειρός, λειρόεις, delicate, lily-like, < λειρον, lily: see lily.] A genus of stromateid fishes, of compressed-ovate form, with convex profile, and six or eight short strong spines in front of the dorsal fin. L. perciformis is the rudder-fish, log-fish, or barrel-fish, of a blackish-green color, found from Maine to Cape Hatteras. Also written Leirus. Loze, 1839.

Log-fish, Black Rudder-fish (Lirus perciformis).

lis¹ (lis), n.; pl. lites (lî'têz). [L.] A controversy; a litigation.—Lis mota, a controversy started; the commencement of a controversy, without reference to the bringing of an action thereon.—Lis pendens. (a) A pending litigation. (b) A formal notice, recorded so as to affect title to land, that litigation concerning it is pending.

lis² (lêz), n.; pl. lisses (lêz'ez). [F., a lily: see lily, fleur-de-lis.] In her., same as fleur-de-lis.

A cross fleury with lions and lis in the angles. Athenæum, No. 3188, p. 742.

Now of the lisses, as we shall elect to call them. H. Jennings, Roscrucians (1879), p. 45.

Lisbon (liz'bon), n. [cf. Lisbon (Pg. Lisboa), the capital of Portugal.] 1. A white or light-colored wine produced in the province of Estremadura in Portugal: so called from being shipped at Lisbon.—2†. A soft sugar.

Lisbon cut. See double-brilliant, under brilliant.

Lisbon diet-drink. See diet-drink.

lish (lish), a. [Also leesh, Sc. leish; perhaps connected with *lush*¹.] Stout; active. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

Lisiantheæ (lis-i-an'thē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Grisebach, 1845), < Lisianthus + -æ.] A subtribe of gentianaceous plants of the tribe Chironieæ, characterized by the twice-lamellate stigma, usually exserted, versatile anthers, and persistent style. It embraces 6 genera, of which Lisianthus is the type, shrubs or tall herbs, all natives of America, chiefly within the tropics.

Lisianthus (lis-i-an'thus), n. [NL. (Aublet, 1775), irreg. for Lysianthus*, intended to mean "eathartic flower," erroneously formed < Gr. λίσιν (lísín), loosen, dissolve, + ἄνθος (ánthos), flower.] A genus of herbs or shrubs belonging to the natural order Gentianeæ and the tribe Chironieæ, and type of the subtribe Lisiantheæ, characterized by large and usually handsome flowers, with a campanulate calyx having appressed and often obtuse segments, and a funnel-shaped corolla with an exserted tube. There are about 60 species, almost entirely confined to tropical America. Many are cultivated for ornament.

lisk (lisk), n. Same as lesk.

liskeardite (lis'kär-dit), n. [Liskeard (see def.) + *-ite*².] A hydrous arseniate of aluminium and iron, occurring in thin incrustations of a white or bluish-white color at Liskeard in Cornwall, England.

Lisle glove. Same as Lisle-thread glove. See thread.

Lisle stocking. Same as Lisle-thread stocking. See thread.

Lisle thread. See thread.

lisnet, n. Same as lissen.

lisp (lisp), v. [Also dial. lipsey; < ME. lipse, lippen, lippen, < AS. ulispian* (not recorded) (= D. lippen = MLG. ulippen = OHG. MIIG. lippen, G. dim. or freq. lipeln = Sw. lispä = Dan. lapse), lisp, < wisp, wlisp (= OHG. lisp), lisp, stammering; prob. orig. imitative.] I. intrans. 1. To pronounce the sibilant letters s and z imperfectly, as by giving the sound of th (as in thin) or th (as in this, either).

Somewhat he lipped, for his wantownesse,
To make his English swete upon his tounge.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T. (ed. Morris), l. 264.

2. To speak imperfectly, as in childhood; make feeble, imperfect, or tentative efforts at speaking; hence, to speak in a hesitating, modest way.

I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.
Pope, Prolog. to Satires, l. 128.

II. trans. To pronounce with a lisp or imperfectly.

This they suck in with their milke, and in their first learning to speake lippe out this deuotion.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 296.

Another gift of the high God,
Which, maybe, shall have learn'd to lisp you thanks.
Tennyson, Geraint.

lisp (lisp), n. [lisp, v.] The habit or act of lisping, as in uttering th for s, and th for z; an indistinct utterance, as of a child.

Love those that love good fashions,
Good clothes and rich — they invite men to admire 'em;
That speak the lisp of court — oh, 'tis great learning!
Fletcher (and another), Elder Brother, ii. 3.

She has naturally a very agreeable voice and utterance, which she has changed for the prettiest lisp imaginable.
Steele, Tatler, No. 27.

lisper (lis'pér), n. [ME. lysper; < lisp, v., + *-er*¹.] One who lisps; one who speaks with a natural or affected lisp or imperfectly.

I remember a race of lispers, fine persons, who took an aversion to particular letters in our language.
Steele, Tatler, No. 77.

lispingly (lis'ping-li), adv. In a lisping manner; with a lisp.

liss, n. [ME. lis, lisse, lysse, < AS. liss, and orig. liths, gentleness, mildness, ease, lenity, mercy, forgiveness, grace, favor (= Dan. lise = Sw. lisa, solace, relief), < lithc, gentle, mild, soft; see *lith*¹. So lissome for lithesome. Cf. bliss, similarly related to blithe.] I. Relief; ease; abatement; cessation.

His woful herte of penaunce hadde a lisse.
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 510.

2. Comfort; happiness.

Thus William & his worthi quen wintres tele
Lüeden in liking and lisse as our lord wolde.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 5508.

liss (lis), v. t. [ME. lissen, lyssen, < AS. lissan (= Sw. lisa), soften, weaken, subdue, < liss, gentleness, mildness, ease; see liss, n.] To ease; lighten; relieve; abate.

I praye God youre sorwe lysse.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 210.

Lissa (lis'ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λίσσος, smooth.] 1. A genus of brachyurous decapod crustaceans, or crabs. Leach, 1815. — 2. A genus of dipterous insects, of the family Micropezidae, founded by Meigen in 1826. They are slender shining black flies, most of which are rare, and whose metamorphoses are unknown. L. lozocerina is the only European form. The three North American species described by Walker were incorrectly assigned to this genus.

Lissajous curves. See curve.

Lissamphibia (lis-am-fib'i-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λίσσος, smooth, + NL. Amphibia: see amphibia.] A division of the Amphibia, embracing the naked or smooth as distinguished from the mailed batrachians: opposed to Phractamphibia.

lisse (lēs), n. [F., also lice, < L. licium, thrum, leash, thread of a web: see *list*⁶.] In tapestry, the threads of the warp taken together. The manner in which they are disposed determines the kind of tapestry, whether haute-lisse or basse-lisse.

lissen (lis'n), n. [Formerly also lysse; origin obscure.] A cleft in a rock. [Prov. Eng.]

In the lysse of a rock at Kingscote in Gloucestershire,
I found a bushel of petrified cockles.
Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind.

Lissencephala (lis-en-sef'a-lä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lissencephalus: see lissencephalous.] Those mammals which have smooth brains; in Owen's system of classification, one of four prime divisions of Mammalia. The corpus callosum is present and well developed (as it is not in Lyncephala), but the cerebral hemispheres are small, leaving much of the olfactory lobes and of the cerebellum uncovered, and their surfaces are smooth, having slight, few, or no convolutions (as is not the case in Gyrencephala and Archencephala). The Lissencephala comprise the Bruta or dentates, Chiroptera or bats, Insectivora, and Rodentia. The group thus corresponds to the Ineducabilia of Bonaparte and Microstena of Dana, or the lower series of placental or monodelphous mammals, as Gyrencephala does to the higher series Educabilia. Owen's Lissencephala were the marsupial and monotremes, or didelphian and ornithodelphian mammals; his Archencephala included man alone. The lissencephalous brain is illustrated under gyrus (fig. 1).

lissencephalous (lis-en-sef'a-lus), a. [NL. lissencephalus, < Gr. λίσσος, smooth, + ἐγκέφαλος, brain; see encephalon.] Having a smooth cerebrum; pertaining to the Lissencephala, or having their characters.

lissens (lis'nz), n. pl. [Cf. lissen, a cleft.] In rope-making, the ultimate strands of a rope. E. H. Knight.

Lissoflagellata (lis-ō-flaj-e-lä'tä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lissoflagellatus: see lissoflagellate.] Flagellate infusorians proper, which have simply a flagellum or flagella, but no collar; a subclass of Flagellata, contrasted with Choanoflagellata, and divided into Monadidea, Euglenoida, Heteromastigoda, and Isomastigoda.

lissoflagellate (lis-ō-flaj'e-lät), a. [NL. lissoflagellatus, < Gr. λίσσος, smooth, + NL. flagellatus: see *flagellate*¹.] Simply flagellate, as an infusorian; having a flagellum, but no collar or choana; of or pertaining to the Lissoflagellata.

lissome (lis'um), a. [A reduction of lithesome, q. v. Cf. liss.] Limber; supple; flexible; lithic; lithesome; light; nimble; active. Sometimes written lissom.

A daughter of our meadows, yet not coarse,
Straight, but as lissome as a hazel wand.
Tennyson, The Brook.

lissomeness (lis'um-nes), n. The state of being lissome; flexibility; agility; lightness; lithesomeness.

lissotrichous (li-sot'ri-kus), a. [NL. lissotrichus, < Gr. λίσσος, smooth, + θρίξ (trix), hair.] Smooth-haired; liotrichous; said of animals having hair that is cylindrical, or circular in section, and hence straight and smooth.

Lissotriton (lis-ō-tri'ton), n. [NL. (Bell, 1849), < Gr. λίσσος, smooth, + NL. Triton.] A genus of smooth-skinned Salamandridæ. L. punctatus is the common or smooth newt or eel of Great Britain, thus generically separated from the crested or warty newt. See Triton.

list¹ (list), v. [Early mod. E. also lyst, lest; < ME. listen, listen, lusten, earlier hlesen, < AS. hlystan (= Icel. hlusta), list, listen, < hlyst, hearing (cf. gehlyst, hearing) (= Icel. hlust, the ear; cf. W. clust, Ir. cluas, the ear); with noun-formative -t, < Teut. √ hlyus, hear, which also appears (-t) with formative -n in AS. hlosnian (= MHG. lusen, lisen = Sw. lyssna), listen (a form represented later by (b) ME. lustnen, lestnen, listnen, E. listen, in which the t is due to association with ME. listen, E. list); (c) with formative -sk in MD. luischen = MLG. luischen = MHG. luischen, G. lauschen = Dan. luske (> ME. lusken ?), listen; (d) with formative -r in D. luisteren = OHG. lūstren, MHG. lūstren, G. dial. laustern = Dan. lystre = Sw. lystra, harken; and (e) with formative -ja, absorbed, in OHG. hlosen, MHG. losen, listen; the Teut. √ hlyus (= Aryan √ hlyus, as in Old Bulg. stlyshati, hear, slukhu, hearing, Lith. klausyti, hear, paklusti, harken, klausa, obedience, Skt. grushti, hearing, obedience) being an extension of √ hlyu (= Aryan √ hlyu, in L. clucere, hear, inclutus, heard of, famous, Gr. κλυέω, hear, κλυτός, heard of, famous, etc.), whence AS. hlūd, E. loud, etc.: see loud, client, etc.] I. intrans. To attend; give heed; harken; listen. [Poetical.]

Lest, my sone, and thou schalt here
So as it hath bifalle er this. Gower.

List, list; I hear
Some far off halloo break the silent air.
Milton, Comus, l. 480.

Go forth under the open sky, and list
To Nature's teachings. Bryant, Thanatopsis.

II. trans. To listen or harken to. [Poetical.]

Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Shak., Hamlet, i. 3. 30.

Hollowing one hand against his ear,
To list a foot-fall, ere he saw
The wood-nymph. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

list^{1†} (list), n. [ME. list*, lust, < AS. hlyst, hearing, gehlyst, hearing, = Icel. hlust, the ear: see *list*¹, v.] 1. The sense of hearing. — 2. An attitude of attention.

In honorance of Iesu Cryst
Sitteth stille & haueth lyst,
And gif ze wille to me here
Off oure ladi ze mai lere.
King Horn (E. E. T. S.), p. 75.

list² (list), v. [ME. listen, hysten, lesthen, lusten (u pron. as y), desire, also impers., please, < AS. lystan, impers., please (= OS. lustian = D. lusten = MLG. lusten = OHG. lustjan, lusten, MHG. lūsten, G. lūsten, ge-lūsten = Icel. lysta = Dan. lyste = Sw. lysta = Goth. lustōn, desire); < lust, desire, pleasure: see lust, n. Cf. lust, v., a doublet of *list*², now depending directly on the mod. noun lust.] I. trans. 1†. To please; be agreeable to; gratify; suit: originally impersonal, with indirect object of the person.

Whan hem lyst, thei remewen to other Cytees.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 38.

And somme seyn that we loven best
For to be free, and do right as us list.
Chaucer, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 80.

2. Naut., to cause to incline or lean to one side; cause to careen or heel over, as a ship by force of a side wind or by unequal stowage of cargo, etc.

II. intrans. 1. To be disposed or inclined; wish; choose; like; please: with a personal subject: absolute, or followed by an infinitive with to.

And there oure host higan his horse areste,
And seyde: "Lor'dynges, herkneeth if yow leste."
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 828.

They oppress the weak, and take from them what they list by force. Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

Imagining no so true property of sovereignty as to do what he list, and to list whatsoever pleased his fancy, he quickly made his kingdom a tennis-court, where his subjects should be the balls. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, ii.

To them that list the worlds gay showes I leave.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. ix. 22.

The wind bloweth where it listeth. John iii. 8.

But still he lets the people, whom he scorns,
Oape and cry wizard at him, if they list.
M. Arnold, Empedocles on Etna.

2. Naut., to incline to one side or careen: as, the ship listed to starboard.

Soon she listed to port and filled rapidly.
The Century, XXIX. 742.

list² (list), n. [ME. list, lest, lyst, var. (after the derived verb *list*²) of lust, < AS. lust, pleasure, desire: see lust, n., and *list*², v.] 1†. Desire; wish; choice; inclination.

To dyne I have no list,
Tyll I have some bolde baron,
Or some unkneth gest.
Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode (Child's Ballads, V. 45).

If you would consider your state, you would have little list to sing, I-wis.

Beau, and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, l. 4.

He saw false Reynard where he lay full low;
I need not swear he had no list to crow.
Dryden, Cock and Fox, l. 582.

2†. Pleasure; lust.
Honestie my olde Grandfather called that, when menne lyued by law, not lyst.
Lyly, Euphues and his England, p. 261.

3. Naut., a careening or leaning to one side: as, the ship has a list to port.

In consequence of her list and her drop aft, the fore-castle was half-empty of water.

W. C. Russell, Sailor's Sweetheart, xvi.

Giving a great list, she [a boat] rocked forward and aft several times, and went to the bottom in eight fathoms of water.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LVII, 15.

list³ (list), n. [< ME. liste, < AS. list, wisdom, cunning, = OS. list = OFries. list, lest = D. list = MLG. LG. list = OHG. MHG. liste, wisdom, prudence, cunning, artifice, G. list, cunning, artifice, = Icel. Sw. Dan. list, wisdom, skill, cunning, = Goth. lists, cunning, craft, will; orig. 'cunning' in the orig. sense of that word, 'knowing'; with formative -t, < Teut. √ lis in AS. leornian (orig. lismian*), learn, lærnan, teach. See learn and *lear*¹, *lovel*¹, and cf. *lust*¹, from the same ult. root.] Cunning; craft; skill.

Binoze me to kerue

And of the eupe serus,

Thu tech him of alle the liste.

King Horn (E. E. T. S.), l. 225.

list⁴ (list), n. and a. [< ME. list, liste, lyste, < AS. list, a border of cloth, = D. lijst = MLG. liste, a border, margin, = OHG. lista, MHG. liste, G. leiste, a border, strip, = Icel. lista = Dan. liste = Sw. list (cf. F. liste = Sp. It. lista, < G. or LG.) a border, strip. Not found outside of Teut. and Rom. Some uses (e. g., def. 5) of *list*⁴ are appar. of F. origin, the F. liste being ult. the same word, and the immediate source of E. *list*⁵.] I. n. 1. The outer edge of anything; a border, limit, or boundary. [Obsolete or poetical.]

And [if] any brother or sister yat duellen wyt-out-en-ye lystys of thre myle from ye cite deye.

English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 44.

The . . . situation . . . is in the very farthest part & list of Europe, bordering vpon Asia.

Hakluyt's Voyages, l. 479.

I am bound to your niece, sir; I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Shak., T. N., iii. l. 86.

Made her right [hand] a comb of pearl to part
The lists of such a beard as youth gone out
Had left in ashes.

Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

2. The border or edge of cloth, forming the selvage, and usually different from the rest of the fabric; also, such borders collectively. This, which is torn or cut off when the cloth is made up, is used for many purposes requiring a cheap material.

First Gent. Well, there went but a pair of shears between us.

Lucio. I grant: as there may between the lists and the velvet.

Shak., M. for M., l. 2. 31.

Hence—3. Any strip of cloth; a fillet; a stripe of any kind.

Gartered with a red and blue list.

Shak., T. of the S., iii. 2. 69.

They make blacke lists in their flesh, razing the skinne.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 429.

There is a very beautiful sort of wild Ass in this Country (the Cape of Good Hope), whose body is curiously striped with equal Lists of white and black.

Dampier, Voyages (1699), l. 533.

4. The lobe of the ear; also, the ear itself.

By God, he smoot me ones on the lyst,

For that I rente out of his book a leaf,

That of the strook myn ere wax all deaf.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 634.

Le moi de l'oreille, le lug or list of th' eare.

Cotgrave.

They have giuen it me soundly, I feele it vnder the lists of both eares.

Dekker, Match me in London.

5. In arch., a square molding; a fillet. Also called listel.

In the beginning it [the Doric] was a very simple order, as it appears even now in some places; the capital consisting only of a large list or square stone and a large quarter round under that, and the entablature of a deep architrave of one face, a broad frieze, and a very simple cornish.

Pococke, Description of the East, II. ii. 156.

6. In carp.: (a) A narrow strip from the edge of a plank. (b) The upper rail of a railing. E. H. Knight.—7. A woollen flap used by ropemakers as a guard for the hand.—8. In tinning iron plates, a thin coat of tin applied preparatory to a thicker coat. E. H. Knight.—9. A close dense streak in heavy bread. Halliwel.

[Prov. Eng.]—10. A ridge of earth thrown up by a double-moldboard plow, as in cultivating Indian corn. [Western U. S.]—Lateral lists, in dipterous insects, the sides of the front, as distinguished from the central part or frontal stripe.

II. a. Made of lists or strips of woollen selvage; made of list: as, list carpet.

I watched her glide along the gallery, her quiet tread muffled in a list slipper.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xvii.

That noble creature [the butler] came into the dining-room in a flannel gown and list shoes.

Dickens, Little Dorrit, II. 25.

list⁴ (list), v. t. [< ME. listen, lysten; < *list*⁴, n.] 1. To border; edge. See *list*⁴, n., 1.

Crownes of gooid and asure bendes entrauerse lysted as grene as a mede, and the streamers down to the handes of Antony his stiuarde.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 163.

Most of them, I mean among your Latin Epistolizers, go freighted with mere Bartholomew Ware, with trite and trivial Phrases only, lysted with pedantic Shreds of School-boy Verses.

Howell, Letters, l. i. i.

A Danish Curtax, lysted with gold or silver, hung on his left shoulder.

Milton, Hist. Eng., vi.

2. To sew or put together, as strips of cloth, so as to make a variegated display of color, or to form a border.

The showery arch,

With lysted colours gay, or, azure, gules,
Delights and puzzles the beholder's eye.

J. Phillips, Cider, II.

3. To cover with list, or with lists or strips of cloth: as, to list a door; hence, to mark as if with list; streak.

He lysted the doors against approaching winter breezes.

R. T. Cooke, Somebody's Neighbors, p. 64.

4. In carp., to take off the edge of, as a board; shape by chopping preparatory to finishing, as a block or stave. E. H. Knight.—5. To ridge with raised borders of earth, as rows of Indian corn, by throwing up a furrow on each side with a double-moldboard plow. [Western U. S.]

Particularly for use on growing check-rowed and lysted corn.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII, 298.

6. In cotton-culture, to prepare for the crop (as land) by making a bed with the hoe, and alternating beds with alleys. [Southern U. S.]

There is much difference of opinion upon the subject of burning or lysting [in preparing the land for a cotton crop].

New Amer. Farm Book, p. 261.

list⁵ (list), n. [= D. lijst = G. Dan. liste = Sw. lista, < OF. liste, F. liste = Sp. Pg. It. lista, orig. a border, band, strip, in present use a roll or list of names, catalogue, < MHG. liste, G. leiste (= AS. list, E. *list*⁴), a border, band, edge, strip; see *list*⁴.] 1. A roll or catalogue; an enumeration of persons or things by their names: as, a list of officers or members of a society; a list of books or of clothing.

Yes: 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day

By custom of the coronation.

Shak., Hen. VIII., iv. 1. 15.

I would not enter on my list of friends . . .

the man

Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.

Cotter, Task, vi. 560.

What student came but that you planned her path

To Lady Psyche? . . .

Still her lists were swell'd and mine were lean.

Tennyson, Princess, iv.

2. A book, card, or slip of paper containing a series of names of persons or things, or prepared for the noting of such names: as, a visiting-list; a washing-list.—Active list, burgess list, descriptive list. See the qualifying words.—Civil list, the list or the aggregate of the sums appropriated for the payment of the civil officers of a government; hence, the body of such officers in a country. (For the use of the phrase in Great Britain, see civil.)—Free list, a list or category of particular persons who or things which are exempt from some general requirement. Specifically—(a) A list of the articles exempt from duty under existing revenue laws. (b) A list of persons allowed free admittance to any public entertainment.—Syn. List, Roll, Register, Catalogue, Inventory, Schedule. Roll applies only to persons, inventory and schedule only to things; the rest apply to both. List is much the most general. A list may be merely of names, without description or order, as a list of shops, a list of persons proscribed. Roll differs from list only in limitation to persons and in faint suggestion of its original meaning of a rolled-up paper or parchment. Register suggests an official act of some formality and fullness of detail, perhaps according to a legal or customary form; as, a register of voters, of marriages, or of deaths. Catalogue supposes orderly arrangement and some fullness of description; as, a catalogue of the paintings in a gallery, of the specimens in a museum, of the books in a library, or of the students in a college. An inventory is a list of property, generally with prices or values, made for legal or business purposes, as on a dissolution of partnership. A schedule is a list of things, made for any purpose, and showing what they are both in a general view and in some detail: as, a schedule of studies, or of assets.

list⁵ (list), v. [< *list*⁵, n.] I. trans. 1. To put into a list or catalogue; register; enroll.

They may be lysted among the upper serving-men of some great household.

Milton.

As we have seen who were called faithful by the apostolical men, we may also perceive who were lysted by them in the catalogue of heretics.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 310.

Though all th' inhabitants of sea and air

Be lysted in the ginton's bill of fare.

Cowley, On a Garden.

Specifically—2. To register the name of as a soldier; muster into the public service as a soldier; enlist: in this sense partly by aphesis from enlist.

Libertioism hath erected its standard, hath declared war against religion, and openly lysted men of its side and party.

Sp. Atterbury, Sermons, l. xiii.

A sergeant made use of me to inveigle country fellows, and list them in the service of the parliament.

Addison, Adventures of a Shilling.

3. To enter for taxation, as property of any kind, upon the assessment-roll or a tax-book. [Local, U. S.]

II. intrans. To enter the public service by enrolling one's name; enlist: in this use partly by aphesis from enlist.

At the age of fifteen, I went and lysted for a soldier.

Goldsmith, Strolling Player.

list⁶ (list), n. [Usually in pl. lists; < ME. liste, lyste, < AF. liste, with unorig. l (perhaps by confusion with OF. liste, ME. liste, E. *list*⁴, edge), prop. lisse, OF. lisse, lice, F. lice = Pr. lissa = Sp. liza = Pg. liza = It. liccia, lizza, < ML. licia (pl. licia), barrier (licia duelli, barriers of a tournament, the lists), appar. (with ref. to the ropes used as barriers) orig. pl. of L. licium, thrum, thread, a small girdle. Cf. MHG. G. litze, cord, lace, file, bobbin; F. lisse, lace (see lisse).] One of the barriers inclosing the field of combat at a tournament; usually, in the plural (rarely in the singular), the space or field thus inclosed; now mostly used figuratively: as, to enter the lists in behalf of one's principles.

No oan therfore, up peyne of los of lyt,

No maner shot, polax, ne shorte knyf

Into the lystes sende ne thider brynge.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1687.

To the lists they came, and single-sword and gauntlet was their fight. Beau. and Fl., King and No King, II. 1.

A prince whose eye is chooser to his heart

Is seldom steady in the lists of love.

Ford, Love's Sacrifice, iv. 1.

The list must be sixty paces long and forty paces broad, set up in good order, and the ground within hard, stable, and level, without any great stones or other impediments.

Duke of Gloucester, quoted in Strutt's Sports and [Pastimes, p. 212.]

list⁶ (list), v. t. [< *list*⁶, n.] To inclose for a tournament, or for any contest: used especially in the past participle.

Then dare the boldest of the hostile train

To mortal combat on the lysted plain.

Pope, Iliad, vii. 56.

Ourselves beheld the lysted field,

A sight both sad and fair.

Scott, Marmion, l. 12.

list⁷ (list), n. [A var. of list, lesk: see lesk.] The flank. [Prov. Eng.]

A list of pork, a bony piece cut from the gammon.

Kennett, MS. (Haltwell).

listel (lis'tel), n. [< F. listel, listean, dim. of liste, a list, fillet, roll; see *list*⁴.] In arch., a narrow list or fillet; a reglet.

listen (lis'n), v. [< ME. listnen, lustnen, lestnen, listen; with formative -n, < listen, lusten, E. list: see *list*¹, v.] I. intrans. To attend closely with the design of hearing; give ear; harken; hence, to give heed; yield compliantly: as, to listen to reason.

Parys listinet lyuely, let for no shame.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3114.

I listned for the Clock to chime

Dayes latest hower.

Sylvester, tr. of Dn Bartas's Weeks, l. 1.

My Lord, let me intreat you to stand behind this Skreen and listen.

Congreve, Double-Dealer, v. 16.

Where street met quay a fiddle's sound hegued

A knot of listening folk.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 281.

To listen after, to be eager to hear or get information regarding; inquire after.

Here comes oyr servant Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., l. 1. 29.

II. † trans. To hear; attend to; give heed to.

As it is fre to a fole foley to carpe,

So is it wit a wisemao his words to listyn.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 5082.

Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., v. 3. 103.

At which I ceased, and listen'd them a while.

Milton, Comus, l. 551.

To listen out, to flout out.

Jeekin, come hither: go to Bradford,

And listen out your fellow Willy.

Greene, George-a-Greene.

lister (lis'nër), n. [< ME. listnere (?); as listen + -er¹.] One who listens; a harkener.

Not to die a lister, I arose,

And with me Philip, talking still.

Tennyson, The Brook.

lister¹ (lis'tër), n. [< *list*⁴, v., 5, + -er¹.] In agri., an implement, of the nature of a plow, by which open furrows at proper distances from each other are formed, in the bottoms of which maize or other grain is planted by a drill. The lister and drift have been combined in one implement, and listing and drill-planting are simultaneously performed by this device.—Lister-cultivator, a cultivator specially designed for operation between the rows of listed corn.

lister² (lis'tér), n. [*< list*⁵, v., + *-cr*¹.] One who makes a list or roll; specifically, in some parts of the United States, an appraiser for the purpose of taxation; an officer whose duty it is to make lists of taxable property.

lister³ (lis'tér), n. [ME. lister, listre, listyr, < OF. listre, for litre, < L. lector, a reader, < legere (> F. lire), read: see lector.] 1. A reader.—2. A preaching friar; a lector.

lister⁴, n. See leister.

Listera (lis'te-rá), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1813), named after Martin Lister, an English physician and naturalist.] A genus of small terrestrial orchidaceous plants of the tribe Neottieae, characterized by distinct spreading sepals and petals, an entire or two-lobed lip longer than the sepals, and a very short column. The stem is simple and erect, and bears two sub-opposite leaves. There are about 10 species, growing in Europe, temperate Asia, and North America. See twayblade.

Listerian (lis-té-ri-an), a. [< Lister (see Listerism) + -ian.] Of or pertaining to Sir Joseph Lister; specifically, pertaining to a method of antiseptic surgery introduced by him. See Listerism.

Our Listerian Dressings were the first in the market, and were prepared under the guidance of Professor Sir Joseph Lister. Lancet, No. 3410, p. 15 of adv'ta.

Listerism, v. t. See Listerize.

Listerism (lis'tér-izm), n. [< Lister (see def.) + -ism.] An antiseptic method of operating introduced by Sir Joseph Lister, an English surgeon (born 1827). It was designed to effect the total exclusion of living germs from surgical wounds. A spray of carbolic solution was brought to play over the part under operation, that the germicidal effect might result not only on the surface of the tissues, but also in the surrounding air. After the operation the part was closely enveloped in dressings impregnated with carbolic acid or other germicide, which were disturbed as little as possible during recovery. Some of the features of the early forms of Lister's method have fallen into disuse, but the recognition of the importance of the exclusion of living germs from surgical wounds, of the danger of the introduction of germs from air, instruments, appliances of all kinds, and the hands of those operating, and of the value in this regard not only of cleanliness but of germicidal drugs, seems to be a permanent acquisition of the surgical art.

Listerize (lis'tér-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. Listerized, ppr. Listerizing. [< Lister (see Listerism) + -ize.] To treat by Sir Joseph Lister's antiseptic method. See Listerism. Also spelled Listerise.

Patients are Listerized, to use a hospital term, just as beer and wine are nowadays "Pasteurised," to use a trade term—which means that, by their respective methods, they are sealed against the entrance of the germs of disease. Nineteenth Century, XXIV, 846.

Lister's gauze. See gauze.

listful (lis't'fúl), a. [*< list*¹, n., + -ful.] Attentive.

Who all the while, with greedie listfull eares,
Did stand astonisht at his courious skill.

Spenser, Colin Clout, l. 7.

listing¹ (lis'ting), n. [*Verbal n. of list*⁴, v.] 1. The act of attaching a list or border, or of binding with list.

Here I must breath awhile, to satisfy some that perhaps might otherwise wonder at such an accumulation of benefits, like a kind of embroidering or listing of one favour upon another. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiae, p. 211.

2. A list or border of cloth, etc.

Shoes bound round with listing band. Mary Howitt.

3. The act of cutting away the sapwood from the edge of a board.—4. The strip thus cut away.—5. In agri., the throwing up of the soil into ridges. [U. S.]

The drawback to this listing is due to the fact that close to the edges of the furrow on each side a row of weeds springs up. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVI, 6.

listing² (lis'ting), n. [*Verbal n. of list*⁵, v.] 1. The act of making a list or catalogue.—2. In land laws of the United States, an allotment or assignment of land by the government.

An attempt was made to attack the validity of the listing of the land by the general government over to the state, which is equivalent to a patent in passing to it the fee simple. California Law Report.

listing-plow (lis'ting-plou), n. A plow with a double moldboard, specially designed for listing, or throwing the soil up into ridges. [U. S.]

Listing's theorem. See theorem.

listless (lis'tles), a. [*< list*², n., + -less. Cf. lustless.] 1. Indifferent to or taking no interest in what happens about one; languid and unheeding: as, a listless hearer or spectator.

1. Listless, yet restless,

Find every prospect vain.

Burns, Despondency.

2. Marked by languid inactivity; manifesting relaxed attention; inanimate: as, a listless attitude.

His listless length at noonfide would he stretch.

Gray, Elegy.

With a half smile she let fall the gold
And glistening gems her listless hand did hold.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II, 220.

listless (lis'tles), a. [*< list*², n., + *-ly*¹.] Quick of hearing. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.] listlessly (lis'tles-li), adv. In a listless manner; without attention; heedlessly.

listlessness (lis'tles-nes), n. The state of being listless; indifference to what is passing; languid inattention.

listly¹ (lis'tli), a. [*< list*¹, n., + *-ly*¹.] Quick of hearing. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

listly² (lis'tli), adv. [= D. listlijk = Dan. (obs.) listelig] < listly, a.] Easily; distinctly. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.] listly³ (lis'tli), adv. [*ME. listely, < AS. listlice (= OHG. listlih, MHG. listelich), cunningly, < list, cunning, + -lice: see list*³ and *-ly*².] Cunningly; slyly.

He ful listli hem ledes to that loneli schippe,

Et taugt hi-hende tunnes hem to hude there.

William of Palerne (E. F. S.), l. 2742.

list-mill (lis'tmil), n. In gcm-cutting, a wheel covered with list or selvage of woolen material, used for polishing stones cut en cabochon. [Obsolescent.] Also list-wheel.

listness¹, n. [*Irreg. < list*¹ + -ness.] The state of listening; attention.

Then take me this errand,

And what I shal prophcey with tentine listenes hercken.

Stanishurst, Aeneid, iii, 254. (Davies.)

liston (lis'ten), n. [*< OF. liston, < liste, a list: see list*⁴.] In her., a scroll or ribbon upon which a motto is inscribed.

list-pan (lis'tpan), n. A perforated skimmer used in tin-plate manufacture. E. H. Knight.

list-pot (lis'tpot), n. In tin-plate manuf., the last of the series of five pots used in coating the iron plates.

The list-pot, which contains a layer of melted tin about one-quarter of an inch deep.

Wahl, Galvanoplastic Manipulations, p. 518.

listred (lis'tred), n. [< W. llestraid, a corn-measure, lit. a vesselful, < llestr, a vessel.] A Welsh corn-measure, equal to 3½ imperial bushels, or 4 United States (Winchester) bushels. This is the statement of the parliamentary returns of 1879, where it is reported as still in use. According to Dr. Young, it was 20, 21, 22, or 24 gallons in different localities.

list-wheel (lis'thwel), n. Same as list-mill.

list-work (lis'twérk), n. A sort of appliqué work in which list is sewed upon a garment cut out of fabric of any kind, edge to edge or overlapping.

listy (lis'ti), a. [A dial. var. of lusty.] Strong; powerful. [North. Eng.]

Listy mene and able. Lincoln MS., l. 8. (Halliwel.)

lit¹ (lit), a. and n. [ME. lit, lyt, lut (also lite, lyte, lute, partly as abbr. of litel, lytel, litle), < AS. lyt = OS. lut, litle: see litle, and cf. litel.] Little.

Felaw, he seid, herkyn a lit 3t.

And on myne errand go thou tyte.

MS. Cantab., ff. v, 48, f. 52. (Halliwel.)

lit² (lit), n. [< ME. lit, litle, < Icel. litr, color, dye, earlier complexion, face, countenance, = AS. white, beauty, splendor, form, hue, face.] Color; dye; stain. [Prov. Eng.] lit³ (lit), v. t. [*< ME. litten, liten, < Icel. lita, dye, color, < litr, dye, color: see lit*², n.] To color; dye.

We use na clothes that are litte de dyverse coloures; our wifes ne are nogte gayly arayed for to please us.

MS. Lincoln, A. l. 17, f. 38. (Halliwel.)

lit³ (lit). Preterit and past participle of *lighth*¹.

lit⁴ (lit). Preterit and past participle of *lighth*³.

lit. An abbreviation of literal and literally; also of literature.

litæ, n. Plural of *lite*².

litany (lit'a-ni), n.; pl. litanies (-niz). [*Early mod. E. litanie, < ME. letanie, < OF. letanie, F. litanie = Pr. letania = Sp. letania = Pg. ladainha = It. litania, letania, letana (in F., etc., usually in pl.), < LL. litania, < Gr. λιτανεία, an entreating, a litany, < λιταίνω, rare form of λιταίνω, pray, < λιτῶσαι, λιτῶσθαι, beg, pray; cf. λιτή, prayer: see lite*².] 1. Primarily, a solemn prayer of supplication; a public or general supplication to God, especially in processions.

Thei putten his name in here Letanyes, as a Seynt.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 177.

The morning hymns and psalmody and prayers then came all under the general term of litany, and the Ariens were forbidden in this sense to make any litanies within the city, by this law of Arcadius.

Bingham, Antiq., I, xiii, 1.

2. Specifically, in liturgics, an appointed form of responsive prayer, used as part of a service or separately. The most important varieties have been the following: (a) Liturgical or missal litanies, found in the oldest liturgies or eucharistic offices, especially in the introductory division. Such are the synapte and ectene of the Oriental forms, consisting of a series of brief clauses, mostly beginning "In behalf of," then naming the person or thing prayed for, and concluding "let us beseech the Lord," with the response Kyrie eleison. There were originally five such litanies in the liturgy: the initial diaconica or irenica (the Western Kyrie, pacifica, and collect), the ectene after the Gospel, the litany after the offertory, that following the great intercession by the priest after consecration, and a closing litany after communion. In the West such litanies were in use for many centuries, but they have not been retained in the Roman Church, which has, however, versicles before the introit and the Kyrie after it. (b) In the day hours and other offices similar litanies often form part of the service in both East and West. (c) As separate offices in the Western Church, litanies have been used since the fifth century, especially in processions of clergy and people. The earliest form of these was at the repetition of Kyrie eleison a great number of times without variation, the petitions of the missal litanies being omitted. Somewhat later the existing Western form was developed, beginning with the Kyrie and invocation of the Trinity, followed by invocations of saints, deprecations, obsecrations, supplications or intercessions, with other suffrages and prayers. The Anglican Litany in the Book of Common Prayer follows very closely the model just described, but omits all invocations of saints, recites generally several petitions in succession before inserting a response, and makes a few additions. (See deprecation, 2.) It is, properly speaking, a separate service, but is regularly said after the third collect at morning prayer on Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. On Sundays and holy days it immediately precedes the communion service, or else is said separately. In the Roman Catholic Church three litanies are recognized for use in public worship: (1) the Litany of the Saints; (2) the Litany of the Blessed Virgin, or Litany of Loreto; and (3) the Litany of the Most Holy Name of Jesus. See *lite*².

And songe the letanye

And other gode orysons.

Rob. of Gloucester, p. 406.

Hence—3. Any earnest supplication or prayer. [Poetical.]

We passed, and joined a crowd in such like guise,

Who through the town sang woful litanies.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I, 16.

Deacon's litany. See diaconia, ectene, trenicon, synapte.

Lesser litany. (a) The petitions Kyrie eleison, Christe eleison, Kyrie eleison, each said thrice, as at the beginning of the eucharistic office or mass, or the same translated, "Lord (or Christ) have mercy upon us." (b) The same petitions with the following versicles or prayers and responses in the litany in the English Book of Common Prayer, allowed to be omitted at discretion in the American Book. (c) The same petitions with the following versicles and responses in the Orders for Morning and Evening Prayer.

litany-desk (lit'a-ni-desk), n. In the Anglican Ch., a movable desk at which a minister or reader kneels facing the altar, while he recites the litany. It is placed in the body of the church, in front of the door of the rood-screen or chancel. This position outside the choir or sanctuary is intended to accord with the penitential character of the litany. Also called litany-stool and (less correctly) foldstool. See cut under foldstool.

litany-stool (lit'a-ni-stól), n. Same as litany-desk.

litharge¹, n. An obsolete variant of litharge.

lithargie, litharge², n. Middle English variants of *lithargy*¹. Chaucer.

litation (li-tā'shen), n. [< L. litatio(n)-, a fortunate or successful sacrifice, < litare, make a favorable sacrifice or offering, obtain favorable omens.] A sacrificing. Bailey, 1731.

Litchi (lich'i), n. [NL. (P. Sonnerat, 1776), < Chin. lichí: see lichí.] A genus of sapindaceous trees included by Bentham and Hooker in the genus Nephelium. There is but one species, which is confined to China, the eastern part of India, and the Philippine Islands, producing an edible fruit, the lichí. See lichí.

litch-owl, n. See lich-owl.

Lit. D., Litt. D. An abbreviation of the Latin Literarum (Litterarum) Doctor—that is, Doctor of Letters.

lit de justice (lé dé zhis-tēs'). [F.: lit, bed (< L. lectus, bed: see litter, n.); de, of; justice, justice.] Bed of justice. See *bed*¹.

lite¹, a. and n. [*< ME. lite, lyte, lute, partly abbr. of litel, lytel, lutel, litle (cf. much, ME. muche, moche, abbr. of muchel, mochel), partly from lit, lyt, litle: see lit*¹ and litle.] I. a. 1. Little.

It smed that he carried lyt array,

Chaucer, Frol. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 14.

From this exploit he say'd not great nor lite,

The aged men, and boys of tender age.

Fairfax, tr. of Tasso, xi, 26. (Latham.)

Literature is the greatest of all sources of refined pleasure. Huxley, Lay Sermons, p. 52.

We become so wonted to . . . [Browning's diction] that it seems like a new dialect that we have misstereed for the sake of its literature. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 296.

4. In a restricted sense, the class of writings in which expression and form, in connection with ideas of permanent and universal interest, are characteristic or essential features, as poetry, romance, history, biography, and essays, in contradistinction to scientific works, or those written expressly to impart knowledge.

Literature consists of a whole body of classics in the true sense of the word. . . . Literature consists of all the books—and they are not so many—where moral truth and human passion are touched with a certain largeness, sanity, and attraction of form. J. Morley, Address, Feb. 26, 1887.

Light literature, books or writings such as can be understood and enjoyed without much mental exertion; writings intended primarily for entertainment, relaxation, or amusement; applied most frequently to fiction.—Polite literature, belles-lettres. [This phrase has almost passed out of use.]—Syn. Literature, Learning, Scholarship, Erudition, Lore. Literature, the more polished or artistic class of written compositions, or the critical knowledge or appreciation of them; learning, large knowledge acquired by study, especially in the literature, history, or the like, of the past; scholarship, learning viewed as the possession of a professional or amateur scholar or student; erudition, scholastic or the more recondite sort of knowledge obtained by profound research; lore, a rather poetic word for erudition, often in a special department; as, versed in the lore of magic.

literated (lit'ē-rā-tūrd), a. [< literature + -ed.] Learned; having literary knowledge.

Gower is . . . literated in the wars. Shak., Hen. V., iv. 7. 157.

literated (lit'ē-rā-tus), n.; pl. literated (-ti). [L. litteratus, litteratus, learned; see literate.] A man of letters or erudition; in the plural, literary men in general; the literary class; learned people. [Rare in the singular.] Among foreigners in China the term literated is applied to the scholars and learned men of the country generally, especially to those who have taken one or more degrees, but are not in office and not engaged in trade.

Manifold are the tastes and dispositions of the enlightened literated, who turn over the pages of history. Ireving, Knickerbocker, p. 164.

Now we are to consider that our bright ideal of a literated may chance to be maintained. De Quincey.

literate (lit'ē-rōs), a. [< L. litterosus, litterosus, learned, lettered, < littera, litera, letter: see *letter*³, n.] Distinctively literary; exercising or manifesting special care for literary form or style. [Rare.]

Amongst the French masters Daudet is always literate. Harper's Mag. (Editor's Study), LXXXVI. 479.

literosity (lit'ē-rōs'i-ti), n. [< literose + -ity.] Literary character. [Rare.]

The sentiment is German, while the literosity in the poorer passages of the work is second-rate English. Harper's Mag. (Editor's Study), LXXXVIII. 322.

lites, n. Plural of lith.

lith (lith), n. [< ME. lith, lyth, < AS. lith (pl. lithu, leothu) = OS. OFries. lith = D. lith = OHG. lith, MHG. lit = Icel. lithr = Dan. Sw. lith = Goth. lithus (also with generalizing prefix gr-, D. gelid = OHG. gild, MHG. gilit, G. giled), limb, joint, member; not connected, as usually supposed, with AS. lithan, go (see *lead*¹, *lith*³), for the word does not mean 'that on which one goes,' but prob. formed, with formative -th (Goth. -thun), from the \sqrt{li} of AS. liu, limb: see *limb*¹.] A limb; any member of the body; also, a joint; a segment or symmetrical part or division: as, sound in lith and limb; a lith of an orange. [Obsolete or provincial.]

Trewely she hath the herte in hold Of Chauntecleer loken in every lith. Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 55.

O Willie's large o' limb and lith, And come o' high degree. Birth of Robin Hood (Child's Ballads, V. 170).

lith², n. [ME., also lyth, property; cf. Icel. lythr, the common people, AS. leōd, people: see *lead*³, n.] Property.

lith³, a. A Middle English variant of light. Chaucer.

lith⁴, v. An obsolete variant of lieth, third person singular indicative present of *lie*¹. Chaucer.

-lith. [= F. -lith (> E. -lith) = Sp. -litho = Pg. -litho = It. -litho, < L. -lithus, Gr. λίθος, a stone.] An element in some compounds of Greek formation, meaning 'stone,' as in acrolith, monolith, etc. In many names of minerals it occurs in the form -lith (which see).

lithagogue (lith'ā-gog), a. and n. [< Gr. λίθος, a stone, + ἀγωγός, drawing forth, < ἀγω, lead, carry away.] I. a. In med., having the power of expelling stone from the bladder or kidneys.

II. n. A medicine formerly supposed to expel small calculi from the kidneys or bladder.

lithanode (lith'ā-nōd), n. [< Gr. λίθος, stone, + E. anode (†).] A hard, compact form of peroxid of lead, used in storage-batteries. [A trade-name.]

lithanthrax (li-than'thraks), n. [< Gr. λίθος, a stone, + άνθραξ, coal: see anthrax.] Stone-coal; mineral coal: in distinction from zylanthrax, or wood-coal. See coal, 2.

litharge (lith'ārj), n. [Formerly also lithargie, lithargy, lethargy; ME. litharge, < OF. litarge, F. litharge = Sp. litargirio (also litarge, after F.) = Pg. lithargyrio = It. litargiro, litargirio, litargilio, < L. lithargyrus, < Gr. λίθάργυρος, spume of silver, < λίθος, stone, + ἀργύρος, silver: see argent.] The yellow or reddish protoxid of lead (PbO) partially fused. On cooling it passes into a mass consisting of small six-sided plates of a reddish-yellow color, and semi-transparent. It is much used in assaying as a flux, and in the composition of flint-glass, enters largely into the composition of the glaze of common earthenware, and is used in the manufacture of varnishes and drying-oils.

Ile onely now emboss my book with brass, Dye 't with vermilion, deck 't with coperas, With gold and silver, lead and mercury. Tin, iron, orpine, stilbium, lethargy. Syluester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 3.

Litharge plaster, In med., lead-plaster or diachylon.

lithate (lith'āt), n. [< lith (see) + *-ate*¹.] A salt of lithic acid. See urate. Also lithiate.

lith¹ (lith or lith), a. [< ME. lith, lythe (also lind, lynd: see *lind*²), < AS. lith, gentle, soft, = OS. lithi = MLG. lunde = OHG. lindi, MHG. lunde, G. lind (and gelinde) = Dan. lind, gentle, soft, mild, tender (cf. L. lentus, pliant, flexible, tenacious, tough, viscous, slow, easy, etc.: see *lent*³); with formative -th, < \sqrt{lin} , seen in G. dial. (Bav.) len, soft, = Icel. litr, soft, = L. levis, soft, mild (see lenity, lenient, etc.), and in the verb, AS. linnan, etc., cease: see *lin*¹.] 1†. Soft; tender; mild; calm; agreeable.

To make lythe that erst was hard. Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 119.

Atte places warne, in daies lithe and drie, Ys nowe the hilly landes litte to eree. Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 61.

2. Easily bent; pliant; flexible; limber.

Thou givest moisture to the thirsty roots Of the lithe willow. Bryant, The River by Night.

Young maiden, with a lith figure, and a pleasant voice, acting in those love-dramas. O. W. Holmes, Autoerast, fi.

3†. Pleasant; fine.

We are comene fro the kyng of this lythe ryche (kingdom), That knowene es for conquerour cowarde in erthe. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 1653.

=Syn. 2. Pliable, supple, willowy.

lith¹ (lith), v. [< ME. lithen, lethan, < AS. lithian, become or make soft or mild, < lith, soft: see *lith*¹, a.] I. intrans. To become calm.

II. trans. 1. To make soft or mild; soften; alleviate; mitigate; lessen.

After the deth she cried a thousand sythe, Syn he that wont hire wo was for to lith She moot forgo. Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 754.

2. To relax; make less stiff.

Lome mennes limes wore lythet that tyme, And bi-come knaues to kepe Pers heestes. Piers Plowman (A), vii. 188.

The Grecians were noted for light, the Parthians for fearful, the Sodomites for gluttons, like as England (God save the sample!) hath now supplid, lithed, and stretched their throats. Rev. T. Adams, Works, l. 368. (Darvies.)

lith² (lith), v. [< ME. lithen, lytha, < Icel. lylitha (= Dan. lytte), listen, < hljóðh. hearing, what is heard, a sound; cf. AS. hleóthor, hearing, a sound, akin to hlūd, loud, hlyst, hearing: see *list*¹, loud.] I. intrans. To give ear; attend; listen.

Lith and listen, gentlemen, All that now be here. Old ballad.

II. trans. To listen to.

And vnder a lynde vpon a launde lened I a stounde, To lythe the layes the lonely foules made. Piers Plowman (B), viii. 66.

lith³, v. i. [ME., < AS. lithan, go: see *lead*¹.] To go.

He ne durste noht . . . lithen. Ormulum, l. 8374. (Encyc. Dict.) lithectasy (li-thek'tā-si), n. [< Gr. λίθος, stone, + ἐκτασις, extension: see cystectasy.] In surg., same as cystectasy, 2.

lithely (lith'ē- or lith'ly), adv. In a lithic manner; flexibly; pliantly.

lithemia, lithemia (li-thē'mi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, a stone, + αἷμα, blood.] In pathol., an excess of uric acid in the blood. Also called uricemia.

lithemic (li-thē'mik), a. Pertaining to or affected with lithemia.

lithent, v. i. [ME. lithnien; with formative -n, < lith, soft, mild: see *lith*¹, a. and v.] To ease.

litheness (lith'ē- or lith'nes), n. The condition or quality of being lithic; flexibility; limberness.

lith¹† (lith'ēr), a. [< ME. lither, lyther, luther, lithere, liddor, bad, wicked, false, treacherous, < AS. lythre, bad, wicked; cf. D. lodder, a wanton, adj. loddering, trifling, wanton, = G. lotterig, slovenly; see also litherly. Cf. Gr. ἐλπίθεος, free.] Bad; wicked; corrupt; lazy.

For he [Love] may do al that he can devyse. And in lithere folke dystroye vise. The Cuckoo and the Nightingale, l. 14.

Her-of, good god graunte me forguenesse, Of at my luther lyuing in al my lyf-tyme. Piers Plowman (C), vii. 437.

lith² (lith'ēr), a. [Appar. an extension of *lith*¹, in simulation of lith¹, which in the sense of 'idle' (in deriv. litherly) approaches the sense of 'pliant, supple': see lith¹.] Soft; supple; limber; pliant. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky, In thy despite shall scape mortality. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 7. 21.

litherlurdent (lith'ēr-lēr'den), n. [< lith¹ + lurdan.] Laziness. [Old slang.]

I am always troubled with the litherburden, I love so to linger; I am so lasy, the mosse groweth an Inch thick on the top of my finger! Marrige of Witt and Wisdome (1579). (Halliwel.) litherly (lith'ēr-li), a. [< ME. litherly (?) = D. liederlijk = MLG. liederlik = MHG. liederlich, light, trifling, frivolous, G. liederlich = Dan. Sw. lidelig, lewd, careless, slovenly, wanton, vicious, dial. also light, quick; as lith¹ + -ly.] 1. Mischievous; wicked. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

He [the goblin] was wasplish, arch, and litherly But well lord Cranston served he. Scott, L. of L. M., li. 32.

2†. Idle; lazy.

litherly† (lith'ēr-li), adv. [< ME. litherly, lutherliche; < lith¹ + -ly.] Badly; wickedly; mischievously.

Thei hadde lutherli here lond bread and destrued. William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 2646.

A clerk hadde litherly biset his whyle But if he koude a carpenter bigyle. Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 113.

Saise to syr Lucius, to unordly he wyрке, Thus litherly agaynes law to lede my pople. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 1268.

litherness† (lith'ēr-nes), n. [ME. lithernesse; < lith¹ + -ness.] 1. Wickedness.

Thei als wrecchis, wittirly, Has ledde ther liffe in lithernesse. York Plays, p. 498.

2. Idleness. [Prov. Eng.]

Idleness, moste delectable to the fleshe, which dellteth above measure in sloth, lithernesse, ceasing from occupation. Northbrook's Treatise (1577). (Halliwel.) litherness² (lith'ēr-nes), n. [< lith² + -ness.] The condition or quality of being lithic or limber.

litheroust (lith'ēr-us), a. [Also litherous, lithdrous; < lith¹ + -ous.] Wicked; base.

But my learning is of an other degree, To taunt them like lithdrous lewde as thei bee. Skelton, Against Venomous Tongues, l. 29.

lithesome (lith'ē- or lith'sum), a. [< lith¹ + -some. Also contr. lissome.] Pliant; limber; nimble; lissome.

lithesomeness (lith'ē- or lith'sum-nes), n. The state of being lithic or lithesome.

lithia (lith'i-ā), n. [NL., < lithium, q. v.] An oxid (Li₂O) of the metal lithium. It is of a white color, and is slowly soluble in water, forming a hydrate, acid and caustic, which acts on colors like other alkalis.—Lithia emerald. See emerald.—Lithia mica. See lepidolite.

lithiasis (li-thi'ā-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθιασις, the stone (a disease), < λίθος, a stone.] In pathol.: (a) A condition of the body in which uric acid is deposited in the form of stone or gravel in the urinary passages, or in gouty concretions in the tissues. (b) In a general sense, the formation of stony deposits of any kind in any part of the body.

lithiate (lith'i-āt), n. Same as lithate.

lithiate (lith'i-āt), v. t. [*< lithium + -ate*².] To impregnate with a salt of lithium.

lithic¹ (lith'ik), a. [< Gr. λίθικός, of or for stones, < λίθος, a stone (a substance), stone (a disease), etc.; no cognate forms appear in other languages. Hence -lith, -lite, in E. words.] 1. Pertaining to or consisting of stone.

As a general rule it may be asserted that the best lithic ornaments are those which approach nearest to the grace and pliancy of plants. J. Ferguson, Hist. Arch., 1. 35.

2. Pertaining to stone in the bladder; uric.—Lithic acid. Same as uric acid (which see, under uric).

lithic² (lith'ik), a. [lithium + -ic.] Consisting of or related to the element lithium.

Lithic iodide gave the red line of this metal (W. L. 6705) extending all across the spectrum.

J. N. Lockyer, Spect. Anal., p. 160.

Lithic paint, a mastic of petalite (a mineral containing lithium), sand, and litharge, used as a coating for walls. E. H. Knight.

Lithichnozoa (li-thik-nō-zō'ē), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, a stone, + χνοσ, a track, + ζωον, an animal.] A name given by Prof. E. Hitchcock to the undetermined fossil animals which left their footprints in the Connecticut sandstones. Some, at first supposed to have been gigantic birds, are now believed to have been dinosaurian reptiles.

Lithification (lith'i-fi-kā'shon), n. [Gr. λίθος, a stone, + l. -ficatio(n)-, < facere, make: see -ficatio, -fy.] A hardening into stone; the process of becoming stone. Rarely used, and only when it is desired to speak of the conversion of unconsolidated sediments into solid rock, without any reference to the fossils which they may contain. See petrification.

Lithification of sediments will probably take place under heavy pressure even at ordinary temperature, but is no doubt hastened by high temperature.

J. L. Conte, in Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., IV. 468.

lithing (lith'ing), n. [Verbal n. of lithē, v.] The thickening of soup or broth. [Scotch.]

lithiophilite (lith-i-ōf'i-lit), n. [So called as containing lithium; < NL. lithium + Gr. φίλος, loving, + -ite.] A variety of triphylite containing a large amount of manganese. It occurs at Branchville in Connecticut.

lithistid (lith'is-tid), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Lithistida, or having their characters; lithistidan.

II. n. A sponge of the group Lithistida.

Lithistida (li-this'ti-dī), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. as if λίθιστος*, assumed verbal n. of λίθίζω, look like a stone (< λίθος, a stone), + -ida.] A large group of silicious sponges in which the spicules are more or less clearly tetraaxial and are interwoven into a dense skeleton, the stony body presenting a central gastric cavity or many vertical tubes; the stone-sponges. It contains the recent families Rhizomorinidae, Anomocladinidae, and Tetracadinidae, and the fossil Megamorinidae. In Sollas's classification the Lithistida are one of two orders of tetractinellid sponges, the other being Choristida, and are defined as Tetractinellida with branching scleres or desmas, which may or may not be modified tetrad spicules, articulated together to form a rigid skeleton. Also Lithistidae and Lithistinae, variously rated.

lithistidan (li-this'ti-dan), a. and n. [Lithistida + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the group Lithistida; stony, as a sponge.

II. n. A stone-sponge of the group Lithistida.

lithium (lith'i-um), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, a stone.] Chemical symbol, Li or L; atomic weight, 7. A metallic element having a silver-white luster, quickly tarnishing in the air. It may be cut with a knife, but is less soft than potassium or sodium; it fuses at 180° C., and takes fire at a somewhat higher temperature. Lithium is the lightest of all known solid bodies, its specific gravity being 0.5336. It forms salts analogous to those of potassium and sodium. It occurs only in combination, most abundantly in the minerals spodumene, petalite, amblygonite, triphylite (and lithiophilite), and lepidolite (lithia mica).

lithlyt. An irregular Middle English spelling of lighthly. Chaucer.

litho (lith'ō). A common technical abbreviation of lithograph.

lithobibliot (lith-ō-bib'li-on), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + βιβλίον, a book: see bible.] Same as bibliolite.

Lithobiidae (lith-ō-bi'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lithobius + -idae.] A family of centipeds of the order Chilopoda, having the body unequally segmented, with 9 larger and 6 smaller divisions, 15 pairs of legs, and long many-jointed antennae. The species are of moderate and small size, and their bite is not severe. They are common under stones, and are sometimes called earwigs in the United States. Also Lithobinae, as a subfamily of Scolopendridae.

Lithobius (li-thō'bi-us), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + βίος, life.] The typical genus of Lithobiidae, characterized by a flattened form, 2-jointed tarsi, and 40-jointed antennae. L. americanus is a common United States species. L. forficatus is the corresponding European form.

lithocarp (lith'ō-kūrp), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + καρπός, fruit.] A fossil fruit; a carpolite.

lithochromatic (lith'ō-kro-mat'ik), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + χρῶμα, color: see chromatic.] Pertaining to lithochromatics; relating to or produced by the application of oil-colors to stone; as, lithochromatic painting.

lithochromatics (lith'ō-kro-mat'iks), n. [Pl. of lithochromatic: see -ics.] The art of painting in oil-colors upon stone, and of taking impressions from the stone on canvas.

lithochromatographic (lith'ō-kro-mat'ō-graf'ik), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + χρῶμα, color, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] Same as chromolithographic.

lithochromic (lith'ō-kro'mik), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + χρῶμα, color: see chromatic.] Same as lithochromatic.

lithochromics (lith'ō-kro'miks), n. [Pl. of lithochromic: see -ics.] Same as lithochromatics.

lithoclast (lith'ō-klast), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + κλάσσειν, < κλάω, break in pieces.] 1. One who breaks stones.

A party of horsemen . . . were ready at the gates of the mosque to assist the lithoclast as soon as he should have executed his task. Burchardt, Travels in Arabia, 1. 307. (Davies.)

2. An instrument used for crushing stones in the bladder, particularly for crushing stones too large for extraction in the course of a lithotomy, the instrument being introduced through the wound.

lithoclastic (lith'ō-klas'tik), a. [As lithoclast + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the breaking of stones in the bladder.

Lithocolletidae (lith'ō-ko-let'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Standinger, 1861), < Lithocolletis + -idae.] A family of tineid moths containing such important genera as Lithocolletis (the type), Tischeria, and Bedellia. They have no ocelli, short and thin palpi, long-tringed fore wings with the middle cell closed and 7, 8, or 10 veins, and small lanceolate hind wings with very long fringes. The larvæ are usually leaf-miners, but those of Enophila live in fungi.

Lithocolletis (lith'ō-ko-lēt'is), n. [NL. (Hübner, 1816), < Gr. λίθωκόλλητος, set with precious stones, < λίθος, stone, < κόλλησις, verbal adj. of κόλλω, glue, fasten, < κόλλα, glue.] A large genus of tineids, typical of the family Lithocolletidae, with over 100 European and nearly as many North American species, whose larvæ are leaf-miners. L. erataegella mines the leaves of the apple in the United States.

Lithocolletis erataegella. Cross shows natural size.

Lithocoralia (lith'ō-kō-rāl'i-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + κόραλλιον, coral: see coral.] The stone-corals.

lithocoraline (lith'ō-kō-rā-lin), a. [As Lithocoralia + -ine.] Cf. coralline.] Having the characters of a stone-coral; of or pertaining to the Lithocoralia.

lithocyst (lith'ō-sist), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + κύστις, bladder: see cyst.] In zoöl., one of the sense-organs or marginal bodies of the Luconarida or steganophthalmate medusans.

As regards the existence of a nervous system in the Hydrozoa, very diverse opinions have been entertained. . . . There can be little doubt that the lithocysts, or sacs containing mineral particles, which are so frequently found in the Medusæ, are of the nature of auditory organs; while the masses of pigment, with imbedded refracting bodies, which often occur associated with the lithocysts, are doubtless rudimentary eyes. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 115.

Lithocyst of the Ephyra of Aurilia aurilia, with peduncle, side view—arrow indicating direction in which the cilia of the exterior work.

Lithodendron (lith'ō-den'dron), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθόδενδρον, a tree-shaped coral, < λίθος, a stone, + δένδρον, a tree.] The typical genus of Lithodendroninae. Schweigger, 1820. Also written Lithodendrum. J. D. Dana, 1846.

Lithodendroninae (lith'ō-den-drō-nī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lithodendron + -inae.] A subfamily of fossil carboniferous stone-corals, of the family Cyathophyllidae, typified by the genus Lithoden- dron: so called from their branched form and petrified state. Edwards and Haine, 1856.

Lithodendrum (lith'ō-den'drum), n. [NL.] Same as Lithodendron.

Lithodes (li-thō'dēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθόδης, like stone, stony: see lithoid.] The typical genus of Lithodidae, containing such species as L.

Agassiz's Deep-sea Spider-crab (Lithodes agassizi).

areticus of northern seas, and L. agassizi. These crabs resemble maioids in general form and appearance, but belong to a different group. Latreille, 1802.

Lithodidae (li-thō'dī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lithodes + -idae.] A family of anomorous decapod crustaceans, typified by the genus Lithodes, having the carapace triangular or somewhat cordate, with elongated rostrum, no abdominal appendages, and the fifth pair of legs much reduced.

lithodome (lith'ō-dōm), n. [Gr. λίθόδωμος, a mason, < λίθος, stone, + δῆμιον, build (> δομος, a house): see dome.] A shell-fish which lives in a hole made by it in a rock, as a date-shell or a piddock. See Lithodomus and Pholas.

lithodomus, n. Plural of lithodomus, 2.

lithodomus (li-thōd'ō-mus), a. [As lithodome + -ous.] 1. Dwelling in rocks; having the characters of a lithodome: as, lithodomus mollusks.—2. Done by a lithodome: pertaining in any way to a lithodome: as, lithodomus perforations. Sir C. Lyell.

Lithodomus (li-thōd'ō-mus), n. [NL.: see lithodome.] 1. A genus of mussels of the family Mytilidae, of small size and subcylindric form, which burrow in rocks, and are known as date-shells. L. lithophagus is an example. Also called Lithotomus and Lithophagus. See cut under date-shell.—2. [l. c.; pl. lithodomi (-mī).] A member of this genus.

lithofracteur (lith'ō-frak'tēr), n. [F., < Gr. λίθος, a stone, + LL. fractor, a breaker, < l. frangere, pp. fractus, break: see fraction.] An explosive mixture, containing 55 per cent. of nitroglycerin, mixed with silicious earth, coal, barium nitrate, sulphur, and sodium bicarbonate, used principally in blasting.

lithogenesis (lith'ō-jen'e-sis), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + γενεσις, origin: see genesis.] The doctrine or science of the origin of the minerals composing the globe, and of the causes which have produced their form and disposition.

lithogenous (li-thoj'e-nus), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + -γενής, -producing: see -genous.] Stone-producing; of or pertaining to animals which form coral.

lithoglyph (lith'ō-glif), n. [Gr. λίθογλύφος, carving stone, < λίθος, stone, + γλύφειν, carve.] An incision, engraving, or sculpture in stone, especially in a precious stone; also, an engraved or incised stone.

lithoglypher (li-thog'li-fēr), n. One who cuts or engraves precious stones, gems, etc.

lithoglyphic (lith'ō-glif'ik), a. [As lithoglyph + -ic.] Relating to the art of cutting and engraving on precious stones, gems, etc.

lithoglyphite (li-thog'li-fit), n. [As lithoglyph + -ite.] A fossil that presents the appearance of being engraved or shaped by art.

litholyptics (lith'ō-glip'tiks), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + E. glyptics, q. v.] The art of cutting and engraving precious stones or gems, as in taglios, cameos, etc.

lithograph (lith'ō-gráf), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + γραφειν, write. Cf. lithography.] A print executed by lithography.

lithograph (lith'ō-gráf), v. [lithograph, n.] I. trans. To reproduce by means of lithography: as, to lithograph a picture.

II. intrans. To practise lithography.

lithographer (li-thog'ra-fēr), n. One who practises lithography.

lithographic (lith'ō-graf'ik), a. [As lithography + -ic.] Of or pertaining to lithography; engraved upon or printed from stone; produced by or employed in lithography: as, lithographic prints; a lithographic press.—Lithographic crayon. Same as crayon.—Lithographic ink. See ink.—Lithographic paper, paper used, or specially prepared, for taking impressions from lithographic stones. For ordinary use common book- and map-papers are employed, but are specially selected from those in which the bleaching-agents and substances employed in the size are in kind or quantity such as do not, by chemical reaction upon ink or stone, injuriously affect the quality of the work.—Lithographic pen, a small, very fine steel pen used in lithographic work.—Lithographic press, a printing-press adapted for striking off impressions from lithographic stones. There are lithographic hand-presses, usually working by means of a traveling carriage which is run under a horizontal scraper-bar, and lithographic power-presses, in which the pressure is applied by means of a cylinder, and which generally have automatic devices for dampening and linking the stone and for feeding and removing the paper.—Lithographic roller, a wooden or metallic inking-roller used in lithographic printing. It is wrapped in woolen cloth, and covered with leather of uniform thickness and fine quality. Hand-rollers have handles at each end, covered with loose leather sleeves, by the compression of which the printer can produce varied effects. Machine-rollers, similar in construction to hand-rollers, have stocks of metal, and are sometimes as much as 50 inches long. They are driven by friction-diska running with the bed of the press.—Lithographic slate. Same as lithographic stone.—Lithographic stone, a compact slaty limestone, of a yellowish color and fine grain, used in lithography. The best comes from the flaggy oolites of Solnhofen in Bavaria; but others are got in the oolites of England, France, and Greece, and from older rocks in Canada.—Lithographic-stone dresser, a machine for facing lithographic stones, or polishing their faces.—Lithographic varnish, a medium employed in making and also for thinning lithographic printing-ink. It is prepared from linseed-oil, heated and then burned, and retains enough of the greasy character to give the ink the qualities necessary for lithographic printing, but not enough to grease the stone or paper.

lithographical (lith-ō-graf'i-kal), a. [lithographic + -al.] Same as lithographic. [Rare.]
lithographically (lith-ō-graf'i-kal-i), adv. By means of, or as regards, lithography.

lithographize (li-thog'ra-fiz), v. t.; pret. and pp. lithographized, ppr. lithographizing. [lithograph + -ize.] To lithograph. [Rare.]

This picture has been lithographized.

Archæologia, XXII. 452.

lithography (li-thog'ra-fi), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + γραφία, γράφειν, write.] The art of making a picture, design, or writing upon stone in such a manner that ink-impressions can be taken from the work, and of producing such impressions by a process analogous to ordinary printing. Lithography was invented by Aloys Senefelder of Munich, about 1796. A special kind of stone is used, called lithographic stone. (See lithographic.) The design may be put upon the stone by direct drawing, by transfer from paper or from another stone, by engraving, or by transfer from a photograph. In the first process the stone is prepared by grinding to give it a grained or slightly roughened surface, on which the design is drawn with a lithographic crayon precisely as it is to appear in print, but reversed; or the surface is smoothed, and the design is made with pen or brush in lithographic ink. When the drawing is finished, the stone is etched with dilute nitric acid, and then flooded with a solution of gum arabic in water, or it is flooded with nitric-acid and gum-arabic solutions combined. The acid decomposes the soap of the crayon or ink, and leaves the marked surface of the stone in a chemical condition that fits it to absorb fatty inks. The gum-water, on the other hand, covers with an adherent film all those parts of the surface of the stone which have been left untouched by the crayon or ink. The stone is then passed on to the printer, who "washes out" the picture with turpentine, after which the image appears faintly defined in white. To print from it, an inking-roller is now passed over the stone. The wet gummed surface resists the ink and remains clean, while the design takes up the ink and readily gives it back to paper under pressure in the press. The second or autographic process is by transfer. The design, picture, map, or writing is made on prepared paper with the proper ink, dampened, laid face downward on a heated stone and pulled through the press, when the ink leaves the paper and adheres to the stone. The after-treatment is the same as in the first process. Transfers are also made from stone to stone in like manner, to save from wear the original drawing on the first stone. The third process is allied to copperplate engraving. A smooth stone is prepared with gum-water, its face is colored with lamp-black or other pigment, and the picture is scratched through the gum with a steel needle. When it is finished the stone is oiled, and the oil is absorbed wherever the surface of the stone has been laid bare by the needle. The incised design is thus made fit to take up fatty inks, which are resisted by the gummed surface so long as it is kept damp. The fourth process is that of transferring a photograph to the stone, and is called photolithography (which see). These four processes are modified and combined in a great variety of ways, yet in all, with the exception of photolithography, the method is essentially that invented by Senefelder.

lithoid (lith'oid), a. [Gr. λιθοειδής, also contr. λιθός, like stone, stone, + οἶδος, stone, + εἶδος, form.] Resembling a stone; of a stony structure: opposed to vitreous. See devitrification.

By the progressive development of crystallites or crystals during the cooling and consolidation of a molten rock a glass loses its vitreous character and becomes lithoid—in other words, undergoes devitrification.

Geikie, Text-Book of Geol. (2d ed.), p. 108.

lithoidal (li-thoi'dal), a. [lithoid + -al.] Same as lithoid.

litholabe (lith'ō-lāb), n. [LGr. λιθολάβος, an instrument for extracting a stone, < Gr. λίθος, stone, + λαμβάνειν, λαβεῖν, take, seize.] In surg., an instrument formerly employed for keeping a stone in the bladder fixed so that it could be acted upon by lithotritic instruments.

litholapaxy (lith'ō-lā-pak'si), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + λάπαξις, an evacuation, < λάπασσειν, empty.] In surg., a form of lithotripsy; a method of crushing stone in the bladder and evacuating it.

litholatrous (li-thol'a-trus), a. [litholatry + -ous.] Practising or pertaining to litholatry: as, litholatrous persons or rites. [Imp. Dict.] litholatry (li-thol'a-tri), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + λατρεία, worship; see latría.] The worship of stones of particular shapes. [Imp. Dict.] litholeine (li-thō'lē-in), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + L. oleum (< Gr. ἔλαιον), oil, + -ine.] A yellow oily liquid distilled from petroleum, used in eczema and parasitic skin-diseases.

lithologic (li-thō'loj'ik), a. [lithology + -ic.] Of or pertaining to lithology or the science of rocks; relating to stones; concerning the nature or composition of stone; petrographic.

lithological (li-thō'loj'i-kal), a. [lithologic + -al.] Same as lithologic.

lithologically (li-thō'loj'i-kal-i), adv. In a lithological manner; from a lithological point of view; as regards lithologic character or structure: as, strata lithologically distinct.

lithologist (li-thol'ō-jist), n. [lithology + -ist.] One who is versed in lithology.

lithology (li-thol'ō-ji), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + λογία, λέγειν, speak; see -ology.] 1. A branch of mineralogy concerned with the minute study of rocks, with the object of finding out what minerals make up the different varieties. This is done chiefly by the microscopic study of the rocks, cut for this purpose into thin sections and properly mounted for examination. See petrography and petrology. 2. That department of medical science which is concerned with the study and treatment of calculi found in the human body.

lithomaney (lith'ō-man-si), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + μαντεία, divination, < μάντις, a diviner.] Divination or prediction by means of stones. As strange must be the lithomaney, or divination from this stone, whereby Helenus the prophet foretold the destruction of Troy. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 3.

lithomarge (lith'ō-märj), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + L. marga, marl.] One of several imperfectly determined minerals, or mixtures of minerals, all of which are hydrous silicates of alumina, and closely related to or identical with kaolin and kaolinite. Some varieties are compact, others more or less pulverulent. The word is little used in English except as the translation of the German steinmark, literally 'rock-marrow.'

lithopædium (lith-ō-pē'di-um), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, a stone, + παιδίον, dim. of παῖς (παῖδ-), a child.] A dead fetus, retained, and impregnated with salts of lime.

Lithophaga (li-thof'a-gä), n. pl. [NL., nent. pl. of lithophagus; see lithophagous.] A family of bivalve mollusks containing several genera whose members burrow in rocks and other hard substances, as Saxicava, Petricola, Venerupis, etc. The term is no longer in use; the family being heterogeneous, its representatives are by modern systematists dissociated in different families, namely Saxicavidae (or Glycymeridae), Petricolidae, and Veneridae. Also called Lithophagæ, Lithophagi, Lithophagiæ. Lamarck, 1812-18.

lithophagi (li-thof'a-ji), n. pl. [NL.; see lithophagous.] 1. Eaters of stone: applied collectively or indiscriminately to animals that perforate or penetrate stones or stony objects to make a nest or burrow for themselves therein. Such are the lithodomous mollusks, as date-shells (Lithodomus) and piddocks (Pholadidae), various zoophytes, annelids, etc. See cuts under date-shell and piddock. 2. [cap.] Same as Lithophaga.

Lithophagidæ (lith-ō-faj'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lithophaga + -idæ.] Same as Lithophaga.

lithophagous (li-thof'a-gus), a. [NL., lithophagus, < Gr. λίθος, a stone, + φάγειν, eat.] 1. Eating stones; swallowing gravel, as a bird.— 2. Perforating or penetrating stones, as the Lithophaga; lithodomous.

Lithophagus (li-thof'a-gus), n. [NL.; see lithophagous.] 1. A genus of mussels of the family Mytilidæ (not pertaining to the Lithophaga): same as Lithodomus, 1.

lithophane (lith'ō-fän), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + φανής, appearing, < φαίνεσθαι, appear.] A style of ornamentation devised for lamps, decorative windows, and other transparencies, produced by impressing sheets of porcelain-glass, when in a soft state, with figures, which become visible by transmitted light.

lithophosphor (lith'ō-fos-fōr), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + φωσφόρος, giving light; see phosphor, phosphorus.] A stone that becomes phosphorescent when heated.

lithophosphoric (lith'ō-fos-for'ik), a. [lithophosphor + -ic.] Pertaining to lithophosphor, or having its nature; becoming phosphorescent by heat.

lithophotography (lith'ō-fō-tog'ra-fi), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + E. photography, q. v.] Same as photolithography. [Imp. Dict.] lithophyl, lithophyll (lith'ō-fil), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + φύλλον, a leaf.] A fossil leaf or impression of a leaf, or a stone containing such a leaf or impression.

lithophysa (lith-ō-fi'sä), n.; pl. lithophysæ (-sē). [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + φύσα, bellows.] A spherulite having a concentrically chambered structure: so called by Richthofen. See spherulite.

lithophyse (lith'ō-fis), n. Same as lithophysa.
lithophyte (lith'ō-fit), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + φυτόν, a plant.] Any one of the polyps whose substance is stony or hard, as corals and sea-fans. The older naturalists classed them with plants, whence the name.

lithophytic (lith-ō-fit'ik), a. [lithophyte + -ic.] Same as lithophytous.

lithophytous, n. [NL.; see lithophyte.] A lithophyte.

Coral . . . is a lithophyton, or stone plant, and growth at the bottom of the sea. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

lithophytous (lith'ō-fi-tus), a. [lithophyte + -ous.] Pertaining to or consisting of lithophytes.

Lithornis (li-thōr'nis), n. [NL., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + ὄρνις, a bird.] The generic name proposed by Professor Owen for certain bird-remains from the Eocene clay at Sheppey in England, supposed to have been accipitines. The species is named Lithornis vulturinus.

Lithosia (li-thō'si-ä), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1798), < Gr. λίθος, a stone.] The typical genus of Lithosiidæ. The palpi are short, squamous, and two-jointed; the antennæ are simple, and setose in the male;

Lithosia cephalica. (Cross shows natural size.) This moth is a pure silvery-white. The fringe on the under pair of wings is long and soft.

and the tibiae are short and slender. There are nearly 100 species, and the genus is wide-spread. L. bicolor is common in North America. The common footman of Great Britain is L. complanata, of a dull color, expanding about 1½ inches.

lithosiid (li-thō'si-id), a. and n. 1. a. Pertaining to the Lithosiidæ, or having their characters. 2. n. Any member of the Lithosiidæ; a footman.

Lithosiidæ (lith-ō-si'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lithosia + -idæ.] A family of bombycid moths, typified by the genus Lithosia; the footmen. They have a slender body, filiform antennæ, moderate three-jointed labial palps, ample wings, subelliptical fore wings, and unfolded hind wings with a conspicuous frenulum. The larvae feed upon plants and lichens, and are often clothed with hairs arising from piligerous tubercles. There are about 100 genera, and the family is wide-spread. Also written Lithosiadæ, Lithosiidæ.

Lithospermææ (lith-ō-spēr'mē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1845), < Lithospermum + -ææ.] A subtribe of plants of the tribe Borageæ, typified by the genus Lithospermum, and characterized by having the four erect or incurved nutlets sessile and attached by the immediate base to a plane gynobase. It embraces 17 genera of herbs or low shrubs, including among them Mertensia (the lungwort), Onosmodium (the false gromwell), Myosotis (the forget-me-not), and many other well-known plants.

lithospermous (lith-ō-spēr'mus), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + σπέρμα, seed; see sperm.] In bot., having hard and stone-like fruit.

Lithospermum (lith-ō-spēr'mum), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700) (so called in allusion to the nuts or seeds, which are very hard and have a polished surface), < L. lithospermum, < Gr. λίθοςπεριον, gromwell, < λίθος, stone, + σπέρμα, seed; see sperm.] A genus of plants of the tribe Borageae, type of the subtribe Lithospermeae, characterized by a corolla with a cylindrical tube, a usually naked throat, and a spreading limb. The stamens are included, and the nutlets smooth, with a small flat surface at the base. There are about 40 species, growing throughout the warm and temperate parts of the northern hemisphere, in eastern Africa, and the western part of South America. They are rough hairy herbs, rarely undershrubs, bearing purple, blue, white, or yellow flowers, either solitary in the axils or (the upper) in leafy bracted spikes or racemes. See Gromwell, Akanet, 3, and puccoon.

lithosphere (lith'ō-sfēr), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + σφαῖρα, sphere: see sphere.] The crust of the earth: a designation corresponding with atmosphere and hydrosphere. [Little used.]

lithostrotion (lith'ō-strō'ti-on), n. [N.L., < L. lithostrotus, mosaic, < Gr. λίθωστροτός, paved with stones, < λίθος, stone, + στροτός, covered, < στρον-νύειν, spread: see strew, strow.] 1. A kind of fossil coral found in mountain limestone. Lloyd (Lloyd), 1699.—2. [cap.] A genus of fossil rugose stone-corals of the family Cyathophylloide. Also Lithostrotium.

lithothyptic (lith'ō-thrip'tik), a. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + θρυπτικός, able to break, < θρύπτειν, break to pieces.] Same as lithotritic. Sometimes, erroneously, lithothyptic.

lithothyptist (lith'ō-thrip'tist), n. [lithothyptic + -ist.] Same as lithotriticist.

lithothyptor (lith'ō-thrip-tor), n. [lithothyptic + -or.] Same as lithotritor.

lithothyropy (lith'ō-thrip-ti), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + θρύπτειν, break to pieces.] The operation of crushing stone in the bladder; lithotripsy.

lithotint (lith'ō-tint), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + E. tint.] 1. The art or process of producing pictures in colors from lithographic stones.—2. A picture so produced.

lithotome (lith'ō-tōm), n. [Gr. λίθοτόμος, cutting stones, < λίθος, stone, + τέμνειν, τμήειν, cut: see tome.] 1. A mineral which in its rough state has the appearance of a cut gem.—2. In arg., an improper name for a cystotome.

lithotomic (lith'ō-tōm'ik), a. [lithotome + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or performed by lithotomy.

lithotomical (lith'ō-tōm'ik-al), a. [lithotomic + -al.] Same as lithotomic.

lithotomist (li-thot'ō-mist), n. [lithotome + -ist.] One who practises cutting for stone in the bladder.

lithotomize (li-thot'ō-mīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. lithotomized, ppr. lithotomizing. [lithotome + -ize.] To perform lithotomy on.

He lithotomized a man, but was unable to extract a stone. S. D. Gross, Autobiog., p. 45.

Lithotomus (li-thot'ō-mūs), n. [N.L.: see lithotome.] Same as Lithophagus or Lithodomus: a term coined to replace Lithophagus, in order to avoid the implication that the members of this genus eat the rock they excavate. Nitzsche, 1825; Voigt, 1834.

lithotomy (li-thot'ō-mi), n. [L.L. lithotomia, < Gr. λίθοτομία, a cutting of stones, a cutting for stone, < λίθοτόμος, cutting stones, cutting for stone: see lithotome.] The operation, art, or practice of cutting for stone in the bladder.

lithotripsy (lith'ō-trip-si), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + τριψω, rubbing, < τριβω, rub.] Same as lithotripsy.

lithotriptic (lith'ō-trip'tik), a. [lithotripsy (-trip-) + -ic.] Same as lithotritic.

lithotriptist (lith'ō-trip'tist), n. [lithotripsy (-trip-) + -ist.] Same as lithotriticist.

lithotriptor (lith'ō-trip-tor), n. [lithotripsy (-trip-) + -or.] Same as lithotritor.

lithotrite (lith'ō-trit), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + L. tritus, pp. of tereō, rub: see trite.] An instrument for crushing a stone in the bladder, so as to reduce it to small particles which will pass through the urethra. Also lithotritor.

lithotritic (lith'ō-trit'ik), a. [As lithotrite + -ic; partly confused with lithothyptic.] Of or pertaining to lithotripsy; having the property of destroying stone in the bladder.

lithotritist (lith'ō-trit-tist), n. [lithotrite + -ist.] One who practises lithotripsy. Also lithothyptist.

lithotritor (lith'ō-tri-tor), n. [N.L., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + L. tritor, a rubber, < tereō, pp. tritus, rub, grind.] Same as lithotrite.

lithotripsy (lith'ō-tri-ti), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + L. tritus, pp. of tereō, rub, grind.] The operation of crushing a stone in the bladder by means of an instrument called a lithotrite.

lithotype (lith'ō-tip), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + τύπος, impression: see type.] 1. A kind of stereotypic plate produced by lithotypy.—2. A method of printing from lithographic stone in the same manner as from type, the design on the stone being etched deeply enough to admit of the use of the type-press. E. H. Knight.

lithotype (lith'ō-tip), v. t.; pret. and pp. lithotyped, ppr. lithotyping. [lithotype, n.] To prepare for printing by lithotypy.

lithotypic (lith'ō-tip'ik), a. [lithotype + -ic.] Relating to lithotypy; printed by the lithotypic process.

lithotypy (lith'ō-ti-pi), n. [As lithotype + -y.] A peculiar process of stereotyping by pressing the types into a soft mold or matrix. On the removal of the types the hollows left by them are filled with a mixture of gum shellac, fine sand, tar, and linseed-oil in a heated state. This mixture when thrown into cold water becomes hard, and forms a plate ready to be printed from. From the sand present in it, it has a stony texture.

lit-house (lit'hous), n. A dye-house. [Prov. Eng.] lithoxyle (li-thok'sil), n. [Gr. λίθος, stone, + ξύλον, wood.] A variety of wood-opal, which retains distinctly the form and texture of the original wood.

lithoxylite (li-thok'si-lit), n. [lithoxyle + -ite.] Same as lithoxyle.

Lithuanian (lith'ū-ā-ni-an), a. and n. [Lithuania (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Lithuania, or to its people or language.

2. n. 1. A member of a race inhabiting Lithuania, formerly an independent country south-east of the Baltic sea, afterward subject to Poland, now included in West Russia.—2. The language of Lithuania. It is one of a branch of Indo-European or Aryan tongues, usually called Lettic or Lettish, and most nearly allied to Slavic. These languages are spoken in parts of western Russia and eastern Prussia.

Lithuanic (lith'ū-an'ik), a. and n. [Lithuania + -ic.] 1. a. Same as Lithuanian.

2. n. Same as Lithuanian, 2; in a wider sense, same as Lettic.

lithuria (li-thū'ri-ū), n. [N.L., < Gr. λίθος, stone, + ούρον, urine.] The presence of an abnormal amount of uric acid in the urine.

lithwake (lith'wāk), a. [Also dial. leathwake; < ME. lithwakyke, lythwakyke, < teothewok, < AS. lithwæc, lithwæc, leothwæc, with pliant joints, flexible, < lith (pl. leathu), a joint, + wæc, yielding, weak: see *lith*¹ and weak.] Limber; flexible; pliable.

lithy (li'thi or -thi), a. [Also dial. lethy; < lithic + -y.] 1. Lithic; easily bent: pliable.

Their lithic bodies bound with limits of a shell. A Herrings Tayle (1595). [Nares.]

2. Heavy; warm: applied to the weather. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.] lithy-tree (li'thi-trē), n. [So called from its pliable limbs; < lithy + tree.] The wayfaring-tree, Fiburnum Laurana; also, Rhus cuneata.

litigable (lit'i-gā-bl), a. [ML. litigabilis, < L. litigare, litigate: see litigate.] Capable of being litigated, or made the subject of a suit at law.

litigant (lit'i-gant), a. and n. [= F. litigant = Sp. litigante, < L. litigan(t)-s, ppr. of litigare, litigate: see litigate.] 1. a. Disposed to litigate; contending in law; engaged in a lawsuit.

2. n. One who is a party to a suit at law.

In all the Teutonic bodies of custom except the English and the Lombardic, even when the greatest latitude of seizure is allowed to litigants out of Court, some judicial person or body must be applied to before they proceed to extremities. Maine, Early Hist. of Institutions, p. 284.

litigate (lit'i-gāt), v.; pret. and pp. litigated, ppr. litigating. [L. litigatus, pp. of litigare, dispute, quarrel, carry on a suit. < lis (lit-), strife, dispute, suit, + agere, drive, carry on: see *lis*¹ and agent.] 1. intrans. To carry on a suit by judicial process.

The appellant, after the interposition of an appeal, still litigates in the same cause. Ayliffe, Parergon.

2. trans. To make the subject of a suit at law; bring before a court of law for decision; prosecute or defend at law, as a right or claim.

It is taken absolutely for granted that there is somewhere a rule of known law which will cover the facts of the dispute now litigated. Maine, Ancient Law, p. 31.

litigation (lit'i-gā'shon), n. [LL. litigatio(n)-, a dispute, < L. litigatus, pp. of litigare (> litigare = Pg. Sp. litigar), quarrel, carry on a suit: see litigate.] 1. The act or process of litigating or carrying on a suit in a court of law or equity; a judicial contest.

It was a curious coincidence that the great breach between England and Rome should be the result of a litigation in a matrimonial suit. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 403. Nothing quenches a spirit of litigation like despair of success. Paley, Moral Philoa., vi. 8.

2. Any dispute or discussion dependent upon evidence for decision. [Rare.]

Whether the "muscular sense" directly yields us knowledge of space is still a matter of litigation among psychologists. W. James, Mind, XII. 1.

litigator (lit'i-gā-tor), n. [L. litigator, < litigare, litigate: see litigate.] One who litigates.

litigiosity (li-tij'ō-s'i-ti), n. [L. as if litigiosita(t)-s, < litigiosus, contentious: see litigious.] 1. The character or quality of being litigious; litigiousness.—2. In Scots law, a tacit legal prohibition of alienation, to the prejudice of a begun action or diligence the object of which is to attain the possession or to acquire the property of a particular subject, or to attach it in security of debt. Imp. Dict.

litigious (li-tij'us), a. [F. litigieux = Sp. Pg. litigioso, < L. litigiosus, disputatious, contentious, < litigium, strife, dispute, < litigare, dispute: see litigate.] 1. Inclined to litigate or go to law; given to the practice of bringing lawsuits; fond of litigation; contentious.

A rich litigious lord I love to follow,
A lord that bulks his happiness on brawlings. Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iii. 4.

2. Subject to or dependent upon legal contest; hence, disputable; controvertible; subject to contention: as, litigious right.

No fences, parted fields, nor marka nor bounds, Distinguish'd acres of litigious grounds. Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, l. 194.

The Governor . . . encouraged me to buy it, saying "that such kind of lands only were lawful here to be bought and sold, and that this was not in the least litigious." R. Knox (Arber's Eng. Garner, l. 386).

3. Of or pertaining to litigation; relating to or connected with legal contention.

They view'd the ground of Rome's litigious hall;
Once oxen low'd where now the lawyers bawl. Dryden, Æneid, viii.

I never visit these scenes . . . without a very vehement desire to be disengaged . . . from litigious terms. R. Choate, Addresses, etc., p. 124.

The litigious sophism, a logical puzzle, which runs thus: A law-student agreed to pay his teacher a certain sum if he won his first case. As he never had a case, his teacher sued him for the amount, thinking that if the matter was not decided in his favor in the first instance, he should necessarily win a second process for the same money, because the law-student would then have won his first case. The student, on the other hand, maintained that if the case was decided in his favor, he ought not to be compelled to pay; and if it were decided against him, then by the terms of the contract he should not pay.

litigiously (li-tij'us-ly), adv. In a litigious or contentious manner.

litigiousness (li-tij'us-nes), n. The character of being litigious; a disposition to engage in or carry on lawsuits; inclination to judicial contests.

Litiopa (li-ti'ō-pi-ā), n. [N.L., so called as having a simple aperture, without a spout; irreg. < Gr. λιστός, smooth, plain, simple, + ὅρη, hole, aperture.] The typical genus of Litiopidae. The species are very small. They are oceanic, and attach themselves to gulfweed by glutinous threads.

Litiopidæ (lit'io-pi'dē), n. pl. [N.L., < Litiopa + -idæ.] A family of tanioglossate gastropods typified by the genus Litiopa; the gulfweed-snails. They are related to the Rissoiæ and Cerithiæ, but have filaments developed from the epipodium and operculigerous lobe. The shell is conic, with an entire aperture (whence the name) and a truncated columella. The species are of small size, and live in various seas, chiefly on sargassum.

litiscontestation (li-tis-kon-tes-tā'shon), n. [OF. litiscontestation, < L.L. litis contestatio(n)-, the formal entering of a suit by calling witnesses: L. litis, gen. of lis, strife, lawsuit; contestatio(n)-, an attesting by witnesses: see contestation.] In Scots law, the appearance of parties in court to contest their rights.

litispendence (li-tis-pen'dens), n. [OF. litispendence, < ML. litis pendencia, pendency of a suit: L. litis, gen. of lis, a suit, + ML. pendencia, pendency: see pendency.] In law: (a) The time during which a lawsuit is going on. (b) A plea that another action is pending.

litmus (lit'mus), n. [A corruption of lacmus, simulating dial. lit, dye: see lacmus.] A peculiar coloring matter procured from Roccella tinctoria and some other lichens. It is prepared chiefly in Holland by macerating the lichens with a mixture of urine, lime, and potash or soda. As a result of the fermentation, the mass finally becomes blue, when it is removed, is mixed with calcareous matter to give it consistency, and is then allowed to harden in molds. Paper tinged blue by litmus, called litmus-paper, is reddened by an acid, for the presence of which it is used as a test; its blue color is restored by an alkali. See archil.—LITMUS ON RAGS, or tourneol en drapaux, a name given to a pigment prepared by steeping coarse linen rags in the juice of Croton tinctorium, and afterward subjecting them to the action of ammonia from urine or stable-manure. The tourneol en drapaux is used especially to color the crust of certain kinds of Holland cheeses, in order to render them less liable to decay or to attacks of cheese-mites. The color of the cloths is blue, but turns red after application to the cheese.—Litmus-paper. See above.

Litonotidæ (lit-ō-not'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Litonotus + -idæ.] A family of hypotrichous ciliate infusorians, represented by the genus Litonotus, free-swimming, soft and flexible, and of lanceolate or elongate figure. They have a narrow and often highly elastic neck-like anterior prolongation; the entire ventral surface flat and finely ciliated throughout; the dorsal surface smooth and fibrous, and mostly convex; the oral aperture ventral; a series of larger preoral cilia mostly developed in advance of the oral aperture; the pharynx unarmed; and the trichocysts usually abundant.

Litonotus (lit-ō-nō'tus), n. [NL. (Wrzesniowski, 1870), < Gr. λίτος, smooth, + νότος, back.] The typical genus of Litonotidæ. L. fasciola inhabits ponds.

litoral, a. See littoral.

Litoralia (lit-ō-rā'li-ā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of L. litoralis, of or belonging to the sea-shore.] In Fieber's classification, a subsection of aquatic hemipterous insects, including those which are subaquatic.

litotes (lit'ō-tēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λίτοτης, plainness, simplicity, < λίτος, smooth, plain, < λίς, smooth.] In rhet., a figure in which an affirmative is expressed by the negative of the contrary. Thus, "a citizen of no mean city" means one "of an illustrious city."

litra (lē'trā), n. [NL., < Gr. λίτρα, a pound, a silver coin, prob. a dial. var. of L. libra, a pound; see libra.] A silver coin of Sicily. Compare decalitron.

litrameter (li-tram'ō-tēr), n. [NL., < Gr. λίτρα, a pound (see liter), + μέτρον, a measure (see meter).] An instrument for ascertaining the specific gravity of liquids.

litre¹, n. See liter.

litre² (lē'tēr), n. [< F. litre, OF. litre, littre, prob. orig. listre* (= Pr. listra = It. dial. listra), a band used in draping a church for a funeral service; prob. orig. a var. of liste, a border, band; see *list*⁴, *list*⁵.] In her., a black band, supposed to represent the knightly belt, charged with the arms of the defunct, and painted on the wall of a church or chapel at the time of the funeral. This variety of the funeral achievement was formerly considered a mark of very high dignity. It is now nearly abandoned.

litre³ (lit're), n. [Chilian.] A small tree of Chili, Rhus caustica, with very hard wood, used for axletrees, cogs, and furniture.

Litsea (lit'sē-ā), n. [NL. (Lamarec, 1789), from the Jap. name of the tree.] A genus of lauraceous trees, rarely shrubs, of the tribe Litseeæ, characterized by diceous flowers with usually a four- to six-parted involucre. There are nine, twelve, or an indefinite number of stamens in the three-parted flowers, and six in the two-parted, all having four-celled anthers. The leaves are usually alternate and coriaceous, with a pinnate venation or triple-nerved, and the staminate flowers are generally sessile, while the pistillate are often umbelled. There are about 125 species, natives of tropical and eastern Asia and Australia. L. dealbata of Australia, sometimes cultivated in greenhouses, is called brushland mist tree.

Litseeæ (lit-sē-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Reichenbach, 1840), < Litsea + -aceæ.] A tribe of plants of the order Laurineæ, based on the genus Litsea, distinguishable from the tribe Perseeæ by having introrse anthers, and a short dense inflorescence, either subsessile or on a short peduncle. It embraces 9 genera, among which are included some of the most important of the order, such as Laurus (the laurel), Lindera (the wild allspice), and Sassafras.

litster (lit'stēr), n. [< ME. litster, littster, lytster, lyster, a dyer; < *lit*² + -ster.] A dyer. [Old and prov. Eng.]

No madyr welde, or wod na litéstere
Ne knew. Chaucer, Former Age, l. 17.

Litt. D. See Lit. D.

litten (lit'en), n. [Also liten; a dial. var. of leighton.] 1. A garden. Ray.—2. A churchyard. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng. in both senses.]

litter (lit'ēr), n. [Early mod. E. also littour; < ME. litter, litre, lyter, lytere, lytier, < OF. litiere, F. litiere = Pr. littiera, littiera = Sp. litiera = Pg. litiera = It. lettiera as if lecticaria* (ML. also litaria, litaria, lectoria, after OF.), a litter (cf. lecticarius, a litter-bearer), < lectica, a litter, sedan, < lectus (> F. lit), a bed; < √ legh = E. lie; see lectual, lectica, lectern, etc., and *lie*¹. All the various senses are derived from the primitive sense, a 'bed' or 'couch,' whence 'a portable bed,' 'a bed for animals' (usually of loose straw), etc. It is an error to refer 'litter,' a brood, to Icel. litr, litrtr, a place where animals produce their young. The E. word from this source is the dial. lafter, lutter, lighter, lauchter.] 1. A vehicle consisting of a bed or couch suspended between shafts, and borne by men or horses. It was formerly esteemed as an easy and fashionable method of carriage. Among the Romans the litter Ancient Roman Litter, preserved in the Capitoline Museum, Rome.

(lectica) was borne by slaves set apart for that special service; it was in common use by patricians in the time of Tiberius. In Europe horse-litters were much used before the introduction of coaches.

Make somowne all thyn oste an thy peple; and when thei be alle come, do the to be bore in a lytier, and so go fight with thyn ennys; and, wite it verly, thou shalt hem venquise. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), l. 92.

2. A form of hurdle-bed on which a sick or wounded person is conveyed from one point to another, as to a hospital in a city, or to a field-hospital on a battle-field. For this purpose the stretcher or hand-litter is in use, consisting of canvas, about 6½ feet long by 3 feet wide, securely fastened at the sides to two hard-wood poles about 8 feet long, and convenient for rolling up. Horse- and mule-litters of various forms are used in some armies and in American frontier service.

3. A birth or bringing forth of more than one young animal at a time, as of pigs, kittens, rabbits, puppies, etc.

The thirty pigs at one large litter farrowed.
Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, vi. 256.
My mother had ij. whelps at one litter,
Both borne in Lent.
Marriage of Witt and Wisdome (1579).

4. A number of young animals brought forth at a birth: used with reference to mammals which regularly give birth to more than one young at once, as the sow, bitch, cat, rabbit, etc., and only slightly of human beings.— 5. Loose straw, hay, or the like, spread on a floor or the ground as bedding for horses, cows, or other animals.

Gromes palletis shyn fyle and make litere, ix fote on lengthe with-out diswre.
Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 313.

6. Waste matter, as shreds, fragments, or the like, scattered about, as on a floor; scattered rubbish; things strewn about in a careless or slovenly manner; clutter.

Strephon, who found the room was void,
Stole in, and took a strict survey
Of all the litter as it lay. Swift.

7. A condition of disorder or confusion: as, the room is in a litter.—Indian litter, an extemporized litter made by attaching three cross-pieces to two stout saplings, by means of notches and cords. The sick or wounded man is laid in his blanket, which is then knotted to the framework. In storms the man is protected by a top made with a blanket stretched over bent twigs.—To be in litter, to be in the state of bringing forth young, or of lying in with young, as a sow or a bitch.

He called me Turnots and asked what were the price
o' pigs. I asked him, were any of his family in litter.
J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 116.

litter (lit'ēr), v. [< litter, n.] I. trans. 1†. To carry in a litter.

These Pagan ladies were litter'd to Campus Martius, ours are coach'd to Hyde-Park. Gentleman Instructed, p. 112.

2. To scatter straw, hay, or other similar substance on or over for bedding.

At last he found a stall where oxen stood, . . .
But, for his ease, well littered was the floor.
Dryden, Cock and Fox, l. 226.

3. To spread a bed for; supply with litter: usually with down.

I'll see the horse well littered.
The Suffolk Miracle (Child's Ballads, l. 221).

4. To make litter of; use for litter.

Then to their roots
The light soil gently move, and strew around Old leaves or litter'd straw, to screen from heat
The tender infants. Dodsley, Agriculture, ll.

5. To bring forth; give birth to: said of mammals which usually produce a number at a birth, as the sow, cat, rabbit, bitch, etc., or slightly of human beings.

My father named me Antolyucus; who being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles.
Shak., W. T., iv. 3. 25.

6. To scatter things over or about in a careless or slovenly manner.

They found
The room with volumes litter'd round.
Swift, Cadens and Vanessa.

II. intrans. 1. To be supplied with a bed or litter for bedding; sleep in litter: as, to litter in the straw.

The inn
Where he and his horse littered.
Habington, Castara, ll.

2. To bring forth a litter of young animals.

These [dogs] have in this City no particular owners; . . . [the Turks] thinking it nevertheless a deed of piety to feed, and provide them kennels to litter in.

Sandys, Travels, p. 45.
A horrible desert, . . . where the she-wolf still littered.
Macaulay.

litterateur (lit-ē-ra-tēr'), n. [F., < L. litterator: see literator.] A literary man; one who is engaged in literary work; one who adopts literature as a profession.

littery (lit'ēr-i), a. [< litter, n., + -y.] Consisting of litter; encumbered or covered with litter.

little (lit'l), a. and n.; compar. less, superl. least (rarely, and only in modern obs. or dial. use, littler, littlest). [< ME. littel, lital, lytel, litle, lutel, < AS. lytel, litel = OS. luttil = D. luttel = MLG. luttel = OHG. luzil, luzzil, MHG. G. dial. lützel = (with a diff. base lit-, instead of lut- as in the preceding forms) Icel. litill = Dan. lille = Sw. lille, lilla = Goth. leitils, littile; also without the suffix -el, ME. lit, lyt, < AS. lyt = OS. lut = D. (dim.) lutje = LG. lüt, dim. lütje = Icel. litt (adv.) = Sw. liten, litel = Dan. liden, lidet, lidt (adv.), litle (cf. E. dial. lile, < ME. lite, lyte, abbr. of litel, lytel, littile, etc.); root unknown.

The word is connected by Skeat with AS. lytig, deceitful (< lot, deceit; cf. Goth. luts, deceitful, lutōn, betray), as if the sense 'little' in size were derived from the sense of 'little' in spirit, 'mean,' 'base'; but this is improbable in itself, and no such transition or connection of sense appears in AS. use.] I. a. Not large or much. (a) Of small size, bulk, or compass; diminutive, absolutely or relatively: as, a little grain of sand; a little child or man; the little finger.

Thanne was the place to littil for them all,
Wherefore the Sowdon anon dede ordeyne
A larger place owt'pon the playn.
Geoffrey (E. E. T. S.), l. 1392.

Presumptuous man! the reason wouldst thou know,
Why form'd'st so weak, so littile, and so blind?
Pope, Essay on Man, l. 36.

(b) Not large in number; having few constituent members or parts: as, a little army or fleet; a little city.

If the household be too littile for the lamb. Ex. xii. 4.
(c) Not much; of small amount, quantity, or degree; restricted; limited: as, a little food or drink; little joy or happiness; little influence.

O thou of littile faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?
Mat. xiv. 31.

There was too much talk . . . and too littile real work done.
O. W. Holmes, Emerson, v.

(d) Not of great extent or duration; not long; short in space or time; brief: as, a little way or distance; a little while.

Our littile life
Is rounded with a sleep.
Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 157.

(e) Not great; small in consideration, dignity, consequence, etc.; petty; inconsiderable; insignificant: as, a little office; littile affairs; a littile accident.

I wol yow telle a littil thing in prose,
That oughte lyken you, as I suppose.
Chaucer, Prologue to Tale of Melibee, l. 21.

When thou wast littile in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel? I Sam. xv. 17.

These considerations have given me a kind of contempt for those who have risen by unworthy ways. I am not ashamed to be littile, when I see them so infamously great.
Dryden, Ded. of the Third Misc.

Hence—(f) Petty in character; mean; narrow; wanting breadth or largeness: as, a littile soul or mind.

There are poets littile enough to envy even a poet-laureat.
Gray, Letters, l. 346.

Little assimilations. See assimilation.—Little casino. See casino.—Little ease. See little-ease, below.—Little fever, go, habit, office, etc. See the nouns.—Little hours. See hour.—Little pot, a pint pot; also, the contents of a pint pot.—The Little Entrance. See *entrance*¹.—The little masters. See *master*¹.—Syn. (b) Minute, tiny. (c) and (d) Scanty, slender, moderate. (e) Insignificant, contemptible, weak. See littleness.

II. n. A small quantity, amount, space, or the like.

Suche other tymes when we haue lytle or nothyng a doynge elles.
Quoted in William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), Pref., p. xxiii.

A littile that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.
Ps. xxxvi. 16.

Walk you that way,
Whilst I in zealous meditation stray
A littile this way.
Fletcher, Faithful Shepherdess, ll. 4.

Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long.

Goldsmitb, The Hermit.

A little, somewhat; to or in a small degree; to a limited extent; for a short time.

Leugo a lyttel with thy tode, I logly biseche.

Aliterative Poems (ed. Morris), li. 614.

Here is her picture: let me see; I think,
If I had such a tire, this face of mine

Were full as lovely as is this of hers:

And yet the painter flattered her a little.

Shak., T. G. of V., iv. 4. 192.

Pray stay a little, my lord. Shak., I Hen. IV., ii. 4. 63.

By little and little, by slow degrees; gradually. — In little, on a small scale; within a small compass; in miniature: as, the history of one's life in little.

Those that would make mows at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. Shak., Hamlet, li. 2. 384.

Into littlet, very near; almost.

For which we han so sorwed, he and I,
That into littel both it hadde us slawe.

Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 884.

Not a little, considerably. — To make little of. See make.

little (lit'1), adv. [< ME. litel, litil, lytel, etc., < AS. lytel, adv., prop. neut. acc. of the adj.: see little, a, and n.] In a small quantity or degree; not much; slightly.

Master, be well war of the screefe of Notyngsam,
For he ys leyttell howr frende.

Robin Hood and the Potter (Child's Ballads, V. 22).

How very little the world misses anybody!

Macaulay, in Trevelyan, I. 285.

littlet (lit'1), v. [< ME. litelen, lytelen, lutelen, lutlen, < AS. lythian, become or make little, < lytel, little: see little, a.] I. intrans. To become little or less.

His Godhede butulde not theiz he lowe lihte.

Joseph of Arimathe (E. E. T. S.), p. 5.

II. trans. To make less. Compare belittle.

littlebeak (lit'1-bök), n. A brachiopod of the genus Rhynchonella; a rhynchonellid.

little-ease (lit'1-ēz), n. A state of discomfort or misery; hence, anything that causes uneasiness; specifically, an old name for a punishment causing bodily discomfort or pain, as the stocks or the pillory, or some especially uncomfortable part of a prison, as a very small cell.

Welcome, sweet friend, to liberty of air . . .
How dost thou brook thy little-ease thy trunk?

Middleton, Family of Love, lii. 1.

Was not this fellow's preaching a cause of all the trouble in Israel? was he not worthy to be cast in boardo or little-ease?

Lattner, sermons, fol. 105, b. (Nares.)

little-endian (lit'1-en'di-an), n. [In Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," a member of the Lilliputian party which contended that boiled eggs should be cracked at the little end: opposed to big-endian.] One of a set of disputers about trifles. Also used adjectively. See big-endian.

little-go (lit'1-gō'), n. See little go, under go, n.

little-gude (lit'1-güd), n. The devil. [Scotch.]

little-neck (lit'1-nek), a. [So named from a locality on the north coast of Long Island (Little Neck), whence these originally came into favor.] A local epithet, noting young, round, hard clams of a size preferred for eating raw. They are simply ungrown quahaugs (Venus mercenaria or Mercenaria violacea). The epithet is wrongly but very generally supposed to refer to the absence of the long siphon or "neck" which is conspicuous in the common clam, Mya arenaria. These young quahaugs are sometimes called pea-clams. On the Pacific coast of the United States the name little-neck is applied to various edible clams, as Tapes straminea and T. laciniata, Chione succinea and C. similiana. See cut under dumyriana.

littleness (lit'1-nes), n. [< ME. littelnesse*, < AS. lytelnes, < lytel, little: see little and -ness.] The state or quality of being little, in any sense of that word. = Syn. Littleness, Meanness (see meanness); Smallness, Littleness, Pettiness, and nouns formed from adjectives given in the list under little. Smallness and littleness are general terms, but the latter is stronger, and generally implies more or less disparagement, but sometimes endearment. Pettiness is used in strong disparagement, as of that which is beneath consideration; it characterizes a mind that busies itself with insignificant or trifling things.

littleship, n. [ME. littleschip*, lotteschipe; < litte + -ship.] Littleness; smallness.

Hou thi fairnisse is bi-schit;
Hou thi swetnisse is i-bethn and ipit;
Hou thi lotteschipe to scharp detz is of set.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnival), p. 240.

littlest (lit'1-est), a. The regularly formed superlative of little; least.

littlworth (lit'1-wërth), a and n. [< little + worth, a.] I. a. Of little or no value; worthless; of a bad character; destitute of moral principle. [Rare or archaic.]

He returned for answer that he would not come to a stranger. He defended himself by saying "He had once come to a stranger who sent for him; and he found him a littlworth person."

Boswell.

II. n. A worthless fellow; a blackguard.

littoral (lit'1-ral), a, and n. [Also sometimes litoral; = F. littoral = Pg. Sp. litoral = It. litorale, < L. litoralis, belonging to the sea-shore; < litus (litör-), sea-shore, coast, shore of a lake, bank of a river.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to a shore, as of the sea or a great lake; frequenting or living near the shore: as, littoral trade; littoral fishes or vegetation. — 2. Situated or bordering on a shore: as, the Littoral Provinces (Litorale or Küstenland), a division of Austria on the east coast of the Adriatic. — Littoral cordon. See cordon. — Littoral rocks, rocks which have been laid down in the littoral zone, or within the range of influence of tides and breakers. Deposits thus formed consist chiefly of coarse materials, while those formed in deep water, or thalassic rocks, are fine-grained and often largely calcareous in character. — Littoral zone, the interval on a sea-coast between high- and low-water mark.

II. n. A littoral tract or region; the part of a country lying along the coast.

In the towns of the Albanian littoral Italian is the language of civilized intercourse.

A. J. Evans, Illyrian Letters, n. 139.

Littorella (lit'1-rel'1-ä), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1767), so called in ref. to the place of growth, < L. litus (litör-), sea-shore: see littoral.] A genus of plants of the natural order Plantaginaceae, distinguished from Plantago by the one-celled ovary. See shoreweed.

Littorina (lit'1-rä-nä), n. [NL., < L. litus (litör-), sea-shore: see littoral.] The typical genus of Littorinidae. L. littorea is the common periwinkle of Europe, which has recently become abundant on the Atlantic coast of the United States. It is used for food in some countries. In England several hundred tons are used annually. L. rudis is another species common to both continents. L. pallida of the New England coast is common on rocky shores, where it creeps over rockweed and eel-grass. It is very variable in color, either plain or marked with white, green, or brown. Further south a larger and sharper-pointed species, L. irrorata, is abundant. The generic name has been much more comprehensive than it is now, various species formerly included being now referred to other genera. Also written Littorina.

Littorinidae (lit'1-rin'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Littorina + -idae.] A family of holostomatous tanioglossate gastropods; the periwinkles or sea-snails. As generally understood, they have a wide, short snout, long tentacles, eyes at the external bases of the tentacles, and a radula with nearly uniform lateral and marginal teeth. The shell is conic or subglobose, with a rounded aperture and a spiral corneous operculum. They are mostly of maritime habit, and generally live between or near tide-levels, attached to rocks or stones. The family is now much restricted by the exclusion of several genera formerly included.

Littre's glands. See gland.

littress (lit'1-res), n. [Origin unknown.] A smooth kind of cartridge-paper used in the manufacture of cards. E. H. Knight.

Lituacea (lit'1-ü-ä-sē-ä), n. pl. [NL. (De Blainville, 1818), < Litua + -acea.] A family referred to the cephalopods, and composed of Spirula as well as of certain foraminifers supposed to be related to that genus.

lituare, n. An obsolete form of lectuary.

lituati (lit'1-ü-ät), a. [< NL. lituatus, < L. lituus, an augur's staff, a trumpet: see lituus.] In bot., forked, with the points turned outward.

litui, n. Plural of lituus.

lituiform (lit'1-ü-i-för-m), a. [< L. lituus, an augur's staff, a trumpet (see lituus), + forma, shape.] Curved like a lituus.

lituite (lit'1-ü-it), n. [< NL. Lituites, q. v.] A fossil cephalopod of the genus Lituites.

Lituites (lit'1-ü-it'1-tēz), n. [NL., < L. lituus, an augur's staff: see lituus.] The typical genus of Lituitidae. There are several species of Silurian age.

Lituitidae (lit'1-ü-it'1-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lituites + -idae.] A family of fossil cephalopods, typified by the genus Lituites, containing the lituites, now generally associated with Nautilidae.

Lituola (li-tü-ol'1-ä), n. [NL., dim. of L. lituus, an augur's staff, a trumpet: see lituus.] The typical genus of Lituidae. Lamarek, 1804.

Lituidae (lit'1-ü-ol'1-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lituola + -idae.] A family of imperforate Foraminifera, with the test arenaceous and usually regular in contour, the septation of the polythalamous forms often imperfect, and the chambers frequently labyrinthic. It comprises sandy isomorphs of the simple porcellaneous and hyaline types, together with some related species. Lituacea, Lituites, Lituidae, and Lituidae of the old authors are inexact synonyms, enbracing not only the foraminiferous Lituidae, but some cephalopods, as Spirula.

Lituolidea (lit'1-ü-ol'id'1-ä), n. pl. [NL.: see Lituidae.] The family Lituolidae, advanced to the rank of an order of imperforate foraminifers.

lituolidean (lit'1-ü-ol'id'1-ä-n), a, and n. [NL., < Lituolidea + -an.] I. a. Lituoline, in a broad sense; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lituolidae.

II. n. One of the Lituolidae.

Lituolina (lit'1-ü-ol'i-nä), n. pl. [NL., < Lituola + -ina.] A group of Lituolidae represented by the genus Lituola and its immediate congeners, having the test composed of coarse sand-grains, rough outside and often labyrinthic.

Lituolinæ (lit'1-ü-ol'i-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lituola + -inae.] A subfamily of Lituolidae, with test composed of coarse sand-grains.

lituoline (lit'1-ü-ol-in), a. [< Lituola + -ine.] Having the characters of the genus Lituola; being or resembling one of the Lituolidae.

lituolite (lit'1-ü-ol-it), n. [< L. as if lituobus*, dim. of lituus, a trumpet, + -ite.] A fossil lituoline foraminifer: so named from the shape. Lituolites are of microscopic size, and abound in the Cretaceous.

litura (li-tür'1-ä), n; pl. liturae (-rē). [NL., < L. litura, a smearing, erasure, blot, blur, < litere, pp. litus, smear, rub: see liniment.] In entom., an ill-defined and somewhat obscure spot, growing paler or fading into the ground-color at one end, as if daubed or blotted.

liturate (lit'1-ür-ät), a. [< LL. lituratus, pp. of liturare, rub out, erase, < L. litura, a smearing, erasure: see litura.] 1. In bot., having spots formed by the abrasion of the surface: said of a plant. — 2. In entom., marked with lituræ or indeterminate spots growing paler at one end.

liturge (li-tür'1-j), n. [< LL. liturgus, < Gr. λεωργος, a public servant, a minister, a Jewish or Christian priest: see liturgy.] 1. A liturgist: a Jewish priest as offering sacrifice, or a Christian priest as celebrating the eucharist or liturgy. — 2. A leader in public worship; an officiating clergyman, especially one leading in the use of a fixed or prescribed liturgy.

liturgic (li-tür'1-jik), a. [< Gr. λεωργικός, ministering (in the Septuagint, pertaining to the temple service), < Gr. λεωργος, liturgy: see liturgy.] Same as liturgical.

liturgical (li-tür'1-jik-äl), a. [< liturgic + -al.] 1. Of or pertaining to a liturgy, in the ancient Greek sense of that word. See liturgy, 1. — 2. Of or pertaining to sacrificial or eucharistic worship; in a wider sense, used in, prepared for, or pertaining to worship or religious ceremonies in general. All services of public worship have sometimes been called liturgical. — 3. Specifically, pertaining to or employing a fixed or prescribed liturgy, or pertaining to public worship conducted in accordance with such a liturgy. — 4. Noting a part of a public religious exercise that is explicitly directed to the deity rather than to the worshiper: opposed to didactic or homiletic. — Liturgical colors. See color. — Liturgical fan. See flabellum.

liturgically (li-tür'1-jik-äl-i), adv. In a liturgical manner; as a form of public worship.

It is . . . proper that a portion of (the Bible) should be daily used liturgically in the public schools.

T. Hall, True Order of Studies, p. 143.

liturgics (li-tür'1-jiks), n. [Pl. of liturgic: see -ics.] 1. The science or art of conducting public worship. Liturgics, as a branch of pastoral theology, is coordinate with poimenics, catechetics, and homiletics, though in strictness it may be made to include the last.

2. Specifically, the science of liturgies—that is, of orders of public worship; liturgiology. It comprises the history of the origin of liturgical formulae and of their combination with one another into liturgies, and the art of using such formulae in conformity with custom or ecclesiastical rule.

liturgiologist (li-tür'1-jik-ol'1-jist), n. [< liturgi-ology + -ist.] One versed in liturgiology; a specialist in the study of liturgies.

Minute peculiarities, which would be of interest to progressed liturgiologists.

Encyc. Brit., XIV. 708.

liturgiology (li-tür'1-jik-ol'1-jij), n. [< Gr. λεωργολογία, liturgy, + -λογία, < λέγω, say: see -ology.] The science or systematic study of appointed forms of public worship, especially of the ancient forms for the celebration of the eucharist. See liturgy.

liturgist (lit'1-ür-jist), n. [< liturgy + -ist.] 1. A leader in public worship; a liturge. — 2. An authority on liturgies; a liturgiologist. — 3. One who uses or favors the use of a liturgy.

liturgy (lit'ér-ji), n.; pl. liturgies (-jiz). [Formerly liturgie; < OF. liturgie, lyurgie, F. liturgie = Sp. liturgia = Pg. It. liturgia, < ML. liturgia, < Gr. leitourgía, also leitourgía, public service, a public office or duty (see def. 1), any service, esp. eccles. the service or ministry of priests, public worship; in a restricted sense, the eucharist, < leitourgos, a public servant, a minister, eccles. a priest, < leitós, leitós, also leitós, leitós, and leitós, leitós (rare), public (< laós, laós, people), + érgon*, do, work, > érgon = E. work: see work.] 1. In ancient Greece, particularly at Athens, a form of personal service to the state which citizens possessing property to a certain amount were bound, when called upon, to perform at their own cost. These liturgies were ordinary, including the presentation of dramatic performances, musical and poetic contests, etc., the celebration of some festivals, and other public functions entailing expense upon the incumbent; or extraordinary, as the fitting out of a trireme in case of war.

2. A form or method of conducting public worship; an appointed form for the words and acts used in the rites and ceremonies of the Christian church. The word denotes especially an appointed form for the holy communion, the hours or daily prayer, litania, baptism, confirmation, marriage, burial, penance, visitation and unction of the sick or dying, ordinations, and other offices such as are contained in the Missal, Breviary, Ritual, Pontifical, Euchologion, Horologion, etc., of the Roman Catholic and the Greek Church, or united in one volume in the Anglican Book of Common Prayer. Liturgies seem to have originated partly in the inheritance or adoption of Jewish forms of worship and their adaptation to Christian purposes. The Book of Psalms, especially as containing inspired prayers, praises, thanksgivings, etc., furnished a large amount of liturgical material. On the other hand, the forms given by Christ, such as the Lord's Prayer, the words of Institution in the eucharist, the baptismal formula, etc., became centers of development for the new and distinctively Christian parts of the offices.

3. Specifically, in liturgiology, and as the name most frequently used in the Greek Church, the form of service used in the celebration of the eucharist, or that service itself. In this last sense Latin and Roman Catholic writers generally prefer the word mass. An account of primitive Christian liturgical worship is given by Justin Martyr (in the middle of the second century A. D.), and this agrees with the Clementine Liturgy, a form referable to about A. D. 250, and so called because incorporated in the Apostolical Constitutions, a compilation attributed to St. Clement of Rome. Five great groups or families of liturgies are recognized, each of which can be referred to a single original liturgy represented by one or two direct derivatives still existing. They are: (1) The Liturgy of St. James (or of Jerusalem), also called the Hierosolymitan Liturgy, the Greek form of which has been somewhat modified by that of St. Chrysostom; it exists also in a Syriac Jacobite form, with numerous derivatives. From its Greek form came the Greek Liturgy of St. Basil (of Cappadocia), and from this the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom on the one hand and the Armenian Liturgy on the other. The liturgies of St. Basil and St. Chrysostom, together with the Liturgy of the Presanctified (see below), are known as Liturgies of Constantinople, and are almost exclusively used at the present day by the whole Greek Church. (2) The Liturgy of St. Mark (or of Alexandria), the original Catholic or Greek form of which has been influenced by that of Constantinople. It is used also to the present day in a Coptic (Egyptian Monophysite) form named after St. Cyril. The Copts, however, use as their principal liturgy one named after St. Basil, different from that of the same name in the first group. The Ethiopian (that is, Abyssinian) forms belong to this group. (3) The Liturgy of Sts. Adewus and Maris (or of Edessa), also known as the Liturgy of the Apostles. It is a very ancient orthodox liturgy, and is the original of the East Syriac group. It is often called Nestorian, because used by Nestorians, and because the ancient Malabar and other Nestorian liturgies are derived from it. (4) The Liturgy of St. Peter (or of Rome), the earliest extant forms of which are the Gelasian and Gregorian Sacramentaries. It is the principal liturgy of the Roman or Petrine group, and has almost entirely supplanted all the liturgies in the Latin language — that is, those in this and the next group. Allied but independent forms are the Ambrosian Liturgy, which is that of the archdiocese of Milan, still sometimes used, and the liturgies or uses of the Anglo-Saxon and medieval English Church, of which the most important was the Use of Sarum. These medieval English uses are the sources of the Communion Office in the successive revisions of the Anglican Prayer-book. The Nonjurors' office of 1718 and the Scottish office of 1764 were, however, largely conformed to the Liturgy of St. James, and from these the American office derives its prayer of consecration. (5) The Liturgy of St. Paul (or of St. John), also called the Liturgy of Ephesus, is the inferred original of the so-called Ephesine Liturgies, these names being not historical or traditional, but the generally accepted result of scientific combination. These liturgies are also called Galician or Hispano-Galician, and are the forms, Latin in language, anciently used in Britain, Gaul, and Spain, and traced through the church at Lyons to Ephesus. The varieties used in Gaul have been supplanted since the time of Charlemagne by the Roman form, which has also been substituted since the eleventh century for the ancient liturgy of Spain, known as the Mozarabic. This last, however, as revived at the beginning of the sixteenth century by Cardinal Ximenes, is still used in three or four chapels or churches, but with some assimilation to the Roman rite. — Liturgy or Mass of the Presanctified, an office with a communion (the elements having been consecrated at a previous celebration), but no consecration, and therefore not a liturgy or mass in the strict sense of these words. Such a service (containing parts of the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom) is said in the Greek Church throughout Lent, except on Saturdays, Sundays, and the Feast of the Annunciation. In the Roman Catholic Church the rite is confined to Good Friday.

litus (lit'us), n. [ML., also letus, letus; AS. let: see let.] In old Saxon law, a member of the third order in the nation, the first being the nobilis, and the second the ingenuus, corresponding to the eorl, the ceorl, and the lat of the Kentish laws.

The litus appears to be distinctly recognized as a member of the nation. . . . Instead of being a mere dependent with no political rights, the remnant of a conquered alien people, he is free in relation to every one but his lord, and simply unfree as cultivating land of which he is not the owner. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 22.

lituus (lit'ū-us), n.; pl. litui (-i). [L., an augur's staff, a trumpet; supposed to be of Etruscan origin, meaning 'crooked'.] 1. In Rom. antiqu.: (a) A staff with a recurved or crooked top, used by the augurs in quattering the heavens; an augural wand. (b) An instrument of martial music; a kind of trumpet curved at the outer extremity, and having a shrill tone. — 2. A spiral of which the characteristic property is that the squares of any two radii vectores are reciprocally proportional to the angles which they respectively make with a certain line which is given in position and which is an asymptote to the spiral. This name was given by Cotes (died 1716). — 3. [cap.] In zool.: (a) A genus of cephalopods: same as Spirula. Brycn, 1732. (b) A genus of gastropods: same as Cyclostoma. Martyn, 1784.

liun, n. A Middle English form of lion.
livable (liv'a-bl), a. [Also liveable; < live + -able.] 1. Capable of being lived, or of being spent or passed in more or less content. [Rare.] Life at the moment was livable without it (human intercourse), for there was no bar between her and her lover. Geo. MacDonald, What's Mine's Mine, p. 333.

2. Capable of being lived in; fit for residence. [Rare.] They were quite liveable quarters. M. Collins, The Ivory Gate, i. 194. I doubt if there was ever anywhere a livable house . . . that was not the creation of a refined woman. Harper's Mag., LXXVI, 875.

live (liv), v.; pret. and pp. lived, ppr. living. [< ME. liven, liven, lueven, libben, < AS. lifian, lyftan, leoftan, libban (pret. lifode) = OS. libbian = OFries. leva, liva, libba = D. MLG. LG. leven = OHG. lebēn, MHG. G. leben = Icel. lifa = Dan. leve = Sw. leva = Goth. liban (pret. libaida), live, in Icel. also remain, be left (cf. Goth. af-lifnan, be left); a secondary verb, from the stem of AS. lifan* (in comp. belifan = OS. bilibban = OFries. bilira = D. bliven = OHG. biliban, MHG. beiben, biben = Dan. blive = Sw. blifra), remain, be left, whence also ult. AS. lif, life, læfan, leave, lāf, what is left: see life, leave, law.] I. intr. 1. To continue in being; remain or be kept alive; not to die, perish, or be destroyed: said of both animate and inanimate things, corporeal or incorporeal.

The trespass still doth live, albeit the person dye. Spenser, F. Q., II, ii. vii. 28. Methinks the truth should live from age to age. Shak., Rich. III., iii. 1. 76.

The Skiff was much overloaded, and would scarce haue lived in that extreme tempest had shee been empty. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, I. 217.

If I live till May come twelvemonth, you are sure of me again. Cotton, in Walton's Angler, li. 273.

In the upper church also, the columns of the elder building have . . . lived through all repairs. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 62.

2. To have life; possess organic vitality; be capable of performing vital functions: said of animals and plants.

In that See of Libya is no Fische: for the mowe not lyve by it, for the gret hete of the Sonne. Mandeville, Travels, p. 144.

What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? Ps. lxxxix. 48.

Take not away the life you cannot give; For all things have an equal right to live. Dryden, Pythag., Philos., l. 706.

The bones of some vast bulk that lived and roared Before man was. Tennyson, Princess, iii.

3. To use or pass life; direct the course of one's life; regulate one's manner of existing: as, to live well or ill, in either a physical or a moral sense.

Ensamble suthly forto gif To tham that in his law wald lif. Holy Rood (E. T. S.), p. 129.

To be a Christian was not to fight for the Faith, but to live by it. Stillington, Sermons, II. iii.

Ublemished let me live, or die unknown. Pope, Temple of Fame, l. 523.

True men who love me still, for whom I live. Tennyson, Gulnevere.

Hence, used absolutely — 4. To make full use of life or its opportunities; get the greatest advantage or enjoyment from existence.

He who, secure within, can say, To-morrow, do thy worst, for I have lived to-day. Dryden, Imit. of Horace's Odes, III. xxix. 65.

Live while you live, the epicure would say, And seize the pleasures of the present day; Live while you live, the sacred preacher cries, And give to God each moment as it flies. Doddridge, Epigram on his Family Arms.

Of him (Charles XII. of Sweden) we may say that he led a life more remote from death, and in fact lived more, than any other man. Emerson, Courage.

5. To abide; have or make an abiding-place; dwell or reside; have place: as, to live in a town; to live with one's parents.

There was one Anna, a prophetess: . . . she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity. Luka ii. 36.

The tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow. Shak., A. and C., i. 2. 176.

It is certainly a very happy temper to be able to live with all kinds of dispositions. Steele, Spectator, No. 386.

A horror lived about the tarn, and clave Like its own mists to all the mountain side. Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

6. To have means of subsistence; receive or procure a maintenance; get a livelihood: as, to live on one's income.

They which preach the gospel should live of the gospel. 1 Cor. ix. 14.

Vio. Dost thou live by thy tabor? Clo. No, sir, I live by the church. Shak., T. N., iii. 1. 2.

No ill men, That live by violence and strong oppression, Come thither. Fletcher, Bonduca, iv. 2.

7. To feed; subsist; be nourished: with by before the means or method, and on or upon (sometimes with) before the material: as, cattle live on grass and grain; to live on the fat of the land.

It behoveth the Men to bere Vitaille with hem that schalle duren hem in the Desertes, and other necessaries for to lyve by. Mandeville, Travels, p. 58.

I had rather live With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far, Than feed on cates and have him talk to me In any summer-house in Christendom. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iii. 1. 161.

Sell their presented partridges and fruits, And humbly live on rabbits and on roots. Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 52.

I speak the truth as I live by bread! Tennyson, Lady Clare.

8. In Script., to have spiritual life, either here or hereafter; exist or be sustained spiritually.

The just shall live by faith. Gal. iii. 11.

Forgive my grief for one removed; . . . I trust he lives in thee, and there I find him worthier to be loved. Tennyson, In Memoriam, Int.

Living at heck and manger. See heck 1. — To live and lookt, to live: a pleonastic phrase.

Ac yf ich may lyve and loke ich shal go lerne bettere. Piers Plowman (C), xl. 57.

To live but and ben. See ben, n. — To live by one's fingers' ends. See finger. — To live by one's hands. See hand. — To live fast. See fast. — To live in a glass house. See glass. — To live in clover. See clover. — To live like fighting-cocks. See fighting-cock. — To live on the cross. See cross. — To live out, to be away from home in domestic service. [Colloq. and local, U. S.]

She came to this city, and lived out as a cook. New York Tribune, quoted in Bartlett.

She has never lived out before. Mrs. Terhune, The Hidden Path, p. 78.

To live under, to be tenant to. — To live under canvas. See canvas. — To live up to, to order one's life in accordance with; not live below the standard of: as, to live up to one's theories.

Editors of mortals alone live up to the apostolic injunction, and forgetting the things that are behind, ever press forward to those which are before. Contemporary Rev., XLIX. 655.

= Syn. 5. Sojourn, Continue, etc. See abide 1.

II. trans. 1. To continue in constantly or habitually; pass; spend: as, to live a life of ease.

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise . . . To scorn delights, and live laborious days. Milton, Lycidas, l. 72.

But let me live my life. Tennyson, Audley Court.

2. To act habitually in conformity to.

It is not enough to say prayers, unless they live them too. Parker.

To live down, to live so as to disprove; efface or remove by one's subsequent conduct the effects of (a calumny, grief, or mistake).

Leaving her husband to ponder how she and he had each lived their sorrow down. Jefferson, Live It Down, ii.

Write down that rubbish you can't — live it down you may. Bulwer, My Novel, l. 7.

To live out, to continue alive through or to the end of: as, to live out a war or a term of office; he lived out the century.
live² (liv', a. [By apheresis from alive, orig. on life (ME. on live): see alive. As now used alive is retained in the orig. predicate use, while live is exclusively employed in the attributive use.] 1. Being in life; living; animate; not dead: as, a live animal or plant.

The juice of it, on sleeping eye-hids laid,
Will make a man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.

Shak., M. N. D., II. 1. 172.

2. Lively; animated; alert; energetic; not listless or inert: as, a live preacher; a live book. [U. S.]

We aim first of all to make a live newspaper—to give everything in this region that people want, briefly, intelligently, succinctly stated. S. Bowles, in Merriam, I. 97.

3. Manifesting life or energy; acting as if with living force; effective; operative; ready for immediate use or work; under pressure, as of steam: as, a live machine; live steam, etc. See phrases below.

In that dreary solitude, so far from this live and warm world, he took up his winter quarters.
W. Barrows, Oregon, p. 33.

4. Glowing; vivid: as, a live coal.

Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar. Isa. vi. 6.

Now from the virgin's cheek a fresher bloom
Shoots, less and less, the live carnation round.
Thomson, Spring, I. 963.

There is such a live sparkle on the water.
T. W. Higginson, Oldport, p. 190.

5. Fresh; not stale or impure.

But his essences turned the live air sick.
Tennyson, Mand, xiii.

6. Of present use or interest; not effete, obsolete, or out of date; subject to present or prospective need: as, the live topics of the day; live matter (in a printing-office).—Live anatomy, vivisection.—Live axle, a driving-axle.—Live bait, a living worm, minnow, etc., used by anglers for fish-bait.—Live blood. Same as live-blood, 3.—Live feathers, feathers taken from the living fowl. They are stronger and more elastic than those from dead birds.—Live circuit, a circuit through which an electric current is flowing. Also called live wire.—Live gang. Same as live saw.—Live hair, hair from a living animal.

A narrow lane, where Money for old Books was writ upon some part or other of every shop, as surely as Money for Live Hair upon a Barber's Window.
Quoted in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 143.

Live lever, that one of a pair of brake-levers to which the brake-power is first applied, the other being called the dead lever. Car-Builder's Dict.—Live matter. See matter.—Live ring, a gang of wheels traveling on a circular track, used under a swing-bridge, a railway turn-table, an observatory-dome, or the like.—Live saw, a gang-saw adapted for cutting entirely through logs without previous slabbing.—Live shell, in gun, a shell which has been loaded and fused ready for firing, or one which, after being fired, has not yet exploded.

A sepooy who, with several others, was hiding in a room from which they were only driven by live shells.
W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I. 312.

Live steam, steam fresh from the boiler and at full pressure, as distinguished from dead steam or exhaust-steam.—Live stock, domestic animals collectively; particularly, the stock of animals kept for use or profit, as horses, cattle, sheep, or swine.—Live wire. Same as live circuit.

live³, n. A Middle English oblique form of life, still existing in alive and livelong.

liveable, a. Another spelling of liveable.

live-box (liv'box), n. 1. A box in which fish are kept alive.—2. A cell in which living objects are confined for microscopical observation.

live-center (liv'sen'ter), n. See center, 5.

lived (livd), a. [live + -ed².] Having a life; existing: used in composition: as, long-lived; short-lived.

Who, sending their sonnes to attaine knowledge, find them little better learned, but a great deal worse lived, then when they went. Lyly, Euphues, Anat. of Wit, p. 141.
And burn the long-lived phoenix in her blood.
Shak., Sonnets, xix.

live-for-ever (liv'fôr-ev'ér), n. A plant, the orpine, Sedum Telephium. [U. S.]

live-head (liv'hed), n. In a lathe, the moving head-stock which contains the live-spindle.

liveless, a. An obsolete form of lifeless.

livelihed¹ (liv'li-hed), n. [Var. of livelihood.] Liveliness; animation; living force.

Whom when as Turpin saw so loosely layd,
He weened well that he in deed was dead,
But, when he nigh approach, he mote aread
Plaine signes in him of life and livelihed.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. vii. 20.

livelihed² (liv'li-hed), n. [Var. of *livelihood*², for orig. lifelode.] Way of life; living.

Full little weenest thou what sorrowes are Left thee for porcion of thy livelihed.
Spenser, F. Q., II. II. 8.

livelihood¹ (liv'li-hüd), n. [Also livelihed, < ME. livelihed (= Sw. lifthigt = Dan. livlighed); < live + -hood.] Liveliness; cheerfulness.

The tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek.
Shak., All a Well, I. 1. 58.

livelihood² (liv'li-hüd), n. [A corruption of lifelode, simulating live + -hood; see lifelode.] Way of life; living; means of maintaining life; support of life; maintenance; the occupation which furnishes means of support.

Of human necessity the very primal shape is that which regards our livelihood.
De Quincey, Plato.
=Syn. Support, Subsistence, etc. See living.

livelily (liv'li-li), adv. [live + -ly².] In a lively manner; briskly; vigorously. [Rare.]

Livelily expressing the hollowness of a day's pleasuring.
Lamb, Elia, p. 323.

liveliness (liv'li-nes), n. [live + -ness.] The quality or state of being lively or animated; sprightliness; vivacity; animation; spirit; briskness; activity; effervescence.—Syn. Life, Vivacity, etc. See animation.

livelodet, n. A variant of lifelode.

livelong¹ (liv'lông), a. [live, livelong*, lifelong, var. of lifelong, < live, n., + *long*¹, a. The word is now generally regarded as < *live*¹, v., + *long*¹, adv., and so pronounced.] 1. Being as long as life; having a long life; that lives or endures long; lasting; durable.

Thou, in our wonder and astonishment,
Hast built thyself a live-long monument.
Milton, Epitaph on Shakespeare.

2. Continuing or seeming to continue long; passing slowly; tedious.

She said, Thomas, thou likes the play,
What byrde in boure may dwell with the?
Thou marria me here this live-long day,
I pray the, Thomas, let me be!
True Thomas, MS. Cantab. (Halliwell.)
The obscure bird
Clamour'd the livelong night.
Shak., Macbeth, II. 3. 65.

livelong² (liv'lông), n. [*live*¹, v., + *long*¹, adv.] A plant, Sedum Telephium; live-for-ever.—Jersey livelong, the Jersey cudweed, Gnaphalium tuteoalbum.

lively (liv'li), a. [live, lively*, lifty, lyfly, < AS. líflic, living, vital (= Sw. liftig = Dan. levligt), < lif, life, + -lic: see life and -ly. Cf. lifelike.] 1. Living; endowed with or manifesting life; hence, from a living source; life-given. [Rare or obsolete.]

Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood. 1 Pet. II. 5.

Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggard of blood to blush through lively veins?
Shak., Sonnets, lxxvii.

2. Lifelike; representing or resembling life or reality; real; vivid; forcible: as, a lively imitation of nature.

His little son into his bosom creeps,
The lively picture of his father's face.
P. Fletcher, quoted in Walton's Complete Angler, p. 177.

With such perplexity of mind
As dreams too lively leave behind.
Coleridge, Christabel, II.

3. Full of life or energy; active; vigorous; vivacious; brisk; alert: applied to persons or things: as, a lively child; lively faith.

But mine enemies are lively, and they are strong.
Ps. xxxviii. 19.

To regain an old friend was well: to be rid of a new friend who had grown insupportable was a matter of yet livelier rejoicing.
E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 311.

4. Animated; spirited; sprightly; gay: as, a lively dance; lively conversation.

Formed by thy converse, happily to steer
From graves to gay, from lively to severe.
Pope, Essay on Man, IV. 380.

5. Fresh; vivid; bright: said of colors and tints.

Beside him rode Hippolita the queen,
And Emily attir'd in lively green.
Dryden, Pal. and Arc., II. 228.

6. Riding the sea buoyantly: said of a ship or boat.

lively (liv'li), adv. [live, lively*, lifty, < AS. líflic, vitally, < líflic, living, vital: see live, a.] 1. In a lifelike manner; with the appearance of reality; seemably.

Wel couthe he peynte lifty that it wroughte,
With many a florin he the hewes boughte.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 1229.

2. With life or animation; energetically; vigorously; briskly: as, to act lively.

Lokys now lively! what list you to do?
To melle in this matter, or to meue ferre?
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 184.

They brought their men to the slough, who, discharging lively almost close to the face of the enemy, did much amaze them.
Sir J. Hayward.

liven (li'vn), v. t. [Formerly also lifen; < live + -en¹. Cf. enliven.] To put life into; enliven; make more brisk; rouse: generally with up: as, to liven up a fire, or a despondent person. [Colloq. or rare.]

live-oak (liv'ók'), n. An American oak, Quercus virens. It is abundant, within short distances of the coast, from southern Virginia to Texas, extending into Mexico, and is also found in Costa Rica. It is a slow-growing evergreen, 50 or 60 feet high. The leaves are commonly entire, with the upper side smooth and shining. Its wood is extremely heavy, hard, strong, fine-grained, and durable, and of great economic value, being especially prized for ship-building. The name is also applied to several other evergreen species of the Pacific slope: Q. chrysolepis, also called maui-oak and Valparaiso oak; the less important Q. wislizeni; and the coast live-oak, Q. agrifolia, also called cuceno, a large tree of southern California.—Live-Oak State, the State of Florida.

liver¹ (liv'ér), n. [*live*¹ + -er¹.] 1. One who lives or has life; one who continues to live.

And try it life be worth the liver's care.
Prior, Solomon, III.

2. One who resides; a resident; a dweller: as, a liver in Glasgow.—3. One who lives in a certain manner; the manner being expressed by an adjective: as, a good or evil liver, a fast liver, a loose liver (that is, a person of good or evil, fast, or loose habits); a good liver, a hearty liver (one addicted to good living or high feeding).

A wicked liver may be reclaimed, and prove an honest man.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 383.

Were any bounteous, merciful,
Truth-speaking, brave, good livers, them we enrolled Among us.
Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

liver² (liv'ér), n. [live, liver*, < AS. lifer = D. lever = MLG. liver = OIIG. libaru, lebara, lebera, lepera, MHG. lebere, G. leber = Icel. lifr = Dan. lecer = Sw. lifer, liver. Cf. Russ. liveru, the pluck of animals. Attempts have been made to identify liver, through the assumed earlier stems lik*, lyek*, with L. jecur = Gr. ἥπαρ (hēpar) = Skt. yakrit, liver, the medial Teut. labial (v), in this view, having been developed from an orig. guttural (h). A similar change appears in the history of four, five, and prob. eleven and twelve, as well as in wolf.] 1. In anat., a large gland, secreting bile and performing other important metabolic functions, situated in the upper part of the abdominal cavity on the right side. The human liver lies beneath the diaphragm, and weighs 50 or 60 ounces. It presents a large right- and a smaller left-hand lobe, and on the under surface are distinguished a quadrate lobe, a caudate lobe, and a lobus Spiegelii. The gall-bladder lies in a fissure on its under side. The liver is supplied with blood by the portal vein and the hepatic artery, and discharges it by the hepatic veins. The bile is conveyed away by the bile-ducts, which unite to form the hepatic duct. There are five fissures: the longitudinal, which separates the right and left lobes, and contains the round ligament; the venous, the continuation of the former backward, containing the remains of the ductus venosus; the caudal, for the inferior vena cava or postcaval vein; the portal or gateway, connecting the others, also called the porta or gateway of the liver, where lies the portal vein, hepatic artery, and hepatic duct; with a depression for the gall-bladder, called, for convenience in enumerating, the fifth fissure. There are likewise five ligaments: right and left lateral, coronary, and falciform, consisting of folds of peritoneum, and the round ligament, which is the obliterated umbilical vein of the fetus. A liver like that of man in all essentials exists in nearly all vertebrates. Glandular structures or tissues recognizable as hepatic occur in very many invertebrates, and are commonly called liver. Thus, the mass of dark-greenish substance in the thickest part of an oyster is the liver of that creature, and a glandular organ in worms, connected with the mid-gut, receives the same name. The livers of food-animals constitute a common article of diet. The liver was formerly supposed to be the seat of love.

Liver of Man, under side.
A, left lobe; B, right lobe; F, lobus quadratus; G, lobus Spiegelii; I, gall-bladder; J, cystic duct; K, hepatic duct; L, ductus communis choledochus; M, vena portae; N, O, left and right hepatic veins; P, vena cava inferior; R, round ligament; S, hepatic artery.

Are you not yet
Relenting? ha' you blood and spirit in those veins?
You are no image, though you be as hard
As marble: sure, you have no liver; if you had,
'Twould send a lively and desiring heart
To every member. Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, III. 1.

Hence—2. The bay or glossy ibis, Falco tinnunculus igneus, which when adult has the plumage chiefly liver-colored or hepatic.

The ibis is adopted as part of the arms of the town of Liverpool. . . . This is termed the liver.
Montagu, Dict. Brit. Birds (ed. Newman).

The glossy ibis or liver. A. E. Brehm.

Bronze liver, a liver colored dark reddish-brown, olive-brown, or black from severe malarial poisoning.—De-graded liver, in human pathol., an abnormal condition in which the liver is divided into a number of lobes as in the gorilla.—Floating liver, a displaced and movable liver.—Granular liver. See granular.—Hobnailed liver. See hobnailed.—Line of the liver. See line of health, under line.—Liver of antimony, a combination of trisulphid of antimony with a basic sulphid of another metal.—Liver of sulphur, a mixture of polysulphids of potassium, or potassium trisulphide. It is made by heating sulphur with potassium carbonate in a closed vessel. The composition of the fused liver-colored mass is variable.—Longitudinal ligament of the liver, the broad ligament.

liver³ (liv'ér), v. t. [< ME. liveren, leveren, < OF. liverer, F. liverer = Sp. Pg. liverar = It. liberare, liverare, liverare = D. leveren = G. liefern = Dan. leverer = Sw. levera, deliver, give up, < L. liberare, set free, liberate, deliver, ML. also (with other forms liberare, liverare, after Rom.) give up; see liberate and deliver. Hence liver².] To deliver. [Old and prov. Eng.]

And to his men he liverd hym hole and feere.
MS. Lanadooune, 208, fol. 2. (Halliwell.)

liver⁴, a. [Appar. < live¹, or live², + -er; but perhaps, by apheresis, from deliver, a.] Lively.

Those that saw Robin Hood run
Said he was a liver old man.
Robin Hood and the Old Man (Child's Ballads, V. 250).

liver⁵ (liv'ér), n. A fabulous bird borne upon the arms of Liverpool, England, traditionally supposed to have given a part of the name of that city. It has been variously identified. See liver², 2.

liverance (liv'ér-ans), n. [< ME. liverance, < OF. liverance, liverance, delivery, < liverer, deliver; see liver³. Cf. deliverance.] A delivery or deliverance. Halliwell. [North. Eng.]

liver-color (liv'ér-kul'or), n. A color resembling or suggesting that of raw calf's liver freshly cut, somewhat smeared with blood, and seen at a little distance; a red of very low luminosity, and of moderately full chroma. A color-disk composed of $\frac{1}{2}$ scarlet iodide of mercury and $\frac{1}{2}$ intense velvet-black might be called a fine liver-color tending toward maroon. The liver itself is decidedly yellow, gray, and brighter. Ridgway defines liver-color by a wash of Schönfeld's Indian red, which is matched by the following color-disk formula: scarlet, 14; bright chrome-yellow, 2; white, 4; velvet-black, 80. This inclines toward terra-cotta.

liver-colored (liv'ér-kul'ord), a. Of the color of liver; hepatic; of the color called liver-color; said especially of ceramic ware, as a certain variety of old Chinese porcelain and its imitations.

liver-complaint (liv'ér-kõin-plãnt'), n. Disease of the liver.

livered (liv'érd), a. [< liver² + -ed².] 1. Having a liver (of the kind specified): used in composition: as, a poor-livered or fat-livered codfish.—2. Of some character attributed to a state of the liver: as, white-livered, lily-livered, milk-livered (all meaning 'cowardly').

But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter.
Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 605.

3. Heavy or underbaked. Halliwell. [South. Eng.]

liverer¹ (liv'ér-ér), n. [< liver² + -er².] A servant in livery. Davies.

Their sumptuous suits of liverers.
Patten (Arber's Eng. Garner, III. 74).

livereson¹, n. [ME. lyveresone, < OF. liverison, liverison, liveraison, etc., F. liveraison, delivery, livery; see liver², liveraison, liveration.] Livery. Prompt. Parv., p. 309.

liver-fluke (liv'ér-flök), n. A trematoid worm, Distoma hepatica. See Distoma and fluke².

liver-grown¹ (liv'ér-grõn), a. Suffering from enlargement of the liver.

I suffer'd him to be open'd, when they found that he was what is vulgarly call'd liver-grown.
Evelyn, Diary, Jan. 27, 1658.

liveried (liv'ér-id), a. [< livery + -ed².] Wearing a livery, or uniform dress. See livery.

A thousand liveried angels lacky her.
Milton, Comus, l. 455.

livering¹ (liv'ér-ing), n. [< ME. livering; < liver² + -ing².] A kind of pudding or sausage made of liver or pork.

Two blodynge, I trow, a livering betwene.
Tommsley Mysteries, p. 89. (Halliwell.)
Livering, white-skinned as ladies. Chapman.

liverleaf (liv'ér-léf), n. [So called from a fancied resemblance of the three-lobed leaves to the liver.] A spring flower of the genus Anemone, in two species, sometimes regarded as forming a genus Hepatica. The leaves are all from the root, heart-shaped and three-lobed. The delicate flowers are single on hairy scapes, colored blue, pink, or white. The round-lobed or kidney liverleaf is A. Hepatica (Hepatica triloba). (See cut under Hepatica.) The sharp-lobed or heart liverleaf is A. acutiloba. [Local, U. S.] liver-ore (liv'ér-ör), n. An impure liver-brown variety of cinnabar; hepatic cinnabar.

liver-pyrites (liv'ér-pi-rít'éz), n. A massive form of iron pyrites (marcasite), and sometimes also pyrite and pyrrhotite), having a dull liver-brown color.

liversick¹ (liv'ér-sik), a. Having a diseased liver—that is, in love; from the old notion that the liver is the seat of love.

Demon, my friend, once liversick of love.
Bp. Hall, Satires, II. vii. 47.

liver-spots (liv'ér-spots), n. pl. A disease, pityriasis versicolor. See pityriasis.

liverstone (liv'ér-stõn), n. [= G. leberstein (tr. NL. lapis hepaticus, so called by Cronstedt with ref. to the color, or perhaps to the similarity to liver-pyrites (G. leberkies), which gives off sulphur fumes when heated.] A variety of the mineral barite which gives off a fetid odor when rubbed or heated to redness.

liver-wing (liv'ér-wing), n. In cooking, the right wing of a bird having the liver tucked into it in cooking, preferred by epicures.

Mr. Pumblechook helped me to the liver wing and to the best slice of tongue. Dickens, Great Expectations, xix.

liverwort (liv'ér-wért), n. [< ME. liverwort; < liver² + wort¹.] 1. Any plant of the cryptogamic family Hepaticæ. In general appearance they differ from mosses in having the stems bilateral, and the leaves usually two-ranked, though often there are rudiments of a third rank, never with a midvein.

2. One of several other plants that suggest the liver by their form, or are supposed to be useful in diseases of the liver. Among them are the common agrimony, Agrimonia Eupatoria, and the liverleaf, Anemone Hepatica.—Horned liverwort, a name sometimes given to any of the plants of the order Anthocerotaceæ of the family Hepaticæ. They are small, terrestrial, annual plants, with flaccid thallose vegetation, and bisulcal, mostly erect, pod-like capsules. Also called hornwort.—Noble liverwort, Anemone Hepatica. (See also ground-liverwort, stone-liverwort, water-liverwort, wood-liverwort.)

livery¹ (liv'ér-i), a. [< liver² + -y¹.] Resembling the liver: as, a livery color, texture, etc.

livery² (liv'ér-i), n.; pl. liveries (-iz). [< ME. liveray, lyverey, liveray, liverce, lyverce, lyverce, liverce, liverce (= Sp. librea = It. librea = ML. refl. liverca, liverca), liverce, < AF. liverie, liverce, OF. liverce, liverce, F. liverce, delivery, livery, < ML. liberata, delivery, livery, lit. a thing delivered, fem. (see res, a thing) of liberatus, pp. of liberare, give up, deliver; see liver³.] 1. Delivery; allowance; grant; permission.

Sate, what are ye that naskis here maistris,
To loose these bestis with-oute liverie?
York Plays, p. 203.

2. In law: (a) The act of giving possession; delivery. Chiefly used in the phrase livery of seisin—that is, the act of putting a person in corporal possession of a freehold by giving him the ring, latch, or key of the door; or, if land, by delivering him a turf or twig, accompanied by a form of words or (as always in later times) a written document expressing the transfer of possession; or, in either case, doing any act before witnesses which clearly places the party in possession. It formerly accompanied all conveyances of land, but is now confined in England to that conveyance called a feoffment. It is unknown to American law.

Alienation of fiefholdings, when it came to be allowed, was subject to the condition of being notorious. This was assured by requiring an actual delivery of possession before witnesses and on the land itself: a proceeding accompanied with different forms in different countries and districts, and known by the general name of investiture. In England it was called livery of seisin.
F. Pollock, Land Laws, p. 72.

(b) The charter or deed of possession accompanying the delivery.—3. Release from constraint or control; deliverance.

Death fewer liveries gives Than life. Chapman.

It concerned them first to sue out their livery from the unjust wardship of his encroaching prerogative. Milton.

4. Delivery (of blows).

William as a wod man was enger here & there, & leide on swiche liverie lene me forsothe
That his dales were don that of him hent a deut.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3822.

5. (a) An allowance of food or other provisions steadily given out; a ration, as to a family, to servants, to horses, etc.

Edward IV.'s Esquiers for the Body, III, had "for wynter liverie from All Hallowentide (Nov. 1) tyll Estyr, one percher wax, one candell wax, ij candells Paris, one tallwood and dimidum, and wages in the counting-house." Quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 311.

(b) Keeping on a certain or regular allowance at a certain rate; regular keeping and attendance: now used only of horses: as, to keep a horse at livery.

What Liverie is, we by common use in England knowe well enough, namelye that it is allowance of horse-meate, as they commonly use the word in stabling: as, to keepe horses at livery; the which word, I guess, is derived of livering or delivering fourth they nightlye foode.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

6. (a) A regular distribution of uniform garments, badges, etc., to any body of men; hence, a uniform style prescribed for the dress of a body of servants, followers, or associates.

Commaunde ge that goure gentilmen yomen and other dayly bere and were there robes in goure presence, and namely at the mete, for goure worshyppe, and not olde robes and not cording to the lyuerey, nother were they colde schoone ne fytyd. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 329.

The term livery was . . . gradually restricted to the gift of clothing, the gift of food and provisions being known as allowances or corrodies; the clothing took the character of uniform or badge of service. As it was a proof of power to have a large attendance of servants and dependents, the lords liberally granted their livery to all who wished to wear it, and the wearing of the livery became a sign of clientship or general dependence.
Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 470.

(b) A badge, cognizance, garment, or entire costume of uniform fashion formerly marking the retainers of a fief lord, the followers of a military superior, or the members of a company, as a guild or corporation; at the present time, the dress worn by servants, especially men servants, when of peculiar fashion and indicating whom it is that they serve. Such liveries usually take their colors from the heraldic tinctures used in the armorial bearings, or with modifications. Thus, if the master's arms include a field or, the color of the livery-coat, instead of yellow, may be drab; so in England red, being the color of the royal livery, is avoided by all subjects, and maroon or chocolate is substituted for it when gules is prominent in the arms of the employer.

(c) Figuratively, any characteristic dress, or a dress assumed for or worn upon a particular occasion; hence, characteristic covering or outward appearance: as, the livery of May or of autumn.

The spring, the summer,
The chiding autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liveries. Shak., M. N. D., II. 1. 113.
Now came still evening on, and twilight gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad.
Milton, P. L., lv. 590.

7. A livery-stable. [U. S.]—8. Same as livery company: as, the London liveries.—Livery companies. See company.—Livery of seizin, the delivery of property into possession. See def. 2 (a).—Statute of Liveries. See statute.—To sue one's livery, in old Eng. law, to issue the writ which lay for the heir to obtain the seizin of his lands from the king.

He came but to be Duke of Lancaster,
To sue his livery and beg his peace.
Shak., I Hen. IV., iv. 3. 62.

livery² (liv'ér-i), v. t.; pret. and pp. liveried, ppr. liverying. [< livery², n.] To clothe in or as if in livery.

His rudeness so with his authorized youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.
Shak., Lover's Complaint, l. 105.

He had 116 servants in liveries, every one liveried in greene sattin doublets. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 3, 1638.

livery-coat (liv'ér-i-kõt), n. A coat forming part of a livery-dress—especially, in modern times, of that of a man servant.

livery-collar (liv'ér-i-kol'är), n. A collar of an order or of honorary distinction, as the collar of SS, the collar of the Bath, etc.

livery-colors (liv'ér-i-kul'orz), n. pl. Colors adopted by a person or family of rank and importance for the livery of the household, and also for decorative purposes. Thus, the colors of the Tudor princes of England were white and green (Boutell), those of the Stuarts scarlet and gold, etc.

livery-cupboard (liv'ér-i-kub'örd), n. A stand with two or three shelves formerly used in the dining-room, on which the liveries (food, drink, etc.) intended for distribution were placed.

livery-fish (liv'ér-i-fish), n. A North of Ireland name of the striped wrasse.

livery-gown (liv'ér-i-goun), n. The gown forming part of a livery-dress, especially that worn by a London liveryman.

liveryman (liv'ér-i-man), n.; pl. liverymen (-men). 1. One who wears a livery; specifically, a freeman of the City of London, who, having paid certain fees, is entitled to wear the characteristic dress or livery of the company to which he belongs, and also to enjoy certain other privileges, as the right to vote in the election of the lord mayor, sheriffs, chamberlain, etc.—2. One who keeps a livery-stable.

livery-office (liv'ér-i-of'is), n. An office appointed for the delivery of lands. Wharton.

livery-servant (liv'ér-i-sér'vant), n. A servant who wears a livery; hence, a servant not of the highest grade, as that of steward or the like. Compare servant out of livery, under servant.

livery-stable (liv'ér-i-stá'bl), n. A stable where horses are kept for hire and vehicles are let.

livery-tablet (liv'ér-i-tá'bl), n. A side table or cupboard. Fuller, Pisgah Sight, V. i. 18.

lives, n. 1. Plural of life.—2*t.* An obsolete genitive of life.

live-spindle (liv'spin'dl), n. In a lathe, the rotating spindle in the head-stock by which power is imparted, as distinguished from the dead-spindle in the tail-stock.

livetider, n. [*live*³, for life, + tide.] Fortune; living. Holland, tr. of Camden, p. 245. (Dives.)

live-well (liv'wel), n. The well of a fishing-smack in which fish are kept alive.

livid (liv'id), a. [F. livide = Sp. livido = Pg. It. livido, < L. lividus, black and blue, < livere, be livid.] 1. Black and blue, like a contusion. The term is applied, with the strong exaggeration usually characterizing the use of color-names, to the color of a person "black in the face" from strangulation, or having a cold, death-like complexion from rage, fear, or suffering; or to a light which imparts a death-like aspect to the face. Thus, a face illuminated by the yellow monochromatic light produced by the burning of an alcoholic solution of common salt is said to present a livid appearance.

At this the blood the virgh'a cheek forook;
A livid paleness spreads o'er all her look.

Pope, R. of the L., III. 90.
A thousand flambeau . . . turned all at once that deep bloom into a livid and preternatural day.

On livid brows of agony
The broad red lightning shone.

Waltier, The Slave Ship.

2. In zool., pale purplish-brown, more or less translucent, resembling the color of a bruised surface of flesh.

lividity (li-vid'i-ti), n. [F. lividité, < ML. lividita(-t)s, lividness, < L. lividus, livid; see livid.] The state of being livid; the peculiar darkness of color exhibited by bruised flesh.

The signs of a tendency to such a state [the atrabiliar] are darkness or lividity of the countenance [and] dryness of the skin.

Arbuthnot, Aliments, vi. § 28.

lividness (liv'id-nes), n. Same as lividity.

living (liv'ing), n. [ME. living, living, libbing; verbal n. of *live*¹, v.] 1. The act or the condition of existing; the state of having life; power of continuing life.

There is no living without trusting somebody or other in some cases.

And do you think this is living, to be involved in so many Miseries, and to wallow in so great Iniquities?

N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquia of Erasmus, I. 266.

2*t.* Period of life; term of existence.

To spend her [a nun's] living in eternal love.

Shak., Lover's Complaint, l. 238.

3. Manner or course of life; as, holy living.

The younger son . . . wasted his substance with riotous living.

Luke xv. 13.

Dr. Parker, in his sermon before them, touched them so near for their living, that they went near to touch him for his life.

Sir J. Hayward.

4. Means of subsistence; estate; livelihood.

For to drawn up all thing
That neede was to her libbing.

Arthur and Merlin, p. 38.

And their living ys mystified into them twyes a Day from the seyð Mownte Syon.

Torkington, Dlarie of Eng. Travell, p. 39.

She of her want did eat in all that she had, even all her living.

My duty toward my neighbour is . . . to learn and labour truly to get mine own living.

Book of Common Prayer, Catechism.

Specifically—(a) An ecclesiastical office by virtue of which the clerk or incumbent has the right to enjoy certain church revenues on condition of discharging certain services prescribed by the canons, or by usage, or by the conditions under which the office has been founded. (See induction, 2.) In the reign of Henry VIII. a system of "pluralities" was established, whereby the same clerk might hold two or more livings; but in the reign of Victoria this privilege, which was attended with great abuses, has been repeatedly abridged; and no clerk may now hold two livings unless the churches so attached are within three miles of each other, and the annual value of one of them does not exceed one hundred pounds.

We see some parents, that have the donations or advowsons of Church livings in their hands, must needs have some of their children . . . thrust into the ministry.

Bp. Sanderson, Works, III. 125.

He obtained licence from the King that the University might purchase advowances of spiritual livings.

Fuller, Hist. Cambridge, II. 38.

Your peculiar institution of church livings—which (as I understand it) makes it possible that a priest of the oracle of God may be a mere functionary.

J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 235.

(b) The income from a benefice; ecclesiastical revenue. They [the clergy] have great labors, and therefore they ought to have good livings, that they may commodiously feed their flock.

Lutiner, Sermon of the Plough.

(c) The seat of the office; a parish. I shall pass part of next summer at my living, and in all probability come over to Edinburgh.

Sydney Smith, To Francis Jeffrey.

5. A farm. [Prov. Eng.] My lands and livings are not small, My house and lynnage fare.

The Child of Elle (Child's Ballads, III. 231).

High living. See high.—Syn. 4. Living, Livelihood, Subsistence, Sustainance, Support, Maintenance. These words differ essentially, as their derivations suggest. To make a living or a livelihood is to earn enough to keep alive on with economy, not barely enough to maintain life, nor sufficient to live in luxury. Livelihood is a rather finer and less material word than living. Subsistence and sustainance refer entirely to food; subsistence is that which keeps one in existence or animal life; sustainance is that which holds one up. Support and maintenance, like living and livelihood, cover necessary expenses. To guarantee a man his support is to promise money to cover all expenses proper to economical living, or such living as may be agreed upon. Maintenance may be applied to expensive living. An honest livelihood; a bare living; bare subsistence; scanty sustainance; ample support; an honorable maintenance at the university.

living (liv'ing), p. a. [Altered from ME. liveant, lifand, < AS. lifende, ppr. of lifian, live; see *live*¹, v.] 1. Being alive; having life or vitality; not dead; as, a living animal or plant.

The Lord God . . . breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

Gen. II. 7.

2. In actual existence; having present vigor or vitality; now in action or use; not lifeless, stagnant, inert, or disused; applied to things: as, living languages; a living spring; living faith.

To live a life half dead, a living death.

Milton, S. A., I. 100.

Then flash'd the living lightning from her eyes.

Pope, R. of the L., III. 155.

It is the living question of the hour, and not the dead story of the past, which forces itself into all minds.

O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 78.

3. Furious; fierce; applied by seamen to a gale; as, a living gale of wind.—4. Existing in the original state and place; being as primarily formed and situated: only in the phrases living rock, living stone.

I now found myself on a rude and narrow stairway, the steps of which were cut out of the living rock.

Moore.

The forms they hewed from living stone
Survive the waste of years, alone.

Bryant, The Greek Boy.

Living force. See vis viva.—Living language. See language.—The living, one who is or those who are alive: usually with a plural signification: as, in the land of the living.

The living will lay it to his heart.

Ecc. vii. 2.

living-chamber (liv'ing-chám'ber), n. The chamber or cavity of a shell in which an animal lives, as distinguished from that part from which the body of the animal has receded during the growth of the shell: said especially of fossil cephalopods.

livingly (liv'ing-li), adv. [Living + -ly.] In a living state or manner; by the course or way of life.

Of course no sane man can help cherishing the liveliest desire to grow in the knowledge of the Divine perfection, and livingly to illustrate it in the tenor of his own personal history.

H. James, Subs. and shad., p. 206.

livingness (liv'ing-nes), n. [Living + -ness.] The state of being alive; possession of energy or vigor; animation; liveliness: as, the livingness of one's faith.

living-room (liv'ing-róm), n. A room for general family use; a sitting-room. Also called in New England keeping-room. [Local, U. S.]

The cabin was furnished with two entrance doors. I rapped at one, and in a moment it opened, and Joe ushered me into the living-room.

Gilmore, My Southern Friends, p. 149. (Bartlett.)

Accordingly each family sets up one or other of these delicias in its living-room.

Art Jour., March, 1888, p. 72.

livingstonite (liv'ing-stón-it), n. [Named in honor of David Livingston, a Scottish missionary and explorer of Africa (1813–73).] A sulphid of mercury and antimony occurring in prismatic or columnar forms of a lead-gray color and metallic luster: found in Mexico.

livish (liv'ish), a. [ME. livish, lifish; < live + -ish.] Somewhat live or alive; lively.

If there were true and livish faith, then would it work love in their hearts.

Becon's Works, 1843, p. 37. (Halliwell.)

Livistona (liv-is-tón'ä), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1827), named for Patrick Murray of Livistone, near Edinburgh.] A genus of fan-palms of the tribe Corypheæ, distinguished by the terminal styles and stignas, the petals and sepals being valvate in the bud, and by the distinct or slightly coherent globose carpels. The flowers are hermaphrodite, and consist of three sepals and a three-lobed corolla, six stamens and three carpels, of which generally but one matures and forms the fruit. The leaves are fan-shaped and generally split on the edges, and are borne on spiny petioles. There are about 14 species, found in eastern and tropical Asia, the Malay archipelago, New Guinea, and eastern Australia. L. australis, the Australian or Victorian cabbage-tree, is native as far south as Victoria.

Livonian (li-vó'ni-an), a. and n. [Livingonia (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Livonia; Lettish.

2. n. 1. A native or an inhabitant of Livonia, one of the Baltic provinces of Russia; specifically, a member of the primitive race of Livonia.—2. The language formerly spoken by the Livonians.

livor (liv'vor), n. [L. livor, lividness, envy, < livere, be of a bluish color, be envious; see livid.] 1. Envy; malignity.

Out of this root of envy spring those feral branches of faction, hatred, livor, emulation.

Burton, Anat. of Mel, p. 167.

2. pl. The parts of skin in a corpse discolored by the hypostatic accumulation of blood.

livraison (lé-vrà-zón'), n. [F., < ML. liberatio(-n-), a giving, L. a setting free, liberation; see liberation and *live*³. Cf. livreson, an obs. F. form of the same word.] One of several parts of a printed work issued at intervals in advance of the completion of the whole; a number of a book published in parts, or of a periodical; a fascicle: used only or chiefly of French publications.

I shall send you several livraisons of the Encyclopédie.

Jefferson, Correspondence, II. 69.

livre (lê'vèr), n. [F., = Sp. Pg. libra = It. libbra, lira, < L. libra, the Roman pound; cf. Gr. λίτρα, a pound; see libra.] An old French coin and money of account, now superseded by the franc. The value of the livre tournois, or livre of Tours, by comparison of the gold coinage of 1726–1785 with the present United States gold coinage, was 194 cents, and by comparison of silver coin of the same periods it was 187 cents. The livre parisien, or livre of Paris, in use until 1667 conjointly with the livre tournois, was worth one quarter more than the latter.

lixivial (lik-siv'i-ál), a. [= F. lixiviel = Sp. lejivial = It. lissiviale, < L. lixivius, lixivius, lye; see lixivium.] 1. Obtained by lixiviation; impregnated with alkaline matter extracted from wood-ashes.—2. Containing or consisting of salts so extracted.—3. Of the color of lye; resembling lye.—4. Having the qualities of alkaline salts extracted from wood-ashes.—Lixivial salts, in chem., salts obtained by passing water through wood-ashes, or by pouring water on wood-ashes.

lixivate (lik-siv'i-át), v. t.: pret. and pp. lixivated, ppr. lixivating. [*ML. lixiviatu, pp. of lixivare*, form into a lye, < L. lixivium, lye; see lixivium.] To subject to the process of lixiviation; form into lye; impregnate with salts from wood-ashes: as, lixivated water.

[Boline] is obtained by pouring an excess of concentrated sulphuric acid on the water obtained by burning different fuel, lixiviating the ashes, and concentrating the liquor.

Dunston, Dict. Med. Science.

lixivate (lik-siv'i-át), n. [*ML. lixiviatu, pp.: see the verb.] 1. Pertaining to lye or lixivium; of the nature of alkaline salts.

The fixed nitre is of an alcalizate nature, and participates the qualities belonging generally to lixivate salts.

Boyle, Works, I. 370.

2. Impregnated with salts from wood-ashes.

lixiviation (lik-siv-i-á-shon), n. [= F. lixiviation = Pg. lixiviação = It. lissivazione, < *ML. lixiviatio(-n-), < lixivare*, make into lye; see lixivate.] The operation or process of extracting alkaline salts from ashes by percolation of water; the process of leaching. For the application of leaching or lixiviation to the treatment of metalliferous ores, see Augustin's process, Patena process, Russell's process, Zierogel's process, all under process.

lixivious (lik-siv'i-us), a. [L. lixivius, also lixivius, made into lye; see lixivium.] Lixivial.

lixivium (lik-siv'i-um), n. [L. lixivium, also lixivia, lye, neut. and fem. respectively of lixivius, made into lye, < lix, ashes, lye.] Water impregnated with alkaline salts extracted from wood-ashes; lye: sometimes applied to other extracts.

I have found wonderful benefit in bathing my head with a decoction of some hot and aromatic herbs, in a lixivium made of the ashes of vine-branches.

Feelym, To Doctor Beale.

lixt. An obsolete form of liest, second person singular indicative present of *lie*¹. Chaucer.

liza (líz'ä), n. The white or blue-backed mullet, Mugil curema.

lizard (líz'ärd), n. [ME. lesarde, luserde, < OF. lezard, lesurd, lisard, F. lézard = Sp. Pg.

lagarto (> E. aligator, now alligator) = It. lacrta, lucerta, < L. lacertus, lacerta, a lizard. Cf. lacert.] 1. A scaly four-legged reptile without a shell; a squamate quadruped saurian; a saurian or lacertilian. In popular language a lizard is almost any reptile except a frog, toad, snake, or turtle; and ordinary book usage is equally indefinite. Thus, skinks, stellions, geckos, chameleons, basilisks, monitors, agamas, iguanas, alligators, crocodiles, etc., are all lizards; pterodactyls are flying-lizards; dinosaurs, plesiosaurs, and mosasaurs are huge extinct lizards. But the word is most frequently used as the name of the small lacertilians, as those of the family Lacertidae and some others, which have no special names of their own. See Lacerta, Lacertidae.

Our Author saw one Lizard as big as a man, with scales on her back like Oysters. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 838.

Lizards, the green lightnings of the wall, . . . With such prodigious eyes in such small heads!

Mrs. Browning, Aurora Leigh, vii.

2. Any member of the old order Sauria or modern order Lacertilia. Such are the reptiles known as slow-worms, glass-snakes, horned toads, etc. Many of these have no limbs, or no obvious ones, and are therefore not lizards in sense 1.

3. Naut., a piece of rope with a thimble or bull's-eye spliced into one or both ends, used in a vessel as a leader for ropes.—4. [cap.] A certain small constellation. See Lacerta, 2.—5. A crotch of timber or a forked limb used in place of a sled for hauling stone: a form of stone-boat.—6. In her., a beast like a wildcat, usually represented as spotted: a rare bearing.—Anguine lizard. See anguine.—Broad-backed lizards, the varanids or monitors.—Croaking lizard, a gecko common in Jamaica, Thecadactylus leviss: so called from the noise it makes. It is nocturnal. Also croaking gecko.—Friiled lizard. See frill-lizard.—Scaly lizard, a pangolin or scaly ant-eater. See Manis.

lizard-bait (liz'ard-bät), n. The lesser sand-lance. [Prov. Eng.] lizard-fish (liz'ard-fish), n. 1. A ganoid fish of the group of sauroids.—2. A fish of the genus Synodus, of which there are several species, as the sandpike, S. fatens, found from Cape Cod southward. S. luciocephus occurs on the Californian and Mexican coasts.

lizard-seeker (liz'ard-æ'kër), n. An American ground-cuckoo, Saurolthera vetula, or some other member of the subfamily Sauroltherine.

lizard-stone (liz'ard-stön), n. A name for the serpentine marble obtained in Cornwall, England, in the vicinity of Lizard Point. It is made into chimney-pieces, ornaments, etc.

lizard's-tongue (liz'ardz-tung), n. A name of several orchids included in the genus Spiranthes, formerly regarded as forming a genus Sauroglossum.

lizardtail, lizard's-tail (liz'ard-, liz'ardz-täl), n. 1. An herbaceous plant, Saururus cernuus, growing in marshes in North America. The name was suggested by its nodding spikes of white flowers. Also called breastweed (which see).—2. A plant, Piper poltatum, of the West Indies.

lizard-tailed (liz'ard-täld), a. Having long fragile arms or rays, likened to the tail of a lizard: specifically applied to the ophiuroids.

lizari (li-zä'ri), n. Same as alitari.

Lizzia (liz'i-ä), n. [NL.] A genus of gymno-blastic aculephs or jellyfishes, with 32 marginal tentacles arranged by fives and threes, and the young produced by direct budding from the polypite. L. octopunctata is an example.

llama (lä'mä or lyä'mä), n. [Also lama and glama as the L. generic or specific name; < Peruv. llama.] 1. An even-toed ruminant ungulate quadruped, Auchenia glama or llama, or Lama peruviana, of South America, of the order Ungulata, suborder Artiodactyla, superfamily be descended from the guanaco. The llama is also called the American camel, and has been known to Europeans since 1544. It was the only beast of burden in America before the arrival of the Spaniards, and is still used as such in the Andes, the formation of its feet enabling it to walk on slopes too rough or steep for any other animal. It is about 3 feet high at the shoulder, and so closely allied to the alpaca that the latter is sometimes regarded as a finer-wooled variety of it.

2. The wool of the llama. It is used in making stuffs for women's wear, lace, tassels, etc.

Her [the Lady Mayoress's] petticoat was of llama and gold. First Year of a Sülken Reign, p. 69.

llan. [W. llan, an inclosure, a church.] A church: a very frequent element in place-names in Wales, and occurring also in England and Scotland, as in Llandaff, Llangollen, Llanidloes, Llanark.

Llandeilo group (lan-dī'lō gröp). [See def.] A division of the Lower Silurian, first described by Murchison as occurring at Llandeilo in Carmarthenshire, Wales, and also found in Pembrokehire and Radnorshire. The group consists of dark-colored flags, sandstones, and shales, and is between 2,000 and 3,000 feet thick. It contains many of the characteristic fossils of the lowest division of the Silurian, especially trilobites of genera included in Barrande's "primordial fauna," such as Asaphus, Calymene, and Ogygia.

Llandovery group (lan'dō-ve-ri gröp). [See def.] A series of rocks, so named by Murchison because well developed near Llandovery in Carmarthenshire, Wales. The group consists of sandstones, grits, and conglomerates, having a maximum thickness of 2,500 feet. It is divided into two subdivisions, the Lower Llandovery beds, and the Upper Llandovery beds or the May Hill sandstone. By some geologists the Upper and the Lower Llandovery and the Taranon shales are grouped together as the May Hill series, and are considered as forming the lowest division of the Silurian, the fossiliferous strata below this being called Cambrian. At one time the division between the Lower and Upper Silurian was taken between the Upper and Lower Llandovery. See Silurian.

llanero (lya-nä'rō), n. [Sp., < llano, a plain; see llano.] An inhabitant of the llanos of South America. The llaneros are principally converted Indians or descendants of Indians and whites, and are distinguished for activity, ferocity, ignorance, and semi-barbarous habits. They are for the most part shepherds or herdsmen.

llano (lä'nō or lyä'nō), n. [Sp., a plain, < L. planus, level; see plain and plane.] In some of the Spanish or originally Spanish parts of America, a treeless level steppe or plain. The llanos in the northern part of South America surround the lower and middle course of the Orinoco, and are separated by the great forest-belt of the Amazon from the region of the pampas further south. Many parts of these llanos bear little or no vegetation, except on the banks of rivers and during the seasons of inundation, when they are transformed into seas. In the intermediate season they are luxuriant pastures for great herds of cattle. The Llano Estacado or Staked Plain of the United States is a vast arid plateau in the former Spanish possessions of Texas and New Mexico.

Like the greater portion of the desert of Sahara, the northernmost of the South American plains—the Llanos—are in the torrid zone; during one-half of the year they are desolate, like the Libyan sandy waste; during the other they appear as a grassy plain, resembling many of the steppes of Central Asia.

Humboldt, Aspects of Nature (trans.), p. 30.

LL. B. An abbreviation of the Latin (Middle or New Latin) Legum Baccalaureus, Bachelor of Laws.

LL. D. An abbreviation of the Latin (Middle or New Latin) Legum Doctor, Doctor of Laws.

lean (lën), n. The pilchard. [Cornwall.] lestraid, n. [W.: see listred.] Same as listred.

Lloyd's (loidz), n. [See def.] The name (which has become in some degree generic) of an association in London, consisting of members and subscribers, for the transaction of marine insurance for all parts of the world through individual underwriters, and the promotion of shipping interests in general. The association has occupied Lloyd's Rooms in the Royal Exchange since 1774. These rooms were originally called the New Lloyd's Coffee-House, from a house established by Edward Lloyd in Tower street, in the latter part of the seventeenth century, where merchants and underwriters met to transact business. About 1692 the establishment was removed to Lombard street for the convenience of merchants of the highest class doing business in the old city. About 1770 the place came into the possession of the society of marine underwriters, together with "Lloyd's List" (formerly "Lloyd's News"), a newspaper devoted to shipping intelligence, that was founded about 1726, probably by Lloyd, and has been published daily since 1800. The society retained the official title Lloyd's Coffee-House until 1871, when it was for the first time incorporated by act of Parliament, under its present shortened name. Its operations are so extensive and important that the name has been adopted by several continental associations for maritime and mercantile enterprises, the principal of which are the Austrian Lloyd at Trieste and the North German Lloyd at Bremen.

Lloyd's was then [in Anne's reign] in Lombard Street, and indeed to this day, on Lloyd's policies, is stated that this policy shall have the same effect as if issued in Lombard Street.

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 224.

Lloyd's agent, one of a class of agents, in nearly all parts of the world, acting for the committee of underwriters at Lloyd's, who transmit maritime information of all kinds, report disasters, etc. They are generally local merchants, shippers, or others concerned with maritime business.—Lloyd's bond. See bond.—Lloyd's Register of British and Foreign Shipping, an annual work, published by an association of members of Lloyd's, containing the names of vessels alphabetically arranged, and ranked in different classes (as A1, etc.) according to their qualifications, their title to be in any class being determined by the report of surveyors, and by certain rules as to their construction, their state of repair, age, etc.

lo¹ (lō), interj. [< ME. lo, loo, < AS. lā, a common interj. of surprise, calling, or mere greeting. Confusion of lā, ME. lo, with lōc, ME. lok, impv., look, is supposed to have given to its now usual implication of 'behold'; but the difference of form is too great to make any such confusion probable.] Look! see! behold! observe!—used to invoke or direct the particular attention of a person to some object or subject of interest.

Lo, ze lordes, what iente didd by an emperoure of Rome, That was an vncrysten creature as clerkes fyndeth in bokes.

Lo, Adam, in the felde of Damascene,

With Goddes owen finger wrought was he.

Chaucer, Monk's Tale, I. 17.

Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice. Shak., W. T., I. 2. 105.

Lo² (lō), n. [From the well-known lines of Pope, "Lo! the poor Indian, whose untutored mind," etc. ("Essay on Man," i. 99), the word Lo being humorously taken as the name of "the poor Indian."] A North American Indian. [Humorous, U. S.]

loa (lō'ä), n. A larval nematode worm infesting the eye; the larval stage of the eye-thread-worm, Filaria oculi.

loach (lōch), n. [Also loche; < F. loche = Sp. locha, loja, loach: origin unknown.] 1. A small European fish, Cobitis (Nemachilus) barbatula, Common Loach (Nemachilus barbatulus).

of the family Cobitidae; hence, any fish of that family. The common loach inhabits small clear streams, and is esteemed a delicacy. It is also called beardy. The spinous loach or groundling is a smaller species, Cobitis taeni.

The miller's thombe, the hiding loach,

The perch, the ever-nibbling roach.

W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, I. 1.

Scarcely a stone I left returned, being thoroughly skilled in the tricks of the loach. . . . For being gray-spotted, and clear to see through. . . . he will stay quite still where a streak of weed is in the rapid water, hoping to be overlooked. R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, vii.

2. A European fresh-water gaidoid fish, the burbot or eel-pout, Lota maculosa. See cut under burbot.—3. A simpleton. Nares.

And George redeemed his cloake, rode merrily to Oxford, having coine in his pocket, where this loach spares not for any expence. Jests of George Peele.

load¹ (lōd), n. See *lod*¹.

load² (lōd), n. [*< ME. lode, loode, a burden carried in a vehicle, lit. a carrying, a particular use of lode, a way, course, carrying; see lode*¹. In the orig. sense the word is more commonly spelled lode, while in the later senses the exclusive spelling is load, and the word is now associated with *lade*¹.] 1. That which is carried; a burden laid on or placed in anything, or taken up, for conveyance; specifically, a suitable or customary burden; the amount or quantity that can be or usually is carried: as, a ship's load; a cart-load; wood and hay are often sold by the load.

Of stree [straw] first ther was leyvd ful many a loode.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale (ed. Morris), I. 2060.

Come, now towards Chertsey with your hojy load.

Shak., Rich. III., I. 2. 29.

Later in the fall, certain of the Count's vassals came to the riva in one of the great boats of the Po, with a load of brush and corncocks for fuel. Hovells, Venetian Life, vii.

2. That which is upborne or sustained; a burden; a weight resting on or in anything: as, a load of fruit on a tree; a load of learning in the mind.

What think you of a duchess? have you limbs

To bear that load of title?

Shak., Hen. VIII., il. 3. 38.

From their foundations loosening to and fro,

They pluck'd the seated hills, with all their load.

Milton, P. L., vi. 644.

Earth, on whose wide-spreading Base

The wretched Load is laid of Human Race.

Congreve, Tears of Amaryllis.

Llama.

Tylopoda, family Camelidae, closely related to the camel of the Old World, but smaller, without a hump, and woolly-haired. Like the camel, it is known only in the state of domestication; it is supposed to

And all that freedom's highest aim can reach
Is but to lay proportion'd loads on each.

Goldsmith, Traveller, l. 374.

Especially—3. That which is hard to be sustained or endured; an oppressive or grievous burden: as, a load of debt; a load of guilt.

Who hast of sorrow thy full load heald.

Milton, S. A., l. 214.

Stn doth not lie like a heavy weight upon their backs, so that they feel the load of it.

Stillingsfleet, Sermons, II. iii.

Men who prefer any load of infamy, however great, to any pressure of taxation, however light.

Sydney Smith, American Debts. (Bartlett.)

4. The charge of a firearm: as, a load of buckshot.—5. A quantity of strong drink imbibed, or sometimes of food taken, that oppresses, or is more than can be borne comfortably or with propriety: as, he went home late with a load on. [Slang.]

There are those that can never sleep without their load, nor enjoy one easy thought till they have laid all their cares to rest with a bottle.

Sir R. L'Estrange.

6. A unit of measure or weight. By the statute of Edward I., de ponderibus et mensuris, a load (carrus) of lead is 1,500 pounds, and sometimes 168 stone, and in the Peak, 30 fothals or 2,100 pounds, and of wheat the same. By statutes of George I., a load of wood is 50 cubic feet, and a load of hay 2,016 pounds. By a statute of 27 George III., a load of bulrushes is 63 bundles. Other loads are merely customary. Dr. Young says a load of wheat is 40 bushels; of earth or gravel, 1 cubic yard; of lime, 32 bushels; of oak-bark, 5,040 pounds; of sand, 36 bushels. A load of lead ore in Derbyshire is 9 dishes of from 14 to 16 pints each.

7. In mech., the pressure upon any part or the whole of a structure. It consists of the internal load, or permanent load, the weight of the part itself and its fixed attachments, and the external load, arising from pressures of other bodies upon its surface. [The word is not properly used to signify a quantity of work.]

A structure has to support both its own weight and also any load that may be placed upon it. Thus a railway bridge must at all times sustain what is called the permanent load, and frequently, of course, the weight of one or more trains.

R. S. Ball, Exper. Mechanics, p. 172.

To lay on load. See lay.—Syn. 1 and 2. Freight, cargo, lading.—3. Pressure, dead-weight, incubus, clog.

*load*² (lōd), v. [*< load*², n.; in part a var. of the original verb *lade*¹, in imitation of the noun *load*²: see *lade*¹.] I. trans. 1. To lay a burden on; charge with a load; furnish with lading or cargo; lade: as, to load a camel or a horse; to load a cart or wagon. [The past participle loaden is obsolete.]

Your carriages were heavy loaden; they are a burden to the weary beast.

Isa. xlvi. 1.

By turns they ease the loaden swarms, or drive
The drone, a lazy insect, from their hive.

Addison, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, iv.

2. To lay as a burden; place upon or in something for conveyance: as, to load cotton on a lighter; to load cargo.

There was no talke, no hope, no worke, but dig gold, wash gold, refine gold, load gold.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, l. 169.

3. To weigh down; impose something upon, either good or bad; pile; heap; encumber or oppress: with with: as, to load the stomach with sweets; to load the memory with details.

Those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house.

Shak., Macbeth, l. 6. 17.

Essex loaded Bacon with benefits, and never thought that he had done enough.

Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

4. To make heavy by something added or appended; charge, as with something extraneous: as, to load a whip; to load dice.

He has a conscience,
A cruel stinging one, I warrant him,
A loaden one.

Fletcher, Loyal Subject, v. 1.

At the ripe age of fourteen years I bought a certain cudgel, got a friend to load it.

R. L. Stevenson, A Penny Plain, 2d Coloured.

5. To make heavy, as a liquid; to falsify, as wine, by mixing with it distilled liquor of some sort, usually accompanied with sugar and other ingredients, for the purpose of making a thin wine appear heavy and full-bodied; also, to increase the weight of, as paper, or textile fabrics, by the addition of clay, starch, or other extrinsic matter.

It is an intolerable nuisance to have to dress, and go out seven or eight miles to cold entrées, and loaded claret, and sweet port.

Thackeray, Lovel the Widower, iii.

If the paper is to be loaded—that is, adulterated with clay or cheap fibres—these are added in the beater as the fibre swirls round and round.

Harper's Mag., LXXV. 120.

6. To place a charge in; charge, as a gun with powder and shot.

Many a Whig that day loaded his musket with a doliar cut into slugs.

Scott, Old Mortality, xvi.

The sportsman should be careful . . . to ascertain the charge best suited to his weapon, and to have his cartridges so loaded.

Encyc. Brit., XXI. 835.

7. In painting: (a) To mix with white: said of a pigment which in this way is made more solid and opaque. (b) To paint heavily; apply (color) in solid opaque masses.

Masses of white enamel are loaded upon the surface, with a view to further treatment.

Art Jour., N. S., XI. 10.

Deck-loading Act, a British statute of 1842 (5 Vict., sess. 2, c. 17) forbidding the loading of cargoes of timber on the decks of certain classes of ships.—Loaded dice. See *die*³.—To load one's self, on the stock-exchange, to buy heavily of stock. See load.

II. intrans. 1. To put or take on a load or charge: often with up: as, the travelers loaded and started early; the ship loaded up with a miscellaneous cargo.—2. To charge a gun or guns: as, the troops loaded and fired rapidly. Steady they load, steady they fire, moving right onward still.

T. O. Davis, Fontenoy.

3. To become loaded or burdened; clog up: as, oysters are apt to load with sand.

*loaded*¹, a. An obsolete variant of loaded.

*loaded*² (lō'ded), p. a. 1. Coated with external growths, as shells; clogged up: said of oysters. [Rhode Island.]—2. Full of liquor; drunk. [Slang.]

loader (lō'dēr), n. 1. One who or that which loads: as, a truck-loader. Specifically—(a) A little machine for loading shells or cartridges for a breech-loading shot-gun; a loading-machine. (b) In agri., etc., any device for laying a load upon a wagon, sled, or cart: as, a hay-loader, a log-loader, etc.

2. A red-finned herring. [Prov. Eng.]—3t. A term in dic., of uncertain meaning.

Every vice is a loader; but that [lust] is a ten.

Bryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, vi., Arg.

loading (lō'ding), n. [Verbal n. of *load*², v.]

1. The act of putting on a load.—2. A cargo; a burden; lading; also, anything that makes part of a load.—3. Anything that is added to a substance or material in order to give it weight or body: as, the China clay or pearl-white used for loading note-paper.—4. In art, a heavy charge of opaque color. See *load*², v. t., 7.

Loading is the use of opaque colour in heavy masses which actually protrude from the canvas and themselves catch the light, as the mountains do on the moon.

P. G. Hamerton, Graphic Arts, p. 304.

5. In insurance, that part of the charge or premium on a policy which constitutes its share of the expenses of management.

The terms loading and "margin" have come to bear a somewhat extended meaning. They are now used to designate the difference between the premium payable by the assured and the net premiums deducted from any table that may be employed for the time.

Encyc. Brit., XIII. 173.

loading (lō'ding), p. a. Made so as to be loaded (in the way specified): as, a breech-loading or a muzzle-loading gun.

loading-bar (lō'ding-bär), n. In gun., a bar of iron about two feet long, made with a ring at one end and a screw at the other, for carrying and loading shells. Also called carrying-bar.

loading-funnel (lō'ding-fun'el), n. See funnel.

loading-machine (lō'ding-ma-shēn'), n. A machine for loading cartridge-shells. It has a revolving wheel on which the shells are fed in; the requisite amount of powder is admitted to each shell from the powder-can by means of a funnel above, and the bullet or charge of shot is forced into the neck of each shell as the wheel advances in its revolution.

loading-plug (lō'ding-plug), n. A rammer for loading shells and extracting caps from spent capsules.

loading-tongs (lō'ding-tōngz), n. sing. and pl. In gun., a pair of tongs used to set the shell home in a siege-howitzer.

loading-tray (lō'ding-trā), n. In milit. engin., a stout iron support upon which a heavy shot or shell is placed, and by suitable mechanism brought into the opening in the breech of a large breech-loading gun, as an assistance in charging the gun.

load-line (lōd'lin), n. [Appar. *< load*² + *line*²; but perhaps *< load*¹ = *lod*¹ + *line*².] Naut., a line drawn on the side of a vessel to show the depth to which a suitable or allowable load will cause her to sink in the water. Among English seamen known as Plimsoll's mark. See mark.

There shall be a load-line or conspicuous mark on each vessel, showing the depth of loading and of surplus buoyancy.

R. J. Hinton, Eng. Radical Leaders, p. 207.

Nor did it occur to the "practical" politicians who provided a compulsory load-line for merchant vessels, that the pressure of ship-owners' interests would habitually cause the putting of the load-line at the very highest limit, and that from precedent to precedent, tending ever in the same direction, the load-line would gradually rise in the better class of ships.

H. Spencer, Man vs. State, p. 25.

loadman¹, n. See lodeman.

loadman² (lōd'man), n. A carter. Halliwel.

loadmanage, n. See lodemanage.

load-penny (lōd'pen'ī), n. A market toll or tax anciently levied on loads in the towns of England for public revenue.

The gift of its [Worcester's] market-dues, wain-shilling and load-penny, was the costliest among the many boons which Æthelred and Æthelstef showed on Bishop Werfrith.

J. R. Green, Conq. of Eng., ix.

loadsmant, n. See lodeman.

loadstar, n. See lodestar.

loadstone, n. See lodestone.

loadum (lō'dum), n. [Appar. for load'em: see quot. from Florio.] An old game at cards.

Cárica l'asino [It., load the ass], a play at cards which we call loadum.

Florio.

For to converse with Scandal is to play Losing Loadum; you must lose a good Name to him, before you can win it for yourself.

Congreve, Love for Love, l. 11.

New some at cards and dice do play
Their money and their time away;

At loadum, cribbage, and all-fours.

Poor Robin (1735), (Nares.)

loaf¹ (lōf), n.; pl. loaves (lōvz). [< ME. lof, lof (pl. loaves), < AS. hlaf, bread, a loaf of bread, = OHG. hlaba, laiba, leib, leip, MHG. leip, G. laib = Icel. hleifr = OSw. ler = Dan. ler = Goth. hlaihs, hlaibs, bread; the common Teut. term for 'bread,' older than the word bread. The Lith. hlepas, Lett. klaipas, bread, are prob. < O Bulg. "khlébū = Russ. khlebū, bread, and these Slav. forms with Finn. leipa, Esthonian leip, bread, are prob. from the OTeut. The word loaf appears disguised in the orig. compounds Lanmas and prob. lord and lady.] A portion of bread baked in one lump or mass; a regularly shaped or molded mass of bread; hence, any shaped or molded mass of cake, sugar, or the like.

The enemy of Helle . . . seyde Dic ut lapides isti panes flant: that is to seye, Sey that these Stones be made Loaves.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 98.

There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 2. 72.

A hot smoking loaf of rye-and-Indian bread.

H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 193.

Holy loaf. (a) In the Gr. Ch., same as holy lamb. See lamb. (b) In the medieval ch. in England, the blessed bread; a eulogia.

The Parishioners of every Parish shall offer every Sunday, at the time of the Offertory, the just value and price of the holy loaf . . . to the use of their Pastors and Curates, and that in such order and course as they were wont to find and pay the said holy loaf.

Book of Common Prayer (1549) (rubric).

Loafed lettuce, headed lettuce.

Lait-tue crepue [F.], loafed or headed lettice.

Nonnencator (1585), (Nares.)

Loaves and fishes, figuratively, temporal benefits, as money or office: in allusion to the miraculous loaves and fishes distributed by Christ to the multitude who followed him, and his words (John vi. 26), "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled."

The consequence must be, that although every one of these four orders (of the Florentine government) must be divided at once into factions for the loaves and fishes, yet the nobility, by their superior influence in elections, would have the whole power.

J. Adams, Works, v. 18.

loaf² (lōf), v. [Appar. first in the noun loafer (< G. läufer = E. leaper, toper); < G. laufen, dial. lofen (= D. loopen = E. leap), run, wander or lounge about: see *loap*¹, *lope*¹.] I. intrans. To idle away one's time; lounge; dawdle; play the vagabond; stroll idly and without purpose.

To loaf: this, I think, is unquestionably German. Laufen is pronounced lofen in some parts of Germany, and I once heard one German student say to another "Ich lauf [lofe] hier bis du wiederkehrst," and he began to saunter up and down—in short, to loaf.

Lovel, Biglow Papers, 2d ser., Int.

Shoeblocks are compelled to a great deal of unavoidable loafing; but certainly this one loafed rather energetically, for he was hot and frantic in his play.

H. Kingsley, Ravenshoe, xii. (Davies.)

I loafe and invite my Soul;
I lean and loafe at my ease, observing a spear of summer grass.

Walt Whitman, Leaves of Grass, p. 28.

How can you go down to the beach by yourself amongst all those loafing vagabonds, who would pick your pocket or throw stones at you? W. Black, Princess of Thule, xiv.

II. trans. To pass or spend in idleness, as time; spend lazily; dawdle: with away: as, to loaf away whole days.

The Senate has loafed away the week in very gentlemanly style.

New York Commercial Advertiser, Dec., 1845.

loafer (lōf'ēr), n. [See *loaf*².] An idle man, lounging, or aimless stroller, of whatever social condition; specifically, one who is too lazy to work or pursue regular business, and lounges about, depending upon chance or disreputable means for subsistence.

"The thought is not new to me; I have read Washington Irving." "Prince of intellectual loafers," said Gray-hurst.
J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 69.

loaferish (lō'fēr-ish), a. [loafer + -ish]. Of or pertaining to a loafer; like or characteristic of a loafer.

Four pleasant ruffians in the loaferish postures which they have learned as fachini waiting for jobs.
Howells, Venetian Life, xix.

loaf-sugar (lōf'shūg'ār), n. Sugar refined and molded into a conical mass.

loam (lōm), n. [Early mod. E. also lome; also dial. lame, laim; < ME. lom*, lam, < AS. lām = OS. lōmo, lōmo = D. leem = MLG. LG. lem = OHG. leimo, MHG. leime, leim, G. leim, but usually lehm (after LG.), loam, clay; akin to AS. līm, etc., lime, and to L. limus, mud; see lime]. 1. A soil consisting of a natural mixture of clay and sand, the latter being present in sufficient quantity to overcome the tendency of the clay to form a coherent mass. That which is ordinarily called loam is fine-grained, homogeneous, and "light"—that is, not densely compacted together. Carbonate of lime is usually present in small quantity, and also organic matter. See morb, soil, and loess.

At the higher and farther sides of those upper ovens are trenches of loam.
Sandys, Travails, p. 98.

The soil was a dark brown loam, and very rich.
B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 91.

2. In foundry, a mixture of sand, clay, saw-dust, straw, etc., used in making the molds for castings. The compound must be plastic when wet, and hard, air-tight, and able to resist high temperatures when dry. Specifically called casting-loam.

3. A vessel of clay; an earthen vessel.

And so into the lomes of meth and tubs of brine and other liquor he bestowed the parts of the dead carcasses of his brother's sermits.
Hobinshed, Hist. Eng., viii. 7.

Loam-and-sand core. See core.

loam (lōm), v. t. [loam, n.] To cover or coat with loam; clay.

With the ashes of bones tempered with oil, Camels hair, and a clay they have, they loam them so well that no weather will pierce them.
Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 32.

The joist ends and girders, which be in the walls, must be loamed all over to preserve them from the corroding of the mortar.
F. Moron, Mechanical Exercises.

loam-beater (lōm'bē'tēr), n. In foundry-work, an instrument for compacting loam in loam-molding; a molder's rammer.

loam-board (lōm'bōrd), n. A foundry's tool and templet used in making cores of loam. It is a board cut to the shape of the core, and is used both to hold a supply of loam for the operation, and as an aid in turning the dried core down to the exact shape. Also called strickle.

loam-cake (lōm'kāk), n. In foundry-work, a cake, plate, or disk of compacted loam used to cover in a loam-mold. It is provided with holes or gales through which the molten metal enters the mold, and with other holes or vents for free exit of air from the mold.

loam-mold (lōm'mōld), n. A mold made from casting-loam. Such molds are used for castings of iron and brass.

loam-molding (lōm'mōl'ding), n. In foundry-work, the making of loam-molds in general. The term is used especially of the act of striking up the surfaces of molds by means of templets controlled by parallel guides, or, in case the surfaces are cylindrical, by a central pivot and radial arms, to which the templets are attached. Sometimes cores are formed on a barrel or central cylinder, and then turned on the barrel by means of a tool resting on the loam-board.

loam-plate (lōm'plāt), n. In foundry-work, a flat ring or plate of cast-iron, used in constructing a loam-mold, one or more of which are used to support and clamp together the brickwork which supports the softer parts of the mold.

loam-work (lōu'wērk), n. In foundries, the processes of making loam-molds, and casting iron, brass, etc., in them. Very fine castings are obtained by these processes.

loamy (lō'mi), a. [loam + -y]. 1. Consisting of loam; of the nature of or resembling loam: as, loamy soil.

And if it want binding, [mix] a little loamy earth.
Evelyn, Calendarium Hortense, May.

2. Damp. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

loan (lōn), n. [ME. loue, lanc, lan, < AS. lāu (in comp. lāland, for usual lāland), usually lān, a loan, grant, gift, fief, = OFries. lēn = D. leen, a grant, fief, = MLG. LG. lēn = OHG. lēhan, MHG. lehen, G. lehen, lehn, a fief, = Icel. lān, a loan, lēn, a fief, = Dan. laan = Sw. lāu, a loan (prob. = Skt. reknas, estate, wealth), akin to AS. līhan*, lōn = OHG. līhan, MHG. līhen, G. leihen = Icel. ljā = Goth. leiwan, lend, orig. 'leave,' = Ir. leim, leave, = Lith. līkti, leave behind (cf. OBulg. otā-lekū, remainder), = L. linquere (perf. liqui, pp. lictus*), leave, also in comp. relinquere, leave behind, = Gr. λείπειν, λείπειν, leave, = Skt. √rich, leave, let go, give up. Hence ult. lend. From the L. verb (linquere) are ult. E. delinquent, relinquish, relic, relict, reliquary, derelict, etc., and from the same root license, licit, illicit, leisure, etc. From the (r. verb (λείπειν) are ult. E. clipse, clipse, words in lipa, etc.] 1. A grant; gift; reward.

They may now, God be thanked of his loane! Maken hir jubilee, and walke allone.
Chaucer, C. T. (Summoner's Tale), l. 11,903 (ed. Gilman).

2. That which is lent; anything furnished on condition of the future return of it, or of the delivery of an equivalent in kind; especially, a sum of money lent at interest.

I lowe hym that this lane has lente, For he may stynte our stryve, And fende vs fro alle ille.
York Plays, p. 53.

Advantaging their loan with interest of ten times double gain of happiness.
Shak., Rich. III., iv. 4. 232.

What e'er is given the Strange and Needy one, Is not a gift (indeed), but 'tis a Loan.
A Loan to God, who pays with interest.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Vocation.
 The person whom you favoured with a loan, if he be a good man, will think himself in your debt after he has paid you.
Steele, Spectator, No. 346.

3. The act of lending or the condition of being lent; a lending: as, to arrange a loan.

I do not doubt To find, at some place I shall come at, arms On loan, or else for pledge.
Tennyson, Geraint.

[In civil law, when the loan was made of things which could be returned only by their material equivalent, it was called mutuum; when made of things which could be returned in the identical form, it was called commodatum.]

4. Permission to use; grant of the use: as, a loan of credit.—Gratuitous loan, in law, same as commodate.—Loan and trust company. See bank, 4. —Public loan, money borrowed by, or the lending of money to, the state at a fixed rate of interest.

loan (lōn), v. [loan], n. The older verb, from the same noun in its older form, is lend, q. v. I. trans. To lend. [An objectionable use, rare in Great Britain.]

Loan for lend, with which we have hitherto been blackened, I must retort upon the mother island, for it appears so long ago as in "Albion's England."
Lowell, Biglow Papers, 2d ser., Int.

The practice of loaning money.
Westminster Rev.

II. intrans. To lend money or other property; make a loan. [U. S.]

loan (lōn), n. [ME. loue, a var. of laue, > E. lane; see lane]. 1. A lane. [Scotch and prov. Eng.]

The Captain of Bewcastle, and Jephtha's John, Coming down by the foul steps of Catlowdie's loan.
Pray of Support (Child's Ballads, VI. 120).

And darker gloaming brought the night: . . . The kye stood rowtin' 't the loan.
Burns, The Two Dogs.

2. An open space between fields of corn, left untilled as a passage for cattle; hence, a place near a village for milking cows. Also loaning. [Scotch and New Eng.]

loanable (lō'nā-bl), a. [loan + -able]. Capable of being loaned; specifically, capable of being, or intended to be, loaned out at interest.

Free capital, loanable for a certain interval, is equally available for all classes of industry.
Jevons, Pol. Econ. (2d ed.), Pref., p. 56.

This . . . is distinctly visible among powerful classes in the North-Eastern States, which are the great possessors of loanable capital.
N. A. Rev., CXLIII. 214.

loaning (lō'ning), n. [loan + -ing]. Same as loan, 2.

Ye might have heard him a mile down the wind— he routed like a cow in a fremd [strange] loaning.
Scott, Old Mortality, xiv.

loan-office (lōn'of'is), n. 1. A public office at which loans are made or arranged.—2. A pawnshop, or pawnbroker's establishment.

loan-word (lōn'wērd), n. [loan + word; an imperfect adaptation of G. lehnwort, a 'lend-word,' < lehn, lend (see lend) + wort, word.] A borrowed word; a word taken into one language from another. [Rare.]

In the 15th century it [z] crept in from the French, and its use is even now pretty nearly restricted to foreign loan words, as Zebulon, Zedekiah, zigzag, zest, etc.
Isaac Taylor, The Alphabet, II. 142.

Loasa (lō'a-sā), n. [NL., of S. Amer. origin.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous herbs, of the natural order Loaseae, characterized by either opposite or alternate leaves and a capsule three- or five-valved at the apex, rarely twisted. The flowers are pentamerous, with enucleate petals, two to five scales, and ten filiform abortive stamens, besides numerous perfect ones. There are about 50 species, growing throughout tropical America, with the exception of northern Brazil and Guiana.

Loasaceae (lō-a-sā'sā-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Loasa + -aceae]. A synonym of Loaseae, still in common use.

loasaceous (lō-a-sā'shius), a. Pertaining to or having the characters of the order Loaseae.

loasad (lō'a-sād), n. A plant of the order Loaseae; in the plural, the order. Lindley.

Loaseae (lō-a-sā-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. L. de Jussieu, 1804), < Loasa + -eae]. An order of dicotyledonous plants composed of 10 genera and about 100 species, confined, with one exception, to warm and tropical America. They are herbaceous plants, often climbing, and usually covered with bristly hairs, secreting an acid juice. The flowers are perfect and regular with an adherent calyx, a four- or five-parted corolla, an indefinite number of stamens, and usually a one-celled ovary with a single filiform style. From their stinging properties, many are known as Chili nettles.

loath, loth (lōth), a. and n. [ME. loth, looth, lath, < AS. lāth, causing evil, evil, hateful, odious, grievous, also bearing hate, hostile, = OS. lēth, lēd = OFries. lēth, lēd = D. leed = MLG. lēt, leit = OHG. leith, hateful, painful, hostile, MHG. leit, G. leid, hateful, painful, = Icel. leithr = Sw. Dan. led, hateful, odious (cf. It. laido = OSp. OPg. laido = Pr. lait = F. laid, hateful, odious, < G.); as a noun (neut. of the adj.), AS. lāth, evil, wrong, = D. leed, evil, wrong, = MLG. lēt, leit = OHG. MHG. G. leid, evil, pain, = Dan. lede = Sw. leda, disgust, loathing, tedium; prob. from the verb represented by OHG. lidan, MHG. liden, G. leiden, suffer, supposed to be connected with OHG. lidan = AS. lithan = Goth. leithan, go, travel: see lode, lead]. The spelling loth is rather more common than loath in the adj.; but loath is common and is more in accordance with analogy (cf. oath), while derivatives of the verb, loathe, etc., are always spelled with oa. The forms are therefore more conveniently put together.] I. a. 1. Hateful; disliked; detested.

Allas! my lyff me is full loath, I lyffe onere lange this lere to lere.
York Plays, p. 50.

Men seyn right thus, "Alwey the nyk slye Maketh the ferre leeve to be loath."
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 207.

2. Feeling extreme unwillingness or aversion; very unwilling; reluctant; averse.

"My righte lady," quod this woful man, "Whom I moost drede, and love as I best kan, And lothest were of all this world displese."
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 585.

Loth he was to falsen his promyse of couenaunt.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 435.

They would be loath to set earthly things, wealth or honour, before the wisdom of salvation. Milton, True Religion.

Thus aged men, full loth and slow, The vanities of life forego. Scott, Rokeby, v. 1.

Lief or loath. See lief.

II. n. Evil; harm; injury.

Metes and drynke I 3af hem bothe, And bad hem kepe hem ay fro lothe.
Cursor Mundi, MS. Coll. Trin. Cantab. f. 31. (Halliwell.)

loathe (lō'thē), v.; pret. and pp. loathed, pp. loathing. [ME. lothen, < AS. lāthian (= OS. lēthōn = OHG. leidōn), be evil, hateful, lathan, hate (= OS. a-lēthian, disgust, = OHG. leidan, hate, = Icel. leitha, disgust), disgust, < lāth, hateful, loath: see loath, a.] I. intrans. 1. To be hateful or loathed; excite nausea, disgust, or abhorrence.

Where medicines loathe, it hiks men to be healed.
Chapman, Byron's Tragedy, iv. 1.

2. To feel nausea, disgust, or abhorrence.
 "This is more vile," he made reply,
 "To breathe and loathe, to live and sigh."
Tennyson, Two Voices.

II. trans. 1. To dislike greatly; hate; abhor.
 Hereby satan saved his credit, who loves to tell lies, but loathes to be taken in them.
Fuller, Church Hist., VI. iv. 2.

In my soul I loathe All affection. 'Tis my perfect scorn; Object of my implacable disgust.
Cowper, Task, ii. 416.

2. To cause to dislike or avoid; disgust.

[They] loathe men from reading by their covert, slanderous reproaches of the Scriptures.
Abp. Parker.

How heathly he serves me! his face loathes one, But look upon his care, who would not love him?
Middleton, Changeling, v. 1.

3. To feel disgust at; especially, to have an extreme aversion to, as food or drink.

Gladdi zeue thi tithis & thin offrynge bothe, The poore & the beedered, loke thou not lothe.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 37.

Each country hath observed their owne peculiar custome in this foode, some loathing that which others esteeme dainty.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 89.

Loathing the honey'd cakes, I long for bread.

Corley.

=Syn. 1. Hate, Abhor, Detest, etc. See hate.
loather (lō'thēr), n. One who loathes or abhors.
loathful (lō'th'fūl), a. [Formerly also lothful; < ME. lothful (?), lothful; < loath + -ful.] 1. Full of loathing; abhorring; hating.

Which when he did with loathfull eyes beholde, He would no more endure.
Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, l. 1313.
2. Exciting loathing or disgust; loathsome; hateful. [Now rare.]

And lothefull idleness he doth detest, The canker worme of everie gentle breast.
Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, l. 734.
The surface of the upper portion of the body (of a gigantic earthworm) shows a bright green color, of variable intensity, but otherwise it is a loathful animal.
Science, IV, 426.

loathing (lō'thīng), n. [< ME. lothing; verbal n. of loathe, v.] Extreme disgust; abhorrence.
A surfeit of the sweetest things The deepest loathing to the stomach brings.
Shak., M. N. D., II, 2, 138.

loathingly (lō'thīng-li), adv. [< loathing + -ly.] With loathing or extreme disgust or abhorrence.

loathliness (lō'thī'li-nes), n. [Formerly also lothliness; < loathly + -ness.] The quality of being loathly; loathsomeness.
The beauty of vertue, and the deformity and lothelynes of vice.
Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, III, 21.

The more ill savour and loathliness we can find in our bosom sins, the nearer we come to the purity of that Holy One of Israel, our Blessed Redeemer.
Bp. Hall, Remains, p. 188. (Latham.)

loathly (lō'thī'li), a. [Formerly also lothly; dial. also loithly, huddy; < ME. lothli, loothly, lothlich, lothelich, lodli, lodlich, etc., < AS. lōthlic, hateful; < loth, hateful, + -lic, E. -ly².] Loathsome; disgusting. [Archaic.] Thou art so loathly and so odd also.
Chaucer, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 243.

Her face most fowle and filthy was to see, With squinted eyes contrarie wayes intended, And loathly mouth, unmeete a mouth to be.
Spenser, F. Q., IV, 1, 27.
The loathly toad out of his hole doth erawl.
Dryden, Polyolbion, II, 165.

loathly (lō'thī'li), adv. [Formerly also lothly; < ME. *lothly, lodly, < AS. lōthlice, hatefully, < lōthlic, hateful; see loathly, a. In def. 2, modern, < loath + -ly².] 1. In a loathsome manner; disgustingly.
He shal him travayle day and nigt, And lodly his body digt.
Cursor Mundi, MS. Coll. Trin. Cantab. f. 46. (Halliwell.)
So loathly wreched a street as this same Cowgate.
The Atlantic, III, 368.

2. Unwillingly; reluctantly.
Private tongues, of kinsmen and allies, Inspired with comforts, lothly are endured.
B. Jonson, Sejanus, III, 1.
This shows that you from nature loathly stray.
Donne.

loathness (lō'thī'nes), n. [*< ME. lothnes, loithnes; < loath + -ness.] The state of being loath; unwillingness; reluctance.
Thof it be laifull to ladys and other les wemen, yet it ledis vnto loithnes and vnlefe werkes.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 2949.

And the fair soul herself Weigh'd between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam should bow.
Shak., Tempest, II, 1, 130.
After they had sat about the fire, there grew a general silence and loathness to speak.
Bacon, Nat. Hist.

loathsome (lō'thī'sum), a. [< ME. lothsum; < loath + -some.] Such as to cause loathing or excite disgust; disgusting; odious; detestable.
Tho gan he her perswade to leave that lewd And loathsom life.
Spenser, F. Q., III, x, 51.
But this mole-eyed, dragon-tailed abomination [a crocodile] . . . was utterly loathsome.
G. W. Curtis, Nile Notes of a Howadji, xv.

=Syn. Nauseous, nauseating, revolting, sickening, abominable, hateful.
loathsome (lō'thī'sum-li), adv. [< loathsome + -ly.] In a loathsome manner; disgustingly.
loathsomeness (lō'thī'sum-nes), n. [< loathsome + -ness.] The quality of being loathsome, or of exciting strong dislike or disgust.
Heeds must be taken that such rules or sentences be cholly made, and not often vsed, least exccesse breed loth-somenesse.
Putterham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 197.

loathy (lō'thī), a. [< loath + -y.] Cf. loathly, a. Loathsome. [Obsolete or archaic.]
The loathy floor of liquid mud lay bare beneath the mangrove forest.
Kingsley, Westward Ho, p. 331.

loaves, n. Plural of loaf¹.
lob¹ (lob), n. [Also lobb; < ME. lobbe (in comp. lobbe-keking); perhaps < W. lob, a dull, unwieldy fellow. Cf. AS. lobbe, a spider (see top³); Icel. lubbi, a shaggy long-haired dog. Cf. also looby, lubber.] 1. A dull, sluggish person; a lout. [Obsolete or archaic.] Farewell, thou lob of sprits [Puck]; I'll be gone.

Shak., M. N. D., II, 1, 16.

But as the drone the honey hive doth rob, With worthy books so deals this idle lob.
Gascogne, A Remembrance.
This is the wonted way for quacks and cheats to gull country lobs.
Bp. Gauden, Anti-Baal-Berith (1661), p. 12.

2. The last person in a race. [Prov. Eng.]—
3. Something thick and lumpish; a lump.—
4. A thick, soft mixture. See the quotation, and compare loblolly.
Before the yeast is placed in the tun [in brewing], it is mixed with a small quantity of wort, and left in a warm place until fermentation commences, when the mixture, termed lobb, may be added to the gyle in the tun.
Spencer's Encyc. Manuf., I, 402.

5. A lobworm.—
6. The pollack.
The lob alluded to in the statute of Herringes (31 Edward III., A. D. 1357) evidently meant this fish.
Day, Fishes of Great Britain, I, 297.

7. The coalfish.—
8. [< lob¹, v.] In cricket, a low slow ball.—
9. In lawn-tennis, a play by which one of the contestants knocks the ball over the head of his opponent into the back part of the court.—
Lob lie-by-the-fire. See the quotation.

Lob Lie-by-the-fire—the Lobber-flend, as Milton calls him—is a rough kind of Brownie or House Elf, supposed to haunt some north-country homesteads, where he does the work of the farm-labourers, for no grander wages than "—to earn his cream-bowl duly set."
. . . It was said that a Lob Lie-by-the-fire once haunted the little old Hall at Lingborough.
Mrs. J. H. Ewing, Lob Lie-by-the-Fire, Int.

lob¹ (lob), v.; pret. and pp. lobbed, ppr. lobbing. [< lob¹, n.] I. trans. 1. To throw (a lump or ball, etc.); toss gently or with a slow movement; specifically, in lawn-tennis, to strike (the ball) over the head of one's opponent into the back part of the court.
Suppose . . . that firing with reduced charges is required, that shells are being lobbed from behind a parapet at high angles into a work.
Encyc. Brit., XI, 313.

2. To kick. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]
II. intrans. To be tossed with a slow movement, as a cricket-ball or a shot.
Great escapes and some wounds from lobbing round-shot already.
W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I, 268.

lob² (lob), v.; pret. and pp. lobbed, ppr. lobbing. [Var. of top².] I. intrans. To hang down; drop or droop.
II. trans. To hang wearily or languidly; allow to drop or droop.
And their poor jades Lob down their heads.
Shak., Hen. V., IV, 2, 47.

lobar (lō'bār), a. [< lobe + -ar².] Of or pertaining to a lobe, as of the brain or lungs: as, lobar emphysema.
In the cases of lobar and lobular pneumonia that I have examined, none of the urines have turned red.
Lancet, No. 3427, p. 880.

Lobar pneumonia. See pneumonia.
Lobata (lō'bā'tā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lobatus, lobed; see lobate.] A division, ordinal or subordinal, of the class or order Ctenophora, including those comb-bearing hydrozooids or ctenophorans which have a pair of oral lobes; distinguished from Tenuata and Saecata. The Lobata are composed of such forms as Eurythamphaea, Bolina, Mnemia, Calymma, and Ocyrops.

lobate (lō'bāt), a. [< NL. lobatus, lobed, < lobus, a lobe; see lobe.] 1. Having a lobe or lobes; lobated; lobose; lobed; lobulate: as, a lobate leaf; a lobate fin or foot; a lobate rhizopod or ctenophoran.—
2. Having the form of a lobe: as, a lobate part or process.—
Lobate fin, in ichth. See the quotation.
The numerous dermal fin-rays [of Polypterus] . . . are connected with the rounded periphery of the broad and elongated disk formed by the skeleton of the fin; and the scaly integument is continued to the basis of the fin-rays, which thus seem to fringe a lobe of the integument. Hence the fin is said to be lobate.
Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 126.

Lobate foot, in ornith., a bird's foot of which the toes are separately lobed, as in the coot, phalarope, or grebe.
lobated (lō'bā'ted), a. Same as lobate.
lobately (lō'bāt-li), adv. [< lobate + -ly.] In bot., in such a manner as to form lobes.—
Lobately crenate, in bot., having crenatures or indentations so deep as to form a series of small lobes.
lobation (lō'bā'shōn), n. [< lobate + -ion.] The formation of lobes; the act or process of Lobate Ctenophoran (Eurythamphaea vesiculigera).

forming or dividing into lobes; the state of being lobed.

Lobation is usually associated with semipalmation, as is well seen in the grebe. In the snipe-like phalaropes, lobation is present as a modification of a foot otherwise quite cursorial. The most emphatic cases of lobation are those in which each joint of the toes has its own flap.
Coates, Key to N. A. Birds, p. 181.

lobb (lob), n. See lob¹.
lobber (lob'ēr), v. i. Same as lopper². [Local, U. S.]

lobbing† (lob'ing), n. [Verbal n. of lob¹, v.] Tumult; uproar.
What a lobbing makest thou, With a twenty Devill!
Marriage of Witt and Widdone (1579). (Halliwell.)

lobbish†, a. [< lob¹ + -ish¹.] Clownish; lubberish.
Their lobbish guard, who all night had kept themselves awake with prating how vallant deeds they had done when they ran away, . . . awaked them.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, IV.

lobby (lob'i), n.; pl. lobbies (-iz). [*< OF. lobie, < ML. lobia, lobium, laubia, a portico, covered way, gallery, < OHG. loubā, loupā, MHG. loube, G. laube, an arbor, < OHG. loub, MHG. loup, G. laub = E. leaf, q. v. Cf. lodge and lower, from the same source.] 1. An inclosed space surrounding or communicating with one or more apartments. (a) A small hall or waiting-room serving as the entrance into a principal apartment, where there is a considerable space between such apartment and a portico or vestibule; especially, such a hall or anteroom in a theater or adjacent to a legislative or audience chamber.

If you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.
Shak., Hamlet, IV, 3, 39.

(b) hulk about, and run thyself into the next great man's lobby.
Wycherley, Plain Dealer, III, 1.
(c) Naut., an apartment immediately before the captain's cabin.
2. Persons who occupy or resort to the lobby or the approaches to a legislative chamber for the purpose of transacting business with the members, and especially of influencing their official action or votes. [U. S.]

lobby (lob'i), v.; pret. and pp. lobbied, ppr. lobbying. [< lobby, n.] I. intrans. To frequent the lobby of a legislature or other deliberative body for the purpose of influencing the official action of members; solicit votes from members, whether in the lobby or elsewhere. [U. S.]
Lobbying should be made the object of incessant war and corrective enactment, until it is driven from legislative halls.
N. A. Rev., CXL, 311.

II. trans. To promote or carry by solicitation of legislative favor or votes: as, to lobby a measure through Congress. [U. S.]

lobbyist (lob'i-ist), n. [< lobby + -ist.] One who frequents the lobby or the precincts of a legislature or other deliberative assembly, with the view of influencing the votes of members. [U. S.]
But the arrangements of the committee system have produced and sustain the class of professional lobbyists, men, and women too, who make it their business to "see" members and procure, by persuasion, importunity, or the use of inducements, the passing of bills, public as well as private, which involve gain to their promoters.
J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I, 156.

lobby-member (lob'i-mem'ber), n. A lobbyist; one who makes a business of influencing the action or votes of a legislature. [U. S.]
lob-coat, n. Same as lobe-cock.

Cares not a groate For such a lob-coate.
The Wit of a Woman (1604). (Nares.)
lobcock† (lob'kok), n. [< lob¹ + cock¹, used as a diminutive.] A stupid, sluggish, inactive person; a lob.
Such a calfe, such an asse, such a blocke, . . . such a lobcocke.
Udall, Reister Doister, III, 3.

lob-dotterel† (lob'dot'ēr-el), n. A loutish fool.
Gronthead gnat-snappers, lob-dotterels, gaping change-lings.
Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, I, 25.
lobe (lōb), n. [< F. lobe = Sp. Pg. It. lobo, < NL. lobus, a lobe, < Gr. λοβός, the lobe of the ear or of the liver, the pod of a leguminous plant; prob. also λειπίς, a scale, husk, peel, λείπειν, peel; see lepis.] A rounded and more or less globular projection or part. (a) In anat., a large natural division of an organ, as of the liver, lungs, brain, etc.; also, the lower soft part of the ear; the lobule. Especially—
(1) One of several definite and considerable parts of each half of the cerebrum, or each hemisphere of the brain, separated superficially by certain well-marked fissures or sulci. In ordinary language these lobes or major divisions are the frontal, parietal, and occipital, or the fore, middle, and hind divisions. But by carefully considering the course of the three great fissures of each hemisphere, namely the Sylvian, the Rolandic, and the parieto-occipital, we find these to demarcate four cerebral lobes, named frontal, parietal, temporosphenoidal, and occipital; and by considering the two main forks of the Sylvian fissure, a fifth lobe is recognizable, called the central lobe, insula, or island of Reil. Again, the frontal lobe is sometimes regarded as two; then six lobes are recognized by name, called prefrontal, postfrontal, parietal, temporal, occipital, and central (the last being the insula). These lobes only concern the topography of the surface of the cerebrum, and are in no way related to the fundamental segments or primitive divisions of the brain as a whole, being all of them parts of the prosencephalon alone. Lesser divisions of the lobes are called convolutions, gyres, or gyri. (2) In the cerebellum, a group or cluster of folia demarcated by unusually deep rimulae or fissures.

Certain of the interfoliar crevices are so deep or so distinct as to warrant the recognition of the intervening groups of folia or lobes.

Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, p. 125.

(b) In bot., a rounded projection or division of a leaf, fruit, or other organ of a plant. (c) In zool., a projection or part which is imperfectly separated from another part: as, the lobes of the maxillæ in insects. (d) In mach., the larger or more prominent part of a cam-wheel. Anterior lobe of the cerebellum, the anterosuperior lobe. Anterior superior lobe of the cerebellum, the anterosuperior lobe. Anterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum, the anterior portion of the upper surface of one or the other cerebellar hemisphere, divided into the anterior and posterior crescentic lobes. Also called quadrate or square lobe and lobus or lobulus quadrangularis. Biventral lobe. Same as digastric lobe of the cerebellum. Caudate lobe of the liver. See caudate. Central lobe of the cerebellum, the anterior division of the superior vermis, behind the lingua and in front of the monticulus. Also called lobulus centralis. Central lobe of the cerebrum. Same as insula. Crescentic anterior and posterior lobe, the two divisions of the anterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum. Also called lobus or lobulus lunatus anterior and lobus or lobulus lunatus posterior. Cuneate lobe, the cuneate gyrus, the triangular tract on the median surface of the occipital lobe of the cerebrum bounded by the parieto-occipital and calcarine fissures. Digastric lobe of the cerebellum. See cerebellum. Epi-gastric lobes. See epigastric. Falciform lobe, the limbic lobe together with the lamina septilobata; dentate convolution and fornix. Frontal lobe of the carapace. See frontal. Frontal lobe of the cerebrum, the anterior lobe of the cerebrum separated from the parietal by the fissure of Rolando, or central fissure. Gastric, genital, hepatic, hypogastric, intermaxillary lobe. See the adjectives. Inferior posterior lobe of the cerebellum. (a) The lobus semilunaris inferior. (b) The lobus semilunaris inferior together with the slender lobe. Lateral lobes. See lateral. Limbic lobe, the gyrus fornicatus and gyrus hippocampi taken together. Marginal lobe, lobule, or gyrus, the convolution on the median surface of the cerebrum bounded below by the callosomarginal fissure. It is the median portion of the superior frontal convolution with the paracentral lobule. Occipital lobe, the posterior portion of the cerebrum marked off from the parietal lobe by the parieto-occipital fissure. Olfactory lobe, that process of the cerebral hemispheres which consists of the olfactory tract, and the olfactory bulb in which it ends. Orbital, procephalic, etc., lobe. See the adjectives. Parietal lobe of the cerebrum, the middle lobe of the vault of the cerebrum, separated from the frontal by the central fissure and marked off from the occipital by the parieto-occipital fissure. It is divided by the intraparietal fissure into a superior and an inferior parietal lobe. Posterior superior lobe of the cerebellum, the posterosuperior lobe. Posterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum, the posterior lobe of the upper surface of the cerebellum. Also called semilunar lobe or lobus semilunaris superior. Quadrate lobe, the anterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum. Quadrate lobe of the cerebrum, that part of the median surface of the cerebrum which lies between the parieto-occipital fissure and the posterior part of the callosomarginal fissure. Also called quadrate lobule and pre-cuneus. Semilunar lobe, the posterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum. Slender lobe, the lobe of the under surface of the cerebellar hemisphere which lies between the biventral lobe in front and the inferior semilunar lobe behind. Also called lobus or lobulus gracilis. Square lobe, the anterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum. Subpeduncular lobe. Same as focculus, 2. Temporocephaloid lobe, the lobe of the cerebrum which occupies the middle cerebral fossa of the skull: it is separated from the frontal and parietal lobes by the fissure of Sylvius. Also called temporal lobe. Uncinate lobe, the uncinate gyrus, the anterior hooked extremity of the hippocampal gyrus.

lobe-berry (lōb'ber'ī), n. The fruit of the seaside grape, Coccoloba uvifera, of the West Indies.

lobed (lōbd), a. [lobe + -ed]. Having a lobe or lobes; lobate; lobose; specifically, in bot., said of a leaf when the division extends not more than half-way to the middle, and either the sinuses or lobes are rounded; in entom., having a single lobe or lobe-like projection. Sometimes used, like lobate, to indicate a division into two or more lobes. Lobed joint of an antenna, a joint expanded laterally at the apex into a lobe. Lobed prosternum, a prosternum having an anterior rounded projection over the mouth. Lobed prothorax, a prothorax having a posterior projection of the upper surface, between the elytra, often concealing the scutellum.

lobefoot (lōb'fūt), n.; pl. lobefoots or lobefeet (-fūts or -fēt). A lobe-footed bird or lobiped: as, the northern lobefoot, Lobipes hyperboreus. See Lobipes.

lobe-footed (lōb'fūt'ed), a. Having lobate feet; lobiped, as a coot, grebe, or phalarope.

lobefet (lōb'let), n. [lobe + -let]. In anat., zool., and bot., a little lobe; a lobule.

Lobelia (lō-bē'li-ā), n. [NL., named after Matthias de Lobel, a Fleming, botanist and physician to James I. of England.] 1. A genus of gamopetalous plants, the type of the natural order Lobeliaceæ, distinguished by having the corolla-tube split down almost to the base, without a spur, and with a capsule which is two-valved at the summit. The plants are herba, rarely shrubby, with alternate leaves, and irregular five-parted flowers either axillary or in racemes. There are about 200 species, found in all warm and temperate regions, with the exception of central and eastern Europe and western Asia. Numerous species are cultivated for the beauty of their flowers, which are usually blue, scarlet, or purple. L. cardinalis is the cardinal-flower, and L. syphilitica is sometimes called the blue cardinal-flower. (See cardinal-flower.) L. Dortmanna grows in the water of shallow lakes in northern Europe and America, and is called water-lobelia. L. coronata is called buck's-horn on account of its forked leaves. L. Erinus of the Cape of Good Hope is the common little spreading bell-shaped conservatory and garden. L. fulgens and L. splendens from Mexico are conspicuous cultivated species. The official lobelia formerly employed as an emetic is L. inflata. It contains an acrid narcotic poison. It is a wide-spread American species.

Cardinal-flower (Lobelia cardinalis). 1. Inflorescence. 2. Lower part of stem. a, flower; b, stamen; c, pistil; d, upper part of the pistil and stamen-tube; e, transverse section of the fruit.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

Lobeliaceæ (lō-bē-li-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. L. de Jussieu, 1811), < Lobelia + -accæ.] An order of gamopetalous plants, typified by the genus Lobelia, embracing 28 genera, of which 24 belong to the tribe Lobelieæ and 4 to the tribe Cypheæ. The order includes about 540 species, growing in nearly all but the frigid regions of the globe. Five of the genera occur in North America. The plants of this order have been placed by many botanists in the Campanulaceæ, from which, however, they chiefly differ in their syngenesious flowers, which ally them to the Compositæ.

lobeliaceous (lō-bē-li-ā'shi-us), a. Pertaining to or resembling the Lobeliaceæ.

lobeliad (lō-bē-li-ad), n. [Lobelia + -ad.] A plant of the order Lobeliaceæ; used in the plural, the order itself. Lindley.

Lobelieæ (lō-bē-li-ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Presl, 1836), < Lobelia + -æ.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Lobeliaceæ, characterized by an irregular corolla, and having the anthers joined in a tube about the style. They are principally herbs with alternate leaves and the flowers axillary or growing in racemes. The group includes 24 genera, found principally in tropical or subtropical climates. The principal genus, and type of the tribe, is Lobelia.

lobeline (lō'bē-lin), n. [Lobelia + -ine]. An acrid poisonous principle procured from Lobelia inflata, said to resemble nicotine.

lobe-plate (lōb'plāt), n. Same as sole-plate.

lobi, n. Plural of lobus.

lobiole (lō'bi-ōl), n. [NL. lobiolus, dim. of lobus, lobe: see lobc.] In bot., one of the small lobes into which the thallus of some lichens is divided.

lobiped (lō'bi-ped), a. and n. [NL. lobipes (-ped-), < lobus, a lobe (see lobe), + L. pes (ped-) = Gr. πούς (pod-) = E. foot.] 1. A lobe-footed, as a bird; having lobate feet. 2. A lobe-footed bird.

Lobipes (lō'bi-pēz), n. [NL.: see lobiped.] 1. A genus of phalaropes of the family Scolopacidae, whose type is the northern phalarope, Lobipes hyperboreus; the lobefoots. Cuvier.—2. A genus of reptiles. Fitzinger, 1843.

loblolly (lōb'lōl-i), n. [lob + lolly]. 1. A loutish or foolish person.

This lob-lolly with slauering lipa would be making lone. Breton, Grimelot's Fortunes, p. 9. (Davies.)

2. Naut.: (a) Water-gruel or spoon-meat.

Whole grits boyled in water till they burst, and then mixt with butter and so eaten with spoons, which . . . seamen call simply by the name of loblolly. Markham. (Halliwell.)

(b) Medicines collectively. Also written, erroneously, loplolly.

The roughness of the language used on board a man of war where he [Dr. Johnson] passed a week on a visit to Captain Knight, disgusted him terribly. He asked an officer what some place was called, and received for answer that it was where the loplolly man kept his loplolly: a reply he considered as disrespectful, gross and ignorant. Mrs. Piozzi, Anec., p. 285 (Boswell's Johnson, ed. Hill, 1. 378).

loblolly-bay (lōb'lōl-i-bā), n. The popular name of the Gordonia Lasianthus, of the natural order Ternstroemiaceæ, an elegant ornamental tree of the southern United States. Also called tan-bay.

loblolly-boy (lōb'lōl-i-boi), n. Naut., a ship-surgeon's attendant, who compounds the medicines and assists the surgeon in his duties. In the United States navy called bayman or nurse.

. . . suffered from the rude insults of the aallors and petty officers, among whom I was known by the name of Loblolly Boy. Smollett, Roderick Random, xxvii.

loblolly-pine (lōb'lōl-i-pīn), n. A tree, Pinus Teda, growing in sterile soil in the southern Atlantic and Gulf States of North America. It yields fuel and inferior lumber, and to a small extent turpentine. It is also called old-field pine, and a better variety rosemary-pine.

loblolly-sweetwood (lōb'lōl-i-swēt'wūd), n. A tree, Sciadophyllum Jacquinii. [West Indies.]

loblolly-tree (lōb'lōl-i-trē), n. A tree of the genus Cupania, of the natural order Sapindaceæ, especially C. glabra; also a tree, Pisonia subcordata, of the order Nyctagineæ.

lobo (lō'bō), n. [Sp., a wolf, < L. lupus, a wolf: see wolf.] A large gray wolf of the southwestern United States, Canis lupus occidentalis.

loboite (lō'bō-it), n. [Named by Berzelius after the Chevalier Lobo da Silveira.] In mineral., a magnesian variety of vesuvianite or idocrase occurring in Norway.

Lobophora (lō-bōf'ō-rā), n. pl. Same as Marsupialida.

Lobosa (lō-bō'sā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lobosus, lobose: see lobose.] An order of the class Rhizopoda, characterized by their shapelessness and the constant protrusion of lobose processes called pseudopodia; the normal amoeboids or lobose protozoans: contrasted with Filosa. The order distinguishes the amoebiform protozoans from the Radiolaria, Heliozoa, Foraminifera, etc.

lobose (lō'bōs), a. [NL. lobosus, < lobus, a lobe: see lobe.] Having many or large lobes; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lobosa: as, the lobose protozoans.

We have left a certain small number of independent lobose Gymnomysxa which it is most convenient to associate in a separate group. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 842.

Lobostomatinae, Lobostominae (lō-bō-stō-mā-tī'nē, lō'bō-stō-mī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λοβός, lobe, + στόμα (stoma-), mouth, + -inæ.] A subfamily of bats of the family Phyllostomatidae, having simple nostrils without nose-leaf, but the chin with leaf-like appendages, and having 2 incisors in each upper and lower half-jaw, and 2 premolars above and 3 below on each side. There are two genera, Chilomycteris and Mormops.

Lobotes (lō-bō'tēz), n. [NL. (Cuvier, 1829), so called with ref. to the soft parts of the dorsal, anal, and caudal fins, likened to one 3-lobed fin; < Gr. λοβός, a lobe: see lobe.] The typical genus of Lobotinae, having bands of villiform teeth on the jaws, and an anterior series of larger conical teeth. L. surinamensis is the flasher or tripletall, a large fish, 2 or 3 feet long, found in all warm seas, and north on the Atlantic coast of the United States to Cape Cod.

Lobotes surinamensis.

Lobotidæ (lō-bōt'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lobotes + -idæ.] A family of sparoid fishes, typified by the genus Lobotes, having the vomer, palatines, and tongue toothless, the profile concave, the caudal fin convex, and the dorsal fin continuous. Also Lobotinae, as a subfamily of Sparidae.

lobret, n. A Middle English form of lubber.
lobscouse (lob'skous), n. [Also lobscourse, lapscourse (the form lobscourse simulating lob's course, 'a lubber's dish'); prob. < lobl, n., 4, + scouse, a general name on shipboard for a stew. Cf. lobolly, 2.] A dish made of pilot-biscuit, stewed in water with pieces of salt meat.

This genial banquet was entirely composed of sea-dishes; . . . the sides being furnished with a mess of that savoury composition known by the name of lob's course, and a plate of salmagundy. Smollett, Peregrine Pickle, ix.

lob-sided (lob'si'ded), a. Same as lopsided.
lobspound, lob's pound (lobz' pound), n. A pound for lobsters; a prison. "The term is still in use, and is often applied to the juvenile prison made for a child between the feet of a grown-up person." Halliwel.

He was the party
 Found in Lob's pound.
Massey, Duke of Milan, iii. 2.
 Crowdero, whom, in Irons bound,
 Thou basely threw'st into Lob's pound.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. iii. 910.

lobster (lob'stér), n. [Early mod. E. also lobstar, lopster; < ME. lopstere, loppester, loppi-ster, a lobster, a stoat, < AS. loppestre, loppstre, loppstre, a lobster; cf. loppst, a locust, for locust*, < L. locusta, a shell-fish, lobster, also a locust: see *locust*¹.] 1. A marine, stalk-eyed, long-tailed, ten-footed crustacean of the subclass Podophthalma or Thoracostraca, order Decapoda, suborder Macrura, family Homaridae, and genus Homarus, such as H. vulgaris of Europe or H. americanus of the Atlantic coast of North America. The lobster has two pairs of feelers, one pair short, the other remarkably long. The mouthparts are modified legs, as in all crustaceans and other arthropods. The first pair of ambulatory legs are enormously and unsymmetrically enlarged and chelate, being the great so-called "claws." The other four pairs of legs are smaller and more strictly ambulatorial, ending in simple pincers or single hooks. The cephalothorax is a large sordid carapace. The abdomen or tail is long, jointed, and flexible, consisting of hard rings or segments on top and at the sides, and of a soft but tough membrane underneath, which bears the pleopods, swimmerets, or swimming-feet; it ends in a set of shelly plates, the telson, spreading like a fan, used in swimming. The hairy flaps or processes attached to the roots of the walking-legs are the gills or breathing-organs. The female carries masses of eggs (the coral or berry) under the abdomen. The most fleshy parts are the muscles of the great claws and of the tail. The eyes are mounted on short movable stalks, the ophthalmites. Lobsters are carnivorous and predatory. They live chiefly on rocky sea-coasts. They molt or cast their shell periodically. The natural color is variously greenish, bluish, livid, etc.; the familiar bright-red color is due to boiling. The flesh is savory, and the lobster-industry is one of high economic importance.

American Lobster (Homarus americanus).

Finally of the legged kind we have not mantle, neither have I seen any more of this sort than the Polyyps called in English the lobstar, crabfish or creuls, and the crab.
Harrison, quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), ii. 97.

2. One of several other crustaceans resembling the above. The Norway lobster is Nephrops norvegicus, of the family Homaridae. Various crawfishes of the family Astacidae are sometimes called fresh-water lobsters. A related marine crustacean of the family Palaemonidae, Palaemon vulgaris, the sea-crawfish, is known as the spring lobster, rock lobster, and spiny lobster.

3. The common sole, Solea vulgaris. [Prov. Eng.]—4. A stoat. [Prov. Eng.]—5. A British soldier; probably so called originally in allusion to his cuirass, but the name is now generally supposed to refer to his red coat.

The women . . . exclaim against lobsters and tatterdemalions, and defy 'em to prove 'twas ever known in any age or country in the world that a red-coat died for religion.
Tonn Brown, Works, I. 73. (Davies.)

Bermuda lobster, a kind of shrimp, Palaemonus americanus. It is used for bait.—Berry lobster, a female lobster carrying spawn. Such lobsters are not legally marketable, and should be returned to the water when taken.—Black lobster, a lobster whose shell is black, or at least darker than usual. This animal is always in good condition, with a very hard shell, and is preferred to those lighter-colored ones which have more recently shed their shells.—Chick-en or grasshopper lobster, an undersized lobster, too small to be legally marketable. The laws of some States prohibit the sale of lobsters under 10 inches long.—Norway lobster, the Nephrops norvegicus. See Nephrops.—Spanish lobster, Scyllarus arctus, used as bait in the Bermudas.—Spiny lobster. See def. 2.—Stone-lobster, the short-armed hermit-crab, Eupagurus pulcherrimus; so called by fishermen.

lobster-car (lob'stér-kär), n. A box or frame in which lobsters are kept alive under water awaiting sale or transport.
lobster-chum (lob'stér-chum), n. Refuse of lobsters, used for manure.

lobster-claws (lob'stér-kláz), n. A common marine alga, Polysiphonia elongata: so called from the long, cartilaginous, nearly naked branches, which bear tufts of filaments at the apex somewhat resembling the claws of the lobster.

lobster-crawl (lob'stér-král), n. A place where lobsters crawl and may be caught; a fishing-ground for lobsters.

lobstering (lob'stér-ing), n. [lobster + -ing.] The taking of lobsters.

In many regions the men engage in lobstering only when other fisheries, which are more profitable to them, cannot be carried on. Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 663.

lobsterize, v. i. [lobster + -ize.] To move backward, as a lobster is popularly supposed to do; crawfish.

Thou [Joshua] makest Rhiners the most deafy deep
 To lobsterize (back to their source to creep);
 Walls give thee way.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Captives.

lobster-louse (lob'stér-lous), n. A parasite of the lobster, Nicothoë astaci, a siphonostomous crustacean of the family Ergasilidae. See Nicothoë.

lobsterman (lob'stér-man), n.; pl. lobstermen (-men). One who catches lobsters.

Some of the lobstermen, who are also boat fishermen, save the heads of the fish in cleaning their catch to use as bait. Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 675.

lobster-moth (lob'stér-móth), n. A common European moth, Stauropus fugi: so called from the grotesque shape of the caterpillar. See Stauropus.

lobster-pot (lob'stér-pot), n. A pot or trap for lobsters. There are many patterns. The common house-pot is made of laths. The hand-pot is a circular iron hoop, as large as a hog's-head-hoop, having under it a net and over it wooden bows, with bait hung in the middle. It has often taken six or eight lobsters at once.

lobster-tail (lob'stér-tál), n. Any piece of armor made à queue d'écrevisse. See écrevisse.

The long lobster-tails which replaced the waist-piece and the tassettes.
Demmin, Arms and Armor (tr. by C. C. Black), p. 219.

lobster-tailed (lob'stér-táld), a. Resembling the shell of the lobster's tail: applied especially to armor composed of overlapping and sliding plates.

lobtail (lob'tál), v. i. [Also loptail; < lobl + tail.] To sport or play, as a whale, by raising the flukes out of water and bringing them down again flat. [Sailors' slang.]

lobular (lob'ū-lār), a. [lobule + *-ar*².] 1. Having the form of a lobule or small lobe.—2. Of or pertaining to lobules: as, a lobular vein.—Lobular bronchial tube, a bronchial tube which has been reduced to about one millimeter in diameter, and whose walls have begun to be set here and there with air-cells, but are not yet completely covered. It passes on into the alveolar passage. Also called respiratory bronchial tube.—Lobular pneumonia. Same as bronchopneumonia.

Lobularia (lob'ū-lā'ri-ä), n. [NL., < lobulus, a lobule: see lobule.] Same as Aleyonium. Lamarck, 1816.

lobulate (lob'ū-lät), a. [lobule + *-ate*¹.] Consisting of lobules or small lobes; having small lobed divisions.

lobulated (lob'ū-lä-ted), a. [lobulate + *-ed*².] Same as lobulate.

lobulation (lob'ū-lä'shon), n. [lobule + -ation.] The formation of lobules; division into lobules: as, lobulation of the kidneys.

lobule (lob'ūl), n. [= F. lobule = Sp. lobulo = Pg. It. lobulo, < NL. lobulus, dim. of lobus, a lobe: see lobe.] A little lobe; especially, one of the lesser divisions of the surface of the brain; a gyrus or convolution of the cerebrum, or a cluster of such gyri, of which there are several in each lobe, separated from one another by those lesser sulci or fissures which are called intralobular. — Cuneate lobule, the cuneus. — Fusiform lobule of the cerebrum, the subcollateral gyre. — Lingual lobule of the cerebrum, the subcalcarine gyre. — Lobule of the corpus striatum, lobule of the Sylvian fissure. Same as insula. — Lobule of the ear, the soft fleshy flap or lobe depending from the lower part of the external ear, highly characteristic of the human species. — Paracentral lobule, the posterior part of the marginal gyrus about the upper extremity of the central fissure. It is more or less distinctly marked off from the parts in front by a slight fissure.—Pneumogastric lobule. Same as flocculus, 2.

lobulus (lob'ū-lus), n.; pl. lobuli (-li). [NL., dim. of lobus, a lobe: see lobe. Cf. lobule.] 1. In anat., any small lobe or lobe-like structure; a lobule.—2. In entom., one of the rounded and quite distinct segments of the base of the wing in the dipterous family Muscidae and in some hymenopterous insects.—Lobulus caudatus, the tailed lobe of the liver, connecting the right lobe with the Spligellian lobe.—Lobulus centralis, the central lobule or lobe. See central.—Lobulus cuneatus, the wedge-shaped lobule of the brain, a mass of convolution between the calcarine fissure and the parieto-occipital fissure.—Lobulus cuneiformis, the digastric lobe.—Lobulus gracilis, the slender lobe.—Lobulus lunatus, the crescentic lobe.—Lobulus paracentralis. See paracentral lobule, under lobule.—Lobulus præcuneus. Same as lobulus quadratus (a).—Lobulus quadrangularis. See anterosuperior lobe, under lobe.—Lobulus quadratus. (a) Of the brain, a mass of cerebral convolutions, approaching a square form, between the callosomarginal and the parieto-occipital fissure. (b) See anterosuperior lobe of the cerebellum, under lobe. (c) Of the liver, the square lobe of the liver on the under surface, between the fissure for the gall-bladder and the umbilical fissure.—Lobulus semilunaris inferior. See lobus semilunaris inferior, under lobus.—Lobulus semilunaris superior. See posterosuperior lobe, under lobe.—Lobulus Spigelii, the Spigelian lobe of the liver, at the back part of the under surface of the right lobe, between the fissure for the vena cava and that for the ducta venosa.—Lobulus triangularis, the cuneus.—Lobulus vagi, the flocculus.

lobus (lob'bus), n.; pl. lobi (-bi). [NL., < Gr. λοβός, a lobe: see lobe.] In anat. and zool., a lobe. Lobus biventer, lobus cuneiformis. Same as digastric lobe of the cerebellum (which see, under cerebellum).—Lobus centralis. (a) The insula. (b) See central lobe of the cerebellum, under lobe.—Lobus falciformis. See falciform lobe, under lobe.—Lobus gracilis. See slender lobe, under lobe.—Lobus limbicus. See limbic lobe, under lobe.—Lobus lunatus anterior. See crescentic anterior and posterior lobe, under lobe.—Lobus lunatus posterior. See crescentic anterior and posterior lobe, under lobe.—Lobus olfactorius. See olfactory lobe, under lobe.—Lobus paracentralis. See paracentral lobule, under lobule.—Lobus parietalis superior and inferior. See parietal lobe, under lobe.—Lobus quadrangularis. See anterosuperior lobe, under lobe.—Lobus quadratus. See quadrant lobe, under lobe.—Lobus semilunaris inferior, the posterior lobe on the under surface of the cerebellar hemispheres, lying behind the slender lobe.—Lobus semilunaris superior. See posterosuperior lobe, under lobe.

lobworm (lob'wèrm), n. [lob, < ME. lobwyrme (see quot.); < lobl + worm.] The lugworm. Also lob.

Loburjone [read lobwyrme], blake or wyghte snayle, H. max.
Prompt. Parv., p. 310.

lobyt, n. and a. A Middle English form of looby.

local (lò'kal), a. and n. [F. local = Sp. Pg. local = It. locale, < LL. localis, belonging to a place, < L. locus, a place: see locus.] 1. a. 1. Relating to place or position in space; of or pertaining to situation or locality in general.—2. Of or pertaining to a particular place; relating to a particular place or to particular places, generally implying more than mere position or situation: as, local considerations; local knowledge; a local newspaper; a local item in a newspaper; also, limited to a certain spot or region; circumscribed: as, local laws, customs, or prejudices; a local disease or remedy.

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
 Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,
 And as imagination bodies forth
 The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
 Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
 A local habitation and a name. Shak., M. N. D., v. 1. 17.

The spiritual force of Protestantism was a mere local militia, which might be useful in case of an invasion, but could not be sent abroad.

Macauley, Von Ranke's Hist. of Popes.
 Plants with sweet-scented flowers are, for the most part, more intensely local, more fastidious and idiosyncratic, than those without perfume.

J. Burroughs, Notes of a Walker.

3. In gram., relating to place or situation: as, a local adverb (as here, there, etc.).—4. In math., relating to or concerning a locus.—Chose local. See *chose*².—Local action. (a) In elect., the electrical action which is set up between different parts of a non-homogeneous plate of conducting material when it is immersed in an electrolyte. (b) In law, an action which must be brought in the particular country where the cause of action arose, such as an action to recover lands.—Local affection, in med., a disease or ailment confined to a particular part or organ, and not directly affecting the system.—Local allegiance. See allegiance, 1.—Local anemia. See anemia.—Local asphyxia. Same as Raynaud's disease (which see, under disease).—Local attraction. (a) In magnetism, attraction causing a compass-needle to deviate from its proper direction, exerted by objects in its immediate neighborhood, especially on shipboard. (b) In astron., attraction due to irregularities in the density or form of the earth's crust, which causes gravity at a station to deviate from its normal direction.—Local authority, in the English law of municipal corporations, a class of boards of trustees, commissioners, etc., having the supervision of some distinct department of municipal regulation, such as burial, sanitation, police, etc.—Local board, a board of officers whose powers are local; more specifically, in Eng. law, a board of officers elected by the rate-payers of a district to administer some part of the local affairs therein.—Local chancery, same as chancery.—Local circuit, in teleg., a circuit in a telegraph-station containing the recording or other receiving instrument and a battery, and also a delicate relay operated by the line-current, by means of which the signals are repeated in the local circuit, the recorder or sounder being operated by the battery in that circuit.—Local-circuit battery, a battery used in a local circuit.—Local color. See color.—Local court, a court whose jurisdiction is territorially limited to a comparatively small district, such as a single county, city, or town.—Local currents, currents due to local action; also, in teleg., currents in a local circuit.—Local degree, equation. See the nouns.—Local government, the regulation and administration of the local affairs of a city or district by the people of it, as distinguished from such regulation and administration by authority of the state or nation at large.—Local Government Act. (a) An English statute of 1858 (21 and 22 Vict., c. 98), relating to the public health and sanitary control, whose provisions take effect in particular places only when the act is adopted by the local authorities. It has been frequently amended. (b) An English statute of 1888 (51 and 52 Vict., c. 41), initiating a system for the local self-government of the various counties of England and Wales (or in some cases divisions of a county), and of a large number of boroughs (and in the case of London of a district consisting of parts of three counties), and organizing in each a government under the control of its people, for municipal purposes. Its chief feature is the transfer from departments of the imperial government, to a county council in each, of the regulation of local affairs, such as highways, health, education, etc.—Local Government Board, a department of the English government under the act of Parliament of August, 1871 (34 and 35 Vict., c. 70), having supervision of the laws relating to the public health, the relief of the poor, registration of births, etc., and other matters of local government, including (under 35 and 36 Vict., c. 70) highways and turnpikes.—Local immunity. See immunity.—Local improvements, improvements by public works, such as bridges, parks, etc., which benefit chiefly a particular locality rather than the state at large.—Local law. See statute.—Local legislation, local statute, such legislation or statute as is in terms applicable not to the state at large, but only to some district or locality and to the people therein. See legislation.—Local motion, motion in the ordinary sense of change of place; locomotion, as opposed to augmentation, diminution, and deformation.—Local option, the determination by vote of the people of a town or other minor political community as to whether or not any licenses to sell intoxicating liquors shall be granted; a principle of law established in some of the United States and advocated in others. The principle has also obtained recognition in England.—Local preacher. (a) In the Meth. Epis. Ch., one who is licensed to preach within a certain district, generally as an assistant to the pastor and as a candidate for ordination. (b) In England, a dissenting clergyman who preaches at different places. Hallivell.—Local probability, a branch of mathematics which considers the mean values of geometrical magnitudes conforming to certain conditions, and the like. For example, it is a proposition in local probability that if three points are taken at random within a triangle, the mean of the small triangle will be one twelfth that of the large one.—Local problem, a problem in which the thing sought is a geometrical locus.—Local proposition, in logic, a proposition consisting of two clauses united by a local adverb; as, "Where there is smoke there is fire."—Local sign, in psychol., something which is supposed to distinguish the impressions made upon one nerve-termination from those made upon another, and which serves especially to render possible, or to facilitate, the perception of objects as extended in space. The theory of local signs was propounded by H. Lotze. See the quotation.

Every impression of color—for example, red—produces on all places of the retina which it reaches the same sensation of redness. In addition to this, however, it produces on each of these different places, A, B, C, a certain accessory impression, a, b, c, which is independent of the nature of the color seen, and dependent merely on the nature of the place excited. This second local impression would therefore be associated with every impression of color r, in such manner that ra signifies a red that acts on the point A, rb signifies the same red in case it acts on the point B. These associated accessory impressions would, accordingly, render for the soul the clue by following which it transposes the same red, now to one, now to another spot, or simultaneously to different spots in the space intimated by it. . . . The foregoing is the theory of local signs. Lotze, Short Psychology (trans.).

Local space, an extended volume: opposed to a space of time.—Local time, time reckoned from the instant of transit of the mean sun (or, in the case of sidereal time, of the first point of Aries) over the local meridian.—Local value, the value pertaining to the place of a digit in the ordinary system of arithmetic.

II. n. 1. A local item in a newspaper. [U. S.]—2. In teleg.: (a) A local-circuit battery. (b) The circuit itself, including everything belonging to the current in an office or station except the line-wire and the instruments included in the line-circuit.

locale (lō-kāl'), n. [F. local, a locality: see local. The spelling is false, appar. in simulation of morale.] A place, spot, or locality; specifically, a site or scene, considered with reference to circumstances connected with it.

But no matter—lay
The locale where you may;
And where it is no one exactly can say.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 227.

localisation, localise. See localization, localize. localism (lō-kāl-izm), n. [local + -ism.] 1. The state or condition of being local or localized; limitation to a place or to a locality; also, the influence exerted by a locality.

Some occult law of localism by which associated forms often become impressed with mutual resemblances.
Nature, XXX. 228.

2. Attachment to a locality, or a peculiar limited phase of thought or feeling growing out of such attachment; provincialism; in general, any product of local influences: as, the localism of one's views or affections.

Congress is simply an aggregate seething and struggling of a great number of localisms—rarely or never losing themselves in the stream of national or patriotic feeling.
S. Bowles, in Merriam, II. 428.

3. A mode of speaking or acting peculiar to a place; a local idiom, phrase, or custom.

localistic (lō-kāl-ist'ik), a. [local + -istic.] 1. Relating or pertaining to localization; of localized character or quality.

The confirmation of the localistic theory of cholera . . . can no longer be put in question. Pop. Sci. Mo., XX. 336.

2. Having the character of localism or a localism.

locality (lō-kāl'i-ti), n.; pl. localities (-tiz). [= F. localité = Sp. localidad = Pg. localidade = It. località, < LL. localita(t)-s, locality (as a quality of bodies), < localis, belonging to a place: see local.] 1. The condition of being in a place; position or situation in general; the immediate relation of an object to a place.

Fond Fancy's eye,
That inly gives locality and form
To what she prizes best.
W. Mason, English Garden, iii.

2. Any part of space; a situation; position; particularly, a geographical place or situation: as, a healthy locality; the locality of a mineral, plant, or animal. Compare habitat, 2.

My first rambles, moreover, had a peculiar charm, which knowledge of locality has since taken away.
Hovells, Venetian Life, ii.

3. Legal restriction as to place or location.—4. In phren., the faculty to which is ascribed the power of remembering the details of places and the location of objects.—Absolute locality, that which belongs to a body irrespective of the locality of any other body.—Decree of locality. See decree.—Locality of a widow, in Scots law, the lands life-rented by a widow under her contract of marriage.—Relative or respective locality, the spatial relations of a body to other bodies.

localizable (lō-kāl-i-zā-bl), a. [localize + -able.] Capable of being localized, located, or fixed in or referred to a place.

The feelings classed as emotions, which are not localizable in the bodily framework.
H. Spencer, Dats of Ethics, p. 78.

localization (lō-kāl-i-zā'shōn), n. [localize + -ation.] 1. The act of localizing, or the state of being localized.

The contrast as to the centralization or localization of administrative power . . . between England and other civilized countries. Sir E. Creasy, Eng. Const., p. 332.

Specifically—2. The reference, in perception, of a sensation to some part of the body (as the place where it originates), or to some point in space outside of the body (as a quality of a perceived object).

Perception as a psychological term has received various, though related, meanings for different writers. It is sometimes used for the recognition of a sensation or movement as distinct from its mere presentation, and thus is said to imply the more or less definite revival of certain residua or re-presentations of past experience which resembled the present. More frequently it is used as the equivalent of what has been otherwise called the "localization and projection" of sensations—that is to say, a sensation presented either as an affection of some part of our own body regarded as extended or as a state of some foreign body beyond it.
J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 52.

Also spelled localisation.
Localization of cerebral functions, the existence of peculiarly close relations between the functions of the various peripheral nerves and certain limited areas of the cerebral cortex, so that the removal of one of these areas will involve the abolition of the voluntary control of the efferent nerves of a certain part, or, if sensory nerves are concerned, will preclude sensation from following their stimulation. On the other hand, stimulation of these same areas will give rise to a sensation as if in the part, or to definite muscular actions in the part.

localize (lō-kāl-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. localized, ppr. localizing. [local + -ize.] 1. To make local; fix in, or assign to or restrict to, a particular place; determine the locality or limit the extent of.

Thus everywhere to truth Tradition clings,
Or Fancy localizes Powers we love.
Wordsworth, Fancy and Tradition.

Specifically—2. To refer (a sensation) in perception to some point of the body or to some point in space outside of the body. See localization, 2.

If we turn away our eyes, we cease to see the flame at which we have been looking, but the after-image remains and is projected upon the wall, and continues still localized in the dark field of sight even if we close our eyes altogether.
J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 59.

Also spelled localise.
localizer (lō-kāl-i-zēr), n. [localize + -er.] A small coil of definite resistance placed at each station of an electric fire-alarm system, which is brought into the circuit when the alarm is given, thus enabling the observer at the receiving-station to know the locality from which the alarm is sent.

locally (lō-kāl-i), adv. With respect to place; in place: as, to be locally separated or distant.
locate (lō-kāt), v.; pret. and pp. located, ppr. locating. [L. locatus, pp. of locare, place, put, set, let, etc., < locus, a place: see local. Cf. allocate, allow, collocation, etc.] I. trans. 1. To fix in a place; establish in a particular spot or position; place; settle: as, to locate one's self in a certain town or street.

She was already "of a certain age," and, despairing of a lover, accepted the good old country squire, and was located for the rest of her life as mistress of Lonstead Abbey.
Farrar, Julian Home, p. 35.

2. To fix the place of; determine the situation or limits of: as, to locate the site of a building; to locate a tract of public land by surveying it and defining its boundaries; to locate a land-claim; to locate (lay out) the line of a railroad. [Chiefly U. S.]

That your Majesty would grant to his petitioners, . . . by the name of the Mississippi Company, 2,500,000 acres of land . . . to be located between the thirty-eighth and forty-second degree of north latitude.
Arthur Lee, Petition to King in Council (1768). (Bartlett.)

II. intrans. To reside; place one's self or be placed; adopt or form a fixed residence.

Beneath whatever roof they locate, they disturb the peace of mind and happiness of some confiding female.
Dickens, Pickwick, xviii.

location (lō-kā'shōn), n. [= F. location = Sp. locacion = Pg. locação = It. locazione, < L. locatio(n)-s, a placing, < locare, pp. locatus, place: see locate.] 1. The act of placing or settling: as, the location of settlers in a new country.—2. Situation with respect to place; place.

To say that the world is somewhere means no more than that it does exist; this, though a phrase borrowed from place, signifying only its existence, not location. Locke.

3. The act of fixing by survey, or otherwise determining, the site or bounds of a piece or tract of land (as under a claim for a specified quantity of public land), laying out the line of a railroad or canal, or the like. [Chiefly U. S.]—4. That which is located; a tract of land with boundaries designated or marked out. [U. S.]

A location is held to be that quantity of mining ground which one person may legally acquire by location, in one body.
Shinn, Land Laws of Mining Districts, p. 61.

An odd corner of a great township such as they measure off in these wilds, where they take in, with some eligible locations of intervalle land, miles also of pathless forest.
Mrs. Whitney, Leslie Goldthwaite, vi.

5. In civil law, a leasing on rent.—Contract of location, a contract of hiring either of the use of a chattel or of services in respect to a chattel, the possession of the chattel being in either case transferred for the purpose. Where the possession and use of the thing is hired, the contract is called locatio rei or locatio-conductio rei. Where the possession is transferred to one whose service in respect to the thing is hired, as where goods are delivered to a carrier, the contract is called locatio operum or locatio operis mercium vehendarum; or, if the service involves a resulting change in the thing, as where cloth is delivered to a tailor to make a garment, locatio operis faciendi.—Definitive location. See definitive.

locative (lōk'ā-tiv), a. and n. [= OF. locatif, < ML. locativus, < L. locare, place: see locate.] I. a. 1. In gram., indicating place, or the place where or wherein: as, a locative adjective; a locative case.—2. In anat. and zool., serving to locate or to indicate location or relative situation in a series. Thus, the name metencephalon or midbrain is locative of the part between extremes of a series.

The advantages of locative names.
Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII. 517.

II. n. In gram., a case-form indicating location, as existing in the original Indo-European or Aryan language, and preserved in some of its descendants, especially the Sanskrit. In Latin and Greek it is not ordinarily recognized as a separate case, but is found in a number of isolated examples, and in the former language in the established use of certain case-forms (generally called genitives and ablatives) of names of places.—Locative absolute. See absolute, a, 11.

locator (lō-kā-ter), n. [L. locator, one who lets, an undertaker, < locare, pp. locatus, place, let: see locate.] 1. One who locates land, or who settles upon land by claim of right or legal possession. [U. S.]

Here no locator encroaches upon his neighbor's claim. The Century, XXV, 585.

2. In law, the hirer in a contract of location.

loc. cit. An abbreviation of the Latin locus citato, 'in the place (already) cited.' Sometimes further abbreviated l. c.

locellate (lō-sel'at), a. [locellus + -ate.] Divided into locelli.

locellus (lō-sel'us), n.; pl. locelli (-i). [L., a little place, a compartment, dim. of loculus, a little place: see loculus.] In bot., a secondary cell, forming a subdivision of a loculus, whether in an anther or a seed-vessel.

loch¹ (lōch), n. [Gael. loch, a lake: see *lake*¹.] In Scotland, a lake in the general sense, or a lake-like body of water, as one of the narrow or partially landlocked arms of the sea, especially on the west coast, resembling the Norwegian fiords. In Ireland usually lough.

One burnish'd sheet of living gold,
Loch Katrine lay beneath him roll'd.
Scott, L. of the L., l. 14.

Kingsburgh conducted us in his boat across one of the lochs, as they call them, or arms of the sea, which flow in upon all the coasts of Sky. Boswell, Journal, p. 244.

loch² (lok), n. [Also lohoch; = F. lok, looch, look = Sp. loog = Pg. looch = It. loc, locco, < Ar. lo'og, an electrolyte, a lincture, < lo'og, lick.] A lincture.

Lochaber ax. A battle-ax having a long handle or staff, used by the Scottish Highlanders. In the typical form the blade is narrow, but of great length in the direction of the shaft, and projects beyond the end of the shaft either in a long point or with a hook.

lochán (lōch'an), n. [Gael. lochan, dim. of loch, a lake: see *loch*¹.] A small loch; a pond. [Scotch.] loche, n. An obsolete or archaic spelling of loch.

A pond or lochan, rather than a lake. H. Müller.

Lochia¹ (lō'ki-ä or lō-ki'ä), n. [Gr. Λοχία, also Λοχία, an epithet of Artemis, fem. of λόχος, also λοχίος, belonging to childbirth, from λόχος, a lying-in, childbirth (also an ambush, etc.: see Lochites), < λέγειν, lay, mid. lie: see *lie*¹.] 1. In Gr. myth., a surname of the goddess Artemis (Diana), as the protectress of women in childbirth.—2. [NL.] A genus of noctuid moths of the subfamily Cosmiinae, based upon the Australian L. apicalis. Walker, 1865.

Lochia² (lō'ki-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. Λοχία, evacuations following childbirth, neut. pl. of λόχος, belonging to childbirth: see *Lochia*¹.] In med., the evacuations from the womb and vagina which follow childbirth.

lochial (lō'ki-äl), a. [*Lochia*² + -al.] Of or pertaining to the lochia.

Lochites (lō-ki'tēz), n. [NL. (Foerster, 1856). < Gr. Λοχίτης, a fellow-soldier, a comrade, one of the same company, < λόχος, a company, band of troops, prop. a party in ambush, lit. a lying in wait, an ambush: see *Lochia*¹.] 1. A genus of parasitic Hymenoptera, of the chalcid subfamily Toryminae. The species are parasitic upon gall-making Cynipidae. Only European species have been described, although the genus is also represented in North America.

2. A genus of South American thamnophiline birds. Cabanis and Heine, 1857. Also called Nisius.—3. A genus of robber-flies of the family Asilidae. Schiner, 1866.

loch-moulinet (lok'mō-li-nā'), n. A form of electric log in which a telephone is substituted for the indicator, and a species of mill-wheel for the screw. See electric log, under *log*².

loci, n. Plural of locus.

lock¹ (lok), n. [ME. lok (pl. lokkes), < AS. loc, a bolt, bar, fastening, inclosure, fold, close, ending. = OFries. lok = MLG. lok = OHG. loh, MHG. loch, an inclosure, prison, dungeon, concealed place, hole, aperture, G. loch, a dungeon, a hole, aperture, = Icel. lok, a cover, lid, a locker, an end, conclusion, = Sw. lock = Dan. laag, a lid, = Goth. luk*, in comp. usluk, an opening; cf. ME. loke, < AS. loca, m., a bolt, bar, inclosure, = OD. loke = Icel. loka, a lock, latch, fastening; from the orig. strong verb, AS. lucan (pp. locen), etc., close, lock: see *lock*¹, v.] 1. Anything that fastens something else; specifically, an appliance for securing in position a door, gate, window, drawer, lid, etc., when closed, by means of a key, or of some secret contrivance requiring manipulation by one to whom it is known; hence, any device that prevents movement. The essential parts of an ordinary lock are a bolt, wards, tumbler, and a spring. The bolt is a bar which slides or catches in an opening made to receive it. The spring serves to maintain the bolt in one of two positions—that is, either extended or retracted—corresponding to locking and unlocking. The wards are strips of metal placed within the lock and designed to obstruct the passage of all keys except the one fitted to them. The tumbler is a pivoted bar, or other device, used to hold the bolt in one position, and intended to render it difficult to operate the lock except by the right key. Locks are made in a great variety of styles and shapes, and for many different positions and uses. The security of locks in general depends on the number of impediments or wards that are interposed between the key and the bolt which secures the door.

Tumbler-lock. The bolt has two square notches, a, a, in its upper edge; b, tumbler, pivoted at one end, and having a projecting stump, c, at the other, which falls into one of the notches, according to the position of the bolt.

A cap-case for your linnen and your plate,
With a strange lock, that opens with Amen.
Fletcher (and another), Noble Gentleman, v.

2. A forelock; a coter or key. E. H. Knight.—3. In firearms, a piece of mechanism which explodes the charge. This is effected either by striking a sharp blow which explodes a fulminating powder or strikes sparks from a flint, etc., or by communicating fire directly to the priming, as in the old match-lock.

4. A form of brake or drag for the wheels of a vehicle, used to prevent them from turning in descending steep hills; a lock-chain or skid-chain.—5. The swerving to the right or left of the fore-carriage, deviating from the line of direction of the hind wheels and the trend of the carriages proper. It is called the hau or gee lock respectively, according as it is to the left or right of the driver. E. H. Knight.—6. In plastering, the projection of the plaster, cement, etc., behind the laths, which serves to prevent it from sealing off.—7. A place shut in or locked up; an inclosure; a lockup.

Shuts up th' unwieldy centaur in the lock. Dryden.

8. A barrier to confine the water of a stream or canal; an inclosure in a canal, with gates at each end, used in raising or lowering boats as they pass from one level to another. When a vessel is descending, water is let into the chamber of the lock till it is on a level with the higher water, and thus permits the vessel to enter; the upper gates are then closed, and the lower gates being gradually opened, the water in the lock falls to the level of the low water, and the vessel passes out. In ascending, the operation is reversed. See cut under canal-lock.

9. A fastening together; a closing of one thing upon another; a state of being fixed or immovable; also, a grapple in wrestling; a hug.

All Albemarle Street closed by a lock of carriages. De Quincey.

They must be practised in all the locks and grips of wrestling, as need may often be in fight to tug or grapple, and to close. Milton, Education.

Bramah lock [named from its inventor, Joseph Bramah of London (1749-1814)], a form of bank-lock. Its chief characteristic is a series of sliding tumblers, notched at different parts of their length, the raising of which by a key having a bit shaped in correspondence with the notches releases the lock-bolt and leaves it free to move in locking or unlocking.—Burglar-alarm lock. See burglar-alarm.—Chain-lock, a form of seal-lock.—Chain of locks. See chain.—Combination-lock, a bank- or safe-lock, the principal features of which are the following: Two or more disks, each with a similar notch in its periphery, are mounted upon a spindle, which, in locking or unlocking the safe, is turned by a knob. One disk and an exterior dial-plate are fastened to the spindle; the other disks turn on the spindle. The disks are separated by intervening washers or collars, and each has a pin projecting from its flat face laterally toward the adjacent disk. The pins are arranged in relation with the dial and the peripheral notches in such manner that in turning the spindle, according to a given system or combination, first in one direction and then in the other, to make certain letters or numbers on the dial successively coincide with a mark on a ring which circumscribes the dial, the peripheral notches in the disks are, by the successive engagement with each other of the laterally projecting pins, brought into line with each other. When this is done, the obstructing mechanism which has previously held the bolt falls into the aligned notches, and the bolt is left free to move as may be desired. The positions of the disks, and consequently of the pins, may be changed at will to correspond with the different figures or letters on the dial: this is called changing the combination. The number of such changes is only limited by the law of permutation as applied to the number of disks and the number of letters or figures on the dial. Such a lock may have two systems of dials, spindles, and disks, each controlling the one bolt of the lock, and each of which may be set on a different combination. In this way, as a measure of greater security, it may be arranged that the presence of two persons (each knowing only one combination) may be needed to operate the lock. Also called permutation-lock.—Dead lock. (a) A lock the bolt of which can be turned in either direction by a key, as distinguished from one in which the spring throws the bolt in one direction only, as in a spring-lock. (b) See dead-lock.—Dormant lock, a lock the bolt of which does not close automatically.—Double lock, in a canal, two single locks of equal capacity arranged side by side, and connected, one with the other, by a sluice with a gate. Water flowing from either, when full, may be made by the sluice to enter the other till the same level is reached in both. The sluice being then closed, and the lower lock-gates opened in the lock it is desired to empty, the remainder of the water flows out into the lower pound of the canal. Thus, while one lock is emptying, one half its water may be used to half fill the other. Therefore only one half the water taken from the upper pound of the canal, required in locking a given number of boats through a single lock, is needed when a double lock is used.—Draw-bolt lock, a lock the bolt of which can be drawn by means of a knob, except when it is locked with a key.—Lock of water, the measure equal to the contents of the chamber of the locks by which the consumption of water on a canal is estimated.—Lock, stock, and barrel, the whole gun; hence, the whole of anything.

Take it all in all, it is rotten; lock, stock, and barrel, there is not an inch of it sound.

T. Benton, Speech on the National Bank.

Permutation-lock, a lock in which the moving parts are capable of transposition, so that, being arranged in any concerted order, it becomes necessary before the bolt can be shot to bring the tumblers into that order. E. H. Knight.

—Pin-tumbler lock, a lock in which the tumblers have the form of pins or short rods, which slide in one direction in holes or ways by their own gravity or by the action of springs, and in the opposite direction by the action of the key when the latter is pushed into the lock. The "Yale" lock is of this variety.—Puzzle-lock, a more or less simple form of lock constructed on the combination principle and used as a puzzle, the solution consisting in finding the combination which locks or unlocks it. The greater the complexity of the lock, the more difficult is the solution of the puzzle. See combination-lock.—Rebounding lock, a gun-lock provided with a device whereby the hammer of the lock, after striking the nipple, is immediately thrown back into the half-cock position.—Reversible lock, a lock of which the latch-bolt may be turned over, so as to cause the beveled side to face in either direction, thus allowing the application of the lock indifferently to either side of a door.—Roman lock, a lock having a simple bolt with a binder-spring to hold the bolt in any position in which it is placed, until a force is applied strong enough to overcome the spring.—Rural lock, a cheap kind of lock with a wooden case. E. H. Knight.—Scandinavian lock, a form of lock for fastening hasps upon staples. Both arms of the bow are withdrawn from the lock when it is opened.—Seal-lock, a lock which, when locked, cannot be opened without breaking a seal, thus indicating whether it has or has not been tampered with: used for freight-cars, mail-bags, express companies' inclosures, custom-house purposes, etc. One of the most effective seal-locks has means for attaching a small square of variegated glass over the keyhole in such a manner that the square cannot be removed except by breaking. A photograph of the glass seal previously taken is a complete check on any attempt to substitute another for it, as the pattern of streak and color in each seal is entirely fortuitous, and different from any other.—Time-lock, a lock in which, when locked, the bolt is held by a stop-plate or other detaining device so that it cannot be unlocked before the expiration of a given time. The stop is controlled by clockwork in such manner that it disengages the bolt only at the time for which it has been previously adjusted by mechanism analogous to that of an alarm-clock.—To be at lock, to be in a difficulty. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]—Yale lock, a safety-lock in which is used, in place of wards, a special form of pin tumbler admitting of a great variety of combinations, so that the chance of opening the lock except with the right key is rendered very small. The key is flat or corrugated in longitudinal lines, and the key-opening in the lock is very small, to guard against the use of false keys or the blowing in of powder for exploding the lock. (See also case-lock, check-lock.)

lock¹ (lok), v. [ME. locken, lokken (= Icel. loka, also lykja = Sw. lycka = Dan. lukke), lock; a secondary form, after the noun lock, taking the place, in mod. E., of the orig. strong verb remaining in the E. dial. louk, < ME. louken, loeken (pret. lec, pl. luken, pp. loken), < AS. lucan (pret. luc, pl. lucom, pp. locen), shut, close, fasten (also in comp. a-lucan, separate, belucan, ge-lucan, shut, fasten, onlucan, unlucan, unlock, tō-lucan, unlock) = OS. lūkan (in comp. bi-lūkan, lock, ant-lūkan, unlock) = OFries. lūka, lūka, lōka = D. luiken = OHG. lūhan, MHG. lūchen = Icel. lūka, shut, close, = Goth. lūkan*, in comp. ga-lūkan, close, shut up, us-lūkan, unlock. Hence *lock*¹, n., locket, etc.] I. trans.

1. To close; shut; now, specifically, to close and fasten by means of a lock and key: as, to lock a door or a trunk.

They wanne with moche wo the walles withinne,
Mene lepen to anone and lokkeden the gates.
MS. Cott. Calig. A. ii., f. 115. (Hallivell.)

And went unto the dore
To enter in, but found it locked fast.

Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 27.

2. To fasten so as to impede motion: as, to lock a wheel.

Loken in every lith. Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 55.

3. To shut (up) or confine with or as if with a lock, or in an inclosed place; close or fasten (in): with up or in.

Do you lock your self up from me, to make my Search more curious?
Congreve, Way of the World, iv. 5.

Then seek to know those things which make us blest,
And having found them, lock them in thy breast.
Str J. Denham, Prudence.

A still salt pool, lock'd in with bars of sand.
Tennyson, Palace of Art.

4. To close or make fast; press closely together, as separate portions; fix steadfastly or immovably: as, the streams are locked by ice.

The feude lystened full wel, that lez in his bedde,
Thag he loukez his liddez, ful lyttel he slepea.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), 1. 3007.
She lock'd her lips: she left me where I stood.
Tennyson, Fair Women.

5. To join or unite firmly, as by intertwining, interlinking, or infolding: as, to lock arms.
Lock hand in hand; yourself in order set.
Shak., M. W. of W., v. 5. 81.

6. To embrace closely; infold.
Lock'd in each other's arms we stood.
M. Arnold, Poems, II. 87.

7. To furnish with a lock.
His locked, letter'd, braw brass collar
Show'd him the gentleman and scholar.
Burns, The Twa Dogs.

8. In fencing, to seize, as the sword-arm of an antagonist, by turning the left arm round it, after closing the passade, shell to shell, in order to disarm him.—9. To shut out; prevent from gaining access (to).
Is there who, lock'd from ink and paper, scrawls
With desperate charcoal round his darken'd walls?
Pope, Prolog. to Satires, 1. 19.

10. To enable to pass through a lock, as in a canal. See lock¹, n., 8.

Vessels are locked down from the sea into the [North Holland] canal.
Encyc. Brit., IV. 788.

Locked jaw. Same as lockjaw.—To lock out, to close the gates or doors against; specifically, in labor-disputes, to withdraw employment from (workmen or other employees in a body) as a means of coercion.—To lock up, (a) To close or fasten by or as if by locking: as, to lock up an empty or unoccupied house; to lock up a form of type (that is, to fasten it securely in a chase by driving up or tightening the galleys). (b) To confine; restrain or secure by locking or fastening in: as, to lock up a prisoner; to lock up silver. (c) To secure or place in such a position as not to be available for use: as, his money was locked up in unprofitable enterprises.

II. intrans. 1. To become fast; admit of being fastened or locked: as, the door will not lock.—2. To unite closely by mutual insertion of parts.

Either they lock into each other, or slip one upon another's surface.
Boyle.

lock² (lok), n. [ME. lok (pl. lockes, lokkes), AS. locc (pl. loccas), a lock of hair, = OS. loca = OFries. lok = D. lok = OHG. loc (pl. locchā), MHG. loc (pl. locke), G. locke, a curl or ringlet, = Icel. lokkr = Sw. lok = Dan. lok (not recorded in Goth.), a lock of hair; orig. perhaps 'a curl': cf. Icel. lykkr, a loop, bend, crook; Gr. λυγρός, a pliant twig, λυγρόν, λυγρέν, bend, twist, λυγρός, flexible.] 1. A tuft of hair or wool; anything resembling such a tuft; a tress; used absolutely in the plural, hair collectively.

With him ther was his sone, a yong squyer, . . .
With lockes crulle as they were leyd in presse.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 81.

Chloe, those locks of raven hair—
Some people say you dye them black;
But that's a libel, I can swear,
For I know where you buy them black.
Greek Anthology, l. by Lord Neaves.

Such long locks had she that with knee to chind
She might have wrapped and warmed her feet therein.
Swinburne, Two Dreams.

2. A tuft or small quantity, as of hay or some similar substance; a small quantity of anything; a handful; specifically, in Scots law, the perquisite of the servant in a mill, consisting of a quantity of meal, regulated by the custom of the mill.

For so good clothes ne're lay in stable
Upon a lock of hay.
Ep. Corbet, Journey into France.

I take it on me as a thing of mine office [of miller] to maintain my right of multure, lock, and goupden.
Scott, Monastery, xiii.

What mean the gladness of the plain,
The mirth that shakea the heard of grain,
This joy of eve and morn,
And yellow locks of corn?
Whittier, The Battle Autumn of 1862.

3. A love-lock.
And one deformed is one of them; I know him; a'
wears a lock.
Shak., Much Ado, III. 3. 183.

Gen. He has an exceeding good eye, madam.
Mav. And a very good lock.
B. Jonson, Epicene, iv. 2.

French lock. Same as love-lock.
lockage (lok'āj), n. [lock¹ + -age.] 1. Materials for locks in a canal or stream; works which form a lock.—2. Toll paid for passing a lock in a stream, as the Thames in England.—3. Elevation or amount of elevation and descent made by the locks of a canal.

lock-band, lock-bond (lok'band, -bond), n. In masonry, a course of bond-stones.
lock-bay (lok'bā), n. The space of water inclosed between the gates of a lock.

lock-bolt (lok'bōlt), n. A bolt set in action by a knob on one or both sides of a door, thus performing the function of a latch, or made by means of a spring or other locking device to perform the function of a lock.

lock-bond, n. See lock-band.

lock-chain (lok'chān), n. 1. A chain used to lock the wheels of a vehicle by securing the rim to some part which does not rotate; also, a chain which secures to the vehicle a skid-plate on which the wheel rides during a descent.—2. A chain used to fasten a padlock to a door or gate.

lock-chamber (lok'chām'bēr), n. In canals, the area of a lock inclosed by the side-walls and gates.

lockchest (lok'chest), n. Same as lockchester.
lockchester (lok'ches-tēr), n. [ME. lokchester, lockchester, lokester, lokester, also called lok-dore; origin obscure; cf. OF. loche, a dew-snail (Cotgrave).] A wood-louse. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

Lockchester, wrym, tдем quod lokedore infra [var. locester or lokester].
Prompt. Parv., p. 510.

lock-cramp (lok'kramp), n. A tool used to hold back the sprung in putting together the parts of a gun-lock.

lock-down (lok'doun), n. A contrivance used by lumbermen for fastening logs together in rafting. [American].

locke level. See level¹.
lockent. An obsolete strong past participle of lock¹.

locker¹ (lok'ēr), n. [ME. lokere, irreg. locure (= D. loker), a close receptacle; lock¹ + -er¹.] 1. One who or that which locks up.—2. A close receptacle, as a chest, a drawer, a compartment, or a cupboard, that may be closed with a lock. The word is now most frequently applied to such receptacles for the use of individual members of a company of men, as on board a ship or in a regimental armory.

Also there ys ij locures of iij quarters of a yard long full of bonyis of innocentes whyche kyng Herodys slew.
Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 9.

3. A recess or niche near an altar in some Roman Catholic churches, intended as a depository for water, oil, etc.—Boatswain's locker (naut.), a chest in which are kept tools and small stuff for rigging.—Chain locker. (a) See chain-locker. (b) A bar-room or grogery. Macy. [Naut. slang.—Davy Jones's locker. See Davy Jones.—Not a shot in the locker (naut.), not a penny in the pocket.—Shot-locker (naut.), a strong frame of plank near the pump-well in the hold, where shot are deposited.

locker² (lok'ēr), v. [ME. lokkeren, lokren, curl; prob. lock².] I. intrans. 1†. To curl.
II. trans. To entangle; mat together. Halliwel. [North. Eng.] lockeramt, n. See lockram.

locker-up (lok'er-up'), n. One who locks up; specifically, a jailer or turnkey.

locket (lok'et), n. [F. loquet (= It. lucchetto), a fastening, dim. of loque, loc, a lock, of LG. origin: see lock¹, n.] 1†. A small lock; a catch or spring to fasten a necklace or other ornament.—2. A little hinged case worn as an ornament, often pendent to a necklace or watch-guard, designed to contain a miniature portrait, a lock of hair, or other keepsake.—3. That part of a sword-scabbard where the hook is fastened, usually a mounting of metal, secured to or inclosing the scabbard at a point much nearer to the mouth than to the chape.

lockfast (lok'fast), a. Secured or firmly fastened by some locking device, as a door, chest, press, nut, etc. [Chiefly Scotch.] lock-faucet (lok'fā'set), n. Any form of faucet requiring a key to open it.

lock-gate (lok'gāt), n. A gate for opening or closing a lock in a canal, or sometimes in a river. The gates at the ends of the lock-chamber are called respectively the head- and the tail-gate, or the upper and the lower gate.

lock-hatch (lok'hach), n. The sluice-board or sliding gate in a sluiceway. E. H. Knight.

lock-hole (lok'hōl), n. 1†. A keyhole.
Then up she rose, put on her clothes,
And keekit through at the lock-hole.
Lockmaben Harper (Child's Ballads, VI. 9).

2. In a gun-stock, the recess into which the lock fits.

lock-hook (lok'hük), n. A metal hook to which a spring is attached to lock it so that it will not unfasten; a snap-hook. Lock-hooks are used on board vessels on the ends of the sheets of light sails, and for bending balloon-sails to stays in yachts.

Lock hospital. See hospital.
lock-house (lok'hous), n. A house in which a lock-keeper lives.

A red lock-house covered with creepers.
The Century, XXXVIII. 492.

Lockian (lok'i-an), a. and n. [Locke (see def.) + -ian.] I. a. Of or pertaining to John Locke, one of the greatest of English metaphysicians (1632–1704). His chief work, the starting-point of modern philosophy, is "An Essay concerning Human [Human] Understanding" (1690). He there takes the position—a novel one in his time, in the elaborate form in which he held it—that the theory of cognition must be the basis of philosophy; and he accordingly devotes this treatise to an inquiry "into the original, certainty, and extent of humane knowledge, together with the grounds and degrees of belief, opinion, and assent." In the first book he argues against the existence of innate ideas, and maintains that all knowledge is derived from experience, namely from sensation, the external, or reflection, the internal mode of experience. In the second book he undertakes a survey of all our elementary ideas, analyzing and criticizing each. He also treats of the origin of true and false ideas; and has an important chapter on the association of ideas, a phrase due to him. The third book analyzes the functions of language. The fourth treats of knowledge and probability. Every question of philosophy is touched upon in the course of the work. Leibnitz in 1704 wrote an extended running commentary of a hostile character on Locke's work, entitled "Nouveaux essais sur l'entendement humain."

II. n. A follower of John Locke. Also Lockist.
Lockianism (lok'i-an-izm), n. [Lockian + -ism.] The philosophical doctrines of John Locke.

The Treatise is a reductio ad absurdum of the principles of Lockianism.
Encyc. Brit., XXI. 383.

lockin gowan. See gowan.
locking-pallet (lok'ing-pal'et), n. In chronometers and watches having the detached escapement, a tooth, usually a jewel, of the detent which engages successively the teeth of the scape-wheel, the detent being caused to disengage by the action of the balance, and to reengage the next tooth by the action of a spring.

locking-plate (lok'ing-plāt), n. 1. In a vehicle, the wear-iron or guard placed on the perch to prevent injury from the forward wheels in turning short; a rub-plate. In a gun-carriage it is a thin flat piece of iron nailed on the sides to prevent the wood from wearing away, and serving as a point of attachment for the locking-chain.

2. A nut-lock.—3. In a clock, the count-wheel or notched disk which controls the number of strokes of the striking mechanism.

Lockist (lok'ist), n. [Locke (see def. of Lockian) + -ist.] Same as Lockian.

lockjaw (lok'jā), n. In pathol., tetanus; trismus. See tetanus.

lock-keeper (lok'kē'pēr), n. 1. One who tends a lock on a canal or stream.—2. The box on a door-jamb into which the bolt of a lock protrudes when shot. Car-Builder's Dict.

lock-lanyard (lok'lan'yārd), n. See lanyard, 1 (b).

lockman (lok'man), n.; pl. lockmen (-men). 1†. A public executioner: so called because one of his dues was a lock or ladleful of meal from every caskful exposed for sale in the market. Imp. Dict.—2. An officer in the Isle of Man who executes the orders of the governor, much like an under-sheriff.

The Constable, Coroners, or Lockman (Gulley-gliash, an officer answering to a constable in England, whose business it is to serve summonses, etc.) of each other Parish is for the first time to warne and receive such Beggars back to their own Parish.
Statute of 1664, quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 446.

lock-nail (lok'nāl), n. Same as hammer-nail.
lock-nut (lok'nut), n. A supplementary nut screwed down upon another to prevent it from shaking loose; a jam-nut, check-nut, or pinch-nut. E. H. Knight. Compare nut-lock.

lockout (lok'out), n. The act of excluding a person or persons from a place by locking it up; the condition of such exclusion. Specifically—(a) The exclusion of a teacher by his pupils, in sport or rebellion, or of pupils by their teacher, by way of discipline. (b) A refusal on the part of an employer to furnish work to his employees in a body, intended as a means of coercion. See strike.

When capitalists refuse to grant so large a proportion of the product for labor as the laborers have heretofore received, and will not continue to supply capital on any terms which laborers will accept, the result is a lockout.
N. A. Rev., CXLIII. 319.

lock-paddle (lok'pad'dl), n. A small sluice that serves to fill or empty a lock.

lock-piece (lok'pēs), n. 1. In mining, a piece of timber used in supporting the workings.—2. In gunn., a lug for the attachment of a gun-lock, formed on the rear part of the barrel, near the vent, in guns of the older varieties.

lock-plate (lok'plāt), n. The metal plate on the side of a small-arm which supports the mechanism of the lock and protects it from dust and injury.

lock-pulley (lok'pū'li), n. A pair of pulleys so made that they can rotate separately or together, as desired, by means of a pin in one of them which locks into a hole in the face of the other.

lock-rail (lok'rāl), n. 1. The middle transverse rail of a door, at about the level of the hand, on or in which the lock is generally set. — 2. In some door-frames, a crosspiece dividing the doorway from an open space above it in which a glazed sash is usually placed; a transom.

lockram (lok'ram), n. and a. [Also lockrum, formerly also lockeram, early mod. E. lokeram; < F. locrenan, a kind of unbleached linen, so called from the place where it was made, Locrenan, in Brittany, < Bret. Lok-Ronan, lit. cell of (St.) Ronan, < lok, cell, + Ronan, Ronan. For the sense 'nonsense,' cf. similar use of buckram, bombast, fustian.] I. n. 1. A kind of linen, usually of a coarse and cheap sort.

Lokeram for shetes and smokes and shirtes.

Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, Appendix A.

Edge me the sleeves with Coventry blue, and let the lings be of ten-penny lockeram. Greene, James IV.

Why should I bend to her?—is it because her kirtle is of silk, and mine of blue lockeram? Scott, Abbot, ii.

2. Nonsense; gibberish. [Prov. Eng. and U. S.] II. a. 1. Of lockram.

Thou thoughtst, because I did weare Lockram shirts

Ide no wit. Glaphorne, Wit in a Conatable, iv. 1.

2. Talking gibberish.

After he'd made a little Pause,
Again he stretch'd his Lockrum Jaws.
Edward Ward, Hudibras Redivivus (1707), I. ix.

lockrand (lok'rand), n. In masonry, a lock-band or lock-bond.

lock-saw (lok'sā), n. A compass-saw with a tapering flexible blade, used for cutting in doors the seats for locks.

lock-sill (lok'sil), n. In hydraul. engin., same as clap-sill.

locksmān (lōks'mān), n.; pl. locksmen (-men). A person who has the care of locks and keys; a turnkey.

Who would have said the young sprightly George Douglas would have been contented to play the locksmān here in Lochleven, with no gayer amusement than that of turning the key on two or three helpless women? Scott, Abbot, xxiii.

locksmith (lok'smith), n. [< ME. lokmythe; < lock + smith.] An artificer whose occupation is to make locks.

locksmithery (lok'smith-ēr-i), n. The art or trade of lock-making.

lock-spit (lok'spit), n. A small cut with a spade, or a trench opened with a spade or a plow, to mark out a line of work, as in fencing, railway-engineering, or the like. [Eng.]

lock-spitting (lok'spit'ing), n. The act of making a lock-spit. [Eng.]

Seta out the circuit with a plough, which we call lock-spitting. Ogilby's Virgil (1668), p. 313. (Nares.)

lock-step (lok'step), n. A marching-step, executed by several men arranged in as close file as possible, in which each person follows exactly the step of the person before him. When prisoners march in this manner the hands of every man after the first are placed on the shoulders of the one in front of him.

lock-stitch (lok'stičh), n. and a. I. n. A stitch, made by some sewing-machines, in which two threads are so locked at each stitch that the work will not ravel.

II. a. 1. Produced by means of this stitch, as a seam. — 2. Producing this stitch, as a sewing-machine.

lock-string (lok'string), n. A cord so attached to the hammer of the lock of a cannon that by pulling it the hammer is made to strike on a percussion primer and so fire the gun.

lock-tool (lok'tōl), n. A cramp used in putting together the parts of a gun-lock.

lock-tortoise (lok'tōr'tis), n. Same as box-tortoise.

lockup (lok'up), n. 1. The act of locking up, or the state of being locked up. See to lock up, under lock, v. t.

To be indifferent in the presence of a lock-up of eight per cent. of the money in circulation within a year is simply a confession of ignorance of the principles of monetary science. New Princeton Rev., V. 86.

2. A room or place in which persons under arrest are temporarily confined.

Who oft, when we our house lock up, carouse

With tipping tipstaves in a lock-up house.

H. and J. Smith, Rejected Addresses, xvii.

lock-weir (lok'wār), n. See weir.

lockwork (lok'wērk), n. The machinery or parts of a lock. [Rare.]

M. Francoite, of Liège, has recently manufactured the Martini breech-action in such a manner that the lockwork may be easily removed for cleaning without the use of any tools. W. H. Greener, The Gun, p. 144.

locky (lok'i), a. [< lock + -y.] Having locks or tufts. Sherwood. [Rare.]

lockyer (lok'yēr), n. [< ME. lokyer; < lock + -yer, -ier.] The name remains in the surname Lockyer.] A locksmith.

loco (lō'kō), n. [Short for loco-weed.] 1. Same as loco-weed. — 2. A disease of animals resulting from eating loco-weeds. The brain of the animal is affected; it commonly loses both flesh and strength, and death ensues, though not necessarily soon. See loco-weed.

loco (lō'kō), v. t. [< loco, n.] To poison with the loco-weed or crazy-weed. [Western U. S.]

We referred to a curious affection which exists among horses in north-western Texas, known as "grass-staggers," which is caused by eating the "loco-weed," which gives rise to the saying that the horses are locoed.

Science, XIII. 176.

lococession (lō-kō-sesh'on), n. [< L. locus, a place, + cessio (-n-), a yielding; see locus and cession.] The act of giving place. [Rare.]

loco citato (lō'kō si-tā'tō), [L.: loco, abl. of locus, place; citato, abl. of citatus, pp. of citare, cite; see locus and cite.] In the place (previously) cited. Generally abbreviated loc. cit. or l. c.

locodescriptive (lō'kō-dē-skrip'tiv), a. [< L. locus, a place, + E. descriptive.] Describing a particular place or places. Maunder. [Rare.]

loco-disease (lō'kō-dī-zēz'), n. A disease of horses resulting from eating the loco-weed or crazy-weed. Also called grass-staggers. See loco, v. t. [Western U. S.]

locofoco (lō-kō-fō'kō), n. [A manufactured term, ignorantly made in 1834 on the model of locomotive, a word just then becoming familiar, and supposed by the inventor of the word locofoco to mean 'self-moving,' whence locofoco, intended to mean 'self-lighting,' < L. locus, place, + focus, a hearth (ML. a fire); see locus and focus.] 1. A kind of self-lighting cigar: so called in New York in 1834. — 2. A friction-match. — 3. [cap.] In U. S. hist., one of the equal-rights or radical section of the Democratic party about 1835; by extension, in disparagement, any member of that party. The name was given in allusion to an incident which occurred at a tumultuous meeting of the Democratic party in Tammany Hall, New York, in 1835, when the radical faction, after their opponents had turned off the gas, relighted the room with candles by the aid of loco-foco matches. The Loco-foco faction soon disappeared, but the name was long used for the Democratic party in general by its opponents. Often in the abbreviated form Loco (pl. Locos).

Here's full particulars of the patriotic loco-foco movement yesterday, in which the whigs was so chawed up.

Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xvi.

On the next day the "Courier and Enquirer" dubbed the equal rights party the loco-focos, and the name clung to them.

W. G. Sumner, Andrew Jackson, p. 371.

locomotion (lō-kō-mō'shōn), n. [= F. locomotion = Sp. locomoción = Pg. locomoção = It. locomozione, < L. locus, a place, + motio (-n-), a moving; see locus and motion.] Movement from place to place; progressive motion, as of a living being or a vehicle; the act of moving from point to point; also, the capability of moving in this manner.

A clock, a mill, a lathe move; but, as no change of the place of the machine is produced, such motion is not locomotion. Brand and Cox.

Every act of locomotion implies the expenditure of certain internal mechanical forces, adapted in amounts and directions to balance or out-balance certain external ones. H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 28.

The subjection of the whole civilized world to a single rule removed the chief obstacles to locomotion. Lecky, European Morals, I. 247.

locomotive (lō-kō-mō'tiv), a. and n. [= D. lokomotief = G. locomotiv = Dan. Sv. lokomotiv = F. locomotif = Sp. Pg. It. locomotivo, a., locomotiva, n., < L. locus, a place, + ML. motivus, moving; see motive.] I. a. 1. Moving from place to place; changing place, or able to effect change of (its own) place: as, a locomotive animal.

The Spanish troops, . . . surrounded by their women and constantly increasing swarms of children, constituted a locomotive city of considerable population.

Molloy, Dutch Republic, II. 543.

In one of the locomotive forms, as a medusa, the course taken, otherwise at random, can be described only as one which carries it towards the light, where degrees of light and darkness are present.

H. Spencer, Data of Ethics, § 26.

2. Having the power to produce motion, or to move (something else) from place to place: as, a locomotive organ of the body; a locomotive engine. — 3. Of or pertaining to locomotion; locomotory.

I shall consider their motion, or locomotive faculty, whereby they convey themselves from place to place.

Derham, Physico-Theology, iv. 8.

Locomotive engine. See II. — Locomotive person, in zool., the nectocalyx of a hydroid polyp. Gegenbaur. — Locomotive power, any kind of moving power, but especially steam, applied to the transport of loads on land. See railway. — Locomotive pupa. See pupa.

II. n. A steam-engine which travels on wheels turned by its own power; specifically, an engine designed and adapted to travel on a railway; a railroad-engine. Locomotives designed to travel upon the ground or ordinary highways and to draw loads are more commonly called traction-engines; and those used upon common roads and adapted to carry passengers are called steam-wagons or steam-carriages. (See traction-engine and steam-carriage.) American locomotives are distinguished from those constructed in other countries by the exterior position of the cylinders, the absence of heavy framing, the use of bogies, a system of suspension by means of bars or levers, and certain minor features, such as the cow-catcher and single headlight. The essential parts of a locomotive are the boiler (usually long, horizontal, and of the "locomotive type" (see locomotive-boiler), with many tubes), the running-gear or wheel-system, and the engine proper, this being a double-cylinder, reversing, high-pressure motor, of which the exhaust-steam is thrown into the smoke-stack to urge the draft of the fire. The various wheel-systems employed have given rise to special types of locomotives. See passenger-locomotive, switching-locomotive, tank-locomotive, etc., below. See also under passenger-engine. — Back-truck locomotive, a locomotive having a truck with a pair of wheels under its rear end, as well as a truck in front of the driving-wheels. Such locomotives are used for sharp curves and steep grades. — Belgian-tank locomotive, a locomotive having a tank on each side of the boiler. — Compound locomotive, a form of locomotive in which is embodied the principle of the compound steam-engine. — Compressed-air locomotive, a locomotive which is driven by compressed air carried in strong tanks filled by compressors at stations. In some compressed-air locomotives the air is heated on its way to the cylinders, either by the direct application of heat or by the injection of steam. Such locomotives have not come into practical use. — Consolidation locomotive. See consolidation.

— Double-ended locomotive, a locomotive which has the rear of the tender provided with a pilot, or cow-catcher, so that it may be run with either end in front. It has a two-wheel truck in front of the driving-wheels, the latter being usually two in number. — Double-piston locomotive, a locomotive each cylinder of which has two pistons with rods projecting from each end, and working on crank-pins set at 180 degrees from each other. Steam is admitted alternately to and exhausted from the space between the pistons and the apices between the pistons and the cylinder-heads. The transmission of power from the piston-rods to the crank-pins is through cross-heads and connecting-rods, and, as the crank-pins are always moving and receiving their increments of power in opposite directions, a balancing of strains results. An attempt has been made to remove in this way some of the internal disturbing forces of the locomotive. The practical difficulties of the system have, however, been fatal to its extensive adoption. Also called double-cylinder locomotive. — Double-truck tank-locomotive, a locomotive which has two trucks, and carries boiler and tender on a single frame. The cylinders are attached to the truck that carries the boiler, the wheels of this truck being the driving-wheels. The other truck supports the tender. A common form has six coupled driving-wheels on the forward truck, and a six-wheeled truck at the rear under the tank. Called in the United States Mason's locomotive. — Fireless locomotive, a locomotive driven by steam generated from highly heated water carried in strongly constructed tanks. From such water, on a reduction of pressure upon it, saturated steam will be generated under the law of related pressure and temperature of saturated steam. The supply of heated water is provided and pumped into the tanks at stations, and the tanks are protected from rapid loss of heat by heat-insulating material. — Four-cylinder locomotive, a locomotive with four cylinders and two systems of driving-wheels. The four-cylinder locomotive known as Fairlie's has two boilers with a double fire-box between them, the two parts of the fire-box being separated by a water-leg, and the whole being carried on two center-piv trucks. Meyer's four-cylinder locomotive has a single boiler and fire-box, and the cylinders are located near the middle of the boiler.

— Freight-locomotive, a locomotive for drawing freight-trains. Great tractive power at the sacrifice of speed is attained in freight-locomotives, through their adhesive weight, large cylinders, and driving-wheels small as compared with the driving-wheels of passenger-locomotives. — Geared locomotive, a locomotive in which the motion of the engine is conveyed by gearing to the traveling-wheels, as in many traction-engines and road-rollers. (E. H. Knight.) Geared locomotives having toothed driving-wheels, the teeth of which engage a rack, are used for steep grades in mountain railways. — Mine-locomotive, a locomotive for use in mines, and peculiarly constructed to adapt it to run successfully on slippery tracks. With great adhesive weight, it has also all its wheels coupled. — Mogul locomotive, a type of freight-engine with three coupled driving-wheels on each side, and a swinging two-wheeled truck in front. The front pair of drivers are made without a flange, to facilitate the passing of curves of short radius. — Passenger-locomotive, a locomotive for drawing passenger-cars. Speed is sought at the sacrifice of power in passenger-locomotives, the peculiar characteristics of which are large driving-wheels and engines having short strokes in comparison with the diameters of their pistons. — Saddle-tank locomotive, a locomotive which has its tank placed upon and extending downward over the sides of the boiler, after the manner of a saddle. — Street-locomotive, a locomotive adapted to use in public streets. It has a short wheel-base, powerful brakes, and mechanism for muffling the exhaust so as to render the latter noiseless. It is frequently combined with a passenger-car in one and the same vehicle.—Switching-locomotive, a freight-locomotive having the peculiarities of its class carried to an extreme point, to adapt it to the heavy work of starting and slowly moving heavy trains in switching at stations. Called in England shunting-engine.—Tank-locomotive, a locomotive permanently connected with its tender.—Ten-wheeled locomotive, a locomotive with six coupled driving-wheels and a four-wheeled truck in front of the driving-wheels.

locomotive-balance (lō-kō-mō'tiv-bal'āns), n. The spring used in place of a weight to control the safety-valve of a locomotive.

locomotive-boiler (lō-kō-mō'tiv-boi'lēr), n. A form of boiler in which the fire-box is connected by a number of flues with the smoke-box under the chimney: so called because commonly used in locomotive engines.

locomotive-car (lō-kō-mō'tiv-kār), n. A locomotive and a railway-carriage combined in one.

locomotiveness (lō-kō-mō'tiv-nes), n. Same as locomotivity.

locomotive-pump (lō-kō-mō'tiv-pump), n. The feed-pump which supplies water to the boiler of a locomotive.

locomotivity (lō'kō-mō'tiv'it-i), n. [= F. locomotivité; as locomotive + -ity.] The power of locomotion; ability to change place. [Rare.]

The most superb edifice that ever was conceived or constructed would not equal the smallest insect, blest with sight, feeling, and locomotivity. Bryan. (Latham.)

locomotor (lō-kō-mō'tor), n. and a. [< NL. locomotor, < L. locus, place, + motor, a mover: see locus and motor. Cf. locomotion, locomotive.] I. n. One who or that which moves from place to place; anything that has or gives the power of locomotion. [Rare.]

If the hue-and-cry were once up, they [kangaroos] would show as fair a pair of hind shifters as the expertest locomotors in the colony. Lamb, Ellis, p. 132.

The theory of compensation between electric locomotors working upon the same circuit was advanced several years ago by Werner Siemens. Elect. Rev. (Eng.), XXIV, 270.

II. a. In physiol., of or pertaining to locomotion; having the function of locomotion: as, a locomotor organ; a locomotor function.—Locomotor ataxia. See ataxia.

locomotorial (lō'kō-mō-tō'ri-āl), a. [< locomotory, locomotorium, + -al.] Of or pertaining to the locomotorium, or to locomotion; locomotor. [Rare.]

locomotorium (lō'kō-mō-tō'ri-um), n.; pl. locomotoria (-ā). [NL, neut. of locomotorius, locomotory: see locomotor.] In biol., the motive apparatus or motor mechanism of the body, consisting of the muscles as the active agents of locomotion, and of the bones as the passive fulcrums and levers by which muscular power is applied.

locomotory (lō-kō-mō'tō'ri), a. [< NL. locomotorius, < locomotor, locomotor: see locomotor.] Pertaining to or concerned in locomotion; possessing the power of moving or of causing motion; locomotive.

loco-plant (lō'kō-plant), n. Same as loco-weed.

loco-restive (lō-kō-res'tiv), a. [< L. locus, a place, + E. restive, q. v.] Staying in one place: a correlative of locomotive. [Humorous and rare.]

Your loco-restive and all your idle propensities, of course, have given way to the duties of providing for a family. Lamb, Correspondence (ed. 1870), p. 10. (Encyc. Diet.)

loco-weed (lō'kō-wēd), n. [< Sp. loco, mad, crazy (of uncertain origin), + E. weed.] Any one of several leguminous plants producing the loco-disease in animals. Among them are Astragalus mollissimus and A. Hornii, with several other species of the genus, and Oxytropis Lambertii. The poisonous element has not been satisfactorily determined. Also called crazy-weed.

Locrian (lō'kri-ān), a. and n. [< L. Locri, < Gr. Λοκροί, a people in Greece, also a city, L. Locris, < Gr. Λοκρίς (> L. Loeris), Locris, their country.] I. a. Pertaining to Locris in Greece, or to the city of Locri in Magna Græcia.—Locrian mode. See mode.

II. n. An inhabitant of Locris in Greece; specifically, one of those who occupied the three detached divisions of ancient Locris on the Malian and Eubœan gulfs and on the gulf of Corinth, called respectively the Epicnemidian and Opuntian Locrians and the Ozolian Locrians.

loculament (lok'ū-lā-ment), n. [< L. loculamentum, a case, box, cell, < locus, a cell: see locus.] In bot., same as loculus.

loculamentum (lok'ū-lā-men'tum), n.; pl. loculamenta (-tā). [L.: see loculament.] In bot., same as loculus.

locular (lok'ū-lār), a. [< LL. locularis, kept in boxes, < L. locus, a box, cell: see locus.]

In bot., zool., and anat., having one or more loculi or cells: used chiefly in compounds, as unilocular, bilocular, etc.

loculate (lok'ū-lāt), a. [< locus + -ate.] Having loculi or cells.

loculated (lok'ū-lā-ted), a. [< loculate + -ed.] Same as loculate.

locule (lok'ūl), n. [< L. locus, a cell: see locus.] A loculus or cell.

loculi, n. Plural of loculus.

loculicidal (lok'ū-li-sī'dal), a. [< L. locus, a cell (see locus), + cadere, cut.] In bot., dehiscing through the back of the loculus or cell of a seed-vessel—that is, by the dorsal suture of the carpel. Compare septicidal.

loculicidally (lok'ū-li-sī'dal-i), adv. In a loculicidal manner. Encyc. Brit., IV, 149.

loculose, loculosus (lok'ū-lōs,-lus), a. [< L. loculosus, full of little cells, < locus, a cell: see locus.] In bot., zool., and anat., divided by internal partitions into loculi or cells.

loculus (lok'ū-lus), n.; pl. loculi (-li). [L., a little place, a compartment, box, cell, dim. of locus, a place: see locus.] 1. A little place or space; a cell; a chamberlet; generally, in bot., anat., and zool., one of a number of small compartments or cells, separated from one another by septa, as in the tests of foraminifers; specifically, in corals, one of the spaces between the septa of the calcified cup or theca. Specifically, in bot.: (a) An anther-cell; the sac or theca containing the pollen. (b) The cell, or one of the cells, in a fruit, in which the seed is lodged. Compare loculus. 2. In ancient catacombs and tombs of some types, a small separate chamber or recess, for the reception of a body or of an urn, etc. When the body had been placed in the loculus the opening was closed with a slab of marble, or was otherwise built up. See cuts under cinerary and columbarium.—Archimedean loculus, a puzzle consisting of an ivory square cut into fourteen pieces, to be put together after having been taken apart.

locum-tenency (lō'kum-tē'nēn-si), n. The office or employment of a locum-tenens; the holding of a place by temporary substitution. [Rare.]

Wanted, by an M. B. and C. M., Edinburgh, an indoor assistance or Locum Tenency. Lancet, No. 3410, p. 84 of Adv'ts.

locum-tenens (lō'kum-tē'nēnz), n. [ML., < L. locum, acc. of locus, place, + tenens, ppr. of tenere, hold: see locus and tenent.] Hence, through F., lieutenant.] One who holds the place of another; a deputy or temporary substitute.

locupletely (lok'ū-plēt-li), adv. [*< *locuplete (= OF. locuplet, < L. locuples (-plet-), rich in lands, rich, opulent, < locus, a place, + plere, fill, plenus, full: see complete, etc.) + -ly.] Richly.

Bedocumented most locupletely. Nashe, Lenten Stuffe.

locus (lō'kus), n.; pl. loci (-sī). [< L. locus, OL. stlocus, a place. From L. locus are ult. E. local, locality, etc., lieu, lieutenant, etc., locate, allocate, allow, collocate, couch, dislocate, etc.] 1. A place; spot; locality.—2. In anat., some place, specifically named by a qualifying term.—3. In math., a curve considered as generated by a moving point, or a surface considered as generated by a moving line; the partly indeterminate position of a point subject to an equation or to two equations in analytical geometry; a curve considered as generated by its moving tangent or by a moving curve of which it is the envelop; any system of points, lines, or planes defined by general conditions, and, in general, partly indeterminate.—4. In optics, the figure formed by the foci of a set of pencils of converging or diverging rays; an optical image.—5. A place or passage in a writing; in the plural, a collection of passages, especially from the Scriptures or other ancient writings, methodically selected and arranged as bearing upon some special topic or topics of study; a catena; a book or work consisting of such a selection.—Congregation of loci. See congregation.—Cuspidal locus. See cuspidal.—Genius loci. See genius.—Geometric locus, a locus in sense 3, above.—Linear locus. See linear.—Locus ceruleus, a darkish tract extending upward from the fovea anterior on the floor of the fourth ventricle of the brain. It is caused by the substantia ferruginea.—Locus classicus (pl. loci classici), a standard passage, especially in an ancient author; a passage which exemplifies the meaning of a word or affords information with special clearness or fullness, or which is the principal or only original authority on a subject, and is accordingly regularly cited in books on that subject.—Locus delicti, in law, the place where an offense was committed.—Locus in quo, the place in which; a short phrase used in law, in actions of trespass, to designate the area of land upon which the trespass is alleged to have been committed: as, the locus in quo was part of an abandoned highway.—Locus niger, the substantia nigra (which see, under substantia).—Locus perforatus anticus, the anterior perforated space at the base of the brain, near the entrance of the Sylvian fissure.—Locus perforatus posticus, the posterior perforated, or postker-brum, the posterior perforated space, or post-Tarini.—Locus penitentiae, a point or space of time for repentance; in law, a point in a person's course at which it is not yet too late to change his legal position; the possibility of withdrawing from a contemplated obligation or wrong before being committed to it.—Locus sigilli, the place of the seal; a phrase (usually abbreviated to L. S.) used in making a copy of a sealed instrument, to indicate where a seal was affixed to the original, and in some of the common law States allowed to be used as and instead of a common law seal.—Locus standi (literally, place of standing, recognized place or position; specifically, in law, right of place in court; the right of a party to appear and be heard on a question before a tribunal.—Nodal locus, the locus of the nodes of a system of curves.

Loculicidal Dehiscence of the Fruit of Iris versicolor, showing the opening.

locust¹ (lō'kust), n. [< ME. locuste = F. locuste = Pg. It. locusta = AS. lopust, < L. locusta, a locust, a shell-fish. Cf. lobster, ult. from the same source.] 1. One of the orthopterous saltatorial insects of the family Aceridiæ, popularly known as grasshoppers, and more correctly called short-horned grasshoppers. Thus, Rocky Mountain locust is a common, popular, and book name of Caloptenus or Melanoplus spretus, also popularly known by its other name of the western or hateful grasshopper. Locusts, in this sense, are allied to the long-horned grasshoppers and the crickets, but differ from them in having shorter antennae and bodies and limbs more robust. Their hind legs are large and strong, which gives them great power in leaping. Their mandibles and maxillae are strong, sharp, and jagged, and their food consists of the leaves and green stalks of plants. They have colored elytra and large wings, disposed when at rest in straight folds. They fly well, but are often conveyed by winds to distances which they could not have attained by their own power. Their ravages are well known. Locusts are eaten in many countries, roasted or fried. They are often preserved in lime or dried in the sun. The most celebrated species is the migratory locust of the East, Pachytylus migratorius. It is about 2½ inches long, greenish, with brown wing-covers marked with black. Migratory locusts are most commonly found in Asia and Africa, where they frequently swarm in countless numbers, darkening the air in their excursions, and devouring every blade of the vegetation of the land they alight on.

Locust (Pachytylus migratorius), about half natural size.

2. An orthopterous saltatorial insect of the genus Locusta, family Locustidæ.—3. A homopterous insect of the genus Cicada, family Cicadidæ, such as the harvest-fly, Cicada tibicen, and the seventeen-year locust, or periodical cicada, Cicada septendecim. See cut under Cicadidæ. [U. S.]—4. A cockchafer; a beetle. [North. Eng.]—Bald locust, a locust of an undetermined species.

And the bald locust after his kind. Lev. xi. 22.

Clumsy locust, Brachystola magna, a large flightless grasshopper, 2½ inches long, found in Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, and other western parts of the United States. See Brachystola.—Green-striped locust, Tragocephala (or Chimærocephala viridifasciata), a grasshopper of large size and showy coloration, occurring all through the United States and Canada.—Lobe-crested locust, an acridid of the genus Tropidacris, which comprises some of the largest insects known, certain of the Central and South American forms having a wing-expanse of 8 or 9 inches. The only United States representative is T. aux, which occurs in Texas.—Red-thighed locust, Caloptenus femur-rubrum, one of the commonest of all grasshoppers in the United States, a near relative of the Rocky Mountain locust, but non-migratory, and slightly smaller and shorter-winged.—Rocky Mountain locust, Caloptenus (or Melanoplus) spretus, otherwise called hateful grasshopper, inhabiting permanently portions of Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho, and the adjoining British possessions, and migrating in immense swarms through several of the Western States and territories, doing incalculable damage. It is a little over an inch long, and of a grayish-green color, with wings which when closed reach some distance beyond the end of the abdomen. See cuts under Caloptenus.—Seventeen-year locust, the periodical cicada.

locust¹ (lō'kust), v. i. [*< locust*¹, n.] To devour and lay waste like locusts; ravage. [Rare.]

This Phillip and the black-faced swarms of Spain . . . Come locusting upon us. Tennyson, Queen Mary, li. 1.

locust² (lō'kust), n. 1. A well-known tree of the United States, Robinia pseudacacia, with thorny branches, delicate pinnate leaves, and dense clusters of white heavily scented flowers. The wood is heavy, hard, strong, and very durable, and useful for treenails, posts, turnery, etc. The tree is extensively planted for ornament, and also as a timber-tree. It suffers from attacks of the locust-borer. Also called black or yellow locust, and false or bastard acacia. The related R. Neomezianica is also called locust. The locust-tree of Gutsna and the West Indies is Hymenaea Courbaril. In the West Indies, Byrsonima coriacea and B. cinerea of the Malvaceæ are also called locust. 2. The carob-tree, Ceratonia Siliqua. See Ceratonia and carob.—3. The wood of the locust-tree.—4. A club or billy used by policemen: so called because commonly made of locust-wood. [Local, U. S.]—Bastard locust of the West Indies, Clethra tinifolia.—Bristly locust, or moss-locust, Robinia hispida, a shrub with pink flowers cultivated from the Alleghenias.—Clammy locust, Robinia viscosa, a small tree with clammy branchlets and leaf stalks, and larger flowers than the bristly locust, from the same region. (See also honey-locust and saw-pole-locust.)

Locusta (lō-kus'tā), n. [L.: see *locust*¹.] 1. A genus of orthopterous insects founded by Linnaeus (1748), made type of the Locustaria of Latreille (1807). (a) The Locusta of Latreille is characterized by a slender form with long tegmina not ocellated in the male, the abdomen of the male ending in two long incurved processes, ample wings, and seminate front. Locusta in this sense is strictly an Old World genus. (b) The Locusta of Leach (1817) corresponds to Latreille's Edipoda, and belongs to the family Acriddidae—a circumstance which has led to great confusion, for the law of priority in zoological nomenclature prevents the adoption of Leach's use of the generic name Locusta, with the result that the true locusts are not Locustidae, but Acriddidae.

2. [L. c.; pl. locustae (-tē).] In bot., the spikelet of grasses.

Locustæ (lō-kus'tē), n. pl. [NL., pl. of L. locustæ, a marine shell-fish, a lobster: see *locust*¹.] A division of macrurous decapod crustaceans, such as the Palinuridae, or spiny lobsters.

Locustaria (lō-kus'tā-ri-ā), n. pl. In Latreille's classification, a group of orthopterous insects; the locustarians, corresponding to the modern family Locustidae (b).

locustarian (lō-kus-tā-ri-an), n. [Locusta + -arian.] A locust-like insect; one of the Locustaria, as sundry green or long-horned grasshoppers, katydids, etc.

locust-bean (lō'kust-bēn), n. The fruit of the carob-tree. See Ceratonia.

locust-berry (lō'kust-ber'i), n. The fruit of the West Indian locust, Byrsonima coriacea; also, the tree itself.

locust-bird (lō'kust-bērd), n. The rose-colored starling, Pastor roseus: so called from its devouring locusts. H. B. Tristram.

locust-borer (lō'kust-bōr'ēr), n. A longicorn beetle, Cyllene robinii or C. picta, which bores the locust-tree. See ent under Cyllene.

locust-eater (lō'kust-ē'tēr), n. A book-name of birds of Swainson's genus Gryllivora, as G. gryllivora, the long-tailed locust-eater; a dajal. See Copsichus, Lalage.

Locustella (lō-kus-tel'ā), n. [NL. (Kaup, 1829), < F. locustelle: see locustelle.] A genus of small sylvine birds, the locustelles.

locustelle (lō-kus-tel'), n. [locustelle, so called with ref. to its note, which resembles that of the grasshopper, dim. of locuste, < L. locusta, grasshopper, locust: see *locust*¹.] A grasshopper-warbler; one of several small sylvine birds of Europe which make a chirring, sibilant, or stridulous noise like that made by a grasshopper. The term is indefinite, but specially applies to the little birds of a modern genus Locustella, including Potamodius, Sibilatrix, Luscinops, etc. An early if not the original locustelle was the bird figured by Daubenton in "Planches enluminées" (1778), called la locustelle by Montbeillard (1778), the Motacilla nevada of Boddaert (1783), or Sylvia locustella of Latham (1790), now Locustella nevada or L. locustella. It inhabits temperate Europe and northern Africa. Another locustelle is L. luscinoides, or Savin's warbler. Both of these are British. L. certhioides, here figured, is Asiatic.

Grasshopper-warbler (Locustella certhioides).

Locustidae (lō-kus'ti-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Locusta + -idae.] A family of Orthoptera. (a) First used by Stephens in 1829, and applied to the family now called Acriddidae (which see). (b) Now identified with the Locustaria of Latreille. In this sense it contains many winged and wingless genera, the former living on trees, bushes, and grass, the latter among stones and in dark places. The winged forms are known as green grasshoppers and katydids, and the wingless ones as stone-erickets. The antennae are very long and thread-like; the tarsi are usually four-jointed. The female has a strong, exerted ovipositor, usually more or less curved and saber-shaped. The elytra of the male have a stridulating apparatus at the base. The species are found all over the world, attaining great size in the tropics. The European species usually oviposit in the ground, but in America many lay their eggs upon leaves and twigs, and sometimes penetrate the crevices of the soft parts and stems of plants for this purpose.

locust-shrimp (lō'kust-shrimp), n. Same as mantis-shrimp. See Squillidae, Stomatopoda.

locust-tree (lō'kust-trē), n. [*locust*¹ + tree.] See *locust*².

locution (lō-kū'shōn), n. [= F. locution = Pr. locucio = Sp. locucion = Pg. locução = It. locuzione, < L. locutio(n), a speaking, < locutus, pp. of loqui, speak. Cf. allocation, clouction.] 1. The act of speaking.

Dentition and locution are for the most part contemporaries. Smith, Portraiture of Old Age.

2. Discourse; form or mode of speaking; phraseology; a phrase.

I hate these figures in locution,
These about phrases forc'd by ceremony.
Marston, Sophonisba, i. 2.

locutory (lok'ū-tō-ri), n.; pl. locutories (-riz). [= Sp. Pg. It. locutorio, < ML. locutorium, a room for conversation in a monastery, < LL. locutor, a speaker, < L. loqui, pp. locutus, speak: see locution.] A room for conversation; especially, a place in a monastery where the monks were allowed to converse with those who were not connected with the monastery, when silence was enjoined elsewhere.

So came she to the grate that they call (1 trowe) locutory. Sir T. More, Works, p. 1170.

lodam, n. See lodum.

lodanum, n. See ladanum, laudanum.

lode¹ (lōd), n. [Also less commonly load; < ME. lode, lod, a way, path, course, also a carrying, burden (whence E. *load*²), < AS. lād, a way, course, journey, carrying, carriage, sustenance (= OHG. leita, a procession, = Icel. leith = Sw. led, a way, road, course), < lithan (pret. lāth) (= OS. lithan = OHG. lithan = Icel. litha = Goth. leithan), go, travel: see *lead*¹.] Lode, in a deflected sense and var. spelling, appears as load, a burden (see *load*²); also in comp. lifelode, now *livelihood*², and in dial. form *lade*².] 1†. A way; path.—2. A reach of water; an open ditch for carrying off water from a fen.

It was by a law of sewers decreed that a new drain or lode should be made and maintained from the end of chancelors lode unto Tynley Smethe.
Dugdale's Imbanking, p. 275. (Hallivell.)

Down that dark long lode . . . he and his brother skated home in triumph. Kingsley.

3. A metalliferous deposit having more or less of a vein-like character—that is, having a certain degree of regularity, and being confined within walls. Lode as used by miners is nearly synonymous with the term vein as employed by geologists, etc. The word would not be used for a flat or stratified mass. See vein and ore deposit.—Champion lode, the most productive lode in a mining district. The term is Cornish in origin, and is little used in the United States. See mother-lode. Also called master-lode.—Scovan lode, a lode having no gossan on its back or outcrop. See vein.

lode², n. A Middle English form of *load*².

loded, loaded¹ (lō'ded), a. [lode(stone) + -ed.] Magnetized by being brought into contact with lodestone.

Great Kings to Wars are pointed forth,
Like loded Needles to the North.

Prior, Alma, ii.

lodeman, loadman¹ (lōd'man), n. [ME. lodeman, < AS. lādman, a leader, a guide, < lād, a way, course, + man, man: see *lode*¹ and man.] Same as lodesman.

lodemanage, loadmanage (lōd'man-ā), n. [ME. lodemenage, < OF. lodmanage, usually lamanage, lamanage, pilotage, < laman, a pilot, from a LG. form cognate with ME. lodeman: see lodeman and -age.] Pilotage. Courts of lodemanage are held at Dover in England for the appointment of the Cinque Port pilots.

His herbergh and his mone, his lodemenage.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 403.

lode-ship (lōd'ship), n. A small fishing-vessel. Coles, 1717.

lodesman, loadsmant (lōdz'man), n. [ME. lodesman, lodesmon, lodysman; < lode's, poss. of *lode*¹, + man.] A pilot.

Akyng hem anon
If they were broken or aught woo-begon,
Or hadde nede of lodesmen [var. lodman] or vitayle.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1488.

A lodesman [in Cowell] . . . being a pilot for harbour and river duty.
Encyc. Brit., XIX. 96.

lodestar, loadstar (lōd'stār), n. [ME. lodesterre (also lodsterne, ladesterne = Icel. leid-harstjarna); < *lode*¹ + star. Cf. MD. leidesterre = MHG. leitstern, G. leitstern = Dan. ledestjerne = Sw. ledstjärna, lodestar; as *lead*¹ + star.] A star that leads or serves to guide; especially, the pole-star: often used figuratively.

Schipe-mene . . .
Lukkes to the ladesterne whene the lyghte faillez.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 751.

Loadstone to hearts, and loadstar to all eyes,
Sir J. Davies, Immortal of Soul, Ded.

What lode-star's friendly ray,
When thine is hid, shall guide the vessel a way?
Bryant, The Ascension.

lodestone, loadstone (lōd'stōn), n. [*lode*¹ + stone.] 1. A variety of magnetite, or the magnetic oxid of iron, which possesses polarity and has the power of attracting fragments of iron. See magnet.

Renowned Load-stone, which on Iron sets,
And by the touch the same aloof attracts.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 3.

They had also another trick, by a Load-stone placed in the Roofe, to draw vp the yron Image of the Sunne, as if it did then bid Serapis farewell.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 584.

2. A leading-stone for drains. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.] lodestuff (lōd'stuf), n. In mining, vein-stuff; all the material which composes the mass of a lode or vein, including both gangue (or vein-stone) and the ore which is associated with it. See vein.

lodge (lōj), n. [ME. logge, loge, < OF. loge, F. loge, a lodge, hut, cottage, = It. loggia, a gallery, < ML. lobia, laubia, a gallery, covered way: see lobby, from the same ML. source.] 1. A hut; a cottage; a house affording merely the simplest accommodations; a temporary habitation; with reference to the North American Indians, a hut constructed of poles and branches, skins, or rough boards.

Thar loges & thare tents vp thei gal bigge.
Rob. of Brunne, p. 67.

And he saw thame ga naked, and duelle in loges and in caves, and thaire wyfes and thaire childre away fra thame.
MS. Lincoln A. l. 17, l. 30. (Hallivell.)

The daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers. Isa. l. 5.

O for a lodge in some vast wilderness.

Cooper, Task, ii. 1.

There have been strange moccasins about my camp. They have been tracked into my loges.

J. F. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, xxviii.

2. A small house in a park, forest, or demesne; a gate-house; also, a small house or cottage connected with a larger house: as, a porter's lodge.

Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge. Shak., M. W. of W., l. 1. 115.

3. Any covered place of shelter, as a den or cave in which wild beasts lurk; in hunting, the shelter of the buck or doe.—4†. The place in which a body of workmen were employed; a working-place or workshop, especially one of masons or builders.

For the lord that he ys honde to,
May fache the prentes wher-ever he go.
gef yn the logge he were ytake, Muche desese hyt myght ther make.

Quoted in English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), Int., p. cxxxix., note.

The lodge [the German word is "Hütte." It meant as well the workshop as the place of meeting, which in those days were identical] itself of the architect was very similar to our factories; it consisted of one or more workshops in which the workmen worked together.

English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), Int., p. cxlii.

5. A place of meeting for members of a secret society, as that of the Freemasons or the Odd Fellows; hence, a body of members of such a society meeting in one place, in either an individual or a representative capacity, in the latter case constituting a district or a grand lodge; also, among the Freemasons, a meeting, session, or convention of such a body.—6†. A collection of similar objects situated close to one another.

The Maldives, a famous lodge of islands. Defoe.

7. In mining, the bottom of a shaft or of any other cavity where the water of the mine has an opportunity to collect, so that it may be pumped out. The word sump is much more commonly used in the United States.—Grand lodge, the principal lodge or governing body of Freemasons. It is presided over by the grand master, and has the power of granting charters of affiliation, enforcing uniformity of ceremonial, and settling all disputes that may arise between lodges under its charge. The officers of the grand lodge are chiefly delegates from the respective lodges. A similar institution exists among the Good Templars.

lodge (lōj), v.; pret. and pp. lodged, ppr. lodging. [ME. loggen, logen, lugen, < OF. loger, F. loger, lodge, house, < loge, a lodge, hut, cottage: see lodge, n.] I. trans. 1. To furnish with a lodge or habitation, especially a temporary one; provide with a transient or temporary place of abode; harbor.

Ye may sey to alle hem that yow aske who was loged with yow, that it was the kynge Looth and his fone sones.
Mertin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 519.

Alexander and his oste had lugged thame apone the water of Strume. MS. Lincoln A. 1. 17, f. 9. (Halliwell.)
My lord was lodged in the Duke's Castle.

Hovell, Letters, I. vi. 2.

2. To set, lay, place, or deposit, as in a place of rest, or for preservation or future action: as, to lodge money in a bank; to lodge a complaint in court.

And that one talent which is death to hide Lodged with me useless.

Milton, Sonnet on his Blindness.

I lay all night in the cave where I had lodged my provisions.

Swift, Gulliver's Travels, iii. 1.

3. To find an abode for; assign a residence to; put in possession.

Selden Lodges the Civil Power of England in the King and the Parliament.

Selden, Table-Talk, Int., p. 11.

4. To plant or implant; infix; fix or settle; place: as, to lodge an arrow in one's breast.

So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodged hate, and a certain loathing.

Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 60.

5. To bring to a lodgment; beat down; lay flat: said especially of vegetation.

Though bladed corn be lodged, and trees blown down;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads.

Shak., Macbeth, iv. 1. 55.

6t. To entrap, as in a place of lodgment.

Suet. Are those come in yet that pursn'd bold Caratach?
Pet. Not yet, sir, for I think they mean to lodge him;
Take him I know they dare not, 'twill be dangerous.

Fletcher, Bonduca, iv. 1.

The deer is lodged, I've track'd her to covert; . . .
Rush in at once.

Addison, Cato, tv. 2.

II. intrans. 1. To have a lodge or an abode, especially a temporary one; be furnished with shelter and accommodation.

Than the leged and pight teyntes and pavilouns, and hem rested, and lette the hoate be wached.

Mekin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 166.

He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner.

Acts x. 6.

2. To have an abiding-place; dwell; have a fixed position.

And dwells such rage in softest bosoma then?
And lodge such daring souls in little men?

Pope.

3. To be deposited or fixed; settle: as, a seed lodged in a crevice of a rock.

Nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge.

Shak., Hamlet, i. 5. 87.

4. To be beaten down or laid flat, as grain.

Its straw makes it not subject to lodge, or to be mildewed.

Mortimer, Husbandry.

lodgeable (loj'ā-bl), a. [Sometimes also lodg-able; < lodge + -able.] Capable of affording a temporary abode. [Rare.]

At the furthest end of the Towne Eastward by the Ambassadour's House was appointed, but not yet (by advice of some of the King's Officers) Lodgeable.

Sir J. Finett, Finetti Philoxenia (1656), p. 164.

lodged (lojd), p. a. In her., represented as lying at rest upon the ground, as a buck, hart, hind, etc. Also harbored and couchant.

lodge-gate (loj'gāt), n. A gate where there is a lodge or house for the porter or gate-keeper.

lodgement, n. See lodgment.

lodger (loj'ēr), n. One who lodges; especially, one who lives in a hired room or rooms in the house of another.

Call at thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Shak., Hen. V., ii. 1. 33.

Lodger franchise, in Eng. law, a right to vote conferred by statute in 1867 upon persons occupying lodgings in boroughs of an annual rental value of at least £10: extended to counties and assimilated to the household franchise in 1884.

lodging (loj'ing), n. [< ME. loggyng, logyng, luggyng; verbal n. of lodge, v.] 1. A place of temporary residence; especially, a room or rooms hired for residence in the house of another: often used in this sense in the plural with a singular meaning. In Great Britain persons "in lodgings" are charged for rooms and attendance, and sometimes purchase their own provisions, but far more frequently are served by the landlady in their own rooms with provisions purchased and cooked on their order.

And fourth withall to her loggyng they went,
The best that they cowde fynde to their entent.

Generydes (E. E. T. S.), i. 687.

I pray, as we walk, tell me freely, how do you like your lodging, and my hoat and the company?

I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 61.

Life in lodgings, at the best of times, is not a peculiarly exhilarating state of existence.

Mrs. J. H. Riddell, City and Suburb, xxii.

2. Place of abode; harbor; cover.

Fayre bosome! fraught with vertues richest trespure,
The neast of love, the lodging of delight.

Spenser, Sonnets, lxxvi.

3. Place of rest. [Rare.]

Their feathers serve to stuff our beds and pillows, yielding us soft and warm lodging.

Ray, Works of Creation.

lodging-car (loj'ing-kär), n. On a railroad, a car fitted with bunks, used as a sleeping- or dwelling-place for employees. [U. S.]

lodging-house (loj'ing-hous), n. A house in which lodgings are let; generally, a place other than an inn or hotel where travelers lodge.

lodging-knee (loj'ing-nē), n. See knee, 3 (a).

lodgment, lodgement (loj'ment), n. [< lodge + -ment.] 1. The act of lodging, or the state of being lodged: as, the lodgment of money in a bank; the lodgment of grass or grain by a storm.

There is a great lodgment of civilized men on this continent.

Everett, Orations, I. 218.

It would have been a worthy exploit indeed, if the arms of Venice, by that time a great Italian power, had driven out the Turk from his first lodgement on Italian soil.

E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 319.

2. A deposit, as of an accumulated mass; a settling: as, the lodgment of mud in a tank.

3t. A place where persons or things are lodged; a lodging.

Certain publick Lodgments founded in Charity for the use of Travellers.

Maunderell, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 2.

4. Milit., a position or foothold gained from and held against an enemy, as by an invading or a besieging army: as, to effect a lodgment on the enemy's coast, or within the enemy's lines.

lodh-bark (lōd'bärk), n. The bark of an East Indian shrub or tree, Symplocos racemosa, used in dyeing.

lodicle (lod'ī-kl), n. Same as lodicule.

lodricula (lō-dik'ū-lī), n. Same as lodicule.

lodicule (lod'ī-kūl), n. [< L. lodricula, dim. of lodix (lodice), a coverlet.] In bot., one of the scales which occur in the flowers of some grasses, inserted on the receptacle just outside the stamens. Also called squamula and palcola.

Lodoicea (lō-dō'is'ē-ā), n. [NL. (J. J. La Billardière, 1807), corruptly for Laodicea, named after Laodice, a daughter of Priam, king of Troy.] A genus of palms of the tribe Borasseae. It is distinguished by numerous stamens and many flowers in each cavity of the spadix or fleshy spike. There is but one species, L. Sechellarum, a native of the Seychelles Islands, a magnificent palm, growing to a height of nearly 100 feet, and bearing at the summit a crown of fan-shaped leaves some of which are 20 feet long and 12 feet broad. At the age of 30 years the palm bears its first fruit, which reaches maturity 10 years later. See double cocconut, under cocconut.

lodomy, n. [A corruption of lodianum, laudanum.] Laudanum.

A pox upo' their lodomy

On me had sic a way;

Four o' their men, the bravest four,

They bore my blade away.

Lang Johnny Moir (Child's Ballads, IV. 277).

loellingite (lō'elling-īt), n. [< Lölling (in Carinthia) + -ite.] A native arsenide of iron, FeAs₂; a mineral closely related to arsenopyrite or mispickel.

loemography (lō-mog'ra-fī), n. See loimography.

loess (lēs or lō'es), n. [< G. löss, loess.] In geol., originally, a certain loamy deposit in the valley of the Rhine; now, by extension, any detrital accumulation more or less resembling the original loess occurring in other parts of the world. The loess is a very fine loam, very homogeneous in character, showing hardly any indication of stratification, and containing in numerous localities large quantities of land and fresh-water shells, as well as bones of land-animals. In northern China it covers a vast area and is developed to a great thickness, and, being deeply eroded by the rivers, has given rise to a very remarkable topography. In the regions where the loess occurs it is the most recent of the formations. The theories of its origin are numerous, and the subject is one of great complexity, so that "some skilful geologists, peculiarly well acquainted with the physical geography of Europe, have styled the loess the most difficult geological problem." (Lypell.) Much that is called loess by some geologists is certainly river-mud deposited in the ordinary manner. Lypell connects the loess of the Rhine valley with glacial action; and Richthofen considers it as beyond dispute that the loess of China is a subaërial deposit, borne by the wind to its present resting-place.

loffer, v. i. An obsolete form of laugh.

loft (lōft), n. [< ME. loft, the air (esp. in the phr. a loft, on loft), an upper room, < Icel. loft, now spelled loft, the air, sky, an upper room, = Sw. Dan. loft, ceiling, loft, garret, = AS. lyft, the air: see lift. Cf. aloft.] 1t. The air; the sky: same as *lift*¹. See on loft (below), aloft.

Lyuond in the lofte with fordrshps in heyn.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), 1. 3719.

2. A room or space between a ceiling or flooring and the roof immediately above it; the space below and between the rafters; a garret.

ge schal lenge in your lofte, & lyge in your ese.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 1096.

3. A floor or room above another or others; an upper story; especially, in the United States, one of the upper stories of a warehouse or other mercantile building, or of a factory.

And hym she roggeth and awaketh softe,
And at the wyndow lep he fro the lofte.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2709.

Entychus . . . fell down from the third loft and was taken up dead.

Acts xx. 9.

4. A gallery or an elevated apartment within a larger apartment, as in a church, hall, barn, etc.: as, an organ-loft; a hay-loft.

I also to the ball, and with much ado got up to the loft, where with much trouble I could see very well.

Pepys, Diary, Nov. 15, 1666.

Cock of the loft. See cock of the walk, under *cock*¹. — On loft, on high; aloft. See aloft.

If thou be in place where good ale is on lofte, . . .
Mesurabi thou take ther-of.

Babea Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 39.

loft (lōft), v. t. [< loft, n.] To furnish with a loft.

I have a mill which was lofted with Scotch fir.

Sci. Amer., LVI. 17.

Lofted house, a house of more than one story. [Scotch.] A high rude-looking square tower, with the addition of a lofted house—that is, a building of two stories.

Scott, Waverley, ix.

loftily (lōf'ti-li), adv. 1. In a lofty manner or position; in an elevated place; on high.—2. In a lofty spirit; with elevated feeling or purpose; eminently; arrogantly; haughtily.

loftiness (lōf'ti-nes), n. 1. The state or quality of being lofty or high; remarkable height or elevation.—2. Elevation of character, sentiment, or feeling; the state of being elevated, as by high thought, or puffed up, as by pride or vanity; grandeur; sublimity; haughtiness; arrogance.

We have heard the pride of Moab, . . . his loftiness, and his arrogance.

Jer. xlviii. 29.

Three poets in three distant ages born: . . .

The first in loftiness of thought surpass'd;

The next in majesty; in both the last.

Dryden, Lines under Milton's Picture in P. L. (fol. 1688).
There may be a Loftiness in Sentiments where there is no Passion.

Addison, Spectator, No. 339.

= Syn. 2. Pride, Presumption, etc. See arrogance.

lofting (lōf'ting), n. [< loft + *-ing*¹.] Upper part; ceiling.

As he is awakening him, the timber passage and lofting of the chamber hastily takes fire.

Quoted in Child's Ballads, VI. 175.

lofty (lōf'ti), a. [< loft + *-y*¹. Cf. G. höftig, aërial.] 1. Raised in space or dimensions; lifted high up; elevated; very high.

Cities of men with lofty gates and towers.

Milton, P. L., xi. 640.

See lofty Lebanon his head advance.

Pope, Messiah, l. 25.

2. Elevated in condition, character, or quality; raised above the common level; characterized by eminence, dignity, sublimity, etc.; exalted; impressive.

Thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity.

Isa. lviii. 15.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.

Milton, Lycidas, l. 11.

A stern and lofty duty.

Whittier, Lines on the Death of S. O. Torrey.

3. Elevated in conceit; manifesting pride or arrogance; haughty; ostentatious.

The lofty looks of man shall be humbled.

Isa. ii. 11.

Lofty and sour to them that loved him not.

Shak., Hen. VIII., iv. 2. 53.

= Syn. 1. High, etc. See tall.—2. Sublime, exalted, stately, majestic. See grand.—3. Arrogant, magisterial.

log¹ (log), n. and a. [< ME. log* (not found), < Icel. lög, a felled tree, a log (= Sw. dial. laga, a felled tree, a tree blown down), lit. a tree that 'lies' prostrate, < luggja = Sw. lugga, lie: see *lie*¹. Cf. D. log, heavy, unwieldy (see loggy, loggy); E. *log*² (< Sw. logg), a ship's log, and *law*¹ (AS. lagu, Icel. lög), from the same ult. source.] 1. n. 1. A bulky piece or stick of unwhewn timber; a length of wood as cut from the trunk or a large limb of a tree; specifically, an unsplit stick of timber with butted ends ready for sawing.

So was he brought forth into the grene beside the chappell w'th the tower, & his head laid down upon a long log of timbre, and there stricken of.

Sir T. More, Works, p. 54.

2. Figuratively, a dull, heavy, stolid, or stupid person.

What a log is this,
To sleep such music out!

Beau. and Fl., Captain, li. 2.

Christmas log. See Christmas.

II. a. Constructed of logs; consisting of logs: as, a log cabin; a log fort or bridge.—Log cabin, a cabin or hut built of logs, unhewn or hewn, notched near the ends and laid one upon another, and having the interstices filled with mud or plaster. Log cabins are often used as dwellings in poor or thinly settled regions where timber abounds.—Log-cabin campaign, in U. S. hist., the electoral canvass for the presidency in 1840, in which representations of log cabins and barrels of hard cider were carried in the processions of the partisans of William Henry Harrison. One of his opponents, wrongly attributing to him a humble origin, had spoken of him as one who had lived in a log cabin and drunk hard cider, and the expression was caught up by his adherents and made a party cry.—Log-cabin quilt, a patchwork quilt of a particular design. [U. S.]

Log Cabin.

Reluctantly she slipped her book under the log-cabin quilt, and said "Come in." Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 36.

Log canoe, a canoe hollowed out of a single log.—Log house, a house built of logs fitted together, and smoothed on the inside, or on both sides. Log houses in new or thickly wooded regions of North America are often of considerable size and well finished.

log¹ (log), v. t.; pret. and pp. logged, ppr. logging. [< log², n.] I. t. trans. To cut into logs.

When a Tree is so thick that after it is log'd it remains still too great a Burthen for one Man, we blow it up with Gunpowder. Danprier, Voyages, II. II. 80.

II. intrans. To cut down trees and get out logs from the forest for sawing into boards, etc.: as, to engage in logging.

log² (log), n. [= D. G. log, < Sw. logg = Dan. log, a ship's log, a piece of wood that 'lies' in the water; diff. from Icel. lög, a felled tree (> E. log¹), but from the same ult. source, namely Icel. liggja = Sw. ligga = Dan. ligge, etc., lie; see lie¹.] 1. Naut., an apparatus for measuring the rapidity of a ship's motion.

Log and Reel.

The most common form consists of a log-chip, or thin quadrant of wood, of about five inches radius, fastened to a line wound on a reel. When the log-chip is thrown overboard, its motion is retarded on striking the water, and its distance from the ship, measured after a certain time on the line (which is allowed to run out), gives approximately the speed of the ship. The chip is loaded with lead on the arc side to make it float upright. At 12 or 15 fathoms from the ship a white rag marks off the stray-line, a quantity sufficient to let the log-chip get clear of the vessel before time is marked. The rest of the line, which is from 150 to 200 fathoms long, is divided into equal parts by bits of string stuck through the strands and distinguished by the number of knots made in each, or in some stillar way, as by colored rags; hence these divisions are called knots. The length of a knot must bear the same proportion to the length of a nautical mile (see mile) that the time during which the line is allowed to run out bears to one hour. Thus, using a twenty-eight second glass, 28 : 3600 :: 47.3 feet (the usual length of a knot) : 6980 feet (the usually received length of a sea-mile). Many other devices have been invented to perform the functions of the log, which generally include a brass fly or rotator connected with mechanism acting as an index. In some cases the whole machine is towed astern of the ship, and must be hauled in to be examined; with the taffrail-log, the register is fastened to the taffrail and the fly is towed astern.

Hence—2. The record of a ship's progress, or a tabulated summary of the performance of the engines and boilers, etc.: a log-book.—Electric log, an apparatus devised for measuring the speed of water-currents, or the speed and distance traveled by ships at sea, with the aid of electricity. With the second kind mentioned under electric, the distance run is indicated by a pointer on a dial, which shows the number of turns made by a screw towed behind the vessel. Electrical conductors are incased in the tow-line, and the circuit is closed at intervals of a stated number of turns, thus operating an indicator on deck. Electric logs have not come into practical use.—Ground-log, a form of log adapted for showing the direction and speed of passage of a vessel over the ground in shoal water. It consists of an ordinary log-line, with a hand-lead of 7 or 9 pounds substituted for the log-chip. When used, the lead remains fixed at the bottom, and the line shows the path and speed of the ship and the effect of any current which may exist.—Rough log, in the United States navy, the original manuscript of a ship's log.—To heave the log. See heave.

log² (log), v. t.; pret. and pp. logged, ppr. logging. [< log², n.] 1. To record or enter in the log-book.—2. To exhibit by the indication of the log, as a rate of speed by the hour: as, the ship logs ten knots.

log³ (log), v. t. [The appar. orig. of the freq. form logger³, q. v. Cf. also loggan.] To move to and fro; rock. See logging-rock.

log⁴ (log), n. [Heb. lôgh.] A Hebrew liquid measure, the seventy-second part of a bath, or about a pint. It seems to have been of Babylonian origin, being one sixtieth of a maxis.

He shall take . . . three tenth deals of fine flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and one log of oil. Lev. xiv. 10.

log. The abbreviation of logarithm. Thus, log. 3 = 0.4771213 is an equation giving the value of the logarithm of 3.

logan, n. See loggan.

Loganiaceæ (lô-gâ-ni-â-'sê-ê), n. pl. [NL. (Eudlicher, 1836), < Logania, the typical genus, + -aceæ.] An order of gamopetalous exogens, characterized by opposite, usually entire leaves, with stipules which adhere to the leaf-stalks or are combined in the form of interpetiolar sheaths. The flowers usually grow in terminal or axillary cymes, and are four- or five-parted, with an inferior calyx, the stamens inserted on the corolla-tube, and a fruit which is capsular, drupaceous, or a berry. The order includes 30 genera and about 350 species, either herbs, shrubs, or trees, which are dispersed throughout tropical and subtropical regions. The plants are bitter and highly poisonous; the poison-nut, Strychnos nux-vomica, belongs to this order, and several other species are used in medicine. Besides Logania, an Australian genus and type of the order, it includes Gelsemium, the yellow jessamine of the southern United States, and Spigelia, the pinkroot or worm-grass.

logædic (log-â-'ê-'dik), a. and n. [< LL. logædicus, < LGr. λογαιδικός, logædic, < Gr. λόγος, speech, prose (see Logos), + αἰδῖς, song; see ode.] I. a. Literally, prose-poetic; in anc. pros., noting a variety of trocheic or iambic verse in which dactyls are combined with trochees or anapests with iambs: so called because this apparent irregularity seems to approach the non-observance of metrical laws characteristic of prose. These dactyls and anapests are not, however, full dactyls or anapests of four times or more, but cyclic dactyls or anapests of only three times, equivalent therefore in measure to trochees or iambs. A single long syllable is also used in some places in several forms of logædic verse to represent a complete foot. This long is equal not to two but to three shorts, and is therefore equivalent to a trochee. Irrational longa—and its, long reduced to the value of a short—also occur in the thesæ. A basis sometimes precedes the series. Recent metricians use the epithet logædic of mixed meters (see mixed) in general. Ancient writers classed many logædic meters as Ionic, eponic, choriambic, epichoriambic, or antispastic. Among the more familiar logædic meters are the Glyconic, Pherecratic, Asclepiadic, Sapphic, and Alcaic. See basis, 9, and cyclic, 3.

II. n. A verse of the character defined above.

logarithm (log-'a-rithm or -rithm), n. [Cf. F. logarithme = Sp. logaritmo = Pg. logarithmo = It. logaritmo = D. G. Logarithme = Dan. logaritme = Sw. logarithm (< E.); < NL. logarithmus (NGr. λογαριθμός), < Gr. λόγος, proportion, ratio (see Logos), + ἀριθμός, a number; see arithmetical.] (a) An artificial number, or number used in computation, belonging to a series (or system of logarithms) having the following properties: First, every natural or ordinary number, integral or fractional, has a logarithm in each system of logarithms; and conversely, every logarithm belongs to a natural number, called its antilogarithm. Second, in each system of logarithms, the logarithms corresponding to any geometrical progression of natural numbers are in arithmetical progression; that is, if each natural number of the series is obtained from the preceding one by multiplying a constant factor into this preceding one, then each logarithm may be obtained from the preceding one by adding a constant increment or subtracting a constant decrement. This is shown, for the system of Napier's logarithms, in the following table. It must be said that logarithms are, in general, irrational numbers, and their values can only be expressed approximately, being carried to some finite number of decimal places. Owing to the neglected places, it will often happen that the difference between two logarithms, obtained by subtracting the approximate value of one from that of the other, is in error by 1 in the last decimal place.

Natural numbers.	Napier's logarithms.	Successive differences.
0.1	123025851	23025851
1	100000000	23025851
10	76974149	23025851
100	53043298	23025851
1000	30922447	23025851
10000	17905596	23025851
100000	-15129255

It will thus be seen that if four numbers, A, B, C, D, are in proportion, so that A : B = C : D, then their four logarithms satisfy the equation, log A - log B = log C - log D; so that, to work the rule of three with logarithms, we simply substitute for each number its logarithm and proceed as usual, only that in every case we perform addition instead of multiplication and subtraction instead of division; and the result is the logarithm of the answer. (b) As now understood, a system of logarithms, besides the two essential characters set forth above, has a third, namely that the logarithm of 1 is 0. This being admitted, a simpler definition can be given of the logarithm, viz.: a logarithm is the exponent of the power to which a number constant for each system, and called the base of the system, must be raised in order to produce the natural number, or antilogarithm. Thus $(base)^{log x} = x$. At the time logarithms were invented fractional exponents had not been thought of, and even decimals, as we conceive them, were little used, the decimal point not having yet appeared; consequently, the last definition of the logarithm, which is now the usual one, was not at first possible. With logarithms in the modern sense, the rule for solving proportions still holds, but is secondary to the following fundamental rule: The sum of the logarithms of several numbers is the logarithm of the continued product of those numbers. For example, let it be required to determine the circumference of the earth in inches, knowing that its radius is 3958 miles. We take out from a table of logarithms the logarithms of all the numbers which have to be multiplied together, as follows:

Names of quantities.	Natural numbers.	Common logarithms.
Radius of the earth in miles	3958	3.5974858
Ratio of diameter to radius	2	0.3010300
Ratio of circumference to diameter	3.1415927	0.4971499
One mile in feet	5280	3.7226359
One foot in inches	12	1.0791312

The sum of these logarithms is 9.1974808, which we find by the table to be the logarithm of a number comprised between 1575690000 and 1575691000. To obtain a closer approximation, we should have to carry the logarithms to more places of decimals; but this would be useless, since the radius of the earth is only given to the nearest mile. From this fundamental rule several subsidiary rules follow as corollaries. Thus, to divide one number by another, subtract the logarithm of the divisor from that of the dividend, and the antilogarithm of the remainder is the quotient; to take the reciprocal of a number, change the sign of the logarithm, and the antilogarithm of the result is the reciprocal; to raise a number to any power, multiply the logarithm of the base by the exponent of the power, and the antilogarithm of the product is the power sought; to extract any root of a number, divide the logarithm of that number by the index of the root, and the antilogarithm of the quotient is the root sought. For example, what is the amount of $1 at interest at 6 per cent. compounding yearly for 1,000 years? We must here raise 1.06 to the thousandth power. The common logarithm of 1.06 is 0.0253058653; 1,000 times this is 25.3058653, which is the logarithm of 202284 followed by 19 ciphers, or say 20 quadrillions 22840 trillions. In the English numeration. To give an idea of the advantage of logarithms in trigonometrical calculations, it may be mentioned that to find the altitude of the sun from its hour-angle and declination with logarithms requires seven numbers to be taken out of the tables and two additions to be performed, while the solution of the same problem with a table of natural sines requires, as before, the taking out of seven numbers from the tables, and besides eight additions and two halvings. There are two systems of logarithms in common use, the hyperbolic, natural, or Napierian or Napierian (not Napier's own) logarithms in analysis, and common, decimal, or Briggsian logarithms in ordinary computations. The base of the system of hyperbolic logarithms is 2.718281828459. This kind of logarithm derives its name from its measuring the area between the equilateral hyperbola, an ordinate, and the axes of coordinates when these are the asymptotes; but the chief characteristic of the system is that, x being any number less than unity,

$$\log(1+x) = x - \frac{1}{2}x^2 + \frac{1}{3}x^3 - \frac{1}{4}x^4 + \text{etc.}$$

Thus, the hyperbolic logarithm of 1.1 is calculated as follows:

x	0.100000000	$\frac{1}{2}x^2$	0.005000000
$\frac{1}{3}x^3$	0.000333333	$\frac{1}{4}x^4$	0.000025000
$\frac{1}{5}x^5$	0.000020000	$\frac{1}{6}x^6$	0.000001667
$\frac{1}{7}x^7$	0.000000014	$\frac{1}{8}x^8$	0.000000001
	0.100385847		0.005025108
	0.005025168
log 1.1	0.095310179

By the skilful application of this principle, with some others of subsidiary importance, the whole table of natural logarithms has been calculated. The logarithms of any other system, in the modern sense, are simply the products of the hyperbolic logarithms into a factor constant for that system, called the modulus of the system of logarithms; and each system in the old sense is derivable from a system in the modern sense by adding a constant to every logarithm. The base of the common system of logarithms is 10, and its modulus is 0.4342944819. A common logarithm consists of an integer part and a decimal; the former is called the index or characteristic, the latter the mantissa. The characteristic depends only upon the position of the decimal point, and not at all upon the succession of significant figures; the mantissa depends entirely upon the succession of figures, and not at all upon the position of the decimal point. Thus,

log 12345	4.0914911
log 1234.5	3.0914911
log 123.45	2.0914911

The characteristic of a logarithm is equal to the number of places between the decimal point and the first significant figure. Logarithms of numbers less than unity are negative; but, negative numbers not being convenient in computation, such logarithms are usually written in one or other of two ways, as follows: The first and perhaps the best way is to make the mantissa positive and take the characteristic only as negative, increasing, for this purpose, its absolute value by 1, and writing the minus sign over it. Thus, in place of writing -0.3010300 , which is the logarithm of $\frac{1}{2}$, we may write 1.6989700. The second and most usual way is to augment the logarithm by 10 or by 100, thus forming a logarithm in the original sense of the word. Thus, -0.3010300 would be written 9.6989700, the characteristic in this case being 9 less the number of places between the decimal point and the first significant figure. Logarithms were invented and a table published in 1614 by John Napier of Scotland; but the kind now chiefly in use were proposed by his contemporary Henry Briggs, professor of geometry in Gresham College in London. The first extended table of common logarithms, by Adrian Vlacq, 1628, has been the basis of every one since published. Abbreviated l. or log.—Arithmetical complement of a logarithm. See arithmetical.—Binary logarithms. See binary.—Briggsian, common, or decimal logarithm. See above.—Circular logarithm, an imaginary logarithm.—Division by logarithms. See division.—Gaussian logarithms. See Gaussian.—Logistic logarithm, the logarithm of a number of seconds subtracted from the logarithm of 3600, the number of seconds in an hour.—Natural, hyperbolic, Neperian, or Napierian logarithm. See above.—Negative index of a logarithm, one that is affected with the negative sign. Such are the indices of the logarithms of all numbers less than unity.—Parabolic logarithm, a real logarithm.—Quadratic logarithm, the exponent of a power of 2 which power of 2 is itself the exponent of a power of the decimal anti-logarithm of 2—10, the power being the number of which the first exponent is the quadratic logarithm. That is, if $a = 10^x - 10$ and $a^x = N$, then x is the quadratic logarithm of N , written LqN .

logarithmic (log'a-rith-met'ik), a. [< logarithm + -etic, after arithmetic.] Same as logarithmic. [Rare.]

logarithmical (log'a-rith-met'i-kal), a. [< logarithmic + -al.] Same as logarithmic.

logarithmic (log'a-rith'mik), a. [< logarithm + -ic.] Of or pertaining to logarithms; consisting of logarithms.—Logarithmic curvature, the ratio of the distances from the points of contact of two infinitely neighboring tangents to their point of intersection. This ratio is unity at an ordinary point, and on an algebraic curve is always rational.—Logarithmic curve. See logistic curve, under logistic.—Logarithmic ellipse, hyperbola, etc. See the nouns.—Logarithmic plus and minus, two algebraic signs, \perp and T , such that $a = \beta \perp \gamma$ and $a = \beta \text{T} \gamma$ signify that $\log \tan (\frac{1}{2}a + 45^\circ) = \log \tan (\frac{1}{2}\beta + 45^\circ) \pm \log \tan (\frac{1}{2}\gamma + 45^\circ)$, the upper sign for \perp , and the lower for T .—Logarithmic spiral, a curve-line somewhat analogous to the common logarithmic curve. It intersects all its radiants at the same angle, and the tangent of this angle is the modulus of the system of logarithms which the particular spiral represents. Its involute and evolute are also logarithmic spirals. Also called logistic spiral.

Logarithmic Spiral.

logarithmical (log-a-rith'-mi-kal), a. [< logarithmic + -al.] Same as logarithmic.

logarithmically (log-a-rith'-mi-kal-i), adv. By the use or aid of logarithms.

logarithmotechny (log-a-rith'mō-tek-ni), n. [< E. logarithm (NGr. λογαριθμος) + Gr. τέχνη, art.] The art of calculating logarithms.

logat, n. See logget.

log-beam (log'bēm), n. In a sawmill, the traveling frame which supports the log and feeds it to the saws.

log-board (log'bōrd), n. [< log² + board.] A pair of boards shutting together like a book, formerly used instead of a log-slate.

log-book (log'būk), n. [= Sw. logbok = Dan. logbog; as log² + book.] 1. The official record of proceedings on board ship; so called from the register which it includes of the indications of the log. It is a journal of all important items happening on shipboard, contains the data from which the navigator determines his position by dead-reckoning (which see), and is, when properly kept, a complete meteorological journal. On board merchant ships the log is kept by the first officer; on board men-of-war, by the navigator.

2. In the board schools of Great Britain, a book for memoranda kept by the principal of the school, in accordance with the requirements of the Education Act.

log-butter (log'but'ēr), n. A heavy drag-saw used in squaring or butting the ends of logs.

log-cabin (log'kab'in), n. See log cabin, under log¹, a.

log-chip (log'chip), n. The board, in the form of a quadrant, attached to a log-line. See log². Also, erroneously, log-ship.

log-cock (log'kok), n. The pileated woodpecker of North America, Hylotomus or Ceophlaeus pileatus, more fully called black log-cock.

loger, n. and v. A Middle English form of lodge.

log-fish (log'fish), n. The barrel-fish, Lirus perciformis. Also called rudder-fish.

log-frame (log'frām), n. A sawmill machine for cutting timber into planks; a deal-frame.

loggan (log'an), n. [Also logan; < log³.] A logging-rock or roeking-stone.

loggat, n. See logget.

logget, n. and v. A Middle English form of lodge.

logger (log'ēr), n. [< log¹ + -er.] A man employed in getting out logs or timber from the forest, and sometimes in getting them down rivers to market. [U. S. and Canada.]

There were a couple of loggers on board, in red flannel shirts, and with rifles. Lovell, Fireside Travels, p. 110.

logger² (log'ēr), a. [< log¹ + -er, here used adjectively. Cf. loggy, logy.] Heavy; stupid. Compare loggerhead.

My head too heavy was and logger
Even to make a Pettifogger.
Cotton, Burlesque upon Burlesque.

logger³ (log'ēr), v. i. [Freq. of log³. Cf. Dan. logre, wag the tail.] To move irregularly, as a wheel that is loose on its axle. [Prov. Eng.]

loggerhead (log'ēr-hed), n. [< logger² + head.]
1. A blockhead; a dunce; a dolt; a thickskull.

Now was he to you, loggerheads,
That dwell near Castlecary,
To let awa' sic a bonny lass,
A Highlandm'n to marry.
Lizae Bailie (Child's Ballads, IV. 75).

You in the mean time, you silly Logerhead, deserve to have your Bones well-thrash'd with a Fool's staff, for thinking to stir up Kings and Princes to War by such Childish Arguments. Milton, Ans. to Salmasius, Pref., p. 17.

2. A spherical mass of iron with a long handle, used after being heated for various purposes, as to liquefy tar, to ignite the priming of a cannon, etc. Also called loggerheat.

Here dozed a fire of beechen logs, that bred Strange fancies in its embers golden-red,
And nursed the loggerhead whose hissing dip,
Timed by nice instinct, creamed the mug of flip.
Lovell, Fitz Adam's Story.

3. A post in the stern of a whale-boat, with a bell-shaped head, around which the harpoon-line passes; a snubbing-post.—4. The hawk-billed turtle, a marine species of the genus Thalassochelys, as the American loggerhead, T. caouana or caretta, or the Indian, T. olivacea; also, the alligator-turtle of the southern United States, Macrochelys lacertina.—5. The small gray or Carolinian shrike, Lanius ludovicianus, a bird of the family Laniidae, resident and abundant in the southern parts of the United States, and sometimes as far north as New England. It is about 8½ inches long (the wing and tail each 4 inches), slate-colored above and white below, with the wings and tail black and white, the scapulars and upper tail-coverts bleached a little, and each side of the head marked by a black bar, the two bars meeting on the forehead. The bird is a geographical race of the common white-rumped shrike, L. excubitorides, and its habits are the same as those of other butcher-birds.

6. A flycatcher. [West Indies.]—7. The chub, [Local, Eng.]—8. A kind of sponge found in Florida.—9. pl. The knapweed, Centaurea nigra; also, the blue-bottle, C. cyanus.—At loggerheads, engaged in bickerings or disputes; contending about differences of opinion or the like.

At last the divine and the poet, traditionally at loggerheads, have a common bond of suffering. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 13.

To fall or go to loggerheads, to come to blows.
loggerheaded (log'ēr-hed'ed), a. [< loggerhead + -ed.] Dull; stupid; doltish.

You logger-headed and unpollish'd grooms!
What, no attendance? Shak., T. of the S., iv. 1. 128.

loggerheat (log'ēr-hēt), n. Same as loggerhead, 2.

loggett, n. [Also loggat, logat; dim. of log¹.] 1. A small log or piece of wood.

Now are they tossing of his legs and arms,
Like loggets at a pear-tree.
B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, iv. 5.

2. pl. An old English game, played by fixing a stake in the ground and pitching small pieces of wood at it, the nearest thrower winning; skittle-pins. It was at one time prohibited by statute, under Henry VIII.

Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggets with them? Shak., Hsmlt, v. 1. 100.

[I have seen it (loggets) played in different counties, at their sheep-shearing feasts, where the winner was entitled to a black fleece, which he afterwards presented to the maid to spin, for the purpose of making a petticoat, and on condition that she knelt down on the fleece to be kissed by all the rustics present. Steevens, note on the above passage.] loggia (loj'jā), n.; pl. loggie (-e). [It. = E. lodge, q. v.] In Italian arch.: (a) A gallery or arcade in a building, properly at the height of one or more stories, running along the front or part of the front of the building, and open on at least one side to the air, on which side is a series of pillars or slender piers. Such galleries afford an airy and sheltered resting-place or outlook, and are very characteristic of Italian palaces. Among famous loggie are those of the Vatican, decorated by Raphael and his scholars. Compare belvedere. See cut in next column. (b) A large ornamental window in the middle of the chief story of a building, often projecting from the wall, as seen in old Venetian palaces.

logging (log'ing), n. [Verbal n. of log¹, v.] The business of cutting and getting out logs or timber from a forest. [U. S. and Canada.]

logging², n. A Middle English form of lodging.

logging-ax (log'ing-aks), n. A heavy ax used in cutting off logs.

logging-bee (log'ing-bē), n. Same as log-roll-ing, 1.

Loggia, Ospedale Maggiore, Milan.

A logging-bee followed the burning of the fallow, as a matter of course. In the bush (Canada) where hands are few . . . these gatherings are considered indispensable [1832]. Susanna Moodie, Roughing it in the Bush, II. 58.

logging-camp (log'ing-kamp), n. An encampment of loggers or persons engaged in logging during winter. [U. S. and Canada.]

logging-head (log'ing-hed), n. In a steam-engine, the working-beam. E. H. Knight.

logging-rock (log'ing-rok), n. A rock so balanced on its base that it logs or rocks to and fro very easily, as by the force of the wind.

log-glass (log'glās), n. A fourteen- or twenty-eight-second sand-glass, used with the log-line to ascertain the speed of a ship. See log².

loght, n. An obsolete form of loch¹ or lough¹, and of low³.

loghead (log'hed), n. A thick-headed or stupid person; a loggerhead. [Rare.]

Not being born purely a Loghead (Dummkopf), thou hadst no other outlook. Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, p. 113.

log-headed (log'hed'ed), a. Stupid. Davies.
For well I knewe it was some mad-headed chylde That invented this name, that the log-headed knave might be begilde. R. Edwards, Damon and Pythias.

log-house (log'hous'), n. See log house, under log¹, a.

logic (loj'ik), n. and a. [Formerly logick, logique, < ME. logike, < OF. (and F.) logique = Sp. lógica = Pg. It. logica, < L. logica, logic, < Gr. λογική (occurring first in Cicero), logie; properly fem. of λογικός (> L. logicus), of or pertaining to speech or reason or reasoning, rational, reasonable, < λόγος, speech, reason; see Logos.] 1. n. 1. The science of the distinction of true from false reasoning, with whatever is naturally treated in connection therewith. See the phrases below. The definition of logic has been much disputed, and many definitions of the word have been given. There was much discussion in ancient and medieval times of the questions whether logic was a mode of knowing, or an instrument of science, or an art, or a practical science, or a speculative science. There was also a great diversity of opinion as to the subject-matter of logic, some holding that it had to do with words, others that it treated of the ens rationis, or that which has its existence in thought, and still others that it related to argumentations or some instrument of knowing. In modern times, especially since Kant, the real divergence of conception has been very much greater, one party holding that the main business of logic consists in developing the true theory of the process of cognition, and a second that its chief work is to separate inferences into classes distinguished by their form, while a third maintains that the form and the matter of thought have to be evolved together.

Logic hath eke in his degree
Betwene the trouth and the falshe
The playne wordes for to shede.
Gower, Conf. Amant, vii.

He that knoweth reason to be in man, and the same given by the great might of God, must needs confesse the Logique also is in man, and that only by God. For there is none other difference betwixt the one and thother but that Logique is a Greke worde and Reason is an English worde. . . . Logique is an arte to reason probably on bothe partes of al matters that be putte fourth, so ferre as the nature of every thing can beare.
Sir T. Wilson, Rule of Reason (1552).

[Dialectic and organon are generally synonyms of logic, though they have been variously distinguished at different times.]

2. Reasoning, or power of reasoning; ratiocination; argumentation; used absolutely, reason; sound sense.

Ignorance in stilts,
His cap well lined with logic not his own,
With parrot tongue perform'd the scholar's part.
Cowper, Task, II. 737.

Abstract logic, the general theory of logic (also called logica docens, general and theoretical logic); opposed to concrete logic, or logic as an element of active thought in the prosecution of science (also called logica utens, special and practical logic). The terms logica utens and docens are derived from logicus utens, he who draws conclusions, and logicus docens, he who frames demonstrations. But the corresponding distinction of the branches of science is not very clear, and the terms are often used vaguely and incorrectly.—Acquired logic, or logica docens, the correct knowledge or strictly scientific part of the rules of reasoning, as opposed to logica utens, or the natural faculty of reasoning.—Applied logic, rules for the direction of the understanding under the psychological conditions to which it is subjected; that part of logic which shows how to avoid prejudice, how to escape various erroneous tendencies, etc.—Aristotelian logic.—Artificial logic.—Artificial logic, (a) The acquired habit of distinguishing truth from falsehood; the science, art, or organon of logic; also called acquired logic; opposed to natural logic (a). (b) The science of the necessary rules of thought; also called scientific logic; opposed to natural logic (c).—Calculus of logic. See calculus.—Concrete logic. See abstract logic.—Deductive logic, that branch of logic which takes no account of probability or other quantitative considerations.—Formal logic. See formal.—Habitual logic. See habitual.—Inductive logic, the logic of scientific reasoning.—Material logic, the logic which takes into account either the laws of the process of human cognition or the matter to which the thought is directed.—Natural logic. (a) The natural faculty of distinguishing truth from falsity; also called native logic. (b) The logical doctrine applicable to natural things; opposed to the logic of faith, which is applicable to supernatural things (a distinction used in discussions on the Trinity). (c) An anthropological science which treats of the rules of the natural use of the understanding.—Objective logic. (a) The body of doctrines of which logic is built up; also called systematic logic; opposed to habitual logic, which is any individual's knowledge of those doctrines. (b) The logic of objective thought, or thought as it exists in the external world. (c) The science which expounds the laws by which our scientific procedure should be governed, so far as these lie in the contents, materials, or objects about which our knowledge is conversant. Also called material logic.—Particular logic. See universal logic.—Pure logic, the general laws of thought; opposed to applied or modified logic, the laws of logic applicable to this or that kind of mind as shown in empirical anthropology, such as the doctrine of Bacon concerning idols.—Scientific logic. Same as artificial logic (b).—Subjective logic, the opposite of objective logic in any sense.—Subjectivist logic, or subjectivistically formal logic, a system of logic whose only aim is to give thought a subjective agreement with itself, such, for example, as the system of Mansell; opposed to objectivistic logic, which aims at rules for making or aiding thought to agree with the reality.—To chop logic. See chop.—Universal logic, the general logical doctrine applicable to all matter; opposed to particular logic, the doctrine of the application of the formulas of logic to particular cases— for example, to necessary, contingent, probable, and impossible matter.

II. a. Pertaining to God the Son as the Logos or Word of God. [Rare.]

The Fathers, rejecting all savour of a bloody sacrifice, have no scruple of speaking about the Eucharist as a sacrifice in the other sense; they call it a "logic sacrifice" (θεία λογική), for the Logos is the Word of God, Jesus Christ. Baring-Gould, Our Inheritance, p. 382.

logical (loj'i-kal), a. and n. [logic + -al.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to logic; used or taught in logic: as, logical subtleties.

They are put off by the names of virtues, and natures, and actions, and passions, and such other logical words. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 98.

2. According to the principles of logic; so stated or conceived, as an argument, that the form guarantees its validity; unobjectionable from the point of view of logic; consistent: as, logical reasoning; a logical division of a subject; a logical definition.—3. Skilled in logic; furnished with logic; given to considering the processes of reason as to their forms or genera, and critically as to their validity and eogeny; applied especially to an analytical mind or a methodical habit.—Logical abecedarium. See abecedarium.—Logical abstraction. See abstraction.—Logical actuality, the satisfying of the principle of sufficient reason.—Logical addition. See addition. I.—Logical algebra. See algebra.—Logical conviction, intellectual conviction; the settlement of individual belief by reason.—Logical distinctness, the accurate logical analysis of a conception.—Logical division. (a) See division. (b) The division of a genus into species.—Logical induction. See induction. 5.—Logical machine. See machine.—Logical medicine, dogmatic or methodic medicine; opposed to empiric medicine.—Logical momenta of judgments, the different modes of uniting representations into one consciousness.—Logical necessity. See necessity.—Logical part, a species considered relatively to its genus.—Logical perfection, the perspicuity, harmony, and completeness of a science; opposed to material perfection.—Logical possibility, the possibility of that which does not involve contradiction.—Logical presumption, ampliative inference; a scientific induction or hypothesis.—Logical privation, the absence of a form that ought to be in a subject; opposed to physical privation, or the absence of a form that is sometimes in a subject.—Logical reflection, the comparison of concepts.—Logical truth. (a) The truth of a proposition; the agreement of a judgment with the reality. (b) Self-consistency.—Logical whole, a genus considered as having its species as parts.—Syn. 1. Dialectic.—2. Coherent, consistent.—3. Analytical, methodical.

II. n. Used only in the phrase little (small) logicals. These are the logical doctrines of supposition, ampliation, restriction, distribution, the exponentials, consequences, obligations, insolubles, etc.

They [the Utopians] have not devised one of all those rules of restrictions, amplifications, very wittily invented in the small logicals which here our children in every place do learn. Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), it. 7.

logicality (loj-i-kal'i-ti), n. [logical + -ity.] The quality of being logical; correctness or consistency of reasoning; logicalness.

logicalization (loj'i-kal-i-zā'shon), n. [logicalize + -ation.] The act of logicalizing or making logical. [Rare.]

The mere act of writing tends in a great measure to the logicalization of thought. Poe, Marginalia, xvi.

logicalize (loj'i-kal-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. logicalized, ppr. logicalizing. [logical + -ize.] To make logical. [Rare.]

Thought is logicalized by the effort at . . . expression. Poe, Marginalia, xvi.

logically (loj'i-kal-i), adv. According to logical principles, or by formally valid inference: as, to argue logically.

logicalness (loj'i-kal-nes), n. The quality of being logical.

logic-chopping (loj'ik-chop'ing), n. Quibbling or sophistical reasoning. See chop logic, under chop, v. t.

logic-fisted, a. Close-fisted. [Rare.]

One with an open-handed freedom spends all he lays his fingers on; another with a logic-fisted grippiness catches at and grasps all he can come within the reach of. Kennet, tr. of Erasmus's Praise of Folly, p. 87.

logician (lō-jish'an), n. [logic + -ian.] 1. One who is skilled in logic or in argument; a teacher or professor of logic.

First, like a right cunning and sturdy logician, he denies my argument, not mattering whether in the major or minor. Milton, Colasterion.

Aristotle, who was the best Critick, was also one of the best Logicians that ever appeared in the World. Addison, Spectator, No. 291.

2. In medieval universities, a student of arts in the second class or lecture; one who was preparing for the baccalaureate, being above the summatists and below the physicians.

logicianeri (lō-jish'an-er), n. [logician + -eri.] Same as logician, 1.

There is no good logicianer but would think, I think, that a syllogism thus formed of such a thieving major, a runaway minor, and a traiterous consequent must needs prove at the weakest to such a hanging argument. Patten (Arber's Eng. Garner, III. 137).

logicize (loj'i-siz), v. i.; pret. and pp. logicized, ppr. logicizing. [logic + -ize.] To exercise one's logical powers; argue. Also spelled logicise. [Rare.]

Intellect is not speaking and logicizing; it is seeing and ascertaining. Carlyle.

logics (loj'iks), n. [Pl. of logic: see -ics.] The science or principles of logic.

logie (lō'gi), n. [Origin obscure. Cf. logy.] A bit of hollowed-out pewter polished in various concavities and used as theatrical jewelry. [Theatrical slang.]

logist (lō'jist), n. [L.L. logista, < Gr. λογιστής, a reckoner, an accountant, < λογίζεσθαι, reckon, < λόγος, an account; see Logos.] An expert accountant. Bailey, 1731.

logistic (lō-jis'tik), a. and n. [= F. logistique, < Gr. λογιστικός, skilled in calculating (fem. λογιστική, the art of calculation), < λογιστής, a calculator, < λογίζεσθαι, compute, < λόγος, calculation, proportion; see logic, Logos.] I. a. 1. Logical. Berkeley.—2. Skilled in or pertaining to computation and calculation.

Plato's dislike of the Sophists extended to the subjects which they taught, and he is on many occasions careful to distinguish the vulgar logistic from the philosophical arithmetic. J. Gow, Hist. Greek Mathematics.

3. Proportional; pertaining to proportions.

—Logistic arithmetic. See II.—Logistic line or curve, a curve whose ordinates increase arithmetically while its abscissas increase geometrically. Also called logarithmic curve. See the figure.—Logistic logarithm. See logarithm.—Logistic spiral. Same as logarithmic spiral. See logarithmic.

II. n. (a) The art of calculation, with the fingers, with an abacus, with characters, or otherwise; practical or vulgar arithmetic. (b) Sexagesimal arithmetic.—Spectious logistic, the art of calculating by means of geometrical constructions.

logistical (lō-jis'ti-kal), a. [logistic + -al.] Same as logistic.

logistics (lō-jis'tiks), n. [Pl. of logistic: see -ics.] 1. Same as logistic, especially in sense (b).—2. That branch of military science which relates to the movement and supplying of armies, and all arrangements necessary for and matters connected with the carrying on of campaigns, including the study of present or possible fields of war in their topographical and other relations; according to some, the science of strategy and arms in general.

log-line (log'lin), n. [= Sw. loglina = Dan. log-line; as log² + line².] Naut., a line or cord, from 150 to 200 fathoms in length, fastened to the log-chip by means of three legs of cord, and wound on a reel, called the log-reel. See log².

logman (log'man), n.; pl. logmen (-men). 1. A man who carries logs.

The very instant that I saw you, did My heart fly to your service: . . . for your sake Ato I this patient log-man. Shak., Tempest, iii. 1. 67.

2. One employed in cutting and conveying logs to a mill. [Local, U. S.]

log-measurer (log'mezh'ūr-ēr), n. An instrument for gaging logs and reducing the measure in the rough to board-measure, in running feet, after making due allowance for losses in squaring, etc.

logocracy (log-ok'rā-si), n. [Gr. λόγος, word (see Logos), + κρατία, govern, < κράτος, strength.] Government by the power of words. [Rare.]

In this country every man adopts some particular slang-whanger as the standard of his judgment, and reads everything he writes, if he reads nothing else: which is doubtless the reason why the people of this logocracy are so marvelously enlightened. Iring, Salmagundi, xiv.

logocyclic (log-ō-sik'lik), a. [Gr. λόγος, ratio, proportion, + κύκλος, circle.] An epithet occurring only in the phrase logocyclic curve, a crunodal circular cubic. It may be constructed by increasing and diminishing the radius vector of a variable point on a straight line by the distance of that point from the point of the line nearest to the origin. The equation of the curve is

$$(x^2 + y^2)(2a - x) = a^2x.$$

It resembles the folium of Descartes, but has a rounder loop.

logodædaly (log-ō-ded'al-i), n. [L.L. togodædalia, < L.Gr. λογοδαΐδάλια, < Gr. λογοδαΐδαλος, skilled in tricking out a speech, < λόγος, word, + δαΐδαλος, cunningly wrought; see dedal.] Verbal legerdemain; a playing with words, as by passing from one meaning of them to another. [Rare.]

For one instance of mere logomachy, I could bring ten instances of logodædaly or verbal legerdemain. Coleridge.

logogram (log'ō-gram), n. [Gr. λόγος, word, + γράμμα, a letter; see grammar.] 1. A word-sign; a single written character, or a combination of characters regarded as a unit, representing a whole word. A logogram may be pictorial—that is, it may be an ideogram, such as the astronomical signs ☉ for the sun and ☾ for the moon; or it may be phonetic in its immediate origin—that is, it may be a single letter or set of letters standing for an abbreviation for the complete word, as c. for cent, s. for skilling; or, lastly, it may be such a letter or set of letters transferred from one language to another, losing its phonetic value, but still representing the same idea, as £ or lb. for the Latin libra, signifying and pronounced pound.

2. A versified puzzle containing synonyms of a number of words derived from a single word by recombining its letters, the solution depending upon the guessing of the derived words from the synonyms, and the discovery from the former of the original word. Thus, from curtain may be derived curt, curt, nut, etc., for which may be used in the puzzle dog, short, shell, fruit, etc.

logograph (log'ō-graf), n. [Gr. λόγος, word, + γράφειν, write.] 1. A written word, a character or series of characters representing a word. See logographic, 1, and logography, 1.—2. A word-writer; an instrument for recording spoken sounds.

Barlow has constructed an apparatus for recording the sounds of the human voice, which he calls a logograph. Smithsonian Report, 1880, p. 251.

logographer (lō-gog'ra-fēr), n. [logography + -er.] 1. In anc. Gr. lit., a prose-writer; especially, a historian. Under the name of logographers are commonly classed the early Greek historians before Herodotus. This school of writers began with Cadmus of Miletus, about 550 B. C., and continued for over a century. They wrote in the Ionic dialect, and most of them were Ionians by birth.

2. One who is skilled in logography.
logographic (log-ō-graf'ik), a. [Gr. λογογραφικός, concerning the writing of speeches, < λογος, speech, a writer of speeches; see logography.] 1. Pertaining to written words; consisting of characters or signs each of which singly represents a complete word.

English is, like Chinese, not alphabetic in its dress, but logographic; and there is no man living, in England or America, who has learned or can learn to read it: that is, to pronounce anything and everything written in it. T. Hill, True Order of Studies, p. 106.

2. Pertaining to logography.
logographical (log-ō-graf'i-kal), a. [logographic + -al.] Same as logographic.

logographically (log-ō-graf'i-kal-i), adv. In a logographic manner; by means of logography.

The Times is usually dated from the 1st of January 1783, but was really commenced on the 18th January 1788, under the title of The London Daily Universal Register, printed logographically. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 417.

logography (lō-gog'ra-fi), n. [= F. logographie, < Gr. λογγραφία, a writing of speeches, prose or historical writing, < λογγράφος, a writer of speeches, a historian or prose-writer, later a secretary or accountant, < λόγος, a speech, + γράφειν, write.] 1. A method of printing in which short words of frequent occurrence, roots, prefixes, suffixes, etc., are cast on single types, called logotypes. It was this system (then patented) that was originally used (from 1785) in printing the newspaper which afterward became the London "Times." Logography was soon abandoned, but there have been attempts to revive it.

2. A method of reporting speeches word for word without the use of stenography, tried in the French National Assembly for two years, 1790-92. It required the employment of twelve or fourteen reporters, each in succession taking down a few words on paper so marked as to show the proper sequence. It was abandoned as cumbersome and liable to great error.

logograph (log'ō-grif), n. [Also logographe, and erroneously logogryph; = F. logographe = Sp. It. logogrifo = Pg. logogripho, < Gr. λόγος, word, + γράφος, a fishing-basket, a riddle.] A riddle; specifically, a riddle formed by the arbitrary or confused mingling of parts or elements, which have to be recombed in proper order for the answer.

The charade is of recent birth, and I cannot discover the origin of this species of logographies.

L. D'Israeli, Curios. of Lit., I. 389.

logomachist (lō-gom'ā-kist), n. [logomachy + -ist.] One who contends about words, or who uses words merely as weapons or instruments of contention.

Nor . . . was Protagoras a shallow logomachist, asserting the difficulties of human knowledge without a profound investigation. J. Owen, Evenings with Skeptics, I. 157.

logomachy (lō-gom'ā-ki), n. [= F. logomachie = Sp. logomaquia = It. logomachia, < LGr. λογομαχία, war about words, < λογομαχος, a fighter about words, < Gr. λόγος, word (see Logos), + μάχεσθαι, fight, μάχη, a fight.] 1. Contention in words merely, or a contention about words; a war of words.

What terrible battles yclep'd logomachies have they occasioned and perpetuated with so much gall and ink-shed. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, II. 2.

2. A game played with cards each bearing one letter, with which words are formed.

logomania (log-ō-mā'ni-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λόγος, word (see Logos), + μανία, madness; see mania.] Aphasia in its most general sense.

logometer¹ (lō-gom'ē-tēr), n. [NL., < Gr. λόγος, ratio, proportion (see Logos), + μέτρον, measure: see *meter*².] 1. A logarithmic scale. The natural numbers, generally from one power of 10 to another, are laid down at distances along the scale from a fixed point proportional to their logarithms. In Palmer's computing scale, made about 1845, there was a circle turning in its plane in a fixed circle, and the limbs of both were divided logarithmically, the numbers from 10 to 1000 occupying the circumference. It was a very useful instrument. Nystrom's calculator had curves engraved upon a metallic disk, and an arm with graduations on its edge turned about the center of the disk. The "magic square" sold in New York about 1883 was a square divided into square compartments, and was equivalent to a long scale cut up into many equal pieces placed side by side; and the measurement was made by the two edges of a square card or bit of paper. It was cheap and useful.

2. A scale for measuring chemical equivalents.

logometer² (log-om'e-tēr), n. [Irreg. < *log*² + Gr. μέτρον, measure: see *meter*².] A patent log for ships.

logometric (log-ō-met'rik), a. [As *logometer*¹ + -ic; cf. metric.] Of or pertaining to a logometric used in ascertaining or measuring chemical equivalents: as, a logometric scale.

logometrical (log-ō-met'ri-kal), a. [logometric + -al.] Same as logometric.

Logos (log'os), n. [L. logos, < Gr. λόγος, that which is said or spoken, a word, saying, speech, also the power of the mind manifested in speech, reason, account, reference, analogy, proportion, ratio, condition, etc., in N. T. ὁ λόγος, the Reason or Word (as a person) (see def.), < λέγειν, speak, say, tell, = L. legere, read: see legend, lecture. Hence logic, etc.] 1. In theol., the Divine Word; the transcendent Divine Reason as expressed in a distinct personality; the Second Person in the Trinity, both before and after the incarnation: so called as expressing God both to God himself and to his creatures, as language expresses reason and as reason is expressed by language. The word Logos (λόγος) is used by Plato as a manifestation of or emanation from the Supreme Being. Philo Judæus, using ideas and language partly Platonic and partly scriptural, derived especially from the Sapiential books, developed these in a form that suggests the Christian doctrine of the Logos. St. John, especially in the first chapter of his Gospel, first distinctly gives the Christian doctrine, assigning distinct personality to the Logos. Some early Christian writers distinguish between the Logos as Immanent (λόγος ἐνθάτος), or the Divine Reason still remaining in the bosom of the Father, and the Logos as uttered (λόγος προφορικός), or the Word sent forth to the world.

2. In the philosophy of Heraclitus and the Stoics, the rational principle that governs and develops the universe.

Taken broadly, the doctrine of the Logos may be said to have run in two parallel courses—the one philosophical, the other theological; the one the development of the Logos as reason, the other the development of the Logos as word; the one Hellenic, the other Hebrew. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 803.

Spermatic logos, in the Stoic philos., a principle of generation resident in matter.

logothete (log'ō-thēt), n. [MGr. λογοθέτης, one who audits accounts, < Gr. λόγος, account (see Logos), + θετός, verbal adj. of τίθειναι, put: see thesis.] 1. Properly, an accountant; hence, an officer of the Byzantine empire, who might be (a) the public treasurer, (b) the head of any administrative department, or (c) the chancellor of the empire.—2. In the Gr. Ch., the chancellor or keeper of the patriarchal seal of the Patriarch of Constantinople.

logotype (log'ō-tip), n. [Gr. λόγος, word (see Logos), + τύπος, an impression: see type.] A type on which are cast the letters of a word or syllable; a single type used in place of several types. See logography, 1.

log-perch (log'pērĉ), n. A percoid fish, Percina caprodes, the largest of the fresh-water fishes known in the United States as darters (Etheostominae). It attains a length of from 6 to 8 inches, and is common in the Great Lakes and southwestern streams. Also called hogfish, hog-molly, and rockfish.

log-reel (log'rēl), n. Naut., a reel on which the log-line is wound. See *log*².

logroll (log'rōl), v. i. [log-roll-er, log-roll-ing.] To engage in log-rolling in the political sense.

In the Greek epic, the gods are partisans, they hold caucuses, they lobby and log-roll for their candidates. Lovell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 98.

log-roller (log'rō'lēr), n. 1. In a sawmill, a steam-power machine for loading logs upon the saw-carriage.—2. One of a number of politicians in a legislative body, united by an agreement, implied or expressed, to further each the other's schemes in consideration of a return in kind; a person habitually addicted to political log-rolling. [U. S.]

log-rolling (log'rō'ling), n. 1. A joining of forces for the purpose of handling logs: (a) For rolling the logs into heaps for burning after the trees have been felled to clear the land. Sometimes many neighbors were invited to assist, and a merry-making followed. (b) In lumbering, for rolling logs into a stream, where they are bound together and floated down to the mills. (c) For collecting logs for building purposes. [U. S. and Canada.]

Other rude pleasures were more truly characteristic of their [Kentuckians'] local environments—the log-rolling and the quilting, the social frolic of the harvesting, the merry parties of flax-pullers, and the corn-husking at night-fall. Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 554.

Hence—2. Mutual aid given by persons to one another in carrying out their several schemes or gaining their individual ends: used especially of politicians and legislators. [U. S.]

As will be seen subsequently, I do not think that corruption, in its grosser forms, is rife at Washington. When it appears, it appears chiefly in the milder form of reciprocal jobbing or (as it is called) log-rolling.

J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I. 156.

Another general delusion is the belief in log-rolling. The topic is well worn and needs few remarks. If by log-rolling is meant that reviewers praise people in hopes of being praised in turn, then the taunt is empty. Few people are quite so very mean or so ignorant of human nature as to log-roll in that sense. The American, XVII. 350.

log-scale (log'skāl), n. A table showing the quantity of lumber one inch thick, board-measure, obtainable from a round log, the length and the diameter beneath the bark being given. E. H. Knight.

log-slate (log'slāt), n. Naut., a double slate, marked and ruled on its inner side, like a log-book, on which the log is first recorded. The entries are daily copied from the slate into the log-book. In the United States navy the slate has been replaced by a paper book, so as to preserve the original record.

log-turner (log'tēr'nēr), n. In a sawmill, a machine for moving a log sidewise upon the saw-carriage. It consists of a steam-cylinder with a long piston-rod, the end of which engages and turns the logs.

logwood (log'wūd), n. [*log*¹ + *wood*¹: so called because imported in logs. Cf. barwood.] 1. A tree, Hæmatoxylon Campechianum, found in many parts of the West Indies, where it has been introduced from the adjoining continent, especially from Honduras, on which account it has been called Campeachy wood. It belongs to the natural order Leguminosæ, suborder Cæsalpiniceæ. This tree has a crooked, deformed stem, growing to the height of from 20 to 40 feet, with crooked, irregular branches armed with strong thorns.

Branch with Fruits of Logwood (Hæmatoxylon Campechianum). a, inflorescence; b, flower.

2. The wood of this tree. It is of a firm texture and a red color, whence the name bloodwood, and so heavy as to sink in water. It is much used in dyeing, and its coloring matter is derived from a principle called hæmatoxylin. Logwood contains, besides, resin, oil, acetic acid, salts of potash, a little sulphate of lime, alumina, peroxid of iron, and manganese. It is employed in calico-printing to give a black or brown color, and also in the preparation of some lakes. An extract of logwood is used in medicine as an astringent.

3. The bluewood, Condalia obovata. [Texas.] — Bastard logwood, Acacia Berteriana, a tree of Jamaica.

— Campeachy logwood. See def. 1. — Logwood-black. See black. — Logwood-blue, a color produced by logwood-extract on wool mordanted with alum and cream of tartar. It is similar in tone to indigo-blue. The same color is produced on cotton mordanted with acetate of copper, but is now seldom used, on account of its fugitive character.

logy (lō'gi), a. [Prob. < D. log, heavy, unwieldy, slow, stupid, akin to E. *log*¹. Cf. equiv. loggy.] Heavy; slow; stupid. Bartlett. [Local, U. S.]

lohoch (lō'hok), n. Same as *loch*².

loignet, n. [OF., var. of ligne, line: see *line*².] A line, cord, or tether; specifically, in falconry, a strip of leather attached to the foot of a bird-of-prey when not secure in its perch.

The loigne it is so longe
Of Bialacoil herles to lure.

Rom. of the Rose, I. 3385.

loimic (loi'mik), a. [Prop. læmie*, < Gr. λοιμικός, pestilential, < λοιμός, plague.] Pertaining to the plague or to pestilential diseases. Thomas.

loimography (loi-mog'ra-fi), n. [Prop. læmograpthy, < Gr. λοιμός, plague, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] A description or history of the plague or of pestilential diseases. Dunglison; Thomas.

loimology (loi-mol'ō-jī), n. [Prop. læmology, < Gr. λοιμός, plague, + -λογία, < λέγειν, speak: see -ology.] The sum of human knowledge concerning the plague or concerning plagues or pestilential diseases. Dunglison; Thomas.

loin (loin), n. [Early mod. E. also loyne, Sc. lungie, lunyie; < ME. loine, < OF. logne, longe, loin, F. longe, a loin, as of veal, < LL. lumbea*, fem. (or neut. pl. ?) of lumbeus*, adj., < L. lumbus (> It. lombo = Sp. lomo = Pg. lombo = F. lombes, pl.), loin; perhaps = AS. lenden, etc., loin: see *lende*¹.] The part of an animal which lies between the lowest of the false ribs on each side and the upper part of the ilium or haunch-bone; one of the lateral parts of the lumbar region: commonly used in the plural (often figuratively, with reference to this part of the body being the seat of the generative faculty and a symbol of strength), except as the name of a piece of meat from the lumbar region of an animal, as a loin of veal.

My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.
... My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. 1 Ki. xii. 10, 11.

Brave son, derived from honourable loins!
Shak., J. C., II. 1. 322.

loin-cloth (loin'klōth), n. A piece of stuff, skin, or other material worn as clothing about the loins, or more exactly about the hips.

and treacle, usually with the addition of butter and flour; taffy. [Eng.]

The pallid countenance . . . indicated too surely the irrefragable and hopeless votary of lollypop—the opium-eater of school-boys. Disraeli, Coningsby, ix.

I would . . . never give those children lollypop, nor popgot, . . . nor the theatre characters, nor the paint-box to illuminate the same. Thackeray, Lovel the Widower, i.

2. pl. Sweets; bonbons; candies. [Eng.]

“Hard-bake,” “almond toffy,” “halfpenny lollypops,” “black balls,” the cheaper “bulls’ eyes,” and “squibs” are all made of treacle. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 215.

Perambulating vendors of lollypops and drinks jostled against each other, while gypsies were wending their way in and out telling fortunes. T. C. Crauford, English Life, p. 163.

loma (lō'mā), n.; pl. lomata (-mā-tā). [NL., < LGr. λῶμα, hem, fringe.] In ornith., a lobe, flap, margin, or fringe bordering the toe of a bird. This membranous bordering may be continuous, constituting the loma continuum, or lobed or scalloped, the loma lobatum. A toe furnished with lomata is called digitus lomatinus.

Lomandra (lō-man'drā), n. [NL. (Labillardière, 1804), so called in allusion to the margins of the circular anthers; < LGr. λῶμα, hem, fringe, + Gr. ἀνθή (ανθρ-), a male (mod. bot. a stamen).] A genus of monocotyledonous plants of the natural order Liliaceae, the type of the tribe Lomandreae. It is characterized by a very short or creeping rootstock, leafy stems, often branched, and dioecious flowers in paniculate heads or dense spikes, the pistillate with a three-celled ovary containing three ovules. There are 29 species, growing in Australia, one of which has been reported from New Caledonia; all are rush-like herbs, with rigid linear leaves and small flowers. The genus has long been known by the name Xerotes given to it by Robert Brown in 1810, which has to give way under the rule of priority.

Lomandreae (lō-man'drē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Labillardière, 1804), < Lomandra + -ae.] A tribe of monocotyledonous plants of the order Liliaceae. It is characterized by having the segments of the perianth glume-like or membranous, or the inner set small and petaloid, and versatile anthers attached at the back. The tribe includes 4 genera, of which Lomandra is the type, and 43 species, all but one confined to Australia. This group has been generally placed in the natural order Junceaceae, as allied to the rushes, but the latest revisions indicate a closer affinity with the lily family.

Lomaria (lō-mā'ri-ā), n. [NL. (Willdenow, 1809), < LGr. λῶμα, hem, fringe, + -aria.] A genus of polypodiaceous ferns, having the sori linear in a continuous band next the midrib of the pinnae in the fertile frond, the indusium formed of the revolute margin of the frond, and the fronds dimorphous. About 45 species are known, mostly natives of the south temperate zone. L. Spicans, the hard-fern, is the only North American species. See hard-fern.

lomarioid (lō-mā'ri-oid), a. [Lomaria + -oid.] Pertaining to or resembling the genus Lomaria.

lomastome (lō'mā-stōm), n. and a. [LGr. λῶμα, hem, fringe, + στόμα, mouth.] I. n. In conch., a member of any one of several different groups of Helicidae, as Helix carascalensis, H. metaformis, etc., having the peristome reflected.

II. a. Having a reflected lip or border of the peristome, as a snail.

lomata, n. Plural of loma.

lomatine (lō'mā-tin), a. [LGr. λῶμα, hem, fringe; see loma.] Margined, fringed, or lobate, as the toes of a bird. See loma. Coues.

Lombard¹ (lōm'bārd, formerly lum'bārd), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also Lumbard; < ME. Lombard, Lumbard, < OF. Lombard, Lombart, F. Lombard = Sp. Pg. It. Lombardo (ML. Lombardus, after Rom.), a Lombard (in OF. and ME. usually a Lombard or any Italian trading in France or England), < L. Longobardus, Langobardus, usually in pl. Longobardi, Langobardi, Gr. Λαγγοβαρδοί, Λαγγίβαρδοί, Λογγίβαρδοί, a people of northern Germany west of the Elbe, who are mentioned by Tacitus, and who in later times established themselves in the northern part of Italy, called thence Lombardy; appar. 'Long-beards' (AS. Langbeardas, Icel. Langbardhar), < O'Leut. (OHG.) lang, = E. long, + bart = E. beard. Some take the second element to be MHG. barte, an ax (the same as the second element of halberd, q. v.). See also quot. from Smith's Class. Diet. Hence *Lombard*².] I. n. A native or an inhabitant of Lombardy in Italy; more specifically, a member of the Germanic tribe (Longobards) who about A. D. 568, under Alboin, conquered the part of northern Italy still called Lombardy, and founded the kingdom of that name, which was afterward extended over a much larger territory, and was finally overthrown by Charlemagne in 774.

Paulus Diaconus, who was a Lombard by birth, derives their name of Longobardi from their long beards; but modern critics reject this etymology, and suppose the name to have reference to their dwelling on the banks of the Elbe, inasmuch as Börde signifies in Low German a fertile plain on the bank of a river, and there is still a district in Magdeburg called the lange Börde. Smith's Class. Diet.

II. a. Of or pertaining to Lombardy or the Lombards.

And attern and sad (so rare the smiles Of sunlight) look'd the Lombard piles. Tennyson, The Daisy.

Lombard as applied to any art is an absolute misnomer, if supposed to be derived from the barbarous tribes who crossed the Alps under Alboin, . . . since they, like the Goths, were ignorant and unlettered. It was not because the new style of architecture, which sprang up in Italy during their dominion, originated with them, that the name of Lombard was applied to the manner of building then prevalent, but because the greater part of the southern as well as the northern Italian provinces were comprehended under the name of Lombardy. C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, Int., p. x.

Lombard architecture, the local form which the Romanesque style of architecture assumed in the north of Italy, characteristic of the buildings erected from the end of the sixth to the beginning of the thirteenth century, and constituting a connecting-link between the Roman architecture of Italy and the medieval styles of more northern countries. The style was molded particularly by Byzantine influences, but was not unmodified by the northern intellectual element brought in by the Lombardic conquerors. A feature of the early Lombard architecture is the artistic development of the vault, that constructive member which was destined to become the formative principle of medieval styles in general. In Lombard monuments, pillars consisting of several shafts arranged round a central mass, and buttresses of small projection, appear to have been employed very early. The use of the dome to surmount the junction of the choir, nave, and transepts is frequent.

Lombard² (lōm'bārd, formerly lum'bārd), n. [Early mod. E. also Lumbard (> *lumber*³, q. v.); < ME. lombard = OD. lombaerd, a broker, lombaerde, a broker's shop, < OF. lombard, a broker, lombarde, a broker's shop; so called from the numerous Lombards or Italians in England who were engaged in money-lending; see *Lombard*¹. Cf. *lumber*³.] 1†. A banker or money-broker or lender. The Lombards were the original occupants of Lombard Street, now the financial center of London, the name of which is used to signify in general the London money-market. The bankers of London who were Lombards or Italians by race continued to be recruited by immigration till the time of Queen Elizabeth, when most of them returned to Italy.

This marchant, which that was ful war and wys, Creanced hath and payd eek in Parys To certain Lumbardes redy in hir bond The somme of gold, and hadde of hem his bond. Chaucer, Shipman's Tale, l. 367.

At an early period the leadership of the Lombards was for a while assumed by the Corsini, a noble family of Florence. F. Martin, Hist. of Lloyd's, p. 21.

2†. [l. c.] A bank for loans; a broker's shop; a pawnbroker's shop. See *lumber*³.

A Lombard unto this day signifying a bank for usury or pawns. Fuller, Ch. Hist., III. v. 10. (Davies.)

The royal treasure he exhausts in pride and riot; the jewels of the Crown are in the Lombard. E. Fannant, Hist. Edw. II., p. 27.

This suit was made up for a noble lord on the last birthday, and conveyed thither (to a Lombard) the very next morning after it had appeared at court. The Connoisseur, No. 117.

Hence—3. [l. c.] A public institution for lending money to the poor at a moderate interest on articles deposited and pledged; a monte-piété.—Lombard Street to a China orange, very long odds, as in a wager.

"It is Lombard-Street to a China Orange," quoth Uncle Jack. "Are the odds in favour of fame against failure really so great?" . . . answered my father. Bulwer, Caxtons, iv. 3.

Lombard³†, n. [ML. lumbardus, prob. so called with reference to Lombardy (see *Lombard*¹). It could be a "corruption" of bombard only by misprint.] Milit., a cannon of heavy caliber in the later middle ages and in the sixteenth century; probably derived from northern Italy.

Lombardeert (lōm-bār-dēr'), n. [*Lombard*² + -eer.] A Lombard or broker.

They are tolerated for advantage of Commerce, wherein the Jews are wonderful dexterous, tho' most of them be only Brokers and Lombarders. Howell, Letters, I. i. 38.

Lombard-house† (lōm'bārd-hous), n. Same as *lombard*², 3.

Lombardic (lōm-bār'dik), a. and n. [= F. Lombardique = Sp. Lombardico = Pg. It. Lombardico, < ML. Lombardicus, < Lombardus, Lombard; see *Lombard*¹.] I. a. Pertaining to or characteristic of Lombardy or of the Lombards; in art, of or pertaining to the school of Lombardy.

Correggio, uniting the sensual element of the Greek schools with their gloom, and their light with their beauty, and all these with the Lombardic colour, became . . . the captain of the painter's art as such. Ruskin, Lectures on Art.

Lombard architecture. See Lombard architecture, under *Lombard*¹, a.—Lombardic school, in painting, the school including the kindred styles of the cities of Lombardy, and chiefly of Milan, during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. The manner of the Lombard painters was, in general, somewhat cold; but they displayed great facility and much fertility and grace. The greatest names of the school are those of Andrea Mantegna (1431–1506), early established at Mantua, and Leonardo da Vinci (about 1465–1540), the universal genius; while Bernardino Luini (about 1465–1540), the delightful artist and follower of Leonardo, must not be forgotten. The famous Correggio (1494–1534) of Parma had not so wide a reputation during his lifetime, and may be regarded in some respects as an isolated genius.—Lombardic script. See II.

II. n. A particular type of writing derived from the Roman cursive, and retaining many of the features of the older majuscule and uncial. It is characteristic of the greater number of Italian manuscripts dating from the seventh to the thirteenth century.

Lombardy poplar. See poplar.

lome¹†, n. An obsolete form of *loom*¹. Palsgrave. lome²† (lōm), adv. [ME., < AS. gelōme = OHG. gilōmo, often. Cf. *loom*¹.] Frequently.

For in here liknesse our lorde lome hath be knowe; Witnesse in the Paske-woke when he zeede to Emuas. Piers Plowman (C), xiii. 121.

loment (lō'ment), n. [ME. loment, < L. lomentum, a mixture of bean-meal and rice used as a cosmetic, also a blue color (NL. a loment), < lavare, pp. lavatus, lavatus, wash; see *lave*².] 1†. A mash or mixture.

The wyne browne eschaungeth into white Yf that me putte in it loment of bene. Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 200.

2. In bot., a legume which at maturity breaks up by transverse articulations into one-seeded indehiscent joints. See legume, 2.

Loment.—The Fruits of Desmodium caesescens.

lomenta, n. Plural of lomentum.

Lomentaceae (lō-men-tā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1792), fem. pl. of lomentaceus; see lomentaceus.] A former suborder of Cruciferae, the siliqua of which resembles a lomentum in having each seed divided from its neighbor by a transverse dissepiment. The radish (Raphanus) and the sea-rocket (Cakile) belong to this suborder, and now typify the two tribes, Raphaneae and Cakileae, respectively, which modern authors adopt in its place.

lomentaceous (lō-men-tā'shi-us), a. [L. lomentaceus, resembling a loment, < lomentum, a loment; see loment.] Resembling or being a loment; bearing loment; belonging to the Lomentacea.

Lomentaria (lō-men-tā'ri-ā), n. [NL. (Lyngbye, 1819), < lomentum, a legume (with constricted joints), + -aria.] A small genus of red seaweeds, typical of the tribe Lomentarieae, having filamentous, branching, hollow fronds with constricted joints formed of one or more layers of roundish-angular cells, with a few longitudinal filaments in the center, tripartite tetraspores, and external sessile cystocarps.

Lomentariaceae (lō-men-tā'ri-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Payer, 1850), < Lomentaria + -aceae.] The same, or nearly the same, as Lomentarieae.

Lomentariæ (lō'men-tā-ri-ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Agardh, 1851), < Lomentaria + -ae.] A tribe of red seaweeds, placed by Farlow in the suborder Rhodymenieae, and typified by the genus Lomentaria. The boundaries of this tribe, as in nearly all the Rhodymenieae, are ill-defined, and further study is necessary. The fronds are tubular, and the cystocarps are provided with a basal placenta.

lomentum (lō-men'tum), n.; pl. lomenta (-tā). [NL.: see loment.] Same as loment, 2.

lomeret, v. i. Same as *lumber*¹.

lomi-lomi (lō'mi-lō-mi), n. [Hawaiian lomi-lomi, v., redupl. of lomi, rub with the hand.] The massage or shampooing process of the Sandwich Islanders.

lomonite (lō'mon-it), n. See lavomantite.

lompt, n. An obsolete form of *lump*¹.

lomper (lōm'pēr), v. i. [Cf. *lump*¹, *lumber*¹.] 1. To idle. [Prov. Eng.]-2. To walk heavily. [Prov. Eng.] Hallivell.

lompish†, a. An obsolete form of lumpish.

Lomvia (lōm'vi-ā), n. [NL., also Lomvia, from a Faroese form of *loom*³.] 1. A genus of three-toed web-footed swimming and diving birds of the auk family, Alcidae; the murre or foolish guillemots. There are several species; the best-known is L. troile, of which the spectacled guillemot, L. rhingvia, is a variety. The are or arrie is a thick-billed guillemot of the North Pacific, L. arra. The corresponding form of the North Atlantic is Brünnich's guillemot, L. bruennichi. See Uria.

2. [l. c.] A species of the genus Lomvia; a murre or guillemot.

lon. An abbreviation of longitude.

Lonchæa (long-kē'ā), n. [NL. (Fallen, 1820), < Gr. λόγχη, a spear-head, spear, lance; see lanceol.] The typical genus of Lonchæidae. They are small, thick, metallic flies, with a strongly protruding ovipositor in the female. The larvae feed under the bark of the stems and roots of small plants. More than 30 European and 6 North American species are known, L. polita being one of the latter.

Lonchæidæ (long-kē'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Osten-Sækon, 1878), < Lonchæa + -idæ.] A family of Diptera, allied to Ortaliidæ, chiefly characterized by the wing-venation, and containing the genera Lonchæa and Palloptera.

Loncheres (long-kē'rēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λόγχη, a spear, armed with a spear, < λόγχη, a spear (see lanceol.), + ῥα, fit; see arm.] A South American genus of hystricomorphic rodents of the family Octodontidæ and subfamily Echinomyiinae, having the fur usually mixed with flattened spinos. The spiny rats. L. cristata and L. picta, are two prettily marked species, the former with a snowy crest and tail-tip.

Lonchitidæ (long-ki-tid'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Lonchitis (Lonchitid-) + -æ.] A section of ferns proposed by Presl in 1836, typified by the genus Lonchitis. It is now abandoned, and the genus is placed in the tribe Pteridæ.

Lonchitis (long-ki'tis), n. [NL., < L. lonchitis, a spear, < Gr. λόγχη, the tongue-shaped or lance-shaped stander-grass, < λόγχη, a spear, lance; see lanceol.] A small genus of polypodiaceous ferns, typifying the section Lonchitidæ of Presl, and closely allied to the genus Adiantum. The fronds are strong, erect, deltoid, and tripinnatifid, and the sori are marginal and covered by an indusium as in Adiantum.

Lonchocarpæ (long-kō-kār'pē-ō), n. pl. [NL., < Lonchocarpus + -æ.] A subtribe of leguminous plants, typified by the genus Lonchocarpus, belonging to the tribe Dalbergiæ, and distinguished by the generally opposite leaves and the transversely or laterally affixed, not pendulous, seeds. It embraces 9 genera of tropical trees and shrubs.

Lonchocarpus (long-kō-kār'pus), n. [NL. (Humboldt, Bonpland, and Kunth, 1823), < Gr. λόγχη, a spear, lance, + καρπός, fruit.] A genus of leguminous plants of the tribe Dalbergiæ, the type of the subtribe Lonchocarpæ. It is distinguished by having the wings adhering to the keel of the flowers, and by the flat membranaceous or coriaceous pod with the superior suture transversely nerved but not winged at the back. The species are about 55 in number, including trees and shrubs. Most of them are found in tropical America, a few in tropical Africa, and one in Australia. L. latifolius of the West Indies, etc., is called bitchwood. L. Blackii, a tall woody climber of Queensland and New South Wales, is called lanepod. Some species are ornamental.

Lonchoptera (long-kop'te-rā), n. [NL. (Meigen, 1803), < Gr. λόγχη, a spear, lance, + πτερόν, a wing, = E. feather.] The typical genus of Lonchopteridæ. They are small delicate flies of yellow-brown or gray color, characterized by the lanceolate and venation of the wings, abounding on stones along shady watercourses. About 20 European species are known, two of which are also found in North America.

Lonchopteridæ (long-kop-ter'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Macquart, 1835), < Lonchoptera + -idæ.] A family of dichaetous dipterous insects, typified by the only genus, Lonchoptera, having the wings acutely pointed and without a median cross-vein.

Lonchopteris (long-kop'te-ris), n. [NL. (Brongniart, 1828), < Gr. λόγχη, a spear, lance, + πτερίς, a fern.] A genus of fossil ferns found in the coal-measures of England and France.

Lonchopteris rugosa.

It is related to Dictyopteris and Althopteris, the pinnules having a very distinct median nerve and a reticulated lateral venation. It embraces about 30 species, found abundantly in the coal-measures of Europe, and occurring in those of Sydney, Cape Breton, and of China, but ranging upward to the Upper Cretaceous, and common in the Wealden of England and Belgium and in the Cretaceous of Westphalia. The older Mesozoic (Rhetic) beds of Virginia and North Carolina also contain it.

land, n. A Middle English form of *land*¹.

Londonoyst, n. [ME., < OF. (AF.) Londennois; as London + -oest, the form Londonese being also in recent use.] A Londoner; one born in London. Chaucer.

London board. See board.

London clay. A geological formation of importance in southeastern England, and especially at and near London, whence the name. It belongs to the lower division of the Eocene Tertiary, being separated from the Cretaceous by the Woolwich, Reading, and Thanet beds. The London clay has a maximum thickness of about 500 feet, and seems to have been laid down near the mouth of a large estuary of the sea, into which relics of the vegetation and fauna of the adjacent land were swept. The thickness of the clay under the city of London varies with the amount of erosion which has taken place in the scooping out of the valley of the Thames. The full thickness of the formation is preserved under the outliers of the Bagshot sand which occurs in various places near the city, especially at Hampstead and Highgate.

Londoner (lun'dun-ēr), n. [< ME. Londonere (?), < London, < AS. Lunden, also Lundenburh (burh, > E. borough), Lundenecaster (ceaster, > E. chester), Lundenwic (wic, > E. wich), < L. Londinium, of Celtic origin.] A native or citizen of London in England.

The King by Proclamation calls the Londoners to Westminster, and there causeth the Bishops of Worcester and Chichester to declare his Intentions.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 83.

Londonese (lun-dun-ēs' or -ēz'), a. and n. [< London + -ese. Cf. Londonoys. The AS. form was Lundenisc.] I. a. Pertaining to London in England, or to its peculiarities of speech; cockney.

II. n. English as spoken in London; especially, cockney speech.

Londonism (lun'dun-izm), n. [< London + -ism.] A mode of speaking, acting, or behaving peculiar to London.

Londonize (lun'dun-iz), v.; pret. and pp. Londonized, pp. Londonizing. [< London + -ize.]

I. trans. To invest with some attribute characteristic of London or the people of London.

II. intrans. To adopt or imitate the manners or the fashions of Londoners.

London paste. See paste.

London-pride (lun'dun-prīd), n. 1. A British plant, Saxifraga umbrosa, common in cottage-gardens. Also called nonce-so-pretty and St. Patrick's cabbage.—2. The sweet-william, Dianthus barbatus. Also called London-tuft. [Old or local.]

London purple. See purple.

London-rocket (lun'dun-rok'et), n. A plant, Nisymbrium Iria, which grows in waste places throughout Europe, and was formerly common in the neighborhood of London, first appearing just after the great fire of 1666.

London smoke, sprat, white, etc. See smoke, etc.

London-tuft (lun'dun-tuft), n. Same as London-pride, 2.

lonel¹ (lōn), a. [By aphoresis from alone, as *live*² from alive; *lonel*¹ and *live*² being used attributively, while the full form, orig. a prep. phr., is used in the predicate.] 1. Being unaccompanied; apart from any other; solitary; lonely; isolated: as, a lonel traveler; a lonel house.

Enid, the pilot star of my lonel life. Tennyson, Geraint.

2. Single in state; living alone; unmated or unmarried.

A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lonel woman to bear. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., li. 1. 35.

3. Lonely; secluded; unfrequented. [Rare or poetical.]

In some lonel isle, or distant Northern land. Pope, R. of the L., lv. 154.

Lone hand, in the game of euchre, one person playing against all the others, or against his opponents without aid from his own side.—Lone star. See star.

lonel² (lōn), n. [< ME. lonc, a var. of lanc: see *lanc*¹.] A lane. Also loan. [Prov. Eng.]

lonel³, n. A Middle English form of *loan*¹.

loneliness (lōn'li-nes), n. 1. The condition of being lonely; solitariness; want of society or human interest: as, the loneliness of a hermit's cave.

There's nothing left to fancy's guess,
You see that all is loneliness.

Scott, Marmion, li., Int.

2. The sense of being alone or lonely; dejection from want of companionship or sympathy; forlornness.

Uphold me, Father, in my loneliness.
Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

A feeling of oppressive loneliness comes over the spirit as the eye ranges across that voiceless wilderness.

O'Donovan, Merv, xx.

3†. Love of retirement; preference for solitude.

Now I see

The mystery of your loneliness.

Shak., All's Well, l. 3. 177.

=Syn. Lonesomeness, Retirement, etc. See solitude.

lonely (lōn'li), a. [< *lonel*¹ + *-ly*¹; strictly, by aphoresis from alonely.] 1. Unfrequented by men; solitary; desolate: as, a lonely situation.

So lonely 'twas, that God himself

Scarce seemed there to be.

Coleridge, Ancient Mariner, vii.

2. Lacking association or companionship; solitary; standing apart physically or mentally.

Or let my lamp, at midnight hour,

Be seen in some high lonely tower.

Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 86.

3. Sad or dejected from want of companionship or sympathy; forsaken; forlorn.

I never saw a more forgettable face—pale, serious, lonely. Dr. J. Brown, Itab and his Friends.

Why should I feel lonely? . . . What sort of space is that which separates a man from his fellows?

Thoreau, Walden, p. 144.

Right thro' his manful breast darted the pang

That makes a man, in the sweet face of her

Whom he loves most, lonely and miserable.

Tennyson, Geraint.

=Syn. 1. Lone, unfrequented, secluded, dreary.—2. Lonesome, companionless.

loneness (lōn'nes), n. The state of being single or alone; seclusion; solitariness.

Fresh beauty, let me not be thought unkind,

Thus to be partner of your loneness.

Fletcher, Faithful Shepherdess, l. 2.

lonesome (lōn'sum), a. [< *lonel*¹ + -some.] 1. Drearily solitary; secluded from society; dejected from want of company.

I have never felt lonesome, or in the least oppressed by a sense of solitude.

Thoreau, Walden, p. 143.

2. Expressing loneliness or dejection. [Rare.]

Neither shall we content ourselves in lonesome tunes, and private soliloquies, to whisper out the divine praises.

Barron, Works, l. viii.

3. Secluded; unfrequented; lonely.

Like one that on a lonesome road

Doth walk in fear and dread.

Coleridge, Ancient Mariner, vi.

In November days,

When vapors rolling down the valleys made

A lonely scene more lonesome.

Wordsworth, Influence of Natural Objects.

lonesomely (lōn'sum-li), adv. In a lonesome manner.

lonesomeness (lōn'sum-nes), n. The state of being lonesome, in any sense of that word. =Syn. Loneliness, Seclusion, etc. See solitude.

long¹ (lōng), a. and n. [See lang; < ME. lang, lang, < AS. lang, long = OS. lang, long = OFries. lang, long = MD. D. lang = MLG. L.G. OHG. lang,

MHG. lanc, G. lang = Icel. langr = Dan. lang

= Sw. lång = Goth. laggs, long, = L. longus

(> It. lungo = Pg. longo = Pr. long, long, loing = F. long), long; perhaps = OPers. drāng, long, the d being in this case lost, and the r changed to l, in L., etc. The L. word is not the source of the Teut., but merely cognate.

From the AS. word are ult. E. *long*², *along*¹, *along*², belong, *ling*¹, linger, length, etc.; from the L. are ult. E. elongate, longitude, longevity, oblong, prolong, eloin, cloign, purlown, lunge, etc.]

I. a. 1. Having great linear extent; not short;

having notable or unusual extent; relatively much extended or drawn out: as, a long distance; long hair; a long arm.

The walks . . . are many, whereof some are very long, and of a convenient breadth. Coryat, Crudities, l. 37.

His other parts besides,

Prone on the flood, extended long and large,

Lay floating many a rood. Milton, P. L., i. 195.

But she has wrote a long letter,

And sealed it with her hand.

Catherine Johnson (Child's Ballads, IV. 35).

2. Having linear or continuous extent in space; measured from end to end; viewed in the direction of the greatest distance (that is, the distance exceeding that of the width, or a line drawn at right angles to the width).

The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

Job xl. 9.

The Curuncen [a venomous snake], fifteen spans long, which lieth on a tree to hunt his prey.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 842.

3. Tall: as, long Tom Coffin. [Now only colloq. or humorous.]

Off Duke Nestor to deme, doughty in wret,

He was long & large, with lemy's full gree,

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3805.

4. Having duration or extent in time; lasting in continuance: following a term of measurement or reckoning, or used relatively: as, a discourse an hour long; the longest day of the year.

It cannot be long before we lie down in darkness, and have our light in ashes.

Sir T. Browne, Urn-burial, v.

5. Drawn out in duration; having unusual continuance; lasting; prolonged, as time, succession, etc.: as, long hours of labor; long illness; a long line of descendants; a long note.

When they make a long blast with the ram's horn, . . . all the people shall shout. Josh. vi. 5.

My Lord Chancellor Bacon is lately dead of a long languishing weakness. Howell, Letters, I. iv. 8.

Long health, long youth, long pleasure—and a friend. Pope, To Mrs. Martha Blount.

Specifically—(a) In pros., greater in duration (technically called quantity) than the unit of time, or so regarded. Along vowel, or sometimes a vowel in a long syllable, is marked as such by a straight line above it, thus, ā. In ancient orthoëpy and prosody a long vowel is regarded as consisting regularly of the sum of two similar short vowels, thus, ā = ā + ā, and a diphthong is also necessarily long as the sum of two dissimilar short vowels, thus, au = ā + u. In either case, if either element is already long, the excess is not counted. See the phrases long by nature and long by position, below, and II. (b) In Eng. orthoëpy, noting one of the two or more principal pronunciations of each of the five true vowels, a, e, i, o, u, exemplified in the words fate, mete, site, note, mute, usually marked for pronunciation, as in this work, ā, ē, ī, ō, ū: opposed to the short sounds of the same letters in fat, met, sit, not, nut, frequently marked as ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, but left unmarked in this work. The two sounds of the same letter now called long and short do not, for the most part, phonetically correspond to each other; but short is used specifically to note the more frequently employed of the shorter sounds of a certain letter, and long, by a similar limitation, for the more usual among the longer sounds of the same letter in our established orthography.

6. Far-reaching; far-seeing: as, a long look ahead.

Thus proving in his bud maturely sage,
And long in Wisdom, e'er in years of age. J. Beaumont, Psyche, l. 82.

The perennial existence of bodies corporeal and their fortunes are things particularly suited to a man who has long views. Burke.

7. Happening or occurring after a protracted interval; much delayed or postponed.

Death will not be long in coming. Eccles. xiv. 12.

I stopped me, as I made for the staircase, to extort a promise that I would not be long: nor was I long: in five minutes I rejoined him. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxv.

8. Seeming prolonged; tedious; wearisome: as, long hours of waiting.

The weary night was longer yet
Than was the day, and harder to forget
The thoughts that come therewith. William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 151.

A long bit, a long chalk. See the nouns.—A long day, a far-off time; extended postponement; long suspense or respite.—A long dozen, one more than a dozen; thirteen. See bakers' dozen, under baker.—A long face, a face wearing an expression of sadness or solemnity: so called from the drawing down of the facial lines.—A long figure, a high price; a large sum. [Colloq. or slang.]—A long head, a mind characterized by sagacity, foresight, and shrewdness with caution.—A long row to hoe. See hoe 1.—A long tongue, a tongue given to tedious or mischievous loquacity.

Get you gone, sirrah;
And what you have seen be secret in; you are paid else;
No more of your long tongue. Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, v. 4.

As broad as long. See broad.—At the long last, in the end, however far off; finally.

Human nature, which, at the long last, is always to blame. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 131.

Before long, before a long time has elapsed; shortly; soon: as, I shall see him before long.—Common long meter. See common.—Cut and long tall. See cut, p. a.—Ere long. Same as before long, but commonly used of a shorter interval: as, ere long the storm became furious.—For long, for or during a long time, absolutely or comparatively.

For long ago I have forgot to court;
Besides, the fashion of the time is changed. Shak., T. G. of V., III. 1. 85.

O love, I have not seen you for so long. Tennyson, Lover's Tale, iv.

In the long run. See run.—Long appoggiatura. See appoggiatura.—Long bob, a kind of peruke worn about the middle of the eighteenth century.—Long bone, in anat., one of the elongated and cylindrical bones of the limbs, as a humerus or femur. In a former classification bones were distinguished as long, short, flat, and irregular.—Long by nature, in anc. pros., noting a syllable long or prolonged in utterance by virtue of its containing a long vowel, or the equivalent of this in time, a diphthong, whether followed by two or more consonants or not. See nature.—Long by position, in anc. pros., noting a syllable containing a short vowel immediately followed by two or more consonants or by a double consonant. The vowel remains short in pronunciation, but the time of the syllable is prolonged by the delay occasioned by the enunciation of the consonants. See position.—Long chop. See chop, 2.—Long clam. (a) The common clam, Mya arenaria, and related species: so called in distinction from round clams, as species of Venus, Macra, etc. (b) The razorshell, Ensis americana.—Long clay, cloth, division. See the nouns.—Long dress, in female apparel, a skirt descending to the feet: as, a girl not yet in long dresses.—Long drum, an old name of the bass drum. See drum, 1.—Long feeler. See feeler.—Long fax. See fax.—Long float. See float, 9.—Long haul, short haul, phrases in railroad use to express the relative length of transportation, in connection with the amount of charges for the respective services. The long- and short-haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Act of the United States provides that "it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or of like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included in the longer distance; but this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier within the terms of this act to charge and receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance." The Interstate Commerce Commission have power to grant relief from this restriction under circumstances which would make it unjust to the carrier.—Long home, hundred, isinglass. See the nouns.—Long lay, a small proportion in the profits of a whaling-voyage accruing to certain members of the crew, such as the foremast-hands, etc.: opposed to short lay. See lay, 6.—Long measure, meter, mordent, odds. See the nouns.—Long of stock or of stocks, well supplied with a stock or stocks, as a broker or stock-speculator; holding a stock, or contracts for the purchase of a stock, for a rise, as a bull in the stock-market.—Long particular meter. See meter, 2.—Long pig, the literal rendering by English sailors of the term applied to a corpse by the Fiji cannibals.

The expression long pig is not a joke, nor a phrase invented by Europeans, but one frequently used by the Fijians, who looked upon a corpse as ordinary butcher meat, and called a human body puaka balava, long pig, in contradistinction to puska dina, or real pig.

St. Johnston, Camping among Cannibals.

Long rest. See long-rest.—Long robe, roll, etc. See the nouns.—Long straight, stretched out; at length.

He rist hym up and long straight he hire leide. Chaucer, Troilus, lv. 1163.

Long tom, vacation, wheel, etc. See the nouns.—Long ton, a ton of 2,240 pounds, reckoned as 20 hundredweight of 112 pounds each.—Long verse, a name sometimes given to the dactylic hexameter.—To draw the long bow. See to draw the longbow, under longbow.—To make a long arm. See make 1.

II. n. 1. Something that has length; also, the full extent: used in some elliptical expressions, as in English universities for the long vacation, and in the phrase the long and the short of it.

Six weeks were to elapse before the Long commenced. F. W. Farrar, Julian Home, p. 184.

In the vacations, particularly the Long, there is every facility for reading.

C. A. Bristed, English University, p. 105.

2. In pros., a long time or syllable. In ancient prosody a long is a time greater than a short, or a syllable requiring a perceptibly greater time to pronounce than is required by a short. A short, comparable to an eighth-note in modern music, being assumed as the mora or unit of time, the regular or normal long is equivalent to two shorts, and is comparable to a quarter-note in music, consuming twice the time in pronunciation required by the regular or normal short, and resolvable under certain conditions into two shorts, just as two shorts may be contracted into one long. Thus, an iambus, or short followed by a long, may appear as a tribrach or three shorts; and a dactyl, or long followed by two shorts, is generally interchangeable with a spondee—that is, a long followed by another long. Besides the normal (dichronous or disemic) long, ancient writers also recognize long equivalent to three, four, and five shorts, called trichronous (trisemic), tetrachronous (tetrasemic), and pentachronous (pentasemic) longs respectively, as well as others, called irrational, which can only be expressed fractionally: for instance, 1½ shorts. Such a long (one of 1½ moræ) could be used to represent a short. In ancient pronunciation the syllabic accent was a matter more of pitch or tone than of stress, and the metrical accent (ictus or beat) was independent of it, and regularly fell on a syllable long in time. In modern languages a difference between shorts and longs in actual time of utterance exists to a greater or less degree, but is partially or wholly subordinated to syllabic accent, which is principally or altogether a matter of stress. The ictus in modern poetry regularly coincides with this syllabic stress, and in this accordingly a long is a syllable taking the stress, or ictus, without regard to the time occupied in pronunciation.

"I have seen some longs and shorts [i. e. some verses] of Hittall's," said I, "about the (Syl)donian Boar, which were not bad." M. Arnold, Friendship's Garland, vl.

The average long would occupy rather less than twice the time of the average short. J. Hadley, Essays, p. 264.

3. In medieval musical notation, a note equivalent in time-value either to three or to two breves, according as the rhythm was "perfect" or "imperfect." Its form was . —Per long, in her., longer than usual: said generally of a part of a bearing: as, a label with lambeaux per long; a cross fitché per long, in which the sharpened point is prolonged.—The long and the short, or the short and the long, the sum of a matter in a few words; the length and the breadth; the whole: with of.

For I am small,
My wife is tall,
And that's the short and long of it! Hood, Paired, not Matched.

long 1 (lông), adv. [< ME. longe, < AS. lange (= G. lang), for a long time, far, < lang, long; see long 1, a.] 1. To a great extent in space; with much length: as, a line long drawn out.

The pillars long-extended rows. Prior, Solomon, II. 28.

2†. Far; to or at a distance, or an indicated distance.

He come to the Castelle, and cam in to the Cave; and wente so longe, til that he fond a Chambre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 24.

The Saisnes . . . thus distroled the contrey and made soche martire of the mene peple that men myght see the smolder of the fire x myle longe, so trouble ther-of was the aire. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 248.

3. To a great extent in time; for an extended period; with prolonged duration: as, he has been long dead; it happened long ago, long before, or long afterward; a long-continued drought; a long-forgotten matter.

When the trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount. Ex. xix. 13.

And now the long protracted wars are o'er. Addison, tr. of Horace, III. 3.

We have long discovered our errors with regard to you. Goldsmith, Vicar, xxx.

And the psalms of David, forgotten long, Took the place of the scoffer's song.

Whittier, The Preacher.

4. For a length of time; for the period of: used with terms of limitation: as, how long shall you remain? as long as I can; all day long.

And she gan wepen ever longer the more. Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 734.

The Emperours hym owne selfe ordant onon, fforto bilde vp tentes, tariet no longer. Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 6021.

The woman . . . is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth. Rom. vii. 2.

As Pascal said of his eighteenth letter, I would have made it shorter if I could have kept it longer.

Macaulay, in Trevelyan, I. 225.

Long ago, far away in past time; in the far past.

Yesterday shall seem full long ago,
When with to-morrow's dew the grass is wet. William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 237.

long 1 (lông), v. [< ME. longen, longien, langien, < AS. langian = OS. langôn = D. langen = OHG. langên, MHG. langen, in comp. belangen, rarely verlangen, G. only verlangen, long, crave: usually derived from lang, E. long 1, a., and explained by identifying the verb with AS. langian, become long, as 'to stretch the mind after.' But the verb may be of different origin, perhaps a secondary form connected with OHG. gilingen (pret. gilang), MHG. G. gelingen, strive after, attain.] I. intrans. To have a yearning or wishful desire; feel a strong wish or craving; hanker: followed by for or after before the object of desire, or by an infinitive.

I have longed after thy precepts. Ps. cxix. 40.

Come, honest Venator, let us be gone, let us make haste; I long to be doing; no reasonable hedge or ditch shall hold me. T. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 55.

Off, when the wine in his glass was red,
He longed for this wayside well instead. Whittier, Mand Muller.

Their silent pain
Who have long'd deeply once, and long'd in vain. M. Arnold, A Summer Night.

II.† trans. To long for; desire.

To seen hire sustre that hire longeth soo. Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2286.

long 2 (lông), conj. [By aphoresis from along 2.] Same as along: in the phrase long of, sometimes written long of. [Archaic or local.]

Mit. How comes it that Fungoso appeared not with his sister's intelligence to Brisk?

Cor. Marry, long of the evil angels that she gave him. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iv. 4.

Dark Musgrave, it was long of thee. Scott, L. of I. M., v. 29.

long 3† (lông), v. i. [< ME. longen, langen, equiv. to belongen, belong; see belong.] To belong.

Thow has clenly the cure that to my coroune langez,
Of alle my werdez wele, and my weyffe eke. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 673.

And that me semes longs not for him to do. Paston Letters, I. 97.

long. An abbreviation of longitude.

—long. See -ling 2.

longan (lông'gan), n. [NL. longanum; < Chin. lung-yen, dragon's-eye.] 1. An evergreen tree, Nephelium longanum, closely related to the lichi, and yielding a similar but smaller and less palatable fruit. It is cultivated in China and the East Indies.—2. The fruit itself, which is exported in a dried state. 'Also called dragon's-eye.

longanimity (long-ga-nim'i-ti), n. [= F. longanimité = Sp. longanimidad = Pg. longanimidade = It. longanimità, < LL. longanimita (t)-s, forbearance, < longanimis, forbearing, patient, < L. longus, long, + animus, mind.] Long-suffering; patience; endurance.

Some minds are proportioned to that which may be dispatched at once, or within a short return of time; others to that which begins afar off, and is to be won with length of pursuit, . . . so that there may be fitly said to be a longanimity. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II.

The longanimity and lasting sufferance of God. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., I. 3.

If a clergyman, he is expected to ask a blessing, . . . a function which he performs with centenarian longanimity, as if he reckoned . . . that a grace need be long to reach so far away as heaven. Lovell, Fireside Travels, p. 68.

longanimous (long-gan'i-mus), a. [< LL. longanimis, patient, forbearing, < L. longus, long, + animus, mind: see animus. Cf. magnanimous.] Long-suffering; patient; enduring. [Rare.]

We have the present Yankee, . . . armed at all points against the old enemy Hunger, longanimous, good at patching. Lowell, Biglow Papers, 1st ser., Int.

long-arc (lông'ärk), a. In elect., having a long arc: applied to an arc-lamp which burns with the ends of the carbon rods at an abnormally great distance apart.

longbeak (lông'bëk), n. A snipe of the genus Macrorhamphus; a dowitcher: as, the greater longbeak, M. scolopacea.

longbeard (lông'bërd), n. 1. A man with a long beard.—2. A bellarmine.—3. Same as long-moss.

longbill (lông'bil), n. A snipe or a woodcock. long-boat (lông'bôt), n. The largest and strongest boat belonging to a sailing ship. It corresponds to the launch of a modern man-of-war.

When he [the Duke of Suffolk] was shipped in Suffolk, with intent to have passed over into France, he was met by an English Man of War, taken, and carried to Dover Sands, and there had his Head chop'd off on the side of the Long-boat. Baker, Chronicles, p. 190.

longbow (lông'bô), n. The name commonly given to the bow drawn by hand and discharging a long feathered arrow, as distinguished from crossbows of all kinds, especially to bows having a length of five feet or over, as the bow of war and of the chase of the middle ages in Europe, those of some savage tribes, those of Japan, etc. The English especially excelled in the use of the longbow, as the principal weapon of the common soldier and of hunters, from the fourteenth century till the introduction of firearms, by which it was only gradually superseded.—To draw or pull the longbow, to exaggerate; tell improbable stories: in allusion to the wonderful stories formerly told of feats with the longbow. [In the phrase, often written a long bow.]

King of Cyprus . . . was on the point of pulling some dreadful long-bow, and pointing out a half dozen of people in the room as . . . the most celebrated wits of that day. Thackeray, Newcomes, I.

long-bowling (lông'bôi'ing), n. The game of skittles. Halliwel.

long-breathed (lông'breth), a. Having the power of retaining the breath for a long time; having good breath; long-winded.

long-bullets (lông'bül'ets), n. A game played by casting stones. [North. Eng.]

When you saw Tady at long-bullets play.

Swift, Dermot and Sheelah.

long-coats (lông'kôts), n. pl. Long clothes: said of an infant's wear. [Eng.]

Master Thomas Billings . . . was in his long-coats fearfully passionate, screaming and roaring perpetually. Thackeray, Catherine, iii.

long-descended (lông'dë-sen'ded), a. Able to trace one's descent through a long line of ancestors; of ancient lineage.

long-drawn (lông'drän), a. Drawn out or continued to great length; protracted; prolonged: as, a long-drawn sigh or groan; a long-drawn narrative.

longe¹, n. and v. An obsolete form of lunged¹.

longe² (lông'), n. [Also lungce; deriv. uncertain.] The great lake-trout or Mackinaw trout, Cristivomer or Salvelinus namaycush. Also called toque. [Local, U. S.]

long-eared (lông'ërd), a. 1. Having long ears.—2. Having long plumicorns: as, the long-eared owls.—3. Having long opercular flaps: as, the long-eared sunfish, Lepomis auritus or L. megalotis.—Long-eared bat, one of several bats whose ears are notably long or large; especially, Plecotus auritus, a common European species. See Plecotus, Synotis.—Long-eared deer, the mule-deer, Caracus macrotis.—Long-eared fox, the African Megalotis lalandi, a kind of fennec. See fennec, Megalotis.—Long-eared hedgehog, Erinaceus auritus of Russia.—Long-eared owl, any member of the genus Asio or Otus, as the European A. otus or the American A. wilsonianus.

long-ears (lông'ërz), n. 1. A humorous name for a donkey.—2. The long-eared owl, Asio otus. [Berkshire, Eng.]

longer¹ (lông'ër), n. One who longs or desires.

longer² (lông'ër), n. [Appar. < long¹ + -er¹; or else < long², along¹, as being stored along the keelson (?).] Naut., a water-cask of peculiar shape, formerly used for stowing next to the keelson; also, a row of such casks.

longeval (lông-jë'val), a. [< L. longævus, aged (see longevous), + -al.] Long-lived.

We envy the secular leisure of Methuselah, and are thankful that his biography at least (if written in the same longeval proportion) is irrecoverably lost to us.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 253.

longevity (lông-jëv'i-ti), n. [= F. longévité = Sp. longevidad = Pg. longevidade = It. longevità, <

LL. longævita (t-), < L. longævus, aged; see longevous.] 1. Long life; unusually prolonged life or existence.

We shall single out the deer: upon concession a long-lived animal, and in longevity by many conceived to attain unto hundreds. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 9.

Such men . . . predict longevity to Pollock's "Course of Time." Whipple, Ess. and Rev., I. 30.

2. Length or duration of life; term of existence: as, statistics of longevity; the average longevity of the race.

longevous (lông-jë'vus), a. [= Sp. Pg. It. longevo, < L. longævus, of great age, aged, < L. longus, long, + ævum, age.] Living a long time; of great age. [Obsolete or rare.]

[Cedar wood] is longevous and an evergreen.

N. Greu, Cosmologia Sacra, iv. 8.

long-exserted (lông'ek-sër'ted), a. In ornith., projected far beyond some other part: said of a pair of tail-feathers when they protrude far beyond the rest, as the middle pair of a skua-gull or sawbill. Coues, 1872.

long-faced (lông'fäst), a. Having a long face, literally or figuratively; rueful-looking; doleful in appearance; solemn.

long-field (lông'feld), n. In cricket, a fielder stationed in one of the extreme corners of the bowler's end of the field, distinctively called long-field-off or long-off when on the bowler's right, and long-field-on or long-on when on his left.

long-finned (lông'find), a. Having long fins, as a fish, or flippers, as the finner whale.—Long-finned file-fish. Same as foot-fish, 2.

longful (lông'fùl), a. [< long¹ + -ful.] Long; tedious. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

long-glass (lông'gläs), n. Same as alc-yard.

longhand (lông'hand), n. Writing of the ordinary form, as contradistinguished from short-hand or stenography.

long-headed (lông'hed'ed), a. 1. Having a long head; in ethnol., dolichocephalic.—2. Shrewd; far-seeing; discerning: as, a long-headed man. [Colloq.]

long-headedness (lông'hed'ed-nes), n. The quality of being long-headed; shrewdness; far-sightedness; discernment.

Ulysses was the type of long-headedness.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 126.

longhorn (lông'hörn), n. 1. A tined moth of the family Adelidae, as Adela viridella, having very long antennæ.—2. A dipterous insect of the suborder Nemocera, such as tipularians or crane-flies.—3. A beetle of the group Longicornia; a longicorn.

long-horned (lông'hörnd), a. 1. Having long horns: specifically applied to some breeds of domestic cattle.—2. Having long antennæ; longicorn: as, long-horned grasshoppers.

longi, n. Plural of longus.

longicaudate (lông-jikä'dät), a. [< L. longus, long, + cauda, tail.] Long-tailed; macrurous.

longicone (lông'jikôn), a. [< L. longus, long, + conus, cone: see cone.] Having a long cone, as a cephalopod: as, the longicone straight shells. A. Hyatt.

longicorn (lông'jikörn), a. and n. [< NL. longicornis, long-horned, < L. longus, = E. long, + cornu = E. horn.] I. a. Having long antennæ; specifically, of or pertaining to the Longicornes or Longicornia.

II. n. A longicorn beetle; a member of the Longicornia.

Longicornes (lông-jikôr'nëz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of longicornis, long-horned: see longicorn.] In Latreille's system of classification, the fourth family of the Coleoptera tetramera, approximately the same as the modern group Longicornia, and divided primarily into Prionii and Cerambycini. Latreille included Tmesisternus in the latter, and also appended a third tribe, Lamiaria (Lamia, Saperda, etc.), and a fourth, Leptureta (Leptura, etc.).

Longicornia (lông-jikôr'ni-ä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of longicornis, long-horned: see longicorn.] A group of tetramerous Coleoptera, having long filiform antennæ, sometimes several times longer than the body; the longicorns or longicorn beetles. In a few forms the antennæ are pectinate, serrate, or flabelliform. More than 8,000 species are described, among them many large and beautiful beetles. They inhabit woods, where the females deposit their eggs beneath the bark of trees by means of a long, tubular, horny ovipositor, with which the abdomen ends. The larvæ are very destructive to wood, boring it deeply, and often making their burrows in every direction. Some of them attack the roots of plants. The longicorn beetles are very generally dispersed, but the greatest number of species and the largest forms are found in South America and western Africa. The leading families are the Lamiidae, Cerambycidae, Lepturidae, and Prionidae.

longie, lungie (lông', lun'ji), n. [Cf. Lomvia, loom³, loom².] The common guillemot, Lomvia troile. [Shetland Isles.]

longifrons (lông'ji-fronz), a. [< NL. longifrons, < L. longus, long, + frons (front-), forehead: see front.] In zool., long-faced.

The black cattle of North Wales apparently belong . . . to the small longifrons type. Darwin, Var. of Animals and Plants, p. 89.

longilateral (lông-jilät'e-räl), a. [< L. longus, long, + latus (later-), side: see lateral.] Long-sided; having the form of a long parallelogram. [Rare.]

Nineveh . . . was of a longilateral figure, ninety-five furlongs broad and an hundred and fifty long.

Sir T. Browne, Garden of Cyrus, ii.

longilingual (lông-jil-ing'gwäl), a. [< L. longus, long, + lingua, tongue.] In zool., having a long tongue; vermilingual.

Longilingues (lông-jil-ing'gwëz), n. pl. [NL., < L. longus, long, + lingua, tongue.] In Sundevall's classification of birds, a synonym of Mellisuga.

longimanous (lông-jim'a-nus), a. [< LL. longimanus (tr. Gr. μακρόχειρ, as an epithet of Artaxerxes), long-handed, < L. longus, long, + manus, hand.] In zool., having long hands; long-handed, as an ape.

longimetric (lông-jim'et'rik), a. [< longimetr-y + -ic.] Pertaining to measurement along a line.—Longimetric function, the function to which a goniometric function reduces when one of the angles of the triangle becomes zero or 180°.

longimetry (lông-jim'e-tri), n. [= F. longimétrie = Sp. longimetria = Pg. It. longimetria, < L. longus, long, + Gr. μέτρον, measure.] The art or practice of measuring distances or lengths, whether accessible or inaccessible.

longing (lông'ing), n. [Verbal n. of long¹, v.] 1. An eager desire; an earnest wish or craving.

Put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me.

Shak., A. and C., v. 2. 234.

I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight

I have a woman's longing.

Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 631.

2. Specifically, in pathol., one of the peculiar and often whimsical desires experienced by pregnant women. = Syn. 1. Hankering, yearning, aspiration.

longingly (lông'ing-li), adv. With eager desire or craving.

longinuity (lông-jing'kwî-ti), n. [= It. longinquità, < L. longinquitas (t-s), length, < longinquis, remote, long, usually distant, < L. longus, long: see long¹.] Greatness of distance. [Rare.]

Pope Leo himself saw that longinuity of region doth cause the examination of truth to become odulatory. Barrow, The Pope's Supremacy.

Inordinate unvaried length, sheer longinuity, staggers the heart, ages the very heart of us at a view.

G. Meredith, The Egoist, Prel.

longipalp (lông'ji-palp), a. and n. [< NL. longipalpus, < L. longus, long, + NL. palpus, a feeler: see palp.] I. a. Having long maxillary palps; specifically, of or pertaining to the Longipalpi.

II. n. A member of the Longipalpi, as some of the rove-beetles.

Longipalpi (lông-jipal'pî), n. pl. [NL., pl. of longipalpus: see longipalp.] In Latreille's system of classification, a section of the Linnean genus Staphylinus, having long maxillary palps, as in the genera Pæderus, Proctirrus, Stenus, and others. Also Longipalpati.

Longipennatæ (lông'jipe-nä'të), n. pl. Same as Longipennes, 1.

longipennate (lông-jipen'ät), a. [< NL. longipennatus, long-winged, < L. longus, long, + pennatus, winged: see pennate.] Long-winged, as a bird; having long penna, remiges, or flight-feathers.

Longipennes (lông-jipen'ëz), n. pl. [NL., < L. longus, long, + penna, wing.] 1. A major group of birds, the long-winged natatorial birds, such as gulls, terns, and petrels; the Gavia and Tubinares together considered as an order. In Nitzsch's classification (1829) the term was applied only to the former, the Tubinares being separated under the name of Nasuta.

2. In Sundevall's system, a synonym of Chelidonomorphæ.

longipenneus (lông-jipen'in), a. [As Longipennes + -ine.] Longipennate; having the wings long enough to reach, when folded, beyond the end of the tail; specifically, of or pertaining to the Longipennes.

longiperoneus (lông-jiper-ö-në'ns), n.; pl. longiperonei (-i). [NL., < L. longus, long, + NL.

peroneus.] The long peroneal or fibular muscle, commonly called peroneus longus. Cowes and Shute, 1887.

longiroster (lon-ji-rós'tér), n. [< NL. longirostris, long-beaked, < L. longus, long, + rostrum, beak; see rostrum.] One of the Longirostres.

longirostral (lon-ji-rós'trál), a. [As longiroster + -al.] Having a long bill or beak: specifically applied to the Longirostres.

longirostrate (lon-ji-rós'trát), a. [As longiroster + -ate.] Same as longirostral.

Longirostres (lon-ji-rós'trész), n. pl. [NL., pl. of longirostris: see longiroster.] In Cuvier's system of classification, a family of Grallæ or wading birds, including the snipes and their allies, together with the ibises, ranged here on account of their superficial resemblance to curlews. With this exception, the group corresponds to the natural division of birds now called the snipe family, Scopaciadæ.

longisect (lon'ji-sekt), v. t. [< L. longus, long, + secare, pp. sectus, cut; see section.] To bisect lengthwise and horizontally; perform longisec-tion. [Rare.]

longisecation (lon-ji-sek'shön), n. [< L. longus, long, + sectio(n), a cutting; see section.] Division of the body in a plane parallel with the axis, and thus longitudinal, but from side to side, and thus at right angles to the meson and to hemisection-planes: correlated with transsection and hemisection. N. Y. Med. Jour., XL, 114.

longissimus (lon-jis'i-mus), n.; pl. longissimi (-mí). [NL. (sc. musculus), superl. of L. longus, long; see long, a.] A muscle of the back, more fully called longissimus dorsi, notable in man for its great length, forming with the sacrolumbalis the erector spinæ, the muscle which assists in keeping the back straight or erect. It occurs under divers modifications in mammals, birds, etc.

longitude (lon'ji-tüd), n. [< F. longitude = Sp. longitud = Pg. longitude = It. longitudine, < L. longitudo (longitudin-), length, < longus, long; see long, a.] 1. Length; measure along the longest line.

The ancients did determine the longitude of all rooms which were longer than broad by the double of their istitude. Sir H. Wotton, Elem. of Architecture.

2. In geog., the angle at the pole contained between two meridians, one of which, called the first or prime meridian, passes through some conventional point from which the angle is measured. Strictly speaking, the meridian here spoken of is a plane through the plumb-line at the station parallel to the earth's axis, but not necessarily passing through that axis, since it may be that the earth's axis and the plumb-line at the station do not lie in one plane. But this distinction is wholly without importance, except in higher geodesy. The longitude of the conventional point is 0°, and longitudes are reckoned east and west from it to 180° in arc, and to 12 hours in time, 15 degrees being equal to one hour. In Great Britain universally and in the United States generally geographers reckon from the meridian of the transit-circle at the Royal Observatory of Greenwich in England; the meridian of Washington is also used in the United States. Germans reckon generally from Ferro in the Canaries, as the dividing line between the eastern and western hemispheres, though modern German scientists employ the meridian of Greenwich. In other countries geographers often reckon from the meridian of their capital or other point within their limits, as the French from Paris (and formerly from Ferro), and the Russians from the observatory of Pulkowa. Mariners generally employ the meridian of Greenwich. There are various ways of finding longitude, the problem being that of comparing the time at the place in question with that of the prime meridian. On shore the most accurate method is to compare the time of the two places by means of the electric telegraph, while at sea, the local time being determined by observation of some celestial object, it is compared with Greenwich time, as shown by a chronometer carefully set and regulated before sailing. Abbreviated lon., long.

The ancients supposed the torrid and the frigid zones to be uninhabitable and even impenetrable by man; but while the earth, as known to them, was bounded westwardly by the Atlantic Ocean, it extended indefinitely towards the east. The dimensions of the habitable world, then (and ancient geography embraced only the home of man, ἡ οἰκουμένη), were much greater measured from west to east than from south to north. Accordingly, early geographers called the greater dimension, or the east and west line, the length, longitudo, of the earth; the shorter dimension, or the north and south line, they denominated its breadth, latitudo. G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., ix.

3. In astron., the arc of the ecliptic measured eastward from the vernal equinoctial point to the foot of the circle of latitude drawn through the object, as a star or other point on the sphere whose position is in question. See circle of latitudes, under circle.—Celestial longitude. See def. 3.—Geocentric, heliocentric, heliographic longitude. See the adjectives.—Libration in longitude. See libration of the moon, under libration.

longitudinal (lon-ji-tü'di-nál), a. [= F. Sp. longitudinal = It. longitudinale, < NL. longitu-* dinalis, < L. longitudo (longitudin-), length, longi-tudo; see longitude.] 1. Of or pertaining to longitude or length; relating to or consisting in length: as, longitudinal distance.—2. In the direction of the length; running lengthwise, as distinguished from transverse or across: as, the longitudinal diameter of a body.—3. In bot., in the direction of growth.—4. In zool., extended in the long axis of the body, as any articulate animal; articulated. [Rare.]

Von Baer . . . adopted Cuvier's divisions, speaking of them as the peripheric, the longitudinal, the massive, and the vertebrate types of structure. Encyc. Brit., XXIV, 807.

Longitudinal elasticity, the ratio of stress to strain in the case of linear extension or compression.—Longitudinal sinus, in anat. See sinus.—Longitudinal strain, in gun., the strain on a small-arm or cannon which tends to rupture it circumferentially.—Longitudinal veins, in entom., veins of an insect's wing running lengthwise to the apical margin; specifically, in the Diptera, applied to several such veins which, conning from the costal or anterior side, are distinguished as first, second, etc., longitudinal.

longitudinally (lon-ji-tü'di-nál-i), adv. In a longitudinal manner; in the direction of length.

longitudinated (lon-ji-tü'di-ná-ted), a. [< L. longitudo (longitudin-), length, + *-ate*¹ + *-ed*².] Extended in length. Goldsmith. [Rare.]

long-leg (lóng'leg), n. In cricket, same as leg, 6.

long-legged (lóng'legd or leg'ed), a. Having long legs or hind limbs.—Long-legged chatterers, Swainson's name of his Leiotrichanæ. See Liötrichinæ.—Long-legged hawk, a hawk of the subfamily Accipitrinæ, having the tarsi proportionally long, as the goshawk, the European sparrow-hawk, or the American sharp-shinned hawk.—Long-legged plover, a stilt. See Himantopus.—Long-legged thrush, Swainson's name for a bird of his family Crateropodidæ. See Crateropodidæ, and cut under Crateropus.

long-legs (lóng'legz), n. An insect having long legs, such as the Tipula oleracea or common crane-fly and its congeners. See daddy-long-legs.

long-lived (lóng'lívd), a. [< *long*¹ + life + *-ed*².] Having a long life or existence; living or lasting long.

A long-lived soap-bubble displays every color which can be produced by polarization. O. N. Rood, Modern Chromatics, p. 50.

longlivedness (lóng'lívd-nes), n. Longevity; unusual length of life. [Rare.]

If then . . . there can be discovered a reciprocating relation between want of gall in animals and longlivedness, . . . we have the basis for an inductive proof. R. Adamson, Encyc. Brit., XIV, 789.

longly (lóng'li), adv. [< ME. longly*, langty, < AS. langlice, for a long time (= Icel. langliga, for a long time past), < lang, long; see *long*¹ and *-ly*².] 1. For a long time. [Rare.]

The horse stroked oute his necke als ferre als he myghte, and likked Alexander hand; and he kneifid donne on his kneesse, and bihelde Alexander in the vesage langty. MS. Lincoln A. i. 17, f. 1. (Halliwell).

[In the following passage from Shakspeare the word is commonly understood to imply also "longingly."]

Master, you look'd so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.
Shak., T. of the S., i. l. 170.]

2. Lengthily in space.
Asci clavate, obtuse, longly pedicellate.
M. C. Cooke, Brit. Fungi, p. 761.

long-minded (lóng'mín'ded), a. Patient; longanimous. [Rare.]

[A judge must be] long-minded to endure the rusticity and homeliness of common people in giving evidence, after their plain fashion and facility. S. Ward, Sermons, p. 120. (Davies.)

long-moss (lóng'mós), n. An epiphytic plant, Tillandsia usneoides, with gray filiform stems and leaves, forming dense pendulous tufts which drape the forests of the southern United States. See Tillandsia. Also called longbeard, and more rarely and less appropriately black-moss, Spanish moss, and barba Hispanica.

Longmynd group. [Named by Sedgwick from the Longmynd Hills in Shropshire.] In geol., an assemblage of strata which form a part of the lowest division of the Silurian series, or the Lower Cambrian of some of the latest authorities. The series is of great thickness as developed in Wales, and contains the usual fossils characteristic of the lowest division of the Lower Silurian of Murchison, Barande, and Hall. See Silurian.

longneck (lóng'nek), n. The pintail duck, Dasula acuta. G. Trumbull, 1888. See cut under Dasula. [New Jersey.]

longness (lóng'nes), n. Length. [Rare.]

longnose (lóng'nöz), n. The garfish: so called from the elongated snout or jaws.

Longobardian (long-gō-bär'di-an), a. [< L. Longobardi, Langobardi, a people of northern Germany, subsequently established in northern Italy; see Lombard.] Pertaining or relating to the Longobards; Lombard or Lombardic.

long-off (lóng'ôf), n. Same as long-field-off. See long-field.

long-on (lóng'ôn), n. Same as long-field-on. See long-field.

long-primer (lóng'prim'ér), n. A size of type, measuring about ninety lines to the foot, next larger than bourgeois and smaller than small-pica. [Generally written by printers as two words, long primer.]

long-purples (lóng'pér'plz), n. 1. The man-orchis, Orchis mascula. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names.

Long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead-men's-fingers call them.
Shak., Hamlet, iv. 7. 170.

2. The purple loosestrife, Lythrum Salicaria. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names.

Gay long-purples with its tuffy spike:
She'd wade o'er shoes to reach it in the dyke.
Clare, Village Minstrel, ii. 90.

long-range (lóng'ránj), a. Having a long range; capable of hitting at a long distance.

It would not be very difficult or very costly to strengthen Gibraltar by placing modern long-range guns high up on the rock, with mountings which would allow of an all-round fire. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLIII, 2.

long-rest (lóng'rest), n. In medieval musical notation, a rest or sign for silence equal in time-value to a long. It was either "perfect" (equal to three breves: see a) or "imperfect" (equal to two breves: see b).

long-ruffer (lóng'ruf'ér), n. A coarse heckle.

long-run (lóng'run), n. See in the long run, under run.

long-settle (lóng'set'el), n. See settle.

longshanks (lóng'shanks), n. 1. A long-legged person.—2. A bird of the genus Himantopus; a stilt.

long-shawl (lóng'shál), n. A shawl much longer than it is wide, the length being usually about twice the width.

longshore (lóng'shōr), a. and n. [By aphoresis from alongshore.] I. a. Existing or employed along the shore or coast: as, the longshore fisheries; a longshore boatman.

II. n. A longshoreman.

longshoreman (lóng'shōr-mán), n.; pl. longshoremen (-men). I. A workman, as a stevedore or jobber, who is employed in loading and discharging the cargoes of vessels.—2. One who makes a living along shores by fishing for clams, oysters, etc.

long-short (lóng'shört), n. A skirt somewhat shorter than a petticoat, worn by women when doing household work. Barlett. [Local, U. S.]

Her dress was a blue-striped linen short-gown, wrapper, or long-short, a coarse yellow petticoat, and checked apron. S. Judd, Margaret, i. 3.

long-sighted (lóng'sí'ted), a. 1. Able to see objects at a great distance; hence, having far-sight; of acute intellect; sagacious; far-seeing.—2. Able to see objects distinctly at a distance, but not close at hand; presbyopic or hypermetropic; far-sighted.

longsightedness (lóng'sí'ted-nes), n. 1. The faculty of seeing objects at a great distance; hence, sagacity as regards the future; far-sighted discernment.—2. In pathol., a defect of sight owing to which objects near at hand are seen indistinctly, while those at remoter distances appear distinctly; hypermetropia; presbyopia.

long-slide (lóng'slíd), n. In steam-engin., a slide-valve of sufficient length to govern the parts of both ends of the cylinder, and having a hollow back which forms an eduction-passage. Valves of this description are used in the Cornish type of engine. E. H. Knight.

long-slip (lóng'slíp), n. In cricket, a fielder whose position is some distance behind and on the right of the batter.

longsome (lóng'sum), a. [< *long*¹ + -some.] Long and tedious: applied to persons and things. [Now rare.]

A lampe . . . made
With oyle and weecke to last the longsome night.
Goswigne, Dan Bartholomew of Bath.
When chill'd by adverse Snows, and beating Rain,
We tread with weary Sleeps the longsome Pisin.
Prior, Henry and Emma.

longsomeness (lóng'sum-nes), n. The state of being longsome; tediousness. [Rare.]

long-spun (lóng'spun), a. Spun or extended to a great length; long-drawn; tedious.

longspur (lông'spér), n. In ornith., a bird of the genus Centropus (or Calcarius): same as lark-bunting, 1.—Bay-winged longspur. See bay-winged.

long-staple (lông'stā'pl), a. Having a long fiber: a commercial term applied to cotton of a superior grade, also called sea-island cotton. See cotton-plant.

long-stitch (lông'stich), n. Satin-stitch worked plain, without filling or raising.

long-stop (lông'stóp), n. In cricket, a fielder who stands behind the wicket-keeper and stops balls that escape the latter.

longstop (lông'stóp), v. i.; pret. and pp. long-stopped, ppr. longstopping. [< long-stop, n.] To act as long-stop at cricket.

long-sufferance (lông'suf'ér-ans), n. Same as long-suffering.

God of his goodness, patience, and long-sufferance, gave them a time to repent.

Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

long-suffering¹ (lông'suf'ér-ing), n. Long endurance of injury or provocation; patience under offense.

Dearest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering? Rom. ii. 4.

long-suffering² (lông'suf'ér-ing), a. Bearing injuries or provocation with patience; not easily moved to retaliation.

The Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness. Ex. xxxiv. 6.

long-tail (lông'tāl), n. and a. I. n. 1. An animal, particularly a dog, having an uncut tail. Formerly, in England, a long-tail was a gentleman's dog, or a dog qualified to hunt, it being required that the tails of other dogs should be cut. Hence the phrase come cut and long-tail. See cut, p. a.

2. The long-tailed duck.—3†. An old nickname for a native of Kent. Halliwel.

II. a. Having the tail uncut, as a dog.

long-tailed (lông'tāld), a. 1. Having a long tail; hence, long-drawn; attenuated.

Monseur Perrault . . . has endeavored to turn into Ridicule several of Homer's Similitudes, which he calls "Comparaisons à longue queue." Long-tail'd Comparisons. Addison, Spectator, No. 303.

2. In entom., having a long-exserted ovipositor, as many ichneumons; having a long terobra or borer. Westwood.—Japanese long-tailed fowls. See Japanese.—Long-tailed duck, finch, mouse, pangolin, tiger-cat, titmouse, trogon, etc. See the nouns.

long-take (lông'tāk), n. A certain number (132) of herrings. [Yarmouth, Eng.] long-tongue (lông'tung), n. 1. A kind of woodpecker; the wryneck. Also called tongue-bird.—2. A tale-bearer; a gossip. [Prov. Eng.] long-tongued (lông'tungd), a. 1. Having a long or large tongue; macroglossate. See Macroglossi.—2. Prating; babbling; loquacious.

A long-tongued knave, one that uttereth all he knowes. Florio, p. 17. (Halliwel.)

The foul fa' ye . . . for a long-tongued clavering wife! . . . Couldn't ye let the fuddy alone w' your whiggery? Scott, Old Mortality, vii.

longulite (lông'gū-lit), n. [< L. longulus, rather long (dim. of longus, long), + -ite.²] In petrog., a name proposed by Vogelsang for linear groups of the most elementary products of devitrification, called by him globulites. See margarite.

longus (lông'gus), n.; pl. longi (lông'ji). [NL. (sc. musculus), < L. longus, long: see long.¹] A long, deep-seated muscle of the neck, more fully called longus colli, lying upon the front of several cervical and dorsal vertebrae, and serving to bend the neck forward or downward. It is less developed in man than in some other animals, as birds, particularly those which have a long sigmoid neck and capture their prey with a thrust of the beak.

long-visaged (lông'viz'āj'd), a. Having a long face; hence, having a sober, sad, or rueful face or visage.

long-waisted (lông'wās'ted), a. 1. Having a long waist, as a person or a ship. See waist.—2. Long from the armpits to the waist or narrowest part, as a dress or coat.

long-wall (lông'wāl), a. In coal-mining, an epithet noting a method of working a coal-mine in which the whole seam is worked away except the pillars at the shafts and sometimes the main-road pillars. In this system no attempt is made to support the roof of the working-places by pillars of coal, which is worked in a long face (hence the name long-wall), the roof being allowed to settle down and fill the cavity left by the removal of the coal. Where the roof exhibits a tendency to break off close to the working-face, it is temporarily supported by cribs of timber or checks, or by a double or triple line of props. Two kinds of long-wall working are in use: long-wall retreating or withdrawing and long-wall advancing. In the latter the roads or gangways are kept open, and the roof is supported by pack-walls built of the gob. In long-wall withdrawing the gangways are in the solid coal, and pack-walls are not needed. The long-wall system of working is not applicable to beds of coal having a high dip, nor to very thick seams; and it has not been introduced into the anthracite region of Pennsylvania. Where it can be advantageously used, it is admitted that a considerably larger percentage of the coal can be won by it than by any other system. Also long-work.

longways (lông'wāz), adv. [< long + -ways for -wise.] Longwise; lengthwise. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

A vast mole which lies longways, almost in a parallel line to Naples. Addison, Travels in Italy.

long-winded (lông'win'ded), a. 1. Long-breathed; using much breath by prolonged speech.

The long-winded old salts who come here to report their wrecks. The Century, XXVIII. 580.

2. Tedious from length; of a wearisome or burdensome length: said of speech or writing.

Long-winded exercises, singings, and catechisings. B. Jonson, Epicoene, ff. 1.

And there he told a long long-winded tale. Tennyson, The Brook.

long-windedness (lông'win'ded-nes), n. The character of being long-winded.

Richardson, the only author who ever made long-windedness seem a benefaction. Lovell, New Princeton Rev., I. 160.

longwise (lông'wīz), adv. [*< long*¹ + -wise.] In the direction of length; lengthwise. [Rare.] longworm (lông'wèrm), n. A marine rhynchocelous turbellarian or nemertean worm of extreme length for its thickness. See Lineida, Lineus.

Lonicera (lon-i-sē'rā), n. [NL. (Plumier, 1703), named after Adam Lonicer, a German botanist (died 1586).] A genus of caprifoliaceous plants, the honeysuckles, type of the tribe Lonicereae, characterized by an irregular tubular corolla (sometimes two-lipped), exstipulate leaves, and a two- or three-celled berry, almost always few-seeded. About 100 species are known, natives of the temperate and tropical regions of the northern hemisphere, ornamental shrubs, often climbing, with (often) fragrant, variously colored flowers, growing in cymes, in pedunculate heads, or sometimes in pairs. See honeysuckle.

Lonicereae (lon-i-sē'rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (R. Brown, 1818), < Lonicer + -ae.] A tribe of dicotyledonous gamopetalous plants, based on the genus Lonicera, belonging to the natural order Caprifoliaceae, distinguished by having a tubular or campanulate corolla (often with an irregular limb), an elongated style with usually a capitate stigma, and the cells of the ovary with from one to an indefinite number of ovules. It includes 11 genera, which are almost entirely confined to the northern hemisphere.

lonk¹ (lôngk), n. Same as *lank*². Halliwel.

lonk² (lôngk), n. [Origin obscure.] A hollow; a small dingle. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.] loo¹ (lō), n. A dialectal (Scotch) form of *love*¹.

loo² (lō), n. [Also lu; abbr. of lanterloo.] 1. A game of cards. It is played by any number of persons up to seventeen with a full pack, the cards ranking as in whist. Each player deposits a certain number of chips (generally three), called a loo, in the pool, and after looking at his hand of three cards can either withdraw or declare—that is, play the hand through. The players who win the tricks divide the pool according to the number of tricks taken by each; any player declaring and failing to take a trick is looted, and must deposit three chips in the pool. Often called division loo.

2. The deposit, generally of three chips, which the players make in the pool in the game of loo.

loo² (lō), v. t. [Also lu; *< loo*², n.] To beat in the game of loo, as a player that has declared.

loo³ (lō), interj. [Cf. halloo.] Same as halloo.

'Loo, Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game. Shak., T. and C., v. 7. 10.

loobilyt (lō'bi-li), a. [*< looby + -ly*¹.] Looby-like; lubberly; awkward; clumsy.

A loobily country fellow. Sir R. L'Estrange.

loobilyt (lō'bi-li), adv. [< loobily, a.] Like a looby; in an awkward, clumsy manner.

loobs (lōbz), n. [Corn. loob, slime, sludge.] In mining, tin-slime or sludge of the after-leavings. Pryce. [Cornwall, Eng.] looby (lō'bi), n. and a. [< ME. loby, lobic; an extension or dim. form of lob: see *lob*¹. Cf. lubber.] I. n. 1. An awkward, clumsy fellow; a lubber. [Rare or obsolete.]

This lorean that laddie this looby away. Richard the Redeless, ll. 170.

I must leave you—I own I am somewhat flurried—and that confounded looby has perceived it. Sheridan, The Rivals, ll. 1.

2. The ruddy duck, Erismatura rubida. [Local, New Eng.]

II. a. Lubberly; gawky. [Rare.]

This great, big, overgrown metropolis, . . . like a looby son who has outgrown his stamina. Jon Bee, Essay on Samuel Foote.

looch, n. See *looh*².

Loochooan (lō-chō'an), a. and n. [< Loochoo (also written Loo Choo, Lew Chew, Lew Kew, Liu Kiu, Riu Kiu, etc.) (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Pertaining to Loochoo, formerly a kingdom tributary to China and sometimes partly also to Japan, now a ken or prefecture of the Japanese empire, consisting of the chain of small islands between Japan and Formosa, and named from the largest group, specifically called the Loochoo Islands.

II. n. A native of Loochoo.

looser (lō'ér), n. [Also lufe, lever, appar. a trade abbr. of equiv. velour, < F. velours, velvet: see velour, velours, velvet.] A hatters' brushing-pad. E. H. Knight.

loof¹ (lōf), n. [Also (dial.) lufe, luf; < ME. lofe, lufe, the palm of the hand (see also *loof*²), *< AS. lōf (not certain; supposed to be contained in glōf, > E. glove, q. v.) = leel, löf, the palm of the hand, = Sw. lofre, the wrist, = Dan. dial. luffe (in luffevante, a woolen glove) = Goth. löfa, the palm of the hand. Hence perhaps ult. *loof*², q. v.] The palm of the hand; also, the hand itself. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

I may touch with my lufe the ground evyn here. Tourneley Mysteries, p. 32.

Auld baudrons [a cat] by the ingle sits, An' w' her loof her face a washin'. Burns, Willie Wastie.

To creesh one's loof. See creesh.

loof² (lōf or luf), n. [Also (in some uses) luff; < ME. loof (> OF. loffe), a contrivance for altering a ship's course (called in ML. draecna), prob. a paddle or an oar to assist the helm (see quot. under def. 1); cf. G. luf, luv, loff = Dan. luv = Sw. luf, the weather-gage, = OE. lof, loef, louf, loo, the weather-gage, the lower corner of a sail next the wind; < D. loef, the weather-gage, loof, luff, OD. loef, appar. a paddle or oar used in steering, also, like loeve, loefnael, a thole; cf. loefhals, loefhout, etc.; cf. also ME. lof, a beam or bar; appar. orig. a particular use of the word which appears in *E. loof*¹, the palm of the hand; cf. OHG. laffa, *MHG. loffe, G. dial. laffen, laff, the blade of an oar, or of a rudder; cf. L. palma, the palm of the hand, also the blade of an oar. Hence aloof, q. v. See *loof*², 1†.

A contrivance (apparently a paddle or an oar) for altering the course of a ship. See etymology.

Heo rihten heore loues And up drogen seiles, Lithen ouer sestrem. Layamon.

2. That part of a ship's bow where the sides begin to curve in toward the stem. See loof.

—Aff-loof. See aff.

loof^{2†}, v. The earlier spelling of *loof*².

loof^{3†}, n. A Middle English form of *loaf*¹.

loofward† (lōf' or luf'wārd), adv. [= D. loef-vaarts; as *loaf*² + -ward.] Windward.

look¹ (lōk), v. [< ME. token, tokien, < AS. lōcian = OS. lōkōn = MD. lōken = OHG. luogēn, luagēn, tuokēn, MHG. luogen, G. lügen, dial. lügen, look; further connections unknown.] I. intrans. 1. To exercise the sense or faculty of vision; use the eyes in seeing; fix the sight upon some object, or upon some point or portion of space. Used—

(a) Absolutely.

And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, Esau came. Gen. xxxiii. 1.

I'll look no more, Lest my brain turn. Shak., Lear, iv. 6. 22.

(b) Before a word or phrase signifying direction, manner, or purpose: as, look here; look there; he looked back; to look for something lost.

For evering up-on the ground I see thee starc; Approach neer, and looke up murlly. Chaucer, Prolog. to Sir Thopas, l. 8.

And he looked this way and that way. Ex. ii. 12.

(c) Before a preposition governing the thing seen or an intervening object or medium: as, to look at a house; to look over a wall or through a window; to look into a mirror or a book; to look upon the wine.

The damsel was very fair to look upon. Gen. xxiv. 16.

She, looking thro' and thro' me, . . . never speaks. Tennyson, Lillian.

He walked about the library with his hands in his pockets, looking at all the books. Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xxiv.

2. To afford a view or outlook; have a direction; face or be turned: usually with on, upon, to, or toward: as, the windows look toward the ocean; the house looks upon a narrow street.

The door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north. Ezek. viii. 3.

They turned to a window looking to the close. Fire of Frensdraught (Child's Ballads, VI. 175).

There is yet another presumption, looking the other way. E. Tuckerman, Genera Lichenum, p. 198.

3. To keep watch; be careful; take heed; see to it: as, he looks after my luggage: used intensively in the ejaculatory phrases look out! look sharp!

Look well to thy herds. Prov. xxvii. 23.

Look that you bind them fast. Shak., Tit. And., v. 2. 166.

4. To seem to the view; have the appearance of being; appear: as, he looks like his brother; it looks as if it would rain; the patient looks better.

I meet everywhere in this country with these little brooks; and they look as if they were full of fish. Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 224.

Narcissus, praised with all a parson's power, Look'd a white lily sunk beneath a shower. Pope, Dunciad, iv. 104.

[The use with to be is inelegant and chiefly colloquial.

Well, says he, you look to be a man in distress. Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 270.]

5. To strive to seem; put on the appearance of being; assume to be.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret. Shak., T. of the S., iii. 2. 230.

He would always affect to swagger and look big as he passed by me. Swift, Gulliver's Travels, ii. 3.

6. To exercise mental vision or observation (in a certain way); direct the mind or understanding; take notice: often with at.

He that made us with such large discourse, Looking before and after. Shak., Hamlet, iv. 4. 37.

Look, how much we thus expell of sin, so much we expell of vertue. Milton, Areopagitica, p. 26.

We are not only to look at the bare action, but at the reason of it. Stillington.

7. To have a prospect or anticipation; direct the mind expectantly; be in expectation of or with regard to something.

I look'd men schulde vn-to me lowte, Where-so that y wente by the way. Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 36.

Who would have looked it should have been that rascal Surly? He had dyed his beard and all. B. Jonson, Alchemist, iv. 4.

He must look to fight another battle before he could reach Oxford. Clarendon, Great Rebellion.

The way in which we looked forward for letters from our bride and bridegroom was quite a curiosity. Thackeray, Adventures of Philip, xxxii.

To look about one, to be on the watch; be vigilant; be circumspect or guarded.—To look after. (a) To attend to; take care of; have an eye to or upon: as, to look after one's interests; to look after a friend who is in danger.

My subject does not oblige me to look after the water, or point forth the place whereunto it has now retreated. Woodward.

Lady T. But, Sir Peter, you know you promised to come to Lady Sneerwell's too. Sir Peter. Well, well, I'll call in just to look after my own character. Sheridan, School for Scandal, ii. 1.

I was told to look after you once, and I mean to do it. H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn, p. 236.

(b) To expect; look forward to.

Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth. Luke xxi. 26.

(c) To consider; be concerned about.—To look alive, to be on the alert; bestir one's self. [Colloq.]—To look beside, see beside.—To look down on or upon, to regard as beneath one; view with contempt; despise.

Lewis the Fourteenth looked down on his brother King with an air not unlike that with which the Count in Molière's play regards Monsieur Jourdain, just fresh from the mummery of being made a gentleman. Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

Greek-speaking Roman Emperors looked down on those of their subjects and neighbours who kept on the acquired tongue of Old Rome, just as they looked down on those of their subjects and neighbours who kept on the primitive speech of Italy. E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 438.

To look for. (a) To seek for; search for: as, to look for a passage in a book. (b) To expect; count upon: as, to look for good news.

Nevertheless, we . . . look for new heavens and new earth. 2 Pet. iii. 13.

O, I did look for him With the sun's rising: marvel he could sleep. B. Jonson, Alchemist, i. 1.

Look now for no enchanting voice. Milton, S. A., l. 1065.

Our Saviour and his Apostles did not only foresee, but foretell and forewarn us to look for schisme. Milton, Church-Government, i. 6.

To look for a needle in a bottle of hay or in a haystack. See bottle and haystack.—To look in, to take a look or glance into a place; hence, to make a brief visit or call (as if merely for observation).

It would be unkind to pass, as it were, the door of his relatives without just looking in for a few hours. Barham, Ingoldby Legends, I. 20.

To look into, to inspect closely; observe narrowly; examine: as, to look into the conduct of another; to look into one's affairs.

He . . . has thoroughly looked into and examined human nature. Bacon, Physical Fables, x., Expl.

To look like. See like 2.—To look on. [On, adv.] To be a mere spectator.

The King now seldom or never Plays, but contents himself sometimes with looking on. Lister, Journey to Paris, p. 222.

To look on or upon. [On or upon, prep.] (a) To esteem; hold in estimation: formerly used absolutely in a good sense.

That fellow there? will he respect and honour him? He has been look'd upon [with favor], they say; will he own him? Fletcher, Pilgrim, v. 6.

Her friends would look on her the worse. Prior, Alma, ii.

(b) To consider; regard; view: with as after the object: to look upon a remark as an affront.

It may rather be looked upon as an Excrescence, than as an essential Part of the Poem. Addison, Spectator, No. 315.

To look out, to be on the watch; with for before an object: as, to look out for squalls or breakers.

The Fish is presently sent to the Market in one of their Boats, the rest looking out again for more. Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 127.

I had scarcely time to order every man to look out, when the battle-tempest of arrows broke upon us from the woods. Stanley, Dark Continent, I. 236.

To look over, to examine cursorily: as, to look over a catalogue; to look over accounts.

John looks over the books in the case. W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 139.

To look sharp. (a) To exercise great vigilance; be extremely careful. [Colloq.]

The captain himself, according to a frequent though invidious behaviour of military men, ordered his man to look sharp that none but one of the ladies should have the place he had taken fronting the coach-box. Steele, Spectator, No. 132.

(b) To be quick; make haste. [Colloq.]

Kit told this gentleman to look sharp, and he not only said he would look sharp, but he actually did, and presently came running back. Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop, xxxix.

To look through. (a) To take a view of the contents of: as, to look through a book of engravings. (b) To see through; see or understand perfectly. [Archaic.]

He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men. Shak., J. C., i. 2. 202.

When you have seen his outside, you have looked through him, and need employ your discovery no farther. Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Meere Formal Man.

To look to or unto. (a) To give heed to; take care of.

For ere that unto armes I me betooke, Unto my fathers sheepe I usde to looke. Spenser, Mother Inub. Tale, l. 292.

Look to the woman. [Celia swoons.] B. Jonson, Volpone, iv. 2.

They looked well to their steps, and made a shift to get staggering over. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 240.

(b) To resort to or depend upon for something with confidence or expectation: as, he looks to me for payment.

Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth. Isa. xlv. 22.

The authors steadfastly looked to the surviving heir for pay or patronage in return for his miserable dote of consolation. Gifford, Int. to Ford's Plays, p. xvii.

They looked to Caesar and his legions to protect the Empire, and themselves as part of it. E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 126.

To look toward, to drink the health of. [Low.]

The ladies drank to his health, and Mr. Moss, in the most polite manner, looked towards him. Thackeray, Vanity Fair, liii.

=Syn. 4. Appear, see, to see.

II. trans. 1†. To see to; take care of.

But leches full lynely look'd his wound; With oile and with ointment abill therefore, Bond it full bigly on hor best wiae. Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7525.

2†. To look or search for; seek; expect.

But other cures of Cristen thei coveten nougt to haue, But there as wyunnyng lijth he looketh none other. Piets Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), l. 470.

I come To look a young man I call brother. Fletcher, Wit without Money, iv. 5.

3†. To search; inspect. [Rare.]

Look all these ladies' eyes, And see if there he not concealed hea. B. Jonson, Hue and Cry.

4. To affect in some way by the manner of looking or appearing: as, to look one out of countenance.

A spirit fit to start into an empire, And look the world to law. Dryden, Cleomenes.

And like a Basilisk almost look'd the Assembly dead. Cowley, Pindaric Odes, xiv. 3.

Most of them recommended that he should go in such force as to look down opposition, and crush the rebellion in its birth. Prescott.

5. To express or manifest by looks, or by the general aspect.

Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake again. Byron, Child Harold, iii. 21.

Dr. Woods looked his creed more decidedly, perhaps, than any of the Professors. O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 250.

To look a gift-horse in the mouth. See gift-horse.—To look babies in one's eyes. See baby, 3.—To look daggers. See dagger 1.—To look in the face, to face or meet with boldness; stand front to front, as for battle.

Then Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoshaphat, the son of Jehoshaphat son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face. 2 Ki. xiv. 8.

To look out, to search for and discover; pick out; select: as, to look out associates of good reputation.

Let me look out my things to make this fly. Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 246.

To look up. (a) To search for till found: as, I will look up the passage. (b) To pay a visit to; call upon: as, I must look you up some day. [Colloq.]

He used to go back for a week, just to look up his old friends. Dickens, Pickwick, xlix.

look¹ (lûk), n. [< ME. loke; < *look*¹, v.] 1. Visual or facial expression; cast of countenance; personal aspect: often used in the plural with a singular sense: as, a benevolent look; his looks are against him.

A sweet attractive kinde of grace, A full assurance given by looks, Continual comfort in a face. M. Rowden, Astrophel.

How much more elder art thou than thy looks! Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 251.

When you come to the eyes, Mr. Carmine, let me know, that I may call up a look. Foote, Taste, i. 1.

2. Appearance or seeming in general; the quality of anything as judged by the eye or the understanding: as, I do not like the look of the sky; the look of the thing (an action, a proposition, or the like) is bad. [Chiefly colloq.]

No tears Dim the sweet look that Nature wears. Longfellow, Sunrise.

3. The act of looking or seeing; glance: as, loving looks.

A doleful loke than lokede he That percyd myn hert bothe blode & bon. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 206.

His was the subtle look and sly, That, apying all, seems naught to spy. Scott, Rokeby, v. 16.

=Syn. 1. Appearance, complexion, mien, manner, air.— 3. Sight, glance, gaze.

look², v. t. See look 2.

lookdown (lûk'down), n. A carangoid fish, the moonfish or horsehead, Scelene romer. See cut under horsehead.

looker¹ (lûk'ér), n. 1. One who looks or watches; one who seeks or explores.—2. Specifically—(a) A shepherd or herdsman. (b) An inspector. [Prov. Eng.]

There is no election [in Morpeth] of fish and flesh lookers. Municip. Corp. Report, 1835.

looker² (lûk'ér), n. See looker.

looker-on (lûk'ér-on'), n. One who looks on; a spectator.

Lookers-on many times see more than gamesters. Bacon, Followers and Friends (ed. 1887).

My business in this state Made me a looker on here in Vienna. Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 319.

I speake not this as my owne sense, but what was the disconrae and thoughts of others who were lookers on. Evelyn, Diary, March 12, 1672.

looking (lûk'ing), n. [< ME. lokyng; verbal n. of *look*¹, v.] 1†. Appearance; aspect; countenance.

And with his chere and lokyng al to-tern, For sorwe of this, and with his armes folden, He stod this woful Troylus biforen. Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 358.

2†. Glance of the eye; regard.

Swich subtile lokyng and dissimulinges For drede of jalouse mennes aperceyvinges. Chaucer, Squire's Tale, l. 277.

3. Search or searching: as, a careful looking for names and dates.

looking-for (lûk'ing-fôr), n. Expectation; anticipation; foreboding.

A certain fearful looking for of judgment. Heb. x. 27.

looking-glass (lûk'ing-glâs), n. A plate of glass silvered (coated with quicksilver) on the back, so as to show images by reflection; a plane mirror of glass. The metallic coating is generally an amalgam of tin. A sheet of tin-foil is laid first upon a table and the mercury poured upon it; the glass is then applied horizontally upon the amalgam, to which it readily adheres.

All this is very excellently contrived in a faire looking glasse that hangeth at the side of his bedde. Coryat, Crudities, I. 187.

There is none so homely but loves a looking-glass. South, Sermons.

Looking-glass plant or tree, an evergreen tree of the genus Heritiera.

lookout (lûk'out), n. 1. A watching for the appearance or occurrence of anything, especially from without; vigilant observation or scrutiny; watch: as, to keep a good lookout at sea; to be on the lookout for an opportunity.

I think, if anything was to be foreseen, I have as sharp a look-out as another. Goldenlith, Good-natured Man, ii.

2. A place where a watch is kept; a post of external observation: as, the lookout on a ship's mast.—3. A person or party engaged in keeping watch, especially for things outside.

Even the lookouts were unaware of the proximity of the iceberg until it was actually upon them. Science, V. 460.

4. The subject of observation or vigilance; something to be watched for or guarded against: as, every man's interest is his own lookout.—5. A prospect or view; an outlook. [Rare.]

On this magnificent quay, with its glorious lookout over the lagoons. Novels, Venetian Life, xvii.

loom¹ (lôm), n. [< ME. lome, < AS. gelôma, also and-gelôma, andlôma, tool, instrument, implement; perhaps lit. 'a thing of frequent use': cf. gelôme, frequently, gelômic, frequent.] 1†. A utensil; a tool; a weapon; an article in general: now used only in composition, as in heirloom, workloom, etc. See heirloom.

He lyfetes lygtly his lome, & let hit domn fayre, With the barbe of the bitto bi the bare nek. Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 2309.

The lomes that ich labour with and lyfode deserue Ya pater-nostre and my prymer. Piers Plowman (C), vi. 45.

2. A machine for weaving any fabric from yarn or thread. The essential parts of a loom are: the frame, which supports the working parts; the yarn-beam, at the back part of the frame, upon which the warp-threads are wound; the cloth-beam, at the front part of the frame, upon which the cloth is wound as the weaving proceeds; the heddles and their mounting; the reed; and the batten (otherwise called lay and fathe), which carries the reed. The warp-threads extend in parallel relation from the yarn-beam to the cloth-beam, being also passed serially through the loops or eyes of the heddles, or harness, and through the interspaces of the reed. The operations of winding the warp-threads upon the yarn-beam, and passing them in due order through the loops or eyes of the heddles, and the interspaces of the reed, are collectively called "setting up the piece." The function of the heddles is to form the shed for the passage of the shuttle. The warp-threads are separated systematically by the heddles into two or more series, each controlled and alternately drawn upward and downward by the vertical motion of the heddles, thus leaving an opening or shed between the ranks of warp-threads, through which the shuttle is thrown or shot by the hand, or by pickers operated by the hand of the weaver in the hand-loom, or by picker-staff mechanism in the power-loom. (See heddle and picker.) The reed is carried by the batten, which swings radially on its bearings through an arc small in proportion to the radius. The reed is composed of a series of thin slats or wires arranged in parallel relation between two parallel bars placed at such distance asunder that the threads of the warp passing through the interspaces between the slats or wires may be serially opened or separated by the heddles, in forming the shed, without impinging upon these bars. The function of the reed is to force the thread of weft, wool, or filling, as passed between the warp-threads by the shuttle, as near as desirable to that part of the weft-thread which has just previously been embraced by the warp-threads. For this purpose the batten is swung so that the slats or wires of the reed drive the weft-thread against the previously woven part of the texture with a sharp blow. (See reed and batten.) The weft-thread is wound upon a bobbin or quill which turns upon a wire in the shuttle, and permits the thread to unwind when the shuttle passes to and fro through the sheds as the latter are successively formed by the action of the heddles. The shuttle is made of a piece of hard wood pointed at each end, and having a recess in the body for the reception of the bobbin or quill. Frequently the pointed ends are finished with metal. (See shuttle.) Narrow-fabric looms generally use a thread-carrier or eye-pointed needle as a substitute for the shuttle. (See positive-motion loom, below.) The Jacquard attachment is a device for forming sheds or openings for the passage of the shuttle between the warp-threads, invented by Joseph Marie Jacquard of Lyons, used as a substitute for the heddle or head mechanism previously employed in the loom, and, by its introduction, marking an epoch in the manufacture of figured woven fabrics. It consists essentially of a series of perforated paper or metal cards which, one after another, are laid flat upon the faces of an intermittently revolving and perforated prism, in such manner that the perforations in the cards successively and exactly superimpose corresponding perforations in the prism. Wires, each separately controlling the engagement with a lifting-bar or griffe of a hooked wire connected with an individual warp-thread or set of warp-threads, are made by suitable mechanism to enter the holes of the cards when by the rotation of the prism each is successively brought to a special position, the wires so entering causing all the individual threads with which they are connected to be lifted above the common level of the warp-threads, thus forming a shed for the passage of the shuttle. Each card thus represents a different shed, and as there may be an indefinite number of cards joined together by flexible connections, which, like an endless chain, are carried upon the perforated revolving prism, and as there may be also a number of shuttles carrying weft-threads of different tints, there is no limit to variety of form and color in the figures that may be woven. The prism carrying the system of cards moves at each partial rotation through an arc the chord of which is equal to the width of one of the faces. The introduction of this method of weaving at once advanced the art of figure-weaving beyond the limit of mere geometrical patterns into the realm of fine-art industry, as even the finest tapestries may be successively imitated by it. Looms are for the most part distinguished by the names of the material they weave, as ribbon-loom, figure-loom (figured-fabric loom), carpet-loom, etc., and also by the names of the inventors, as the Jacquard loom. They differ chiefly in the harness-system, or the manner in which the warp-threads are raised to form the shed and thus produce the figure in the finished fabric, and in the method of impelling the shuttle. There may be several shuttles in a loom, in order to introduce a variety of weft-threads, and thus produce more complicated patterns than can be formed by a single weft. Hand-looms are now almost wholly devoted to fine silks and carpets, nearly all other fabrics being woven on power-looms, either with or without the Jacquard attachment.

Unbred to spinning, in the loom unskill'd, She chose the nobler Pallas of the field. Dryden, Æneid, vii.

3. The part of an oar between the blade and the handle; the shaft.—4. A chimney. Hallivell.

[Prov. Eng.]—Chain-tappet loom, a loom for fancy weaving, in which the harnesses are operated by tappets upon a pattern-chain. E. H. Knight.—Circular loom. See circular.—Double-cloth loom, a loom in which two sets of webs are woven simultaneously, or in which two webs are knitted with their edges joined in such a way as to form a tube. E. H. Knight.—Double-plied-fabric loom, a loom which forms a pile on both sides of the foundation. The pile may be produced from either the warp or the weft. E. H. Knight.—Electric loom, a Jacquard loom in which the perforated cards were replaced by a band on which the pattern was marked in some insulating paint. Small electromagnets were arranged in such a way that, on the movement of the band under them, they were brought into action on passing the uninsulated parts and left at rest on the insulated parts, and they thus, by means of suitable mechanism, controlled the usual apparatus by which the warp-threads are controlled. It does not appear to have been a commercial success.—High-warp loom, in tapestry-weaving, a loom in which the warp is carried vertically, in distinction from a low-warp loom, in which the warp is carried horizontally.—Jacquard loom, a loom in which is comprised the Jacquard attachment for weaving figured fabrics. See above, 2.—Metallic-tissue loom, a loom for weaving with metallic threads alone, as in making gold and silver tissues such as lace or braid, or for weaving fabrics with a silk or thread warp and a weft of wire, or of silk thread covered with a flattened wire of silver-gilt.—Narrow-fabric loom, a loom designed especially for weaving tapes, ribbons, bindings, etc. It may be a shuttle-loom, but has generally an eye-pointed needle or thread-carrier which traverses the shed forward and back after each movement of the harness. Also called narrow-ware loom and needle-loom.—Positive-motion loom, a loom, invented by Lyall of New York, for weaving wide fabrics. It has a track or raceway on which the shuttle is drawn through the shed at a uniform velocity by a kind of roller-carriage, instead of being thrown through by the picker-staff mechanism or by hand.—Power-loom, a loom in which all the motions of the parts are accomplished by other power than the muscular power of the operator, as steam- or water-power.

loom⁴ (lôm), v. l. [*< loom*¹, n.] To weave. [Rare.]

Or with loomed wool the native robe supplies. Savage, The Wanderer, i.

loom² (lôm), v. i. [Early mod. E. lome; < ME. lumen, shine, prob. < OF. lumer, shine, < L. luminare, shine; see luminic, etc. Less prob. < Icel. ljôma, shine, gloam, dawn, = AS. leôman, ljôman, shine; see *lean*¹, v.] 1. To shine. Specifically—2. To appear indistinctly; come dimly into view, as from below the horizon or through a mist; rise up before the vision so as to give the impression of indistinct bulk or largeness; stand out prominently in the prospect: often used figuratively.

They stand far off in time; through perspective Of clear wits yet they loom both great and near. Fanshawe, tr. of Camoens's Lusiad, viii. 2.

Heer smokes a Castle, there a Cîte fumes, And heer a Ship upon th' Ocean looms. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 7.

The facts which loomed so large in the fogs of yesterday . . . have strangely changed their proportions. Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 252.

loom² (lôm), n. [*< loom*², v.] 1. A coming indistinctly or vaguely into view; also, the indistinct or unnaturally enlarged appearance of anything, as land, seen at a distance or through a fog. See looming.

Our situation now became a very critical one, with the loom of a third berg on the other side of us. R. M' Cormick, Arc. and Antarc. Voyages, I. 277.

2. The track of a fish. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

loom³ (lôm), n. [Also dial. lom, lomm, lomme, lome, lumme, etc. (NL. Lomvia, q. v.); = G. lohme, lomme; < Icel. lômr = Dan. Sw. lom, a loom (a bird so called); perhaps ult. connected with *loom*¹. The word in E. is now corrupted to loon: see *loon*².] 1†. A loon. See *loon*².

A loom is as big as a goose. N. Grew, Museum.

2. A guillemot.

On the face of these sea-ledges of Arveprins Island Bruenich's guillemots, or looms, gather in the breeding season. A. W. Greeley, Arctic Service, p. 49.

The multitude of looms frequenting it [Nova Zembla], a bird to which they gave the whimsical name of arctic parrots. Motley, United Netherlands, III. 563.

loom-mask (lôm'mâsk), n. [*< loo, a corruption of loop, + *mask*³.] A mask used to conceal the face or part of it.

loom-card (lôm'kârd), n. A pierced pattern-card used in the Jacquard loom. E. H. Knight.

loom-comb (lôm'kôm), n. The reed of a loom.

loomery (lôm'mêr-i), n.; pl. loomeries (-iz). [*< loom*³ + -ery.] A breeding-place of looms or guillemots. [Rare.]

I sent Lieutenant Lockwood with a boat's crew to the loomery on Arveprins Island for birds. They . . . brought back but sixty-five Bruenich's guillemots. A. W. Greeley, Arctic Service, p. 48.

loom-figured (lôm'fig'ûrd), a. Having a pattern woven in: said of a textile material.

loom-gale (lôm'gâl), n. A gentle gale of wind.

loom-harness (lôm'hâr'nes), n. That part of a loom which moves the warp-threads to make the crossing or decussation forming the shed in which the shuttle travels and leaves the weft-thread. The harness has heddles with loops for the warps, some of which are continually raised above the others and then depressed, either in regular alternation (for plain weaving) or in a different order, as the pattern requires.

looming (lôm'ming), n. [Verbal n. of *loom*², v.] 1. A coming vaguely into view.—2. A form of mirage in which distant objects, usually across water, appear abnormally elevated above their true positions, this displacement being accompanied in many cases by a vertical magnification.

Its [Monticello's] elevation affords an opportunity of seeing a phenomenon which is rare at land though frequent at sea. The seamen call it looming. Philosophy is as yet in the rear of the seaman, for so far from having accounted for it, she has not given it a name. Jefferson, Notes on Virginia (1787), p. 135.

The inverted images which are often presented in looming are not beneath the object, as in the case of mirage on dry land, but above it, as if formed by reflection in the sky. Nature, XI. 49.

loom-picture (lôm'pik'tûr), n. A piece of textile fabric so woven as to constitute a picture. The name has been given especially to monochromatic designs produced in silk, such as copies of engraved portraits.

loom-sheeting (lôm'shê'ting), n. A variety of linen sheeting of good quality.

loon¹ (lôn), n. [Also loon, lovn, lovene; < ME. loone (also in adj. loone; see loone, loone), appar. < OD. loen, a stupid fellow, possibly a var. or corruption of loem* (cf. ME. loemyshe, for looneyshe), connected with lome, dull, slow, = OHG. luomi, luami, lômi, MHG. lueme, faint, weary, drooping, mild (MHG. luomen, lomen, droop), G. lumen, loose, lax, > D. lummel = G. lummel = Dan. lummel = Sw. lymmel, a loon, lubber (cf. E. lummoz). These words are prob. from the same ult. source as lame.] A stupid fellow; a clown: with various shades of intensity as an opprobrious epithet, like fool, dolt, etc.

And take it hacket with manlike cheere, not like a rusticke Loone. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 291.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon! Where got'st thou that goose look? Shak., Macbeth, v. 3. 11.

Hold off; unhand me, gray-haired loon! Coleridge, Ancient Mariner, i.

Kinless loons. See kinless.

loon² (lôn), n. [A corruption of *loom*³.] A four-toed diving bird of the genus Colymbus or Urinator. See Colymbidae. There are several species, all inhabiting the northern hemisphere. The great northern diver, ring-necked loon, or ember-goose, C. torquatus or C. glacialis or Urinator imber, is from 30 to 36 inches long, and 4½ feet in stretch of wings; when adult

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

Great Northern Diver (Colymbus torquatus or Urinator imber).

It is glossy-black with greenish and purplish metallic reflections on the head and neck, which, with the back, are marked regularly with white spots. The under parts are white, and the bill is black. C. adamæ, the yellow-billed loon, is somewhat larger. The black-throated loon or diver, C. arcticus, resembles the foregoing, but is smaller, with much of the head clear bluish-gray. The red-throated loon, C. septentrionalis, is much like C. arcticus, but is smaller still, and has a chestnut patch on the throat. Both the two smaller loons, the red- and the black-throated, are also called speckled loons, and a variety of the former, from the western coast of North America, is recognized as C. pacificus. (See diver, 1 (b).) The wild actions of the loon in escaping danger and its dismal cry (see looming) suggest the idea of insanity; whence the common (American) simile "as crazy as a loon."

loonghee, loonghie (lōng'gē), n. [E. Ind. lūngi.] A long scarf of silk or cotton stuff, usually of rich colors, used in the East Indies to wrap round the body as a waist- or loin-cloth. It is about 4 yards long and 2 feet wide.

looming (lō'ning), n. [loon + -ing]. The cry of a loon. It is a sort of wild moan somewhat resembling the howl of a wolf.

This was his [a loon's] looming—perhaps the wildest sound that is ever heard here. Thoreau, Walden, p. 254.

loony (lō'ni), a. and n. See lunny.

loop¹ (lōp), n. [ME. lōpe, loupe, lowpe; prob. < Ir. Gael. lub, bend.] 1. A folding or doubling of a string, lace, cord, chain, etc., or a short piece doubled and secured to something at each end. By a loop is most commonly understood a part or piece of some material bent and secured in such a way as to form an eye or opening through which something can be passed; but it may be merely an unfastened returning curve in the material, the shape giving the name.

Buttons of orient pearl, . . . Which loopes of azur'd silk did circulize. Davies, An Extasie.

I sold my sheep, and lambkins too, For silver loops and garment blue. Gay, Shepherd's Week, Prol.

The female figure reclining on the lid [of a sarcophagus] wears a Greek chiton of a thin white material, with short sleeves fastened on the outside of the arm by means of buttons and loops. Encyc. Brit., VI. 455.

2. Something resembling a loop, as the bend of a river; a link; a crook.

At another lope of the wall, on a ladder, ther was the lorde of Sereell, and fought hands to hande with his eneyes. Berners, tr. of Froissart's Chron., I. cccxii.

Specifically—(a) In crochet, knitting, and similar kinds of fancy work, same as stitch. (b) A hinge of a door. [Prov. Eng.] (c) In railroad and telegraph systems, a branch line leaving the main line at any point and joining it again at some other point; a looping line, as a branch wire carried over to a side station and back. (d) In the theory of Riemann's surfaces, a line running from any point to a branch-point, then around that branch-point in an infinitesimal circle, and back to the original point by the same path. (e) A part of a curve limited by a cusp. (f) The ear of a vessel, as a stoneware jar, when approximately of the form of a half-ring projecting from the side or lip.

It has on its central band four projecting handles or loops. Jewell, Ceramic Art (1878), I. 15.

(g) In gun., a small iron ring in the barrel of a gun. (h) The small ring at the tip of a fishing-rod through which the line passes. (i) In anat., a looped vessel or fiber; especially, a nerve-loop. (j) In brachiopods, the folding of the brachial appendages.

3. In acoustics, the part of a vibrating musical string (see sonometer), or, as in an organ-pipe, of a column of air, where the amplitude of vibration is at its maximum. See node.—4. In mech., a slotted bar or ring at the side of any piece of machinery, designed to limit or control the movement of another part.—5. A knot or bur, often of great size, occurring on walnut, maple, oak, and some other trees. The wood of these knots is curled and waved in grain, and is used to make veneers for ornamental furniture.

6. A small magnifying-glass.—Crochet and loop, an old term for hook and eye. See hook.

[Beds] that henget shalle be with hole syliour, With crochetis and loopyis set on lyour. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 313.

Pressed loop, in harness, a leather strap or piece of which the outer surface is ornamented by impression with a stamp.—Prick at the loop. Same as fast and loose (a). See fast.

loop¹ (lōp), v. [*loop*¹, n.] I. trans. 1. To form into a loop or loops: as, to loop a cord.—2. To fasten or secure with a loop or loops: as, to loop up a curtain.—3. To furnish with a loop or loops: as, to loop a cloak.

II. intrans. 1. To form a loop.

The pathways wind and loop here and there among the ravines and around the mountain shoulders. The Century, XXXVII. 422.

2. To move, as the larvæ of certain moths, by forming loops.

They [leeches] move partly by looping with the help of their suckers, and partly by swimming. C. Claus, Zoology (trans.), p. 399.

loop² (lōp), n. [Early med. E. also lope; < ME. loupe, < OF. loup (dial. loop), a narrow window; appar. < D. luip, a peeping-place, ambush, < luipen, peep, lurk. Hence loophole.] 1. A narrow window; any small, narrow aperture; specifically, in medieval fort., a small aperture for observing the enemy, for the discharge of arrows or ordnance, or to admit light; a loophole.

That no light loope yn at iouer ne at loupe. Piers Plowman (C), xxi. 288.

They found the gates fast barred long ere night, And every loop fast lockt, as fearing loes despright. Spenser, F. Q., II. ix. 10.

Some at the loops durst scarce outpeep. Fairfax, tr. of Tasso.

The same [wall] was very narrow in the top, not divided with lopes, . . . but inclosed with one whole and continual battilment round about. J. Brende, tr. of Quintus Curtius, ix.

2. A gap in the paling of a park, made for the convenience of the deer. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.].—3. A removable fence-panel made of parallel wooden bars, generally united by transverse braces or crosspieces, used as a substitute for an ordinary fence-gate. Instead of being hinged, it is generally supported by notched brackets, or other supports adapted to receive the ends of the bars.

loop³, n. See loupe.

loop-bolt (lōp'bōlt), n. In a vehicle, a bolt with an ornamental head used to fasten the body-loop to the running-gear.

looper (lō'pēr), n. [*< loop*¹ + -er]. 1. In entom., a measuring-worm; a geometrid larva: same as geometer, 3. Hence—2. pl. The adult geometrid moths, Geometridæ or Geometrina. Also called measure-moths and land-measurers.

—3. An implement used in uniting the ends of strips cut from rags for the wool or filling of rag carpets. It is a blade with a point and an eye, through which the end of a strip is passed. With the point of the blade the end of another strip is perforated; the end of the first strip, held by the eye, is then put through the perforation in the second, and the strips are looped together.

loop-head (lōp'hed), n. In a vehicle, the swell and eye on the end of a body-loop. E. H. Knight.

loop-holder (lōp'hēl'dēr), n. A carriage-iron by which the loop of a strap is attached to the running-gear or the bed. E. H. Knight.

loophole (lōp'hōl), n. [*< loop*² + hole]. 1. A small aperture, narrow toward the outside and splayed within, in the walls of a fortification or of any similar structure, through which small-arms may be fired at an enemy, or observations may be taken.

No stirring out, no peeping through a loop-hole, But straight saluted with an arm'd dart. Fletcher (and another), False One, iv. 2.

2. An opening into or out of anything; a hole or aperture that gives a passage or the means of escape: often used figuratively, and especially of an underground or unfair method of escape or evasion.

Tends his pasturing herds At loopholes cut through thickest shade. Milton, P. L., ix. 1110.

He was only indignant that a few narrow and almost impossible loop-holes had been left, through which those who had offended might effect their escape. Motley, Dutch Republic, II. 97.

loopholed (lōp'hōld), a. Furnished with loop-holes; having holes or openings for outlook, discharge of firearms, escape, etc.

But if those fail, Yet this uneasy loop-holed gaol, In which ye're hampered by the fetlock, Cannot but put y' in mind of wedlock. S. Butler, Hudibras, II. i. 608.

loopy, a. See loopy.

looping-snail (lō'ping-snāl), n. A snail of the genus Truncatella which walks by contracting and expanding the space between the lips and the foot, like a looping caterpillar.

looping-worm (lō'ping-wēr'm), n. Same as loop-worm.

loophlight (lōp'lit), n. A small, narrow window in a wall, turret, or the like; a loophole, especially for the admission of light.

loop-shell guard (lōp'shel gārd). A sword-guard of such form that a loop or ring attached to the cross-guard, through which the finger may be passed, is protected in its turn by a shell forming an additional or outer guard. Compare cup-guard.

loop-test (lōp'test), n. A method of testing for the position of a fault or defect in the insulation of a telegraph-line or cable. It consists in making the two parts of the faulty line two sides of the Wheatstone's bridge (see resistance), the fault, through the earth, being made one of the junctions of the bridge.

loopwork (lōp'wēr'k), n. Work consisting of loops or looped stitches.

By leaving portions of the silk loopwork uncut a less raised pile is produced. Art Journal, XLVIII. 379.

loopworm (lōp'wēr'm), n. A looper: same as geometer, 3. Also looping-worm.

loopy (lō'pi), a. [Also loopy; origin uncertain: cf. *loop*².] Deceitful; crafty.

loop-yoke (lōp'yōk), n. In a vehicle, the loop for the strap by which the swaying of the body is limited. E. H. Knight.

loordt, n. See lourd.

loost, n. See loosd.

loose (lōs), a. and n. [< ME. loos, los, louse, lowse, lause, a var. (due to the verb, or to the influence of D. loos, etc.) of lees, les, < AS. leās, loose, false, = OS. lōs = OFries. las = MD. loos, loose, false, D. los, loose, loos, false, = MLG. lōs, los = OHG. MHG. lōs, loose, false, G. los, loose, = Icel. laus = Dan. Sw. lōs, loose, = Goth. laus, empty, vain; from the root lus* of AS. leōsan, lose: see loose, v., *leese*¹, *lose*¹, and *lease*³. The AS. adj. leās is also the source of the E. suffix -less, q. v.] I. a. 1. Not fast or confined; not fastened; unattached; free from restraint or obligation; not bound to another or together; without bonds, ties, or attachments; at liberty: as, loose sheets of a book; loose tresses of hair; loose change in one's pocket; to break loose; to be set loose; to cut loose from bad habits.

When I had at this folke beholde And founde me loos and noght yholde. Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1286.

Than pité of my person pricked his hert, He delinert me loose, & my lefe felow, Alphenor the freike. Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 13190.

Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire. Dan. iii. 25.

Pretending Religion and the Law of God is to set all things loose. Selden, Table-Talk, p. 104.

War wearied hath perform'd what war can do, And to disorder'd rage let loose the reins. Milton, P. L., vi. 606.

Rills that, . . . chiming as they fall Upon loose pebbles, lose themselves at length. Couper, Task, t. 194.

Horses breaking loose in the compound outside. W. H. Russell, Diary in India, II. 73.

2. Not tight or close; without close union or adjustment; slightly or slackly joined: as, a loose knot; loose garments; a loose league or confederation.

Now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief. Shak., Macbeth, v. 2. 21.

The light and lustrous curls . . . were parch'd with dust, Or clotted into points and hanging loose. Tennyson, Passing of Arthur.

3. Not dense or compact; having interstices or intervals; open or expanded: as, cloth of loose texture; a loose order of battle.

With horse and chariots rank'd in loose array. Milton, P. L., ii. 887.

4. Not concise or condensed; wanting precision or connection of parts; diffuse; rambling: as, a loose style of writing; loose reasoning; a loose array of facts.

Both, hate, lustie, and plaine speakers, but coide, loose, and rough writers. Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 116.

He dodged me with a long and loose account. Tennyson, Sea Dreams.

5. Not exact in meaning; indefinite; vague; uncertain.

It is scarcely possible that language so loose, in a matter requiring mathematical precision, should have been unintentional. Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 11.

The words in which the jurisdiction of these officers was described were loose, and might be stretched to almost any extent. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

6. Lax; relaxed; slack; wanting retentiveness or power of restraint: as, loose bowels; loose ties; a loose bend of union.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs. Shak., Othello, iii. 3. 416.

7. Lax in character or quality; not strict or exact; careless; slovenly: as, a loose construction of the constitution; a loose mode of conducting business; loose morality.

It is an argument of a loose and ungoverned mind to be affected with the promiscuous approbation of the generality of mankind. Steele, Spectator, No. 188.

So loose was the practice in assessment for these taxes that a perusal of the various writs for the assessment and collection is like reading the programme for the course of a procession that went another way. S. Dowell, Taxes in England, III. 76.

8. Lax in principle or conduct; free from moral restraint; wanton; dissolute; unchaste: as, a loose woman; loose behavior.

I would prevent The loose encounters of lascivious men. Shak., T. G. of V., ii. 7. 41.

I have shewn in a former Paper with how much Care I have avoided all such Thoughts as are loose, obscens, or immoral. Addison, Spectator, No. 262.

Their subjects run . . . from the most solemn mysteries of religion to the loosest frolics of common life. Ticknor, Span. Lit., II. 206.

9†. Disengaged; free; independent: with from or of.

Now I stand Loose of my vow; but who knows Cato's thoughts? Addison, Cato.

Their prevailing principle is to sit as loose from pleasures, and be as moderate in the use of them, as they can. Atterbury.

10†. Seemingly communicative; frank; open; candid.

Your thoughts close and your countenance loose will go safely over the world. Leigh (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 645).

A loose fish. See fish, n.—At loose ends. See end.—Fast and loose. See fast.—Loose color, a color that is not permanent; a fugitive color; specifically, in dyeing, a color which will not resist the various destructive agents, as light, air, soap, dilute acids and alkalis, to which it may be naturally subjected.—Loose herding. See herding.—Loose in the haft. See haft.—Loose pulley, sentence, etc. See the nouns.—To break loose, cut loose, let loose, etc. See the verbs.—To shake a loose leg. See leg.

II. n. 1†. Freedom from restraint; license. [Still used in a common phrase. See to give a loose, below.]

He [Pegasus] runs with an unbounded loose. Prior, Carmen Seculare for 1700, xvi.

2. The act of letting go or letting fly; discharge; shot.

In throwing a dart or javelin we force back our arms, to make our loose the stronger. B. Jonson.

Surely the poet gives a twang to the loose of his arrow, making him [Robin Hood] shoot one a cloth-yard long at full forty-score mark. Fuller, Worthies, II. 569 (Proverbs).

Merely to straighten the fingers and let the string go free will give a clumsy, sluggish loose. M. and W. Thompson, Archery, p. 20.

3†. A solution of a problem or explanation of a difficulty.

You shall see them find out pretty looses in the conclusion, but are no ways able to examine or debate matters. Bacon, Cunnings (ed. 1887).

4. The privilege of turning out cattle on commons. [North. Eng.]—To give a loose, or to give loose, to give free vent; give a loose rein.

Several of the French, Italian, and English Poets have given a loose to their imaginations in the Description of Angels. Addison, Spectator, No. 327.

Our Manners were formed from our different Fortunes, not our different Age. Wealth gave a Loose to your Youth, and Poverty put a Restraint upon mine. Steele, Conscious Lovers, I. 1.

loose (lös), v.; pret. and pp. loosed, ppr. loosing. [Early mod. E. also louse, louse, teuse; < ME. lousen (a var., after the adj., of losen, lose, < AS. losian), mixed with the different but related verb lesen, < AS. lesan, lysian = OS. lōsjan, lōsōn = D. lossen = MLG. losen = OHG. lōsjan, lōsan, lōsōn, MHG. lösen, G. lösen = Icel. leysa = Sw. lösa = Dan. løse = Goth. lausjan, loose; from the adj., AS. leas, etc., loose: see loose, a., and cf. lose.] I. trans. 1. To make loose or free; release from that which restrains, confines, or hampers; set at liberty; disengage; discharge from constraint, obligation, or penalty.

Have pity on me, as I had upon thee, When I loosed ye out of prison strang. The Provost's Daughter (Child's Ballads, IV. 293).

Whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. Mat. xvi. 19.

Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. Luke xiii. 12.

As many arrows, loosed several ways, Come to one mark. Shak., Hen. V., I. 2. 207.

I heard the famous singer Cifaccio. . . His holding out and delicateness in extending and loosing a note with incomparable softness and sweetness was admirable. Evelyn, Diary, April 19, 1687.

2. To disengage the hold of; undo; unfasten; untie.

Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? Rev. v. 2.

Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds. Shak., C. of E., v. 1. 339.

We differ farther, and the knot harder to loose, for nether ayde wantes sunn reason. A. Hume, Orthographie (E. E. T. S.), p. 9.

3. To relax; loosen; make or let loose, partially or wholly: as, to loose sail; to loose one's hold or grasp.

The joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another. Dan. v. 6.

4†. To solve; explain.

He had red her Riddle, which no wight Could ever loose but suffred deadly doole. Spenser, F. Q., V. xi. 25.

To loose sail, to unfurl sail by casting off the gaskets. = Syn. To unfasten, let go, detach, disconnect, absolve, acquit.

II. intrans. To perform the act of loosening; make or set loose something; let go a hold, unmoor a ship, shoot an arrow, or the like.

I spayed hym behynde a tree redy to loose at me with a crossbow. Palgrave.

Now, when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Parga, in Pamphylia. Acts xiii. 13.

Nor must he look at what or whom to strike, But loose at all; each mark must be alike. B. Jonson, Sejanus, iii. 3.

loose-bodied (lös'bod'id), a. 1†. Of loose habits.

Be wise, and take heed of him; he's giddy-headed, and loose-bodied. Shirley, Love Tricks, II. 1.

2. Not fitted to the figure; flowing.

Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown. Shak., T. of the S., iv. 3. 135.

loose-box (lös'boks), n. A stable, or more commonly an inclosed part of a stable, without stalls, for the accommodation of unhaltered horses.

The pony in the loose-box in the corner. Dickens, Bleak House, vii.

loose-house (lös'hous), n. Same as loose-box.

loose-kirtle (lös'kèr'tl), n. A woman of loose character; a wanton. Kingsley. [Rare.]

loosely (lös'li), adv. [= D. looselijk = MLG. lōstiken = MHG. lōstliche, lōstliche = Icel. lausliga = Sw. lösigen, lösigt = Dan. løselig; as loose, a., + -ly.] 1. In a loose manner; not firmly or tightly: as, loosely corded or strapped.

Her golden locks for haate were loosely shed About her ears. Spenser, F. Q.

Hence—2. Freely; negligently; carelessly; without precision: as, to speak loosely; a loosely conducted enterprise.

Part loosely wing the region. Milton, P. L., vii. 425.

A prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition. Shak., 2 Iten. IV., ii. 2. 9.

I imagine our Bible is the most loosely read, least understood of any book in the English tongue. Alcott, Tablets, p. 142.

The importance of time, even in a war as loosely conducted . . . as that of the Rebellion, has no better illustration than in the case of the Monitor. J. R. Soley, Blockade and Cruisers, p. 236.

So, to speak loosely and generally, the Lancastrian rule was a direct continuity, and the Yorkist rule was a break in the continuity, of constitutional development. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 373.

3. Immorally; wantonly; dissolutely.

A bishop, living loosely, was charged that his conversation was not according to the apostles' lives. Camden.

loosen (lös'sn), v. [= Dan. løse; as loose, a., + -en. Cf. loose, v.] I. trans. 1. To make loose; free from tightness, tension, firmness, or fixedness: as, to loosen a knot; to loosen a joint; to loosen a rock in the earth.—2. To render less dense or compact: as, to loosen the soil about the roots of a plant.

The cause of this was nothing but the loosening of the earth, which comforteth any tree. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 435.

3. To let loose; free from restraint or confinement.

While you, with loosen'd sails and vows, prepare To seek a land that itea the searcher's care. Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Epistles, viii.

Breathe into the many-folded shell, Loosening its mighty music. Shelley, Prometheus Unbound, iii. 3.

From his girth The dread scroll loosened fell to earth. William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 203.

To loosen a cough, to relieve the affected parts from a sense of constriction; promote expectoration.—To loosen the bowels, to relieve them from costiveness.

II. intrans. To become loose; become less tight, firm, or compact.

loosener (lös'nér), n. 1. One who loosens.—2. That which loosens; a laxative.

It wrought neither as an astringent or as a loosener; nor like opium, or bark, or mercury. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, IX. xxv. (19).

looseness (lös'nes), n. 1. The state of being loose or relaxed; laxness of attachment, adjustment, connection, or coherence: as, the looseness of a cord or a vein; looseness of the skin, of earth, or of the texture of cloth; looseness of expression or of reasoning.

To the conversational education of the Athenians I am inclined to attribute the great looseness of reasoning which is remarkable in most of their scientific writings. Macaulay, Athenian Orators.

2. Irregularity; instability; habitual deviation from rules; as applied to conduct, laxity; immorality; disorder.

When the people slacken, and fall to loosenes, and riot, then doe they as much as if they laid downe their necka for some wily Tyrant to get up and ride. Milton, Reformation in Eng., II.

3. Flux from the bowels; diarrhea.

loosening-bar (lös'ning-bär), n. See bar.
loosestrife (lös'strif), n. [loose, v., + obj. strife; translating the Gr. name λυσιμαχία, λυσιμαχίον (> L. lysimachia), loosestrife: see Lysimachia.] In bot., the English popular name of several species of plants, chiefly of the genera Lysimachia and Lythrum.

Loosestrife (Lysimachia quadrifolia). 1, upper part of the stem with the flowers; 2, lower part, showing the rhizome; a, flower; b, fruit.

Common loosestrife, Lysimachia vulgaris or Lythrum Salicaria. [Great Britain.]—False loosestrife, a plant of the genus Ludwigia.—Golden or yellow loosestrife, Lysimachia vulgaris.—Purple or spiked loosestrife, Lythrum Salicaria.—Swamp loosestrife, Nesaea verticillata.—Tufted loosestrife, Lysimachia thyrsoiflora.—West Indian loosestrife, Jussiaea suffruticosa.

loose-work (lös'wèrk), n. An old style of embroidery in which parts were left free to move, as the leaves of a tree represented in the work, and attached by one side or one point only.

loot (löt), n. [loot, n.] I. trans. To plunder, as a house or a city which has been taken by storm; pillage; sack; ransack in search of plunder; also, to seize and carry off as plunder.

A place of temporary security for the plunder looted by laundresses. Dickens, Uncommercial Traveller, xiv.

A body of soldiers . . . looted everything they could find. E. Sartorius, In the Soudan, p. 54.

II. intrans. To engage in pillage; take booty.

It was, of course, rather difficult to prevent our men from looting, and generally going on as natives, and, for the matter of that, white men too, are in the habit of doing after a victory. Harper's Mag., LXXVII. 361.

loo-table (lös'tā'bl), n. An ornamental round table for use in playing at loo.

"Augustus, my love," said Miss Peckaniff, "ask the price of the eight rosewood chairs and the loo-table." Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xlv.

looter (lös'tér), n. One who loots; a plunderer.

Those inattiable looters, men, women, and children, all are at it. W. H. Russell, Diary in India, II. 340.

looty (lös'ti), n.; pl. looties (-tiz). [loot, n.] In the East Indies, a plunderer; a looter. See pidarree.

The looties acted of Ispahan are proverbial as the most "rowdy" set of vagabonds in Persia. Encyc. Brit., XIII. 395.

loovet, v. t. See love.
loovet, loovered. See lover, lowered.
loowarm, a. See lew-warm.

lop (lop), v.; pret. and pp. lopped, ppr. lopping. [A var. of lap, q. v. Cf. lop, prob. the same word in another sense. For the variation of vowel, cf. flap and flop, strap and strop, knop and knop.] I. intrans. 1. To hang down loosely; droop: said especially of the pendulous ears of some animals, as dogs and rabbits.—2. To bend indolently sidewise or downward; loll; lounge. [Colloq.]

The señora . . . could only lop about in her saddle. The Century, XXIII. 652.

II. trans. To let droop; allow to hang down: as, a horse lops his ears.

lop (lop), n. [lop, v.] A hanging down; a drooping, as of the ears of rabbits.

lop (lop), v. t.; pret. and pp. lopped, ppr. lopping. [*ME. loppen (not recorded, but prob. the source of ML. loppare, lop); prob. another use ('cut the lap or loose edges of) of *lop*¹, var. of *lap*². Cf. F. lopin, a fragment, morsel, from the same ult. source, namely AS. lappa, etc., edge, margin, etc. In this view, the word is not related to MD. luppen, D. lubben, main, castrate: see *lib*¹.] 1. To cut off, as the top or extreme part of anything; shorten or reduce by cutting off the extremities; cut off, as superfluous parts; trim by cutting; as, to lop a tree or its branches.

Have I with this one rapier
Pass'd through a field of pikes, whose heads I lop
As easily as the bloody-minded youth
Lop off the poppy-heads? Ford, Lady's Trial, iv. 2.
Expunge the whole, or lop the excrescent parts.
Pope, Essay on Man, ll. 49.

There is another power, long used, but now lopped off.
D. Webster, Speech, Oct. 12, 1832.

2. To cut partly off and bend down: as, to lop the saplings of a hedge. = Syn. 1. To dock, crop, prune. *lop*² (lop), n. [*< lop*², v.] That which is cut from trees; fagot-wood.

We take
From every tree lop, bark, and part of the timber.
Shak., Hen, VIII., l. 2. 96.

It is usual to take the lop, or smaller branches (for distillation).
Spenser's Encyc. Manuf., I. 3.

Lop and top. (a) The smaller branches and the tops of trees that are lopped off; fagot-wood.

A very large fall of timber, . . . one fifth of which . . . belongs to the grantee, Lord Stavel. He lays claim also to the lop and top: but the poor . . . have taken it all away.
Gilbert White, Nat. Hist. of Selborne, ix.

(b) Every part; the whole.
Now thyself hast lost both lopp and topp.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., February.

lop³ (lop), n. [< ME. loppe (= Sw. loppa = Dan. loppe), a flea; prob. < AS. hleðpan, leap: see *leap*¹, and cf. *lop*¹. The AS. loppe, a spider, is by some taken to mean 'a flea'; but its other sense, 'a silkworm,' and its appar. var. lobbe, a spider (see *lob*¹), exclude this interpretation.] 1. A flea.

After this bors shal come a lambe that shal haue feet of lede, and hede of bras, an hert of a loppe, a swynes skyn, and an harde.
Caxton, Chron. of Eng., p. 60.

Grete loppis ouere all this lande thei flye,
That with bytyng makis mekill biure.
York Plays, p. 85.

2. A spider.
Thi riet shapen in manere of a net or of a webbe of a loppe.
Chaucer, Astrolabe, l. 3.

lop⁴, n. An obsolete preterit of *leap*¹.
Loparia (lō-pā'ri-ā), n. pl. [NL.,] A division of heteropterous bugs of the family Phytoecidae, comprising the largest and most superbly colored members of the family.

lope¹ (lōp), v.; pret. and pp. loped, ppr. loping. [< ME. lopen, a var. of lepen (AS. hleðpan), perhaps due in part to LG. lophen, D. loopen, leap: see *leap*¹.] 1. Intrans. 1. To leap.

This whinyard has gard many better men to lope than thou.
Greene, James IV., Ind.

2. To move or run with a long step, as a dog; canter leisurely with a rather long, easy stride, as a horse.

The most confirmed gait he could establish was a Canterbury gallop with the hind legs, which those more forward assisted for doubtful moments, though generally content with a loping trot.
J. F. Cooper, Last of the Mohicans, li.

II. trans. To cause to lope in going or running. [Rare.]

For seven or eight miles we loped our jaded horses along at a brisk pace.
T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 281.

lope² (lōp), n. [< ME. lōpe; *< lōpe*¹, v. Cf. *leap*¹, n.] 1. A leap.

I cannot do the author justice . . . without taking a large lope over the next reign.
Roger North, Examen, p. 618.

2. A striding movement; a run made with long steps; especially, a leisurely canter with a rather long, easy stride, as of a horse.

The guards set Ashby through the hedge, and in a lope he turned up the tow-path.
The Century, XXX. 286.

lope². A Middle English preterit and past participle of *leap*¹.

lop-eared (lōp'ērd), a. [*< lop*¹ + eared.] Having ears which lop or hang downward; having pendulous ears. Also lap-eared.

loperman (lōp'man), n. A leaping man.

The high and mighty! God, what a style is this!
Methinks it goes like a Dutchy loper-man;
A ladder of a hundred rounds will fall
To reach the top on 't.

Fletcher (and another), Noble Gentleman, iii. 4.

loper (lōp'ēr), n. 1. One who or that which lopes.—2. In rope-making (in the now nearly obsolete process of laying up strands in a rope-walk by the use of a whirl), a swivel placed at one end of the rope-walk, the whirl being at the other end. The yarns are attached to the loper, and the twisting proceeds from it toward the whirl, the untwisted parts of the yarns being kept separate by the top, which, as the twisting progresses, is forced along toward the whirl.

lope-staff (lōp'stāf), n. A leaping-pole.

A lope-staffe wherewith men leape ditches. Cotgrave.
The doubtful fords and passages to try,
With stilts and lope-staves that do aptly wade.
Drayton, Barons' Wars, l.

Lopez gambit. See gambit.

Lopezia (lō-pē'zi-ā), n. [NL. (Cavanilles, 1791), named after J. Lopez, a Spanish botanist.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants, of the natural order Onagraceae, the evening-primrose family. It is characterized by irregular flowers, with four petals (each furnished with a claw), one stamen which is anther-bearing and one which is petaloid, and an indefinite number of ovules. They are erect branching herbs with small red or purple flowers on slender pedicels in racemes or subcorymbs at the ends of the branches. Fifteen species have been described, all from Mexico and Guatemala. Spach, Endlicher, and other authors make this genus the type of a tribe Lopeziae.

Lopezia (lō-pē-zī'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Spach), < Lopezia + -ea.] A tribe of plants of the order Onagraceae, typified by the genus Lopezia, and characterized by irregular flowers with one or two stamens and a loculicidal capsule. It embraces 4 genera of Mexican shrubs or herbs.

lopez-root (lō'pez-rōt), n. The yellowish woody root of a prickly climber, Toddalia aculeata, native in the East Indies. It was formerly a noted remedy for diarrhea, but is now disused except in India, where it is valued as a stimulating tonic.

Lophiidae (lō-fi'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophius + -idae.] A family of pediculate fishes, typified by the genus Lophius. (a) In old systems, a family of alleged acanthopterygians, including all the Pediculati together with the Batrachidae. (b) In more recent systems, a family conterminous with the order Pediculati, and embracing the Lophiidae proper, Antennariidae, Ceratiidae, and Malthidae. (c) In Gill's ichthyological system, a family of pediculate fishes with branchial apertures in or behind the inferior axilla of the pectoral fins, anterior dorsal ray superior, mouth opening more or less upward, lower jaw generally projecting beyond or closing in front of the upper, pseudobranchia with two actinosts, pectoral members little geniculated, and ventral fins separated by a wide interval. In this restricted sense the family includes only the fishes known as anglers or fishing frogs. Also Lophiadae, Lophiidae.

Lophiodon (lō-fi'ō-don), n. [NL. (Cuvier, 1822), < Gr. λόφιον or λοφειον, dim. of λόφος, a crest, + ὄδους (ὄδουτ-) = E. tooth.] 1. A typical genus of the family Lower Jaw-bone of Lophiodon.

Lophiodontidae, from the Middle or Upper Eocene, differing from most of the family in having only 40 teeth. The dental formula is: 3 incisors, 1 canine, 3 pre-molars, and 3 molars in each upper and lower half-jaw. The animal was a tapirid. See Lophiodontidae.

2. [l. c.] A member of this genus.
lophiodont (lō'fi'ō-dont), a. and n. [< Lophiodon (t-).] 1. a. Pertaining to the Lophiodontidae, or having their characters.

II. n. A tapirid of the family Lophiodontidae.

Lophiodontidae (lō'fi'ō-don'tī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophiodon (t-) + -idae.] A family of extinct perissodactyl ungulate quadrupeds of the tapirid series, having both the upper and the lower molars bilophodont, four toes on the fore feet, and three on the hind feet. It includes a number of Eocene genera representing the earliest and most generalized types of Perissodactyla, and ranging in size from that of a hare to that of an ox. The more primitive forms had 44 teeth, others 40. Coryphodontidae is a synonym.

lophiodontine (lō'fi'ō-don'tin), a. [< lophiodont + -ine.] Same as lophiodont. E. D. Cope, Amer. Nat., XXI. 994.

lophiodontoid (lō'fi'ō-don'toid), a. Resembling a lophiodont; having the characters of the Lophiodontidae.

Lophiodontidae (lō'fi'ō-don-toi'dē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lophiodon (t-) + -oidea.] A superfamily of tapirid mammals, having the upper as well as the lower true molars without a continuous outer wall, but some or all of these teeth with two complete transverse crests. The group comprises the living Tapiridae and the extinct Lophiodontidae.

lophoid (lō'fī-oid), a. and n. [< NL. Lophius + Gr. εἶδος, form.] 1. a. Pertaining to the Lophiidae, or having their characters.

II. n. One of the Lophiidae, as an angler. Agassiz; J. Richardson.

Lophiomys (lō'fi'ō-mī'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophiomys + -idae.] A family of simplicitent myomorphous rodents, constituted by the genus Lophiomys. The skull is unique in some respects, the temporal fossae being roofed over by bony plates proceeding from the temporal ridge and malar bone; the molars are rooted and tuberculate; there are no premolars; the clavicles are imperfect; the caecum is small; and the thumb is opposable.

Lophiomys (lō-fi'ō-mis), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφιον or λοφειον, dim. of λόφος, a crest, + μῦς = E. mouse.] The typical and only genus of the family Lophiomysidae. L. imhausi of Africa is the only species. A. Milne-Edwards, 1867.

Lophiostoma (lō-fi'ōs'tō-mā), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφιον or λοφειον, dim. of λόφος, a crest, + σῆμα, mouth.] A genus of sphaeriaceous fungi, typical of the family Lophiostomaceae, having the perithecia carbonaceous, and the ostecolum large and compressed. The spores, which are oblong or fusiform, are plurilocular, brown or olivaceous, and frequently appendiculate. The species grow mostly on dead wood, decorticated twigs, etc.

Lophiostomaceae (lō-fi'ōs-tō-mā'sō-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophiostoma + -aceae.] A family of sphaeriaceous fungi proposed by Saccardo, typified by the genus Lophiostoma.

lophiostomate (lō-fi'ōs'tō-māt), a. [< Gr. λόφιον or λοφειον, dim. of λόφος, a crest, + σῆμα, mouth.] In bot., having the apertures or openings crested. Cooke's Manual. [Rare.]

lophiostomous (lō-fi'ōs'tō-mus), a. Same as lophiostomate.

Lophius (lō'fī-us), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest.] The typical genus of Lophiidae, originally including all the pediculate fishes, now restricted to the angler, L. piscatorius, and closely related species. See cut under angler.

lophobranch (lō'fō-brang), a. and n. [< Gr. λόφος, a crest, + βράχια, gills.] 1. a. Having tufted gills; specifically, pertaining to the Lophobranchii, or having their characters.

II. n. A fish of the order Lophobranchii.

lophobranchiate (lō'fō-brang'ki-āt), a. and n. [< Gr. λόφος, a crest, + βράχια, gills, + -ate.] Same as lophobranch.

Lophobranchii (lō'fō-brang'ki-ī), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + βράχια, gills.] An order of teleost fishes having the branchial skeleton imperfect, the superior and basal branchials and pharyngeals wanting, and the gills not lamellar, but developed as loop-like or tuft-like lobes, whence the name. In Cuvier's system it was the fifth order of fishes, defined as having the jaws free and complete, and the gills divided into small tufts disposed in pairs along the branchial arches. The genus Pegasus, as well as the typical lophobranchia, was referred to this order by Cuvier. Pegasus, having normal lamellar gills and being the type of a distinct family Pegasiidae, has been removed from the Lophobranchii and referred to the Acanthopterygii, or to a special suborder Hypostomoides of Teleostei. The order consequently now includes only the families Syngnathidae and Hippocampidae, or pipe-fishes and sea-horses, constituting the suborder Syngnathi, and the Solenostomidae, alone representing the Solenostomi. (See cut at Hippocampidae.) All the Lophobranchii have a dermal skeleton composed of angular plates having a radiate or stellate ossification. Most of the species are marine. Also Lophobranchia, Lophobranchiata.

lophodont (lō'fō-dont), a. [< Gr. λόφος, a crest, + ὄδους (ὄδουτ-) = E. tooth.] In odontog., having the crowns of the molar teeth thrown into ridges or crests, longitudinal or transverse: opposed to bunodont.

Lophodytes (lō'fōd'i-tēz), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + δύτης, a diver.] A genus of Anatidae, of the subfamily Merginae, having an erect semi-circular compressed crest; the hooded mergansers. L. cucullatus is a common bird of the northern hemisphere.

Lopholatilus (lō'fō-lat'i-lus), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + NL. Latilus, q. v.] A genus of tilefishes of the family Latilidae, having a large nuchal adipose appendage, whence the name. See tilefish.

Lophomonadidae (lō'fō-mō-nad'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophomonas (-ad-) + -idae.] A family of flagellate infusorians. These animals are naked, solitary, and free-swimming, bearing a tuft of flagella at the anterior extremity, and having no distinct oral aperture.

Lophomonas (lō'fōm'ō-nas), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + μονάς, a unit: see monad.] The typical genus of Lophomonadidae, founded by Stein in 1860. L. blattarum inhabits the intestine of the cockroach.

lophophoral (lō'fō-fō-rāl), a. [< lophophore + -al.] Of or pertaining to the lophophore or disk of a polyzoon.

lophophore (lō'fō-fōr), n. [< Gr. λόφος, a crest, + φόρος, bearing, < φέρειν = E. bear.] In Polyzoa, the oral disk at the free end of the polypide, on which is situated the mouth: so called from the circle of ciliated tentacles which it bears. See Plumatella. This organ is circular in most polyzoons, as the cyclostomous, chlostromous, and stenostomous forms, or the Gymnolamata, but hippocrepiform in the Phylactolamata or Lophopoda.

The horseshoe-shaped lophophore, such as we see it in Phoronis and in Lophopus, is probably the ancestral form, and has given rise to the two other extreme forms of lophophore—namely, the "pterobranchiate," associated with a great development of the epistoma, and the "circular," associated with a complete suppression of the epistoma. Encyc. Brit., XIX, 439.

Lophophorinæ (lō-fōf-ō-rī-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophophorus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Phasianidæ, named from the genus Lophophorus, and containing also Cerionis and Puerasia. These magnificent birds are known as impeyans, monauls, tragopans, puercas, etc.

Lophophorus (lō-fōf-ō-rus), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + -φόρος, bearing, < φέρειν = E. bear¹.] 1. A magnificent genus of Phasianidæ, type of the subfamily Lophophorinæ; the impeyans. See Impeyan pheasant, and monaul. C. J. Temminck, 1815.—2. A genus of copepods. Brady, 1878.

Lophophyteæ (lō-fō-fī-tō-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Schott, 1832), < Lophophytum + -eæ.] A tribe of fleshy herbs of the natural order Balanophoreæ, based on the genus Lophophytum. It is distinguished from the other tribes of the order by the absence of a perianth in the staminate flowers, the two stamens with two-celled anthers, and the pistillate flowers with an adherent ovary. The tribe includes 3 genera and 7 species, all South American.

Lophophytum (lō-fōf-i-tum), n. [NL. (Schott, 1832), < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + φύτον, a plant.] A genus of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, of the natural order Balanophoreæ and type of the tribe Lophophyteæ. It is characterized by having no sheath at the base of the peduncle, and by its monœcious flowers, both staminate and pistillate being inserted on a mammillated spadix provided with scales. They are smooth fleshy herbs, rising from a thick rootstock. There are 4 species, confined to the southern part of tropical America.

Lophopoda (lō-fōp-ō-dā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + πόδι (pod-) = E. foot.] A name of the typical Bryozou, or fresh-water polyzoans, as opposed to the Stelmatopoda or Infundibulata, or sea-mats. These moss-animals have the lophophore horseshoe-shaped or bilpocerciform, whence they are also termed Hippocercaria, or, more frequently now, Phylactolemata. The name is derived from one of the genera, Lophopus, of the family Pleumatellidæ, which, with the Cristatellidæ, are included in the group. Also incorrectly written Lophopa, Lophopha.

Lophopsittacus (lō-fōp-sit-ā-kus), n. [NL. (A. Newton, 1875), < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + ψιττακός, a parrot.] A genus of psittacine birds, represented by the extinct crested parrot of Mauritius, L. mauritianus.

Lophornis (lō-fōr-nis), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1829), < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + ὄρνις, a bird.] A genus of crested humming-birds, such as L. ornatus. They are known as coquettes. Also called Beltatrix.

Lophortyx (lō-fōr-tiks), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + ὄρνις, the quail.] A genus of American partridges having an elegant plume of recurved feathers on the crown; the helmet-quails. There are two distinct species in the United States, the valley-quail of California, L. californica, and the Arizona quail, L. gambeli. Both are fine game-birds, much esteemed for their flesh. See cut under helmet-quail.

Lophosteon (lō-fōs-tē-on), n.; pl. lophosteæ (-ā). [< Gr. λόφος, a crest, + ὀστέον, bone.] The median and single one of the five separate bones or ossific elements of which the sternum of a carinate bird usually consists; the piece or part of the breast-bone which includes the crest or keel; correlated with coracosteon, pleurosteon, and metosteon. W. K. Parker.

The extent of ossification of the lophosteon and metosteæ, and the mode of their coossification. Coues, Key to N. A. Birds, p. 143.

Lophotes (lō-fō-tēz), n. [NL., < Gr. as if λοφότης*, cf. λοφωτός, crested, < λόφος, a crest.] 1. The typical genus of the family Lophotidæ, remarkable for the prominence of the forehead and the proccurrence of the dorsal fin, which forms a kind of frontal crest, whence the name. The only known species is L. cepedianus, a rarely found deep-sea fish of wide distribution, attaining a length of 5 feet.

Lophotes cepedianus.

2. A genus of raptorial birds of the family Falconidæ. Also called Baza. R. P. Lesson, 1831.

Lophotidæ (lō-fōt-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lophotes + -idæ.] A family of acanthopterygian fishes represented by the genus Lophotes, of the group of Acanthopterygii, having the body ribbon-shaped, with the vent near the end of it, a short anal fin behind the vent, and the dorsal fin as long as the body.

Lophotragus (lō-fōt-rā-gus), n. [NL., < Gr. λόφος, a crest, + τράγος, a goat.] Same as Elaphodus.

Lophyropoda (lōf-i-rop-ō-dā), n. pl. [NL., orig. Lophyropa, prop. Lophyropoda*, < Gr. λόφος, with a bushy tail (see Lophyrus), + πόδις (pod-) = E. foot.] In Latreille's system, the first section of his Branchiopoda; an indefinite group, containing certain larval forms (zoææ), the genera Nebalia and Cuma, and sundry copepod, ostracode, and eladocerous crustaceans. As subsequently modified, it became a more homogeneous group of entomostracous crustaceans, composed of the orders Copepoda and Ostracoda, which have leaf-like branchiæ attached to the feet, as implied in the name.

Lophyrus (lō-fī-rus), n. [NL., prop. Lophyrus*, < Gr. λόφος, with a tufted tail, < λόφος, a crest, tuft, + ὄψα, tail.] 1. A genus of mollusks of the family Chitonidæ, or chitons. Poli, 1791.—2. A genus of saw-flies of the hymenopterous family Tenthredinidæ and subfamily Lydinæ, having one marginal cell on the fore wings, the male antennæ pectinate, the female serrate, and the lanceolate cell with a cross-vein. It is a large and wide-spread group, of economic interest. L. pini injures conifers in Europe, and L. abbotti does similar damage in the United States. Fifteen European and about as many North American forms are described. Ichneumon-flies of the genera Tryphon, Panicus, and Campoplex are parasites of the larvæ. Latreille, 1802.

3. A genus of plant-bugs of the heteropterous family Capsidæ. Kolenati, 1845.—4. A genus of iguanoid lizards. Oppel, 1811.—5. A genus of terrestrial columbine birds of the subfamily Gourinæ: a synonym of Goura. L. P. Vieillot, 1816.

Lopidæ (lōp-i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Douglas and Scott, 1865), < Lopus + -idæ.] A family of plant-bugs formerly referred to the Capsidæ, represented by the genus Lopus. In these bugs the body is elongate, its sides being almost parallel; the antennæ are as long as the body, with the second joint twice as long as the first, and the third and fourth joints filiform; the rostrum reaches to the end of the metasternum; the scutellum is triangular and equilateral; and the elytra are longer than the abdomen.

lolloly, n. See loblolly.

lppard (lōp-ārd), n. [lōp + -ard. Cf. pollard.] A tree with the top lopped or cut off; a pollard.

loppe¹, v. Obsolete form of *lop*¹.

loppe², v. t. Obsolete form of *lop*².

loppe³, v. i. [A simple form, from the earlier *freq. lopper*², q. v.] To curdle or coagulate. Lexins, Manip. Vocab., 169, 16.

lopper¹ (lōp-ēr), n. [lōp + -er.] One who lops.

lopper² (lōp-ēr), a. [ME. loper, eurdled, coagulated; cf. D. lobberiq, gelatinous, Dan. dial. lubber, anything coagulated; prob. ult. < AS. hleippan, leap, run, etc. = Icel. hlappa, run, eurdle: see *leap*¹ and *lopper*², v., and cf. *lop*³, *lope*¹, *lop*³, lope, from the same ult. source; cf. also runnet, rennet, < run, eurdle: see run, etc.] Curdled; elotted; coagulated: as, lopper milk.

Dwelled in a dark dungeon,
And in a foul stede of corruption,
When he had no other fode
But wlatson glet and loper [var. lopyrde] blode.
Hampole, Prick of Conscience, l. 459.

lopper² (lōp-ēr), v. t. and i. [In another form lobber; see also lopper; < ME. loperen (in verbal n. lopering and p. a. lopered, etc.); cf. G. dial. libbern, G. licfern, gettefern, curdle; a freq. form (whence the later simple form loppe) connected with *lopper*², a., and ult. with *leap*¹, run: see *lopper*², a.] To eurdle or coagulate, as milk which has become sour; clot. [Prov. Eng. and U. S., where sometimes lobber.]

Of his mouth a petuns thing to se
The loppit blinde in ded thraw voydis be.
Gavin Douglas, Eneld, x. 328.

lopping (lōp-ing), n. [Verbal n. of *lop*², v.] 1. The cutting off of all the branches of a tree, except the crop or leading shoot, for the sake of the profit to be derived from them, as contrasted with pruning, by which some of the branches are cut off for the sake of the tree.—2. That which is cut off; severed branches: commonly in the plural.

lopping-ax (lōp-ing-aks), n. A small, light ax used for trimming trees.

lopping-shears (lōp-ing-shērz), n. pl. Heavy shears used for trimming shrubs, hedges, etc.

loppy¹ (lōp-i), a. [lōp + -y.] Hanging down: limp and pendulous. [Rare.]

A smeared and lippy shirt-collar.

Shirley Brooks, Aspen Court, xxvii.

loppy² (lōp-i), a. [ME. loppy; < *lop*³ + -y.] Full of fleas.

lopseed (lōp-sēd), n. A North American herb, Phryma leptostachya, with spikes of small purple flowers, which in fruit are bent back close against the axis, whence the name.

lopsided (lōp-sī-ded), a. [Also lopsided, lopsided; < *lop*¹ + side + -ed.] Inclining to one side; heavier or more developed on one side than on the other, physically or mentally.

I had rather the college should turn out one of Aristotle's four-square men, capable of holding his own in whatever field he may be cast, than a score of lopsided ones developed abnormally in one direction.

Lowell, Oration at Harvard Univ., Nov. 8, 1886.

lopstert, n. An obsolete form of lobster.

loptail (lōp-tāil), v. i. Same as lobtail.

Lopus (lō-pus), n. [NL. (Hahn, 1831), < Gr. λοπός, or λοπος, peel, shell, husk, bark, < λέπειν, peel, bark.] The typical genus of Lopidæ, having the sides of the prothorax foliaceous in front. They are mostly small bugs of variegated colors, found on the foliage of trees and shrubs. The 30 species are mainly European, but some are South American and others Australian.

lop-web (lōp-web), n. [ME., < *lop*³, *lob*¹, a spider, + web.] A spider's web.

In manner of a net or of a lop-webbe.
Chaucer, Astrolabe, i. 21.

As a lopwebbe fleth fome and gnattis,
Taken and suffren gret fles go.
Oceleve, MS. Soc. Antiq. 134, f. 267. (Hallivell.)

lop-wood (lōp-wūd), n. See the quotation. [Eng.]

The enrious customs of lop-wood or privileges of cutting fuel from pollards at certain seasons of the year.

The Academy, Feb. 4, 1883, p. 71.

loquacious (lō-kwā-shus), a. [= F. loquace = Sp. locuaz = Pg. loquaz = It. loquace, < L. loquax (loquac-), talkative, < L. loqui, speak, = Skt. √lap, speak. From L. loqui como also ult. E. eloquent, grandiloquent, magniloquent, etc., colloquy, obloquy, soliloquy, etc., loquution, alloquution, eloquution, circumloquution, etc.] Talkative; given to continual talking; chattering.

The swallow skins the river's watery face,
The frog renew the croaks of their loquacious race.

Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, l. Blind British bards, with volent touch, Traverse loquacious strings. J. Philips, Cider, ll.

= Syn. Garrulous, etc. See talkative.

loquaciously (lō-kwā-shus-li), adv. In a loquacious or talkative manner.

loquaciousness (lō-kwā-shus-nes), n. The quality of being loquacious; loquacity.

loquacity (lō-kwās-i-ti), n. [cf. F. loquacité = Sp. locuacidad = Pg. loquacidade = It. loquacità, < L. loquacita (-tas), talkativeness, < loquax (loquac-), talkative: see loquacious.] Talkativeness; the habit or practice of talking continually or excessively.

Too great loquacity and too great tacturality by fits.
Arbutnot.

= Syn. Loquaciousness, garrulity, volubility, chatter.

loquat (lō-kwat), n. [cf. Chin. (Cantonese dial.) lukwat, < luh, a rush, + kuh, an orange.] 1. An evergreen shrub or tree, Photinia (Eryobotrya) Japonica, native in China and Japan, and commonly introduced in warm temperate climates. It is an ornamental plant, with leaves nearly a foot long, and yields a fruit of a yellow color, resembling a small apple.

2. The fruit of this tree. Also called bica, luk-nati, pipa, and Japanese medlar.

loquela (lō-kwē-lā), n. [cf. L. loquela, speech, < loqui, speak: see loquacious.] In law, an im-parlance; a declaration.

loquence (lō-kwens), n. [cf. L. loquentia, a talking, discourse, < loqui, speak: see loquacious.] The act of speaking; speech.

Thy tongue is loose, thy body close; both ill;
With silence this, with loquence that doth kill.
Owen, Epigrams (1677). (Nares.)

lora¹, n. Plural of lorum.

lora² (lō-rā), n.; pl. loræ (-rē). [NL., a false form of L. lorum, q. v.] In entom., same as *loræ*⁴, 4. Kirby.

loral (lō-rāl), a. and n. [cf. loræ + -al.] I. a. In zool., of or pertaining to the lore: as, the loral space; a loral stripe.

II. n. In herpet., a loral plate. Also loreal.

loranth (lō-ranth), n. [cf. NL. Loranthus.] A plant of the order Loranthaceæ. Lindley.

Loranthaceæ (lō-ran-thā-sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1835), < Loranthus + -aceæ.] An order of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, the mistletoe family, of which the greater number are shrubs, or undershrubs, parasitic on trees.

They have an inferior ovary, and an ovule which becomes erect after the flower opens. The order comprises 13 genera and about 500 species, which are found throughout all warm and tropical regions.

loranthaceous (lō-ran-thā'shius), a. [< NL. Loranthaceæ + -ous.] Belonging to the Loranthaceæ, or having their characters.

Loranthus (lō-ran'thus), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < LGr. λάρων, λάρος, a thong (< L. lorum, thong), + Gr. άνθος, flower.] A genus of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, the type of the natural order Loranthaceæ and tribe Euloranthæ. It is distinguished from the only other genus of the tribe by having a fruit which is not winged and is usually a berry or a drupe. There are about 330 species, growing in all warm regions, with the exception of North America. The great majority are parasitic shrubs, generally with perfect flowers, which are small and beautifully colored, usually red or yellow. (See mistletoe.) Nine fossil species have been described, occurring in the Tertiary deposits of Europe, and also of Australia, New Zealand, and Borneo.

lorate (lō'rāt), a. [< L. loratus, bound with thongs, < lorum, a thong, whip, lash, strap; see loré.] In bot., shaped like a thong or strap; ligulate; linear; much elongated.

lorcha (lōr'chā), n. [Said to be of Pg. origin; if so, perhaps a corruption of Pg. lancha, a pinnace, or of lanchara, a small coasting-vessel used in the Malay archipelago. See lanchara.]

Lorcha.

A light Chinese sailing vessel, built somewhat after a European model, but rigged like a junk. lord (lōrd), n. [= Sc. laird; < ME. lord, loverd, loverd, laverd, laferd, < AS. hlāford, the master of a household, lord; prob. a contraction of hlāfweard*, lit. 'loaf-ward,' i. e. 'keeper (and dispenser) of bread,' < hlāf, bread, loaf, + weard, a keeper; see *loaf*¹ and ward, n. For the contraction of -weard to -ord, cf. -ald, -old, as in the name Harold and its G. cognate herold (see herald), contracted from -wald, -weald (-waldū, -wealdū). The name hlāford is peculiar to AS. (the Icel. lāvardhr being borrowed). This fact and the fanciful nature of its literal meaning indicate that it was prob. orig. a poetical designation, which, like hichama, body (see likam), and other orig. poetical words, came to be adopted in prose, with consequent contraction and loss of meaning. Hence prob. lady, q. v.]

1. A master or ruler; a man possessing supreme authority or power of control; a monarch, governor, chief, proprietor, or paramount disposer. They speke all Greke, excepte the Venycians, that be lordes and gouernours there.

Sir R. Gwyllforde, Pylgrymage, p. 14. Our Saviour, who had all gifts in him, was Lord to express his indoctrinating power in what sort him best seem'd. Milton, Apology for Smeetymanus.

Who hath not learned, in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That life is ever lord of death?
Whittier, Snow-Bound.

2. [cap.] In Script., and in general Christian use, the Supreme Being; Jehovah: with the definite article except in address; also applied to Christ, who is called the Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord, or our Lord. The word Lord also appears to be used of the Holy Ghost in 2 Cor. iii. 17 (referring to Ex. xxxiv.). In the English version of the Old Testament, LORD, when so printed, is a translation of, or rather substitute for, the Hebrew Jahveh, or Jehovah. In the English version of the New Testament it is a translation of the Greek κύριος (Latin Dominus), variously translated God, Lord, Master, Owner, Sir.

He seide, "Ye knowe wele that now cometh the feste that oure lorde was inne I-bore, and he is lorde of alle lordes."
Martin (E. E. T. S.), i. 96.

The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. Ps. cx. 1.

Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. 2 Cor. iii. 17.

3. A title of respect formerly given to persons of superior rank or consideration, especially in the phrase of address 'my lord,' as to kings and princes, monks or other ecclesiastics, a husband, etc.: still used humorously of a husband with reference to his wife.

"My lord the monk," quod he, "be myrie of chere."
Chaucer, Prolog. to Monk's Tale, l. 86.

Art thou that my lord Elijah? 1 Ki. xviii. 7.

I oft in bitterness of soul deplored
My absent daughter, and my dearer lord.
Penton, in Pope's Odyssey, lv. 362.

4. The proprietor of a manor; the grantor under whom feudal tenants held, for whom he was to some extent responsible, and over whom he had authority. The word, with its meaning modified, is retained in the modern term landlord.—5. A nobleman; a title of honor in Great Britain given to those who are noble by birth or creation: applied to peers of the realm, of Scotland, and of Ireland, including dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons. Archbishops and bishops also are addressed by this title. A nobleman is customarily addressed as My lord, and the holder of a noble title, whether by right or by courtesy, is frequently (as a baron ordinarily designated Lord: thus, the Marquis of Salisbury is spoken of as Lord Salisbury, his eldest son Viscount Cranborne (courtesy title) as Lord Cranborne, etc. The younger sons of dukes and marquises have the courtesy title Lord prefixed to their Christian names: as, Lord Randolph Churchill (son of the seventh Duke of Marlborough).

All marquises Eldest sonnes are named no Earles, but lord of a place or barony, without any Adision of his Christen name; and all his other brethren Lordes, with the Addition of there Christened name.

Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), i. 27. The title of lord belongs to all bishops in all churches, and not merely to those who possess a seat in the English house of lords, nor has it anything to do with a royal prerogative of conferring titles, not being a recognised grade of peerage. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 428, note.

6. An honorary title bestowed in Great Britain on certain official personages, generally as part of a designation. The mayors of London, York, and Dublin, and the provosts of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Perth, and Dundee have this title; also, all judges while presiding in court, and the members of the College of Justice in Scotland.

7. One who goes foremost through the harvest with the scythe or the sickle. [Prov. Eng. (Suffolk).]

My Lord begg'd round, and held his hat.
Says Farmer Gruff, says he,
There's many a lord, Sam, I know that,
Has begg'd as well as thee.

Bloomfield, The Horkey.

House of Lords, the upper of the two branches of the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, consisting of the lords spiritual and temporal assembled in one house. (See Parliament.) In 1888, 26 spiritual and 634 temporal peers were qualified to sit in the House of Lords. Of the temporal peers, 5 were princes of the blood royal, 28 were Irish representative peers elected for life; 16 were Scottish representative peers chosen for the existing Parliament; and the others were British peers. Abbreviated H. L.—House of the Lord. See house of God, under *house*¹.—Lay lord. See *lay*⁴.—Liege lord. See liege.—Lord advocate. See advocate.—Lord almoner. See almoner.—Lord and vassal, grantor and grantee in the feudal system.—Lord chamberlain, lord great chamberlain. See chamberlain, 1 (b).—Lord Chief Justice. See justice.—Lord high admiral. See admiral.—Lord high chancellor. See chancellor, 3.—Lord high commissioner. See commissioner.—Lord High Constable. See constable, 1.—Lord in gross, a lord irrespective of a manor, as the king in respect of his crown.—Lord Justice Clerk, Lord Justice General, lords justices. See justice.—Lord Keeper. See Keeper of the Great Seal, under keeper.—Lord lieutenant. (a) The title of the viceroy or royal governor of Ireland. He is a member of the British ministry, and retires from office with the cabinet to which he owes his appointment. (b) In Great Britain and Ireland, the principal official of a county, who has under him deputy lieutenants, and controls the appointment of justices of the peace and the issue of commissions in the local military organizations. The office was originally created for the defense of the counties in times of disturbance.—Lord of a manor, one who possesses a manor having copyhold tenants.—Lord of appeal in ordinary, one of those members of the British House of Lords appointed specially, with exceptionally limited privileges and powers, to form with other peers an ultimate court of appeal. See the quotation.

The judicial functions of the House of Lords have been virtually transferred to an appeal committee, consisting of the Lord Chancellor and other peers who have held high judicial office, and certain lords of appeal in ordinary created by the Act. . . . The lords of appeal in ordinary are an entirely new creation. They hold office on the same conditions as other judges; they take rank as barons for life; but they are entitled to a writ of summons to attend and vote in the House only so long as they hold office, and their dignity does not descend to their heirs. Encyc. Brit., XIII. 765.

Lord of hosts. See *host*¹.—Lord of lords, in Script., a title of Christ.

The Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings. Rev. xvii. 14.

Lord of misrule, a person formerly chosen to direct the Christmas sports and revels. His rule began on All-hallow eve and continued till Candlemas day. Also called king of misrule.—Lord of the ascendant. See ascendant, 1.—Lord of the May. See the quotation.

It was customary to personify this famous outlaw (Robin Hood), with several of his most noted associates, and add them to the pageantry of the May-games. He presided as Lord of the May; and a female, or rather, perhaps, a man habituated like a female, called the Maid Marian, his faithful mistress, was the Lady of the May. His companions were distinguished by the title of "Robin Hood's Men," and were also equipped in appropriate dresses; their coats, hoods, and hose were generally green. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 456.

Lord paramount. See paramount.—Lord President, the title of the presiding judge of the first division of the Inner house of the Scottish Court of Session; the Lord Justice General. See president.—Lord Privy Seal. See Keeper of the Privy Seal, under keeper.—Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. See treasurer.—Lord's Day, the first day of the week; Sunday.—Lord's domain, that part of a manor occupied by the lord, or held by tenants which can be shown to have been servile in their origin.—Lord's forebode. See forebode.—Lords marchers. See marcher.—Lords of Council and Session. See council.—Lords of Justiciary, the Judges of the Court of Justiciary or Supreme criminal court of Scotland. See justiciary.—Lords of regality. See regality.—Lords of Session, the Judges of the Scottish Court of Session.—Lords of the Articles, a committee of the Scottish Parliament, by whom the measures to be proposed in Parliament were prepared.—Lords of the bedchamber. See bedchamber.—Lords of the Congregation. See congregation.—Lords ordinary, the five Judges who form the outer house of the Scottish Court of Session.—Lord's Prayer, a prayer or model of prayer given by Jesus to his disciples. It exists in the New Testament in two forms (Mat. vi. 9-13; Luke xi. 2-4), and it appears in the Book of Common Prayer in a translation of the first of these slightly different from that in the King James Bible. It is used in some part of almost all liturgical services. In ancient eucharistic offices it regularly follows at the end of the canon; in the Anglican communion office, however, after the communion of the people. In liturgical use it is said sometimes with and sometimes without the final doxology of Mat. vi. 13 (omitted in the revised version). "For thine is the kingdom," etc.—Lords spiritual, the archbishops and bishops who have seats in the House of Lords.—Lord's Supper. (a) A sacrament or an ordinance instituted by Christ for observance by his followers, and consisting in the blessing or consecration of bread and wine with the words of institution (see institution) and the subsequent eating and drinking of the consecrated elements. See communion and eucharist. (b) The love-feast or agape, especially in the primitive Church, whether accompanying the sacrament or apart from it.—Lord's table. See table.—Lords temporal, those lay peers who have seats in the House of Lords.—Meane lord, one who, being himself a tenant, is lord of other tenants.—The Lords, the House of Lords, the upper house of the British Parliament.—The Lords' Act. See act.—The Lord's anointed. See anointed.—To be good lord, to receive into favor; take under protection.

And after this she may hym ones preye
To ben good lord in short, and take hire leve.
Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 1658.

To be good lord and good devil, to be equally civil or complimentary to all, whether good or bad.

lord (lōrd), v. [< lōrd, n.] I. trans. 1. To raise to the rank of a lord; hence, to treat, address, or acknowledge as lord or master.

He being thus lorded,
Not only with what my reveue yielded,
But what my power might else exact.
Shak., Tempest, i. 2. 97.

Not tho' all the gold
That veins the world were pack'd to make your crowe,
And every spoken tongue should lord you.
Tennyson, Princess, iv.

2. To rule or preside over as lord.

All the revels he had lorded there. Keats.

II. intrans. To play the lord; domineer; rule with arbitrary or despotic sway; sometimes followed by over, and sometimes by the indefinite it, with or without over.

They preached and lorded not; and now they lord and preach not.
Latimer, Sermon of the Plough.

How dull and how insensible a beast
Is man, who yet would lord it o'er the rest!
Dryden, Essay on Satire, l. 2.

lorddom (lōrd'dum), n. [< ME. lorddom*, laverddom, laferrddom, < AS. hlāforddom, < hlāford, lord, + dōm, jurisdiction; see lord and -dom.] The rule or dominion of a lord. Imp. Dict.

lordeynt, a. A variant of lurdan.

lording (lōrd'ding), n. [< ME. lording, loverding, laverding; < lord + *-ing*³. In the orig. use (def. 1) not dim., but complimentary.] 1. A lord; master; in address, in the plural, sirs; masters; gentlemen.

"Lordings," quod he, "in chirches when I preche,
I peyne me to han an hautein speche."
Chaucer, Prolog. to Pardoner's Tale, l. 43.

Listen, lordings, if ye list. Spenser, F. Q., III. ix. 3.

2. A young or little lord; a lordling; also, a little lord in a derogatory sense.

I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were boys:
You were pretty lordings then. Shak., W. T., i. 2. 62.

lordkin (lōrd'kin), n. [< lord + -kin.] A little or young lord; a lordling.

Princekin or lordkin from his earliest days has nurses, dependants, governesses, little friends, schoolfellows, . . . flattering him and doing him honour.
Thackeray, Newcomes, IIII.

lordless (lōrd'les), a. [< ME. lordles*, loverdles, < AS. hlāfordleás, having no lord, < hlāford, lord, + -leás, E. -less.] Without a lord or feudal protector; not dependent upon a lord or superior.

The lordless man was liable to be slain as an outlaw by any one who met him.

Sir E. Creasy, Eng. Constitution, p. 43.

lord-licutenancy (lôrd-lî-ten'ân-si), n. The office of lord lieutenant. See lord.

Carteret, turned out of the lord-licutenancy about the same time, was now in open opposition.

S. Dowell, Taxes in England, II. 103.

lordlike (lôrd'lik), a. [< lord + like², a. Cf. lordly.] 1. Befitting or like a lord; lordly.—2. Haughty; proud; insolent.

lordliness (lôrd'li-nes), n. 1. The state of lordly dignity; high station.—2. Lordly pride; haughtiness.

lordling (lôrd'ling), n. [*< ME. lordling, loverd-ling; < lord + -ling¹.] A little or diminutive lord; used commonly in a derogatory or contemptuous sense.

lordly (lôrd'li), a. [< ME. lordlich, loverdlich; < lord + -ly¹.] 1. Of the character or quality of a lord; having high or noble rank; noble; aristocratic.

In sight of England and her lordly peers.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 1. 11.

2. Pertaining to or befitting a lord; characteristic of lordship; large or grand in scale, size, or extent.

She brought forth butter in a lordly dish. Judges v. 25.

Lordly sins require lordly estates to support them.
South, Sermons.

3. Proud; haughty; imporous; insolent.

Lords are lordliest in their wine. Milton, S. A., l. 1418.

= Syn. 3. Domineering, overbearing, lofty.

lordly (lôrd'li), adv. [< lord + -ly².] In the manner of a lord; hence, proudly; imperiously; despotically.

A famished lion, issuing from the wood,
Roars lordly fierce. Dryden.

lordolatry (lôr-dol'ô-trie), n. [< lord + Gr. λατρεία, worship; after idolatry, etc.] Lord-worship; excessive respect for the nobility. [Humorous.]

But how should it be otherwise in a country where Lordolatry is part of our creed, and where our children are brought up to respect the Peage as the Englishman's second Bible? Thackeray, Book of Snobs, iii.

lordosis (lôr-dô'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. λόρδωσις, a bending (back) in the manner described), < λորδωσις, bend back, < λորδός, bent back so as to advance the lower part of the body.] In pathol.: (a) Abnormal curvature of the spinal column, with the convexity toward the front, in distinction from kyphosis, in which the convexity is toward the back, and from scoliois, or lateral curvature. (b) Any abnormal curvature of the bones.

lords-and-ladies (lôrdz'and-lâ'diz), n. 1. The plant cuckoo-pint or wake-robin, Arum maculatum: in allusion to its light- and dark-colored spadices, which suggest the two sexes. See Arum, Araceae, and bulls-and-cows.—2. The harlequin duck, Histrionicus minutus, on some parts of the North Atlantic coast of North America. See cut under harlequin, a.

lordship (lôrd'ship), n. [*< ME. lordschipe, loverschipe, laverschipe, < AS. hlāfordscipe, lordship, dominion, < hlāford, lord, + -scipe, E. -ship; see lord and -ship.] 1. The authority or power of a lord or ruler; dominion; sovereignty.

They which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them. Mark x. 42.

2. The territory over which a lord holds jurisdiction; a seignior, domain, or manor.

And the King of Hungary is a great Lord and a mighty, and holdeth the grete Lordschippes and meche Lond in his Hand. Mandeville, Travels, p. 6.

What lands and lordships for their owner know
My quondam barber. Dryden, Ir. of Juvenal's Satires, x. 356.

3. The state or dignity of a lord or nobleman: chiefly [cap.], with his or your, as a title used in addressing or mentioning a nobleman, except a duke or an archbishop, who has the title of Grace (his or your).—4. In commerce, a royalty.

The plan proposed of a fixed lordship or percentage on sales seems the only proposal which meets all the difficulties of the case. Nineteenth Century, XXII. 612.

lordship, v. t. [ME. lordschipen; < lordship, n.] lord's-room (lôrdz'rôm), n. The stage-box in a theater.

He pours them out as familiarly as if he had . . . ta'en tobacco with them over the stage in the lordroom.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, II. 1.

lordswike, n. [ME., earlier loverdswike, laverdswike, < AS. hlāfordswica, a betrayer of his lord, a traitor, < hlāford, lord, + swica, betrayer, < swican, betray.] One who is disloyal; a traitor.

For that he was lordswyk, furst he was todrawe.
Execution of Sir Simon Fraser (Child's Ballads, VI. 280).

lordwood (lôrd'wûd), n. [Trans. of Cypriote name, Xylon Effendi: Gr. ἔβλω, wood; Turk. efendi: see effendi.] The tree Liquidambar orientalis, of Asia Minor. It yields the liquid storax.

lore¹ (lôr), n. [Also dial. or var. lear, lair (see lear¹, n.); < ME. lore, larc, < AS. lār (= OS. lāra = OFries. lare, NFries. leere = D. leer = MLG. lère, larc = OHG. lāra, MHG. lère, G. lehre; Sw. lära = Dan. lære, after G.), teaching, doctrine, learning; connected with the factitive verb lāran, teach, from the verb seen in Goth. leisan, pret. pres. lais, find out; whence also ult. E. learn: see lear¹, v., and learn.] 1. That which is taught; instruction; counsel: admonition; teaching; lesson.

Thy wille vn-to them taughte haue I,
That wolde vn-to my lare enclyne.
York Plays, p. 457.

Let this proverb a lore unto you be.
Chaucer, Troilus, II. 397.

But these conditions do to him proponed:
That, if I vanquish him, he shall obey
My law, and ever to my lore be bound.
Spenser, F. Q., V. iv. 49.

2. That which is learned; any store of knowledge; learning; erudition.

Lo! Rome herself, proud mistress now no more
Of arts, but thund'ring against heathen lore.
Pope, Dunclad, III. 102.

The gentle deities
Showed me the lore of colors and of sounds.
Emerson, Musketaquid.

= Syn. 2. Learning, Erudition, etc. (see literature), attainments, acquisitions.

lore², Preterit and past participle of *leese*¹.

lore³, n. [ME., usually lure, lyre, < AS. lyre, loss, < leōsan, pp. loren, lose: see leese¹, lose¹.] Loss.

Of loos, of lore, and of wyninges.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1965.

lore⁴ (lôr), n. [< F. lore, < L. lorum, a thong, lash, whip, strap: see lorate.] 1. Anything suggesting a thong.

About the which two Serpents weren wound, Entrayled mutually in lovely lore,
And by the tailles together firmly bound.
Spenser, F. Q., IV. III. 42.

2. In ornith., the side of the head between the eye and the base of the upper mandible. This space is definitely marked in some birds, as herons and grebes, by being naked; and in others by some special kind of feathering, as the bristly plummies of a hawk.

3. In herpet., a region on the side of the head between the eye and the nostril, where certain plates called lorals may be present.—4. In entom., a cornucous angular process in the mouth of some insects, by means of which the trophi are put forth or retracted. Also lora. Kirby.

loreal (lô're-âl), n. Same as loral.

The small shield on the side of the snout, the so-called loreal.
Günther, Encyc. Brit., XXII. 196.

lore-father, n. [ME. lorefadyr, larfader; < lore¹ + father.] A teacher. Halliwel.

lore[†] (lôr'el), n. [Also lorrel; < ME. lorel, also lozel, an abandoned fellow: see lozel.] Same as lozel.

loremert, n. See lorimer.

lorent, a. An obsolete variant of lorn.

loret, n. See laurer.

loresman (lôrz'mân), n. [ME.; < lore's, poss. of lore¹, + man.] An instructor.

As his lores-man leres hym hileueth and troweth.
Piers Plowman (B), xii. 183.

lorette (lô-ret'), n. [F. (see def.): said to be so called from their living at one time chiefly in the neighborhood of the church of Notre Dame de Lorette, 'Our Lady of Loreto,' in Paris. The church was so called as being dedicated to the Virgin Mary, who has this title from the site of a building at Loreto in Italy, called the Santa Casa ('holy house'), and alleged to be the Virgin's dwelling at Nazareth miraculously transported to Italy.] In French usage, a member of the demi-monde. A lorette differs from a grisette only in living in a more showy style, and doing no work, being entirely supported by her admirers.

Loretting (lô-re-tên'), n. [< Loreto in Italy, with ref. to the Virgin Mary and her sanctuary at that place.] One of an order of nuns founded in Kentucky in 1812. They are occupied with the education and care of destitute orphans. They labor chiefly in the Western States. Also called Sisters of Loreto, and Friends of Mary at the Foot of the Cross.

lornette (lôr-nyet'), n. [F., < lorgnier, spy, peep, perhaps < G. dial. loren, look at.] 1. An opera-glass.—2. A lorgnon.

lorgnon (lôr'nyon; F. pron. lôr-nyôn'), n. [F., < lorgnier, spy: see lornette.] An eye-glass, or a pair of eye-glasses, shutting into a frame which when in use serves as a handle, intended for examining objects at a little distance: also sometimes used as synonymous with opera-glass or lorgnette.

She raises to her eyes of blue
Her lorgnon, as she looks at you.
The Atlantic, LXIII. 649.

lori (lô'ri), n. Same as loris, l.

loria, n. Plural of lorion.

loric (lôr'ik), n. [< L. lorica, a corselet: see lorica.] Same as lorica, l. [Rare.]

Loric and low-browed Gorgon on the breast.
Browning, Protus.

lorica (lô-ri'kâ), n.; pl. loricæ (-sê). [L., a corselet (orig. of leather thongs), cuirass, any defense, fence, hedge, plaster, etc., < lorum, a thong, strap: see loré⁴.] 1. In Rom. antiq., a cuirass or corselet.—2. In the middle ages, a military garment consisting of a loose jacket of leather upon which rings or small plates of iron were sewed; also, a coat of fence of any kind.—3. In zool., a case or covering likened to a coat of mail. (a) The carapace of a crustacean. (b) The organically distinct protective sheath or domicile excreted and inhabited by many infusorians, such as Fragiicola, Tintinnus, and Salpingeica, and also by some rotifers.

Loricaria (lor-i-kâ'ri-î), n. [NL., fem. of L. loricarius, of or pertaining to a corselet, < lorica, a corselet: see lorica.] The typical genus of Loricaria uracantha.

Loricariidae, loricated with plate-like scales, whence the name.

loricarian (lor-i-kâ'ri-ân), a. and n. [< Loricaria + -an.] Same as loricarioid.

Loricariidae (lor'î-kâ-ri-î-dê), n. pl. [NL., < Loricaria + -idae.] A family of loricated nematognathous fishes, of which the type is the genus Loricaria. They have an elongate body covered with angular plates, a depressed head mailed above, an inferior mouth with reverted lower lip, the dorsal fin in relation with the abdominal region, and the ventral fins advanced to near the pectorals. The scapular arch is widened and flattened below, and the pectorals and ventrals expand horizontally. Nearly 150 species live in the fresh waters of tropical America. Goniodontes, Goniodontidae, and Hypostomidae are synonyms.

loricarioid (lor-i-kâ'ri-oid), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to the Loricariidae, or having their characters.

II. n. A fish of the family Loricariidae; a loricated South American catfish.

Also loricarian.

Loricata (lor-i-kâ'tâ), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of L. loricatus, pp. of loricare, clothe in mail, < lorica, a corselet, coat of mail: see lorica.] In zool., a name having various applications. (a) In mammal., the armadillos; the American mailed or loricated edentates, as one of five suborders of Bruta or Edentata. They fall into three families, Tatusiidae, Dasyptidae, and Chlamyphoridae. (See these words.) Originally named by Vieq.-d'Azur (1792), in the form Loricati.

(b) In Merrem's system of classification, an order of reptiles, the loricated saurians, containing the crocodiles, alligators, and gavials, and corresponding to the modern order Crocodylia. (c) An order of choanoflagellate infusorians, containing those which are loricate. E. R. Lankester. (d) In icht.: (1) A suborder of ganoid fishes. See Chondrostei. (2) The Cottoidea; gurnards or mail-cheeked acanthopterygian fishes. Also Loricati. Jenyns. (e) In conch., the coat-of-mail shells; the polyplacophorous mollusks or chitons: so named from the overlapping plates of the shell, which resemble a corselet. (f) In carcinol., a division of macrurus decapod crustaceans, composed of the families Scyllaridae and Palinuridae, having some of the feet not ending in pincers and no scale at the base of the antennae, and passing through a peculiar larval stage in which they are known as glass-crabs. See Phyllosomata. (g) Those animalcules which are provided with a lorica, as sundry infusorians and rotifers.

loricate (lôr'î-kât), v. t.; pret. and pp. loricated, ppr. loricating. [< L. loricator, pp. of loricare, clothe in mail, < lorica, a corselet, coat of mail: see lorica.] To cover with any material that serves as a protection or defense. See lorica.
Therefore hath Nature loricated or plaistred over the Sides of the forementioned Hole [the inner ear] with Ear-wax, to atop and entangle any Insects that should attempt to creep in.
Ray, Works of Creation, II. 264.

In the Mammalia the development of a dermal exoskeleton is exceptional, and occurs only in the loricated Edentata.
Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 42.

loricate (lôr'î-kât), a. and n. [< L. loricator, pp.: see the verb.] I. a. 1. Covered with defensive armor or with any defensive covering.—2. Consisting of overlapping plates; having a pattern as of overlapping plates; imbricated:

loricate

an epithet arising from the mistaken idea that the lorica was essentially an imbricated coat.—3. Having a lorica; loricated; inclosed in a shell, case, or some hard covering resembling a corselet or coat of mail.—Loricata femora, in entom., femora so sculptured exteriorly that they appear to be covered with a double series of oblique scales, as the posterior femora of a grasshopper.

II. n. A loricated animal; a member of the Loricata in any sense.

lorication (lor-i-kā'shon), n. [L. lorication(-n-), a clothing in mail, < loricare, pp. loricatus, clothe in mail: see loricate, v.] 1. The act of loricate, or the state of being loricated.—2. A loricate covering.

These cones [of the cedar] have . . . the entire lorication smoother conched than those of the Fir kind.
Evelyn, Sylva, II. i.

loricoid (lor-i-koid), a. [L. lorica, a corselet (see lorica), + Gr. eidōs, form.] Resembling a lorica; also, loricate: sometimes applied to fossil footprints left by supposed shielded animals.

Loriculus (lō-rik'ū-lus), n. [NL., dim. of Lorius, a lory: see Lorius.] A genus of small lorics of the subfamily Loriniæ (or Trichoglossinæ); the hanging parakeets, or bat-parrots. They are notable for their habit of hanging by the feet head downward when asleep, and sometimes while feeding, and also for lack of the brushy tongue which the lorikeets possess.

lories, n. Plural of lory.

Lorinæ (lō-ri-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lorius + -inæ.] A subfamily of Psittacidae, including the genera Lorius and its subdivisions (as Eos), Loriculus, and Coriphilus; the lorics. The definition of the group is not fixed; it is often merged in Trichoglossinæ. The birds usually placed in it are for the most part of small size and very beautiful colors, chiefly inhabiting the Eastern Archipelago and Oceania. Also written Loriana, Lorina.

lorikeet (lor-i-kēt'), n. [< lory + (parra)keet.] A small parrot of the genus Trichoglossus, or, in a broader use, of the subfamily Trichoglossinæ; a kind of lory. Most of them have a brushy or penciled tongue, by means of which they feed upon the sweets of flowers and on soft fruits. See Trichoglossus.

lorimeter, loriner† (lor'i-mēr, -nēr), n. [Also lorimer; < OF. lorimier, lormier, a saddler, < lorain, lorain, a bridle, < L. lorum, a thong: see lore.] For the term -im-er instead of -in-er, cf. latimer for lutiner.] A maker of bits, spurs, and metal mountings for bridles and saddles; hence, a saddler.

Brummagem is a town maintained chiefly by smiths, nailers, cutlers, edge-tool forgers, lorimers or bit-makers.
Holtzschel, Descrip. of Britaine, xxv.

Lorinæ (lō-ri-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lorius + -inæ.] Same as Loriniæ. G. R. Gray, 1840.

loring† (lōr'ing), n. [Verbal n. of *lore*¹, v., = *lear*¹.] Instructive discourse; instruction. [Rare.]

They, as a Goddess he adoring,
Her wisdom did admire, and hearkned to her loring.
Spenser, F. Q., V. vii. 42.

lorion (lō'ri-on), n.; pl. loria (-iā). [< MGr. λωρίον, dim. of LGr. λωρον, λωρος, < L. lorum, thong, strap: see *lore*⁴.] One of the stripes or bands on the stocharion or alb of a bishop of the Greek Church.

Bishops . . . put on the stocharion, which . . . differs from that of a Priest by being waved in white and red bands, called loria. These signify rivers of grace, and set forth the doctrine which should flow from a Pontiff.
J. M. Neale, Eastern Church, I. 310.

loriot (lor'i-ot), n. [< F. loriot (OF. also lorion), i. e. Voriot, < le, the, + OF. oriot, var. of oriol, a witwall, an oriole: see oriole.] The golden oriole of Europe, Oriolus galbula.

The swallow and the loriot
Are not so swift of wing.

R. H. Stoddard, Chinese Songa.

loris (lō'ris), n. [NL. loris (F. loris, sing. and pl.); commonly said to be a native (E. Ind.) name, but according to Baird < D. loeris, a clown, booby, formerly adj., loerisch, loersch, clownish, < loer, loerd, a clown, fool, < OF. lourd, a stupid fellow: see *lourd*¹.] 1. The slender lemur of Ceylon, Arachnocebus or Loris gracilis, a prosimian mammal of the family Lemuridae and subfamily Nycticebinæ: more fully called slender loris. Also lori; pl. loris.—2. [cap.] The typical genus of Loriniæ, based by Geoffroy on the slender lori or loris of Ceylon, and the same as Arachnocebus of Lesson; extended to include the slow lemur, which is more frequently referred to a genus Nycticebus, Stenops, or Bradylemur. The species are arboreal and nocturnal inhabitants of the East Indies. L. gracilis is remarkable for its slender form, disproportionately long limbs, the absence of a tail, short muzzle, and large eyes.

Slender Loris (Loris gracilis).

Loriniæ (lor-i-si'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Loris + -inæ.] A subfamily of Lemuridae, named from the genus Loris, in a restricted sense including only this genus and Nycticebinæ, in a wider sense including these genera with Arctocebus and Perodicticus: in the latter use it is the same as Nycticebinæ. The animals referred to this group are the slender loris, Loris gracilis; the slow lemur, Nycticebus tardigradus; the potto, Perodicticus potto; and the angwantibo, Arctocebus calabarensis. Also Loridina.

Lorius (lō'ri-us), n. [NL., < E. lory, q. v.] A large genus of small trichoglossine parrots, type of the subfamily Loriniæ; the lorics. The term has been used with much latitude, but is now restricted to the broad-tailed lorics, of which more than 20 species are known, all of the Australasian region, as L. domicella of the Molucca. The characteristic coloration is red varied with blue; but some species are green, others brown or black. Several subdivisions of Lorius are recognized, especially Eos. The name Domicella is now much used instead of Lorius. See cut under Domicella.

lorn (lōrn), a. [< ME. lorn, lorn, lore, < AS. loren, pp. of leosan, lose: see *leese*¹, *lose*¹.] 1. Lost; undone.

Wit-outin loue thou art lorn.

Wose [whoso] hat noue loue were bettere on-born.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 235.

If thou readest, thou art lorn!

Better hadst thou ne'er been born.

Scott, L. of L. M., I. 23.

2. Forlorn; bereft; lonely: as, a lorn widow.

But, as tenderly before him the lorn Ximena knelt.

Whittier, The Angels of Buena Vista.

"Yes, yes, . . ." cried Mrs. Gummidge, . . . "I know that I'm a lone lorn creature."

Dickens, David Copperfield, iii.

Lorrainer (lō-rā'nēr), n. [< Lorraine (see def.) + *-er*¹.] A native or an inhabitant of Lorraine.

Lorraine (lō-rā-nēs' or -nēs'), a. [< Lorraine + -ese.] Pertaining to the ancient duchy or to the later province of Lorraine, or to the inhabitants of Lorraine. Since 1871 it has been divided between France and Germany.

Lorraine shales. See shale.

lorrel†, n. Same as losel.

lorry (lōr'i), n.; pl. lorries (-iz). [Also lorrie, larry; cf. E. dial. lurry, pull or drag.] 1. In mining, a running bridge over a sinking-pit top, upon which the bowk is placed after it is brought up for emptying. Gresley, [Yorkshire.]

—2. A long wagon, consisting of a nearly flat platform (with a very low rim) set on four wheels, which are either entirely under the platform or do not rise above it. [Great Britain.]

lorum (lō'rūm), n.; pl. lora (-rā). [NL., < L. lorum: see *lore*⁴.] In zool., the lore, as of a bird or reptile.

lory (lō'ri), n.; pl. lories (-riz). [Also lury, luri; < Malay luri, also nuri, a lory.] One of a large number of parrots constituting the subfamily Loriniæ, or forming a separate family Trichoglossidae: any brush-tongued parakeet, or lorikeet. They are mostly of small size and brilliant coloration, inhabiting parts of Asia, the Malay archipelago, and Oceania. Lorius domicella is a characteristic example. All the lorics properly so called are trichoglossine or brush-tongued, excepting those of the genus Loriculus (or Coryliis), but the name extends to some similar parakeets of a different group, as those of the genus Electicus. See Lorius, Loriculus, Loriniæ, and Trichoglossinæ. See also cut under Domicella.

Gentle lorics, more beautiful in color than any, who eat on the Banksias like a crop of crimson and purple flowers.
H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtona.

lost, n. See *lose*³.

losable (lō'za-bl), a. [Also loseable; *< lose*¹ + -able.] Capable of being lost; liable to be lost.

I heard him make enquiry whether the frigorifick faculty of these corpuscles be losable or not.
Boyle, Works, III. 763.

Pencils and rubbers are about equally loseable.

The Nation, III. 139.

losanget, n. An obsolete form of lozenge.

losard†, n. [A var. of losel, with substituted suffix -ard.] A coward.

lose¹ (lōz), v.; pret. and pp. lost, ppr. losing. [Formerly also loose (more or less confused with loose, untie, relax); partly < ME. losien, < AS. losian, become loose, escape, also lose, < los, a loss (see loss); but chiefly a var. of lesen (> E. leese) (pret. les, pl. lore, pp. loren, lorn), lose: see *leese*¹, < AS. leosan (pret. leás, pl. luron, pp. loren), in comp. forleosan. For the change of AS. eó to E. o (oo), pronounced ö, cf. choose, < AS. céosan.] 1. trans. 1. To miss from present possession or knowledge; part with or be parted from by misadventure; fail to keep, as something that one owns, or is in charge of or concerned for, or would keep.

Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.
Luke xv. 9.

Thus they spent the next after-noon, and halfe that night, when the Spaniards either lost them or left them.
Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 53.

But, said Christian, are there no turnings nor windings, by which a stranger may lose his way?
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 101.

2. To be dispossessed, deprived, or bereaved of; be prevented or debarred from keeping, holding, or retaining; be parted from without wish or consent: as, to lose money by speculation; to lose blood by a wound; to lose one's hair by sickness; to lose a friend by death.

Itna sonca for hus synnea sorwe they hadden;
And alle lewede that leyde hond thereon loren lyf after.
Piers Plowman (C), xv. 63.

Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime.

Shak., T. G. of V., I. 1. 49.

Her [the Roman Catholic Church's] acquisitions in the New World have more than compensated for what she has lost in the Old.
Macaulay, Von Ranke's Hist. Popea.

3. To cease to have; part with through change of condition or relations; be rid of or disengaged from.

The offence is holy that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft.

Shak., M. W. of W., v. 5. 239.

Nor is it a thing extraordinary for rivers to lose their channels, either choaked by themselves, or by the adverse Seas.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 73.

The mountains, lessening as they rise,
Lose the low vales, and steal into the skies.
Pope, Autumn, I. 60.

4. To fail to preserve or maintain: as, to lose one's reputation or reason; to lose credit.

Chuffey boggled over his plate so long that Mr. Jonas, losing patience, took it from him.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xi.

I lose my colour, I lose my breath,
I drink the cup of a costly death.

Tennyson, Eleanore.

5. To fail to gain or win; fail to grasp or secure; miss; let slip: as, to lose an opportunity; to lose a prize, a game, or a battle.

He shall in no wise lose his reward.
Mat. x. 42.

What have you lost by losing of this day?

Shak., K. John, iii. 4. 116.

Such delay might have lost the opportunity of relieving him.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 135.

The motion that the sum to be granted should not exceed four hundred thousand pounds was lost by twelve votes.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

See if you can't find out if the villain means to break jail. I would not lose having him hung for a thousand pounds.
S. Judd, Margaret, II. 8.

6. To let slip or escape from observation, perception, etc.: as, I lost what he was saying, from inattention; we lost the ship in the fog.

7. To fail to profit by; miss the use, advantage, or enjoyment of; waste.

I am of the Opinion, That if any of our Nations would seek a Trade with them, they would not lose their labour.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 308.

He has merit, good nature, and integrity, that are too often lost upon great men.
Pope, Letters.

All these signs, however, were lost upon him.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

8. To cause to miss or be deprived of; subject to the loss of: as, his slowness lost him the chance.

I pray that this action lose not Philaster the hearts of the people.
Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iv. 4.

Sir, if that to serve you Could lose me any thing, as indeed it cannot,
I still would follow you.

Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iv. 4.

9. To displace, dislodge, or expel. [Rare.]

A still soliciting eye, and such a tongue
As I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking.
Shak., Lear, I. 1. 236.

10. To give over to ruin, disgrace, or shame: chiefly in the past participle.

In spite of all the virtue wo can boast,
The woman that delibberates is lost.

Addison, Cato, iv. 1.

There's no love lost between. See love.—To lose caste, ground, etc. See the nouns.—To lose letters. See letter.—To lose one's bearings, one's grip, one's head, etc. See bearing, grip, etc.—To lose one's self. (a) To lose one's road or way.

Hall and the two others, who went to Connecticut November 3, came now home, having lost themselves and endured much misery. Winthrop, Hist. New England, l. 146.

(b) To be bewildered; have the thoughts or reason hopelessly perplexed or confused. (c) To become abstracted or fall into a reverie; become absorbed in thought; lose consciousness, as in slumber.

I love to lose myself in a mystery.

Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, l. 9.

As I pace the darkened chamber and lose myself in melancholy musings.

Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 146.

To lose the bell. See bell.—To lose the number of one's mess (naut.), to die.—To lose way, to have the headway or progress checked: said of a ship under sail.

II. intrans. 1. To suffer loss or deprivation.

When a man loseth in his commodity for want of skill, etc., he must look at it as his own fault or cross, and therefore must not lay it upon another.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, l. 381.

He [Temple] never put himself prominently before the public eye, except at conjuncture when he was almost certain to gain and could not possibly lose.

Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

"When the righteous die," says the Talmud, "It is the earth which loses." J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 216.

2. To incur forfeit in a contest; fail to win.

We'll talk with them too,

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out.

Shak., Lear, v. 3. 15.

3. To succumb; fail; suffer by comparison.

Wisdom in discourse with her

Loses, discountenanced, and like folly shows.

Milton, P. L., viii. 553.

lose¹ (lōz), n. [*< lose*¹, v. Cf. loss.] The act of losing; loss.

And thanne we had a greff lose, for he was a good honest person, on whose soule Jhu have mercy.

Torkington, Diary of Eng. Travell, p. 60.

Without zeal the widow's mitea are no better than the rest; it is the cheerful lose that dothleth the gift.

S. Ward, Sermons, p. 78. (Davies.)

lose², a. A Middle English form of loose.

lose³, n. [ME., also los, loos, < AF. los, OF. los = Pr. laus, < L. laus (pl. laudes), praise: see laud.] 1. Praise; fame; reputation; credit.

Jason, ful of renomee,

And Erculea, that hadde the grete los.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1514.

These yonge lusty bachelers that to conquire loos and pris and honour haue lefte their londes and her contreyes.

Merlín (E. E. T. S.), iii. 384.

2. Report; news; gossip.

There was suche tidyng over al, and suche los,

That in an Ile that called was Colcoea, . . .

That therein was a ram that men myghte see

That had a flees of golde.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1424.

Sche fallith not vnder for vilonye,

For los, for siknes, ne for schame.

Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 116.

lose³, v. t. [ME. losen, *< lose*³, v.] To praise.

In heuen to ben losed with God hath none ende.

Testament of Love, l.

loseable, a. See losable.

lozel (lō'zel), n. and a. [Also lozel, and formerly lorel, lorrel; < ME. losel, also lorel, *< losen, loren, pp. of lesen, lose: see *leese*¹ and *lose*¹.] 1. n. A good-for-nothing, worthless fellow; a scamp.

I se that every lorel shapith hym to fynde owt newe fraudes for to accuse goode folk.

Chaucer, Boethius, l. prose 4.

Bydea God me? fals lozelle, thou lyse!

What tokyn told he? take thou tent.

York Plays, p. 81.

And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,

That will not stay her tongue.

Shak., W. T., ii. 3. 109.

II. a. Worthless; wasteful.

Why should you plain that lozel awains refuse you?

P. Fletcher, Piscatory Eclogues, ll.

Where didst thou learne to be so agueish, so pusillanimous, thou lozel Bachelour of Art?

Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

The office of constable fell into such decay that there was not one of those lozel scouts known in the province for many years.

Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 153.

lozelism (lō'zel-izm), n. [*< lose*³ + -ism.] The quality or state of a lozel; also, lozels collectively. [Rare.]

It seems likely that all the Lozeliem of London will be about the church next Sunday.

Carlyle, in Froude.

loselryt, n. [< losel + -ry.] Knavery; villainess; roguery.

I doubt least by sorsery

Or such other loselry.

Skelton, Why Come ye not to Court?

losenget, n. An obsolete form of lozenge.

lozenget (loz'en-jēr), n. [ME., also lozengeour, lozenjour, < OF. losengeor, lozengeour, losangeour, also lozenzier, losangier, lozenzer (= Sp. lisonjero = Pg. lisonjeiro = It. lusinghiero, after F.), a flatterer, < losenge, losange, lozenge, flattery: see lozenge.] A flatterer; a deceiver.

Allas! ye lordes, many a fals flatour

Is in youre courtes, and many a losengeour.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 506.

lozengeriet, n. [ME., < OF. losengeric, flattery, < losenge, flattery: see lozenge.] Flattery.

Flatterers ben the devels norices that norissen hire children with milk of losengerie. Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

loser (lō'zēr), n. [Formerly also looser; *< lose*¹ + *-er*¹.] One who loses, or is subjected to loss; one who fails to win, gain, or keep.

Such losers may have leave to speak.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 185.

losh¹ (losh), interj. [A distortion of Lord.] An interjection implying surprise, astonishment, or deprecation. [Scotch.]

Losh, man! hae mercy w' your natch,

Your bodkin's ban'd. Burns, To a Tailor.

losh² (losh), n. [Also lush; said to be a corruption of F. loche: see loach.] The burbot, Lota maculosa: so called in parts of British America and in Alaska.

losh-hide (losh'hīd), n. [*< losh, appar. a var. of *lush*¹ (or lash?), + *hide*².] In leather-manuf., an oiled, undressed hide. E. H. Knight.

You should prouide for the next ships fve hundred Losh hides.

Hakluyt's Voyages, l. 306.

losing¹ (lō'zing), p. a. [Ppr. of *lose*¹, v.] Causing or resulting in loss: as, a losing game, battle, or business.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news

Hath but a losing office.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., l. 1. 101.

He was a man of an incorrigible and losing honesty.

Lamb, Old Benchers.

Losing hazard. See hazard, 5.

losing² (lō'zing), p. a. [Ppr. of *lose*³, v.] Given to flattery; fawning; cozening; deceitful.

Among the many amoniacal prelates that awarmed in the land, Herbert, Bishop of Thetford, must not be forgotten; nicknamed Losing—that is, the Flatterer. Fuller.

losinget, n. An obsolete variant of lozenge.

losingly (lō'zing-li), adv. In a losing manner; in a manner to incur or to result in loss. Imp. Dict.

loss (lōs), n. [< ME. los, < AS. los, a loss, damage, < lōsan (pp. loren), lose: see *lose*¹.] 1. Failure to hold, keep, or preserve what one has had in his possession; disappearance from possession, use, or knowledge; deprivation of that which one has had: as, the loss of money by gaming; loss of health or reputation; loss of children: opposed to gain.

A fellow that hath had losses. Shak., Much Ado, iv. 2. 87.

Standing by ye Queene at basasett, I observ'd that she was exceedingly concern'd for ye losse of £80.

Evelyn, Diary, July 13, 1686.

So down he came; for loss of time,

Although it griev'd him sore,

Yet loss of peace, full well he knew,

Would trouble him much more.

Couper, John Gilpin.

2. Specifically, death.

There be many sad Hearts for the loss of my Lord Robert Dighy.

Howell, Letters, l. vi. 45.

3. Failure to gain or win: as, the loss of a prize or battle.

Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace. Shak., Cymbeline, ii. 3. 2.

4. That which is lost or forfeited; that which has been scattered or wasted: as, the loss by leakage amounted to 20 gallons; an insurance company's loss by a fire.

The wager thou hast won; and I will add

Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns.

Shak., T. of the S., v. 2. 113.

5. Defeat; overthrow; ruin. [Rare.]

Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 9.

Against this cruelty fight on thy side,

Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!

Shak., W. T., ii. 3. 192.

6. Lack; want.

But for loss of Nestor's golden words,

It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

Shak., Lucrece, l. 1420.

7. The state of being at fault; the state of having lost the trail and scent of game.

He cried upon it at the merest loss,

And twice to-day pick'd out the dull'est scent.

Shak., T. of the S., Ind., i. 23.

At a loss. (a) In uncertainty, perplexity, or confusion; puzzled; undecided.

Our Pilots being at a loss on these less frequented Coasts, we supply'd that defect out of the Spanish Pilot-books. Dampier, Voyages, l. 163.

Living in conversation from his infancy makes him no where at a loss.

Steele, Tatler, No. 30.

(b) At such a price as to lose or incur loss.

He is forced to sell stock at a great loss, is he? Well, that's very kind of him.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, iii. 1.

Consequential losses. See consequential.—Constructive total loss. See constructive.—Loss of head, decrease of power from waste of energy in the descent of a stream supplying water-power. Rankine, Steam Engine, § 99.—To bear a loss. (a) To make good the value of something lost. (b) To sustain a loss with spirit or fortitude. = Syn. Loss, Detriment, Damage, Waste, Forfeiture, etc. Loss is the class word under which detriment, damage, waste, forfeiture, etc., are species. Loss, detriment, and damage apply to persons or things; waste and forfeiture only to things. As to detriment and damage, see injury. Waste is generally voluntary, although not always realized; sometimes it is only by neglect. Forfeiture is a loss through the law, as a penalty or as the result of neglect.

lōss (lēs), n. See loss.

lossful (lōs'fūl), a. [< loss + -ful.] Detrimental; damaging. [Archaic and rare.]

The world's an ark, wherein things pure and gross Present their lossful gain, and gainful loss, Where every dram of gold contains a pound of dross.

Quarles, Emblems, ii. 7.

lossless (lōs'les), a. [< loss + -less.] Free from loss. [Archaic and rare.]

Rebellion rages in our Irish Province, but with miraculous and lossless victories of few against many is daily discomfited and broken.

Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

lossom (los'um), a. An obsolete or dialectal form of lovesome.

lost (lōst), p. a. [Pp. of *lose*¹, v.] 1. Parted with unwillingly or by misadventure; no longer to be found; no longer held or possessed; no longer kept in knowledge or remembrance: as, a lost book; a lost limb; a lost fortune.

I have gone astray like a lost sheep. Ps. cxix. 176.

Lore long dead,

Lost to the hurrying world.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 9.

2. Not won or gained; missed: as, a lost prize; a lost chance.

In the lost battle, borne down by the flying, Where mingles war's rattle with groans of the dying!

Scott, Marmion, vi. 32.

3. Not employed or enjoyed; not effectually or profitably used; misspent; wasted: as, a lost day; a lost opportunity.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'Tis a lost fear;

Man but a rash against Othello's breast,

And he retreats. Shak., Othello, v. 2. 269.

4. Ruined; destroyed; consumed or wasted away, whether physically or morally: as, lost health; lost honor.

Bring some good oil, pitch, and tar, and a good piece of an old cable to make oakum; for that which was sent is much lost.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, l. 454.

She might be more disposed to feel a woman's interest in the lost girl.

Dickens, David Copperfield, xlvi.

Of a lost country and dishonoured name.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 255.

5. Spiritually ruined; abandoned morally; in theol., finally shut out from salvation or eternal life; damned: as, a lost soul.

And now without redemption all mankind Must have been lost, adjudged to death and hell By doom severe, had not the Son of God . . . His dearest mediation thus renew'd.

Milton, P. L., iii. 223.

6. Bewildered; absent-minded; absorbed: as, he looked about in a lost way.

And there among the solitary downs,

Full often lost in fancy, lost his way.

Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

Lost cause, the cause of the overthrown Southern Confederacy. [U. S.]—Lost motion. See motion.—Lost Sunday. See Sunday.—Lost to, insensible to; incapable of feeling: as, lost to shame.

The most vice-hardened men, although they are lost to all other feeling, are often found to cherish a regard for the feelings of a mother. Bibliotheca Sacra, XLV. 7.

= Syn. 1. Missing.—4 and 5. Shattered; overthrown; downfallen; deprived, abandoned, reprobate, profligate, incorrigible, shameless.

lostet. An obsolete past participle of loose.

losynget, n. An obsolete variant of lozenge.
lot (lot), n. [< ME. lot, < AS. hlōt (also in deriv. forms hlēt, hlēt, hlēt, hlēte) = OS. hlōt = OFries. hlōt = D. lot = MLG. lot, lōt = OHG. hlōz, lōz, MHG. lōz, G. los, loos, lot, share, = Icel. hlautr, hlutr, share, offering, = Dan. lod = Sw. lott, lot, share, = Goth. hlauts, lot, share, portion (cf. It. lotto (> Sp. Pg. lote) = F. lot, < ML. lottum, lot, < Teut.); from a strong verb, AS. hlōtan (pret.

lot

hlot, pl. hloten, pp. hloten) = OS. hlotan = OHG. hiozan, MHG. biezen = Icel. hjóta = Goth. hlotan (not recorded), obtain by lot. Hence, through F., lottery and allot.] 1. A means of determining something by chance; anything (as dice, pieces of paper of different lengths or differently marked, so placed that these differences cannot be perceived) used to decide a choice, advantage, dispute, etc. See to cast lots, to draw lots, below.

Each mark his lot, and cast it in to Agamemnon's caske.
Chapman, Iliad, vii.

2. That which is determined or assigned by lot; that which one gets by the drawing or casting of lots, or by some other fortuitous method; a chance allotment, share, or portion, as of land, money, service, etc.

And all that fell in Robyn's lot
He smote them wonder sare.

Lyttell Geste of Robyn Hode (Child's Ballsds, V. 114).

Judah said unto Simeon his brother, Come up with me into my lot; . . . and I likewise will go up with thee into thy lot.
Judges i. 3.

His lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.
Luke i. 9.

3. Share or portion in life allotted in any casual way; station or condition determined by the chances of life; fortune; destiny: as, the lot of the poor.

Such is the lot of all that deal in public affairs, whether of church or commonwealth.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iv. 14.

The lots of glotons men are wrapt in mysteries,
And so deliver'd.

Fletcher (and another), Prophetess, i. 3.

4. Any distinct part or parcel; a portion or part separated from others of the same kind: as, a lot of goods; a lot of furniture. Specifically — 5. A portion or parcel of land; any piece of land divided off or set apart for a particular use or purpose: as, a building-lot; a pasture-lot; all that lot, piece, or parcel of ground (a formula in legal instruments). In the phrase "lot, piece, or parcel of land," lot implies nothing as to the size of the tract, but when used alone it commonly denotes a small tract, such as a building-site. But it may include any legal subdivision of land. Thus, a quarter quarter-section (40 acres), being a legal subdivision and as such marked as a lot of ground, is held a "lot" within the meaning of a homestead exemption law exempting "the lot of ground and the buildings thereon, occupied as a residence and owned by the debtor."

This report . . . assigns a lot for the maintenance of public schools in every township; another lot for the purposes of religion.
Baneroff, Hist. Const., II. 111.

6. (a) Proportion or share of taxes. (b) Tribute; toll.

In England he arered a tote Off iche horse that comes smoke.

M.S. Cantab., ff. v. 48, f. 99. (Halliwell.)

(c) In mining, dues to the lord of the manor for ingress and egress. [Prov. Eng.]—7. A large or considerable number or amount; a great deal; as, a lot of people: often used in the plural (and the plural even as an adverb, meaning 'a great deal'): as, he has lots of money. [Colloq.]

A great lot of evil spirits.

C. Mather, Mag. Chris. (Bartlett.)

That's a big lot of money.
Tennyson, Queen Mary, ii. 3.

8t. pl. A game formerly played with roundels on which short verses were written: used as a singular.—9. The shoot of a tree. [Prov. Eng.]—Across lots, cross lots. See across, cross, prep.—City lot. In the United States, a rectangular plot of ground 25 feet wide and 100 feet long, these being the most common dimensions of the separate parcels of ground in American cities. It is commonly taken in such towns as a unit of land-measures.—Job lot. See job (b).—Lot of ground. See def. 5.—Lot system. In the law of registration of land-titles, the system which records all known lots within the district, and registers or indexes each conveyance or encumbrance in connection with every lot it affects, so that an inspection of the record shows each lot separately, together with all instruments affecting it: distinguished from the block system, or the record together of all instruments affecting any of the lots in a block—that is, any area, exclusive of highway, which is bounded by highways, leaving the searcher to form his own opinion as to whether a particular lot is affected or not.—Scot and lot. See scot.—To cast in one's lot with or among, to share the fortunes of (another or others).

Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse.

Prov. i. 14.

To cast lots, to throw some object, as a die, for the purpose of determining by the manner of its fall some choice, a question in dispute, etc.

Lotus did thei kast, for whom thei had that wo.

Rob. of Brunne, p. 124.

And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots.

Mat. xxvii. 35.

To draw lots, to draw or take from an urn or some other place of concealment pieces of paper, or straw, etc., variously marked or of different lengths, for the purpose of determining, by the accident of drawing, some choice or question.

Let's draw lots who shall begin.

Shak., A. and C., II. 6. 63.

Vacant lot, a plot of ground on which there is no building; particularly, a small unoccupied lot among others that are built upon, in a town or city.—Syn. 3. Hap., destiny, fate, doom, allotment.

lot (lot), v. t.; pret. and pp. lotted, ppr. lotting. [< lot, n. Cf. allot.] I. trans. To allot; assign; distribute; award.

Your brother Lorel's prize! for so my iargess Hath lotted her to be.

B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, li. 1.

II. intrans. To cast lots.

A cowe [was given] to 6. persons or shars, & 2. goats to ye same, which were first equalised for age & goodnes, and then lotted for.

Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 216.

To lot upon, to count upon; look forward to with pleasure: as, I lotted upon going to town. [New Eng.]

Lot¹ (lō'tā), n. [NL., < OF. lote, a pout: see lot³.] A genus of gadoid fishes of an elongate shape with villiform teeth on the jaws and vomer, typical of the subfamily Lotinae. The burbot, L. maculosa, is an example. See cut under burbot.

lot², lotah (lō'tā), n. [Also loto; E. Ind.] A globular or melon-shaped pot, usually of polished brass, used in the East Indies for drawing water, drinking, and ablutions.

The dismayed sirdar found the head of a fourth [kitten] jammed in the neck of his sacred lotah, wherewith he performs his pious ablutions every morning at the ghanit.

J. W. Palmer, The New and the Old, p. 311.

lot⁴ (lōt), v. i. [ME. loten, lotien, < AS. lutian, lurk (= OHG. lūzen, MHG. lūzen, lie hidden, lurk); < lūtan, stoop, lout: see lout¹.] To lurk; lie hidden.

He fond this holy olde Urban anon
Among the scntes briels lotting.

Chaucer, Second Nun's Tale, l. 186.

For outlawes in the wode and vnder banke lotyeth.

Piers Plowman (B), xvii. 102.

lot² (lōt), n. [< F. lote = Sp. Pg. It. loto, < L. lotus, < Gr. λωτός, lotus: see lotus¹.] Lotus.

As regards personal considerations, we were to abstain from . . . washing the head with mallow or lote leaves.

R. F. Burton, El-Medinah, p. 357.

lot³ (lōt), n. [< OF. lote, F. lotte = Sp. lota (ML. lotā), a pout.] A gadoid fish, the burbot. See Lot¹.

Lot² (lō'tē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1825), < Lotus + -ae.] A tribe of leguminous plants, typified by the genus Lotus, distinguished by their pinnate five- to many-foliate leaves with entire leaflets, and capitate, umbellate, or rarely solitary flowers. The tribe embraces 8 genera of herbs or suffruticose plants.

lot²-bush (lōt'būsh), n. The small tree Zizyphus Lotus. Same as lotus-tree, I. Also lote-tree.

lot²-by, n. [Also luby, ludy; < ME. lotby (pl. lotbyes); < lot¹ + by¹.] A concubine.

And with me folwith my lotby
To done me solas and company.

Rom. of the Rose, l. 6339.

lot²-fruit (lōt'frōt), n. Lotus-fruit; especially, the product of Zizyphus Lotus. See lotus-tree, I.

lot²-tree (lōt'trē), n. [< lot², n., + tree.] Same as lotus-tree, I.

Oh! what are the brightest (flowers) that e'er have blown
To the lot²-tree, springing by Alla's throne,
Whose flowers have a soul in every leaf?

Moore, Lalla Rookh, Paradise and the Peri.

loth¹, a. and n. See loath.

loth² (lōt), n. [G., lead, a weight, = E. lead².] A German unit of weight, varying in different localities from 225 to 270 grains troy.

Lotharingian (lō-thā-rin'jī-an), a. and n. [< Lotharingia (G. Lothringen, F. Lorraine) + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Lotharingia or Lorraine, an ancient duchy and later a province of France. It is now divided between France and Germany.

II. n. A native of Lotharingia or Lorraine. See Lorrainer.

Lothario (lō-thā'ri-ō), n. [In allusion to Lothario (called in one place "the gay Lothario"), a character in Rowe's play, "The Fair Penitent." The name Lothario is an Italianized form of OHG. Hlōthari, Ludheri, G. Luther (> OF. Ludhers), AS. Hlōthhere.] A jaunty libertine; a gay deceiver; a rake.

loth², v. An obsolete form of loathe.

lothful, lothliness, etc. Obsolete forms of loathful, etc.

Lotin² (lō-tī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lot¹ + -inae.] A subfamily of gadoid fishes, typified by the genus Lotia, with two dorsal fins (a short anterior and a long posterior one), a single long anal fin, and perfect ventral fins. It contains the burbot and lings.

lotine (lō'tin), a. and n. [< Lot¹ + -ine¹.] I. a. Having the characters of a burbot or ling; of or pertaining to the Lotinae.

II. n. A fish of the subfamily Lotinae.
lotion (lō'shōn), n. [= F. lotion = Sp. locion = Pg. loção = It. lozione, < L. lotio(n)], also lavatio(n), a washing, < lavare, lavatus, lavus, lotus, wash: see lave², v.] 1. A washing; particularly, a washing of the skin.—2. A fluid preparation, wash, or cosmetic applied to the skin, especially the skin of the face, for the purpose of rendering it smooth, soft, or fair.—3. In phar., a liquid holding in solution various medicinal substances, applied externally to stimulate action, to relieve pain, etc.

lot¹, n. See lotto.

lot² (lō'tō), n. Another form of lot².

Lotophagi (lō-tof'a-jī), n. pl. [L., < Gr. λωτοφάγοι, lotus-eaters, < λωτός, lotus, + φαγεῖν, eat.] The lotus-eaters; in Gr. legend, especially as given in the Odyssey, the name of a people who ate the fruit of a plant called the lotus, conjecturally identified with various plants which have borne that name. Those of the followers of Odysseus or Ulysses who ate of it are described as being rendered forgetful of their friends and unwilling to return to their own land. In historical times a people known under the name of Lotophagi lived on the northern coast of Africa in Tripoli, and on the island of Melinx (Lotopbagitis, modern Jerba) in Tunisia. See lotus, I, and lotus-eater.

lot² (lō'tōr), n. [NL., < L. lavare, pp. lotus, wash: see lave², lotion.] The washer: a designation, both specific and generic, of the American racoon, Procyon lotor, from its habit of dipping its food in water before eating it.

lot² (lō'tōs), n. Same as lotus.

lotted (lot'ed), p. a. Having a (specified) lot or fortune. [Rare.]

Some sense, and more estate, kind heaven
To this well lotted peer has given.

Prior, The Ladle, Moral.

lot-teller (lot'tel'ēr), n. A witch; a fortune-teller.

Witches, in foretime named lot-tellers, now commonly called sorcerers.

A. Maunsell, Catalogue of English Printed Books (1595).

(Encyc. Dict.)

lottery (lot'e-ri), n.; pl. lotteries (-riz). [= D. loterij = G. lotterie = Dan. Sw. lotteri = Sp. loteria = Pg. loteria, < F. loterie, lottery, a lottery, < lot, lot, share: see lot, n.] 1. Distribution of anything by lot; allotment; also, the drawing of lots; determination by chance or fate; random choice; matter of chance: as, the lottery of life.

Ajax. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not: it is put to lottery.

Shak., T. and C., ii. 1. 140.

Knowledge and improvements are to be got by selling and posting for that purpose; but whether useful knowledge and real improvements, is all a lottery.

Sterne, Sentimental Journey, p. 14.

2. A scheme for raising money by selling chances to share in a distribution of prizes; more specifically, a scheme for the distribution of prizes by chance among persons purchasing tickets, the correspondingly numbered slips, or lots, representing prizes or blanks, being drawn from a wheel on a day previously announced in connection with the scheme of intended prizes. In law the term lottery embraces all schemes for the distribution of prizes by chance, such as policy-playing, gift-exhibitions, prize-concerts, raffles at fairs, etc., and includes various forms of gambling. Most of the governments of the continent of Europe have at different periods raised money for public purposes by means of lotteries; and a small sum was raised in America during the Revolution by a lottery authorized by the Continental Congress. Both state and private lotteries have been forbidden by law in Great Britain and in nearly all of the United States, Louisiana and Kentucky being the two notable exceptions.

He [man] comes not into the world, nor he comes not to the Sacrament, as to a lottery, where perchance he may draw salvation.

Donne, Sermons, iv.

Lotteries, at this period common in all New England, had become a favorite resort for raising money to support government, carry on wars, build churches, construct roads, or endow colleges.

S. Judd, Margaret, l. 6.

3t. The lot or portion falling to one's share; a chance allotment or prize.

Octavia is

A blessed lottery to him.

Shak., A. and C., ii. 2. 248.

4. A children's picture or print. [Prov. Eng.] lotto, lot¹ (lot'ō, lō'tō), n. [It. lotto, lot, lottery: see lot, n.] 1. A game played with disks and cards. Each disk has one number on it, and each card several numbers in lines. The disks are drawn from a bag, the number on each is called, and the corresponding number on one of the cards covered. That player who first covers all the numbers of one line wins the game.

2. Same as kero.

lot-tree (lot'trē), n. A European tree, Pyrus (Sorbus) Aria. Also called white bean-tree.

lotus (lō'tus), n. [L. lotus, lotos, < Gr. λωτός, the name of several plants (see def.). Cf. lotē.] 1. One of a number of different plants famous in mythology and tradition, or in modern times associated with traditions. Aside from the Homeric lotus (see Lotophagi and lotus-tree), the name was also given to several species of water-lily, as the blue water-lily, Castalia scutifolia (Nymphaea caerulea), the Egyptian water-lily, C. mystica (Nymphaea Lotus), and the nelumbo (Nelumbium speciosum), the Pythagorean or sacred bean, which grow in stagnant or slowly running waters. Castalia scutifolia and C. mystica are often found figured on Egyptian buildings, columns, etc., and the nelumbo, or Hindu and Chinese lotus, bears a prominent part in mythology. In the decorative art of India the lotus-flower is used especially as a support to the figure of a divinity or of a sage or deified personage. It is so represented both in relief or solid, as in bronze, and in paintings. Similar representations in Chinese and Japanese art seem to be derived directly from India.

2. [cap.] [NL. (Tournefort, 1700).] A genus of leguminous plants, type of the tribe Lotae, distinguished by a two-valved pod and the pointed keel of the corolla. About 100 species have been described, which may be reduced to 50. They are found in the temperate and mountainous regions of Europe and Asia, also in Africa, America, and Australia. The plants are shrubby herbs, with peculiar quadri- to quinquefoliate leaves, of which three leaflets are near the apex of the leaf and the other two are near the base, so as to have the appearance of stipules. The flowers are red, pink, or white, and disposed in axillary umbels. The pod is oblong or often linear, and straight or curved. Many of the species are cultivated. A general name for plants of the genus is bird's-foot trefoil. L. corniculatus is the common bird's-foot trefoil or clover of Great Britain, etc., also called cat-in-clover, fingers-and-toes, and by other fanciful names. Its herbage is highly nutritious, and it is a valuable pasture-meadow-plant, with taller fodder-plants, or in inferior soils. Some other species are also valuable. L. Jacobæa is sometimes called St. James's flower, or Jacobi.

3. In arch., an ornament in the form of the Egyptian water-lily, Castalia mystica, frequently figured in the art of ancient nations, notably on certain types of the capitals of Egyptian columns.—Blue lotus of the Nile, Castalia scutifolia.—East Indian lotus, Castalia sacra (Nymphaea pubescens).—Egyptian lotus, Castalia mystica. (See def. 1.)—Hungarian lotus, a European water-lily, Castalia (Nymphaea) thermalis. See water-lily.

lotus-berry (lō'tus-ber'i), n. A small West Indian tree, Byrsonima coriacea of the Malpighiaceae, bearing edible yellow drupes.

lotus-eater (lō'tus-ē'tēr), n. One of the Lotophagi; hence, one who finds pleasure in a listless, dreamy life; a devotee of indolent pleasures; a languid voluptuary.

And round about the keel with faces pale,
Dark faces pale against that rosy flame,
The mild-eyed melancholy Lotos-eaters came.
Tennyson, Lotus-Eaters.

lotus-tree (lō'tus-trē), n. 1. A prickly shrub, Zizyphus Lotus, native in northern Africa and southern Europe, yielding one of the jube-fruits, a sweet and pleasant-flavored drupe of the size of an olive. The fruit is not equal to that of the common jube, Z. sativa, but is much used for food where it is native, and furnishes a kind of wine. It is held by many to have been the food of the classical Lotophagi, as it agrees with the locality and description given by Polybius. See Lotophagi.

2. The nettle-tree, Celtis australis, bearing a small sweet berry, which has sometimes been identified with the ancient lotus-fruit. Also called tree-lotus. See Celtis and nettle-tree.—3. The date-plum, Diospyros Lotos, an Asiatic tree, cultivated in southern Europe. Its sweet, barely edible fruit can hardly be the classical lotus. [Among trees that have been supposed to be the classical lotus may be mentioned also Rhamnus Lotus, a North African shrub with a pleasant fruit, and Nitraria tridentata, a thorny, desert-loving shrub, whose succulent fruit has a stimulating quality.]

loud (loud), a. [ME. loud, lud, < AS. hlūd = OS. OFries. hlūd = D. luid = MLG. lūde, LG. lud = OHG. hlūt, MHG. lūt, G. laut (not in Scand. or Goth., the Dan. adv. lydt, loudly, being prob. of LG. origin), loud, = L. clutus* in inclutus, renowned, famous, = Gr. κλυτός, renowned, = Skt. gruta, heard, = Ir. clóth, noble, brave; orig. pp., with suffix -d², as also in cold, old, dead, etc. (see -d², -ed²), of the verb represented by L. cluere = Gr. κλέω, hear, which also appears in AS. hlystan, E. list, listen, etc., also in Gr. κλέος, renown, glory, L. gloria, glory, laus (laud-), praise, W. clod, praise, fame: see list, listen, client, glory, laud, lose, etc.] 1. Strong or powerful in sound; high-sounding; noisy: as, a loud cry; loud thunder.

Curses not loud, but deep. Shak., Macbeth, v. 3. 27.

The mill-bell . . . clanged out presently with irregular but loud and alarming din. Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, ii.

2. Uttering or emitting a great noise; giving out a strong sound: as, loud instruments.

Praise him upon the loud cymbals. Ps. cl. 5.

3. Speaking with energy or enthusiasm; vehement; clamorous; noisy.

No blood so loud as that of Civil War.
Cowley, His Majesty's Return out of Scotland, st. 6.

Haast. To me she appears sensible and silent.
Tony. Ay, before company. But when she's with her playmate, she's as loud as a hog in a gate.

Goldsmith, She Stoops to Conquer, II.

4†. High; boisterous; stormy; turbulent.

For if the French be lords of this loud day.
Shak., K. John, v. 4. 14.

5. Urgent or pressing; crying: as, a loud call for reform.

For, I do know, the state . . .
Cannot with safety cast him, for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to this Cyprus wars.
Shak., Othello, I. 1. 151.

6. Ostentatious; pompous; pretentious; boastful.

Many men . . . labour only for a pompous epitaph, and a loud title upon their marble. Jer. Taylor.

7. Flashy; showy; overloaded with ornament or colors, as a garment or a work of art; conspicuous in manner or appearance; vulgar; overdone. [Colloq.]

This Edward had picked up . . . a much more loquacious, ostentatious, much louder style [of character] than is freely patronised on this side of the Channel.
Carlyle, Sterling, i. 2. (Davies.)

Stained glass, indeed! loud, garish, thin, painty.
The Century, XXVII, 106.

8. Strong in smell; of evil odor. [Colloq.]

The natives keep their seal meat almost any length of time, in winter, for use; and, like our old duck and bird hunters, they say they prefer to have the meat tainted rather than fresh, declaring that it is most tender and toothsome when decidedly loud.

Fisheries of U. S., v. II, 473.

Loud pedal. Same as dampner-pedal. = Syn. 1 and 2. Resounding, vociferous.

loud (loud), adv. [ME. loud = OS. hlūdo = D. luid = OHG. hlūto, MHG. lūte, G. laut = Dan. lydt (prob. < LG.); < loud, a.] Loudly; noisily.

And suppe not loud of thy Pottage, no tyme in all thy lyte.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 76.

Who knocks so loud at door?

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., II, 4. 381.

Loud and (or or) still†, under all circumstances; at all times.

Earli ne late, loud ne stille,
Beebite no man, blood ne boon.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 109.

loudet, n. [ME., also lude, < AS. hlýde (= MHG. lūt, G. laut), sound, < hlūd, loud; see loud, a.] Sound. Laganon, I. 259.

loudful† (loud'fúl), a. [< loud + -ful.] Loud. The cornets and organs playing loudful musicke.
Marston, Sophonisba, I. 2.

loud-lunged (loud'lungd), a. Vociferous; bel-lowing. [Rare.]

Our Boanerges with his threats of doom,
And loud-lung'd Antiochianisms, . . .
Went both to make your dream.
Tennyson, Sea Dreams.

loudly (loud'li), adv. 1. With great sound or noise; noisily; clamorously; with vehemence or importunity: as, he loudly complained of intolerance.—2. Ostentatiously; conspicuously; showily; glaringly: as, he was very loudly dressed. [Colloq.]

loud-mouthed (loud'moutht), a. Having or talking with a loud voice; talking vociferously or clamorously.

As loud-mouthed and repulsive a set of political vagabonds as ever canted about principles or hungered after leaves and fishes.
N. A. Rev., CXIII, 426.

loudness (loud'nes), n. 1. The state or quality of being loud; great sound or noise; clamor; uproar: as, the loudness of a voice or an instrument.—2. Conspicuousness; flashiness; showiness: as, loudness of dress. [Colloq.]

lough† (lōch), n. [< Ir. loch, a lake, lough, arm of the sea (cf. log, a pit, dike, small lough), = Gael. loch = W. lloch, a lake; see lake.] 1. A lake: same as loch†, especially with reference to lakes in Ireland.

He [the piper] began to play on his Pipes, and all the Rats and the Mice followed him to a great Lough hard by, where they all perished. Howell, Letters, I, vi. 49.

2. A cavity in a rock. [Prov. Eng.]

lough†. An obsolete preterit of laugh.

louis (lō'i), n. [F., a coin, so named from Louis XIII.] A gold coin of France.—Louis d'or (Louis of gold), a gold coin of France, first struck in 1640, in the reign of Louis XIII., and coined continuously thereafter until 1795. It ranged in value from about $4 to $4.60, having, at the time of the Revolution, the intrinsic value of 23.60 francs. Under the Restoration the republican and imperial 20-franc piece was styled louis, and is still sometimes so styled (instead of napoleon: see napoleon) by persons of legitimist principles.

Obverse. Louis d'or. Reverse.

louisette (lō-i-zet'), n. [F.: so called from a Dr. Louis: see guillotine.] A former name (in French) of the guillotine.

Louisianian (lō-ē-zī-an'i-an), a. and n. [< Louisiana (see def.) + -ian.] 1. a. Pertaining to Louisiana, one of the southern United States.

Is not this the very poetry of landscape, of Louisianian landscape?
Gayarré, Hist. Louisiana, I, 13.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Louisiana.
louisine (lō-i-zēn'), n. [< Louis or Louise, a person's name, + -ine.] A thin and soft silk material used for summer wear.

Louis-Quatorze (lō'i-ka-tōrz'), a. [F.] An epithet designating a style of architecture and decoration prevalent in France in the reign of Louis XIV. (1643-1715), and copied in other countries. It is especially characteristic of palaces and large mansions of that period. Externally the forms are in a freely treated classical style, and rustication is much employed; the windows are larger and the rooms more lofty and spacious than in buildings of the time immediately preceding, and there is a constant effort to attain majesty and sumptuousness. The palace of Versailles and the eastern colonnade of the Louvre are prominent examples of Louis-Quatorze. The style is characteristically illustrated in internal decoration, the favorite medium of which was gilt stucco-work combined in figures uniting lavishness with studied symmetry and balance of parts. The scroll and shell appear as familiar details, and panels—either rectangular or nearly rectangular in form, sometimes severely plain, sometimes ornamented—are commonly present as a main feature of the design. The classical ornaments and all the elements of the earlier Renaissance styles are admitted, but are treated with the modifications imposed by the spirit of the age. In decorative art the Louis-Quatorze style embraces several new methods of decoration, such as incrustated work and the free use of veneers of precious woods, as well as the mounting and ornamentation of furniture in elaborate designs of gilded bronze, applied as lock-plates, hinges, handles, etc. The forms of panels, of pieces of furniture, and the like become more varied than in the earlier Renaissance, and the ornamentation has but little reference to natural forms. The richly inlaid furniture of louis (see buhl) surpassed all previous work of this kind.

Louis-Quinze (lō'i-kañz'), a. [F.] An epithet designating the style of French architecture and decoration which succeeded the Louis-Quatorze style, and characterized the reign of Louis XV. (1715-74). In it the peculiarities of the preceding style are carried to extremes; the severe sense of proportion and measure which always characterized the magnificence of the seventeenth century is replaced by a complete disregard of symmetry and of the interdependence of masses, by an elongated treatment of the foliations of the scroll, and by a profusion of shell-work of crimped and fantastic but meaningless conventionality. In its most debased and tawdry form, ornament of this style is termed rococo.

Louis-Seize (lō'i-sāz'), a. [F.] An epithet designating the style of architecture and ornamental design which prevailed in France in the reign of Louis XVI. (1774-92), distinguished by a return to greater simplicity than under Louis XV., and not seldom by the aim to reproduce classical architectural forms, as in parts of furniture, etc. The members of tables, chairs, etc., are very commonly slender, the moldings delicate and refined, the general forms right-angled and severe; but the surface-decoration is very richly diversified. The arts of engraving, porcelain-decoration, tapestry, etc., were very prosperous and characteristic during the prevalence of this style.

Louis-Treize (lō'i-trāz'), a. [F.] An epithet designating the styles of French architecture and decoration characteristic of the reign of Louis XIII. (1610-43), or in general of the first half of the seventeenth century. The architecture of this time is less light and elegant than that of the earlier Renaissance; it makes extensive use of orders based on the classical, and seeks to make them massive and big, carrying the columns from the base of the edifice to the cornice. High-pitched roofs continue in favor, as well as polychrome effects from the combination of stone and brick; and rustic work or bossage is accentuated. In cabinet-work and decoration kindred elements of design obtain: pseudo-classical columns and engaged columns, often bossed, are usual, and are combined with entablatures, etc., following more or less closely the Vitruvian dicta. Carving in relief is abundant, and often good, but in general less delicate than that of the earlier Renaissance.

louk†, r. A dialectal variant of loch†.

louk², lowk¹ (louk), v. t. [Also look; < ME. louken, lowken, < AS. lūcan (= Dan. luge), pull up (weeds): see lug¹.] To pull up (weeds); weed.
louk³, lowk², n. [ME.; origin uncertain.] An accomplice; a partner; a comrade.

And for there is no thief withoute a lowke
 That helpeth hym to wasten and to sowke,
 Of that he byrre kan or borwe may.
Chaucer, Cook's Tale, l. 51.

louker (lou'kér), n. [Also looker; < ME. louker, lowker; < louk² + -er¹.] One who weeds.

loun¹, a. See loun².

loun², n. See loun¹.

loun³, v. t. [Cf. lounder.] To beat; thrash.

lounder (loun'dér), n. [Origin obscure.] A severe, stunning blow. [Scotch.]

The Goodman,
 Wha lent him on his neck a lounder,
 That gart him o'er the threshold founder.
Ramsay, Poems, II. 530. (Jamieson.)

lounder (loun'dér), v. t. [Cf. lounder, n.] To beat with heavy strokes. [Scotch.]

lounderer (loun'dér-ér), n. An idler; a loafer.
 Lousengers and lounderers are wrongfully made, and named hermits, and have leave . . . to live . . . in sloth.
Ep. Bale, Select Works, p. 130.

loundering (loun'dér-ing), n. [Verbal n. of lounder, v.] A drubbing; a beating. [Scotch.]

He had g'ten her a loundering wi' his cane.
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xviii.

lounge¹ (lounj), v. i.; pret. and pp. lounge^d, ppr. lounge^{ing}. [Not found before 1671 (in Skinner); perhaps < the noun lounge, in plural lounge^s, which is probably a mistaken form, with accom. termination, of lounjis*, < lungis, longis, an idle, drowsy, dreaming fellow: see lungis.] 1. To act, move, or rest in a lazy or listless manner; move about or do anything with negligence or indifference.

Shun such as lounge through afternoons and eves.
O. W. Holmes, A Rhymed Lesson.

"Light!" is the responsive yell from the patriarch of the household, who, lounge^{ing} to the fence, leans his arm upon it.
W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 195.

2. To recline in a lazy attitude; loll: as, to lounge on a sofa.

The instant some stirring old hymn was given out, sleepy eyes brightened, lounge^{ing} figures sat erect.
L. M. Alcott, Hospital Sketches, p. 82.

lounge¹ (lounj), n. [Cf. lounge¹, v.] 1. The act of sauntering or strolling; the act of reclining at ease or lolling.

In the reign of the queen [Anne], tea came into use as an ordinary beverage among the higher classes, and the tea-tables of the ladies became places for fashionable lounge.
S. Douell, Taxes in England, IV. 112.

2. A place frequented by idlers.

She went with Lady Stock to a bookseller's, whose shop served as a fashionable lounge.
Miss Edgeworth, Almeria, p. 278.

3. A kind of sofa for reclining, having one arm only and a low back, or no back, so as to be used from either side.—4. A treat; a comfort. [Eton College.] C. A. Bristed, English University, p. 40.

lounge², n. An obsolete spelling of lunge¹.

lounge³ (loun'jér), n. [See lounge¹, v.] One who lounges; one who loiters away his time; an idler.

I will roar aloud and spare not, to the terror of, at present, a very flourishing society of people, called lounge³.
Guardian, No. 124.

The boulevard lounge³ or the gens du monde.
Nineteenth Century, XXI. 344.

lounge⁴ (loun'jìng), p. a. [Ppr. of lounge¹, v.] Of, pertaining to, or in the manner of a lounge³; sauntering; lolling: as, a lounge⁴ gait.

lounge⁵-room (loun'jìng-ròm), n. A room for the accommodation of idle visitors, or persons who are waiting, as in a club-house.

In the spacious office and general lounge⁵-room, sea-coal fires glowed in the wide grates.
C. D. Warner, Their Pilgrimage, p. 2.

loup¹ (loup), v.; pret. lap, pp. loup^{en}. [A dial. form of leap¹.] I. intrans. 1. To leap; spring.

He has loup^{en} on the bonny black,
 He stirr'd him w't the spur right sairy.
Annand Vower (Child's Ballads, II. 188).

Every one loup^{en} o'er the dike where it is laighest.
Kelly, Scotch Proverbs, p. 97. (Jamieson.)

2. To melt; give way: applied to frost when it melts suddenly. [North. Eng. or Scotch in both uses.]

II. trans. To leap over; leap from.

O Baby, haste, the window loup;
 I'll kep you in my arm.
Bonny Baby Livingston (Child's Ballads, IV. 43).

loup², n. An obsolete variant of loop². Spenser.

loup³ (löp), n. [F., a mask, a particular use of loup, wolf, < L. lupus, wolf: see lupus.] A light silk mask or half-mask worn at a masquerade.
loup-cervier (lö'sér-viä'), n. [F., a lynx, < loup, a wolf, + cervier*, < L. cervus, deer: see Cervus.] The Canada lynx, Lynx canadensis. The name was formerly applied in French to some animal not clearly identified. Cotgrave defines it as "a kind of white wolf or beast ingendred between an Hnd and an Wolf, whose skin is much esteemed by great men; yet some (not believing that those beasts will, or can mingle) imagine it rather to be the spotted Linx or Ounce; or a kind thereof."

loupe (löp), n. [Also loop; < F. loupe, a knob, lump, wen, etc.] A mass of pasty iron mingled with slag as taken from the Catalan forge when ready to be shingled. Also called massé in French, and in the American bloomeries most generally a bloom, but also frequently a lump, and sometimes called loupe.

loup-garou (lö'ga-rö'), n. [F., a were-wolf: see were-wolf.] A were-wolf; a lycanthrope.

loup⁴-ill (lou'ping-il), n. Leaping-evil: a disease of sheep which causes them to spring up and down in going forward. [Scotch.]

loup-the-dike (lou'p-thè-dik), a. Giddy; wayward; runaway. [Scotch.]

Now I have my finger and my thumb on this loup-the-dyke loon.
Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. xxiii.

lour (lour), v. i. See lower¹.

lourd¹, a. and n. [Also loord; < ME. lourd, < OF. (and F.) lourd, dull, stupid, = Sp. Pg. lardo, stupid, foolish, = It. lardo, lurid, dirty, < L. luridus, pale, yellow, wan, ML. lurdus, dirty: see lurid. Hence also (from F.) lurdan, q. v.] I. a. Dull; stupid. Gower.

II. n. A dull, stupid fellow; a low, degraded, worthless person; a drone.

lourd², v. [Appar. a dial. contr. of liever had or hever would (cf. leeze, contr. of lief is), extended to constructions where it must be taken as a simple verb, had or would being again prefixed.] See etymology.

I rather lourd it had been my sel
 Than cather him or thee.
Gil Morrice (Child's Ballads, II. 38).

Ere he had t'en the lamb he did,
 I had lourd he had t'en them a'.
The Broom of Cowdenknows (Child's Ballads, IV. 48).

I wad lourd have had a winding-sheet,
 And helped to put it ower his head.
Jamie Telfer (Child's Ballads, VI. 114).

lourdanet, lourdent, n. See lurdan.

loure (lör), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] 1. A form of bagpipe formerly used in Normandy.—2. A slow dance performed to the music of the bagpipe.—3. Music for such a dance or in its rhythm, which is triple, rather slow, and with heavy primary accents.

lourgulary, n. See lurgulary.

loury (lou'ri), a. See lowery.

louse¹ (lous), n.; pl. lice (lis). [< ME. lous (pl. lis, lise, lys), < AS. lūs (pl. lījs) = D. luis = OHG. MHG. lūs, G. laus = Icel. lús = Dan. Sw. lus, louse; perhaps lit. 'destroyer' or 'damager,' from the root lus* of loose, lose¹, loss, etc. Cf. Gr. φθειρ, a louse, < φθειρεω, destroy.] An insect or other small arthropod (as a crustacean) that infests other animals or plants, or an animal resembling such parasites: a name for a great variety of small creatures. Specifically—(a) One of a class of small degraded parasitic hemipterous insects of the order Hemiptera and suborder Parasita; the Pediculina or Pediculidae. These are the little wingless bugs most frequently called lice, infesting man and other animals as external parasites, in the hair or fur. They are haustellate, or furnished with a sucking-proboscis, which can be protruded and fixed in the skin of the host, the attachment being secured by little hooks; there are six legs with hooks for crawling and grappling; the general form is elliptical, most of the body consisting of the large jointed abdomen; the skin is so tough that when the louse is crushed it can be heard to crack. Such lice are oviparous and extremely prolific; their eggs, which mature very rapidly, are glued to hairs, and are known as nits. At least three kinds infest man. The head-lice, Pediculus capitis, living chiefly in the hair of the head, is the slenderest one of the three. The body-lice, Pediculus vestimentis, living in the hair of the body at large, and in the seams of the clothing, is less transparent than the former, with a grayish tint, and hence called grayback; myriads of these creatures are generated where people are crowded in unclean or unwholesome conditions, as in camps, jails, etc. The last kind, the crab-lice, Phthirus pubis or inguinalis, chiefly affects the hair of the pubis and perineum, but may range all over the body; its shape is peculiar, as shown in the figure under crab-lice. Most mammals, if not all, have lice peculiar to themselves. Hæmatopinus is an extensive genus of such lice: H. vituli is found on cattle. A species of Hæmatomyzus affects elephants. Bats have a peculiar set of lice, constituting the family Polyctenidae.

A louse is a worme with many fete, & it cometh out of the filthi and onclene skynne. . . . To withdryne them. The best is for to washe the oftentimes, and to change oftentimes clene linnen.

Quoted in Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 19.

(b) Bird-lice are parasitic insects, of several hundred species, various genera, and several families, which some authors range with the foregoing in the order Hemiptera, but most place in the Pseudoneuroptera. They are known as the order or superfamily Mallophaga. They have mandibulate or biting mouth-parts, are wingless, and of very variable forms. They are by no means confined to birds, but infest mammals as well; almost every kind of bird and beast is infested by these creatures, sometimes several species to one host, and in such multitudes as to cause disease and death. Of these, such as infest domestic quadrupeds and birds belong to the genera Trichodectes, Dicophorus, Nirnaus, Goniocotes, Goniodes, Lipeurus, Trinotus, Colopoccephalum, Menopon, and Gyropus. (c) The beaver harbors a remarkable louse, Platylabus castoris, a degraded clavicorn beetle, so peculiar as to have been made type of an order, Achreoptera. (d) Insects have their own lice. Such are the bee-lice, or pupiparous dipterous insects of the family Brachyida, order Diptera; and some of the lice of bats are similar dipterous insects, though wingless, of the family Nycteribiida. Bees, wasps, etc., are also infested by certain small parasitic heteromereous beetles in the form of lice, such as the wingless larvae of Meloida, a species of which has been named Pediculus melittæ, and the whole family Stylopidæ. Insects affected by the latter are said to be stylized. None of the foregoing lice are aquatic. (e) Fishes, marine mammals, crustaceans, etc., are infested by a great variety of small degraded crustaceans, collectively known as fish-lice or Ichthyophthira. Most of these belong to a class or order Epizoa or Siphonostoma, or Lernaeoidea; a few are cirripeds, as Rhizocephala. Whale-lice are Cymatidæ. Carp-lice are Argulidæ. (f) Wood-lice are the terrestrial isopods of the family Onciscidæ, also called slaters, sow-bugs, etc. These are not parasites, but some of the aquatic isopods are fish-lice, as Cymothoidæ. (g) Plants are infested by multitudes of small plant-sucking hemipters, known as plant-lice, and formerly collectively termed Phytophthoria: as the aphids, Aphididæ, some of which are also called gall-lice; the psyllids, Psyllidæ, called leaf-lice and jumping plant-lice; and the scale-insects or Coccidæ, some of which are also known as barb-lice. (h) Book-lice are pseudoneuropterous insects of the family Psocidæ, various species of which, as those of the genera Atropos and Clothilla, injure books. (i) Certain mites or acarids are sometimes called lice, as the harvest-ticks, known as red-lice, the itch-mite or itch-louse, etc. For further information, see the compounded words, and also the technical names.

louse¹ (louz), v. t.; pret. and pp. loused, ppr. lousing. [< ME. lousen; < louse¹, n.] To clean from lice. [Obsolete or rare.]

Howe handsome [convenient] it is to lye and sleepe, or to louse themselves in the sunshine.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

To York House, where the Russia Ambassador do lie; and there I saw his people go up and down louse^{ing} themselves.
Peypys, Diary, II. 5.

louse², a. and v. A Middle English variant of loose.

louseberry (lous'ber'i), n. The common spindle-tree of Europe, Euonymus vulgaris. Its powdered berries were reputed to destroy the lice parasitic on man.

louse-bur (lous'ber), n. The common cocklebur, Xanthium Strumarium: so named from its clinging pod or bur.

louse-fly (lous'fi), n. Any pupiparous dipterous insect, as a bee-louse or sheep-tick.

louse-herb (lous'erb), n. Same as lousewort, 2.

lousewort (lous'wér't), n. 1. A scrophulariaceous plant of the genus Pedicularis. The common lousewort in the United States is P. Canadensis, otherwise called wood-betony or head-betony. The common lousewort of England is P. sylvatica.

2. The stavesacre, Delphinium Staphisagria, the powdered seeds of which have been used from ancient times to destroy lice. Also louse-herb. [Rare.]

lously (lou'zi-li), adv. In a lousy manner; in a mean or degraded manner; scurvily.

lousiness (lou'zi-nes), n. The state of being lousy or infested with lice.

Hunger and Lousiness are the two Distempers that Afflict him; and Idleness and Scratching the two Medicines that Palliate his Miseries.
 Quoted in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, (II. 200.)

lousy (lou'zi), a. [< louse¹ + -y¹.] 1. Infested with lice.

That all luing things which haue soules go thither [to the heavens], euen Pleas and Lice. And these lousie hea-uens are allotted to all secular persons which enter not into their rule and habit of Religion.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 460.

Hence—2. Degraded; mean; contemptible!

A lousy knave to have his gibes and his mockerles!
Shak., M. W. of W., III. 3. 259.

A trick, a lousy trick; so ho, a trick, boys!
Fletcher, Loyal Subject, II. 1.

lousybill (lou'zi-bil), n. The long-billed curlew, Numenius longirostris. G. Trumbull. See out under eurlew. [Local, New Jersey.]

lout¹ (lout), v. [< ME. louten, < AS. lutan (= Icel. luta = Dan. lude = Sw. luta), stoop, bow, akin to lutian, > ME. lutien, luten, lurk (see lote¹), and perhaps to lytel, little: see litle.] I. intrans. 1. To bend, stoop, or crouch; bow; courtsey; make humble obeisance.

Down I loutede for to see
 The clere water in the stoon.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 1554.

The fiftē route
That to this lady gonne loute
And down ou knees anne to falle.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1704.

As oft as they named the Redeemer,
Lowly louted the boys, and lowly the maidens all courtesied.

Loudfellow, tr. of Tegnér's Children of the Lord's Supper. The noble lords and ladies . . . throw largesse to the knaves, who lout humbly.
J. E. Cooke, Virginia Comedians, II. xxxiii.

2†. To lie quiet; lurk. See *lote*¹.
Conquiesco, Anglice, to loutyn.
M.S. Bibl. Reg. 2. B. 1. t. 88. (Halliwell.)

3. To loiter, tarry, or stay. Hearne. (Halliwell.)

II.† trans. To bow down; abase.
For few there were that were so much redoubted,
Whom double fortune lifted up and louted.
Mir. for Mags., p. 303.

lout² (lout), n. [Not found in ME.; prob. < Icel. lútr, stooping, bent, < lúta, stoop, lout: see *lout*¹.] An awkward, ungainly fellow; a clown.

And that His [Adam's] Son, and his Son's Son,
Were all but Ploughmen, Clowns, and Louts.
Prior, The Old Gentry.

A stupid lout, seemingly a farmer's boy, in a grey jerkin with his head bare.
Scott, Kenilworth, xxiv.

lout^{2†} (lout), v. t. [*< lout*², n.] To treat as a lout; flout.

Louted and forsaken of theym by whom in tyme he myght have bene ayded and relieved.
Hall, Henry IV., f. 6. (Halliwell.)

Louted and laughed to skorne.
Udall, Roister Doister, iii. 3.

I am louted by a traitor villain.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 3. 13.

lout³ (lout), v. i. [*Cf. low*¹.] To low or bel-low. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.] lout⁴ (lout), v. t. [Origin obscure.] To milk, as a cow. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.] louter, v. i. [Early mod. E. lower; freq. of *lout*¹; cf. loiter, another form of the same word.] To loiter or lounge about.

Loutryng and wandryng.
Wye Way to the Spyttell Houe, p. 11. (Halliwell.)

louteringly, adv. In a loitering or idle manner.

Whoever wandreth about idely and louteringly is a rogue or vagabond, although he beggeth not.
M. Dalton, Country Justice (1620). (Nares.)

loutish (lou'tish), a. [*< lout*² + *-ish*¹.] Clownish; awkward; boorish.

Loutish, but not ill-looking. The Century, XXVII. 133.

= syn. Churlish, Clowenish, etc. See boorish.

loutishly (lou'tish-li), adv. In a loutish or awkward manner.

loutishness (lou'tish-ness), n. The state or quality of being loutish or awkward; clownishness.

loutre (lò'tèr), n. [F., an otter, < L. lutra, an otter.] In her, the otter, used as a bearing.

loutrin (lò'triin), n. [< loutre + *-in*¹.] An otter; any animal of the subfamily Lutrinae.

louver (lò'ver), n. [Also louvre, and formerly loover, loover, prop. only lover; < ME. lover, lovir, < OF. lover, luer, lovier, a louver, orig. appar. an upper gallery, < ML. as if lobiarium*, < lobia, also lodia and lodium (used to gloss OF. lovier), a gallery, lobby: see lobby. The explanation suggested by Minshew and adopted by Skeat, that the E. word is derived < OF. louver, for Fouvert, the open (spaco), opening (see le and overt), ignores the real OF. form lover, lovier, and is quite untenable.] 1†. A form of lantern or turret rising from the roof of a hall or other apartment in medieval domestic edifices, at first open at the sides. Its original function was to supply an outlet for smoke from fires. After this use was superseded by the introduction of chimneys, the louver was inclosed with glass.

It hath two rows of Pillars each ower other, those upper ones supporting the hemisphere, loover, or steeple, which is wrought all with Musaike worke.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 298.

A loover, or tunnel in the roote or top of a great hall to avoid smoke.
Baret, Alvearie, 1580. (Halliwell.)

For all the issue, both of vent and light,
Came from a loover at the tower's toppe.
Death of R. E. of Hunt., sig. l. 3. (Nares.)

2. A chimney-flue. [Obsolete or Prov. Eng.]

There is a steppē declivly way lookes downe,
Which to th' infernall kingdomes Orpheus guides,
Whose loover vapors breathes.
Heywood, Trolia Britannica (1609). (Nares.)

Don't stop cowerin' in th' ingle. . . . Some day we'at find as thou's got draw'n up th' loover w' the draught.
Jessie Fothergill, From Moor Tales, l.

3. In arch., a long window-like opening elosed with broad slats sloping downward and outward. See abat-vent.

Ne lightned was with window, nor with lover,
But with continuall candle-light.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. x. 42.

Coolers should always be placed so that the air has free access, and to this end it is usual to make the walls of the rooms containing them of louveres, which can be opened as may be required.
Spens' Encyc. Manuf., l. 400.

4†. The aperture in a dove-cote at which the bird enters; also, the dove-cote itself.

Like to a Cast of Falcons that pursue
A flight of Pidgeons through the welkin blew, Stooping at this and that, that to their Lover
(To save their lives) they hardly can recover.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Vocation.

louver-board (lò'ver-bòrd), n. See lower, 3, and lower-window.

louvered (lò'verd), a. Furnished with a louver; constructed in the form of a louver: as, a louvered window. Also loured.

If "Miner" will cut loured openings . . . in the sides of the tapering neck that connect his 10 square feet fan mouth with the 20 square feet tube. Engineer, LXVI. 217.

Louvered battens. See *batten*².
louver-hole (lò'ver-hòl), n. The hole or vent at the top of a chimney by which the smoke escapes.

Provide new locks and keys, and bars and bolts,
And cap the chimney, lest my lady fly
Out of the louver-hole.
Shirley, Honoria and Mammon (1659). (Nares.)

louver-window (lò'ver-win'dò), n. A long opening in a belfry-tower, partially closed by outward-sloping slats or boards called louver-boards (corrupted into luffer- or leer-boards), which are so placed to exclude rain, while allowing the sound of the bell to pass through. See abat-vent.

louvre¹, n. See lower.

louvre² (lò'ver), n. [< F. Louvre, the name (of unknown origin) of a building in Paris, anciently a royal castle or palace, now a national museum.] A fashionable dance derived from a favorite song of Louis XIV.

As soon as the minuet was closed, the princess said softly to Harry in French, "The Louvre, sir, if you please." This was a dance of the newest fashion.
Brooke, Fool of Quality, II. 99. (Davies.)

She proposed herself for a Louvre; all the men vowed they had never heard of such a dance.
Walpole, Letters, II. 194.

lovability (luv-a-bil'i-ti), n. [< lovable: see -bility.] Capability of being loved; possession of qualities fitted to inspire love; amiability. Also loability. Carlyle.

lovable¹ (luv'a-bl), a. [ME. lovable, lufabyll; < *love*¹ + -able.] Worthy of love; inviting love; winning; amiable. Also loreceable.

And which been hool and sooth and chaat and rightwys, and lovable to yhe.
Wyclif, Laodisensis, p. 100.

"There is something so soothing, so gentle, so indulgent about Mrs. Percy, so lovable." "She is . . . very lovable—that is the exact word." "I fear it is not English," said Miss Hanton. "Il mérite bien l'être," said Godfrey.
Miss Edgeworth, Patronage, v. (Davies.)

Elaine the fair, Elaine the lovable,
Elaine, the lily maid of Astolat.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

lovable^{2†}, a. [ME. lovable; < *love*² + -able.] Praiseworthy. Halliwell.

lovableness (luv'a-bl-ness), n. The quality of attracting affection; lovable character. Also loreceableness.

Man for man, he [Wordsworth] was infinitely inferior to Coleridge for personal charm and to Southey for general lovableness.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLIII. 526.

lovage (luv'āj), n. [Also (dial.) loveage, loreache (simulating *love*¹), formerly lirish; < ME. loveache (= D. lavas), < OF. luresche, lecesche, F. lirèche = Sp. ligustico = Pg. ligustico = It. levistico, libistico (ML. lubesticum, libisticum, levisticum) (> AS. lufestec, appar. simulating lufu, love) = MLG. lubbestock = OHG. lubbestecco, lubbistechal, MHG. lubstiekel, lubsteeche, lübesteeche (simulating OHG. luppi, MHG. luppe = AS. lybb, poison), liebstrichel, G. liebstöckel (simulating liebe, love) = Pol. lubszczyk, lubszyk, lubistek = Bohem. libeček, libček = Russ. lubistokū = Lith. lipsisukas, lubistos = Lett. lupstaga = Hung. lestran, levistikom) (= Turk. logostekou, < Gr. λεγιστικόν), < L. ligusticum, lovage, prop. nent. of Ligusticum, belonging to Liguria, < Liguria, Liguria: see Ligusticum, Ligurian.] 1. The umbelliferous plant Levisticum officinale, a native of the mountains of central Europe, cultivated in old gardens. This is the lovage of the older books. It is sometimes distinguished as Italian or garden lovage.—2. Another plant of the same family, Ligusticum Scoticum, often called Scotch lovage. The name extends also to other species of the genus.

love¹ (luv), v.; pret. and pp. loved, ppr. loving. [Also dial. (Se.) luee, loo; < ME. loven, luecn, lorten, luten, < AS. lufian, leofian (with short vowel, depending on the noun lufu, love), orig. leofian* = OFries. lirvia, luvia, levia = D. lieven = MLG. lēven, LG. leven = OHG. liubōn, liupōn, MIG. G. lieben, love; akin to AS. leof = Goth. liubs, etc., dear, lief, < Teut. √ lub, be pleasing, = L. libet, lubet, it pleases, = OBulg. liubiti, love (liubii, dear), = Bohem. lubiti, libiti = Russ. liubiti, love, = Lith. lubiū, long, = Skt. √ lubh, desire: see *love*¹, n., *love*², lief, believe, *leuce*², liberal, liberty, etc.] I. trans. 1. To regard with a strong feeling of affection; hold dear; have a strong regard for.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. Mat. xxii. 37.

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. Mat. xxiii. 53.

A maid whom they were none to praise,
And very few to love.
Wordsworth, Lucy.

2. Specifically, to regard (one of the opposite sex) with the admiration and devotion characteristic of the sexual relation; be in love with.

The lady made grete loye of the kynge, for she wende verily it hadde ben the Duke hir lordie, that she loved moche with a trewe herte.
Merrin (E. E. T. S.), l. 77.

To see her is to love her,
An' love but her for ever.
Burns, Bonnie Lesley.

3. To have a strong liking, craving, or appetite for; like; take pleasure in; delight in: followed by a noun or an infinitive.

Lordis! if se your Astate and honour
Loven, flemyth this vicious error!
Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), l. 107.

I love a fat goose as I love allegiance.
Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, iv. 5.

What a man actually loves, this he proposes to himself, and strives to attain.

Svedenborg, Christian Psychol. (tr. by Gorman), p. 96.

There is no place in the town which I so much love to frequent as the Royal Exchange.
Addison, The Royal Exchange.

4. To caress; show affection by caresses: a childish use of the word.

He climbed often into her lap, and, putting his arms round her neck, loved her with his cheek against hers, and with all his little heart.
Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 271.

To love one's love with an A, B, etc., a formula used in redeeming forfeits.

For these you play at purposes,
And love your loves with A and Bs;
For these, at Beast and Ombre woo,
And play for love and money too.
S. Butler, Hudibras, III. l. 1007.

I'll give you a clue to my trade, in a game of forfeits. I love my love with a B because she's Beautiful; I hate my love with a B because she's Brazen; I took her to the sign of the Blue Bear, and I treated her with Bonnets; her name's Bouncer, and she lives in Bedlam.
Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, ii. 1.

II. intrans. To have strong affection; especially, to be passionately attached to one of the opposite sex.

But since thou lovest, love still and thrive therein,
Even as I would when I to love begin.
Shak., T. G. of V., l. 1. 9.

'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, xxvii.

love¹ (luv), n. [Also dial. (Se.) luee; < ME. love, luee, < AS. lufu, lufe (= MLG. lève = OHG. liubi, liupi, lupu, MHG. G. liebe; cf. OFries. liafte, < NFries. leafste = D. liefte), love, < lufian, love: see *love*¹, v.] 1. The principle of sympathetic or pleasurable attraction in sentient and thinking beings; that feeling of predilection or solicitude for, or delight in, certain individuals or classes, principles, qualities, or things, which excites a strong desire or craving for the welfare, companionship, possession, enjoyment, or promotion of its object or objects; the yearning desire (whether right or perverted) for what is thought to be best in any relation or from any point of view. In its purest and most universal form, love is regarded in the highest conception of God as the essence of divinity.

Nature worketh in us all a love to our own counsels.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, Pref., ii.

Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.
John xv. 13.

The love of money is the root of all evil. 1 Tim. vi. 10.

We render you our loves, sir,
The best wealth we bring home.
Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, l. 3.

Any one reflecting upon the thought he has of the delight which any present or absent thing is apt to produce in him has the idea we call love. For when a man declares in autumn, when he is eating them, or in spring, when there are none, that he loves grapes, it is no more but that the taste of grapes delights him; let an alteration of health or constitution destroy the delight of their taste, and he can then be said to love grapes no longer.

Locke, Human Understanding, II. xx. 4.

2. Intimate personal affection between individuals of opposite sex capable of intermarlove

riago; the emotional incentive to and normal basis of conjugal union: as, to be in love; to marry for love.

And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her. Gen. xxix. 20.

But had I wist, before I kiss'd,
That love had been see ill to win,
I'd lock'd my heart in a case of gold,
And pin'd it with a silver pin.

Waly, Waly, but Love be Bonny (Child's Ballads, IV. 134).

It's good to be off with the old love,
Before you are on with the new. Old song.

Hail, wedded love, mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring, sole propriety
In Paradise of all things common else!
Milton, P. L., iv. 750.

Fond love, the gentle vow, the gay desire,
The kind deceit, the still-reviving fire,
Persuasive speech, and more persuasive sighs,
Silence that spoke, and eloquence of eyes.
Pope, Iliad, xiv. 249.

3. A beloved person; an object of affectionate interest, as a sweetheart or a husband or wife: often also used in address as a term of endearment.

She hears no tidings of her love.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 867.

They [the Virginia Indians] would have beards, but that they pluck away the haire; they have one wife, many loves.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 768.

What they could my words expressed,
O my love, my all, my one!
Singing helped the verses best.
Browning, Serenade at the Villa.

4. [cap.] A personification of the passion of love; sexual attraction imagined as an independent power external to its subject: applied especially to Cupid (more properly Amor) or Eros, the classical god of love, and more rarely to Venus or Aphrodite, the goddess of love.

Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 243.

All thoughts, all passions, all delights,
Whatever stirs this mortal frame,
All are but ministers of Love,
And feed his sacred flame. Coleridge, Love.

5. An embodiment or a representation of Cupid; one of a class of beings poetically imagined as devoted to the interests of lovers, and depicted as winged boys.

I mote perceive how, in her glancing sight,
Legions of loves with little wings did fly.
Spenser, Sonnets, xvi.

6. Gratification of a sexual passion or desire, as in an illicit relation.

Come, let us take our fill of love, until the morning.
Prov. vii. 18.

7†. A kindness; something done in token of love.

What good love may I perform for you?
Shak., K. John, iv. 1. 49.

8†. A thin silk stuff. One variety, soft and translucent, was used for veils. See love-ribbon.—9. In some games, nothing: a term indicating that no points have been scored: as, the game was two, love (that is, two points on one side and nothing on the other); love all (all the players have failed to score).—10. An old game in which one holds up one or more fingers, and another, without looking, guesses at the number. Davies.

The countrymen's play of holding up our fingers (diminutione digitorum, i. e. the play of love).
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, p. 159.

11. The plant Clematis vitalba, the virgin's-bower or traveler's-joy.—Cupboard love. See cupboard.—Family of Love. See Familist, 1.—For all loves†, or of all loves† [a universalized form of "for the love of God," "of heaven," etc.] by all means.

Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
Shak., M. N. D., ii. 2. 153.

And said, Sir, for all loves,
Let me thy prisoner see.
Sir Ferumbas. (Halliwell, under all-loves.)

For love, out of affectionate consideration; hence, for nothing; without compensation or payment.—For love or money, by any means; in any way.—Free love. See free.—In love, imbued with affection, especially sexual affection; enamored.

If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: a' brushes his hat o' mornings.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 2. 40.

Labor of love, any work done or task performed with eager willingness, either from fondness for the work itself or from regard entertained toward the person for whom it is done.—Love of benevolence or friendship. See benevolence.—Love of complacency. See love of benevolence.—Natural love, a natural appetite or inclination which is common to animals and plants.—Sensitive love, a love common to man and the lower animals.—There's no love lost between them, they have no liking for each other.

There was not a great deal of love lost between Will and his half-sister.
Thackeray, Virginians, xvii.

To love one's love with an A, B, etc. See love, 1. n. t.—To make love to, to profess affection for (one of the opposite sex); strive to win the affection of.—To play for love, to play a game, as at cards, without stakes.—Syn. 1 and 2. Love, Liking, Predilection, Attachment, Affection, Fondness, Devotion; friendship, kindness, tenderness, delight, partiality, charity (theological). As between persons, love is the most general of these words, covering much the widest range, both in degree and in kind. Liking is the weakest. Predilection goes a little further, but is only a preparatory liking or readiness to love. Attachment has much of the notion implied in its derivation; it is a love that binds one to another, an unwillingness to be separated. Affection is generally a regulated and conscious love or attachment; it goes deeper than attachment. Attachment and especially affection are often the refined and mellowed fruit of the passion of love. Fondness, originally a foolish tenderness, is not yet altogether redeemed from that idea; it may be an unreasoning and doting attachment, and is never very high in quality. Devotion is a sort of consecration or dedication to the object of one's feeling, an intense loyalty, as to a superior—a constant service. See esteem.

Love†, v. t. [< ME. loven, lovien, < AS. lofan, praise, value, appraise (= OS. lobhōn = OHG. lobōn, lobēn, MHG. G. loben = Icel. lofa = Sw. lofra = Dan. love, praise); cf. lof, n., praise; akin to lofan, love, loaf, dear, etc., < Teut. √ lub, be pleasing: see love†, lief, leave†, furlough.]
1. To praise; commend.

All loved that god, with joyful mode,
And saynt clyn scho bare the rode.
Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 95.

2. To praise as of value; prize; set a price on.

The aullere [seller] loveth his thing dere.
Old Eng. Homilies (ed. Morris), li. 213.

I love, as a chapman loveth his ware that he wyll sell.
Je fais. Come, of hewe moche love you it at: sus combien le faictes vous? I love you it nat so dere as it coste me; I wolde be glasse to bye some ware of you, but you love all thynges to dere.
Palsgrave.

loveability, loveable, etc. See lovability, etc.
love-affair (luv'ā-fār'), n. A special experience of love; the sum of the incidents having to do with being in love with any person.

Confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.
Shak., T. G. of V., iii. 1. 254.

love-apple (luv'ap'l), n. An old name of the common tomato, Lycopersicon esculentum.

love-bag†, n. A charm to procure love. Nares.

Another ask't me, who was somewhat holder,
Whether I wore a love-bagge on my shoulder?
Musarum Deliciae (1656).

love-bird (luv'bērd), n. A little parrot or parakeet, remarkable for the affection it shows for its mate. Many species of different genera have this trait. They are all of diminutive size. The American love-birds belong to the genus Psittacula, and some of them have also been called Agapornis. They are such as P. passerina, with several related species or varieties, and P. purpurata. The true love-birds belong to the restricted genus Agapornis, all of which are African. They are such as A. cana, A. pullaria, and A. swindermiana. (See cut under Agapornis.) The most familiar of these is A. pullaria, scarcely 7 inches long, bright-green with a rose-red face and throat, coralline bill, gray feet, and short-rounded tail, which when spread shows a red field bordered with a subterminal bar of black. It thrives on canary-seed, and makes a charming pet. Another group of love-birds inhabits the East Indian archipelago, New Guinea, and Australia, and represents divisions of the genus Psittacula (in a large sense) called Cyclopsitta and Psittinus. Such are C. diophthalma of the Ari Islands, P. malaccensis, etc. The most diminutive of parrots, Nasirana pygmaea, belongs to the same group as the last. Also love-parakeet, love-parrot.

love-broker (luv'brō'kēr), n. One who acts as agent between lovers. Shak., T. N., iii. 2. 39.

love-causet (luv'kâz), n. A love-affair. Shak., As you Like it, iv. 1. 97.

love-charm (luv'chärm), n. A charm by which love was supposed to be excited; a philter.

love-child (luv'child), n. A child of illicit love; a bastard. [Prov. Eng.] love-dart (luv'därt), n. An organ of many pulmonate or terrestrial gastropods, as snails; technically called spiculum amoris. See the quotation.

A curious organ is a pyriform muscular sac, containing one or two slender conical stylets, which can be thrust out through the aperture of the sac; they are found in certain snails, and with them they pierce each other's skin. They are known as love-darts. Pascoe, Zool. Class., p. 166.

love-day† (luv'dā), n. [< ME. love day; < love† + day.] A day appointed for the amicable adjustment of disputes between neighbors by arbitration; a day for reconciliation.

Mo love-dayes and acordes
Then on instrumentes ben cordes.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 695.

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.
Shak., Tit. And., i. 1. 491.

love-drink† (luv'dringk), n. A drink to excite love; a philter or love-potion.

love-favor (luv'fā'vōr), n. Something given to be worn in token of love.

Deck'd with love-favors.
Ep. Hall, Satires, l. 2.

love-feast (luv'fēst), n. 1. Among the primitive Christians, a meal eaten in token of brotherly love and charity, originally in connection with the holy communion, and having in common with it the name of the Lord's Supper. See agape†, 1.—2. An analogous service held at intervals by some religious denominations, as the Moravians, the Methodists, and some German Baptists. The provision is usually very simple, consisting of bread and water, sometimes with tea and coffee. Singing and the interchange of religious experience accompany the repast.

love-feat† (luv'fēt), n. A deed or act of love; a wooing.

Every one his love-feat will advance
Unto his several mistress.
Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 123.

love-flower (luv'flou'ēr), n. A plant of the genus Agapanthus. Also called African lily.

love-grass (luv'grās), n. A grass of the genus Eragrostis.

love-in-a-mist (luv'in-ā-mist'), n. The fennel-flower, Nigella damascena. Also called devil-in-a-bush.—West Indian love-in-a-mist, one of the passion-flowers, Passiflora foetida.

love-in-a-puzzle (luv'in-ā-puz'l), n. Same as love-in-a-mist.

love-in-idleness (luv'in-ī'dl-nes), n. The plant Viola tricolor, the heart's-ease.

Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell;
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidens call it love-in-idleness.
Shak., M. N. D., ii. 1. 168.

love-juicet (luv'jōs), n. In the quotation, the juice of the flower love-in-idleness, the application of which to sleeping eyes was supposed to cause love for the first living object seen after awaking.

But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?
Shak., M. N. D., iii. 2. 37.

love-knot (luv'not), n. [< ME. loveknotte; < love† + knot†.] 1. A knot tied as a symbol of loyalty in love; a true-lovers' knot.

Another divinatory method employed by love-sick maidens is to sleep in a county in which they do not usually reside, and to knit the left garter round the right leg stocking, leaving the other garter and stocking untouched. . . . And if spells fail not, he [the future husband] will appear in a dream with the insignia of his profession. Gay gives a classical example of tying the love-knot, for the purpose of confirming a lover in his passion.

Hampson, Medii Aevi Kalendarium, l. 151.

2. A knot or bow of ribbon given or worn as a sign of loyalty or affection, or as a decoration.

"What is holychurche, trend?" quoth ich. "Charite," he seyde.

"Lyt, and Loue, and Leaute in o by-leyne and lawe,
A love-knotte of leaute and of leel by-leyne."
Piers Plowman (C), xviii. 127.

Leg and arm with love-knots gay,
About me leap'd and laugh'd
The modish Cupid of the day.
Tennyson, Talking Oak.

My light glove on his casque of atel,
My love-knot on his spear!
Whittier, The Hero.

Lovel† (luv'el), n. [< ME. level, < OF. level, luyel, louveau, < ML. lupellus, a young wolf, dim. of L. lupus (> F. loup), a wolf: see lupus.] The word lovel remains as the surname Lovel.] Wolf: a common name formerly for a dog.

According to Stowe, p. 847, William Collingborne was executed in 1484 for writing the following couplet on the king's ministers:

"The Ratte, the Catte, and Lovell our dogge Rule all England under the hogge." Halliwell.

lovelace†, n. [ME. luface; < love† + lace.] A love-knot; a love-token.

Thus, quen pryde schal me pryk, for proves of armes,
The lōke to this luv lace schal lette my hert.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 2438.

Lovelace² (luv'lās), n. [So called after Love-lace, the hero of Richardson's novel "Clarissa Harlowe."] A fine-mannered libertine; a rakish but agreeable man of the world.

love-lasst (luv'lās), n. A sweetheart.
So soone as Tython's love-lasse gan display
Her opall colours in her eastern throne.
Mir. for Mags., p. 776.

loveless (luv'les), a. [< love† + -less.] 1. Void of love; unloving; wanting tenderness or kindness.

Eight years of loveless and uncongenial union.
The American, VI. 283.

2†. Not loved; not attracting love; unlovable.

These are ill-favoured to see to; and yet, as loveless as they be, they are not without some medicinal virtues.
Holland.

love-letter (luv'let'ēr), n. A letter professing love; a letter of courtship; a billet-doux.

love-lies-bleeding (luv' liz-blō'ding), n. A name of the red amaranthus, Amarantus caudatus and A. Cangeticus, with crimson spikes and (sometimes) foliage, and small annual roots. Owing to the weak root, they often fall and lie prostrate in the garden.

lovelily (luv'li-li), adv. [< ME. lovelyly; < lovely + -ly.] In a lovely manner; amiably; in a manner to excite love. [Rare.]

Bot syr Arthure onone syeres ther-aflyre
Ewyne to the Emperour, with honourable kyngis;
Laughte hym upe fulle lovelyly with lordliche knyghtitez,
And fedde hym to the layere, thare the kyng lygges.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 2293.

loveliness (luv'li-nes), n. The character of being lovely; mental or physical attractiveness; capability of exciting love or strong admiration; as, female loveliness; the loveliness of the rose.

Her gentle limbs did she address,
And lay down in her loveliness.
Coleridge, Christabel, l.
In loveliness of perfect deeds.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, xxxvi.

=Syn. See lovely and beautiful.

loveling (luv'ling), n. [< love + -ling.] A little love; a beloved or lovable being.

These frolike lovelings freighted nests doe make.
Sylvester, Ir. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Magnificence.

love-lock (luv'lok), n. 1. Formerly, a long and flowing lock on a man's head dressed separately from the rest of the hair, curled or tied with a ribbon, sometimes with several bows, and allowed to hang down over the neck and in front of the shoulder. It was usual to wear but one, and this was the mark of a man of careful and elegant dress during the first half of the seventeenth century. In some instances two were worn, one on each side. Also called French lock.

How, sir, will you be trimmed? Will you have . . . your love-locks wreathed with a silken twist, or shaggy to fall on your shoulders?
Lyly, Midas, III. 2.

2. Now, a separate lock hanging conspicuously on the head of either a man or a woman.

Her hair . . . escaped in one vagrant love-lock, perfectly curled, that dropped over her left shoulder.
Wilkie Collins, Armadsle, II. 234.

love-lorn (luv'lōrn), a. Forsaken by one's love; forlorn, pining, or suffering from love.

The love-lorn nightingale
Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth well.
Milton, Comus, I. 234.

love-lornness (luv'lōrn'nes), n. The state of being love-lorn. [Rare.]

It was the story of that fair Gostanza who in her love-lornness desired to live no longer.
George Eliot, Romola, Ixi.

lovely (luv'li), a. [< ME. lovely, lucelich, lufli, < AS. luflic, lovely, < lufu, love: see *love*¹, n., and -ly.] The AS. loeflic, dear, pleasant (= OS. loflik, loblik = OFries. loflik, NFries. loeflyck = D. loefelijk = OHG. liublih, liuplih, MHG. lieplich, G. lieblich, lovely, = Dan. Sw. lufsig, pleasant, = Goth. lubbaleiks, lovely), is a diff. word. < loef, = loef, dear, + -lic, E. -ly.] 1. Fitted to excite love or emotion; possessing or characterized by engaging qualities; lovable; attractive; charming; as, a lovely woman; a lovely view; a lovely dress.

Lovely or able to be lovyd, amabilis, diligibilis.
Pronopt. Parv.

A lusty ladde, a stately man to see,
Beganne to woo my sister, not for wealth,
But for hir face was lovely to behelde.
Gascogne, Steele Glas (ed. Arher), p. 51.

Mir. Can you love a man?
Lil. Yes, if the man be lovely,
That is, be honest, modest.

Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, I. 3.
Nothing lovelier can be found
In woman than to study household good.
Milton, P. L., IX. 232.

2. Attractive to appetite or desire; enticing; inviting. [Colloq.]

Come, let's to supper. Come, my friend Coriden, this Trout looks lovely.
J. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 85.

3. Loving; tender.

Many a lovely look on hem he caste.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, I. 156.

Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives.
2 Sam. I. 23.
Send the tittle with a lovely kiss!
Shak., T. of the S., III. 2. 125.

=Syn. 1. Amiable. Lovely (see quotation from Archbishop Trench under amiable); Handsome, Pretty, etc. (see beautiful); pleasing, charming, fair.

lovely (luv'li), adv. [< ME. lovely, luceliche, luflych, < AS. luflice, lovely, < luflic, a., lovely: see *lovely*¹, a.] 1. So as to induce or excite love; very beautifully or pleasantly.

O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet.
Shak., Othello, IV. 2. 68.

2. Lovingly; kindly.

Ligt lovely adonn, & lenge, I the praye, & quat so thy wylle is, we schal wyt after.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), I. 254.

lovely², a. [< ME. lovely, praiseworthy; < *love*² + -ly.] Worthy to be praised. Hallivell.

love-making (luv'mā'king), n. Courtship.

loveman (luv'man), n. [< *love*¹, v., + obj. man.] The common goosegrass or cleavers, Galium Aparine.

love-match (luv'mach), n. A marriage founded upon love; a marriage into which convenience, money considerations, etc., do not enter.

lovemonger (luv'mung'gēr), n. [< *love*¹ + monger.] One who deals in affairs of love; a go-between in courtship. [Rare.]

Thou art an old love-monger, and spakest skilfully.
Shak., L. L. L., II. 1. 253.

Loven's larva. See larva.

love-parrakeet (luv'par'q-kēt), n. A love-bird.

love-parrot (luv'par'rot), n. A love-bird.

love-plant (luv'plant), n. 1. A name of the showy South African portulacaceous plants of the genus Anacampseros, common in cultivation.—2. The Victorian blue creeper, Comesperma volubile, an evergreen twining plant of Australia.

love-potion (luv'pō'shon), n. A potion or draught designed to excite love; a philter.

We waste our best years in distilling the sweetest flowers of life into love-potions.
Longfellow, Hyperion, III. 9.

lover¹ (luv'ēr), n. [Also dial. or obs. lovyer; < ME. lover, lovyere, lufēr, < loven, lorien, love: see *love*¹ and *-er*¹, *-er*¹, -yer.] 1. One who loves; one who has a feeling of love or earnest liking for any person or thing; a zealous admirer; as, a lover of good men or of Christianity; a lover of books or of science; a lover of wine.

Thus theus crist harewilde helle,
And ledde hise lovers to paradyls.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 53.

He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop.
Shak., Hen. VIII., IV. 1. 104.

2. Specifically, one who is enamored; a person in love: now used in the singular almost exclusively of the man, though formerly also of the woman, while the plural is still commonly used of both: as, a lover and his sweetheart; a pair of lovers.

If I freely may discover
What would please me in a lover,
I would have her fair and witty.
B. Jonson, Poetaster, II. 1.

Where is Mark Antony?
The man, my lover, with whom I rode sublime
On Fortune's neck.
Tennyson, Fair Women.

lover², n. An obsolete form of lover.

lover³, a. An obsolete comparative of lovely.

loved (luv'ērd), a. [< *love*¹ + -ed.] Provided with or having a lover.

Who, young and simple, would not be so loved?
Shak., Lover's Complaint, I. 320.

love-ribbon (luv'rib'on), n. A narrow gauze ribbon with satin stripes.

lovely (luv'ēr-li), a. [< lover + -ly.] Like a lover; suitable for a lover; lover-like. [Rare.]

Said the chief abruptly, "I want only herself." . . . A very lovely way of speaking.
George MacDonald, What's Mine's Mine, p. 300.

lovely (lō'vēr-i), n. Same as lovely.

For now he makes no count of perjuries,
Hath drawn false lights from pitch-black lovelies,
Gleamed his braided ware, cogs, swears, and lies.
Marston, Scourge of Villanie, II. 5.

love-scene (luv'sēn), n. A marked exhibition of mutual love; an interview between lovers: a pictured, written, or acted representation of such an interview.

"Mind your own work, my dear," said her husband, gently. Circe resumed a love-scene between Adèle and the tender foryst.
Hannay, Singleton Fonteney, I. 9.

love-shaft (luv'shāft), n. A shaft or dart of love; specifically, Cupid's arrow.

A certain aim he took
At a fair vestal throned by the west,
And loosed his love-shaft smartly from his bow.
Shak., M. N. D., II. 1. 159.

love-sick (luv'sik), a. 1. Sick or languishing with love or amorous desire: as, a love-sick swain.

To the dear mistress of my love-sick mind.
Dryden, Ir. of Virgil's Eclouges, III. 103.

2. Expressive of languishing love.

Where nightingales their love-sick ditty sing.
Dryden.

love-sickness (luv'sik'nes), n. Amorous languor; sickness or longing caused by love.

lovesome (luv'sum), a. [Also dial. loosome, loosom; < ME. lofsom, lofsom, < AS. lofsom, lova- ble, < lufu, love: see *love*¹, n., and -some.] 1. Lovely; winsome.

O lofsom lady bryghte,
How have ye faren syu that ye were heere?
Chaucer, Troilus, v. 465.

One praised her ancles, one her eyes,
One her dark hair and lovesome mien.
Tennyson, The Beggar Maid.

2. Loving; manifesting love or affection.

The thousand bright-leaved shrubs that twined their arms together in lovesome tangles.
Kinglake, Eöthen, VII.

lovesomely (luv'sum-li), adv. Lovingly.

Sac Rosmer took her sister-son,
Set him upon his knee;
He clappit him sae lofsomely,
He turned bath blue and blue.
Rosmer Hafnand (Child's Ballads, I. 256).

love-song (luv'sōng), n. A song expressive of love; an amatory poem.

love-spell (luv'spel), n. A spell to induce love.

love-suit (luv'süt), n. Courtship; solicitation of union in marriage.

Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Shak., Cymbeline, III. 4. 136.

love-tap (luv'tap), n. A slight blow given as a caress.

love-tick (luv'tik), n. A love-tap.
Lord, if the peevish infant fights and flies
With unpar'd weapons at his mothers eyes,
Her frowns (half mix'd with smiles) may chance to show
An angry love-tick on his arm, or so.
Quarles, Emblems, III. 6.

love-token (luv'tō'kn), n. A gift in memory of or as a sign of love.

love-tooth (luv'tōth), n. An inclination to love.

Believe me, Philautus, I am now old, yet have I in my head a love-tooth.
Lyly, Euphues and his England.

love-tree (luv'trē), n. The Judas-tree, Cercis Siliquastrum.

love-trout (luv'trout), n. The pilchard.

It has been termed a love trout when impressed on a token struck at Love in the reign of Charles II.
Day.

love-worth (luv'wërth), n. Worthiness of love.

Homer for himself should be belov'd,
Who ev'ry sort of love-worth did contain.
Chapman, Iliad, To the Reader, I. 73.

love-worthy (luv'wër'wëti), a. Lovable; fitted to inspire love.

loving¹ (luv'ing), p. a. 1. Feeling love or tender regard; affectionate: as, a loving friend.—2. Expressing or manifesting love or kindness: as, loving words; a loving earress.

loving², n. [ME. lovyng, < AS. lofsung, praising, appraising, verbal n. of lofsian, praise: see *love*², v.] Praise; honor.

For to wyne me lovyng
Bothe of emperoure and of kyng.
MS. Cantab. FF. II. 35, f. 152. (Hallivell.)

loving-cup (luv'ing-kup), n. A wine-cup intended for several persons to drink from and to pass from hand to hand. It is commonly made with several handles. See parting-cup.

loving-kindness (luv'ing-kind'nes), n. Kindness which springs from and manifests personal love: used in Scripture to describe God's favor to his people.

My loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him.
Ps. lxxxix. 33.

lovingly (luv'ing-li), adv. With love or affection; affectionately.

lovingness (luv'ing-nes), n. A loving manner; affectionate bearing or conduct.

The only two hands of good-will, loveliness and lovingness.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, II.

lovyer (luv'yēr), n. An obsolete or dialectal form of *lover*¹. Chaucer.

low¹ (lō), v. i. [< ME. lowen, < AS. hlōwan = D. locijen = MLG. loien, lugen = OHG. hlōjan, lōwan, MHG. luogen, lūewen, lūejen, lūen = Icel. hlōa, bellow, low; prob. of imitative origin.] To utter the soft bellow peculiar to animals of the cow kind; moo.

I'd rather hear that cow to low,
Than ha'e a' the kine in Fyvie.
Andrew Lammie (Child's Ballads, II. 196).

The sober herd that low'd to meet their young.
Goldsmith, Des. Vil., I. 118.

low¹ (lō), n. [< *low*¹, v.] The bellow of cattle; a moo.

Bull Jove, sir, had an smiable low.
Shak., Much Ado, v. 4. 48.

low² (lō), a. and n. [< ME. lowe, lough, lowh, loh, loge, lawe, lagh, lah (not in AS., and prob. < Scand.); = OFries. lege, tech = D. laag = MLG. tech, tege = MD. laegh, leegh = LG. leg, lege, leech = Icel. lāgr = Sw. låg = Dan. lar, low; lit. 'lying' (low), from the verb, AS. licgan (pret. lag) (= Icel. liggja, pret. pl. lāgu, etc.), lie: see *lie*¹. Cf. *law*¹ and *log*¹, from the same nt. sourcee.

Hence *lower*², below, etc.] I. a. 1. Lying or being below the general or natural level or plane; depressed in place or position; at some depth or distance downward; deep: as, low ground; a low valley; the lower regions.

I . . . shall set thee in the low parts of the earth. Ezek. xxvi. 20.

The lowest bottom shook Of Erebus. Milton, P. L., il. 883.

2. Below the usual standard of height; falling below the customary level or position: as, a low bow; a low tide (that is, an ebb-tide unusually depressed); low tide or low water (used absolutely, without an article, for the state of the tide or the water at its greatest normal depression of level).

Giving place to flexure and low bending. Shak., Hen. V., iv. 1.

In considering any tide we find, especially in estuaries, that the interval from high to low water is longer than that from low to high water. Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 353.

3. Not high in position; not far above a natural or generally recognized plane or level: as, the sun is low (that is, not far above the horizon); a bird of low flight; a low shelf.

The weakness of our ship, the badness of our sayers, and our ignorance of the coast, caused vs carry but a low sayie. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 105.

A glimmering land, Lit with a low large moon. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

4. Not high in upward extent; having little vertical extension; of no great height; moderate or deficient in altitude or stature; not lofty: opposed to high, lofty, and tall: as, low hills, plants, or trees; a low house or wall; a man of low stature; a low forehead.

Lenges all at layere, and lokes one the wallys Whare they ware laweste the ledes to assaille. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 2430.

He was rather low than tall. C. Mather, Mag. Chris., iii. 1.

A low, lean, swarthy man is he. Whittier, Mogg Megone, i.

Low knolls That dimpling died into each other. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

5. Not high in a scale of reckoning; below the usual rate, reckoning, or value; moderate; meager; cheap: as, low wages, rates, prices; a low estimate; wheat was low.

The salaries were too low to afford even those indulgences which are necessary to the health and comfort of Europeans in a tropical climate. Macaulay, Lord Clive.

6. Not high in number; indicating or indicated by a small number; expressed by numerals indicating few: as, a low number; low latitudes (those expressed in low numbers, and therefore near the equator).—7. Not high in grade, position, station, state, or account; of inferior grade; humble in rank; lowly: as, people of low estate; the lower classes; the lower walks of life.

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels. Ps. viii. 5.

Both low and high, rich and poor, together. Ps. xlix. 2.

Why then was this forbid? why, but to awe? Why, but to keep ye low and ignorant? Milton, P. L., ix. 704.

8. Not high in character or condition. (a) Not full or strong; lacking in fullness, strength, or force; weak; feeble; depressed: as, low fortune; low hopes; a low pulse or state of health; low spirits; his affairs are at a low ebb.

This exceeding posting day and night Must wear your spirits low. Shak., All's Well, v. 1. 2.

Their sinking state and low affairs Can move your pity, and provoke your cares. Addison, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, iv.

(b) Not haughty or proud; meek; lowly.

For loue of her (their) lowe hertis oure lorde hath them graunted Here penance and her purgatorie here on this erthe. Piers Plowman (B), vii. 104.

My Lord Falmouth, . . . his generosity, good-nature, desire of public good, and low thoughts of his own wisdom. Pepys, Diary, Aug. 30, 1668.

(c) Lacking in dignity, refinement, or principle; vulgar; groveling; abject; mean; base: as, low associates; low tastes; a low companion; low life; a low trick.

If they are obliged to stop by day, the boatmen frequently pass away the time in acting some low farces. Picoche, Description of the East, I. 16.

As if nine tenths of the calamities which have befallen the human race had any other origin than the union of high intelligence with low desires. Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

9. Not high in quality or degree. (a) Not excessive or intense; not violent; moderate: as, low heat; low temperature; a low fever.

That acceptance of the luevtable which is the lowest form of content. Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xiv.

(b) In optics, of slight refrangibility (that is, having a relatively great wave-length). (c) In logic, having little logical extension; narrow; predicable of few objects. (d) Not rich or highly seasoned; plain; simple: as, low diet. (e) Holding Low-church views. See Low-churchman.

That variety of evangelical clergyman to which the late Mr. Conybeare gave the name of "low and slow"—a variety which, we believe, flourishes chiefly in the midland counties. Quarterly Rev., Oct., 1860, p. 49.

(f) In biol., of lowly, simple, or generalized structure; not high in the scale of organization; not highly differentiated or specialized: as, low protozoan animals; low cryptogamic plants.

10. Of sounds: (a) Not loud; gentle; soft.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling, etc. See the nouns.—Low potential system, low-resistance system. See multiple arc (under multiple), potential, and resistance.—Low relief. Same as bas-relief.—Low steam, steam having a low pressure or expansive force.—Low Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter: so called because, while included within the limits of the highest of all festivals, that of Easter, it is by comparison lower or less exalted than Easter day itself. It has been the custom since very early times to repeat most of the Easter Sunday service on this day. Officially called in the Roman Catholic Church Dominica in Albis—that is, the Sunday in white garments, from the white robes worn in early times by those who had been baptized just before Easter. Also called Alb Sunday, Quasimodo, and in the Greek Church Antipascha, the Touchoing of St. Thomas or the Sunday of St. Thomas (the gospel being John xx. 19-31), and sometimes New Sunday, ἡ δευτεροπρωτη Κυριακη, literally the second-first Sunday, an expression similar to the 'second-first Sabbath' (translated 'second Sabbath after the first') of Luke vi. 1.—Low to paper, in printing, below the standard height: said of type.—Low water. See water.—Low wine. See wine.—To lie low. See lie. 1.—Syn. 8 (c). Mean, Groveling, etc. (see abject), base, ignoble, vile, vulgar, common, dishonorable, cheap, plebeian, shabby. See list under mean.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling, etc. See the nouns.—Low potential system, low-resistance system. See multiple arc (under multiple), potential, and resistance.—Low relief. Same as bas-relief.—Low steam, steam having a low pressure or expansive force.—Low Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter: so called because, while included within the limits of the highest of all festivals, that of Easter, it is by comparison lower or less exalted than Easter day itself. It has been the custom since very early times to repeat most of the Easter Sunday service on this day. Officially called in the Roman Catholic Church Dominica in Albis—that is, the Sunday in white garments, from the white robes worn in early times by those who had been baptized just before Easter. Also called Alb Sunday, Quasimodo, and in the Greek Church Antipascha, the Touchoing of St. Thomas or the Sunday of St. Thomas (the gospel being John xx. 19-31), and sometimes New Sunday, ἡ δευτεροπρωτη Κυριακη, literally the second-first Sunday, an expression similar to the 'second-first Sabbath' (translated 'second Sabbath after the first') of Luke vi. 1.—Low to paper, in printing, below the standard height: said of type.—Low water. See water.—Low wine. See wine.—To lie low. See lie. 1.—Syn. 8 (c). Mean, Groveling, etc. (see abject), base, ignoble, vile, vulgar, common, dishonorable, cheap, plebeian, shabby. See list under mean.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling, etc. See the nouns.—Low potential system, low-resistance system. See multiple arc (under multiple), potential, and resistance.—Low relief. Same as bas-relief.—Low steam, steam having a low pressure or expansive force.—Low Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter: so called because, while included within the limits of the highest of all festivals, that of Easter, it is by comparison lower or less exalted than Easter day itself. It has been the custom since very early times to repeat most of the Easter Sunday service on this day. Officially called in the Roman Catholic Church Dominica in Albis—that is, the Sunday in white garments, from the white robes worn in early times by those who had been baptized just before Easter. Also called Alb Sunday, Quasimodo, and in the Greek Church Antipascha, the Touchoing of St. Thomas or the Sunday of St. Thomas (the gospel being John xx. 19-31), and sometimes New Sunday, ἡ δευτεροπρωτη Κυριακη, literally the second-first Sunday, an expression similar to the 'second-first Sabbath' (translated 'second Sabbath after the first') of Luke vi. 1.—Low to paper, in printing, below the standard height: said of type.—Low water. See water.—Low wine. See wine.—To lie low. See lie. 1.—Syn. 8 (c). Mean, Groveling, etc. (see abject), base, ignoble, vile, vulgar, common, dishonorable, cheap, plebeian, shabby. See list under mean.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling, etc. See the nouns.—Low potential system, low-resistance system. See multiple arc (under multiple), potential, and resistance.—Low relief. Same as bas-relief.—Low steam, steam having a low pressure or expansive force.—Low Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter: so called because, while included within the limits of the highest of all festivals, that of Easter, it is by comparison lower or less exalted than Easter day itself. It has been the custom since very early times to repeat most of the Easter Sunday service on this day. Officially called in the Roman Catholic Church Dominica in Albis—that is, the Sunday in white garments, from the white robes worn in early times by those who had been baptized just before Easter. Also called Alb Sunday, Quasimodo, and in the Greek Church Antipascha, the Touchoing of St. Thomas or the Sunday of St. Thomas (the gospel being John xx. 19-31), and sometimes New Sunday, ἡ δευτεροπρωτη Κυριακη, literally the second-first Sunday, an expression similar to the 'second-first Sabbath' (translated 'second Sabbath after the first') of Luke vi. 1.—Low to paper, in printing, below the standard height: said of type.—Low water. See water.—Low wine. See wine.—To lie low. See lie. 1.—Syn. 8 (c). Mean, Groveling, etc. (see abject), base, ignoble, vile, vulgar, common, dishonorable, cheap, plebeian, shabby. See list under mean.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling, etc. See the nouns.—Low potential system, low-resistance system. See multiple arc (under multiple), potential, and resistance.—Low relief. Same as bas-relief.—Low steam, steam having a low pressure or expansive force.—Low Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter: so called because, while included within the limits of the highest of all festivals, that of Easter, it is by comparison lower or less exalted than Easter day itself. It has been the custom since very early times to repeat most of the Easter Sunday service on this day. Officially called in the Roman Catholic Church Dominica in Albis—that is, the Sunday in white garments, from the white robes worn in early times by those who had been baptized just before Easter. Also called Alb Sunday, Quasimodo, and in the Greek Church Antipascha, the Touchoing of St. Thomas or the Sunday of St. Thomas (the gospel being John xx. 19-31), and sometimes New Sunday, ἡ δευτεροπρωτη Κυριακη, literally the second-first Sunday, an expression similar to the 'second-first Sabbath' (translated 'second Sabbath after the first') of Luke vi. 1.—Low to paper, in printing, below the standard height: said of type.—Low water. See water.—Low wine. See wine.—To lie low. See lie. 1.—Syn. 8 (c). Mean, Groveling, etc. (see abject), base, ignoble, vile, vulgar, common, dishonorable, cheap, plebeian, shabby. See list under mean.

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 273.

The low moan of an unknown sea. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

(b) Relatively grave in pitch; produced by relatively slow vibrations; depressed; flat: opposed to high.

You would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 383.

High and low. See high.—In or for high and low. See high.—Low area, in meteor., a region where the atmospheric pressure is lower than over the surrounding region.—Low bass, soprano, tenor, either a voice or a voice-part of one of these varieties that extends to an unusually low pitch, or the lower of two basses, sopranos, tenors, etc., in a given piece.—Low blast, in smelting and other metallurgic operations, a blast delivered to the furnace at low pressure, as compared with the pressure of the blast required when the temperature of the furnace-charge approaches the melting-point.—Low boat, in sporting, the boat whose occupants kill the least game or the fewest fish.—Low carte. See carte.—Low caste. See caste. 1.—Low celebration, in the usage of many Anglican churches, a celebration of the eucharist without music or other adjuncts: opposed to high celebration. See high.—Low Church. See Low-church, and Episcopal Church, under episcopal.—Low color. See color.—Low comedian, an actor of farcical comic parts.—Low Countries, the Netherlands.—Low dawn. See dawn.—Low Dutch. See Dutch. 5.—Low embroidery, embroidery which is not in high relief or padded, and is without files or applications.—Lower case. See case. 6.—Lower Chalk, in geol., the name given to a member of the Chalk formation, distinguished by the absence of flints and by the superior hardness of the chalk, which is sometimes used for building-stone.—Lower criticism, culmination, house, etc. See the nouns.—Lower Empire, a name sometimes given to the Byzantine empire.—Lower greensand, in Eng. geol., a division of the Lower Cretaceous. It lies between the Gault and the Wealden. In the south of England it consists of clays, sandstones, and limestones, and is in part fluviatile and in part marine. In the northern counties it is exclusively marine. It is generally considered as being the equivalent of the Upper Neocomian (which see) of continental geologists.—Lower masts, the principal masts.—Lower rigging, the rigging belonging to the lower masts and yards.—Lower Silurian. See Silurian.—Lower table. Same as cutlet. 2.—Lower yards, the lowermost yards of a vessel.—Low fever, German Latin. See the nouns.—Low grounds. See ground. 1.—Low latitude latitude near the equator.—Low mass, milling regard the sacraments and sacramental rites rather as signs or symbols of grace than as having grace necessarily contained in them, and oppose sacerdotalism and ornate ritual. Low-churchmen sympathize with non-episcopal denominations rather than with the Roman Catholic and Greek churches. Opposed to High-churchman. Also called Evangelical.

low-day (lō'dā), n. [< low² + day¹. Cf. high-day.] A day that is not a church-festival.

Such days as wear the badge of holy red Arc for Devotion marked and Sage Delights,
The vulgar Low-days undistinguished, Aro left for Labour, Game, and Sportful Sights.
Campion (Arber's Eng. Garner, III. 286).

low-dilutionist (lō'di-lū'shōn-ist), n. See dilutionist.

low-down (lō'doun), a. Far down in the social scale; degraded; mean. [Colloq.]

Her archaic speech was perhaps a shade better than the low-down language of Broad Run.
E. Eggleston, The Graysons, xviii.

low-down (lō'doun), n. A ravine, or gully, such as is frequented by the sea-elephant of California. C. M. Scammon.

low-downer (lō'dou'nēr), n. [< low-down + -er¹.] A person who is low down in the scale of existence; a very rude or mean person. [Local, U. S.]

They are at least known by a generic byword as Poor Whites, or Low-downers.
R. L. Stevenson, Silverado Squatters, p. 151.

Lowell battery-gun. See machine-gun.

lower¹, lour (lou'ēr, lour), v. i. [< ME. lowren, louren, luren (= MD. loeren), frown; appar. < lure, the face (E. leer), and thus ult. a var. of leer¹, v., q. v.] 1. To frown; seowl; look sullen; watch in sullen silence.

If his knawe knele that shal his cuppe brynge,
He lowreth on hym and axeth hym whi he taugte hym curtelsye?
Piers Plowman (B), x. 311.

This son of anger lowered at the whole assembly.
Steele, Spectator, No. 436.

2. To appear dark or gloomy; be clouded; threaten a storm.

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that low'rd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Shak., Rich. III., l. 1. 3.

The dawn is overcast, the morning lowers,
And heavily in clouds brings on the day.
Addison, Cato, l. 1.

3†. To look bad; appear in bad condition.

Yf this tree lowre [tr. L. tristis sit], an horseme wol him chere. Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 144.

4†. To lurk; crouch; skulk.

We lurked nndyr lee as lowrande wrechis!
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 1446.

5. To strike, as a cloek, with a low prolonged sound; toll the curfew. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

lower¹†, lour† (lou'ēr, lour), n. [< lower¹, v.] 1. A frown; seowl; frowning; sullenness.

Philoctea was jealous for Zelmane, not without so mighty a lower as that face could yield. Sir P. Sidney.

What women know it not . . .
How blisse or hale lyes in their laugh or lowre,
Whilst they enjoy their happy blooming flowre?
Daniel, Complaint of Rosamond, l. 137.

2. Cloudiness; gloominess.

lower² (lō'ēr), v. [< lower, compar. of low², a. Cf. higher, v.] I. trans. 1. To cause to descend; let down; take or bring down: as, to lower the sail of a ship; to lower cargo into the hold.—2. To reduce or bring down, as in height, amount, value, estimation, condition, degree, etc.; make low or lower: as, to lower a wall (by removing a part of the top); to lower the water in a canal (by allowing some to run off); to lower the temperature of a room or the quality of goods; to lower the point of a spear or the muzzle of a gun; to lower prices or the rate of interest.—3. To bring down in spirit; humble; humiliate: as, to lower one's pride; to lower one in the estimation of others.—4. In relief-engraving, (a) to scrape or cut away, as the surface of a block, in such manner as to leave it highest in the middle; or (b) to depress, as any part of the surface which it is desired shall print lightly from being exposed to a diminished pressure. The lowering of the block from the middle to the sides causes the pressure on its whole surface in the press to be practically equal, and thus admits of printing from it without overlays.

5. In music, to change from a high to a low pitch; specifically, in musical notation, to depress; flat: said of changing the significance of a staff-degree or of a note on such a degree by attaching a flat to it either in the signature or as an accidental.—To lower the flag. See flag².

II. intrans. To fall; sink; grow less; become lower in any way.

Thou shalt lower to his level day by day.
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

lower³†, n. [< ME., < OF. lower, let, hire, < L. locare, place, let: see locate.] Hire; reward.

A knyght axed his body when he was deed vpon the scilde crosse, and it was graunted hym of Pilate in lower of his servyse. Melvin (E. E. T. S.), l. 59.

lower-case (lō'ēr-kās), a. and n. [< lower case, used attributively.] I. a. In printing, pertaining to or belonging in the lower case (see case², n., 6): as, the lower-case boxes; lower-case type or letters. Usually abbreviated l. c.

II. n. In printing, the kind of type that is placed in the boxes of the lower case (see case², 6); small letters collectively, as opposed to capitals: as, roman or italic lower-case; the title-words of this dictionary are set in condensed antique lower-case (with capital initials when these are ordinarily used).

lowering (lou'ēr-ing), p. a. Threatening a storm; cloudy overcast: as, a lowering sky.

It will be foul weather to day; for the sky is red and lowering. Mat. xvi. 3.

loweringly (lou'ēr-ing-li), adv. In a lowering manner; with cloudiness or threatening gloom.

lowermost (lō'ēr-mōst), a. superl. [< lower, compar. of low², + -most.] Lower than any other; being at the bottom; occupying the lowest place, as one of a number or series of things; opposed to uppermost: as, the lowermost stones in a foundation; the lowermost stratum of a geological formation.

lowery, loury (lou'ēr-i, lou'ri), a. [< lower¹ + -y¹.] Cloudy; threatening: said of weather. [Colloq.]

Low-German (lō'jēr'man), a. Or pertaining to the language known as Low German (see German); also, in philol., applied to that class of tongues of which Low German is a member, and which includes in addition Dutch, Flemish, Frisian, Old Saxon, Anglo-Saxon, and English.

lowing (lō'ing), n. [< ME. lowynge; verbal n. of low¹, v.] The ordinary bellowing cry of cattle.

Nor is Osiris seen
In Memphis grove or green,
Trampling the unshower'd grass with lowings loud.
Milton, Nativity, st. 24.

low¹, v. t. See low².

low²†, n. See low³.

lowland (lō'land), n. and a. I. n. [See also lawland, lallan; = Sw. lågland = Dan. lavland (cf. Laaland, the name of a Danish island); as low² + land¹.] Land which is low with respect to the neighboring country; a low or level tract of land: most commonly used in the plural.—The Lowlands, a name applied specifically to the southern and eastern part of Scotland; also sometimes to other smaller regions, generally as a common noun.

II. a. Of or pertaining to the Lowlands, or to a low or level country: as, Lowland Scotch; a lowland race; lowland plants or animals.

A Highland lad my love was born,
The Lowland laws he held in scorn.
Burns, Jolly Beggars, song iv.

Lowlander (lō'lan-dēr), n. An inhabitant of the Lowlands, especially of Scotland: opposed to Highlander.

lowlihead (lō'li-hed), n. [< ME. lowlyhede; < lowly + -head¹.] Same as lowlihood. [Archaic.]

The stately flower of female fortitude,
Of perfect wifehood, and pure lowlihead.
Tennyson, Isabel.

lowlihood† (lō'li-hūd), n. [< lowly + -hood.] The state of being lowly; meekness; humility.

lowlily (lō'li-li), adv. In a lowly manner; humbly. Johnson.

low-line (lō'lin), n. The fisherman who catches the fewest fishes on a trip. Also low-liner.

lowliness (lō'li-nes), n. 1. The state of being lowly in mind or disposition; freedom from pride; humility.

In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Phil. ii. 3.

And she hath turned from the pride of sin to the lowliness of truth. Wittier, The Vaudels Teacher.

2. Low state or condition; abjectness; meanness. [Rare.]

The lowliness of my fortune has not brought me to flatter vice. Dryden.

low-lived (lō'līvd), a. 1. Leading a low or mean life; vulgar.

She shall choose better company than such low-lived fellows as he. Goldsmith, Vicar, xiii.

2. Pertaining to or characteristic of low or vulgar life; mean; shabby: as, low-lived manners; a low-lived trick. [Colloq.]

low-living†, a. [< ME. lowe-lyvynge.] Lowly.

To lowe-lyvynge men the lark is resembled,
And to icelle and to lyf-holy that louen alle treunthe.
Piers Plowman (C), xv. 188.

lowly (lō'li), a. [< ME. lowely; < low² + -ly¹.] 1. Not high or elevated; depressed in altitude, situation, or position; lying or being low.

As looks the mother on her lowly babe,
When death doth close his tender loving eyes.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iii. 3. 47.

Where Ufens glides along the lowly lands.
Dryden, Æneid, vii. 1072.

The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly.
Wordsworth, Sonnets, li. 9.

2. Not of a high order or degree; of humble rank or kind; hence, unpretending; rude; mean: as, a lowly swain; a lowly cottage.

These rural poems and their lowly strains.
Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Eclogues, vi. 11.

That Emperor, Caesar, and Augustus, once titles low- lier than that of King, had now become, as they have since remained, titles far loftier. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 138.

3. Humble in manner or spirit; free from pride; modest; meek.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart. Mat. xi. 29.

= Syn. 3. Modest, resigned, submissive, mild.

lowly (lō'li), adv. [< ME. lowely; < lowly, a.] 1. In a humble manner or condition; humbly; meekly; modestly.

Christ full lowly and meekly washed his disciples feet.
Frith, Works, p. 98.

Heaven is for thee too high
To know what passes there; be lowly wise.
Milton, P. L., viii. 173.

2. Without distinction or dignity; meanly.

I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught.
Shak., All's Well, ii. 2. 3.

lowlyhedet, n. See lowlihead.

low-men† (lō'men), n. pl. False dice so loaded as always to turn up low numbers. See fullam and high-men.

low-minded (lō'min'ded), a. Having a mind or spirit animated by no lofty or noble aspirations or thoughts; groveling; unambitious; cowardly; mean.

lowmost†, a. superl. Lowermost; lowest.

low¹, n. A variant of loon¹.

low² (loun), a. [Also lovn, and lownd, lownd; < Icel. loyn, a calm.] Calm; low and sheltered; still; serene; tranquil: as, a low place. [Scotch.]

The night is wondrous lovn.
Sir Roland (Child's Ballads, I. 224).

low-necked (lō'nek), a. Cut low in the neck, as a garment; décolleté; applied particularly to a woman's dress cut low on the shoulders; opposed to high-necked.

lowness (lō'nes), n. [< ME. lownesse; < low² + -ness.] The state or quality of being low, in any sense of the word.

lowpe¹†, v. An obsolete variant of loop¹, lope¹.

lowpe²†, n. An obsolete form of loop¹.

low-pressure (lō'presh'ūr), a. Working with a low degree of steam-pressure: as, a low-pressure engine. See low pressure, under pressure.

lowre¹†, v. i. An obsolete form of lower¹.

lowre²†, n. [Origin obscure.] Money. [Old cant.]

What are they but drunken Beggars? all that they beg being either Lowre or Bowse (money or drink).
Dekker, English Villanies (1632), sig. M.

lowry¹†, n. [Cf. lorey, laurel.] Spurge-laurel. Cotgrave.

lowry² (lou'ri), n.; pl. lowries (-riz). [Cf. lorry.] An open railroad box-car. E. H. Knight.

lowse¹†, n. An obsolete spelling of louse¹.

lowse²†, v. An obsolete form of loose.

low-spirited (lō'spir'ē-ted), a. Having low spirits; without animation and courage; dejected; depressed; not lively or sprightly. = Syn. Dispirited, disheartened, discouraged, desponding, cast down, downhearted.

low-spiritedness (lō'spir'ē-ted-nes), n. A state of depression; dejection of mind.

low-studded (lō'stud'ed), a. Having low or short studs; built low: said of a house or room.

lowt†, v. t. See lout².

lowth (lōth), n. [< low² + -th. Cf. height.] 1†. Lowness. Becon, Works, p. 272.—2. pl. Lowlands. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

low-warp (lō'wārp), a. Same as basse-lisse.

low-worm (lō'wērm), n. [< low⁴ (?) + worm.] In farricry, a disease of horses resembling shingles.

Loxa bark. See bark².

loxarthrus (lok-sār'thrus), n. [< NI., < Gr. λοξός, slanting, oblique (see loxia), + ἄρθρον, a joint.]

In pathol., an obliquity of a joint without dislocation or sprain, as in clubfoot.

loxia (lok'si-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. λοξός, slanting, crosswise, oblique, indirect, ambiguous (> L. luxus, dislocated); prob. akin to λοκρός, crosswise, and to L. obliquus, slanting; see *lux*¹ and oblique.] 1. In pathol., a distortion of the head toward one side; wryneck; torticollis.—2. [cap.] A genus of fringilline birds. (a) A group containing a great number of Fringillidae whose bills are stout, crooked, or otherwise notable. (b) In a restricted sense, the crossbills, or those Fringillidae whose bills are metanathous. In this sense Curvirostra is a synonym. The common red crossbill is Loxia curvirostra; the white-winged crossbill is L. leucoptera; the parrot-crossbill of Europe is L. pygospitacea. There are several others, mostly boreal or alpine birds, of North America, Asia, and Europe. See cut under crossbill.

Loxiadae, Loxiidae (lok-si'ä-dē, -i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Loxia + -ada, -idae.] Same as Loxiinae.

loxian (lok'si-an), a. and n. [< Loxia + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the Loxiinae. Also loxiane.

2. n. A crossbill or some other member of the Loxiinae.

Loxiinae, Loxianae (lok-si-i'nē, -ā'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Loxia + -inae, -anae.] A subfamily of Fringillidae, named from the genus Loxia, containing a number of grosbeaks, crossbills, and other finches agreeing in no definable particulars. Also Loxiadae, Loxiidae. See Coccothraustinae.

loxiine (lok'si-in), a. Same as loxian.

loxoclase (lok'sō-kīaz), n. [< Gr. λοξός, slanting, + κλάσις, fracture.] A variety of orthoclase occurring in grayish-white or yellowish crystals at Hammond, St. Lawrence county, New York. Named on the supposition that it was peculiar in having orthodiagonal cleavage.

loxocosm (lok'sō-kozm), n. [< Gr. λοξός, slanting, + κόσμος, world.] An instrument to illustrate the effect of the obliquity of the earth's axis in different seasons upon the length of the day.

Loxodon (lok'sō-don), n. [NL.: see loxodont.]

1. A genus of sharks. Müller and Henle, 1841.

2. A genus of living and fossil proboscidean mammals, of which the African elephant, Elephas or Loxodon africanus, is the type, distinguished from the Asiatic elephant, Elephas or Eulelephas indicus, by the shallow and open intervals between the ridges of the teeth, the cement forming merely a thin coat. See Eulelephas, elephant. Falconer, 1857. Also Loxodonta.

loxodont (lok'sō-dont), a. and n. [< Gr. λοξός, slanting, + ὀδούς (odont) = E. tooth.] 1. a. Having teeth like those of elephants of the genus Loxodon.

2. n. An elephant with loxodont dentition, as the living African species or any fossil one.

Loxodonta (lok-sō-don'tä), n. [NL.: see Loxodon.] Same as Loxodon, 2. F. Cuvier.

loxodrome (lok'sō-drōm), n. [< Gr. λοξός, slanting, oblique, + δρόμος, a running, course, < δραμειν, run.] A loxodromic line.

loxodromic (lok-sō-drom'ik), a. [As loxodrome + -ic.] Pertaining to oblique sailing, or sailing by the rhumb: as, loxodromic tables.—Loxodromic chart or projection, a chart or projection having the property (among others) that a straight line drawn on it corresponds to a spiral on the sphere which intersects the meridian at the same constant angle. Commonly called Mercator projection.—Loxodromic curve, line, or spiral, the path of a ship when her course is directed constantly toward the same point of the compass, in a direction oblique to the equator, so as to cut all the meridians at equal angles; a rhumb-line. Its stereographic projection is a logarithmic spiral, provided the center of projection is taken in the axis of the sphere. It always approaches the pole, but never reaches it; so that a ship, by following always the same oblique course, would continually approach nearer and nearer to the pole of the earth without ever arriving at it. See rhumb. Also called heliospherical line.

loxodromics (lok-sō-drom'iks), n. [Pl. of loxodromic: see -ics.] The art of oblique sailing by the loxodrome or rhumb, which makes an equal angle with each meridian.

loxodromism (lok-sō-drō-mizm), n. [As loxodrome + -ism.] The tracing of a loxodromic curve or line; the act of moving as if in a loxodromic curve.

loxodromy (lok'sō-drō-mi), n. [As loxodrome + -y.] Loxodromics.

Loxolophodont (lok-sō-lof'ō-don), n. [NL.: see loxolophodont.] A genus of huge extinct mammals with loxolophodont dentition, of the order Amblypoda (Cope) or Dinocerata (Marsh). See Uimatheriidae.

loxolophodont (lok-sō-lof'ō-dont), a. [< Gr. λοξός, slanting, oblique, + λόφος, a crest, + ὀδούς (odont) = E. tooth.] In odontog., obliquely lophodont: applied to a form of dentition, as in Loxolophodon or Uimatherium, in which the upper molars have the anterior internal tubercle connected by oblique crests with two external tubercles, the posterior internal one being rudimentary or wanting.

Loxops (lok'sops), n. [NL., < Gr. λοξός, slanting, oblique, + ὤψ, eye, face.] 1. A genus of birds peculiar to the Sandwich Islands, belonging to the family Dicuidae, having the bill like that of a linnnet. L. coccinea is called the scarlet creeper. It is a small bird, 4½ inches long, of an orange and rufous coloration. L. rosea and L. aurea are other species. The bird of Bow Island, formerly named Loxops inornata, is now known as Pinaroloxias inornatus. J. Cabanis, 1847.

2. A genus of plant-bugs of the family Capsidae, having the head undilated and the beak extending to the hind border of the metapectus. They are all European. Fieber, 1858.

Loxosoma (lok-sō-sō'mä), n. [NL., < Gr. λοξός, slanting, oblique, + σώμα, body.] A remarkable genus of entoproctous Polyzoa, species of which, as L. neapolitanum, are parasitic upon other polyzoans and upon sertularians, being fixed by the narrow end of the stalked body.

Loxosomatidae (lok'sō-sō-mat'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Loxosoma (Loxosomat-) + -idae.] A family of parasitic entoproctous Polyzoa, of solitary habit and long-stalked form, having numerous tentacles, a cement-gland in the stalk, and no partition between the stalk and the cell. Reproduction is by gemmation, the buds separating from the parent and no colonies being formed.

loy¹ (loi), n. [Origin obscure.] In agri., a long narrow spade used in stony lands. Farmer's Encyc. [Prov. Eng.]

loy², n. [By apheresis from alloy.] Same as alloy.

Carato [It.], the touching or refining or loye of gold; a weight or degree called a carat. Florio.

loyal (loi'al), a. [< F. loyal, OF. loial (also leial, leal, > E. leal) = Sp. Pg. leal = It. leale, faithful, loyal (Sp. Pg. legal = It. legale, legal), < L. legalis, pertaining to law: see legal, of which loyal (with leal) is a doublet. Cf. royal, real², regal, similarly related.] 1. True or faithful in allegiance; keeping faith or troth; constant in service, devotion, or regard; not false or treacherous: used especially of allegiance to the sovereign, government, or law, but applied to all other relations of trust or confidence: as, a loyal subject; a loyal friend; to be loyal to one's cause.

The citizens on their part shewed themselves stout and loyal subjects. Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII., p. 130.

There Laodamia with Evadne moves,
Unhappy both! but loyal in their loves. Dryden, Æneid, vi.

2. Pertaining to or marked by allegiance or good faith; manifesting fidelity or devotion: as, loyal professions; loyal adherence to a principle.

Write loyal cantons of contemned love. Shak., T. N., i. 5. 289.

The loyal warmth of Florian is not cold. Tennyson, Princess, ii.

=Syn. See allegiance.

loyalism (loi'al-izm), n. [= F. loyalisme; as loyal + -ism.] Devotion to a government or cause; the animating principle of loyalists.

The sharpness of the collision with the mother country and with domestic loyalism. N. A. Rev., CXXVII. 185.

loyalist (loi'al-ist), n. [= F. loyaliste; as loyal + -ist.] A partisan supporter of an existing government; one who opposes insurrection or revolution.

loyalize (loi'al-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. loyalized, ppr. loyalizing. [< loyal + -ize.] To impart a loyal spirit to; restore to loyalty.

The work of loyalizing that . . . locality has fairly begun. New York Tribune, May 22, 1862.

loyally (loi'al-i), adv. In a loyal manner; faithfully.

loyalness (loi'al-nes), n. Loyalty. [Rare.]

loyalty (loi'al-ti), n. [*< ME. loialte, < OF. loialte, loyauté (also lealte, leante, > E. lealty), loyalty, F. loyauté = Pr. loyalat, leialtat, lealtat = Sp. lealtad = Pg. lealdade = It. lealtà, < ML. legalitat(-s), loyalty, also legality; < legalis, loyal, legal: see loyal. Cf. lealty, legality.] The state or quality of being loyal; devotion to a sovereign or a superior; fidelity in duty, service, love, etc.; firm allegiance; constancy.

Master, go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty. Shak., As you like it, ii. 3. 70.

Upon your loyalty to the state and me,
I do command you, air, not depart Candy.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, ii. 1.

The conformity of our actions to our engagements, whether express or implied, is fidelity. . . . Thus a subject is faithful to the engagement which binds him to the sovereignty of the state. If, in such a case, love is added to fidelity, it becomes loyalty.

Howell, Elements of Morality, p. 85.

=Syn. Allegiance, Loyalty, Fealty. See allegiance.

Loyalist (lō-yō'list), n. [< Loyola + -ist.] A follower of the Spaniard Ignatius of Loyola (1491-1556), founder of the order of Jesuits; a Jesuit. [Rare.]

Of late years that super-politick and irrefragable society of the Loyalists have propt up the ivy.

Howell, Dodona's Grove, p. 60.

lozel, n. and a. See lozel.

lozenge (loz'enj), n. and a. [Early mod. E. lozenge; < ME. losange, losenge, losynge; < OF. lozenge, losange, lozenge, a lozenge, a quadrilateral, a window-pane, also a little square cake of preserved herbs, flowers, etc., F. losange (> ML. losengia, lozengia, > It. lozangia = Sp. losanje, a rhombus), < OF. losange, losenge, lozenge, flattery, guile, deceit (whence, from the notion of 'flattery,' 'praise,' its use for 'an epitaph, a gravestone, square slab,' and finally 'a window-pane, flat square cake,' etc.), < los, praise.] 1. n. 1. A plane figure with four equal sides, having two acute and two obtuse angles, also called a diamond; a rhomb; also, formerly, any oblique parallelogram.

The rhombus or lozenge figure so visible in this order was also a remarkable form of battle in the Grecian cavalry. Sir T. Broome, Garden of Cyrus, i. 2. Something resembling such a figure in form. (a) In her.: (1) A common bearing of this form; it is always set with the acute angles above and below. (2) The escutcheon appropriated to women, usually of more or less regular lozenge shape. On a hatchment the bearings of a widow are so displayed.

With coronues wrought ful of lozynges. Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1317.

(b) A small cake of sugar, or confection, often medicated, originally in the form of a rhomb, but now variously shaped.

For to make lozing[e]s to comfort the stomach. Pathway to Health, bl. 1. (Nares.)

(c) A pane of glass for window-glazing, either lozenge-shaped or square, but intended to be set diagonally; a quarrel. (d) An envelop-blank cut out by a punching-machine. (e) In the cutting of brilliants, one of the four quoins of the upper surface or crown. See quoin. (f) A spangle. Prompt. Parv., p. 313.—Lozenges in cross, in her., a cross usually of four lozenges. When, more rarely, five or a larger number of lozenges are used, one lozenge forms the center of the cross.

2. a. In decorative art, divided by diagonal lines into diamonds or lozenges: a common distribution of decorative design in the fourteenth century: as, a lozenge pattern. Tapestries of this epoch are often so divided, each lozenge being filled with some heraldic bearing, and the background of miniatures in manuscripts often has the same pattern.

lozenge-coach (loz'enj-koch), n. A dowager's carriage, as bearing a widow's arms on a lozenge.

I am retired hither like an old summer-dowager: only that I have no toad-ester to take the air with me in the back part of my lozenge-coach, and be scolded.

Walpole, To Morden (1746), II. 52.

lozenged (loz'enjd), a. [< lozenge + -ed².] 1. Formed in the shape of a lozenge.

The lozenged panes of a very small latticed window. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxviii.

2. In zoöl.: (a) Rhomboidal or rhombic. (b) Divided by raised lines into rhomboidal or lozenge-shaped spaces.

lozengee, a. See lozenge.

lozenge-fret (loz'enj-fret), n. See fret³.

lozenge-goad (loz'enj-gōd), n. A goad-spur the point of which is approximately lozenge-shaped. Also lozenge-spur.

lozenge-graver (loz'enj-grā'vēr), n. A graving-tool having a rhomb- or diamond-shaped cross-section. The belly of the graver is formed by two faces intersecting at an angle of less than 90°.

lozenge-machine (loz'enj-mā-shēn'), n. A confectioners' machine for rolling dough, paste, or confections into thin sheets which are cut by means of stamps into lozenge-shaped cakes or pieces.

lozenge-molding (loz'enj-mōl'ding), n. Same as lozenge-fret (which see, under fret³).

lozenge-shaped (loz'enj-shāpt), a. Having the form of a lozenge or rhomb; by extension, square but set diagonally. Compare lozenge.

lozenge-spur (loz'enj-spēr), n. Same as lozenge-goad.

lozenge-tool (loz'enj-tōl), n. Same as lozenge-graver.

Lozenge-molding.

lozengewise (loz'onj-wiz), adv. In her., arranged in the form of a lozenge.

lozengy, lozengee (loz'eu-ji, -jé), a. [OF. lozengé, < lozengc, lozenge: see lozenge.] In her., having the whole surface covered with lozenges or formed into lozenge-shaped divisions. This is very often depicted with exact squares set cornerwise.—Lozengy Barry, in her., having the whole surface occupied with lozenges which are divided again barwise or horizontally, therefore divided into triangles of which those of one tincture point up and the others down.

L. S. An abbreviation of Latin locus sigilli, 'place of the seal': usually inserted within brackets in copies of documents to indicate the position of the seal in the originals.

L. S. D., l. s. d. An abbreviation of Latin (Middle or New Latin) libra, solidi, denarii—that is, pounds, shillings, pence; hence, colloquially, money; cash; funds. Also £ s. d. [Eng.]

Lt. A contraction of Lieutenant or of its abbreviation Lieut.

lu (lō), n. and v. Same as *loo*2.

lubbard (lub'jrd), n. and a. [Formerly also lubber; a var., with substituted suffix -ard, of lubber.] I. n. Same as lubber.

Thou slovenly lubbard, and toylsh fellow, what idle toys goest thou fantasieating!
Benvenuto, Passengers' Dialogues (1612).

It was now the part of the huge porter to step forward; but the lubbard was . . . overwhelmed with confusion of spirit.
Scott, Kenilworth, xxx.

II. a. Lubberly.
Conscious how much the hand
Of lubbard Labour needs his watchful eye.
Cowper, Task, lll. 400.

lubber (lub'er), n. [Formerly also lubar, lubberd, and lubbard; < ME. lubre, lobur, akin to loby, E. looby, < W. llob, a dolt, lubber: see *lob*1.] A heavy, clumsy fellow; a sturdy, awkward dolt: applied especially by sailors to any one of the crew who is deficient in seamanship.

Grete lubres and longe that loth were to swynke
Clothedem hem in copes to bee knownen for bretheren.
Piers Plowman (A), ProL, l. 52.

They went to the Grammer schole little children; they came from thence great lubbers.
Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 88.

"It will be long," said the master then,
"Ere this great lubber do thrive on the sea."
The Noble Fisherman (Child's Ballads, V. 331).

Lubber's hole (naut.), the vacant space between the head of a lower mast and the edge of the top, through which Rigging of Ship's Top.

ff, top; gg, lubber's holes; A B, futtock-shrouds.

sailors may mount without going over the rim by the futtock-shrouds. Formerly, when tops were differently constructed, it was regarded by seamen as fit to be used only by lubbers and greenhorns.—Lubber's point (naut.). Same as lubber-line.

lubber (lub'er), v. i. [< lubber, n.] To sail in a lubberly or clumsy manner. [Rare.]

We set our primitive sail; and . . . soon found ourselves lubbering over the beautiful lake at a speed of from two to two and a half miles an hour.
The Century, XXX. 742.

lubber-cock (lub'er-kok), n. A turkey-cock. [Prov. Eng.] lubber-grasshopper (lub'er-gras'hop-er), n. 1. The clumsy locust, Brachystola magna, a very large lubberly insect common on the great plains of the western United States. See cut under Brachystola.—2. The large short-winged insect Romalea microptera, which abounds in the Gulf States and feeds on all succulent plants. It is notable as having no known natural enemies. It is from 2.75 to 3.15 inches long, very thick-bodied, and clumsy in its movements.

lubberhead (lub'er-hed), n. A stupid fellow. [Prov. Eng.] lubber-hole (lub'er-höl), n. Same as lubber's hole (which see, under lubber).

Lubberland (lub'er-land), n. The land of Cockaigne.
Good mother, how shall we find a pig if we do not look about for it? will it run off o' the spit into our mouths, think you, as in Lubberland, and cry we, we?
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fstir, lll. 2, Peter's Prophecy.

lubber-line (lub'er-lin), n. Naut., a black vertical line drawn on the inside of the compass-box, which represents the vessel's head in steering. Also called lubber's point.

lubberliness (lub'er-li-nes), n. The state or condition of being lubberly; sturdy clumsiness.

You, like a lazy hulk, whose stupendous magnitude is full big enough to load an elephant with lubberliness.
Tom Brown, Works, il. 179.

lubberly (lub'er-li), a. [*< lubber + -ly*1.] Like a lubber; clumsy; awkward.

By my Soul, the Girl is spoll'd already — d'ye think she'll ever endure a great lubberly Tar-pawlin?
Congree, Love for Love, il. 10. (Davies).

lubberly (lub'er-li), adv. [< lubberly, a.] Clumsily; awkwardly.

lubberwort (lub'er-wert), n. Any food or drink which makes one idle and stupid. [Prov. Eng.] lubric (lü'brik), a. [< OF. lubrique, slippery, lascivious, F. lubrique, lascivious, = Sp. lubrico = Pg. It. lubrico, slippery, lascivious, < L. lubricus, slippery, uncertain, deceitful.] 1. Having a smooth surface; slippery; hence, voluble; glib.

Then starts she suddenly into a throng
Of short thick sobs, whose hound'ring volleys float,
And reel themselves over her lubric throat,
In panting murmurs.
Crashaw, Musick's Duel.

2. Unsteady; wavering.
Through the deep and lubric waves of state and court.
Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 208.

3. Lascivious; wanton; lewd.
Why were we hurried down
This lubric and adulterate age
(Nay, added fat pollutions of our own),
To increase the steaming ordures of the stage?
Dryden, Ode to the Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew, l. 63.

[Obsolete or rare in all uses.]
lubrical (lü'bri-kal), a. [< lubric + -al.] Same as lubric.

What, shall thy lubrical and glibbery muse Live!
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

lubricant (lü'bri-kan), n. Same as teprechawn.
By the mandrake's dreadful groans,
By the Lubricant's sad moans,
By the noise of dead men's bones
In charnel-houses rattling.
Drayton, Nymphidia, l. 418.

lubricant (lü'bri-kan), a. and n. [< L. lubrican(t)-s, ppr. of lubricare, make smooth: see lubricate.] I. a. Lubricating.

II. n. Any natural or artificial material that may be used to lubricate the rubbing surfaces of machinery, in order to lessen their friction upon each other. Natural non-volatile oils and greases are the typical lubricants; but the variety of materials and compounds used is very great, including some metallic alloys.

lubricant-tester (lü'bri-kan-tes'ter), n. A form of testing-machine for determining the lubricating values of oils. This tester acts by recording the friction developed under a given power.

lubricate (lü'bri-kät), v. t.; pret. and pp. lubricated, ppr. lubricating. [< L. lubricatus, pp. of lubricare (> It. lubicare = Sp. Pg. lubicar), make slippery, < lubricus, slippery: see lubric.]

1. To make smooth or slippery; supply or smear with some substance, especially one of an oily or greasy nature, for the purpose of diminishing friction: as, to lubricate the bearings of a machine.

There seemed a pool of honey about his heart, which lubricated all his speech and action with fine jets of mead.
Emerson, English Traits, p. 291.

2. In photog., to coat or smear (a print) with some glazing agent, as Castile soap dissolved in alcohol, or a compound of beeswax and Venice turpentine, as a preliminary to burnishing.

lubricate (lü'bri-kät), a. [< L. lubricatus, pp. of lubricare, make slippery: see lubricate, v.] Slippery. [Rare.]

lubricating-oil (lü'bri-kät-ing-oil), n. Any oil that is used or is suitable for lubrication; specifically, a thick oil produced in the process of refining paraffin-oil and petroleum, which, when submitted to cold, deposits in abundance crystals of paraffin.

lubrication (lü-bri-kä'shon), n. [*< L. as if lubricatio(n)-, < lubricare, make slippery: see lubricate.] The act of lubricating, or the state of being lubricated.

There is a sort of previous lubrication, such as the bo-constrictor applies to any subject of digestion, which is requisite to familiarize the mind with a startling or a complex novelty.
De Quincey, Style, l.

lubricative (lü'bri-kät-iv), a. [< lubricate + -ive.] Capable of lubricating; supplying lubrication. [Rare.]

What he desires is that the prig should be good in some oily and lubricative way, so as not to jar the nerves of those who are less good.
S. Lanier, The English Novel, p. 267.

lubricator (lü'bri-kä-tor), n. [< lubricate + -or.] One who or that which lubricates. Specifically—(a) A device or contrivance for keeping the rubbing parts of machines, bearings, shafting, etc., supplied with some lubricant to diminish friction. These appliances are made in a great variety of forms, and may be divided into three classes—those for lubricating the cylinders of motors, those for lubricating the axles of cars and road-vehicles, and those for shafting and machinery in general. In all the aim is the same, to furnish a limited but constant supply of the lubricant to the moving parts. See impermeator. (b) A machine for waxing bullets, so that when fired they will clean the gun; also, a wad containing a lubricant and followed by a felt washer, attached to the projectile in a rifled gun that the operation of firing may clean the piece. (c) In photog., a glazing agent, as a solution of Castile soap in spirit, or a compound of beeswax and turpentine, with which prints are smeared before burnishing to improve the gloss.—Lubricator alarm-signal, in naut., a device for giving an alarm when, from failure of lubrication, a journal becomes heated.

lubricity (lü-bris'i-ti), n. [< F. lubricité = Sp. lubricidad = Pg. lubricidade = It. lubricità, slipperiness, lasciviousness, < ML. lubricita(t)-s, slipperiness, < L. lubricus, slippery: see lubric.]

1. The state or quality of being lubre or slippery; slipperiness of surface, literal or figurative; hence, instability; transitoriness; evanescence; evasiveness.

There cannot be two more pregnant instances of the Lubricity and instability of Mankind than the Decay of these two ancient Nations [the Greeks and the Jews].
Howell, Letters, il. 57.

I take this evanescence and lubricity of all things . . . to be the most unhandsome part of our condition.
Emerson, Experience.

That learned jurisconsult, with characteristic lubricity, had evaded the dangerous honor.
Molloy, Dutch Republic, il. 138.

2. Capacity for lubrication.
The mintage adds to the lubricity of the oyl, and the oyl preserves the mintage from inspissation, and contracting the consistency of a jelly.
Gay, Works of Creation, il.

3. Lasciviousness; lewdness; salacity.
Wantonness and lubricity.
Dryden.

Of these [symbols of Priapus] the goat is one that most frequently occurs, . . . as this animal has always been distinguished for its lubricity.
Knights, Anc. Art and Myth, (1876), p. 21.

When one looks at the popular literature of the French at this moment, . . . and at the life of which this literature of theirs is the index, one is tempted to make a goddess out of a word of their own, and then, like the town clerk of Ephesus, to ask: "What man is there that knoweth not that the city of the French is a worshippier of the great goddess Lubricity?"

M. Arnold, Nineteenth Century, XV. 678.

lubricous (lü'bri-kus), a. [< L. lubricus, slippery: see lubric.] 1†. Same as lubric.

Much lesse shall I positively determine anything in matters so lubricous and uncertain.
Glanville, Pre-existence of Souls, xil.

2. Having a smooth, slippery surface, appearing as if oiled or varnished, as certain algae and the elytra of certain Coleoptera.

lubrifaction (lü-bri-fak'shon), n. [Irreg. < L. lubricus, slippery, + factio(n)-, a making, < facere, pp. of facere, make: see -fy.] The act or operation of lubricating, or of making slippery.

The sixth cause is lubrifaction and relaxation; as we see in medicines emollient, such as are milk, honey, mallowes, etc.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 41.

lubrifaction (lü'bri-fi-kä'shon), n. [= F. lubrifaction; as lubrify + -ation: see -fy, -fication.] Same as lubrifaction.

lubrify, v. t. [< OF. lubrifier, make slippery, contr. < L. lubricus, slippery, + -ficare, make: see -fy.] To make slippery. Cotgrave.

Lucanidæ (lü-kan'i-dé), n. pl. [NL., < Lucanus + -ida-.] A family of lamellicorn coleopterous insects, the lamellæ of whose antennal club are incapable of close apposition, and whose mandibles are large and powerful in the male; the stag-beetles. The term of the lucanida is generally elongate, and the elytra cover the pygidium; in some there are stridulating organs. They are usually of plain dark colors, but some, such as species of Lamprina in Australia and of Chiasognathus in Chile, are brilliant. Upward of 500 species are described. They most abound in warm wooded countries, and live during the day in trunks of trees, logs, etc., taking flight at dusk. The larvae of the European species live in willow and oak, where they remain untransformed for years. See Lucanus. The same or a corresponding group is called Lucanida, Lucanides, Lucanites, Lucanoides, etc.

Lucanus (lü-kä-nus), n. [NL., so called in allusion to the glistening elytral surface, < ML. lucanus, sunrise, < L. luceo, shine: see lucent.] The typical genus of Lucanidæ; stag-beetles proper, with emarginate eyes, geniculate antennae, mentum entire, covering the ligula and maxilla, and fore tibiae pectinate. The branching antler-like mandibles of the North American L. elaphus are sometimes three fourths of an inch long. L. cervus is the corresponding European species. L. dama is a large stag-beetle of the United States, from 9 to 18 times long, with smaller pincer-like mandibles with a single snag. See Lucanidae and stag-beetle.

lucarne (lū-kār'n), n. [F. lucarne, OF. lucarne, a roof-window (= Goth. lukarn, a light, lamp), < L. lucerna, a lamp: see lucern.] A dormer- or roof-window; also, a light or small window in a spire.

lucasite (lū'kas-it), n. [Named after Dr. H. S. Lucas.] A variety of vermiculite occurring with corundum in Macon county, Georgia.

lucayne (lū-kā'n), n. [Also dial. leucome; an orig. error for lucarne (?).] In arch., same as lucarne.

Lucchese (lū-kēs' or -kēs'), a. and n. [It. Lucchese, < Lucca (see def.).] I. a. Of or pertaining to the city of Lucca in Italy, or to its inhabitants.

The most precious of the Lucchese relics, a cedar-wood crucifix, carved, according to the legend, by Nicodemus, and miraculously conveyed to Lucca in 782. Encyc. Brit., XV. 38.

II. n. sing. and pl. An inhabitant or inhabitants of the city or province (formerly a republic, afterward a duchy) of Lucca, on the north-west coast of Italy.

luce (lūs), n. [Formerly also lucie, lucy; < ME. luce, leuse, < OF. lus, luz (dim. lucl and luclat) = Pg. lucio, a luce, < LL. lucius, a fish, perhaps the pike.] The pike (a fish), especially when full-grown.

In heraldry the luce or pike occurs in the arms of the Lucy or Lucie family so far back as the reign of Henry II.

Slend. They (the Shallows) may give the dozen white luces in their coat. . . . Shal. The luce is the fresh fish.

The mighty luce or pike is taken to be the tyrant, as the salmon is the king of the fresh waters.

A pike, first a Hurlig pick, then a Pickerel, then a Pike, then a Luce or Lucie.

luce² (lūs), n. [Origin obscure.] A rut. [Prov. Eng.] lucencet, n. [ME. lucense, < *OF. lucence = Sp. lucencia, < L. lucent (t-s), shining: see lucet.] The state or quality of being lucent; light.

O lux vera, graunt us gowr lucence.
That with the spryte of error I nat seduct be.

lucency (lū'sen-si), n. [See lucence.] The state or quality of being lucent; brightness; luster; splendor. [Rare.]

A name of some note and lucency, but lucency of the Nether-fire sort.

lucent (lū'sent), a. [= F. luisant = Sp. lucente, < L. lucent (t-s), ppr. of lucere, shine; connected with lux (luc-), light, lumen, a light, luna, the moon, etc.; < √ luc, shine; = Teut. √ luh, shine, in AS. leóht, etc., light: see further under light.] From L. lucere are also *ult. E. lucern*¹, lucid, elucidate, translucent, etc.] Bright; shining; lustrous; resplendent.

I meant the day-starre should not brighter rise,
Nor lend like influence from his lucent seat.

B. Jonson, Epigrams, lxxv.
Lucent syrups tinct with cinnamon.

lucern¹ (lū'sern), n. [ME. lucern, < OF. lucerne, luserne, luserne, lucarne, a lamp, also glow-worm, also, like F. lucarne, a roof-window (see lucarne), = Sp. lucerna, < L. lucerna, a lamp, < lucere, shine: see lucet.] A lamp.

A multitude of wreaths, tablets, masks, festoons, lucernes, [and] geni holding lyres.

lucern² (lū'sern), n. [Also lusern, luserne, luzern, luzerne, lyserne; appar. < OF. lucervere, lucoverere, lucoveriere, fem. of loup-cervier, a lynx (see loup-cervier), confused with OF. luberne, luperne, lomberne, a female leopard or panther, and its hide.] 1. f. A lynx; also, the fur of the lynx, formerly in great esteem.

The Lyserne, the Beauer, the Sable, the Martron, the black and dunne fox.

2. f. A sort of hunting-dog.

Let me have
My Lucerns too, or dogs inur'd to hunt Beasts of most rapine.

lucern³, n. See lucerne.

lucerna (lū'sér-nā), n. [L.: see lucern.] 1. An ancient lamp. See *lucern*¹.—2. A quasi-popular name for the lantern-gurnard, Trigla obscura, given in allusion to the brilliant silvery band along the side of this fish.—3. [cap.] A genus of pulmonate gastropods, of the family Helicidae, having the aperture toothed and more or less twisted. Humphreys, 1797.

lucernal (lū-sér-nal), a. [*Lucern*¹ + -al.] Of or pertaining to a lamp or other artificial light.

—Lucernal microscope. See microscope.

Lucernaria (lū-sér-nā-rī-ā), n. [NL., < L. lucerna, a lamp: see lucern.] The typical genus of Lucernariidae. These animals are small, gelatinous, semi-transparent, and variously colored or phosphorescent marine organisms (jellyfishes), either swimming freely by rhythmical contraction and expansion of the umbrellae, or fixed to some submerged object by means of a stalk or peduncle which grows out of the back (aboral surface) of the disk and constitutes a hydrorhiza or rootstalk. In this latter state the animal is trumpet- or bell-shaped, resembling a little hand-bell standing on the end of its handle, with the other end expanded into an eight-rayed limb or disk, each ray ending in a little bundle or tuft of tentacles, and the center of the disk being occupied by a single polypite with a four-lobed mouth leading into the body-cavity. See Lucernariidae.

Lucernariadæ (lū'sér-nā-rī-ā-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lucernaria + -adæ.] An order of the subclass Lucernariida, class Hydrozoa, including those discophorans or jellyfishes whose polypite is single and may be fixed by a proximal aboral hydrorhiza. The umbrellar margin has short tentacular processes, and the reproductive elements are developed in the primitive hydrosome without the intervention of free zooids. The genus Lucernaria may be regarded as the type, and the group itself is by some considered a synthetic or generalized form of structure, like that from which various specialized forms of aculephs may have been derived.

lucernarian (lū-sér-nā-rī-ān), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the genus Lucernaria or the Lucernariidae; calycozoan.

II. n. A member of the genus Lucernaria or of the family Lucernariidae; a calycozoan. See cut at Hydrozoa (fig. 5).

Lucernariida (lū-sér-nā-rī-dī-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lucernaria + -ida.] A subclass of Hydrozoa, in which the base of the hydrosome is developed into an umbrella in the walls of which are the reproductive organs. It is a prime division of hydrozoans, equivalent to Discophora in a common acceptation of that term, and has been divided like the latter into three orders: Rhizostomea or Rhizostomida, free and with multiple polypites; Monostomea or Pelagiidae, free and with single polypite; and Lucernariadæ, free or fixed and with single polypite. The last consists of one family, co-extensive with the order, and is also called Calycozoa. See Discophora.

lucernaridan (lū'sér-nā-rī-dān), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Lucernariida.

II. n. A member of the Lucernariida; a discophoran; an acraspedote medusan or jellyfish.

Lucernariidæ (lū'sér-nā-rī-dī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lucernaria + -idæ.] The typical family of Lucernariadæ. It contains discophorans with the umbrellar margin simple and undivided, without hollow arms or margin-laps, and with simple tentacles, and having on the exumbrella a prolongation by means of which they affix themselves to foreign bodies. Genera referred to this family are Lucernaria, Depastrum, and Carduella.

lucernaroid (lū-sér-nā-roid), n. [Lucernaria + -oid.] The reproductive zooid of any of the Lucernariida.

lucerne, lucern³ (lū-sér-n'), n. [F. lucerne, formerly luserne, lucerne.] A leguminous plant, Medicago sativa, a highly valuable pasture- and forage-plant, cultivated from ancient times, now widely spread in temperate climates. In the United States it has been cultivated with especial success in southern California. It is greatly relished by animals, and under favorable conditions yields several crops in a year. It is also an improver of soil. In the western United States it is best known under the Spanish name alfalfa, having been introduced into California from South America. Also called Spanish trefoil, French, Brazilian, or Chilian clover, and in British usage medic or purple medic.

Lucerne hammer. See *hammer*¹.

Lucianist (lū'shian-ist), n. [Lucian (see def.) + -ist.] 1. One of the followers of Lucian or Lucan, a Marcionite leader in the second century, who taught that the actual soul and body of a man would not come forth in the resurrection, but some representative of them.—2. Same as Collucianist.

lucid (lū'sid), a. [= F. lucide = Sp. lucido = Pg. It. lucido, < L. lucidus, light, bright, clear, < lucere, shine: see lucet.] 1. Emitting light; shining; bright; resplendent: as, the lucid orbs of heaven. [Poetical, except in some technical uses. See second quotation, and def. 5.]

A court
Compact of lucid marbles.

Lucid stars are those which are visible through a telescope. Newcomb and Holden, Astronomy, p. 45.

2. Transmitting or reflecting light; clear; transparent; pellucid: as, a lucid stream.

Before each lucid panel fuming wood
A censer fed with myrrh and spiced wood.

So wide the loneliness, so lucid the air.

3. Marked by intellectual clearness or brightness; free from obscurity or confusion of thought, or, specifically, from delirium; clear-headed; sane: as, a lucid mind; lucid perceptions; lucid intervals in insanity.

After some gentle Slumbers, and unusual Dreams, about the dawnings of the Day, I had a lucid Interval.

4. Presenting a clear view; easily understood; distinct: as, a lucid order or arrangement; a lucid style of writing.

A singularly lucid and interesting abstract of the debate.

5. In entom.: (a) Smooth and very shining; reflecting light like polished metal. (b) Giving light; phosphorescent; luciferous.—6. In bot., having a shining surface.—Lucid interval, in insanity, a period of sanity occurring in the midst of insane behavior: an intermission resembling restoration of health, as distinguished from a mere diminution of the disease.

lucida (lū'si-dā), n.; pl. lucidæ (-dē). [NL. (see stella, star), fem. of lucidus, bright: see lucid.] A star easily seen by the naked eye, as opposed to a telescopic star; also, the brightest star of a constellation, or the brightest component of a double or multiple star.

lucidity (lū'sid-i-ti), n. [= F. lucidité = It. lucidità, < L. as if lucidita* (t-s), < lucidus, light, bright, clear: see lucid.] The state of being lucid, in any sense of that word; lucidness; especially, clearness of conception or expression; intellectual transparency.

He [Voltaire] looked on things straight; and he had a marvelous logic and lucidity.

Thought-transference is out of the question, and M. Richet has recourse to the theory of a sort of clairvoyance to which he gives the generic name of lucidity, a vision in which the ordinary optical impediments no longer act as such.

= Syn. Clearness, Plainness, etc. See perspicuity.

lucidly (lū'sid-li), adv. In a lucid manner; with brightness; clearly.

He argued the matter during two hours, and no doubt lucidly and forcibly.

lucidness (lū'sid-nes), n. The quality or state of being lucid; lucidity; transparency.

The lucidness was constant, though the vial that contained it was kept stoppt.

Lucifer (lū'si-fēr), n. [= F. Lucifer = Sp. Lucifero = Pg. Lucifer = It. Lucifero, < L. lucifer, light-bringing, applied to the moon (Diana), and to the morning star (Venus), and poet. to day, < lux (luc-), light, + ferre = *E. bear*¹: see lucet, *light*¹, and *bear*¹. The equiv. Gr. word is φωσφόρος: see phosphorus.] 1. The morning star; the planet Venus when she appears in the morning before sunrise: when she follows the sun, or appears in the evening, she is called Hesperus, or the evening star. Applied by Isaiah figuratively to a king of Babylon.

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!

2. The prince of darkness; Satan. [This use arises from an early opinion that in the above passage from Isaiah reference was made to Satan.]

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, Never to hope again.

Shak., Hen. VIII., III. 2. 371.
Pandemonium, city and proud seat
Of Lucifer; so by allusion call'd
Of that bright star to Satan paragon'd.

Milton, P. L., x. 425.

3. [f. c.] A match ignitable by friction with any surface, or with a specially prepared surface. It is usually made of a small splint of wood tipped with some inflammable substance, as a mixture of potassium chlorate and antimony sulphid, or more commonly of phosphorus and potassium nitrate. Also called lucifer match.

Flowering Branch of Lucerne (Medicago sativa). a., flower; b., fruit.

Every traveller should provide himself with a good handy steel, proper flint, and unflinching tinder, because lucifers are liable to accidents. J. T. Fields, Underbrush, p. 189.

4. The typical genus of Luciferidae.—5. (a) A genus of humming-birds. A species of northern Mexico and adjoining parts of the United States is Trochilus or Calothorax lucifer, having the gorget prolonged into a ruff. (b) [l. c.] Any humming-bird of the genus Calothorax or Lucifer, of which there are several species.

Luciferian¹ (lū-si-fē'ri-an), a. [< Lucifer (see def.) + -ian.] Of or pertaining to Lucifer or Satan; devilish.

That all that luciferian excrement be blotted out.

Jer. Taylor, Dissuasive from Popery, II. § 19.

Luciferian² (lū-si-fō'ri-an), a. and n. [< Lucifer (see def.) + -ian.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Lucifer, Bishop of Cagliari in the island of Sardinia during the fourth century, or to his followers.

II. n. One of the followers of Lucifer, Bishop of Cagliari. The Luciferians were vehement upholders of the Neene faith, and separated themselves from their fellow-Catholics solely on the ground that the latter showed undue leniency to those who had been received back into the church after forsaking Arrianism. Also Luciferite.

Luciferidae (lū-si-fēr'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lucifer, 4, + -idae.] A family of thoracostracous or podophthalmic crustaceans, typified by the Devil Shrimp, a species of Lucifer.

genus Lucifer, and characterized by the absence of the last pair of thoracic legs. They are consequently excluded from Decapoda, and are either placed with the opossum-shrimps and mantis-shrimps in Stomatopoda, or made a separate tribe, Aplopoda, as by Dana.

Luciferite (lū-si-fēr'it), n. [< Lucifer (see Luciferian) + -ite.] Same as *Luciferian*².

luciferous (lū-sif'e-rus), a. [< L. lucifer, light-bringing (see Lucifer), + -ous.] 1. Giving light; affording light or means of discovery. Boyle, Works, IV. 394. [Rare.]—2. In entom., having phosphorescent organs; applied to insects which emit light, as the glow-worm.—3. [cap.] Of or pertaining to Lucifer or Satan; Luciferian; Satanic. [Rare.]

This Luciferous and gluttonous heart.

J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 32.

luciferously (lū-sif'e-rus-li), adv. 1. In a luciferous manner; so as to enlighten or illuminate. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., III. 8. [Rare.]—2. [cap.] Satanically; diabolically.

Every vulgarly-esteemed upstart dares break the dreadfull dignity of antique and authentical Poesie, and presume Luciferously to proclame in place thereof repugnant precepts of their owne spauue.

Chapman, Masque of Middle Temple.

lucific (lū-sif'ik), a. [< LL. lucifugus, light-making, < L. lux (luc-), light, + facere, make.] Producing light. N. Greu, Cosmologia Sacra, II. ii. § 14. [Rare.]

luciform (lū-si-fōrm), a. [< L. lux (luc-), light, + forma, form.] Having the form or nature of light; resembling light. [Rare.]

Plato speaketh of the mind, or soul, as a driver that guides and governs a chariot, which is, not unfitly, styled αυροειδής, a luciform ethereal vehicle.

Ep. Berkeley, Siris, § 171.

Lucifriant, a. An improper form of *Luciferian*¹.

lucifugous (lū-sif'ū-gus), a. [< L. lucifugus, shunning the light, < lux (luc-), light, + fugere, flee.] Shunning light; avoiding daylight; applied to various animals, as bats, cockroaches, etc.

lucigen (lū'si-jen), n. and a. [< L. lux (luc-), light, + gen, produce; see -gen.] I. n. A modern lamp of great illuminating power, in which oil is burned under conditions which produce and maintain for probably the longest possible time in an illuminating flame a white heat in the carbon particles. The principle upon which the lamp operates is the atomization of the oil by the action of escaping compressed air heated during its passage to the atomizing jet. The oil and air are thus intimately mingled, at a high temperature at the instant of ignition, in such proportions as to gain the maximum illuminating effect.

II. a. A term applied to a system of lighting by lucigenes.

The new system of lighting known as lucigen permits of obtaining an intense light of great brilliancy under very remarkable conditions.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LIX. 147.

Luciidae (lū-si'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lucius + -idae.] The pikes, as a family of fishes: same as Esocidae. C. L. Bonaparte.

lucimeter (lū-sim'e-tēr), n. [< L. lux (luc-), light, + Gr. μετρον, measure.] 1. A photometer.—2. A sunshine-recorder designed to measure the combined effect of the duration and intensity of sunshine in promoting evaporation.

Lucina (lū-si'nā), n. [L., the goddess of childbirth, prop. fem. of lucinus, < lux (luc-), light; see lucet.] 1. In Rom. myth., the goddess who presided over childbirth, considered as a daughter of Jupiter and Juno, but frequently confused with Juno or with Diana. She corresponded more or less closely to the Greek goddess Eileithyia.—2. [NL.] In zool.: (a) The typical genus of Lucinidae, having both lateral and cardinal teeth. L. dentata is a species whose white shell shows concentric lines of growth overlaid with oblique radiate striation.

Lucina pennsylvanica.

Bruguère, 1791. (b) A genus of flies of the family Sciomyzidae, containing two large gray European species resembling members of the genus Scatophaga. Meigen, 1830. (c) A genus of orthopterous insects. Walker, 1870.

Lucinacea (lū-si-nā'sē-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lucina, 2, + -acea.] A superfamily of integropalliate dimyarian mollusks, represented by the Lucinidae and related families.

lucinacean (lū-si-nā'sē-an), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Lucinacea.

II. n. A member of the Lucinacea.

Lucinidae (lū-sin'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lucina, 2, + -idae.] A family of integropalliate siphonate bivalve mollusks. The anal and branchial orifices are well defined but scarcely siphonate; the mouth is very small, and the labial palpi are rudimentary; the branchiae are large and double, and the foot is vermiform. The shell is subcircular and equivalve, the hinge typically with two cardinal and two lateral teeth in each valve, but variable and sometimes edentulous; the ligament is marginal and sub-internal, and the anterior muscular impression elongated. The genera and species are numerous; the living ones are found in temperate and tropical seas; fossil forms go back to the Silurian. See Lucina.

lucoid (lū'si-oid), n. and a. [< LL. lucius, a pike (see Lucius), + Gr. ειδός, form.] I. n. A fish of the family Esocidae; a pike. Sir J. Richardson.

II. a. Like a pike; esocine.

Luciola (lū-si'ō-lī-ā), n. [NL. (Laporte, 1833), < It. luciola, a firefly, formerly also a glow-worm, < lux, < L. lux (luc-), light; see light.] A genus of fireflies of the family Lampyridae, having a short transverse prothorax, earinate, and narrowly margined. It is widely distributed, with over 50 species, usually dark brown and yellow. L. lusitanica is a highly luminous species, which may emit flashes every two or three seconds.

Luciopeca (lū'si'ō-pēr'kij), n. [NL., < LL. lucius, a pike, + L. pecca, perch.] A Cuvierian genus of percoid fishes, synonymous with Stizostedion; the pike-perches. L. sandra is the giant pike-perch of Europe, 3 or 4 feet long, of voracious habits and valuable as a food-fish.

Lucius (lū'si-us), n. [NL., < LL. lucius, a fish, supposed to be the pike; cf. Gr. λυκος, a kind of fish, lit. 'wolf', = L. lupus, wolf; see Lupus. Hence ult. (< LL. lucius) E. luce.] A genus of fishes, the pikes; same as Esoc.

luck¹ (luk), n. [< ME. luk, lukke (not found in AS.) = OFries. luk = D. luk, geluk = MLG. luke, LG. luk (= Icel. lukka = Sw. lycka = Dan. lykke, < G.) = OHG. gilucchi* (not recorded), MHG. gelücke, glücke, G. glück, good fortune, luck, happiness; prob. orig. only HG., the LG. forms being prob., like the Scand., from the HG. Connection with D. lokken = OHG. loechōn, MHG. G. locken = Icel. lokka = Sw. locka = Dan. lokke, allure, entice, seems improbable, on account of the difference of meaning.] 1. Fortune; hap; that which happens to a person by chance, conceived as having a real tendency to be favorable or unfavorable, or as if there were an inward connection between a succession of fortuitous occurrences having the same character as favorable or unfavorable. Thus, gamblers say that one ought to continue to play while the luck is in one's favor and leave off when the luck turns against one.

To tell of good or evil luck.
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality.

Shak., Sonnets, xiv.

Here's a Trout has taken my fly: I had rather have lost a crown. What luck's this! he was a lovely fish, and turned up a side like a salmon.

Cotton, in Walton's Angler, II. 251.

Gay luck to our hunters!—how nobly they ride!
Whittier, Hunters of Men.

2. Good fortune; favorable hap; a supposed something, pertaining to a person, at least for a time, giving to fortuitous events a favorable character; also, in a weakened sense, a fortuitous combination of favorable occurrences.

His heats best become him because they come from him rudely and unvexed: and hee has the lucke commonly to haue them famous.

Ep. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Blunt Man.

They [young men who gamble] think they are "trying their luck," as the phrase is; but if they could be convinced that it is not their luck which they are trying, but only a fraction of it, their opponent having the rest in his pocket, they would show themselves . . . averse to risks in which it is more than an even chance against them.

De Morgan, Probabilities, i.

Luck may, and often does, have some share in ephemeral successes, as in a gambler's winnings spent as soon as got, but not in any lasting triumph over time.

Lovell, Study Windows, p. 117.

3. An object with which good fortune is thought to be connected; especially, a vessel for holding liquid, as a drinking-cup. There are several such vessels surviving in England, as the Luck of Edenhall, preserved in a manor-house in the county of Cumberland.

The drinking-glass of crystal tall;
They call it the Luck of Edenhall.

Longfellow, The Luck of Edenhall.

Fisherman's luck. See fisherman.—Greasy luck. See greasy, 9.—To be down on one's luck, to be in bad luck. [Colloq.]

They say that when Mrs. C. was particularly down on her luck, she gave concerts and lessons in music here and there.

Thackeray, Vanity Fair, lxi.

=Syn. See happy.

luck¹ (luk), v. [< ME. lukken (= MLG. lucen); from the noun.] I. intrans. To be lucky. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. To make lucky. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

luck² (luk), n. [A var. of *lock*².] A lock of wool twisted on the finger of a spinner.

She straight slipp'd off the Wall and Band,

And laid aside her Lucks and Twitches.

Bloomfield, Richard and Kate, I. 30.

Miss Glaborne's flannel is promised the last of the week—there is a bunch of lucks down cellar; bring them up.

S. Judd, Margaret, I. 2.

Luckenbooth brooch. A brooch of a fashion formerly sold in the Luckenbooths in Edinburgh, usually heart-shaped and of silver, sometimes of more elaborate pattern, as of two hearts conjoined, and often bearing inscriptions. These brooches were used as gifts of love and betrothal.

luckie, n. See *lucky*².

luckily (luk'i-li), adv. In a lucky manner; fortunately; by good fortune; with a favorable issue; as, luckily we escaped injury.

luckiness (luk'ī-nes), n. The state or quality of being lucky or fortunate; good fortune; favorable issue or event.

luckite (luk'it), n. [Luck(y) Boy] (see def.) + -ite.] A variety of the mineral melanterite, or hydrous ferrous sulphate, containing a small amount of manganese. It is found at the "Lucky Boy" silver-mine in Utah.

luckless (luk'les), a. [*< luck*¹ + -less.] 1. Having no luck; suffering mischance; unlucky; unsuccessful; as, a luckless gambler.

Ah, luckless poet! stretch thy lungs and roar.

Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. l. 324.

2. Unattended by luck; bringing or marked by ill luck or misfortune; unfortunate; unfavorable; as, a luckless adventure.

The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., v. 6. 45.

=Syn. Unlucky, ill-starred, ill-fated.

lucklessly (luk'les-li), adv. In a luckless manner; unfortunately; unsuccessfully.

lucklessness (luk'les-nes), n. The state of being luckless or unfortunate. Imp. Dict.

luck-penny (luk'pen'ē), n. 1. A small sum given back "for luck" to the purchaser or payer by the person who receives money in a bargain or other transaction. [Scottish and Irish.]—2. A copper tossed overboard "for luck."

lucky¹ (luk'i), a. and n. [*< luck*¹ + -y.] I. a. 1. Favored by luck; fortunate; meeting with good success; as, a lucky adventurer.

This is fairy gold, boy. . . . We are lucky.

Shak., W. T., III. 3. 129.

2. Producing good by chance or unexpectedly; favorable; auspicious; as, a lucky adventure; a lucky time; a lucky east.

So may some gentle Muse
With lucky words favour my destined urn;
And, as he passes, turn,
And bid fair peace be to my sable shroud.

Milton, Lycidas, l. 20.

lucky

Well met, gentlemen; this is lucky that we meet so just together at this very door.

I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 173.

Mr. Chivery, who was a man of few words, had, on sundry Sunday mornings given his boy what he termed "a lucky touch" on the shoulder, signifying that he considered such commendation of him to Good Fortune, preparatory to his that day declaring his passion and becoming triumphant.

Dickens, Little Dorrit, xviii.

3. Bulky; full; superabundant: as, lucky measure. [Scotch.]—4. Handy. [Colloq.]

Bellm. Perhaps I may have occasion to use you; you used to be a lucky rogue upon a pinch.

Mart. Ay, master, and I have not forgot it yet.

Mrs. Centlivre, Love's Contrivance, 1.

Lucky money, coins worn or carried by way of a charm—sometimes ancient or foreign money. = Syn. 1 and 2. Fortunata, etc. See happy.

II. n. See the phrase.—To cut one's lucky, make one's lucky, to get away; escape. [Low.]

Charley and I made our lucky up the wash'us chimney.

Dickens, Oliver Twist.

lucky¹ (luk'i), adv. [lucky, a.] More than enough; too: as, lucky severe; lucky long. [Scotch.] lucky², luckie (luk'i), n. [Prob. a particular use of lucky¹, in a sense like that of goody.] An elderly woman; a grandam; goody: prefixed to a person's name: as, Lucky M. Laren. [Scotch.] lucky-bag (luk'i-bag), n. A receptacle on a man-of-war for all clothes and other articles of private property carelessly left by their owners.

Have the master-at-arms with you in this inspection, to gather up all articles of private property and put them in the lucky bag.

Lucie, Seaman'ship, p. 310.

lucky-dad, lucky-daddie (luk'i-dad, -dad'i), n. A grandfather. [Scotch.] lucky-hands (luk'i-handz), n. A widely distributed fern, Aspidium Filix-mas: so named from the resemblance of the young unexpanded frond to a hand. The fronds, as well as the roots, were used by ignorant and superstitious people as preservatives against witchcraft and enchantment.

lucky-minnie (luk'i-min'i), n. A grandmother. [Scotch.] lucky-proach (luk'i-prōch), n. A fish, the father-lasher. [Scotch.] lucky-stone (luk'i-stōn), n. An ear-stone or otolith of a fish, superstitiously regarded as bringing luck to the owner or wearer.

lucrative (lū'krā-tiv), a. [F. lucratif = Sp. Pg. It. lucrativo. < L. lucrativus, profitable, < lucrari, pp. lucratus, gain: see luere, v.] 1. Yielding lucre or gain; gainful; highly profitable: as, a lucrative transaction; a lucrative business or office.—2. Greedy of gain; self-seeking.

Let not thy prayer be lucrative, nor vindictive, pray not for temporal superfluities.

Donne, Sermons, xi.

lucrative office, an office to which compensation is attached, or perquisites.—lucrative succession, in Scots law, a passive title whereby an heir apparent who accepts a gratuitous grant from his ancestor of any part of the estate to which he is to succeed as heir may be subjected to the payment of all the debts of the ancestor contracted prior to the grant. = Syn. I, Paying, remunerative.

lucratively (lū'krā-tiv-li), adv. In a lucrative manner; profitably.

lucre (lū'kēr), n. [*Early mod. E. also lucker; < ME. *lukre (erroneously lukre, luk, Prompt. Parv.), < OF. (and F.) lucre = Sp. Pg. It. lucro, < L. lucrum, gain, with formative -rum, from a √ lu, which appears also in Ir. luach, price, wages, Gr. λεία, λήϊν, booty (see Lestes), O.Bulg. lovū, booty (Russ. lovītē, take as booty); AS. lein = OS. OFries. lōn = D. loon = MLG. lōn = OHG. MHG. lōn, G. lohn = Teel. laun = Sw. Dan. lōn = Goth. laun, reward.*] Gain in money or goods; profit: often, in a restricted sense, base or unworthy gain; money or wealth as the object of sordid greed; hence, greed.

Not greedy of filthy lucre.

1 Tim. iii. 3.

Love to my child, and lucre of the portion, Provoked me.

B. Jonson, Magnetic Lady, v. 6.

Until I gave one of them a small knife to cut betel nuts, he would not go with us; but for the lucre of that he conducted us to a town.

Rob. Knox (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 424).

lucret, v. t. [Early mod. E. also lucker; < OF. lucrer, < L. lucrari, gain, < lucrum, gain: see luere, n.] To gain. Levins, Manip. Vocab., col. 182, l. 35.

Lucretian (lū'krē'shān), a. [Lucretius (see def.) + -an.] Of or pertaining to any member of the ancient Roman gens of the Lucretii; especially, relating to or characteristic of the Roman poet and philosopher Titus Lucretius Carus (about 98–55 B. C.), eminent as a poet, and as the most important exponent of the Epicurean philosophy.

luciferous† (lū'krif'e-rus), a. [< L. lucrum, gain, + ferre = E. bear¹.] Gainful; profitable.

The grand thing that is like to keep this experiment from being as generally useful as perhaps it will prove luciferous is the dearthness of sal armoniac.

Boyle, Works, III. 148.

luciferousness† (lū'krif'e-rus-nes), n. Profitableness. Boyle, Works, II. 30.

lucrific† (lū'krif'ik), a. [< L. lucrificus, gainful, < lucrum, gain, + facere, make.] Producing profit; gainful. Ash.

lucrioust, a. An obsolete variant of lucros.

lucros (lū'krus), a. [Early mod. E. also erroneously lucrosius; = Sp. Pg. It. lucroso, < L. lucrosus, gainful, < lucrum, gain: see luere.] Of or pertaining to luere or gain. [Rare.]

Free from the muck-worm miser's lucros rage,

In calm contentment's cottag'd vale of life.

Cooper, Tomb of Shakespeare.

luctation (luk-tā'shōn), n. [< L. luctatio(n)-, a wrestling, < luctari, pp. luctatus, wrestle, strive. Cf. eluctate, reluct, reluctant.] Effort to overcome in a contest; struggle; contest. [Rare.] luctiferous† (luk-tif'e-rus), a. [< L. luctifer, < luctus, sorrow, + ferre = E. bear¹.] Causing or bringing sorrow or mourning. Bailey, 1731.

luctual† (luk'tū'al), a. [< L. luctus, sorrow, < lugere, pp. luctus, mourn.] Relating to or producing grief.

luctuous† (luk'tū-us), a. [= Sp. Pg. luctuose, < L. luctuosus, sorrowful, < luctus, sorrow: see luctual.] Sorrowful; full of sorrow. Bailey, 1731.

lucubrate (lū'kū-brāt), v.; pret. and pp. lucubrated, pp. lucubration. [< L. lucubratus, pp. of lucubrare (> It. lucubrare = Pg. Sp. lucubrar = F. lucubrer), work by candle-light, < (LL.) lucubrum (ML. lucubrum, a faint light), < L. lux (luc-), light: see lucent. Cf. elucubrate.] I. intrans. To study earnestly or laboriously, as by candle-light; think closely or seriously; meditate.

I like to speak and lucubrate my fill.

Byron, Beppo, st. 47.

II. trans. To elaborate, as by laborious night study.

lucubration (lū'kū-brā'shōn), n. [= F. lucubration = Sp. lucubracion = Pg. lucubração = It. lucubrazione, < L. lucubratio(n)-, working by candle-light, < lucubrare, pp. lucubratu, work by candle-light: see lucubrate, v.] 1. The act of lucubrating; close study or thought; careful consideration; meditation.—2. A product of thought or study; a written composition; an essay or treatise.

Your monthly lucubrations are widely diffused over all the dominions of Great Britain.

Goldsmith, Essay, National Concord.

The most trifling lucubration was denominated "a work."

Irving.

lucubrator (lū'kū-brā-tōr), n. [< lucubrate + -or.] One who lucubrates.

lucubretorius (lū'kū-brā-tō-ri), a. [< L. lucubretorius, working by candle-light, < lucubrare, pp. lucubratu, work by candle-light: see lucubrate, light¹.] Composed by candle-light; pertaining to nocturnal study or serious thought.

You must have a dish of coffee and a solitary candle at your side, to write an epistle lucubretorius to your friend.

Pope, to Mr. Cromwell, Dec. 21, 1711.

lucubrum (lū'kū-brum), n. [ML.: see lucubrate.] Same as cresset, 1.

lucule (lū'kūl), n. [= *F. lucule, < NL. as if lucula, dim. of L. lux (luc-), light: see lucent, light¹.] In astron., a luminous spot on the sun.

luculent (lū'kū-lent), a. [ME. luculent = It. luculento, < L. luculentus, full of light, bright, splendid, < lux (luc-), light: see lucent, light¹.] 1. Bright; luminous; transparent.

Trio out the grape unhurt, neither to ripe,

Neither to sour, as gemines luculent.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 188.

It emitted a luculent flame as bright and large as a small wax candle.

Evelyn, Diary, May 6, 1645.

2. Clear; evident; unmistakable.

The most luculent testimonies that the Christian religion hath.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 40.

luculently (lū'kū-lent-li), adv. In a luculent manner; lucidly; clearly; luminously.

Nowhere has the transition . . . been so luculently shown as here.

Max Müller, Science of Lang., N. S., p. 542.

Luculia (lū'kū'li-ā), n. [NL. (Robert Sweet, 1826), from the Nepalese name, Luculi swa, of one of the species, L. gratissima.] A genus of plants of the natural order Rubiaceae and of the tribe Cinchoneae, distinguished by the imbricated lobes of the corolla, on the throat or tube of which the included stamens are inserted. There are two species, one found in the Himalaya and the other in the Khasia mountains. The best-known species is L. gratissima, a small tree with opposite ovate-lanceolate leaves, and very fragrant cymes of showy pink flowers. It is a highly ornamental house-plant.

Lucuma (lū'kū'mā), n. [NL. (Jussieu, 1789), from the Peruv. name.] A genus of dicotyledonous gamopetalous plants of the natural order Sapotaceae, the soapberry family. It is characterized by four- or five-parted flowers, coriaceous exstipulate leaves, the stamthodia or abortive stamens alternate with the fertile ones (although sometimes few or wanting), and seeds without albumen. It embraces about 50 species, chiefly South American, but extending from Chili to Mexico and the West Indies; a very few, however, occur in Australia and New Caledonia. They are trees or shrubs with milky juice and clusters of small or middle-sized flowers in the axils of the leaves or on the older joints. L. mammosa and L. multiflora of the West Indies are called bully-trees, the former of which is the mamee-sapota or marmalade-tree. The fruit contains a pleasant-flavored pulp, resembling quince marmalade in appearance and taste. L. Caimito of Peru has a smaller fruit, which is said to be superior in flavor to the last-named. L. obovata, also of Peru, is cultivated in Chili under the name of Lucuma de Coquimbo. In a recent revision of the Sapotaceae by Radikof this genus has been reduced to two Chilean species, the West Indian plants being referred to Vitellaria, but they are best known by the name Lucuma.

Lucumo (lū'kū-mō), n. [L., also lucomo, lucmo, an inspired person, an Etruscan prince or priest; a word of Etruscan origin.] Among the ancient Etruscans, the head of a patrician or noble family uniting in himself the characters of priest and prince; in general, one of the Etruscan nobility. To this class the kings also seem to have belonged.

And plainly and more plainly
Now might the burghers know,
By port and vest, by horse and crest,
Each warlike Lucumo.

Macaulay, Horatius, st. 23.

lucus a non lucendo (lū'kus ā non lū-sen'dō). [*L.: lucus, a wood or grove, esp. one sacred to a deity; a, from; non, not; lucendo, abl. gerund of lucere, shine (see lea¹, a-10, non, lucent); that is, a grove is called lucus (which is in form like lucus (luc-), a light, lucere, be light, shine, lucidus, light) because it is not light: in allusion to the attempt of an ancient grammarian mentioned by Quintilian to derive lucus, a grove, from lucere, shine. The two words are in fact connected, lucus (like grove) being orig. an open light space in a wood.] An absurd etymology or derivation; hence, anything inconsequent or illogical. Sometimes shortened to lucus a non.*

lud¹, a. A Middle English form of loud.

lud², n. A Middle English form of lede³.

Lud³ (lud), n. A minced form of Lord, in petty oaths; also vulgarly in address: as, my Lud.

Lud! Sir Peter, I hope you haven't been quarrelling with Maria?

Sheridan, School for Scandal, iii. 1.

ludby†, n. Same as lotoby.

Luddism (lud'izm), n. [< Ludd(ite) + -ism.] The practices or opinions of the Luddites.

Luddite (lud'it), n. and a. I. n. A member of a conspiracy of workmen in England (1811–1816) banded together for the destruction of improved machines, under the delusion that these diminished employment: said to have called themselves Luddites from an imbecile named Ned Lud, who broke two stocking-frames from anger. The disturbances created by them were called Luddite riots, and required stern measures for their repression.

Who makes the quarter loaf and Luddites rise?
J. and H. Smith, Rejected Addresses, No. 1.

II. a. Of or pertaining to the Luddites: as, Luddite riots.

luddock†, n. [ME. luddock, luddok.] Loin. Liber Cure Cocorum, p. 43.

ludent, n. Same as leden.

ludibrious† (lū-dib'ri-us), a. [= Pg. ludibriosus, < LL. ludibriosus, scornful, < L. ludibrium, a mockery, < ludere, play, sport: see ludicrous.] Ridiculous; sportive; wanton. [Rare.]

Needless it shall be to refute this phansie, which falleth to the ground of itself as a ludibrious follie of the man.

Tooker, Fabric of the Church (1804), p. 119.

ludibundness† (lū'di-bund-nes), n. [*< ludibund (not recorded) (< L. ludibundus, sportive, < ludere, play) + -ness.] Sportiveness; playfulness.

That ludibundness of nature in her gamaiens, and such like sportful and ludicrous productions.

Dr. H. More, Mystery of Iniquity, I. xv. § 14.

ludicrous (lū'di-krus), a. [= OF. ludicre = Pg. It. ludicro, < L. ludicrus, sportive, < ludus, play, < ludere, play, sport. Cf. allude, collude, delude, elude, illude, prelude.] Serving for or exciting sport; laughable from singularity or grotesqueness; adapted to cause sportive laughter or ridicule; absurd.

He has, therefore, in his whole volume, nothing burlesque, and seldom anything ludicrous or familiar.

Johnson, Walter.

The Duke [of Newcastle] was in a state of ludicrous distress. He ran about chattering and crying, asking advice and listening to none.

Macaulay, William Pitt.

ludicrous (lū'di-kri-si), adv. In a ludicrous manner; sportively; grotesquely.

You wrong me in thinking I quoted a text from my saint ludicrously.

Walpole, To Lady Hervey, Nov. 21, 1765.

ludicrousness (lū'di-kri-si-nes), n. The state or character of being ludicrous.

ludification (lū'di-fi-kā'shon), n. [= It. ludificazione, < L. ludificatio (-n-), derision, < ludificare, pp. ludificatus, make sport of, < ludus, play (< ludere, play), + facere, make.] The act of making sport of anything; ridicule; mockery.

The Lords . . . swear by the holy Altar to be revenged for this Ludification and injurious Dealing.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 72.

Some [Puritans] are of a linsey-woolsey disposition, . . . all like Ethiopians, white in the teeth only; full of ludification, and injurious dealing, and cruelty.

Josselyn (Tyler's Hist. Amer. Lit., I. 181).

ludificatory (lū-dif'i-kā-tō-ri), a. [< L. ludificatorius, mocking, < L. ludificator, a mocker, < ludificare, pp. ludificatus, make sport of: see ludification.] Making sport; tending to excite derision.

In the sacraments of the Church there is nothing empty or vain, nothing ludificatory, but all thoroughly true.

Barrow, Works, III. xxxix.

ludlamite (lud'lām-it), n. [After Mr. Lullam, an English mineralogist.] A hydrous phosphate of iron, occurring in bright-green monoclinic crystals. It is found near Truro in Cornwall, and is associated with vivianite in cavities in pyrite.

Ludlow group. In geol., in England, a series of rocks, consisting chiefly of shales, with occasionally an intercalated belt of limestone, belonging to the Upper Silurian and lying above the Wenlock group, into which it graduates downward, and with whose fauna it has a large number of species in common. The group is typically developed between Ludlow in Shropshire and Aymestrey in Hereford, and the name was given by Murchison because the town of Ludlow stands on beds of this age.

Ludlow's code. See code.

Ludolphian, Ludolfian (lū-dol'fī-an), a. [< Ludolph (see def.) + -ian.] Pertaining to the mathematician Ludolf van Ceulen (died 1610), who calculated the ratio of the circumference of a circle to the diameter to many places of decimals, and caused the value to be engraved upon his tombstone.

ludus Helmontii (lū'dus hel-mon'ti-i). [NL., 'Helmont's amusement,' so called from Jan Baptista van Helmont, a Belgian chemist and physician of the 17th century (died 1644), who believed in the efficacy of such stones (and who gave gas the name it bears: see gas); L. ludus, play, sport, amusement.] 1. A calcareous stone, the precise nature of which is not known, used by the ancients as a remedy in calculous affections.—2. A calculous concretion occurring in an animal body.—3. A variety of septaria in which the sparry veins are frequent and anastomosing.

Ludwigia (lud-wij'i-ä), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), named after C. G. Ludwig, professor of botany at Leipzig, and contemporary with Linnaeus.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the natural order Oxagariaceæ; the false or bastard loosestrife. It is characterized by having from three to six petals, entire or two-lobed, sometimes wanting; from three to six stamens; and a three- to six-celled ovary, which becomes, in fruit, a septical capsule. They are herbs with opposite or alternate leaves, usually lanceolate in shape, and with the flowers almost always solitary in the axils of the leaves, sometimes in terminal heads. About 20 species are known, natives of Europe, Asia, Africa, and North America. L. alternifolia of the eastern United States, on account of its cubical pod, is called seedbox, and it is also called boeman's-root. L. palustris, the water-purslane, is a common weed in ditches and shallow ponds both in Europe and in North America.

ludwigite (lud'wig-it), n. [Named after E. Ludwig, a chemist of Vienna.] A borate of iron and magnesium, occurring in dark-green to black masses with a fine fibrous structure.

lue (lū), v. t.; pret. and pp. lued, ppr. luing. [Origin obscure.] To sift: a miners' term. [Prov. Eng.]

I had new models made of the sieves for lueing, the box and trough, the buddle, wreck, and tool.

Miss Edgeworth, Lame Jervas, II. (Davies.)

Lueroth's theorem. See theorem.

lues (lū'ez), n. [L., a plague, pestilence.] A plague or pestilence: used with adjectives to designate various specific or contagious affections.—Lues venerea, venereal disease; syphilis.

luetie (lū-et'ik), a. [Irreg. < L. lues, plague, + -etic as in pyretic, etc.] Diseased; plague-stricken; specifically, affected with syphilis; syphilitic.

luff, n. An obsolete form of *loof*¹.

lufe¹, v. and n. An obsolete form of *love*¹.

lufe², n. An obsolete or dialectal form of *loof*¹.

lufe³, n. An obsolete form of *loof*², *luff*².

lufert, n. An obsolete form of *lover*¹.

luff¹ (luf), n. 1. A variant of *loof*¹.—2. The wooden case in which the light is carried in the sport of lowbelling. Hallivell.

luff² (luf), n. [A later form of *loof*², q. v.] Naut.: (a) The fullest and broadest part of a vessel's bow; the loof.

Schipe-mene secharpi sehoteue thaire portez. Lauchez lede (sharl the lead) spone lufe, laechene ther depez.

Lukkes to the lade-sterne where the lyghte faillez.

Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 750.

(b) The weather-gage, or part of a ship toward the wind. (c) The sailing of a ship close to the wind. (d) The weather part of a fore-and-aft sail, or the side next the mast or stay to which it is attached. (e) A luff-tackle.—Luff upon luff, one luff-tackle applied to the fall of another to afford an increase of purchase.—To keep the luff. See keep.—To spring her luff, to answer the helm by sailing nearer the wind: said of a ship.

luff² (luf), v. [A later form of *loof*², formerly also loof (= Dan. luffe), < D. loeven, loof, luff; from the noun: see *luff*², *loof*², n. Cf. lavcer, from the same source.] I. trans. Naut., to bring the head of (a vessel) nearer to the wind.

She once being loof d,

The noble ruler of her magic, Antony,

Claps on his sea-wing.

Shak., A. and C., III. 10. 18.

II. intrans. To steer or come nearer to the wind.

For haung mountains of fleeting yee on every side, we went roomer for one, and loofed for another; some seraped vs, and some happily escaped vs.

Hakluyt's Voyages, III. 65.

The other tacked after him, and came close up to his nether quarter, gave his broad side, and so lofed up to windward.

Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 52.

Luff round, or luff alee, the extreme of this movement, intended to throw the ship's head into the wind.

luff³ (luf), n. [Abbr. of lieutenant* for leftenant, now spelled lieutenant.] Lieutenant: as, he is first luff. [Naval slang.]

Luffa (luf'ä), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1706), < Ar. lūft, the name of one of the species.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the natural order Cucurbitaceæ, the gourd family, and of the tribe Cucumertineæ, characterized by the staminate flowers growing in racemes, the petioles without glands, and the large fruits dry, fibrous, and opening by a lid at the apex. They are climbing herbs, with monoclinous flowers, which are large and white, and five- or seven-lobed leaves. Seven species are known, natives of the tropics. The fruit is dry and oblong or cylindrical in shape, the numerous seeds being located in a network of coarse and strong fibers, which in some species are capable of being detached entire, cleaned of all other matters, and used like a coarse, tough fabric. L. cylindrica is the washing- or towel-gourd, so called because its dried fruit is cut up and used as a flesh-brush. The fibrous interior of these gourds is known in commerce under the various names looff, loof, loofa, lif, and lif. See strainer-vine.

luffer-board (luf'er-bōrd), n. A corruption of lower-board. See lower-window.

luffer-boarding (luf'er-bōr'ding), n. See board-ing.

luff-hook (luf'hūk), n. Naut., one of the hooks of a luff-tackle.

luff-tackle (luf'tak'l), n. Naut., a purchase composed of a double and a single block, the standing end of the rope being fastened to the single block, and the fall coming from the double: variously used as occasion may require.

lufsomt, a. An obsolete variant of lovesome.

luft, a. A Middle English form of *loft*¹.

lug¹ (lug), v.; pret. and pp. lugged, ppr. lugging. [< ME. luggen (not in AS., the alleged AS. geluggian* being an invention of Somner's), < Sw. lugga = Norw. lugga, pull (by the hair), a secondary form (depending on Sw. lugg, the forelock, = Norw. lugg, the hair of the head: see *lug*²) of luka*, pull, pull up, = Dan. luge, pull up (weeds), = AS. lūcan (not lyccan*, as cited by Skeat), pull up (weeds), > E. dial. louk, loek, look, pull up (weeds): see *loek*², *loek*², *look*². Cf. *lug*².] I. trans. 1. To pull with force or effort, as something that is heavy or resists; haul; drag. [Now chiefly colloq.]

With myche wepyng & wo, weghis of his aune Luggit hym out to the laund, lefte hym for ded; And fore agayne to the lyght thaire feris to help.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 6663.

Why, this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides.

Shak., T. of A., IV. 3. 31.

To tread on his eorns, or lug him thrice by both ears, or pinch his arm black and blue.

Swift, Gulliver's Travels, Laputa, VI.

2. To carry, as something heavy or burdensome; bear laboriously.

He lugged her along like a pedlar's pack.

Farner's Old Wife (Child's Ballads, VIII. 258).

To lug the ponderous volume off in state.

Pope, Dunciad, IV. 118.

Ragged urehins were lugging home sticks of cordwood.

G. W. Cable, Old Creole Days, p. 16.

Especially—3t. To drag or pull about by the ears or head, as a bear or a bull, to excite it to action; bait; worry.

Like a common Garden-bull,

I do but take breath to be lugg'd again.

Middleton, Changeling, II. 1.

4t. To geld.

S'hood, I am as melancholy as a gib-cat or a lugged bear.

Shak., I Hen. IV., I. 2. 83.

His ears hang laving like a new lugg'd swine.

Bp. Hall, Satires, IV. l. 72.

To lug in, to introduce by main force, or without appointness. [Colloq.]

He could not tell that story (of Crompton's), which I begged him to do, and which would not have been lugged in neck and shoulders, because everybody was telling just such stories.

Greville, Memoirs, Feb. 27, 1830.

To lug out, to draw (a sword). [Colloq.]

Their cause they to an easier issue put,

They will be heard, or they lug out and out.

Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, xvi. 76.

II. intrans. 1. To pull with effort; followed by at.

This huge and monstrous gallasse, wherein were contained three hundred slauca to lug at the oars.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 601.

He would let Caroline lug at his hair till his dim wandering grey eyes winked and watered again with pain.

W. Collins, Family Secret, p. 223.

2. To move hoavily, or with resistance; drag.

My flagging soul flies under her own pitch, Like fowl in air too damp, and lugs along, As if she were a body in a body.

Dryden, Don Sebastian, IV. 1.

When rollers are tacky or stick together they are said to lug.

C. T. Jacobi, Printers' Vocab.

lug¹ (lug), n. [*< lug*¹, v.] 1. Anything that moves slowly or with difficulty; something of a heavy, lumpy, or sluggish nature. Specifically—(a) A slug; a sluggard. (b) A worm used for bait; a lugworm. (c) The bib (a fish). [Prov. Eng.] (d) A heavy or slow-acting bow.

The same reason I find true in two bows that I have, whereof the one is quick of east, . . . —the other is a lug, slow of east, following the string, more sure for to last than pleasant for to use.

Ascham, Toxophilus (ed. Giles), p. 14.

2. Same as lug-sail.

They have not got to dip their sail as we have, every time we tack; . . . now you go to the helm, and I and the boy will dip the lug.

C. Reade, Love me Little, xvii.

3. pl. Affected manners; "airs": as, to put on lugs. [Slang.]—Axis of lug, that position of the instantaneous axis of rotation of a body turning about a fixed point in which the direction of pressure coincides with that of the axis.

lug² (lug), n. [Partly < Sw. lugg, the forelock, = Norw. lugg, the hair of the head; partly < *lug*¹, v., the orig. verb.] 1t. The lobe of the ear.—2. The ear. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

A fins round head when those two lugs are off,

To trundle through a pillory!

B. Jonson, Staple of News, v. 1.

I wad like ill to wait till Mr. Harrison and Mr. Gudyill cam to pu' us out by the lug and the horn.

Scott, Old Mortality, VII.

3. A projecting part of some object resembling more or less in form or position the human ear. (a) A projecting piece or ear on a vessel or other object to serve as a handle, or on a tile or the like to afford it a hold when used in roofing.

The first (tile) is moulded with a lug, which secures itself in position by catching above the lath of the roof; the second shows a tile moulded with two lugs, by which it engages the tiles of the courses above and below.

C. T. Davis, Bricks and Tiles, p. 330.

Projecting lugs, to which the copper bars are attached.

S. P. Thompson, Dynamo-Elect. Mach., p. 143.

(b) In mach., a projecting piece; specifically, a short flange by or to which something is fastened.

The ring is fastened to the plug, and held to the breech by the lugs and boss.

Michaëls, tr. of Monthaye's Krupp and De Bange, p. 36.

(c) A projecting piece upon a foundry's flask or mold. (d) In single harness, one of the two loops of leather dependent from the saddle, one on each side, through which the shafts are passed for support. (e) The arm of a bee-frame.

4. A jamb or side wall of a recess, as a fireplace.

And for him who sat by the chimney lug,

Dozing and grumbling o'er pipe and mug.

Whittier, Maud Muller.

5. A grade of tobacco.

In this condition the leaves [of tobacco] are stripped from the stems, sorted into qualities, such as lugs, or lower leaves, "firata," and "seconda." Encyc. Brit., XXXI. 424.

To hlaw in one's lug. See blaw.

lug² (lug), v. t. [< lug², n.] To form with a lug or projection: as, to lug a door-sill (that is, to hollow out or chamfer off the upper and outer angle of the stone to within a short distance of each end, the parts not cut away forming the lugs).

lug³ (lug), n. [Perhaps < lug¹, v., pull (pluck); but cf. lop¹.] 1. A rod or pole.—2. A pliable rod or twig such as is used in thatching.—3. A measure of length, properly 15 feet 1 inch, but sometimes 16½, 18, or 20 feet (a lug of coppice-wood in Herefordshire was 49 square yards); a pole or perch. [Prov. Eng. in all senses.]

And eke that ample Pitt, yet far renowned
For the large leape which Debon did compell Coulde to make, being eight lugs of ground,
Into the which returninge backe he fell.

Spenser, F. Q., II. x. 11.

lug-a-leaf (lug'ā-lēf), n. The brill. Willughby. [Cornwall, Eng.]

lugbait (lug'bāt), n. Same as lugworm.

lug-bolt (lug'bōlt), n. A cylindrical bolt to which is welded a flat iron bar. The head is usually a hook which is received by a lug, or it passes through the lug and is held by a nut. Sometimes the flat bar has holes by which it is fastened to a timber by separate bolts or screws. Also called strap-bolt.

lugdoret, n. Same as lokdore.

luget, n. and v. A Middle English form of lodge.

lug-foresail (lug'fōr'sāl or -sī), n. In a schooner, a foresail set without any boom.

luggage (lug'āj), n. [< lug¹ + -age.] 1. Anything to be carried that is cumbersome and heavy.

What do you mean,
To dote thus on such luggage?

Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 231.

My misfortune made me think before
My life a tedious and painful trouble,
My very soul a luggage, and too heavy
For me to carry.

Shirley, The Wedding, v. 2.

2. Baggage; especially, a traveler's baggage.

[In this special sense chiefly in Great Britain.]

The luggage is too great that follows your camp.

Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

I am gathering up my luggage and preparing for my journey.

Swift.

I left my servant at the railway looking after the luggage—very heavy train and vast quantity of it in the van.

Dickens, Hard Times, II. 1.

luggage-saddle (lug'āj-sad'ī), n. A pad on which goods or personal effects are carried on a led horse.

luggage-van (lug'āj-van), n. A railway-car for luggage; a baggage-car. [British.]

luggatee (lug-ā-tē'), n. The turbot. [Prov. Eng.]

lugged (lug'ed, lugd), a. [< lug² + -ed².] Having ears, or appendages resembling ears.

The long fool's coat, the huge slop, the lugg'd boot.

Marston, Scourge of Villainy, I. 10.

O rare! to see thee fazz and freath

I' th' lugg't caup!

Burns, Scotch Drink.

lugger¹ (lug'ēr), n. [A var. of logger (?).] (D. logger) or < lug¹, n., lug-sail, + -er¹ (?). Hence F. lougre, Sp. Pg. lugre.] A vessel carrying either two or three masts, often with a running bowsprit and always with lug-sails. On the bowsprit are set two or three jibs, and the lug-sails hang obliquely to the masts.

Lugger.

It appears that the Fair Rosamond had captured a lugger with one hundred and sixty Africans, and shortly after saw the Black Joke in chase of two other luggers.

Everett, Orations and Speeches, I. 333.

lugger² (lug'ēr), n. [Cf. jigger.] Same as jigger.

luggie (lug'i), n. [< lug² + -ie, -y⁴.] A little dish having lugs or ears. [Scotch.]

In order, on the clean hearthstone,

The luggies three are ranged. Burns, Halloween.

luggun (lug'un), n. Same as luggan.

lugger falcon. Same as jigger.

lug-mark (lug'märk), n. An ear-mark for identification, as on a sheep or a dog.

lug-perch (lug'pērch), n. A long measure: same as lug³.

lug-sail (lug'sāl), n. [< lug¹ + sail; or perhaps < lug² (with ref. to the upper corner or 'ear' of

1. Dipping Lug-sail; 2. Standing Lug-sail; 3. Split Lug-sail.

the sail?) + sail.] A quadrilateral sail bent upon a yard that hangs obliquely to the mast at about one third of its length: a common rig for boats of men-of-war. Also lug.—Lug-sail boat, a boat rigged with a lug-sail; a lugger.

lugubriosity (lū-gū-bri-ōs'ī-ti), n. [As lugubrious + -ity.] Lugubriousness. Imp. Diet.

lugubrious (lū-gū'bri-us), a. [Formerly also lugubrous; with suffix -ous (cf. F. Sp. Pg. It. lugubre), < L. lugubris, mournful, mourning, < lugere, mourn; cf. Gr. λυγρός, sad, λογός, destruction.] 1. Characterized by or expressing mourning or sorrow; mournful; doleful; funeral; dejected: as, lugubrious wailing; a lugubrious look or voice.

Act no passionate, lugubrious, tragical part, whatever secular provocation cross us on the stage.

Hammond, Works, IV. 546.

2. Exciting mournful feelings; pitiful; dismal; depressing: as, a lugubrious spectacle or event.

Beppo dived deep down into the lugubrious and obscure regions of Rascaldom.

Carlyle.

=Syn. Sorrowful, melancholy, doleful.

lugubriously (lū-gū'bri-us-ly), adv. In a lugubrious manner; mournfully; sadly.

lugubriousness (lū-gū'bri-us-nes), n. The state or quality of being lugubrious; sorrowfulness; sadness.

lugworm (lug'wērm), n. [< lug¹ + worm. Cf. lobworm.] An annelid of the family Arenicolidae, inhabiting the sea-shore. A common species is Arenicola piscatorum, a large worm, 8 or 10 inches long, much used for bait. It belongs to a different order from the earthworm proper, though its habits are similar. It crawls through sandy and muddy soil, eating its way as it goes, and leaving in its wake coiled casts of the soil thus passed through its body. The head is large, eyeless and jawless, with a proboscis; the gills are thirteen pairs of gaily colored tufts, and the rings of the body are furnished with bristles like those of other chaetopod worms. Also called lobworm and lugbait.

luif (lüf), n. A Scotch spelling of loof¹.

luinig, n. [Gael.] A short plaintive song or lament sung in western Scotland and the Hebrides.

luke¹ (lük), a. [< ME. luke, leuke, lewke (= D. leuk- in leukwurm = E. lukewarm), appar. an unexplained var. or extension of lew, warm (see lew²); perhaps due to confusion with AS. lwece, tepid. The history and connections have not been cleared up.] Slightly warm; lukewarm; tepid.

If it be coole in heete and luke in colde,
The better may thowe with that water holde.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 8.

Let me have nine penn'orth o' brandy and water luke.

Dickens, Pickwick, xxxiii.

luke², v. A Middle English or dialectal form of look¹.

lukeness¹ (lük'nes), n. Lukewarmness.

lukert, n. A former spelling of lucre.

lukewarm (lük'wärm), a. [*< ME. lukewarm (= D. leukwurm = LG. lukwurm (equiv. to slukwurm); < luke¹ + warm. Cf. leuwarm.] 1. Only moderately warm; tepid; neither cold nor hot.

There is difference Between lukewarm and boiling, madam.

B. Jonson, Catiline, II. 1.

Their lukewarm dinner, served up between two pewter plates from a cook's shop.

Goldsmith, Citizen of the World, xxxii.

2. Not ardent; not zealous; cool; indifferent: as, lukewarm obedience.

Because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

Rev. III. 16.

lukewarmly (lük'wärm-li), adv. In a lukewarm degree or manner. (a) With moderate warmth. (b) With indifference; coolly.

lukewarmness (lük'wärm-nes), n. The state or character of being lukewarm, literally or figuratively; tepidness; indifference.

lukewarmth (lük'wärmth), n. [< luke¹ + warmth.] Lukewarmness. [Rare.]

Passionately offended at the falsehood and perfidiousness of certain faithless men, and at the lukewarmth and indifference of others.

Addison, Ladies' Association.

lull (lul), v. [< ME. lullen, tollen, lull, = MD. tollen, hum, sing, D. tollen, sing badly, caterwaul, lullen, chatter, prate, also deceive, cheat, = LG. G. tullen, lull, = Icel. Sw. tulla = Dan. tulle, lull, sing to sleep (cf. toll); prob., like L. tallare, sing to sleep, imitative, a redupl. of the syllable la or lu used in singing a child to sleep. Cf. toll, tullaby.] I. trans. 1. To quiet; compose; assuage; caress; cause to rest or subside by gentle, soothing means: as, to lull a child or a feverish patient; to lull grief, pain, or suspicion.

In her barme the litel childe she leide
With ful sadde face, and gan the childe to blesse,
And tulled it, and alter gan to kisse.

Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l. 497.

Feet and fayre hondes
That non ben crossed I custe hem ofte,
I tulled hem, I leid hem softe.

Legend of the Holy Rood, p. 133.

Antonio, your mistress will never wake while you sing so dolefully; love, like a cradled infant, is tulled by a sad melody.

Sheridan, The Duenna, I. I.

The Roman was not without excuses that could tull his moral feelings to repose.

Lecky, Europ. Morals, I. 301.

2. To deceive.

Whou some this sori men [seweden] his soule,
And oueral tullede him with heretykes werkei

Piers Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), l. 632.

=Syn. 1. To calm, hush, tranquilize.

II. intrans. To subside; cease; become calm: as, the wind tulls.

lull (lul), n. [< lull, v.] 1. That which lulls; a quieting or soothing influence. [Poetical.]

Yonder lull

Of falling water tempted me to rest.

Young, The Revenge, v. 2.

2. Temporary quiet and rest; suspension of activity or turmoil, as in a storm or any kind of excessive action.

With returning silence, with the lull of the chime, . . . she still resumed the dream.

Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xiii.

lulla, lully (lul'ā-, -ly), interj. [ME. lully, lulla, lullay, etc.: see lull, lullaby.] A common burden in nursery songs.

Lully lulla thow littel tine child;
By, by, lully, lullay, thow littel tynne child.

Coventry Mysteries (ed. Halliwell), p. 114.

lullaby (lul'ā-bī), n.; pl. lullabies (-biz). [< lull, lulla, + -by, a meaningless addition. Cf. rockaby.] 1. A song sung to lull children to sleep; a cradle-song.

Phlommel, with melody

Sing in our sweet lullaby;

Lulla, lulla, lullaby.

Shak., M. N. D., II. 2. 14.

Drinking is the lullaby used by nurses to still crying children.

Locke, Education.

2. A cradle-song, or an instrumental piece in the style of a cradle-song; a berceuse.

lullaby (lul'ā-bī), v. t.; pret. and pp. lullabied, pp. lullabying. [< lullaby, n.] To lull to sleep; hush with a lullaby.

Silence fell upon them, the gliding water lapping the bruised face and lullabying the perturbed spirit, the soft hand of the girl weaving a spell for the wounded warrior.

The Century, XXXVI. 901.

luller (lul'ēr), n. One who lulls or fondles.

lullingy (lul'ing-li), adv. In a lulling manner; so as to quiet or soothe.

The gentle sway of his measure . . . floats you lullingy along from picture to picture.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 173.

Lullist (lul'ist), n. A follower of Raymond Lully, a scholastic, who died in 1315.

lully, interj. See lulla.

Lulworth skipper. See skipper.

lum¹ (lum), n. [Cf. AS. hlymn.] 1. A wooded valley.—2. A deep pool.

lum² (lum), n. [Cf. W. llymon, a chimney, < llym, that shoots up or projects (?).] 1. A chimney. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

He set his foot in the black cruk-shell. . . .
And out at the lum flew he.

Hogg, Queen's Wake, The Witch of Fife.

2. In coal-mining, a chimney placed on the top of the upcast-shaft to increase the draft and carry off the smoke. [North. Eng.]

lumachella (lū-mā-kol'ē), n. [It.: see lumachelle.] Same as lumachelle.

lumachelle, lumachel (lū'mā-kel), n. [Cf. lumachella, lumachelle (named from the shells it contains), < lumachella, a little snail, dim. of lumaca, a snail, < L. limax (limac-), a snail; see limax.] A variety of compact limestone or marble containing fragments of shells, encrinurites, and other fossils, which are sometimes iridescent, displaying a variety of brilliant colors. Some of the most beautiful and rarest varieties of antique ornamental marbles belong to the lumachelles. The colors of the limestone base vary greatly in the different varieties. Also called fire-marble.

lumbaginous (lum-baj'i-nus), a. [Cf. LL. lumbago (lumbagin-), lumbago; see lumbago.] Of, pertaining to, or afflicted with lumbago.

lumbago (lum-bā'gō), n. [NL., < LL. lumbago, disease or weakness of the loins, < L. lumbus, loin; see loin.] In pathol., myalgia in the lumbar region.

lumbal (lum'bal), a. [Cf. L. lumbus, loin, + -al.] Same as lumbār.

lumbār¹ (lum'bār), a. and n. [= F. lombaire = Sp. lumar = Pg. lomar = It. lombare, < LL. lumaris* (neut. lumbare, used as a noun, an apron), < L. lumbus, loin; see loin.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the loins in general; specifically applied in anatomy to many structures. See phrases.—Lumbar abscess, an abscess in the lumbar region; a chronic collection of pus which forms in the cellular substance of the loins behind the peritoneum, and descends in the course of the psoas muscle.—Lumbar arteries, five pairs of branches of the aorta corresponding to the lumbar vertebrae.—Lumbar fascia. See fascia.—Lumbar flexure, the curve of the backbone in the lumbar region, the convexity of which is forward, and distinguishes man from most other animals.—Lumbar ganglia. See ganglion.—Lumbar hernia. See hernia.—Lumbar nerves, five pairs of spinal nerves corresponding to the lumbar vertebrae.—Lumbar plexus, the plexus of the anterior divisions of the lumbar nerves. This plexus is formed of the four upper lumbar nerves. These are all connected with one another by intercommunicating branches, and the last one sends a similar branch to the sacral plexus. The lumbar plexus lies embedded in the psoas magnus muscle. Its leading branches are named diohyogastric, ilio-inguinal, external cutaneous, anterior crural, genitocrural, and obturator. They supply parts of the abdominal walls, the external genitals, and the front and inner side of the thigh.—Lumbar region, a region of the abdomen lying on each side of the umbilical region, below the hypochondriac and above the iliac. See cut under abdomen.—Lumbar vertebrae, those bones of the spinal column which come between the thoracic or dorsal and the sacral vertebrae, generally bearing no ribs, or otherwise distinguished as a set or series. In man there are five such vertebrae, ribless, with large reniform or kidney-shaped bodies, stout transverse processes, large squarish spinous processes, and prominent oblique articular processes, the anterior of which, on each bone, have accessory processes called mamillary, developed from independent ossific centers.

Human Lumbar Vertebra.
c, centrum; s, neural spine; z, prezygapophysysis; z', postzygapophysysis; m, metapophysysis; a, anapophysysis; t, transverse process.

II. n. A lumbar vertebra.

Lumbar², n. A corrupted form of Lombard². Minsheu.

Lumbard¹, n. A former spelling of Lombard¹, Lombard².

lumbard-piet (lum'bārd-pī), n. [Also lumberpie; < Lumbard, Lombard¹, Italian (a term applied to several ancient dishes), + pie.] A highly seasoned meat-pie. Halliwel.

And it is further ordered therefore that the provision be as followeth: . . . lumberpie, espon, custurd, and codding tart, and 14 mess of each.

Accounts of Carpenters' Company, Election Dinner, 1663. [Nares.]

lumber¹ (lum'bēr), v. t. [Early mod. E. lumbren, with excrement b as in number, lumber¹, humber², etc.; < ME. lumeren, < Sw. lomra, resound, a freq. verb, < Sw. dial. ljumm, a great noise, = Icel. hjömr, a sound, a tune, akin to Goth. hluma, hearing, < Teut. √ hlu, hear: see loud and list¹, listen. Like other words denoting sounds, the word has been appar. regarded as imitative, and has also been confused more or less with unrelated words, as with lumber², lump, etc.] 1. To make a heavy rumbling noise; rumble: chiefly in the present participle.

A boisterous gush of wind lumbering amongst it.
Chapman.

When a lumbering noise from behind made him start.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 66.

2. To move heavily or cumbrously: chiefly in the present participle.

The post-boy's horse right glad to miaa
The lumbering of the wheels.
Cowper, John Gilpin.

You pause, as you trudge before the lumbering coach.
H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 240.

Allison listened in amazement, and with a little fear, to this lumbering lad, whose small, twinkling, shrewd eyes seemed to suggest that he was not quite such a fool as he looked.
W. Black, Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 292.

3. To stumble. Also lumper. [Prov. Eng.]

get comen lodly to that lode, as lazares ful monye, Summe lepre, summe lome [same], & lomerande blynde,
Poysened & parlatyk & pynd in fyres.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), II. 1094.

lumber² (lum'bēr), n. [Usually explained as orig. the contents of the lumber-room, this being explained as "orig. the Lombard-room, or room where the Lombard banker and broker stowed away his pledges" (Trench, following Blount, and followed by Skeat), and asserted to have been transferred to any unused chamber where furniture was stored; but of Lombard-room there is no evidence, and if existent it would rather have meant 'a room where Lombards or brokers were kept.' More prob. lumber² is < lumber¹, v., as being orig. heavy, 'lumbering' articles. Some confusion with lump¹ is prob. involved; cf. G. lumpen-kammer, lumber-room, Sw. lumpor, rags, old clothes: see lump¹.] 1. Things, more or less bulky and cumbersome, thrown aside (or which may be thrown aside) as of no present use or value. Lumber usually includes old or broken boards, barrels, boxes, and other articles of possible future use, as distinguished from mere useless rubbish or refuse. Often used figuratively.

So that with Provision, Chests, Hencoops, and farrort-Cages, our Ships were full of Lumber, with which we intended to sail.
Dampier, Voyages, II. ii. 129.

It was his glory to free the world from the lumber of a thousand vulgar errors.

Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iii., Author's Pref.

The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head.

Pope, Essay on Criticism, l. 613.

2. Timber sawed or split for use, as beams, joists, boards, planks, staves, hoops, and the like. [U. S.]—3. Useless and cumbersome weight, bulk, etc.

A fine slashing dog, of good size, possessing plenty of bone without lumber, and excellent legs and feet.
Dogs of Great Britain and America, p. 104.

4. Foolish or ribald talk. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]—5. Harm; mischief. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

lumber² (lum'bēr), v. [Cf. lumber², n.] 1. I. trans.

1. To heap together in disorder.
How in matters they be rawe,
They lumber forth the lawe.
Skelton, Colin Clout, l. 95.

Deep in the darkness of dull authors bred,
With all their refuse lumber'd in his head.

Mallet, Verbal Criticism, l. 613.

2. To fill with lumber; encumber with anything useless: as, to lumber a room: often with up.

I could not, in any honesty, lumber my pages with descriptions or speculations which would be idle to most readers.
Houelle, Venetian Life, xl.

II. intrans. To cut timber in the forest and prepare it for market. [U. S.]

In Maine so much harm was done to the general interests of the State by reckless lumbering.

The American, VII. 229.

lumber³, n. [A corruption of earlier lumbard, lombard: see lombard².] 1. A pawnbroker's shop.

They put all the little plate they had in the lumber, which is pawning it, till the ships came.

Lady Murray, quoted by Trench.

2. A pledge; a pawn.

The lumber for their proper goods recover.

Buller, Upon Critica. (Encyc. Dict.)

lumber-car (lum'bēr-kār), n. A railroad-car of extra length, usually 34 feet, particularly intended for carrying lumber. Car-Builders' Dict.

lumberdar (lum'bēr-dār), n. [Hind.] The registered representative of a village community for the payment of the government dues. [Anglo-Indian.] lumber-drier (lum'bēr-dri'er), n. See lumber-kiln.

lumberer (lum'bēr-ēr), n. [Cf. lumber², v., + -er¹.] A person employed or concerned in cutting timber and getting it from the forest. Also lumberman. [U. S.]

The lumberer finds it indispensable, in the operations of his woodcraft, to learn to chop timber right and left handed.
Science, IX. 148.

lumber-kiln (lum'bēr-kil), n. An inclosed chamber, artificially warmed, in which sawn lumber may be rapidly heated, to free it from moisture and prevent warping. Such rooms are usually warmed by coils of steam pipes, and are often arranged with tracks for cars on which the green lumber is piled and run into the building, to be drawn out again when dried. In various forms of driers, the moisture from the wood is condensed and drawn out of the chamber without disturbing the inclosed air; or the air charged with moisture is drawn out and replaced by dry air; or a condenser formed of cold-water pipes is hung in the room, and the moisture which condenses on the pipes drips off and is conducted out of the room.

lumberly (lum'bēr-li), a. [Cf. lumber¹ + -ly¹.] Lumbering; heavy-stepping; unwieldy.

But England is stirring in a slow, lumberly, and timorous fashion.

J. A. H. Murray, 9th An. Add. to Philol. Soc.

lumberman (lum'bēr-man), n.; pl. lumbermen (-men). 1. Same as lumberer.—2. One who deals in lumber. [U. S.] lumber-measure (lum'bēr-mēzh'ūr), n. A device for ascertaining the number of superficial feet in boards of different lengths. It consists of a case containing a disk placed vertically, which as it passes over the surface of the boards shows on a dial their superficial contents. The apparatus is adjustable for boards of different lengths. [U. S.]

lumber-port (lum'bēr-pōrt), n. A port-hole cut

Bow of Vessel Unloading Lumber through Lumber-port.

in the bow or stern of vessels for the passage of long pieces of timber. [U. S.]

lumber-room (lum'bēr-rōm), n. [Cf. lumber² + room.] Said to be orig. Lombard-room, but this form is not found in use; see lumber², lumber³.] A room or place for the reception of useless or unused things; a room occupied by lumber.

The world lies no longer a dull miscellany and lumber-room, but has form and order.

Emerson, The American Scholar.

Lumbert¹, n. An obsolete form of Lombard¹, Lombard².

lumber-wagon (lum'bēr-wag'ōn), n. Any large box-wagon, used especially by farmers for the transportation of miscellaneous heavy articles; also, a heavy wagon used in hauling lumber. [U. S.]

lumber-yard (lum'bēr-yārd), n. A yard or inclosure where wood and timber are stored for sale. [U. S.]

lumbi, n. Plural of lumbus.

lumbiplex (lum'bi-pleks), n. [Cf. L. lumbus, loin, + LL. plexus, a plaiting; see plexus.] The lumbar plexus (which see, under lumber¹).

lumbiplexal (lum-bi-plek'sal), a. [Cf. lumbiplex + -al.] Of or pertaining to the lumbiplex, or lumbar plexus of nerves. Cowles.

lumbocotomy (lum'bō-kō-lōt'ō-mi), n. [Cf. L. lumbus, loin, + Gr. kōtōn, colon, + tomē, a cutting.] In surg., incision into the colon in the lumbar region.

lumbodynia (lum-bō-din'i-ā), n. [NL., < L. lumbus, loin, + Gr. ōdinv, pain.] In pathol., myalgia in the lumbar region; lumbago.

lumbo-inguinal (lum'bō-ingwi-nal), a. [Cf. L. lumbus, loin, + inguen, groin.] Pertaining to the loin and the groin: as, a lumbo-inguinal nerve.

lumbosacral (lum'bō-sā'krāl), a. [Cf. L. lumbus, loin, + NL. sacrum.] Pertaining to the lumbar and the sacral region of the spine.—Lumbosacral cord, the nerve formed by the union of the fifth lumbar nerve and the branch from the fourth.—Lumbosacral ligament, a ligament passing from the transverse process of the last lumbar vertebra to become attached to the lateral surface of the base of the sacrum.

lumberic (lum'brik), n. [Cf. ME. lumberike = F. lombrie = Sp. lombriz = Pg. lombriga = It. lom- brico, < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm.] A worm. Clarke. [Rare.] lumbrical (lum'brī-kal), a. and n. [= F. Pg. lombrical = Sp. lombrical = It. lombricale, < NL. lumbricalis, < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm: see lumbric.] I. a. Pertaining to or resembling a worm; lumbriciform; vermiform: specifically applied in anatomy to the lumbricals.

II. n. A lumbrical muscle. See lumbricalis. lumbricalis (lum-bri-kā'lis), n.; pl. lumbricales (-lēs). [NL.: see lumbrical.] In anat., a lumbrical muscle: so called from its resemblance in size and shape to a worm. There are four of these small muscles in the palm of the hand and four in the sole of the foot, sometimes distinguished as lumbricales manus and lumbricales pedis; the former are also called fiduciales, or fidler's muscles, because they contribute to the quick movements of the musician's fingers. They are ancillary to the deep flexor muscles. Each lumbricalis arises from one of the tendons of a deep flexor muscle, whether of hand or foot, and is inserted into the side of the base of that finger or toe which such tendon supplies. Neither the thumb nor the great toe has a lumbricalis. Similar muscles occur in some mammals besides man.

Lumbricidæ (lum-bris'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lumbricus + -idæ.] A family of terricolous annelids of the order Oligochaeta, typified by the genus Lumbricus; earthworms. The body is long, cylindrical, or nearly so, with numerous rings or segments, bearing bristly parapodia which assist in progression, some of the segments being modified into a cingulum or clitellum. There are no eyes, ears, or oral armature. See earthworm.

lumbricide (lum'brī-sīd), n. [Contr. of lumbricicide*, < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, + -cida, a killer, < caedere, kill.] A vermifuge or anthelmintic which destroys the roundworm, Ascaris lumbricoides.

lumbriciform (lum-bris'i-fōrm), a. [< L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm (see lumbric), + forma, form.] Like an earthworm in form; lumbricine; lumbricoid; vermiform.

Lumbricina (lum-bri-sī'nā), n. pl. [NL., < Lumbricus + -ina.] A tribe of annelids, the terricolous oligochaetous worms, such as earthworms.

lumbricine (lum'brī-sin), a. [< NL. lumbricinus, < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm: see lumbric.] Lumbriciform; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lumbricina.

lumbricoid (lum'brī-koid), a. and n. [< L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm (see lumbric), + Gr. εἶδος, form.] I. a. Resembling an earthworm: specifically applied to the internal parasite Ascaris lumbricoides, a nematoid, one of the commonest of the worms which infest man. See Ascaris.

II. n. The worm Ascaris lumbricoides.

Lumbricomorpha (lum-bri-kō-mōr'fā), n. pl. [NL., < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm (see lumbric), + Gr. μόρφη, form.] The earthworms and their allies, regarded as one of four orders of oligochaetous annelids.

Lumbriculidæ (lum-bri-kū'li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lumbriculus + -idæ.] A family of oligochaetous annelids, taking name from the genus Lumbriculus.

Lumbriculus (lum-brik'ū-lus), n. [NL., dim. of L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm: see lumbric.] A genus of aquatic or limicoline oligochaetous annelids, the type of the family Lumbriculidæ. It is remarkable for the power of reproduction by transverse fission which its members possess. The worm breaks in two, and proceeds to develop a new head for one of its pieces and a new tail for the other.

Lumbricus (lum-brī'kus), n. [NL., < L. lumbricus, an intestinal worm, an earthworm: see lumbric.] The typical genus of Lumbricidæ, and together with Pericheta composing that family; the earthworms proper, as L. terrestris.

lumbus (lum'bus), n.; pl. lumbi (lum'bī). [L., loin: see loin.] In anat., the loin; the lumbar region of the body.—Quadratus lumborum, the square muscle of the loins, a stout thick muscle of quadrilateral shape extending from the twelfth rib to the crest of the ilium on each side of the spinal column.

lumet, v. i. An obsolete form of *loom*².

lumen (lū'men), n.; pl. lumina (-mī-nā). [NL., < L. lumen, light, a light, a window: see luminous.] 1. An opening or passageway, as, in anat., of a hollow tubular organ: as, the lumen of the intestine or of a blood-vessel.

Tracheotomy was resorted to, the larger lumen of the tube affording a freer vent. Lancet, No. 3454, p. 949.

2. In bot., the internal cavity, or space within the wall, of a cell.

In thin sections of the sclerotin thin lumina appear in all possible forms. De Bary, Fungi (trans.), p. 321.

lum-head (lum'hed), n. A chimney-top. [Scotch.]

The . . . blue reek that came out of the lum-head. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxvii.

lumière (F. pron. lū-miār'), n. [F., < LL. luminare, < L. lumen, light: see lumen.] In armor. the opening in the vizor, whether of the large helm of the thirteenth century, of the bassinet, or of the armet of the fifteenth century.

lumina, n. Plural of lumen.

luminant (lū'mī-nānt), a. and n. [< LL. luminan(t)s, ppr. of luminare, brighten: see luminare.] I. a. Emitting light; shining; luminous.

II. n. An illuminating agent. [Rare.]

Public institutions and factories are very much in favour of the new luminant. Elect. Rev. (Eng.), XXIV, 334.

luminarist (lū'mī-nār-ist), n. [< luminar(y) + -ist.] In painting, a master of light and shade; one skilful in rendering gradations and effects of light or of shadow.

The finest works of that great and subtle luminarist Adrian van Ostade. The Academy, Jan. 21, 1880, p. 48.

luminary (lū'mī-nār-ī), n.; pl. luminaries (-rīz). [< OP. luminaria, F. luminare, a light = Pg. Sp. luminar, luminaria = It. luminare, luminara, luminaria, < LL. luminare, a lamp, a light, L. lumen, a window, < lumen (lumin-), light: see luminous.] 1. A light-giver; a body that illuminates or gives out light: applied especially to the sun and moon.

Where the great luminary . . . Disperses light from far. Milton, P. L., iii, 576.

Hence—2. One who is a source of intellectual light; a person who illustrates any subject, or enlightens mankind: as, the great luminaries of an age; a luminary of literature or science.

It will not be necessary to bring under review the minor luminaries of this period. Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., i, 1.

3. An illumination.

There were Luminaries of Joy lately here for the Victory that Don Gonzalex de Cordova got over Count Manselint in the Netherlands. Howell, Letters, I, iii, 14.

luminatē (lū'mī-nāt), v. t. [< LL. luminatus, pp. of luminare, illumine, < L. lumen (lumin-), light: see luminous. Cf. illuminate, illumine, illumine, illumine, etc.] To illuminate.

lumination (lū'mī-nā'shūn), n. [*< LL. as if luminatio(n)-, < luminare, shine: see luminare.] 1. Illumination. Johnson.—2. A lighting up; a flashing out, as of light or energy; an illuminating outburst. [Rare.]

The liberty of the Netherlands, notwithstanding several brilliant but brief luminations, occurring at irregular intervals, seemed to remain in almost perpetual eclipse. Molloy, Dutch Republic, I, 43.

luminet (lū'min), v. t. [< ME. lumen, < LL. luminare, shine: see luminatē and *loom*². Cf. illumine.] To illumine; enlighten. See illumine.

Thus the outward part of the place luminet the eyes of the beholders, by reason of y^e sumptuous work. Hall, Ilist. Hen. VIII., an. 12.

lumine (lū'min), n. [< L. lumen (lumin-), light: see lumen, luminous.] The principle or the medium of light; the luminiferous ether. London Jour. Arts, Sci., and Manuf., 1848.

luminert, n. An obsolete form of lumner.

lumineret, n. A Middle English form of lumner.

luminescence (lū-mī-nēs'ens), n. [< luminescere (+ -ce).] See the quotation. [Rare.]

In a former paper I have ventured to employ the term luminescence for all those phenomena of light which are more intense than corresponds to the actual temperature. E. Weidemann, Philosophical Mag., 5th ser., XXVIII, 151.

luminescēt (lū-mī-nēs'ent), a. [< L. luminare, shine, + -escent.] Characterized by luminescence. [Rare.]

Luminescēt light is in a high degree dependent in colour and intensity upon the mode of production. E. Weidemann, Philosophical Mag., 5th ser., XXVIII, 155.

luminiferous (lū-mī-nif'ē-rus), a. [< L. lumen (lumin-), light, + ferre = *E. bear*¹.] 1. In physics, producing or bearing light; yielding light: as, the luminiferous ether. See *ether*¹, 2.

The luminiferous motions are only components of the whole motion. Sir W. Thomson, Reprint of Papers, p. 419.

2. Serving as a medium for conveying light.

luminologist (lū-mī-nol'ō-jist), n. One who is versed in the study of illuminations (of manuscripts).

He incorporates manuscript notes placed at his disposal by our veteran Gosse, and by luminologists such as Gigliotti, Dubois, and others. Nature, XXXVII, 411.

luminosity (lū-mī-nos'ī-ti), n. [= F. luminosité = It. luminosità, < ML. luminosita(t)s, splendor, < L. luminosus, luminous: see luminous.] 1. The quality of being luminous or bright; luminousness; the radiation or reflection of light.

The luminosity of ordinary flames depends on the pressure of the supporting medium.

E. Frankland, Exper. in Chem., p. 904.

2. Specifically, the intensity of light in a color, measured photometrically. That is to say, a standard light has its intensity, or vis viva, altered until it produces the impression of being equally bright with the color whose luminosity is to be determined; and the measure of the vis viva of the altered light relatively to its standard intensity is then taken as the luminosity of the color in question.

It is evident, then, that brightness or luminosity is one of the properties by which we can define colour: it is our second colour constant. This word luminosity is also often used by artists in an entirely different sense; they call colour in a painting luminous simply because it recalls to the mind the impression of light, not because it actually reflects much light to the eye.

O. N. Rood, Modern Chromatics.

3. In bot., phosphorescence.

luminous (lū'mī-nus), a. [< F. lumineux = Sp. Pg. It. luminoso, < L. luminosus, luminous, shining, < lumen (lumin-), light, for luemen*, < luere, shine: see lucent, *light*¹.] 1. Radiating or reflecting light; giving out light, whether as an original or as a secondary source; illuminating; shining; radiant; bright.—2. Producing or adapted to produce light; having the power of yielding light.

The admission of luminous waves gives a perfectly satisfactory explanation . . . of the great majority of the phenomena of light. Lommel, Light (trans.), p. 218.

3. Lighted up; illuminated; bright; clear; resplendent; rendering an effect of lightness or brightness, as a work of art or a color.

The church of St. Justina, designed by Palladio, is the most handsome, luminous, disencumbered building in the inside that I have ever seen.

Addison, Remarks on Italy (ed. Bohu), I, 384.

Making the dusk and silence of the woods Glad with the laughter of the chasing floods, And luminous with blown spray and silver gleams. Whittier, Franconis from the Pemigewasset.

4. Figuratively, brilliant; bright or resplendent to the mind. [Rare.]

He [Bunsen] is really luminous, and his conversation equally amusing and instructive. Greville, Memoirs, April 9, 1830.

5. Clear or evident to the mind, as if emitting light or as if illuminated; of such a nature as to be readily apprehended by the understanding.

None of his critics has refused him [Boscovitch] the praise of the most luminous perspicuity.

D. Stewart, Philos. Essays, i, 2.

6. Characterized by perspicuity of thought: as, a luminous intellect.—Luminous animals or plants, those animals or plants which emit light from the whole or some part of the body.—Luminous currents, a term sometimes applied to electric currents through rarefied gases (see Geissler's tubes, under tube).—Luminous paint. See paint.

luminously (lū'mī-nus-ly), adv. In a luminous manner; with brightness or clearness. Smart.

luminousness (lū'mī-nus-ness), n. The quality of being luminous, in any sense; brightness; clearness.

lummakin (lum'a-kin), a. [Cf. lummox.] Heavy; awkward. [Prov. Eng.] lumme (lum), n. A variant of *loom*³.

lummo (lum'oks), n. [Cf. lummakin; prob. ult. connected with *lump*¹.] An unwieldy, clumsy, stupid fellow. [Prov. Eng. and U. S.] lummy (lum'i), a. [Origin obscure.] Knowing; cute. [Thieves' slang.]

To think of Jack Dawkins—lummy Jack—the Dodger, the Artful Dodger, going abroad for a common twopenny-half-penny sneeze-box! Dickens, Oliver Twist, xlii.

lump¹ (lump), n. [< ME. lompe, lumpe, < Sw. dial. and Norw. lump, a stump, a piece cut off from a log; cf. OD. lompe, D. lompe, a rag, tatter, = late MHG. lumpe, G. lumpen, a rag, tatter, lump, a ragamuffin, curmudgeon; prob. ult. akin (as a nasalized form) to *lap*². Cf. lunch, *clump*¹.] 1. A small mass; a relatively small aggregation or conglomeration of solid matter without regular form: as, a lump of ore, clay, or dough; to melt a number of coins into one lump.

A loaf other half a loaf, other a lompe of cheese.

Piers Plowman (C), x, 150.

A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. Gal. v, 9. "Deborah, my dear," cried I to my wife, "give these hoys a lump of augar each." Goldsmith, Vicar, or sv.

2. A protuberant part; a knob, bunch, or swelling: as, a lump raised on the head by a blow.—3. A blow.

Hittes hym on the hede, that the helme bratis; Hurtes his herne-pane an haunde-brede large! Thus he layes one the lumpe, and lordye theme served, Wendide worthily wircyghttez!

Morte Arthur (E. E. T. S.), I, 2230.

4. A dull, stolid person.

Did you mark the gentleman,
How boldly and how saucily he talk'd,
And how unlike the lump I took him for,
The piece of ignorant dough?
Fletcher, Rule a Wife, iii. 1.

5. In firearms: (a) The nipple-seat on the barrel. (b) In a break-joint breech-loader, an iron block on the barrel which descends into a recess in the action.—6. A bloom or loup of malleable iron.—In the lump, as a whole; in the entirety; in gross.

He dwells altogether in generals. He praises or dispraises in the lump.
Addison, Sir Timothy Tittle.

Lump sum, a sum of money paid at one time, so as to cover several charges or items.—Lump work, work undertaken to be done in the aggregate, so as to include all the parts of it, for a stipulated payment, as by contract.

lump¹ (lump), v. [< lump¹, n.] I. trans. 1. To make into a mass; combine in a body or gross sum without distinction of particulars.

Therefore la Space, and therefore Time, that men may know that all things are not budded and lumped, but sundered and individual.
Emerson, Discipline.

2. To take in the lump, or collectively in the gross; consider or dispose of in the gross.

Not forgetting all others, whom for brevity, but out of no resentment to you, I lump all together.
Sterne.

3. To beat severely. [Prov. Eng.]

II. intrans. To act as a lumper; be employed in loading or unloading ships, as a stovedore.

lump² (lump), n. [Appar. a particular use of lump¹; the D. lump, G. lump (lumpfisch), also klumpfisch, F. lompe, It. lumpo, lumpo, the fish so called, are appar. from E.] The lump-fish.

Lumps are of two sorts, the one as round almost as a bowle, the other resembling the fillets of a calfe; either of them is deformed, shapeless, and ugly. . . . Being flayed they receive a soft and gellied substance.
Muffet, quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), II. 44.

lump³ (lump), v. i. [Prob. < lump¹, with some addition of sense from glum and glump, which mean the same.] To look sullen or glum; sulk.

It did so ganle her at the harte, that now she began to lroune, lumpe, and lowre at her housebando.
Riche, His Farwell (1581). (Narces.)

lump⁴ (lump), v. t. [A vague slang use, an indefinite antithesis to like, but prob. orig. identical with lump¹, v. t., 2, 'take in the lump', i. e. swallow whole. There is no necessary connection with lump³.] To take without choice; take "anyhow"; a word in itself of no definite signification, used in the expression "if you don't like it, you may lump it." [Slang.]

And I told him, if he didn't like it he might lump it, and he travelled off on his left ear, you bet!
Bret Harte, Five o'Clock in the Morning.

lumpent. Past participle of lump³.

lumper (lum'pēr), n. 1. In some places, a laborer employed to load and unload vessels in port; a dock-hand; a longshoreman; a stevedore.—2. A militiaman. [Prov. Eng.]

He hath a cursed spite to us, because we shot his father. He was going to bring the lumpers upon us, only he was afear'd, last winter.
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xxxviii.

3. In zool., one who lumps several described species, genera, etc., in one; opposed to splitter. [Cont.]

The second paper contains, first, a discussion of some principles of zoological classification, being an answer to Dr. Seeborn's reproach of having . . . aimed at "hitting the happy medium between lumpers and splitters."
Nature, XXXIX. 156.

lump-fish (lump'fish), n. [= G. lumpfisch (also klumpfisch); < lump² + fish¹.] An acanthopterygian fish, Cyclopterus lumpus, of the family Cyclopteridae. It is of uncouth form, with a high ridged back and a hump in which is concealed the small spinous dorsal fin, a flattish abdomen, a thick loose skin with a median dorsal and three lateral rows of spinous plates and small intervening tubercles, and a thoracic circular suctorial disk constituted by the united ventral fins, by means of which it adheres with great force to any substance to which it applies itself. Before the spawning season it is of a brilliant crimson color, mingled with orange, purple, and blue, but afterward changes to a dull-blue or lead-color. It sometimes weighs seven pounds, and its flesh is very fine at some seasons, though insipid at others. It frequents the northern seas, and is often brought to the Edinburgh and London markets. A Scotch name for it is cockpailde. Also called lump-sucker, from its power of adhesion, and sea-owl, from its uncouth appearance. See Cyclopterus.

lumpiness (lum'pi-nes), n. The quality or condition of being lumpy or full of lumps.

lumping (lum'ping), p. a. [< lump¹ + -ing².] Bulky; chunky; heavy. Arbutnot.

Ho gives what is called the lumping ha'p'orth—that is, seven or eight pieces.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 170.

lumpish (lum'pish), a. [Formerly also lompish; < MD. lumpisch; < lump¹ + -ish¹.] 1. Like a lump; unforged; gross; dense.

And, lifting up his lumpish head, with blame
Half angle asked him, for what he came.
Spenser, F. Q., I. i. 43.

He [Chaucer] found our language lumpish, stiff, unwilling.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 265.

2. Clumsy; dull; stolid; stupid.

A lumpish blackhead churl, . . . which hath no more wit than an ass.
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), II. 6.

When the enormous growth of personality has quite rolled away the old lumpish terror that stood before the cave of the physical and darkened it.
S. Lanier, The English Novel, p. 95.

lumpishly (lum'pish-li), adv. [< ME. lumpischly; < lumpish + -ly².] In lumps; in a lumpish or awkward manner; heavily; with dullness or stupidity.

Who-so speke to thee in any maner place,
Lumpischli caste not thin heed a-doun.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 27.

Men came of all sorts; the intelligent well-paid artisan, . . . huge carters and draymen, the boy attached to each by the laws of the profession often atragging lumpishly behind his master. Mrs. H. Ward, Robert Elsmere, xlix.

lumpishness (lum'pish-nes), n. The quality of being lumpish; heaviness; dullness; stolidity.

Methinks, I dwell in a kind of disconsolate darkness, and a sad lumpishness of unbelief, wanting that lightsome assurance which others profess to find in themselves.
Bp. Hall, The Comforter.

lump-sucker (lump'suk'er), n. Same as lump-fish.

lump-sugar (lump'shug'ür), n. Loaf-sugar broken into lumps, or cut into small cubes.

lumpus (lum'pus), n. [NL. (Aldrovandi, 1646), < E. lump².] The lump-fish: now its technical specific name.

lumpy (lum'pi), a. [< lump¹ + -y¹.] 1. Abounding in lumps or small aggregated masses; consisting of or formed into lumps. Specifically applied by boatmen to rough water in which the waves do not break, but run in small, irregular, roundish swells.

One of the best spades to dig hard lumpy clays, but too small for light garden mould. Mortimer, Unshandry.

The bow end is immersed with a view of doing away with the "spanking" of the flat floor when the boats are driven in lumpy water. Qualtrough, Boat Sailer's Manual, p. 85.

2. Heavy; clumsy; dense; dull.

lumpy-jaw (lum'pi-jä), n. In pathol., actinomyces affecting the jaw.

luna (lü'nä), n. [L. the moon, orig. luena*, < luere, shine; see lucent.] 1. The moon; personified as a Roman goddess, Luna, answering to the Greek goddess Selene.—2. An occasional form of crescent-headed arrow with the concave side outermost and sharpened. Arrows of this form, like the rarer ones with a chisel-shaped head, were intended to cut the hamstring of horses and of animals of the chase.

3. In alchemy, silver.—4. The luna-moth.—Luna cornea, horn-silver: an alchemistic name for fused silver chlorid.

lunacy (lü'nä-si), n.; pl. lunacies (-siz). [Irreg. < luna(tic) + -cy¹.] 1. The kind of intermittent insanity formerly supposed to be subject to the changes of the moon; hence, madness in general; any unsoundness of mind. See insanity.

The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunacies.
Shak., Hamlet, iii. 3. 7.

2. In law, unsoundness of mind sufficient to incapacitate for civil transactions. The usual test is incapacity to manage one's own property and affairs.—Commissioner in lunacy, a commissioner appointed pursuant to law to visit and inspect asylums and grant licenses to persons who undertake to receive and provide for patients.—Commission of lunacy. See commission¹.—Master in lunacy, a judicial or quasi-judicial officer chosen to investigate the mental condition of persons supposed to be insane, or to supervise the administration of asylums, or both.—Syn. Derangement, Craziness, etc. See insanity.

luna-moth (lü'nä-möth), n. A large bombycid moth, Actias luna, the most beautiful of North American insects, of a light-green color relieved by uniform eye-spots and by a broad purplish-brown or lilaceous anterior border. The body is whitish, with a brown bar across the thorax. The full-grown moth expands about 5 inches, and the hinder wings are tailed to the length of an inch or more. The larva is greenish, and feeds on walnut, hickory, sweet-gum, beech, birch, willow, and plum. The eggs are laid in small batches on the twigs. The cocoon is formed within a leaf, and in autumn drops to the ground, where it remains through the winter. The caterpillar is known as the luna-silkworm.

lunar (lü'när), a. and n. [= F. lunaire = Pr. Sp. Pg. lunar = It. lunare, < L. lunaris, of the moon, lunar, < luna, the moon; see luna.] I. a.

1. Of, pertaining, or relating to the moon: as, the lunar changes; lunar observations.—2. Situated or moving like the moon; acting as a moon.—3. Measured by the revolutions of the moon: as, lunar months or years.—4. Resembling the moon; round: as, a lunar shield. Specifically, in anat. and zool.: (a) Resembling a half-moon; semilunar; crescentic; lunate: as, lunar markings; a lunar bone. (b) In entom., marked with crescentic or luniform spots; lunated.

5. Supposed to be affected by or due to the influence of the moon: as, lunar madness.

They have denominated some herbs solar and some lunar, and such like toys put into great words.
Bacon, Nat. Hist.

6. In anat., of or pertaining to the lunare, or semilunar bone of the earpus.—7. Pertaining to silver: from the moon being the alchemical symbol of that metal: as, lunar caustic (nitrate of silver).—Lunar bone, a certain bone of the wrist or carpus. See lunare.—Lunar caustic. See caustic.—Lunar cycle. Same as Metonic cycle (which see, under cycle¹).—Lunar distance, in naut. astron., the distance of the moon from the sun, or from a fixed star or planet lying nearly in the line of its path, by means of which the longitude of a ship at sea may be calculated.—Lunar equation. See equation.—Lunar hornet-moth, Scia bombyciformis, a hornet-moth having a crescentic yellow spot on the thorax, and a black crescent on each fore wing: an English collectors' name.—Lunar macula. See macula.—Lunar mansion, one of 28 (or 27) parts into which the ecliptic was or is divided by various oriental peoples, as the Hindus, Chinese, and Arabians, their mean length being the path of the moon in one day among the stars. Each mansion is determined by certain stars occupying it.—Lunar method, in naut. astron., the method of determining longitude from observation of lunar distances.—Lunar month. See month.—Lunar nodes. See node.—Lunar observation, an observation of the moon's distance from a star for the purpose of finding the longitude.—Lunar stars, certain stars and other celestial objects whose geocentric distance from the moon is given in the Nautical Almanac for certain hours, so that by measuring the apparent distance of the moon from one or more of them the longitude can be found.

He knew every lunar star in both hemispheres.
E. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 228.

Lunar tables. (a) In astron., tables of the moon's motions for computing the moon's true place at any time, past or future. (b) In navigation, tables for correcting the apparent distance of the moon from the sun, or from a fixed star, on account of refraction and parallax, and for deducing the longitude of the observer from the lunar data given in the almanac.—Lunar theory, the deduction of the moon's motion from the law of gravitation.—Lunar underwing, Anochetus lunosa, a small noctuid moth of ochre-brown color, whose underwings are marked with a crescentic darker spot: an English collectors' name.—Lunar year. See year.

II. n. In navigation, lunar distance, or an observation for lunar distance: as, to take a lunar.

These trials were partly made at Greenwich by Maskelyne, who, as we shall see, was a great advocate of lunars, and was not ready to admit more than a subsidiary value to the watch.
Encyc. Brit., XVII. 259.

lunare (lü-nä'rē), n.; pl. lunaria (-ri-ä). [NL., neut. (se. os) of L. lunaris, lunar; see lunar.] A bone of the carpus, more fully named os lunare, and also called semilunare, or the semilunar bone: supposed to represent the bone of the typical carpus called intermedium by Gegenbaur. It is sometimes fused with the scaphoid, forming a single scapholunar bone, as in carnivores. When distinct, as in man, it is the middle bone of the proximal row, between the scaphoid and the cuneiform.

Lunaria (lü-nä'ri-ä), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), < L. lunaris, of the moon; see lunar.] 1. A genus of cruciferous herbs of the tribe Alyssineae, characterized by entire cordate leaves and a very broad siliqua on a long stipe, the seeds being attached by long stalks. There are two species, found in Europe and western Asia. L. annua (including L. biennis) is the common honesty, also called satin-flower, and bolbonac, cultivated for its racemes of large purple flowers and the silvery partitions of the fruit. L. redifera, the perennial honesty, is also cultivated, but less commonly.

2. [l. c.] Plural of lunare and lunarium.

lunarian (lü-nä'ri-an), n. [< L. lunaris, of the moon (see lunar), + -ian.] 1. One of the (supposed) inhabitants of the moon.—2. One versed in knowledge of the moon; a student of lunar phenomena. Also lunarist.—3. An advocate of the lunar method of finding longitude at sea: a term which has lost its significance since the chronometer has reached its present state of perfection.

There were powerful competitors who hoped to gain it [a reward offered for the best method of finding longitude at sea] by lunars, and a bill was passed through the House in 1763 which left an open chance for a lunarian during four years.
Encyc. Brit., XVII. 259.

lunarist (lü'när-ist), n. [< lunar + -ist.] Same as lunarian, 2.

In such grand disturbances as these [storms], the Lunarist should endeavour to trace influences of moon, and the Astro-meteorologist even those of planets.
Fitz Roy, Weather Book, p. 213.

lunarium (lū-nā'-ri-um), n.; pl. lunariums, lunaria (-umz, -ā). [NL., < L. lunaris, of the moon: see lunar.] A mechanical representation of the moon and its phases.

What is become of the Lunarium for the King?
Jefferson, Correspondence, II. 393.

lunary† (lū'nā-ri), a. [< L. lunaris, of the moon: see lunar.] Same as lunar.

The Greeks observed the lunary year—that is, twelve revolutions of the moon, 354 days.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 12.

lunary² (lū'nā-ri), n.; pl. lunaries (-riz). [< ME. lunarie = OF. lunaire, < ML. lunaria, moonwort (in NL. the specific name of the plant), < L. lunaris, of the moon: see lunar.] 1. The garden-flower Lunaria annua. See honesty, 5, and Lunaria.—2. The moonwort, Botrychium Lunaria. This herb was formerly supposed to have the power of opening locks and drawing the shoes from the feet of horses. (See quotation under lunatic, a., 3.) The name was formerly applied to various other real or imaginary plants having superstitious associations.

luna-silkworm (lū'nā-silk'werm), n. The caterpillar of the luna-moth, Actias luna.

Luna-silkworm (Actias luna), natural size.

lunata, n. Plural of lunatum.

lunate (lū'nāt), a. [< L. lunatus, crescent-shaped, pp. of lunare, bend like a crescent, < luna, the moon: see luna.] 1. Crescent-shaped, or like the moon in its first quarter; having a figure formed by a part of a circle cut off by the segment of a larger circle.—2. In zool., same as lunated, 2.—Lunate palpi, in entom., palpi having the last joint crescent-shaped.

lunated (lū'nāt-ed), a. 1. Formed like a crescent.

A sort of cross, which our heralds do not dream of; which is a cross lunated after this manner.
E. Browne, Travels (1685), p. 54.

2. In zool., having crescentiform markings: as, the lunated broadbill, Serriophus lunatus.—Lunated falcon. See falcon.

lunatellus (lū'nā-tel'us), n.; pl. lunatelli (-i). [< L. luna, the moon, + tellus, earth. Cf. tellurian.] An orrery showing the astronomical relations of the earth and the moon. E. H. Knight.

lunately (lū'nāt-li), adv. In the form of a crescent.

More or less lunately curved.
H. C. Wood, Fresh-Water Algae, p. 109.

Lunatia (lū'nā'ti-ā), n. Same as Natica.
lunatic (lū'nā-tik), a. and n. [< ME. lunatik, < OF. lunatique (vernacularly lunage), F. lunatique = Sp. lunático = Pg. It. lunatico, < LL. lunaticus, mad, moonstruck, insane, < L. luna, the moon: see luna.] 1. Moonstruck; affected by lunacy; periodically insane, with lucid intervals; crazy.

Persuade him that he hath been lunatic.
Shak., T. of the S., Ind., i. 63.

It pleased God to restore him againe to life, but so drunke and affrighted that he seemed Lunaticke.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 226.

2. Indicating lunacy; in the nature of lunacy.

Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers.
Shak., Lear, ii. 3. 19.

Of a most lunatic conscience and spleen, and affects the violence of singularity in all he does.
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, i. 1.

3†. Of or like the moon. [An erroneous use.]

That ferrum equinum [lunary] . . . hath a vertue attractive of Iron, a power to break lockes, and draw off the shoes of a horse that passeth over it. . . . Which strange and magicall conceit seemes unto me to have no deeper root in reason then the figure of its seed, for therein indeed it somewhat resembles an horseshoe, which notwithstanding Baptista Porta hath too low a signation, and raised the same unto a Lunatic representation.

Sir T. Browne, Pseud. Epid., ii. 6 (1646, p. 100).

II. n. 1. A person affected with lunacy; specifically, an insane person who has lucid intervals, or one whose unsoundness of mind is acquired, not congenital, as distinguished from an idiot.

I must convince you, not only that the unhappy prisoner was a lunatic, within my own definition of lunacy, but that the act in question was the immediate, unqualified offspring of the disease.
Erskine, Speech for James Hadfield.

A lunatic is one who has had understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident has lost the use of his reason, which yet the law presumes that he may recover.
Minor, Inst. (2d ed.), I. 86.

2. More generally (and in law), any person of unsound mind. See further under lunacy and insanity.

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet
Are of imagination all compact;
One sees more devils than vast hell can hold—
That is, the madman. Shak., M. N. D., v. 1. 8.
'Tis time to take the monarch's power in hand:
Authority and force to join the skill,
And save the lunatics against their will.
Tate (?), in Dryden's Abs. and Achit., xii. 780.

Adjudicated lunatic, one whose incompetency to manage his own property and affairs, by reason of mental unsoundness, has been judicially established by a commission or inquest, and who is thereby interdicted from making contracts and dispositions of property.—Criminal lunatic, a convict, or one in custody under accusation of crime, who has been found to be unfit for trial or for punishment by reason of unsoundness of mind: sometimes used to include also persons not amenable to criminal punishment by reason of having been of unsound mind at the time of committing the crime.—Lunatic asylum, a house or hospital established for the reception and treatment of lunatics. = Syn. See insanity.

lunatical (lū-nat'i-kal), a. [< lunatic + -al.] Affected by or manifesting madness or lunacy; lunatic. [Rare.]

At any rate, he was of a most lunatical deportment.
Howells, Venetian Life, vii.

lunation (lū-nā'shon), n. [< ME. lunacioun = F. lunaison = Sp. lunacion = Pg. lunação = It. lunazione, < ML. lunatio(n)-, the revolution of the moon; in form as if < L. lunare, pp. lunatus, bend like a crescent (see lunare), but in sense directly < luna, the moon: see luna.] The period of a synodic revolution of the moon, or the time from one new moon to the next.

And there is not the Mone seyn in alle the Lunacioun, sat only the seconde quarteroun.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 301.

When it is stated that during four lunations twelve series of observations only were secured, some idea of the amount of cloudy weather can be formed.
C. F. Hall, Polar Expedition, p. 323.

lunatum (lū-nā'tum), n.; pl. lunata (-tā). [L., neut. of lunatus, crescent-shaped: see lunare.] A bone of the proximal row of the carpus of some animals, as batrachians, on the radial side of the wrist, probably homologous with the radiale.

lunch (lunch), n. [A var. of lump, as bunch of bump and bunch of hump. In def. 2 lunch is commonly regarded as an abbr. of luncheon, which is therefore by some preferred as the more correct or "elegant" form; but lunch, 2, is derivable as well from lunch, 1, directly; cf. piece in the sense of 'a slight repast.' See luncheon.] 1. A large lump or piece, as of bread. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

An' cheese and bread, frae women's laps,
Was dealt about in lunches. Burns, Holy Fair.

2. A slight repast or meal between breakfast and dinner, or, as formerly, between dinner and supper, or between dinner or supper and bedtime; luncheon.

As for the lunches, the one is pure Sicilian, of the fruits of the orchard and the vine; the other, pure Briton, smacking of the cook and the larder.
Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 231.

lunch (lunch), v. i. [< lunch, n.] To take a lunch or luncheon.

I have breakfasted with Bolivar—I have lunched with Napoleon—I have dined with Wellington—and now, blessed be the stars above, here am I drinking tea with North and Ticker.
Notes Ambrosianae, Sept. 1, 1832.

We lunched fairly upon little dishes of rose leaves delicately preserved.
Howells, Venetian Life, xiii.

lunch-counter (lunch'konn'tér), n. A counter or long elevated table in an eating-house or other house of entertainment, at which persons sit on high stools or stand while taking a lunch; also, colloquially, a standee. [U. S.]

luncheon (lun'chun), n. [Formerly also luncheon, lunshin; a dial. word, prob. for lunchin*, lunching*, < lunch + -ing.] The termination, like that of the unrelated nuncheon, simulates a F. origin.] 1. A large lump or piece, as of bread: same as lunch, 1. Cotgrave.

I sliced the luncheon from the harley-loaf.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Tuesday, l. 70.

I instantly borrowed the old man's knife, and, taking up the loaf, cut myself a hearty luncheon.
Sterne, Sentimental Journey, p. 115.

2. A slight repast: same as lunch, 2. The form luncheon is now regarded as more "elegant" than lunch.

He was introduced to the early dinner, where all the children sat in their high chairs, and where the food was more wholesome than delicate—a meal which was too plainly dinner to be disguised under the name of luncheon.
Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xiv.

luncheon (lun'chun), v. i. [< luncheon, n.] To take lunch or luncheon. [Rare.]

While ladies are luncheoning on Perigord pie, or couraging in whirling britisks, performing all the angular ceremonies of a London morning in the heart of the season.
Disraeli.

luncheon-bar (lun'chun-bär), n. In Great Britain, a part of an inn or public house where luncheon can be had. Compare lunch-counter.

lunda (lun'dä), n. [A native name.] 1. The common puffin, Fratercula arctica. Montagu.—2. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of Alcidae, having the bill much as in Fratercula, but the head adorned with a long curly crest on each side; the tufted puffins. L. cirrata is a common species of the North Pacific ocean from California to Kamchatka. See Fratercula and puffin.

lundrest (lun'dres), n. [< F. Londres, London.] A sterling silver penny formerly coined in London. Encyc. Diet.

lune¹ (lün), n. [< F. lune = Sp. Pg. It. luna, < L. luna, the moon: see luna.] 1. Anything in the shape of a crescent or half-moon. [Rare.]

Some faithful janizaries atrew'd the field,
Fall'n in just ranks or wedged, lunes or squares,
Firm as they stood.
Watts, Lyric Poems, ii. (Encyc. Diet.)

2. In geom., a figure formed on a sphere or on a plane by two arcs of circles which inclose a space. Hippocrates, probably a contemporary of the celebrated physician of that name, squared those plane lunes (σφαιρικά) which are contained by two arcs standing on the same chord, the central angles of the arcs being to one another as 1:2 or 1:3 or 2:3.

The lune of Hippocrates is famous as being the first curvilinear space whose area was exactly determined.
Davies.

3†. A fit of lunacy or madness; a mad freak or tantrum.

His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Shak., T. and C., ii. 3. 139.

lune² (lün), n. [Prob. another form of line.] A leash: as, the lune of a hawk.

The lunes, or small thongs of leather, might be fastened to them with two tyrris, or rings; and the lunes were loosely wound round the little finger.
Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 91.

lune³ (lün), n. Another spelling of *loon*².

Lunel (lū-nel'), n. [F.] A sweet and rich white muscat wine, similar to Frontignan, produced in the south of France, in the department of Hérault.

lunet (lū'net), n. [< F. lunette, OF. lunete, dim. of lune, the moon: see lune.] Cf. lunette.] A little moon; a satellite.

Our predecessors could never have believed that there were such lunetes about some of the planets as our late perspectives have descryed.
Ep. Hall, Peace-Maker, § 10.

lunette (lū-net'), n. [< F. lunette, dim. of lune, the moon: see lune.] 1. In fort., a detached work with flanks, presenting a salient angle to the enemy, intended for the protection of avenues, bridges, and the curtains of field-works.—2. In farriery, a half-horseshoe, having only the front.—

Lunette, def. 1.

3. A blinder for the eye of a horse.—4. In arch.: (a) The aperture formed by the intersection of any vault by a vault of smaller dimensions; particularly, such an aperture in a vaulted ceiling for the admission of light. Of this class are the upper lights of the naves of St. Peter's at Rome and St. Paul's in London.

The effigy is placed under a Gothic arch whose lunette once contained a fresco by the Sienese painter Pietro Lorenzetti.
C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, p. 59.

(b) A small aperture or window, especially if curved or circular, in a roof.—5. In a glass-furnace, the flue connecting the fire-chamber and the pot-chamber. E. H. Knight.—6. A watch-crystal flattened in the center; also, a kind of concavo-convex lens for spectacles.—7. In archaeol., a crescent ornament made of thin gold and intended as a diadem or gorget, found in ancient tombs of various epochs.—8. A work of art of such a shape as to fill a lunette, especially a painting or panel of such shape: as, the lunettes of Correggio.

A lunette for an altar of the Church of Saint Agostino. The Portfolio, March, 1888, p. 62.

9. One of the two open loops of steel which constitute the guard of the ordinary fleuret or foil used in fencing.—10. In artillery, an iron ring at the end of the trail-plate of a gun-carriage, to be placed over the pintle-hook of the limber in limbering up.—11. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., a crescent-shaped or circular case of crystal fitted into the monstrance for the purpose of receiving the consecrated host for solemn exposition.

lung (lung), n. [< ME. lunge, longe (pl. lunges), < AS. lungon (not lunga*), pl. lungena (not lungan*) = OFries. lungen, lungene = MD. longe, D. long = OHG. lungunna, lungina, lungina, lungū, MHG. lungene, G. lunge = leel, lung, pl. lungu = Sw. lunga = Dan. lunge, lung; akin to AS. lungor (= OHG. lungar, MHG. lungar), quick (orig. light), lungre, quickly (orig. lightly), and to AS. lecht, lht (orig. linht*), light: see light², a., and cf. light², n., in pl., lungs (of an animal); cf. also Eg. leel, lung, < leel, light, < L. levis, light, akin to E. light², a., and thus ult. to lung.] 1. One of the two spongy or saecular organs, occupying the thorax or upper part of the body-cavity, which communicate with the pharynx through the trachea, and are the organs of respiration in air-breathing vertebrates. The corresponding organs of those animals that breathe under water are the gills or branchiae; in ordinary fishes the homologue of a lung is the air-bladder or sound, whose varying conditions divided into an upper, a middle, and a lower lobe; the left simply into an upper and a lower. At the inner side of each lung, a little above the middle, the bronchia and blood-vessels enter, forming the root of the lung; and except for this attachment the lung lies free in its pleural cavity, which it completely fills. The lung is elastic and always on the stretch. The blood, in passing through the lungs, gives off carbon dioxide to the air in the alveoli, and receives oxygen. This absorption and elimination seems to be a simple mechanical process, and independent of any secreting or other activity of the epithelial cells. In the lower vertebrates there may be but one lung, or one may be much larger than the other. A lung may lie in the general cavity of the body and be of great extent, as in serpents. The lungs are fixed and molded to the ribs in birds, and in this class the air-passages through the lungs expand into great serous sacs which occupy most parts of the body and extend into the hollow bones.

With hys awyrde the bore he atonge
Therow the lyvyr and the longe.
MS. Cantab. Ft. ii. 85, l. 100. (Halliwell.)

And the kynge Ban smote Acolas, that the shulder diseased from the body so depe that the longes apered.
Merril (E. E. T. S.), ii. 357.

2. In entom., one of the respiratory organs peculiar to those Arachnida whose tracheal system is modified into a number of lamellae superimposed upon one another like the leaves of a book. They are also called pulmonary lamellae and respiratory leaflets.—3. In pulmonate mollusks, a modification of the integument subserving aerial respiration: more fully called external lung. Huxley.—4. pl. A bellows-blower; a chemist's servant.

That is his fire-drake,
His Lungs, his Zephyrus, he that puffs his coals.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, ii. 1.

At the top of one's lungs, with the utmost strength of one's force.—Brown induration of the lungs. See induration.—Collier's lung, in pathol., anthracosis.—To try one's lungs, to raise one's voice to its utmost pitch.

I once had the good luck to hear old Christopher North try his lungs in the open air in Scotland. Such laughter and such hill-shaking merry-heartedness I may never listen to again in the Lochs. J. T. Fields, Underbrush, p. 196.

lung¹ (lung), n. [Formerly longe, lounge; by apheresis from alonge, allonge (appar. taken as a longe): see allonge.] 1. In fencing, a thrust.

In a desperate lounge, which Leicester successfully put aside, Tresillian exposed himself at disadvantage.
Scott, Kenilworth, xxxix.

2. Any sudden forward movement of a person or thing resembling the lunge of a fencer; a plunge; a lurch: as, the lunge of a coach. [Colloq.]

He . . . made so sudden a lunge forward that he threatened to upset the boat.
Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 111.

lung² (lung), v.; pret. and pp. lunged, ppr. lunging. [< lunge, n.] 1. Intrans. 1. To thrust, as in fencing, with the sword or foil; make a thrust forward; plunge.

When the grenadiers were lunging,
And like hail fell the plunging Cannon shot.

G. H. McMaster, The Old Continentals.

He . . . caught up the snuffers, and before applying them to the cabbage-headed candle, lunged at the sleeper.
Dickens, Little Dorrit, iv.

2. To hide; skulk. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. To cause to move in a plunging or jumping manner, as a horse held by a long rein, for exercise or training.

The coachman was lunging Georgy round the lawn on the gray pony.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xlv.

The place [a watercourse] should be widened gradually, and the water dammed up, the colt being always lunged over it before being ridden.
Encyc. Brit., XII. 180.

lung² (lung), n. Same as lung¹. lunged (lungd), a. [< lung + -ed².] 1. Having lungs; technically, in zool., pulmonate: common in compounds, as strong- or weak-lunged.—2. Drawing in and expelling air like the lungs. [Poetical.]

The smith prepares his hammer for the stroke,
While the lung'd bellows hissing fire provoke.
Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, x.

lunger (lum'jèr), n. One who lunges or thrusts. To do him justice . . . a swifter lunger never crossed a sword.
Bulwer, Zanoni, ii. 1.

lung-fever (lung'fô'vèr), n. Pneumonia.
lung-fish (lung'fish), n. A dipnoan; any fish of the order Dipnoi.

How difficult a matter it is to decide whether the lung-fish of Brazil and Senegambia belongs to the amphibia or to the fishes.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXX. 678.

lung-flower (lung'flou'èr), n. The marsh-gentian, Gentiana Pneumonanthe: a translation of its specific name.

lung-grown (lung'grôn), a. In med., having lungs that adhere to the pleura.

lungi, n. See loonghee.
lungie, n. See longie.

Structure of Lungs.
A, larynx; B, trachea; C, C, bronchi, right and left; D, D, D, D, ramifications of bronchial tubes or air-passages in lungs; E, E, uncut smooth surface.

are important in classification. (See physoclistous, physostomous, and sound.) Except in their least-developed condition, the lungs are formed by the repeated subdivision of the branches of their bronchi which finally end in saecular dilatations called infundibula. The infundibula and the air-passages immediately leading to them are beset with air-cells. These air-cells or alveoli are from $\frac{1}{15}$ to $\frac{1}{7}$ of an inch in diameter. They are furnished with a close capillary network in which the branches from the pulmonary artery terminate, and the blood is separated from the air only by the capillary wall and the thin alveolar epithelium of the air-cells. This assemblage of minute saecular organs and air-bearing tubes is bound up by connective tissue into the comparatively compact lung. The bronchial arteries and veins provide for the nutrition of the pulmonary structures. Lymphatics abound, and there are numerous lymphatic glands. The vagus and sympathetic supply nerves. In man each lung is pyramidal in form, its base resting on the diaphragm and its apex rising about an inch above the collar-bone. The right lung is ment" of any port, uncorrected for the half-monthly inequality due to the sun's action. The lunittidal interval thus corrected is the mean or corrected "establishment" of the port.

Human Lungs, Heart, and Great Vessels, front view (great vessels except of lungs cut off).

RL, right lung; LL, left lung; RA, right auricle; LA, left auricle; RV, right ventricle; LV, left ventricle; B and B, right and left bronchus; T, trachea; Ao, arch of aorta; PA, pulmonary artery; C and C, right and left carotid artery; SC and SC, right and left subclavian artery and vein; PV and PV, right and left pulmonary vein; RJV and LJV, right and left jugular vein; VS, vena cava superior (its two forks, not lettered, are right and left innominate vein); VI, vena cava inferior; innominate artery, not lettered, lies mostly behind VS, from Ao to origin of right carotid and right subclavian artery.

lunkhead (lungk'hed), n. A heavy, stupid fellow. Bartlett. [Colloq., U. S.]

lunnite (lun'it), n. [Named after Rev. F. Lunn, who analyzed it.] A name sometimes used collectively to include the related copper phosphates dihydrite, ehliite, pseudomalachite, etc.

lunstock, n. An obsolete form of linstock.

lunt (lunt), n. [D. lont, a match, = G. lunte, a match, formerly a lamp-wick, = Sw. lunta = Dan. lunte, a match. Cf. *link*³.] 1. A match, torch, or port-fire anciently used for discharging cannon.—2. The lock and appurtenances of a match-lock gun. See quotation under snappwork.—3. A lively combustion; fire and smoke in general. [Scotch and North. Eng.]

She fufft her pipe w' sic a lunt. Burns, Halloween.

lunt (lunt), v. i. [Cf. lunt, n. Cf. link, v.] To emit smoke; flame; be on fire. [Scotch.]

The luntin pipe an' sneeshin mill
Are handed round w' right guild will.

Burns, The Twa Dogs.

lunula (lū'nū-lā), n.; pl. lunulæ (-lē). [L., dim. of luna, the moon; see luna. Cf. lunule.] Something which is shaped like a little moon or narrow crescent; a lunule or lunulet.

The patrician order wears shoes of black leather (calceus patricius), ornamented with an ivory crescent, and hence called lunula. Encyc. Brit., VI. 457.

Specifically—(a) The free crescentic edge and adjoining thin part of a semilunar valve of the heart. (b) The small white semilunar mark at the base of the human fingernails. (c) A crescentic impression on some bivalve shells; a lunule. (d) A small semicircular or crescentic spot of color; a lunulet. (e) [cap.] A generic name given by Hitchcock to Ichneutes of uncertain character. (f) In math., a lune.

lunular (lū'nū-lār), a. [Cf. L. lunula + -ar³.] Having a form like that of the new moon; shaped like a small crescent; lunulate.

Lunularia (lū'nū-lār-i-ā), n. [NL. (Micheli, 1729), so called in allusion to the lunate form of the gemma-bearing receptacles, cf. L. lunula, a little moon; see lunule.] A genus of Hepaticæ or liverworts, typical of the tribe Lunulariæ. The thallus is oblong, with rounded lobes, distinctly areolate and porose. The carpocephalum is cricately divided into one to six, usually four, horizontal segments, which are tubular and one-fruited; the capsule is exerted on a long pedicel, and is four- to eight-valved. The only species, L. cruciata, is introduced into greenhouses.

Lunulariæ (lū'nū-lār-i-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Lunularia + -æ.] A former tribe of Hepaticæ or liverworts, established by Nees von Esenbeck, 1833-8, and typified by the genus Lunularia.

lunulate (lū'nū-lāt), a. [Cf. NL. lunulatus, < L. lunula, a little moon, new moon; see lunule.] 1. Shaped like a new moon; narrowly crescented.—2. In zool., having one or several small crescentic markings. P. L. Slater.

lunulated (lū'nū-lā-ted), a. Same as lunulate.

lunule (lū'nūl), n. [Cf. L. lunula, a little moon, dim. of luna, the moon; see luna, *lunel*¹.] Something in the shape of a little moon or crescent. (a) In conch., the lunula, a crescentic impression on each valve of many bivalve shells, in front of theumbo, forming with its fellow an oval or somewhat cordate figure; it is conspicuous in the Veneridæ and many related forms. (b) In entom., a lunulate mark or line on the center of the lower wing, found in many moths. (c) In geom., a lune. See *lunel*¹, 2. (d) A crescent-shaped mark at the root of a nail.—Frontal lunule, in entom., a curved space immediately above the antennæ, characteristic of the flies of the suborder Cyclocephala, wanting in the Orthorhapha. It is related to the bladderly inflation of the front by means of which these flies force open the larval envelop.

lunulet (lū'nū-let), n. [Cf. lunule + -et.] In entom., a small crescent-shaped spot or mark on a surface.

lunulite (lū'nū-lit), n. [Cf. NL. Lunulites, q. v.] A fossil polyzoan of the genus Lunulites.

Lunulites (lū'nū-lit'ez), n. [NL., < L. lunula, a little moon; see lunule.] A genus of fossil Polyzoa. Several species range from the Upper Cretaceous to the coralline erag.

luny (lū'ni), a. [Abbr. from lunatic, and often spelled loony, with ref. to *loon*¹. Cf. *lunel*¹, 3.] Lunatic; crazy; silly and erratic; usually applied to partial or temporary aberration, and to persons afflicted with partial lunacy. Used also as a noun. [Colloq.]

His fits [epileptic] were nocturnal, and he had frequent "luny spells," as he called them.

E. C. Mann, Psychol. Med., p. 424.

Lupa (lū'pā), n. [NL. (Leach, 1814), < L. lupa, a she-wolf, fem. of lupus, a wolf; see *Lupus*¹.] A genus of crabs of the family Portunidæ. The common edible crab of the United States has been called L. discantha; it is now known as Callinectes hastatus.

Lupercal (lū'pēr-kāl), a. and n. [Cf. L. Lupercalis, pertaining to Lupercus (neut. pl. Lupercalia, the feast of Lupercus; neut. sing. as noun Lupercal, a grotto on the Palatine hill sacred to Lupercus) or Inuus, regarded, under the name Lupercus, as a protecting deity of shepherds, as 'he who wards off the wolves,' < lupus, a wolf, + arcere, ward off, keep off.] 1. A. Pertaining to Lupercus or to the Lupercalia.

II. † n. Same as Lupercalia. [An erroneous use.]

You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse.

Shak., J. C., iii. 2. 100.

Lupercalia (lū'pēr-kā'li-ā), n. pl. [L.: see Lupercal.] One of the most ancient of Roman festivals, celebrated every year in the middle of February. The origin of the festival is older than the legend of Romulus and the wolf, with which, as with the Greek cult of Pan, it was sought later to connect it. It was originally a local purification ceremony of the Palatine city, in which human victims were sacrificed in the Lupercal cave near the Porta Romana, after having been conducted around the walls. In historic times the victims were goats and a dog, and the celebrants ran around the old line of the Palatine walls, striking all whom they met with thongs cut from the skins of the slaughtered animals. These blows were reputed to preserve women from sterility. The divinity of the Lupercalia was the old Etrurian god Inuus, akin to Mars.

Lupercalian (lū'pēr-kā'li-ān), a. [Cf. Lupercalia + -an.] Of or pertaining to the ancient Roman festival of the Lupercalia.

Lupinæ (lū'pī-nē), n. pl. [NL., < *Lupus*¹ + -inæ.] A subfamily of Canidæ, distinguished from Vulpinæ or foxes; wolves. It corresponds to Caninæ in a narrow sense.

lupinaster (lū'pīn-as'tēr), n. The bastard lupine, Trifolium Lupinaster, a Siberian plant with purple or white flowers, very large for the genus, and lupine-like leaves. The species has sometimes been regarded as forming a separate genus (Lupinaster).

lupine¹ (lū'pīn or -pīn), a. [= F. lupin = Sp. lupino, < L. lupinus, belonging to a wolf, < lupus, a wolf; see *Lupus*¹. Cf. *lupine*², n.] 1. Like a wolf; wolfish; ravenous.—2. In zool., pertaining to the series or group of canine animals which contains the wolves, jackals, and dogs, as distinguished from the foxes; thoëid. In lupine animals the skull has frontal sinuses which affect the profile of the head and the contour of the cranial cavity, and the pupil of the eye is usually round. See vulpine, alopocoid, and thoëid.

lupine² (lū'pīn), n. [= D. lupijn = G. lupine, < F. lupin = Sp. It. lupino = Russ. lupinū, < L. lupinus, lupinus, a lupine, orig. masc. and neut. respectively of lupinus, belonging to a wolf; see *lupine*¹, a. The reason of the name is unknown.] A plant of the genus Lupinus. The white lupine, L. albus, of southern Europe and the Orient, has been cultivated from antiquity. Its seeds serve as a pulse, and its herbage is valuable for fodder and green manure. In Portugal it is used, under the name of tramoso, to choke out obstinate weeds. The scented yellow lupine, L. luteus, of the Mediterranean region, is used in central Europe to improve sandy soils.

Various other species have similar uses, among them the Egyptian L. Termis, resembling L. albus, and L. varius, with flowers chiefly blue. The tree-lupine, L. arboreus, of Pacific North America, has been used with success to bind shifting sand. It is a shrub growing 10 feet high, and sending its roots more than 20 feet deep. The ornamental lupines are extremely numerous. L. albus, L. luteus, and L. varius, mentioned above, were formerly common in gardens, but have been somewhat superseded by species from western America. Among these are the tree-lupine and the many-leaved lupine (L. polyphyllus) of North America and L. versicolor of Peru. The wild lupine of the eastern United States is L. perennis, a plant with a long showy raceme of purple flowers, common in sandy soil.—Bastard lupine. See lupinaster.

lupinin (lū'pī-nīn), n. [Cf. Lupinus + -in².] A bitter glucoside extracted from the leaves of Lupinus albus.

lupinite (lū'pī-nit), n. [Cf. Lupinus + -ite².] Same as lupinin.

Lupinus (lū'pī-nus), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), < lupus, a wolf, in allusion to its destroying or exhausting land.] A large genus of legumi-nous plants of the suborder Papilionaceæ and the tribe Genisteæ. It is characterized by having the leaves simple or digitately many-foliate; the divisions of the calyx longer than the tube; the wings of the corolla often united at the apex, the keel beaked; and a compressed coriaceous or fleshy legume. More than 95 species have been described, but they may be somewhat reduced; they occur in North and South America, the Mediterranean region, and tropical Africa, being especially abundant on the western coast of America. They are herbs or undershrubs with terminal or axillary racemes of showy blue or purple flowers, rarely yellow or white, and often fragrant. Numerous species are cultivated for their beauty and for use. See *lupine*².

lupous (lū'pus), a. [Cf. L. lupus, a wolf (see *Lupus*¹), + -ous.] Wolfish; like a wolf. [Rare.]

luppa (lup'pā), n. [E. Ind.] A cloth made in India of silk, or silk and cotton, with gold and silver thread used so abundantly that the surface seems to be wholly of metal. Compare kinco.

luppen (lup'n), a. A dialectal (Scotch) perfect participle of *leap*¹.

lupulin, lupuline (lū'pū-līn), n. [Cf. lupulus + -in², -ine².] 1. The peculiar bitter aromatic principle of the hop. Also called lupulite.—2. An alkaloid found in hops.—3. The fine yellow powder of hops, which contains the bitter principle. It consists of the little round glands found upon the stipules and fruit, and is obtained by drying, heating, and then sifting the hops. It is used in medicine. Also humulin, humuline.

lupuline (lū'pū-līn), a. [Cf. NL. lupulus, hop, + -ine¹.] In bot., resembling a head of the hop.

lupulinic (lū'pū-līn'ik), a. [Cf. lupulin + -ic.] Of or pertaining to lupulin; consisting of or containing lupulin.

It is almost impossible to free them [scales of the hop] entirely from the lupulinic grains. Ure, Dict., I. 303.

lupulinous (lū'pū-lī'nus), a. [Cf. lupuline + -ous.] Same as lupulinic.

lupulite (lū'pū-līt), n. [Cf. NL. lupulus, hop (see lupulin), + -ite².] Same as lupulin, 1.

lupulus (lū'pū-lus), n. [NL. (Tournefort), a fish, a hook, lit. the hop-plant, etc., also a skin-disease; dim. of L. lupus, the hop-plant, a particular use of lupus, a wolf (so called perhaps because it 'strangles' the shrubbery upon which it may climb).] The hop-plant, Humulus Lupulus: still occasionally used.

Lupus¹ (lū'pus), n. [NL., < L. lupus, a wolf, = Gr. λύκος = Goth. wulfs, etc. = E. wolf; see *wolf*¹.]

1. (a) A genus of Canidæ, comprising the wolves, but having no characters by which it can be distinguished from Canis. In this nomenclature the common gray wolf of North America is called Lupus occidentalis. (b) [l. c.] The specific designation of the common wolf, Canis lupus.—2. An ancient southern constellation, the Wolf, representing a beast held by the hand of the Centaur. It has two stars of the third magnitude.—3. [l. c.] In pathol.: (a) Lupus vulgaris, a tuberculous of the skin, presenting clinically reddish-brown patches made up of papules, tubercles, and flat infiltrations. These patches proceed to ulceration and subsequent cicatrization. They occur mostly on the face, but may occur on mucous surfaces as well as on the skin of the extremities, or even (rarely) of the trunk. Anatomically there is tubercular tissue containing tubercle-bacilli. (b) Lupus erythematosus, a chronic dermatitis, beginning in one or more papules which grow so as to cover a large patch. The color is pinkish to violaceous, and the surface is scaly. It does not ulcerate, but heals with central cicatrization and atrophy. It occurs most frequently on the face, but also elsewhere. It is more frequent in women than in men.—Lupus metalorum, the alchemical name of stibnite, or sulphid of antimony.

Flowering Plant of Lupine (Lupinus perennis). a, flower; b, fruit, showing the dehiscence.

The Constellation Lupus.

lupus² (lū'pus), n. [Var. of glupus*, < Russ. glupishū, a petrel.] The Pacific fulmar petrel, Fulmarus glacialis rogersi. H. W. Elliott.

lura (lū'rā), n.; pl. luræ (-rē). [NL., < L. lura, the mouth of a bag or bottle.] In anat., the contracted foramen of the infundibulum of the brain. [Recent.]

The removal of the hypophysis leaves the orifice which I have called lura.

Wüder, N. Y. Med. Jour., March 21, 1885, p. 322.

lural (lū'rāl), a. [Cf. lura + -al.] Pertaining to the lura.

luridly

luridly (lū'rid-li), adv. In a lurid or gloomy manner.

lurk (lérk), v. i. [ME. lurken, lorken, prob. < Sw. lurka, lúrka (= Dan. lúrke), lurk, < lura = Dan. lura, lurk, = Icel. lúra, slumber, = MHG. lúren, G. luern = MLG. luren = D. loeren, listen, lurk. In this view lurk has a formative -k, as in hark, talk, smirk, as related to hear, tale, smile, etc., and is not, as some suppose, an altered form, with change of s to r, of Sw. dial. luska = Dan. luske, lurk, sneak, = MD. luschen, luysschen, lurk, = MLG. lúschen = OHG. loskōn, MHG. loschen, G. lauschen, listen, akin to E. list, listen: see *list*¹. But the Sw. lura, Dan. lure, lurk, if connected with Icel. lúra, listen, are from the same root, which appears also in loud, q. v. Hence by assimilation *lurch*¹, q. v. 1. To lie in concealment; hide or keep out of sight, as for ambush or escape; skulk.

Rather than marry Paris, . . . bid me lurk
Where serpents are. Shak., R. and J., iv. 1. 79.

He is a fish that lurks close all winter.

I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 121.

In these solitudes rogues frequently burke & do mischief (& for whom we were all well appointed with our carbines). Evelyn, Diary, March 1, 1644.

2. To be latent or undisclosed; be withdrawn from open manifestation; exist unperceived or unsuspected.

Under these tales ye may in a manner see the truth
Spenser, State of Ireland.

I could not suppress my lurking passion for applause.
Goldsmith, Vicar, xx.

A cunning politician often lurks under the clerical robe.
Irvine, Knickerbocker, p. 300.

lurk (lérk), n. [< lurk, v.] A trick of imposture; a swindling artifice; a cunning dodge. [Eng. slang.]

Chelsea George could "go upon any lurk" could be in the last stage of consumption — actually in his dying hour — but now and then convalesces for years and years together. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 59.

In compliance with your request, I will now endeavour to describe to you some forms of lurk, in which I myself have been an actor. I have found that the bereavement lurk is a lucrative one — (i. e.) the pretended loss of a wife, leaving me with a young and helpless family to support. Quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 642.

lurker (lér'kér), n. 1. One who lurks, hides, or keeps out of sight.

It troubled me that there should have been a lurker on the stairs on that night of all nights of the year.
Dickens, Great Expectations, xl.

2. An impostor; a cheap quack. [Eng. slang.]

In every large town sham official documents, with crests, seals, and signatures, can be got for half-a-crown. Armed with these, the pater becomes a lurker — that is, an impostor; his papers certify any and every "ill that flesh is heir to." Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 233.

3. One who turns his hand to any work; a jack of all trades. [Slang.] lurking (lér'kiug), n. [Verbal n. of lurk, v.] Tricky practice; imposture; especially, the practice of a begging impostor. [Eng. slang.]

After a career of incessant lurking and deceit, Chelsea George left England, and remained abroad, writes my informant, four or five years. Quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 648.

lurking-place (lér'king-plás), n. A place in which one lurks or lies concealed; a secret place; a hiding-place; a den.

He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages. Ps. x. 8.

lurry¹ (lur'i), n.; pl. luries (-iz). [Formerly also lurrey; perhaps < W. lury, precipitant, forward, < Uer, direction, tendency.] 1. A confused throng; a crowd; a heap.

A lurry and rabble of poor farthing friars, who have neither rent nor revenue.
World of Wonders (1608), p. 187. (Latham.)

2. A confusion; confused inarticulate sound or utterance; disturbance; tumult. [Now only colloq.]

No doubt but ostentation and formalitie may taint the best duties: we are not therefore to leave duties for no duties, and to turne prayer into a kind of Lurrey.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xvi.

lurry¹ (lur'i), v. t.; pret. and pp. lurried, ppr. lurrying. [*< lurry*¹, n.] 1. To hurry carelessly. — 2. To lug; pull. — 3. To daub; dirty. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.] lurry² (lur'i), n.; pl. luries (-iz). [*Cf. lurry*¹.] In coal-mining, a tram or car fitted with a device for taking up the slack of the rope used in hauling the cars.

lury, n. See lory.

Luschka's gland. See gland.

Luscinia (lu-sin'i-á), n. [*NL., < L. luscinia, the nightingale, perhaps for lusciniá (?), 'the twi- light songster,' < luscus, one-eyed, purblind, + canere, sing.] 1. [l. e.] A nightingale. Hence — 2. A genus of birds represented by the nightingale, giving name to a subfamily or family of Old World oscine Passeres. There are two species or varieties in Europe, L. lusciniá (or L. vera) and L. philomela; a third, L. golzi, is the Persian nightingale. The genus is also named Daulias, Aëdon, Philomela, and Lusciola, and the birds belonging to it have been called by several other generic names, as Sylvia, etc.

Lusciniidæ (lu-si-ni'i-dé), n. pl. [NL., < Lusciniá + -idæ.] Nightingales and similar birds regarded as a family: nearly synonymous with Sylviidæ.

luscious (lush'us), a. [Early mod. E. lushious (in this form appar. irreg. < *lush*¹ + -ious), also lussyouse (Palsgrave), i. e. luscious*, as if orig. lustious*, < lusty, pleasant, delicious, + -ous; the word, thus provided with a suffix, assuming a more distinctive L. form and spelling. But the formation is uncertain. The conjectured derivation from delicious and that from luxurious are both improbable. Cf. *lush*¹, a., 3.] 1. Very sweet, succulent, or savory; delicious; very pleasant to taste; hence, extremely pleasing to any of the senses or to the mind; enticingly delightful.

These Moors are changeable in their wills: . . . the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts shall be to him shortly as bitter as colquhinda. Shak., Othello, I. 3. 354.

He will bait him in with the luscious proposal of some gainful purchase. South, Sermons.

Her rich voice, with her luscious, indolent, Southern pronunciation. Harper's Mag., LXXXIII. 445.

2. Sweet or rich so as to cloy or nauseate; sweet to excess; hence, unctuous; fulsome.

He had a tedious, luscious way of talking, that was apt to tire the patience of his hearers. Jeffrey.

A confection of luscious and cloying epithets was presented again and again. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 395.

lusciously (lush'us-li), adv. In a luscious manner.

lusciousness (lush'us-nes), n. The state or quality of being luscious.

luserner, n. See *lucern*².

lush¹ (lush), a. and n. [*< ME. lusch, lax, slack; cf. lash*²; cf. also dial. lishy, flexible, limber. In def. 3, perhaps < lushious, the older spelling of luscious, analyzed as if < *lush*¹ + -ious.] I. a. 1. Lax; slack; limp; flexible. Prompt. Parv., p. 317; Topsell, Beasts (1607), p. 343. (Halliwell.) — 2. Mellow; easily turned, as ground. [Prov. Eng.] — 3. Fresh, luxuriant, and juicy; succulent, as grass or other vegetation.

How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!
Shak., Tempest, ii. 1. 52.

Then greene and void of strength, and lush and foggy is the blade.
And cheers the husbandmen with hope.

Golding, tr. of Ovid, xv. (Nares.)

The year

Grows lush in juicy stalks. Keats, Endymion, i.
And at the root thro' lush green grasses burn'd
The red anemone. Tennyson, Fair Women.

II. n. A twig for thatching. [Prov. Eng.]

lush² (lush), v. i. [*< ME. lúshen, lúshen, lúshen, lúshen, rush violently.] 1. To rush violently.

He laughte owte a lange swerde, and lúshede one ffaste, And syr Lyonelle in the launde lordely hym strykes.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 2226.

2. To splash in water. [Prov. Eng.] lush³ (lush), n. [Origin uncertain; said to be so called from one Lushington, a once well-known London brewer: see Lushington. Cf. OF. vin touseche, thick or unsettled wine (Cotgrave); louseche, dull-sighted, purblind, < L. luscus, one-eyed, purblind: see Lusciniá.] Beer; intoxicating drink. [Slang.]

I niver cared much about the lush myself, and ven I got away from the old uns, I didn't mind it no how.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 97.

lush³ (lush), v. [*< lush*³, n.] I. trans. To drink; tippie on. [Slang.]

To wind up all, some of the richest sort you ever lushed.
Dickens, Oliver Twist, xxxix.

II. intrans. To drink intoxicating liquor. [Slang.]

I was out of work two or three weeks, and I certainly lushed too much, and can't say as I tried very hard to get work. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 187.

lush⁴ (lush), n. The burbot: same as *losh*².

lushburgt, lushborowt, n. [< ME. lussheburge, lusseburge, lusseburwe, lushburuc, lushburuc, lusseburuc, lussebouruc, etc., so called as issued at Luxemburg, F. Luxembourg (ME. Lussheburge, etc.).] A coin of base metal made (chiefly at Luxemburg) in imitation of the English silver penny, and illegally imported by merchants into England in the reign of Edward III.

God woot, no Lussheburghes payen ye!
Chaucer, Prolog. to Monk's Tale, l. 74.

As in Lusseborow is a lyther alay, and zet loketh he lyke a sterlyuge.

The merke of that mone is good, ac the metal is fieble.
Piers Plowman (B), XV. 342.

lushington (lush'ing-ton), n. [*See lush*³.] A tippler. [Eng. slang.]

They hadn't a single drain that night, I'll go bail, but still they didn't look like regular lushingtons at all.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 216.

lushioust, a. An older spelling of luscious.

lushlyt, adv. [*ME. luschly; < lush*¹ + *-ly*².] Laxly; slackly. Prompt. Parv., p. 317.

lushy (lush'i), a. [*< lush*³ + *-y*¹.] Tipsy or under the influence of intoxicating liquor. [Slang.]

Lusitanian (lū-si-tā'ni-an), a. and n. [< Lusitania (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Pertaining to the territory or people of Lusitania, a province of ancient Spain (Hispania), including almost all of modern Portugal and part of modern Spain, and now used as a political synonym of Portugal; hence, Portuguese. — Lusitanian region or province, in zoögeog., a terrestrial area embracing the countries bordering the Mediterranean, with Switzerland, Austria, the Crimea, and Caucasus.

II. n. An inhabitant of ancient Lusitania or of modern Portugal; a Portuguese.

lusk¹ (lusk), a. and n. [*Prob. < Icel. löskr, weak, idle: see lash*² (and *lush*¹). Cf. Ir. lus-gaim, I lurk.] I. a. Lazy; slothful.

He had visited here his holy congregacions, in diuers corners and luskus lanes.

Sir T. More, Works, p. 344. (Richardson.)

II. n. An idle, lazy fellow; a lubber.

Here is a great knave; i. e. a great lyther lusk; or a stout ydell lubbar.

Palsgrave, Acolastus (1540). (Halliwell.)

The lusk in health is worse far
Than he that keeps his bed.

Kendal, Poems (1577). (Nares.)

lusk² (lusk), v. i. [< lusk, n.] To be idle, indolent, or unemployed; lie or loll about lazily.

Not that I mean to fain an idle God,
That lusk in Heav'n and never looks abroad.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 7.

Themis selfe, . . .

If that she were incarnate in our time,
She might lusk scorned in disdaind slime.

Marston, Scourge of Villanie, Sat. v.

luskard¹, n. [Origin obscure.] A sort of grape. The great red grapes, the muscadine, the verjuice grape, and the luskard.

Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, i. 25.

luskard² (lus'king), a. Same as luskish. Mir. for Mags.

luskish¹ (lus'kish), a. [< lusk + *-ish*¹.] Inclined to lusk or be lazy; lazy; slothful.

They lone no idle bench whistlers, nor luskish fators: for young and old sre whcllie addicted to thriuing, the men commonlie to traffike, the women to spinning and carding.

Hobinshead, Descrip. of Ireland, iii.

Rouse thee, thou sluggish bird, this mirthful May,
For shame, come forth, and leave thy luskish nest.

Drayton, The Owl. (Nares.)

luskishly¹ (lus'kish-li), adv. In a luskish manner; lazily.

luskishness¹ (lus'kish-nes), n. The quality of being luskish; disposition to indolence; laziness. Spenser, F. Q., VI. i. 35.

lursorioust (lū-sō'ri-us), a. [< L. lursorius, of or belonging to a player: see luseroy.] Of or pertaining to play; sportive.

Many too nicely take exceptions at cards, tables, and dice, and such mixed lursorious lots.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 315.

luseroy (lū'sō-ri), a. [= Pg. luserio, < L. luserius, of or belonging to a player, sportive, < luser, a player, < ludere, pp. luserus, play: see ludicrous.] Used in play or in sports or games; playful: as, luseroy methods of instructing children. [Archaic.]

How bitter have some been against all luseroy lots, or any play with chance!

Jer. Taylor (?), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 120. (Latham.)

Arabesques of Poetry, thos luseroy effusions on chimerical objects.

I. D'Israeli, Amen. of Lit., II. 252.

lusshet, v. i. An obsolete form of *lush*².

lussheburget, n. See lushburg.

lust¹ (lust), n. [*< ME. lust, < AS. lust, desire, pleasure, = OS. OFries. MD. D. MLG. LG. OHG. MHG. G. lust = Icel. lust = Dan. Sw. lyst = Goth. lustus, desire; an abstract noun with formative -t, orig. -tus (as in Goth. lustus, a proof, < kiusan, prove, choose: see cost*¹), from an appar. √ lus, which can hardly be identical with the $\sqrt{\text{lus}}$ of loose, lose¹, loss, etc., but is perhaps ult. akin to Gr. λίαισθα, Skt. $\sqrt{\text{lash}}$, desire. Hence lust¹, v., lust², v. and n., lust³, etc.: see these words.] 1†. Desire, inclination, or wish in general.

Your commaundment to kepe, as my kynd brother,
And my lord, that is tell, my lust shall be ay!
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 6140.

There be commonly prepared certain sauces, which shall give men a great lust and appetite to their meals.
Lutimer, Misc. Select.

We act our mimie tricks with that free licence,
That lust, that pleasure, that security,
As if we practised in a paste-board case.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, I. 1.

2. Intense longing desire; eagerness for possession or enjoyment: as, the lust of gain.

The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them.
Ex. xv. 9.

Ill men have a lust to hear others' sins.
B. Jonson, Apol. to Postaster.

Yet still insatiate, still with rage on flame;
Such is the lust of never-dying fame!
Pope, Illiad, xx. 590.

Specifically—3. Evil propensity; depraved affection or desire.

"Thanne artow inparfil," quod he, "and one of Prydes knyghtes;
For such a luste and lykynge Lucifer fel fram heuene."
Piers Plowman (B), xv. 51.

They [my Sponsors] didd promise and vow . . . that I should renounce the devil and all his works, the pomps and vanity of this wicked world, and all the sinful lusts of the flesh.
Book of Common Prayer, Catechism.

The ambitious conqueror had trodden whole nations under his feet, to satisfy the lust of power.
Story, Cambridge, Aug. 31, 1826.

4. In absolute use, carnal desire; sexual appetite; unlawful desire of sexual pleasure; concupiscence.

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage. Shak., Hamlet, I. 5. 55.

In lust the permanent end is the mastering of the sensuous objects which excite appetite.
F. H. Bradley, Ethical Studies, p. 253, note.

lust¹ (lust), v. i. [ME. lusten; < lust¹, n. The elder form of the verb is lust², q. v.] 1. To desire eagerly; long: with after or for.

Thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.
Deut. xii. 15.

2†. To take pleasure; delight; like.

Noght ferfull, ne furse, faueret full wele,
Louet he no lede that lustide in wrange.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 3869.

We tauked of their to moch libertie, to Hue as they lust.
Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 20.

They rate the goods without reason as they lust themselves.
Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 271.

Specifically—3. To have evil desire.

The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy. Jas. iv. 5.

4. To have carnal desire: with after.

Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.
Mat. v. 28.

lust^{2†} (lust), v. A Middle English form of lust¹.

lust-breathed (lust'breht), a. Animated by lust. Schmidt.

Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host.
Shak., Lucrece, I. 3.

lust-dieted (lust'di'e-ted), a. Faring voluptuously. Schmidt.

Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he does not feel, feel your power quickly.
Shak., Lear, iv. 1. 70.

luster¹ (lus'tér), n. [lust¹ + -er¹.] One who lusts; one inflamed with lust.

Hear, and fear, all lusters after strange women!
Dr. Clerke, Sermons (1637), p. 499. (Latham.)

luster², lustre¹ (lus'tér), n. [F. lustre = Sp. lustre (after F. ?) = It. lustro, splendor, brilliancy, luster, < ML. lustrum* (?), splendor; cf. lustrum, a window, < L. lustrus*, shining (in lustrare, shine, illustrare, shine upon, illustris, lighted up, etc.), for orig. lustrus*, < luere, shine: see lucent.] 1. The quality of shining; brilliancy or refulgence, from inherent constitution or artificial polish; splendor; glow; sheen; gloss; as, the luster of the stars, or of gold.

So have I seen the brightest Stars deny'd
To shew their Lustre in some gloomy Night.
Hovell, Letters, I. v. 22.

A mien majestic, with dark brows, that show
The tranquil lustre of a lofty mind.
Cowper, Sonnet to Diodati.

We have formerly remarked on the great charm of Lustra. It seems to have a power to redeem bad combinations of colours. Red-yellow is unharmonious as colour, but red-gold is a resplendent effect. The blue lake with its green banks would not be agreeable, but for the lustre of the watery expanse. A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 227.

2. In mineral, a variation in the nature of the reflecting surface of minerals. In this sense the word designates, first, the kind or quality of the light reflected; second, the degree of intensity. The principal kinds of luster are: metallic, as in pyrites and galena; adamantine, as in the diamond; vitreous, as in glass; resinous, as in zinc-blende; greasy, as in calcite; pearly, as in gypsum; and silky, as in amianthus.

But he by good use and experyence, hathe in his eye the ryghte marke and very trewe lustre of the dyamonte.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 73.

3. The state or quality of being illustrious or famous; brilliant distinction; brilliancy, as of a person, a deed, an event, or the like.

Pompey did so conquer, as he sway arose againe with great lustre and with greater terror.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 322.

His ancestors continued about four hundred years, rather without obscurity than with any great lustre.
Sir H. Walton.

It will appear that this quality [eourage] has a peculiar lustre, which it derives wholly from itself, and from that noble elevation inseparable from it. Hume, Of Morals, § 7.

No doubt the sippers of wits and philosophers acquire much lustre by time and renown.
Emerson, Clubs.

4. A branched candelabrum or chandelier ornamented with prisms or pendants of glass.

Double rows of lustres lighted up the nave. Eustace.
We were . . . in the dining-room; the lustre, which had been lit for dinner, filled the room with a festal breadth of light.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xiv.

5. The quality of glossiness or brilliancy in a textile material or in a finished fabric: as, the luster of wool or of satin.

The superior value of these [long wools] lies in what is known in the wool trade as lustre: that is, a peculiar silvery brightness of hair which it does not lose in process of manufacture.
Ure, Dict., IV. 976.

6. A thin and light kind of poplin.—Cantharid luster, in ceram., a name given to luster showing the green and blue iridescence of the insect cantharis.—Cupreous luster, a luster like that of a fresh surface of metallic copper.—Gold luster. See gold.—Madreperla luster, a luster having a reflection showing like that of mother-of-pearl.—Mohair luster. See mohair.—Platinum luster, a variety of metallic luster produced by means of a platinum glaze, and somewhat resembling burnished silver. Hence its more common name, silver luster. = Syn. 1. Refulgence.—3. Glory, celebrity.—1 and 3. Effulgence, Brilliance, etc. See radiance.

luster², lustre¹ (lus'tér), v. t.; pret. and pp. lustered, lusted, ppr. lustering, lustring. [lust², lustre¹, n. Cf. lustrate.] To impart luster or gloss to.

Plush goods can be wholly lustered or delicately embellished [with a lustering-machine].
U. S. Cons. Rep., No. lxxi. (1886), p. 316.

luster³, lustre² (lus'tér), n. [OF. (and F.) lustre = Sp. lustro, < L. lustrum, a purificatory sacrifice, an expiatory offering, such as was made by the censors for the whole people every five years; hence, a period of five years, any definite period; < luere, wash, cleanse, akin to lavare, wash: see lave².] Same as lustrum.

When fine lustres of his age expir'd,
Feeling his stomach and his strength aspir'd
To worthier wars.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., Babylon.
The next ten years . . . [Longfellow's] sixth and seventh lustres—are the period of his best work.
Princeton Rev., II. 299.

luster^{4†}, n. [L. lustrum, a slough, bog, den of wild beasts, an evil haunt; a diff. word from lustrum, a purification, but of like formation; < luere, wash, = Gr. λοειν, wash: see lave².] The den or abode of a wild beast.

But turning to his luster, calves and dam
He shows abhorred death. Chapman.

lustered, lusted (lus'tèrd), p. a. Having a luster; especially, in ceram., (a) having a thin glaze as in ancient Greek pottery (see lustrous glaze, under glaze); (b) having a metallic luster, like majolica, etc.; painted in luster-colors.

Lustered pieces are very rare in Portugal, and are mostly rough in glaze, and clumsy in design.
The Academy, No. 877, p. 139.

The plate (Majolica) with a profile of Cæsar en grisaille, on a gold ground, with a border of grotesques lustered with ruby on deep blue, . . . the plate lustered in gold and ruby.
Art Journal, VIII. 108.

lustering, lustring¹ (lus'tér-ing, -tring), n. [Verbal n. of luster², v.] 1. The process of making lustrous or glossy.—2. In metal-working, same as brightening, I.—3. A process for giving to woollen cloth a permanent gloss and smooth surface which will not roughen with wear. This is accomplished by stretching the cloth tightly on a perforated copper cylinder, which is then placed in a steam-chest and the steam turned on.

4. A treatment of furs to render them smooth.
—5. A polishing material, as the black polish used for stoves.

lusterless, lustreless (lus'tér-les), a. [lust² + -less.] Without luster.

luster-ware (lus'tér-wär), n. Stoneware or crockery having surface ornamentations in metallic colors: a trade-name. Such ware is said to be decorated with luster, gold luster, platinum luster, copper luster, etc. It is to be distinguished from lustered pottery of the decorative sort.

luster-wash (lus'tér-wosh), n. In ceram., a thin wash of the metallic pigment used to produce any luster.

lustful (lust'fúl), a. [ME. lustful, < AS. lustfull, desirous, < lust, desire, + full, full: see lust¹ and -ful.] 1. Having prurient lust; incontinent; libidinous.

Eneompass'd with thy lustful paramours.
Shak., I Hen. VI., lii. 2. 53.

2. Marked by or pertaining to lust; exciting or manifesting lust.

And Cupid still emongest them kindled lustfull tyrea.
Spenser, F. Q., III. I. 39.

Thence his lustful orgies he enlarged.
Milton, P. L., I. 415.

3†. Vigorous; robust; stout; lusty.

The want of lustful health
Could not be half so grievful to your grace
As these most wretched tidings that I bring.
Sackville, Gorbodue, iii. 1.

= Syn. See list under lascivious.

lustfully (lust'fúl-i), adv. In a lustful manner.

lustfulness (lust'fúl-nes), n. [ME. lustfulness, < AS. lustfulness, < lustfull, desirous: see lustful.] The state of being lustful; libidinousness.

lustic¹ (lus'tik), a. [Irreg. < lust + -ic.] Lusty; vigorous; jovial.

As lustick and frolick as lards in their bowers. Browne.

lustihed¹, n. [ME. lustyhede, lustihed; < lusty + -hed. Cf. lustihood.] Same as lustihood.

Defaute of slepe and heviness,
Hath sleyen my spirite of quynness,
That I have lost al lustyhede.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, I. 27.

lustihood (lus'ti-húð), n. [= D. lustigheid = MLG. lusticheit = MHG. lusticheit (cf. G. lustigkeit) = Sw. lustighet = Dan. lystighed; as lusty + -hood. Cf. lustihed¹.] The quality of being lusty; vigor of body. [Archaic.]

He is so full of lustihood, he will ride
Joust for it, and win.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

lustily (lus'ti-li), adv. In a lusty manner; vigorously; strongly.

I determine to fight lustily for him.
Shak., Hen. V., iv. 1. 20†.

lustiness (lus'ti-nes), n. [ME. lustynesse; < lusty + -ness.] 1. The state of being lusty; vigor; robustness.

Cappadocian slaves were famous for their lustiness.
Dryden, tr. of Persius's Satires, vi., note.

2†. Pleasure; delight; enjoyment.

For sothly al the mount of Citheron,
Ther Venus hath hire principal dwelling,
Was schewed on the wal in portreyng,
With al the garlyn and the lustynesse.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 1081.

lustless¹ (lust'les), a. [lust¹, n., + -less. Cf. lustless.] Listless; languid; lifeless; indifferent.

Indeed, in sleepe
The slouthfull body that doth love to steepe
His lustlesse limbes, and drone his baser mind, Dost praise thee oft. Spenser, F. Q., III. iv. 56.

lustra, n. Latin plural of lustrum.

lustral (lus'tral), a. [= F. Sp. lustral = It. lustrale, < L. lustralis, < lustrum, purificatory sacrifice: see lustrum.] 1. Used in purification.

His better parts by lustral waves refined,
More pure, and nearer to æthereal mind. Garth.

Aztec life ended as it had begun, with ceremonial lustration; it was one of the funeral ceremonies to sprinkle the head of the corpse with the lustral water of this life.
E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 395.

2. Pertaining to purification: as, lustral days.

Bloodshed demanded the lustral ceremony.
E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 398.

3. Of or pertaining to or occurring in a lustrum.

As this general tax upon industry was collected every fourth year, it was styled the lustral contribution.
Gibbon, Decline and Fall, xvii.

lustrate¹ (lus'trát), v. t.; pret. and pp. lustrated, ppr. lustrating. [L. lustratus, pp. of lustrare (> It. lustrare = Pg. Sp. lustrar = F. lustrer), purify by means of a propitiatory offering, < lustrum, a purificatory sacrifice: see lustrum.] To make clear or pure; purify by or as if by the ceremony of lustration. See lustrum.

When we have found this execrable thing, which hath brought all our plagues on us, then must we purge and cleanse and lustrate the whole city for its sake.
Hammond, Works, IV. 639.

Mediæval Tatar tribes, some of whom had conscientious scruples against bathing, have found passing through fire or between two fires a sufficient purification, and the household stuff of the dead was lustrated in this latter way. E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 393.

lustrate² (lus'trāt), v. i. [*< L. lustratus, pp. of lustrare, review, survey, go around, wander, deflected use of lustrare, purify by means of a propitiatory offering: see lustrate, luster*⁴.] To go about; wander.

Thrice through Aventine mount he doth lustrate.
Vicars, tr. of Virgil (1632). (Nares.)

lustrate³ (lus'trāt), v. t. [*< ML. lustratus, pp. of lustrare, illustrate, adorn, < *lustrum, splendor: see luster*², *luster*¹. Cf. illustrate.] To luster.

Making, dressing, and lustrating of plain black alamoses, renforcez, and lustrings.
Act of Parliament (1698), quoted in Drapers' Dict., p. 210.

lustration (lus-trā'shōn), n. [= F. lustration = Sp. lustracion = Pg. lustração = It. lustrazione, < L. lustratio(-n)], an expiation, *< lustrare, pp. lustratus, purify: see lustrate*¹.] Ceremonial purification; especially, a religious act of purification or cleansing by the use of water or certain sacrifices or ceremonies, or both, performed among the ancients upon persons, armies, cities, localities, animals, etc. The ceremony was practised by the Greeks chiefly to free its subjects from the pollution of crime, but by the Romans as a general means of securing a divine blessing, and in some cases at regular fixed intervals, as of the whole people every five years.

This was the sense of the old world in their lustrations, and of the Jews in their preparatory baptisms.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 633.

Let his baptismal drops for us atone;
Lustrations for offences not his own.
Dryden, Britannia Rediviva, I. 189.

lustrer¹, lusted, etc. See luster², etc.

lustrer², n. See luster³.
lustrical (lus'tri-kal), a. [< L. lustricus, of or belonging to purification. < lustrum, a purificatory sacrifice: see lustrum.] Pertaining to purification by lustration: said of the day on which a Roman infant was purified and named.

This name was properly personal, equivalent to that of baptism with us, and imposed with ceremonies somewhat analogous to it on the ninth day, called the lustrical, or day of purification.
Middleton, Cicero, I. § 1.

lustrine (lus'trin), n. [*< F. lustrine, < It. lustrino, a shining silk tinsel, < lustrō, luster: see luster*².] Same as lustring².

lustring¹, n. See lustring.
lustring² (lus'tring), n. [*A corruption (still further corrupted in lutestring*²), simulating string, of lustrine: see lustrine.] A species of glossy silk fabric: a term more used in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries than now, and denoting generally plain solid silk, neither figured nor corded, nor having a satin surface.

The fraudulent importation of foreign alamoses and lustrings.
Act of Parliament (1698), quoted in Drapers' Dict., p. 209.

lustrous (lus'trus), a. [*< OF. lustroux = Sp. Pg. It. lustrō, lustrō, < ML. *lustrum, luster: see luster*².] 1. Giving out or shedding light, as the sun or a fire; bright; brilliant; luminous: chiefly used figuratively.

The more lustrous the imagination is, it filleth and fixeth the better.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 956.

Some sparks of a lustrous spirit will shine through the disguise of a beggar.
Lamb, Decay of Beggars.

2. Reflecting light; having a brilliant surface.
My sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous.
Shak., All's Well, II. 1. 41.

A lustrous surface reflects the light of the surrounding objects, and gives rise to the play of a thin radiance, as of a slight film or ganze, softening without obscuring the colour beneath.
A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 227.

Lustrous glaze. See glaze. = Syn. Radiant, brilliant.

lustrously (lus'trus-li), adv. In a lustrous manner; brilliantly; luminously.

lustrum (lus'trum), n.; pl. lustrums or lustra (-trumz, -trā). [= F. lustr = Sp. Pg. It. lustrō, *< L. lustrum, a purificatory sacrifice, a period of five years: see luster*³.] 1. A lustration or purification; particularly, the ceremonial purification of the whole Roman people, performed at the end of every five years. Hence—2. A space of five years.

lustwort (lust'wört), n. The sundew, a plant of the genus Drosera, especially the common D. rotundifolia.

lusty (lus'ti), a. [< ME. lusty (= D. G. Sw. lustig = Dan. lystig), pleasant, merry; *< lust + -y*¹.] 1. Exciting desire; pleasant; agreeable; attractive; handsome.

That was or might be lusty to his herte. Lydgate.
So lovedst thou the lusty Hyacinth;
So lovedst thou the faire Coronis deare.
Spenser, F. Q., III. xl. 37.

2. Full of or characterized by life, spirit, vigor, or health; stout; vigorous; robust; healthy; strong; lively.

Who satisfeth thy mouth with good things, making thee young and lusty as an eagle.
Book of Common Prayer, Psalter, Pa. ciii. 5.

Give me a bow of lusty wine. B. Jonson, Volpone, v. 1.
Our two boys are lusty travellers.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 417.

3. Impudent; saucy.

Cassins' soldiers did shew themselves verie stubborne and lustie in the camp. North, tr. of Plutarch. (Latham.)

4. Bulky; large; of great size.

A thriving gamester, that doth chance to win
A lusty sum, while the good hand doth ply him.
Ford, Fancies, Prol.

5. Full-bodied or stout from pregnancy. [Colloq.]—6. Lustful; hot-blooded.

Before the flood thou with thy lusty crew,
False titled sons of God, roaming the earth,
Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men.
Milton, P. R., II. 178.

= Syn. 2. Strong, Sturdy, etc. See robust.

lusty-gallant, n. The name of an old dance and probably of a popular ballad in the sixteenth century. Nares.

After all they danst lustie gallant, and a drunken Danish lavaito or two, and so departed.
Nash, Terrors of the Night (1594). (Nares.)

lustyhedet, n. See lustihed.
lusus naturæ (lū'sus nā-tū-rē). [L.: lusus, a play, < ludere, pp. lusus, play (see ludicrous); natura, gen. of natura, nature: see nature.] A freak of nature; anything of a monstrous or unnatural kind; specifically, in nat. hist. and phys. geog., an isolated and curious growth or form, including, in natural history, mere unusual variations as well as pronounced monstrosities.

lutanist (lū'tā-nist), n. [*Also lutenist, lutinist; < ML. lutanista, a player on the lute, < lutana, a lute: see lute*¹.] A person who plays on a lute.

If he never learn'd and practis'd on the lute, he will not be able . . . to make any musick upon that instrument, even after he sees plainly and comprehends fully all that the cunning lutenist doth.

Sir K. Digby, Nature of Man's Soul, xi.
As music follows the finger
Of the dreaming lutanist.
Lowell, Telepathy.

lutarious (lū-tā'ri-us), a. [*< L. lutarius, of or belonging to mud, < lutum, mud: see lute*², n.] Pertaining to, living in, or of the color of mud.

A scaly tortoise-shell, of the lutarious kind (Emys lutaria).
N. Grex, Museum.

lutation (lū-tā'shōn), n. [*< F. lutation = Sp. lutacion, < L. lutatio(-n), < lutare, pp. lutatus, daub with mud, < lutum, mud: see lute*², n.] The act or method of luting vessels.

lute¹ (lūt), n. [< ME. lute (= D. luit = MLG. lüte = MHG. lüte, G. laute = Sw. luta = Dan. luth), < OF. lut, leut, F. luth = It. liuto, leuto, liudo (> Ngr. laōrov; ML. lutana), *< Sp. laúd, orig. alaúd = Pg. alaude, a lute, < Ar. al'ūd, a lute, < al, the, + 'ūd, a lute, harp, lit. wood, timber, whence also the senses 'stick, 'staff, etc.] A mediæval musical instrument, the type of the class which has strings stretched over a resonant body and a long fretted neck, and which is played by twanging or snapping the strings with the fingers.

The back of the body was either flat, as in the modern guitar, or, more often, rounded or pear-shaped, like that of a mandolin. The front of the body, or belly, had one or more sound-holes. The strings were usually of catgut, arranged in pairs of unisons, and divided into two groups, one of which lay over the finger-board, so as to be stopped upon the frets, while the other lay beside the finger-board, so as to be played un-stopped for the bass. The number of strings varied considerably, as did the tuning or accordatura; a common tuning for the six upper pairs of strings was and for the bass strings

The frets were arranged so as to yield semitones. The tone was sweet, but light and incapable of much variation. The construction of the instrument was not strong enough to make the tuning sure or stable. In the effort to obtain varied and striking effects, many modifications were attempted, such as the archlute, the chitarrone, the harp-lute, and the theorbo, in which the number of strings was increased, the bass strings attached to a second neck above the first one, or metal strings introduced. A group or family of lutes of different sizes was also elaborated for concerted music; but the mechanical and acoustical feebleness of the type prevented the results from being permanently satisfactory. Great care was often expended, however, upon the wood and the decoration of lutes, so that many of them were very beautiful in appearance. Music for the lute was written in a peculiar system of letters or numerals called tablature. Historically the lute is connected with the Egyptian nefer, and perhaps with the Hebrew nebel, and it continued in use in Europe till about 1750; its existing relatives are the guitar, the mandolin, and the banjo.

Lute.

lute¹ (lūt), v.; pret. and pp. luted, ppr. luting. [*< ME. luten; < lute*¹, n.] 1. trans. To play on or as on a lute.

Knavea are men
That lute and flute fantastic tenderness.
Tennyson, Princess, iv.

II. intrans. 1. To play the lute.
Trenthe trompede tho, and song "Te deum laudamus";
And then lutede Loue in a fowd note.
Piers Plowman (C), xxi. 470.

2. To sound sweetly, like a lute. [Poetical.]

And in the air, her new voice luting soft, Cried, "Lycius! gentle Lycius!" Keats, Lamia, I.

lute² (lūt), n. [*< OF. lut, clay, mold, loam, dirt, F. lut, lute (in chem. sense), = It. luto, clay, mud, mire, lute, < L. lūtum, mud, lit. 'that which is washed down,' < luere, wash, = Gr. lōvov, wash. Cf. luster*⁴.] 1. A composition of clay or other tenacious substance used for stopping the joints of vessels, as in chemical operations or in founding, so closely as to prevent the escape or entrance of air.—2. An external coating of clay, sand, or other substance applied to a glass retort, to enable it to support a high temperature without fusing or cracking.—3. A brickmakers' straight-edge, a tool used to strike off surplus clay from a brick-mold, and to level the molding-floor.—4. A rubber packing-ring compressed between the lip and the lid of a jar to exclude the air.—Coppersmiths' lute, bullocks' blood thickened with finely powdered quicklime. Spons' Encyc. Manuf., p. 629.

lute³ (lūt), v. t.; pret. and pp. luted, ppr. luting. [= F. luter; from the noun: see lute², n.] To close or coat with lute; smear with any adhesive substance for the purpose of closing cracks or joints. A glass retort is said to be luted when it is smeared over with clay to enable it to resist more perfectly the effects of heat, and thus guard it against fusion.

Lute me up in a glass with my own seals.
B. Jonson, Mercury Vindicated.

Small boats, made of the barks of trees, sowed with barke and well luted with gumme.
Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 135.

lute⁴, a., n., and adv. A Middle English form of lute¹.

lute⁵, v. A Middle English form of lout¹.

lute-backed (lūt'bakt), a. Having a curved spine. Holland.

lutenist (lū'tē-nist), n. See lutanist.

luteoleine, luteoline (lū-tē-ō-lē-in, or lū'tē-ō-lē-in), n. [*< F. luteoline, luteoline, < L. luteolus, yellowish, dim. of luteus, golden-yellow: see luteous*¹.] The yellow coloring matter of weld or dyer's-weed (C₂₀H₁₄O₈). When sublimed it crystallizes in needles.

luteolous (lū-tē-ō-lus), a. [< L. luteolus, dim. of luteus, golden-yellow: see luteous.] Yellowish; faintly luteous.

The microgonidia indefinite in number, much the smallest, pale or dirty green or luteolous.
H. C. Wood, Fresh-Water Algæ, p. 99.

luteous¹ (lū'tē-us), a. [< L. luteus, golden-yellow, flame-colored, rose-colored, < lūtum, a weed used in dyeing yellow, weld.] Of a golden-yellow color; also, more generally, yellow with a tinge of red, somewhat approaching the color of saffron or the yolk of an egg.

luteous² (lū'tē-us), a. [*< L. luteus, muddy, < lūtum, mud: see lute*², n.] Like mud or clay.

luter (lū'tēr), n. A lutist. Lerins; Baret. [Rare.] lutescent (lū-tes'ent), a. [*< lut(eous)*¹ + -escent.] The form was appar. suggested by L. lutescen(-t)s, ppr. of lutescere, turn to mud, *< lūtum, mud: see lute*², n.] Yellow-tinged; tending to be or become luteous.

lutestring¹ (lūt'string), n. [*< lute*¹ + string.] 1. A string such as was used on a lute.—2. One of certain noctuid moths: so called from the lines on the fore wings, likened to lute-strings: as, the poplar-lutestring, Cymatophora or; the lesser lutestring, C. dibuta.

lutestring² (lūt'string), n. [A corruption of lustring, q. v.] 1. A plain glossy kind of silk formerly used for women's dresses.—2. A ribbon of such silk.—To speak in lutestring¹, to speak in an affected manner.

I was led to trouble you with these observations by a passage which, to speak in lutestring, I met with this morning in the course of my reading. Junius, Letters.

Lutetia (lū-tē'shi-ā), n. [NL., < L. Lutetia, a city of Gaul (also called Lutetia Parisiorum), now Paris.] 1. The twenty-first planetoid, discovered by Goldschmidt at Paris in 1852.—2. In zoöl., a genus of mollusks. Deshayes.

Lutetian (lū-tē'shān), a. [< L. Lutetia (also called Lutetia Parisiorum, Paris) + -ian.] Relating or pertaining to ancient Lutetia in Gaul, or poetically to Paris in France, its modern representative; Parisian.

luth (lūth), n. A name of the soft turtle, Dermatochelys (Sphargis) coriacea. See cut under leatherback.

lutheri, a. A Middle English form of *lither*¹.

Lutheran (lū'thēr-ən), u. and n. [= Sp. It. Lutherano = Pg. Lutherano (cf. F. Luthérien, G. Lutheranisch, etc.), < NL. Lutheranus, of Luther, < Lutherus, G. Luther, Luther.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Martin Luther, the reformer (1483–1546), or to the Evangelical Protestant Church of Germany which bears his name, or to the doctrines taught by Luther or held by the Evangelical Lutheran Church.—Lutheran Bible. See Bible, 1.—Lutheran Church, the Protestant Church of Germany, established by Martin Luther and other reformers in the sixteenth century. It was named the Evangelical Church by Luther, to designate it as the ancient Christian church reformed and reorganized according to the Gospel. Protestants were at first called Lutherans in reproach by the opponents of the Reformation, and the name was generally accepted, notwithstanding the protestations of Luther against it. The church is historically known as the Evangelical Lutheran Church, in distinction from the Roman Catholic Church and from the Reformed or Calvinistic Church and other Protestant churches. The dogmatic symbols of the Lutheran Church are nine in number. Three of them are those of the early Christian church, namely the Apostle's Creed, the Nicene Creed, and the Athanasian Creed. The six others are the products of the Reformation. These are the Augsburg Confession (1530), the Apology of the Augsburg Confession (1539), the Schmalkald Articles (1537), the two Catechisms of Luther (1529), and the Formula of Concord (1577). These Confessions, together with the ecumenical creeds above mentioned, form the Book of Concord of 1580, and constitute the symbolical books of the Lutheran Church. The Augsburg Confession, however, is the only symbol which has been universally adopted by all branches of the Lutheran Church, some of which accept no other as binding. The creed of the church includes the doctrines of justification by faith alone, universal depravity, the vicarious atonement, regeneration, progressive sanctification, a true sacramental but not a material presence of Christ in the Lord's Supper, and the use of both the Bible and the sacraments as means of grace. In its manner of worship the Lutheran Church is liturgical, but it recognizes no organized hierarchy, with different ranks of ministry, jure divino. In the established churches of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, which are Lutheran in doctrine, there are bishops or superintendents (see episcopacy), and in Sweden there is an archbishop; but their authority is derived from the bodies which appoint them, and their powers are very limited. Where Lutheranism is the established religion the sovereign is recognized as the head of the church, which is governed by consistories appointed by the government and composed of both clergymen and laymen. Throughout most of Germany (in Prussia and in many other countries) the Protestant state establishment is the United Evangelical Church, a union of former Lutheran and Reformed (Calvinist) churches, and dissenting Lutherans are commonly called Old Lutherans. In the United States the Lutheran Church at present consists of four general independent organizations. Each of these is governed by a general representative body, named respectively the General Synod, the General Council, the United Synod of the South, and the Synodical Conference (Missouri Lutherans). These general bodies consist of both clerical and lay delegates, elected by the district synods of which they are composed. There are also fourteen independent Lutheran synods in the United States.

II. n. A disciple or follower of Luther; one who adheres to the doctrines of Luther; a member of the Lutheran Church.

I know her [Anne Bliven] for A spleeny Lutheran. Shak., Hen. VIII., iii. 2. 99.

Lutheranism (lū'thēr-ən-izm), n. [= F. Luthéranisme = Sp. It. Luteranismo = Pg. Lutheranismo, < NL. Lutheranismus, < Lutheranus, Lutheran; see Lutheran and -ism.] The principles of the Reformation as represented by Luther; the doctrines and ecclesiastical system of the Lutheran Church.

Lutherism (lū'thēr-izm), n. [< Luther (see Lutheran) + -ism.] 1. That which is characteristic or peculiar to Luther; also, an imitation of Luther.—2. Lutheranism.

Lutherist (lū'thēr-ist), n. [< Luther (see Lutheran) + -ist.] A student of Luther; one versed in or devoted to the study of Luther's life and works.

The first of living Lutherists. The American, VII 121.

lutherly, a. and adv. A Middle English form of *litherly*¹.

luting (lū'ting), n. [Verbal n. of *lute*², v.] Same as *lute*².

lutist (lū'tist), n. [*< lute*¹ + -ist.] A lute-player.

lutose (lū'tōs), a. [= It. lutoso, < L. lutosus, muddy, < lutum, mud; see *lute*², n.] Miry; covered with clay; specifically, in entom., covered with a powdery substance resembling mud, which easily rubs off.

Lutra (lū'trā), n. [NL., < L. lutra, lytra, an otter, perhaps < luere, wash; see *lute*².] 1. The leading genus of Lutrinae, formerly including the sea-otters as well as the land-otters, now confined to land-otters in which the claws are well formed and the tail is terete. Compare Pteronura. The dental formula is: 3 incisors and 1 canine above and below on each side, 4 premolars in each upper and 3 in each lower half-jaw, and 1 molar above and 2 below on each side—in all, 36 teeth, of which the upper molar is large and quadrate. The skull is flat, and greatly contracted between the orbits, with a short blunt rostrum and turgid occipital portion, the palate produced far back of the molars, the ante-orbital foramen large, and the pterygoids hamulate. The body is elongate, cylindrical, with long, stout, terete, tapering tail, short limbs, broad webbed feet, obtuse muzzle, and very small ears; the pelage is whole-colored. The common European otter is L. vulgaris; that of North America, L. canadensis; that of South America, L. brasiliensis; and there are others. See otter.

2. [l. e.] In her. See loutre.

Lutrinae (lū-trā'ri-ñi), n. [NL., so called with some reference to otters, < L. lutra, an otter; see Lutra.] A genus of siphonate bivalve mollusks of the family Macluridae; the otter's shells. The oblong gaping shell resembles that of a common cob or clam (Mya), but is more porcellaneous, and has a prominent spoon-shaped cartilage plate on each valve, in front of which are one or two teeth.

Otter's-shell (Lutrinaria oblonga), right valve.

Lutremyina (lū'trē-mi-ñi), n. pl. [NL., < Lutremys + *-ina*².] A subfamily of Cistudinidae, typified by the genus Lutremys, having a well-defined zygomatic arch over the temporal muscle. It includes a number of Old World species, of 5 genera. J. E. Gray.

Lutremys (lū'trē-mis), n. [NL., < L. lutra, otter, + Gr. mys, a tortoise.] A genus of box-tortoises, by many called Emys, giving name to the Lutremyinae.

Lutridæ (lū'tri-dō), n. pl. [NL., < Lutra + -idæ.] Same as Lutrinæ (a).

Lutrinæ (lū'tri-nō), n. pl. [NL., < Lutra + -inæ.] A subfamily of Mustelidae; the otters. (a) The sea-otters as well as the land-otters, both having 36 teeth, and the same number of teeth in both jaws, though the formulas are different. (b) Land-otters, as distinguished from Enhydrinae or sea-otters, having the dental formula as in Lutra, the teeth of ordinary or normal carnivorous type, and the hind feet not peculiarly modified. There are several genera, of most parts of the world, as Lutra, Leptonyx or Barangia, Aonyx, Hydrogale, and Pteronura. See Enhydrinae.

lutrine (lū'trin), a. [< L. lutra, otter, + *-ine*¹.] Otter-like; of or pertaining to the Lutrinæ.

lutulent (lū'tū-lent), u. [= It. lutulento, < L. lutulentus, muddy, < lutum, mud; see *lute*², n.] Muddy; turbid; thick.

These then are the waters, . . . the lutulent, spummy, maculatory waters of sin.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 166. (Davies.)

Luvavidæ (lū-var'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Luvavus + -idæ.] A family of acanthopterygian fishes, typified by the genus Luvavus. It embraces scombroidea with a compressed-oblong body covered with minute scales, small mouth, thoracic vent, a single dorsal and anal fin, and ventrals reduced and closing over the anus. Only one genus and species is known. Dianidæ is a synonymy.

Luvavus (lū-vā'rus), n. [NL.] The only genus of Luvavidæ. Only a single rare species is known, L. imperialis, of the Mediterranean and adjoining parts of the Luvavus imperialis (immature form).

Atlantic, attaining a length of 3 feet or more, and remarkable for the atrophy to which the dorsal and anal fins are subjected by age.

luwack (lū'wak), n. [Native name; said to be Javanese.] The common paradoxure or palmcat, Paradoxurus typus.

lux¹ (luks), v. t. [< F. luxer = Sp. lujar = Pg. luxar = It. lussare, < L. luxare, put out of joint, dislocate, luxus, out of joint, dislocated, lit.

oblique, < Gr. λοξός, oblique, slanting; see loxia.] To put out of joint; luxate. Pope, Odyssey, xi.

lux² (luks), n. [< F. luxe = Sp. lujo = Pg. luxo = It. lusso, < L. luxus, extravagance, excess, splendor, pomp, magnificence, luxury.] 1. Luxury.

The Pow'r of Wealth I try'd,
And all the various Luxe of costly Pride.

Prior, Solomon, II.

2. Richness; superfine quality; elegance; said of material objects. Also luxe, as mere French. The lux and magnificence of the two.

Howell, Letters (1650).

Paper and type are the very acme of refinement and luxe, and the work is embellished by five full-page illustrations of considerable beauty. Westminster Rev., CXXV. 591.

lux³ (luks), n. [L., light; see *light*¹.] Light: a Latin word occurring in some phrases used more or less in English.—Corona lucis. See corona.

luxate (luk'sāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. luxated, ppr. luxating. [< L. luxatus, pp. of luxare, dislocate; see *lux*¹.] To displace or remove from its proper place, as a joint; put out of joint; dislocate.

luxation (luk-sā'shōn), n. [= F. luxation = Sp. luxacion = Pg. luxação = It. lussazione, < LL. luxatio(n), a dislocation, < L. luxare, pp. luxatus, dislocate; see *lux*¹ and luxate.] 1. The act of luxating (a bone), or forcing it from its proper place or articulation.

There needs some little luxation to strain this latter reading to a good sense.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 326.

2. The state of being luxated; a dislocation, as of a joint.

When therefore two bones, which being naturally united make up a joint, are separated from each other, we call it a luxation. Weseman, Surgery, vii. 2.

luxe (F. pron. lüks), n. [F.: see *lux*².] Same as *lux*². 2.—Édition de luxe. See édition.

Luxemburgia (luk-sem-bēr'ji-ā), n. [NL. (A. St. Hilaire, 1818), named after the Duke of Luxembourg, under whose patronage St. Hilaire began his botanical researches in Brazil.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the natural order Ochnaceæ and tribe Luxemburgiæ. There are 7 species, found only in Brazil, characterized by having five equal, spreading sepals, naked within, eight stamens, and no staminalia. They are handsome trees or shrubs, with alternate, sharply serrate leaves, and terminal racemes of showy yellow flowers. They are apparently scarce in collections.

Luxemburgiæ (luk-sem-bēr-ji'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1862), < Luxemburgia + -æ.] A tribe of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the natural order Ochnaceæ, characterized by an eccentric ovary, which is from 2- to 5-celled, or 1-celled with incomplete placentæ, and an indefinite number of ovules. The capsule is many-seeded, and the seeds are albuminous. The tribe includes 6 genera, all South American, of which Luxemburgia is the type.

luxullianite (luk-sul'i-an-īt), n. [< Luxullian (see def.) + *-ite*².] A rock consisting of a fine-grained mixture of schorl, feldspar, and quartz, through which are distributed large crystals of red orthoclase, found at Luxullian or Luxullian in Cornwall, England. From this rock was made the sarcophagus of the Duke of Wellington, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

luxuri, n. [Irreg. < luxury.] A lecher. [Rare.]

The torment to a luxur due.

Middleton, Father Hubbard's Tales.

luxuret, n. [ME., < OF. luxure, < L. luxuria, luxury; see luxury.] Luxury.

He the forfeit of luxure

Shall tempre. Gower, Conf. Amant., vtt.

luxuriance (lug-zū'ri-āns), n. [< F. luxuriance; as luxuriant (t) + -æ.] The state of being luxuriant; abundant or excessive growth or quantity; strong, vigorous growth; exuberance.

The whole leafy forest stands display'd
In full luxuriance to the sighing gales.

Thomson, Spring, I. 93.

= Syn. Profusion, superabundance. See luxurious.

luxuriancy (lug-zū'ri-ān-si), n. [As luxuriance: see -cy.] Same as luxuriance.

luxuriant (lug-zū'ri-ānt), a. [= F. luxuriant = Sp. lujuriante = Pg. luxuriante = It. lussuriant, < L. luxuriant (t)-s, ppr. of luxuriare, be rank or luxuriant; see luxuriate.] 1. Exuberant in growth; abundant; as, luxuriant foliage.

See vine luxuriant verdur'd leaves display,
Supporting tendrils curling all the way.

Parnell, Gift of Poetry.

2. Exuberant in quantity; superfluous in abundance.

Prune the luxuriant, the uncouth refine,
But show no mercy to an empty line.

Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 174.

English poetry . . . is nothing at present but a combination of luxuriant images. Goldsmith, Vicar, viii.

3. Supplied in great abundance; replete.

To the north-east spreads St. Leonard's Forest, luxuriant with beech and birch and pine, sinking and rising to woody dingles and slopes. E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 6.

4. In bot., having the floral envelop so multiplied as to destroy the essential parts: said of a flower: opposed to mutilated. = Syn. 1 and 2. Luxuriosus, Luxuriant. See luxuriosus.

luxuriantly (lūg-zū'ri-ant-li), adv. In a luxuriant manner or degree; exuberantly.

luxuriate (lūg-zū'ri-āt), v. i.; pret. and pp. luxuriated, ppr. luxuriating. [L. luxuriatus, pp. of luxuriare (> It. lussuriare = Sp. lujuriar = Pg. luxuriar = OF. luxuriar), be rank or luxuriose, indulge in luxury, < luxuria, luxury: see luxury.] 1. To grow exuberantly or in superfluous abundance.—2. To feed or live luxuriously: as, the herds luxuriate in the pastures.—3. Figuratively, to indulge without stint; revel in luxury or abundance; take delight: as, to luxuriate in description.

During the whole time of their being together, they luxuriate in telling one another their minds on whatever subject turns up. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, i. 1.

luxuriation (lūg-zū'ri-ā'shon), n. [L. luxuriatio + -ion.] The act of luxuriating; the process of growing exuberantly.

luxuriety (lūg-zū'ri-ē-ti), n. [L. luxuri(ous) + -ety.] Same as luxuriation. [Rare.]

One may observe a kind of luxuriety in the description which the holy historian gives of the transport of the men of Judah upon this occasion. Sterne, Works, IV. xi.

luxurious (lūg-zū'ri-us), a. [F. luxurieux = Pr. luxorios = Sp. lujurioso = Pg. luxurioso = It. lussurioso, < L. luxuriosus, rank, luxuriant, profuse, excessive, immoderate, < luxuria, rankness, luxury: see luxury.] 1. Luxuriant; exuberant.

The work under our labour grows, Luxurious by restraint: what we by day Lop overgrown, or prune, or prop, or bind, One night or two with wanton growth derides. Milton, P. L., ix. 209.

2. Characterized by indulgence in luxury; given to luxury; voluptuous; indulging freely or excessively in material pleasures or objects of desire: as, a luxurious life; luxurious cities.

All these the Parthian . . . holds, From the luxurious kings of Antioch won. Milton, P. R., iii. 297.

Victims of luxurious ease. Cooper, Task, i. 625.

3. Ministering to luxury; contributing to free or extravagant indulgence.

Those whom last thou saw'st In triumph and luxurious wealth. Milton, P. L., xi. 788.

4. Abounding in that which gratifies the senses; exuberant in means of indulgence or enjoyment; affording abundant material pleasure.

Venus . . . rose not now, as of old, in exposed and luxurious loveliness. Macaulay, Petrarch.

Soothed by the sweet luxurious summer time, And by the cadence of that ancient rhyme. William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 352.

5†. Characterized by lust; libidinous.

She knows the heat of a luxurious bed. Shak., Much Ado, iv. 1. 42.

= Syn. 2. Epicurean, self-indulgent, sensual.—2-4. Luxurious, Luxuriant. These words are now never synonymous. Luxurious means given to luxury or characterized by luxury: as, luxurious people; a luxurious life; a luxurious table. Luxuriant means exuberant in growth: as, the luxuriant vegetation of the tropics; by figure, a luxuriant style in composition. Luxurious implies blame, except where it is used by hyperbole for that which is exceedingly comfortable, etc.: as, a luxurious bed. Luxuriant does not come enough into the field of the moral for either praise or blame.

luxuriously (lūg-zū'ri-us-li), adv. In a luxuriant manner; deliciously; voluptuously.

luxuriosness (lūg-zū'ri-us-nes), n. The state or quality of being luxuriose.

luxurist (lūg-zū'ri-st), n. [L. luxuria + -ist.] One who is given to luxury. Temple.

luxury (lūg-zū'ri), n.; pl. luxuries (-riz). [ME. luxurie (also luxure, q. v.), < OF. luxurie, luxure, F. luxure = Pr. luxuria = Sp. lujuria = Pg. luxuria = It. lussuria, < L. luxuria, rankness, luxuriance (of vegetation), friskiness, wantonness (of animals), profuse or extravagant living, < luxus, extravagance, luxury: see lux².] 1†. Luxuriance; exuberance of growth.—2. A free or extravagant indulgence in pleasure, as of the table; voluptuousness in the gratification of any appetite; also, the free expenditure of wealth for the gratification of one's own desires, as in costly dress and equipage.

Luxury does not consist in the innocent enjoyment of any of the good things which God has created to be received with thankfulness, but in the wasteful abuse of them to vicious purposes, in ways inconsistent with sobriety, justice, or charity. Clarke, Works, II. cxiv.

First Necessity invented stools, Convenience next suggested elbow chairs, And Luxury th' accomplish'd Sofa last. Cooper, Task, i. 88.

3. That which is delightful to the senses, the feelings, etc.; especially, that which gratifies a nice and fastidious appetite or taste; a dainty: as, a house filled with luxuries; the luxuries of the table.

Rhyme, that luxury of recurrent sound. Prof. Blackie.

4. Exuberant enjoyment; complete gratification or satisfaction, either physical or intellectual.

Learn the luxury of doing good. Goldsmith, Traveller, I. 22.

The luxury of returning to bread again can hardly be imagined by those who have never been deprived of it. Lady Holland, Sydney Smith, vii.

5†. Lust; lewd desire; lasciviousness; indulgence in lust.

Fie on sinful fantasy! Fie on lust and luxury! Shak., M. W. of W., v. 5 (song).

I fear no strumpet's drugs, nor ruffian's stab, Should I detect their hateful luxuries. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, Ind.

= Syn. 2 and 4. Epicurism, effeminacy, sensuality, delicacy, gratification, pleasure, enjoyment, delight. See luxurious.

luz (luz), n. [Heb.] A bone in the human body which the Rabbinical writers affirmed to be indestructible, and which is variously said to have been one of the lumbar vertebrae, the sacrum, the coccyx, a sesamoid bone of the great toe, or one of the triquetrous or Wormian bones of the cranium. It is probable that this superstition is the origin of the technical name of the sacrum or "sacred" bone.

luzern†, luzernet, n. Same as lucern².

luzonite (lū'zon-it), n. [Luzon (see def.) + -ite².] A mineral closely related to enargite, found in the island of Luzon in the Philippines.

Luzula (lū'zū-lā), n. [NL., < Of. luzziola, luciolata, a glow-worm (cf. It. lucciola, a firefly, luciolato, a glow-worm): see Luciola.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants of the natural order Juncaceae, the rush family, and the tribe Euphorbeae. It is characterized by the stems growing in tufts; linear, grass-like, radical leaves, or sometimes with a few on the stem; a 1-celled ovary, with 3 erect ovules in the center; and a style which is 3-cleft at the apex. There are about 40 species, growing everywhere in temperate regions, and in the mountainous parts of the tropics. They grow in drier ground than the ordinary rushes, and have in general a more grassy aspect. See wood-rush.

Luzuriaga (lū-zū'ri-ā'gā), n. [NL. (Ruiz and Pavon, 1802), named after D. Ign. de Luzuriaga, a Spanish botanist.] A genus of lilieaceous plants, type of the tribe Luzuriageae, characterized by sessile alternate leaves with numerous fine nerves, and flowers of medium size, usually solitary in the axils, the segments of the perianth distinct and spreading, and a 3-celled ovary with light-colored seeds. The stems are woody and branching, and the flowers white on delicate pedicels, at length producing a berry-like fruit. There are 3 species, of which 2 are Chilean, and the third grows in Magellan's Land and New Zealand.

Luzuriageae (lū-zū'ri-ā'jē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Benth and Hooker, 1833), < Luzuriaga + -eae.] A tribe of lilieaceous plants, typified by the genus Luzuriaga. They have an erect, branching, woody stem, sometimes climbing above; flowers in the axils of the leaves, in fasciculate cymes, or solitary at the tips of the branches; the anther-cells distinct; and the ovules few or many, either anatropous or half-anatropous. The tribe includes 7 genera and about 12 species, of which the majority are from Chili and the southern part of South America, and the rest are from Australia and southern Africa.

ly†, v. i. An obsolete form of lie¹.

-ly¹. [ME. -ly, -li, -lich, -liche, earliest ME. -lic, < AS. -lic = OS. -lik = OFries. -lik = MD. D. lijk = MLG. -lik, -lich = OHG. -lih, MLG. -lich, -lich, G. -lich = Icel. -likr, -legr = Dan. -lig = Sw. lik = Goth. -leiks; a common Teut. adj. suffix, 'like,' having the form of, 'orig. an independent word, namely AS. lic, etc., body, form: see like¹. Cf. like², adj., as used in composition, of similar effect, but etymologically different, manly, e. g., being ult. < *AS. manlic (in adv. manlice), < mann, man, + lic, body, form, while manlike (with similar compounds) is not found in AS., but corresponds to AS. mann, man, + gelic, like, < lic, body: see like¹, like².] A common adjectival suffix, forming, from nouns, adjectives signifying 'of the form or nature of' or 'like' the thing denoted by the noun: as in manly, womanly, godly, lordly, princely, of the nature of, like, or suited to a man, woman, etc.; bodily, earthly, daily, weekly, monthly, yearly, etc., belonging to or being of the body, the earth, a day, etc.; lovely, heartly (obs.), etc. Such adjectives, implying 'like,' are often accompanied by more definite adjectives in -like: as, manlike, womanlike, etc. The suffix is also used with some adjectives, as godly, lovely, etc., and with some verbs, as comely, seemly, etc. They are usually accompanied by adverbs now of the same form. See -ly².

-ly². [ME. -ly, -li, -lich, -liche, < AS. -lice = OS. -liko = OFries. -like, -like = MD. D. -lijk = MLG. -like, -liche = OHG. -lihho, MLG. -liche, G. -lich = Icel. -lika, -liga = Sw. -ligen = Dan. -ligt = Goth. -leiko; a common Teut. adverbial suffix, meaning 'in a manner' indicated by the adj. in -lic (-ly¹) from which the adverb is derived, being the instr. case of the adj.; e. g., AS. manlice, in a manly manner, instr. case of manlic*, manly. Thus, while the adj. suffix -ly¹ and the adverb suffix -ly² are now identical in form, they are orig. distinct, the adverb suffix being derived, with a case-ending now lost, from the adj. suffix.] A common adverbial suffix, forming from adjectives adverbs signifying 'in a manner' denoted by the adjective: as, quickly, slowly, coldly, hotly, etc., loudly, harshly, etc. It is the most common adverbial suffix. In adverbs from nouns, as manly, womanly, etc., the adverb has the same form as the adjective in -ly¹, from which it is derived. The suffix is sometimes used with adjectives in -ly¹, as in seemly, surlily, goddily, etc. Its use with primary adjectives, with no current adjective in -ly intervening (quickly, etc.), is more recent, but is now the prevalent one.

lyant†, n. See line⁴.

lyart†, a. and n. See liard¹.

Lycæna (li-sē'nā), n. [NL., < Gr. lykaina, a she-wolf, fem. of lykos = L. lupus, a wolf, = E. wolf, q. v.] The typical genus of Lycænidae. There are upward of 300 species, distributed all over the world. They are small, delicate creatures, some of much beauty of form and coloring, known as coppers and blues.

Lycænidae (li-sen'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lycæna + -idae.] A family of butterflies, represented by such genera as Lycæna, Chrysophanes, and Thecla. They are generally of small size, delicate form, and very beautiful colors. Some are known as blues or coppers, and others as hairstreaks. The technical characters are: minute tarsal claws, fore legs ambulatorial, hind tibiae with one pair of spurs, antennæ scarcely hooked at the tip, and the last joint of the palpi small and naked. The caterpillars have minute feet and retractile head, and resemble wood-lice. The chrysalis is short, obtuse at each end, girt about the middle, and attached by the tail. There are about 40 genera and upward of 1,200 species.

Lycalopex (li-ka-lō'pek), n. [NL., < Gr. lykos, a wolf, + ἀλώπηξ, a fox: see alopece.] A genus of Canidae established by Burmeister, containing most of the neotropical canines; the South American fox-wolves. These animals have the structural characters of dogs and wolves, but their tails are long and bushy, and they otherwise resemble foxes in general appearance. Several species are described, as L. antarcticus, L. azare, L. cancrivorus, etc. The last-named is the malking or crab-eating fox-wolf.

lycanthrope (li-kan'thrōp), n. [ML. lycanthropos, lycanthropos, < Gr. λυκάνθρωπος, a 'wolf-man,' or man-wolf, were-wolf, < lykos, a wolf, + ἄνθρωπος, a man. Cf. were-wolf.] 1. A man superstitiously supposed to be possessed of the power of transforming himself at pleasure into a wolf, and to be endowed while in that shape with its savage propensities; a were-wolf.

A French judge named Boguet, at the end of the sixteenth century, devoted himself especially to the subject [the assuming of animal forms], burnt multitudes of lycanthropos, wrote a book about them, and drew up a code in which he permitted ordinary witches to be strangled before they were burnt, but excepted lycanthropos, who were to be burned alive. Lecky, Rationalism, I. 97.

2. A person affected with lycanthropy; one who imagines himself to be a wolf, and acts in conformity with his delusion.

lycanthropi, n. Plural of lycanthropus.

lycanthropia (li-kan'thrō'pi-ā), n. [ML.: see lycanthrop-y.] Same as lycanthropy.

This kind is called Lycanthropia, sir; when men conceive themselves wolves. Ford, Lover's Melancholy, iii. 3.

lycanthropic (li-kan'thrō'pik), a. [L. lycanthrop-y + -ic.] Of or pertaining to lycanthropy; characteristic of lycanthropy.

In a fit of lycanthropic madness, she came upon two children. S. Baring-Gould, Were-wolves, vi.

lycanthropist (li-kan'thrō'pist), n. [L. lycanthrop-y + -ist.] Same as lycanthrope.

In mediæval times . . . persons named Garnier or Grenier were generally assumed to be lycanthropists. Encyc. Brit., XV. 91.

lycanthropus (li-kan'thrō'pus), a. [L. lycanthrop-y + -ous.] Relating or pertaining to lycanthropy.

lycanthropus (li-kan'thrō'pus), n.; pl. lycanthropi (-pī). [ML., also lycanthropos: see lycanthrope.] Same as lycanthrope.

The swift lycanthropi that walks the round, We'll tear their wolfish skins, and save the sheep. Middleton and Rowley, Changeling, iii. 3.

lycanthropy (li-kan'thrō-pi), n. [< ML. lycanthropia, < Gr. λυκανθρωπία, a madness in which one imagines himself a wolf, < λυκάνθρωπος, a man-wolf: see lycanthropic.] 1. The supposed power of certain human beings to change themselves or others temporarily or permanently into wolves or other savage animals. See were-wolf.—2. The belief that certain persons change themselves into wolves or other wild beasts. This belief is common among savage races, and still lingers among the ignorant of some civilized peoples. 3. A kind of erratic melancholy or madness, in which the patient supposes himself to be a wolf. See lycanthrope.

Lycaon¹ (li-kā'on), n. [NL., < L. Lycaon, < Gr. Λυκάων, a mythical king of Arcadia, father of Callisto, who was transferred to the sky as the constellation of the Bear.] A name of the constellation Boötes (which see).

Lycaon² (li-kā'on), n. [NL., < L. lycaon, < Gr. Λυκάων, an animal of the wolf kind, < λύκος = L. lupus, a wolf: see Lupus.] A genus of canine quadrupeds of the family Canidae, having Painted Hyena, or Hunting-dog (Lycaon pictus).

but four toes on the fore feet, instead of five as in the rest of the Canidae, resembling the hyenas in this respect; the South African hunting-dogs, hyena-dogs, or painted hyenas. L. pictus or venaticus is a fierce animal as large as a mastiff, with oval erect ears, bushy tail, and long limbs, and spotted with white, black, and yellow in an irregular manner. It hunts its prey in packs.

Lycaste (li-kas'tē), n. [NL. (Lindley, 1843), < Lycaste, < Gr. Λυκάστη, a fem. name.] A genus of orchidaceous plants of the tribe Vandeeae and the subtribe Cyrtopodieae. It is characterized by having erect, partially spreading sepals, and the lateral lobes of the lip broad or sickle-shaped, attached to the base or apex of the claw, the middle one small or elongated, often ciliate. The column is rather long, and the stalks of the pollen-masses are long and linear. They are epiphytes with the short few-leaved stems sheathing at the base, forming a fleshy pseudobulb from which rise the erect scapes, bearing one, rarely two or three, large and showy flowers. There are about 25 species, natives of tropical America, and ranging from Peru to Mexico and the West Indies; many are very beautiful, and are common in cultivation.

lyceum (li-sō'um), n. [= F. lycée = Sp. liceo = Pg. lyceo = It. liceo, < L. lyceum, lycium, < Gr. Λύκειον, the Lyceum: so named from the neighboring temple of Apollo, < Λίκεϊος, an epithet of Apollo, either as the 'wolf-slayer,' < λύκος, a wolf; or as the 'Lycian god,' < Λύκιος, Lycian, < Λυκία, Lycia; or as the 'god of light,' < *λύκη, light; cf. λυκός, light, white, L. lux, light: see light¹.] 1. [cap.] An ancient public gymnasium with covered walks outside of Athens, near the river Ilissus, where Aristotle taught philosophy; hence, the Peripatetic school of philosophy. See Aristotelian.—2. A school for higher education preparatory to a university course. Compare college, 2 (f).

There are two lyceums for boys and girls, a realschule, a military school for cadets, a theological seminary, and two girls' colleges. Encyc. Brit., XIX, 410.

3. A house or an apartment appropriated to instruction by lectures or disquisitions.—4. An association for literary improvement.

lycht, lyche¹, n. Variants of *like*¹.
lyche², a. and adv. An obsolete assimilated form of *like*².

lych-gate (lich'gāt), n. An archaic spelling of lich-gate.

lychnapsia (lik-nap'si-ä), n. [< Gr. λυχνᾶψία, lamplighting, < λυχνᾶπτης, a lamplighter, < λυχνος, a lamp, + ἄπτειν, touch.] In the Gr. Ch., a series of seven prayers for pardon and protection during the night, forming part of the office called lychnic.

The Priest, standing before the holy doors, saith the lychnapsia. J. M. Neale, Eastern Church, i, 896.

lychnic (lik'nik), n. [< LGr. λυχνικός, the time of lamplighting, < Gr. λυχνος, lamp: see light¹.] In the Gr. Ch., an office, consisting of psalms and prayers, accompanying the lighting of the lamps or candles, originally introductory to, but now incorporated in, vespers on occasion of a vigil.

lychnides, n. Plural of lychnis, 1.

lychnidiate (lik-nid'i-ät), a. [< lychnis (lychnid-) + -i- + -ate¹.] In entom., giving out light; phosphorescent: formerly used of the head of the lantern-fly and certain allied insects, from the erroneous supposition that this is luminous at night.

lychnis (lik'nis), n. [L. lychnis, a rose of a bright-red color, also a gem, < Gr. λυχνίς, a plant with a bright-scarlet flower; related to λυχνος, a lamp.] 1. Pl. lychnides (-ni-dēz). A ruby, sapphire, or carbuncle.—2. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of earyophyllaceous plants of the tribe Sileneae, characterized by a 10-nerved calyx, or rarely one with many parallel nerves, and commonly 3 styles and a 3- or 6-valved capsule. They are usually erect herbs with opposite leaves and terminal cymes of showy flowers. About 40 species have been described, natives of the warm and temperate regions of the northern hemisphere. The names campion and lampflower are common to all plants of this genus. Several species are pretty wild flowers of the Old World, and several are common garden-flowers. L. Chalcædonica, the scarlet lychnis, is perhaps the best-known; it is a rather coarse plant with dense fascicles of deep-scarlet flowers, also called Jerusalem or Maltese cross, etc., and in the United States sometimes sweet-william. Another garden species is L. coronaria, the rose-campion or millen-pink. L. Viscaria, from its glutinous stem, shares with plants of the genus Silene the name of catchfly. L. Flus-cueuli, the cuckoo-flower, crow-flower, or ragged-robin, with dissected petals, common in Europe, is also cultivated, at least in double forms. L. vespertina, with white flowers opening in the evening, is sparingly introduced from Europe into the United States; and from the same source, L. Githago, the corn-cockle, with purple flowers, has become too common in American grain-fields. L. diurna, the red campion, adder's-flower, etc., is a common British species. See campion.

3. A plant of the genus Lychnis, especially L. Chalcædonica.

lychnites (lik-ni'tēz), n. [L., < Gr. λυχνίτης (sc. λίθος), Parian marble (see def.), < λυχνος, a lamp: see lychnic: so called, according to a notion ascribed by Pliny to Varro, because it was quarried (underground) by lamplight.] Parian marble: so called by Pliny. What rock or mineral was really meant by Pliny is not known, and there have been various theories in regard to it. Some think that selenite was the mineral intended; others that the name had reference to the brilliancy of the marble.

Lychnophora (lik-nof'ō-rä), n. [NL. (Martius, 1822), < Gr. λυχνος, a lamp, + φέρω, bearing.] A genus of Brazilian shrubs belonging to the order Compositæ and the tribe Vernoniaceæ, and type of the subtribe Lychnophoreæ, characterized by having the heads aggregated into compound terminal clusters on a common fleshy receptacle, and the pappus with two rows of chaff, the outer short and persistent, the inner narrow, partially twisted, and caducous. The genus contains 17 species of branching shrubs, with a resinous wood, and alternate entire leaves with revolute margins, the glomerulo of heads sessile at the tips of the branches.

Lychnophoreæ (lik-nō-fō'rē-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Benth and Hooker, 1873), < Lychnophora + -æ.] A subtribe of compositæ plants under the tribe Vernoniaceæ, characterized by having the one- or few-flowered heads aggregated to form a dense cluster, and the pappus chaffy, either single or double, or rarely bristly. It includes 11 genera, of which the type is Lychnophora, and 53 species, 42 of which are confined to Brazil, and the majority of the others to tropical America.

lychnoscope (lik'nō-skōp), n. [< Gr. λυχνος, a lamp, a light, + σκοπεῖν, view.] In Arch., a small opening like a window, usually placed in the south chancel-wall of a church, and lower than the other windows, for what purpose is not strictly known. Also called low side window. Guill. "This is generally a small window in a church under a larger one. . . . The term itself is (like hagnoscope) only of this [19th] century, and may have been coined on the erroneous idea that the windows were constructed that lepers (or anchorites) might behold the altar light. On the other hand, that idea may be correct. Another theory is that of a confessional." N. and Q., 6th ser., IX, 289.

Lycian (lis'i-an), a. and n. [< L. Lycia, < Gr. Λυκία, Lycia (Λέκυκις, L. Lycius, Lycian, pl. Λέκυκιοι, L. Lycii, the Lycians) (see def.), + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Lycia, a mountainous district in southwestern Asia Minor, projecting into the Mediterranean sea, and inhabited in ancient times by a distinct race. See II.—Lycian architecture, the ancient architecture characteristic of Lycia, preserved especially in abundant series of rock-cut tombs, in which the assemblage of a system of construction in wood is closely reproduced in stone. Quadrangular obelisks, such as the harpy tomb of Xanthos, also abound, as well as stone sarcophagi, in which, as in the examples first mentioned, carpenter's work is faithfully copied. Later examples pre- sent imitations of Greek temple-façades, etc. The early architecture is of especial importance as throwing a probable light upon some of the forms through which Greek architecture was developed.

II. n. An inhabitant of Lycia; especially, one of a race inhabiting ancient Lycia, Arvan or Indo-European in language, as is shown by important inscriptions in a peculiar character recently recovered and elucidated. The Lycians seem to have exerted considerable influence in early days on the Greeks, especially through their worship of Apollo. Interesting monuments of their architecture and sculpture have been brought together in European museums, notably in the British Museum. Some sculptures found in Lycia vie in refinement with the riper archaic art of Attica. See harpy monument, under harpy.

Lycian Architecture. Tomb now in the British Museum.

Lyciæ (li-si'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Lycus + -iæ.] A subfamily of Lampyridæ having the middle coxæ distant and no epipleure, typified by the genus Lycus.

Lycium (lis'i-um), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1737), neut. of L. Lycius, Lycian.] A genus of solanaceous plants of the tribe Atropaceæ, characterized by a 3- to 5-toothed or lobed calyx, a funnel-shaped, campanulate, or urn-shaped corolla, stamens which are either exerted or included, and a slightly juicy and usually few-seeded berry. They are shrubs, often spine-bearing at the nodes, with entire leaves, the latter usually small; and they bear white, purple, rose-colored, sometimes scarlet or yellowish flowers, solitary in the axils or rarely fasciated. About 70 species have been described, but this number may be much reduced; they are found throughout warm and temperate regions, and many are cultivated. The common name of plants of the genus is box-thorn, applying especially to L. barbarum, a plant with lilac flowers and scarlet or orange berries, well adapted for training on walls or trellises. The leaves of this plant having been recommended for use as tea, it receives also the names Barbary tea-plant and Duke of Argyll's tea-tree. L. Afrum, the African tea-tree, is a spiny species with violet flowers. L. vulgare of the Mediterranean region, slightly thorny with lithic branches, and having green-purple flowers and bright-red berries, is the matrimony-vine, often cultivated, and sometimes becoming wild in America. L. Europæum is sometimes utilized for hedges, as may be also other species.

Lycodes (li-kō'dēz), n. [NL. (Reinhardt, 1838), < Gr. λυκώδης, wolfish, < λύκος, a wolf, + εἶδος, form.] The typical genus of Lycodidae, with numerous species, of northern seas, as L. vahli of the North Atlantic. They are among various fishes known as eel-pouts.

lycodid (li-kō'did), n. and a. I. n. A fish of the family Lycodidae.

II. a. Relating or belonging to the Lycodidae; lycodoid.

Lycodidae (li-kod'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lycodes + -idae.] A family of teleocephalous fishes, typified by the genus Lycodes: the eel-pouts. They are characterized by a more or less anguilliform shape, tapering backward, elongated dorsal and anal fins confluent with the caudal and invested with a thick skin, ventral jugular and rudimentary or suppressed, and branchial apertures lateral, not confluent. They inhabit arctic and cold temperate seas, mostly at considerable depths. Some of them, probably all, are viviparous, as Zoarces viviparus. The genera are about 6, the species 30. The family is also called Zoarceidæ.

lycodoid (li-kō'doid), a. and n. [< NL. Lycodes + -oid.] I. a. Pertaining to the Lycodidae or Lycodoidea, or having their characters.

II. n. A fish of the family Lycodidae or superfamily Lycodoidea.

Lycodoidea (li-kō-doi'dē-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Gill), < Lycodes + -oidea.] The Lycodidae rated as a superfamily.

Lycodon (li'kō-don), n. [NL.: see lycodont.] The typical genus of Lycodontidae, having the anterior teeth of both jaws caniniform.

lycodont (li'kō-dont), a. and n. [< Gr. λυκόντορας (λυκόντορος), a canine tooth, lit. 'wolf-tooth,' < λύκος, wolf, + ὄδους (ὀδοντ-) = E. tooth.] I. a. Having caniniform teeth, as a snake; belonging to the Lycodontida.

II. n. A snake of the family Lycodontidae.

Lycodontidæ (lī-kō-don'ti-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lycodon (Lycodont-) + -idæ.] In Günther's system of classification, a family of eolubiform serpents, typified by the genus Lycodon. The body is moderately thick; the head is oblong, with a flat top and generally a flattened and broadly rounded snout; the anterior teeth of both jaws are generally longest, and there are no grooved teeth. It contains 14 genera, mostly of Africa and the East Indies. Some of the commonest snakes of India belong here. Also Lycodontinae, as a subfamily of Colubridæ.

lycodontine (lī-kō-don'tin), a. and n. [Lycodont + -ine]. Same as lycodont.

Lycoperdaceæ (lī'kō-pēr-dā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Corda, 1842), < Lycoperdon + -aceæ.] An order of gasteromycetous fungi, typified by the genus Lycoperdon.

Lycoperdon (lī-kō-pēr'don), n. [NL., < Gr. λύκος, a wolf, + πέροσθαι, break wind.] A genus of gasteromycetous fungi, founded by Tournefort in 1700, and typical of the order Lycoperdaceæ. It is characterized by having the globular, membranaceous peridium double, the outer part of which breaks up into warts, spines, etc., while the inner part is more or less solid. The spores are globose, short-caudate, and variously colored. The species, of which more than 100 are known, are very widely distributed, and sometimes are of very large size. They are popularly known as puffballs. L. gemmatum, the common puffball, acts mechanically as a styptic, by means of its brown spores. L. giganteum, the giant puffball, when dry, stanches slight wounds, and its smoke stupefies bees. In a young state it is edible. See basidium, cut, fig. c.—Lycoperdon nuts, the herbalists' name under which certain subterranean fungi of the genus Elaphomyces were formerly known and sold.

Lycoperdon.

Lycopersicum (lī-kō-pēr'si-kum), n. [NL., < Gr. λυκοπερασκόν (as if < λύκος, a wolf, + περοσκός, the peach: see peach), a false reading of λυκοπέριον, an Egyptian plant with a strong-smelling yellow juice.] A genus of plants of the natural order Solanaceæ and the tribe Solaneæ. It differs from Solanum, with which it is closely allied, by having long, acuminate, connate anthers, opening on the inside by a longitudinal fissure. They are unarmed herbs with irregularly pinnate leaves, weak stems, five- or rarely six-parted flowers, with a rotate corolla, and growing in few-flowered cymes. The fruit is a fleshy globose or pear-shaped berry, usually red or yellow, and with numerous seeds embedded in the pulp. There are three or four species, natives of South America, but now widely cultivated and to some extent naturalized elsewhere. The most important is L. esculentum, the common tomato, formerly called love-apple, which has been very much modified by culture. Its fruit, naturally of two or three cells, is often much complicated by a consolidation of blossoms. See tomato.

lycopod (lī'kō-pod), n. [Lycopodium, q. v.] A plant of the natural order Lycopodiaceæ.

lycopode (lī'kō-pōd), n. [Lycopodium, q. v.] A highly inflammable yellow powder made up of the spores of species of Lycopodium, especially L. clavatum and L. Selago; vegetable brimstone.

Lycopodiaceæ (lī-kō-pō-di-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1815), < Lycopodium + -aceæ.] An order of cryptogamous plants, belonging to the class Lycopodiineæ, and typified by the genus Lycopodium. The order includes the homosporous Lycopodiaceæ, which produce spores of only one kind (subdivided into the Lycopodiæ with the genus Lycopodium and the Phyllosporeæ with the genus Phylloglossum), and the heterosporous Lycopodiaceæ, which produce spores of two kinds. The latter subdivision, which is typified by the genus Lepidodendron, is found only in a fossil state.

lycopodiaceous (lī-kō-pō-di-ā'shius), a. [Lycopodiaceæ + -ous.] Belonging to or resembling the Lycopodiaceæ.

Lycopodiæ (lī'kō-pō-dī'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Goebel (?), 1882), < Lycopodium + -æ.] A sub-order of Lycopodiaceæ, containing the genus Lycopodium.

Lycopodiineæ (lī'kō-pō-dīn'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Swartz, 1806), < Lycopodium + -ineæ.] A class of cryptogamous plants, including the orders Lycopodiaceæ, Psilotaceæ, and Ligulateæ.

lycopodite (lī-kop'ō-dit), n. [Lycopodium, q. v., + -ite]. A fossil plant of the genus Lycopodium.

Lycopodium (lī-kō-pō'di-um), n. [NL., so named from the appearance of the roots; < Gr. λύκος, a wolf, + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] A genus of vascular cryptogamous plants, the type of the order Lycopodiaceæ. They are low plants, usually of moss-like aspect, with evergreen, one-nerved leaves arranged in one to sixteen ranks. The sporangia are coriaceous, reniform, compressed, one-celled, dehiscing transversely, situated in the axis of unaltered leaves or in terminal bract-like spikes. The spores are copious and minute, with three lines radiating from the apex. The genus is very widely distributed, and contains 94 species, of which 12 are found in North America. L. dendroideum is the well-known ground-pine; L. clavatum is the common club-moss, or running pine, which is extensively employed in decorations. This species has also been called stag's-horn, buck's-horn, fox's-claws, foxtail, etc. L. Selago is sometimes called fir-moss, fox-foot, and tree-moss. Many fossil species have been found, those occurring in the Paleozoic strata being preferably called lycopodites.

Lycopodium dendroideum.

a, part of the spike, showing the sporangia in the axis of the scale-like leaves, seen from within; b, spore, highly magnified.

with five scales in the throat of the corolla, and fruit of four ovoid, erect nutlets. The flowers are small, violet or blue, and grow in terminal, leafy-bracted, scorpioid racemes. Three or four species are known, natives of Europe, northern Africa, and central and western Asia. One species, L. arvense, the small bugloss, is a common weed in cultivated sandy fields in Europe, and is now established from Canada to Virginia in North America.

Lycopus (lī'kō-pus), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), so named from the appearance of the leaves; < Gr. λύκος, wolf, + πούς = E. foot.] A genus of labiate plants of the tribe Satureiineæ and the subtribe Menthoidæ. It is characterized by a four- or five-toothed calyx, a corolla-limb with four divisions, the two anterior stamens perfect with the cells of the anthers at length diverging, and the nutlets sharply angled, and truncate at the apex. They are small herbs, growing in marshy places, with sharply toothed leaves, and small flowers in dense axillary whorls. About 10 species have been enumerated, but some of these are probably only varieties; they are found in North America and in the temperate regions of the Old World. L. Virginicus is a common American species with some medicinal properties, called bugleweed. L. sinuatus, another common American species, was formerly identified with L. Europæus, the water-horhound or gipsy-herb (gipsywort), which is the ordinary European species, sometimes furnishing a substitute for quinine.

Lycornis (lī-kōr'nīs), n. [NL., < Gr. λύκος, a wolf, + ὄρνις, a bird.] A genus of South American coots of the family Rallidæ and subfamily Fulicineæ, having the head carunculate. Bonaparte, 1854. Also spelled Licornis.

Horned Coot (Lycornis cornuta).

Lycosa (lī-kō'sā), n. [NL., < Gr. λύκος, a kind of spider, lit. wolf: see Lycæna.] The typical genus of Lycosidæ. L. piratica is an example. L. tarantula, or Tarantula apulica, is the well-known tarantula of southern Europe.

Lycosidæ (lī-kō'si-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lycosa + -idæ.] A family of citigrade hunting-spiders; the wolf-spiders or tarantulas. They are active predatory spiders, capturing their prey by chasing, and spinning no web. The legs are long, especially the hinder pair, and the cephalothorax is narrowed in front; the ocelli are usually in three rows; the spinnerets are three pairs; the palces are vertical. The leading genera are Lycosa and Dolomedes.

Lycotropical (lī-kot'rō-pal), a. [Lycosa, a wolf, + τροπέος, a turning: see trope.] In bot., curved downward like a horseshoe: applied to an orthotropical ovule.

Lycus (lī'kus), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1787), < Gr. λύκος, a wolf.] 1. A genus of beetles of the family Malacodermidæ, having the head prolonged like a rostrum with the antennæ at its base, and the final joints of the antennæ as long as the preceding ones. It is a large genus, the species of which are mainly African, although two are found in North America, and a few in the East Indies and Australia.

2. A genus of butterflies. Hübner, 1816. Lyda (lī'dā), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1804), < Gr. Λυδός, a Lydian: see Lydian.] A genus of sawflies of the hymenopterous family Tenthredinidæ, and typical of the subfamily Lydinæ, having the fore wings with two marginal cells and the long antennæ setaceous in both sexes. The group is large and wide-spread, with 30 European and over 50 North American species.

Lyda nevadensis. (Twice natural size.)

Lydella (lī-del'ā), n. [NL., dim. of Lyda, q. v.] A genus of tachina-flies, of the family Tachinidæ, founded by Robineau-Desvoidy in 1830. L. doryphora, the only American species, has been placed in the genus Exorista. It is parasitic upon the Colorado potato-beetle, and is probably more effectual than any other insect in checking this pest in Missouri. It resembles the common house-fly, but is distinguished by its brilliant silvery-white face. Riley, 1st Rep. Ins. Mo., p. 111.

Lydella doryphora. (Cross shows natural size.)

lydent, n. A Middle English form of leden. Lydian (līd'i-an), a. and n. [L. Lydia, < Gr. Λυδία, < Λυδός, a Lydian.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Lydia, an ancient country of Asia Minor, bordering on the Ægean sea, or to its inhabitants: as, the Lydian empire (including under Croesus, its last king, famous for his wealth, a large part of Asia Minor); Lydian coins; Lydian luxury.

And ever, against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs.

Milton, L'Allegro, l. 136.

Lydian mode. See mode 1.—Lydian stone, the name given by ancient authors to the touchstone. It occurs as early as the time of Bacchylides (about 470 B. C.). The use of the Lydian stone for testing the quality of gold is minutely described by Theophrastus, and is also noticed at some length by Pliny.

II. n. An inhabitant of ancient Lydia. lye¹, v. i. An obsolete spelling of *lie*¹.

lye², v. and n. An obsolete spelling of *lie*².

lye³ (lī), n. [Formerly also lic, ley; < ME. ley, < AS. lēð = MD. looghe, D. loog = MLG. LG. loge = OHG. louga, lauga, MHG. louge, G. lange, lye; prob. akin to Teel. laug, a warm bath, hence also a hot spring (much used in comp., e. g. laugar-dag (= Sw. lördag = Dan. løvedag, Saturday), 'bath-day,' i. e. Saturday, the day appropriated by the Scandinavians to that exercise; laugar-aptan, laugar-nátt, Saturday evening, Saturday night, etc.)]. Water impregnated with alkaline salt imbibed from the ashes of wood by the process of leaching; also, some solution of an alkali, as potash, which is itself the product of leached lye concentered by evaporation. Crude lye is used in making some coarse kinds of soap, for cleaning certain things, as inked printing-types and -rollers (though for these benzine is now more common), and for various other purposes. In dilution it is used in a preparation of maize called hulled corn (which see, under hull, v. t.) and also lyed corn.

lye⁴, n. A variant of *lay*³.

lye⁵, n. An obsolete variant of *lee*⁵.

lyed (līd), a. [*lyc*³ + -ed]. Treated or prepared with lye.

The air is to be carefully excluded from the surface of fruits left standing after having been either lyed or washed. Sci. Amer., N. S., LIX, 356.

Lyencephala (li-en-sef'a-lä), n. pl. [NL., irreg. < Gr. λίαν, loose, + ἐγκέφαλος, brain: see encephalon.] In Owen's classification, the lowest of four subclasses of Mammalia, including the marsupials and monotremes, or Didelphia and Ornithodelphia; the implantal mammals. The name indicates the loose or slight connection of the right and left hemispheres of the cerebrum, in consequence of the small size, if not the absence, of the main commissure or corpus callosum. It is correlated with Lisencephala, Gyrencephala, and Archencephala.

lyencephalous (li-en-sef'a-lus), a. [As Lyencephala + -ous.] Pertaining to the Lyencephala, or having their characters.

lyerman, n. See lyreman.

lyest, n. pl. A Middle English variant of lees. See lees, Chaucer.

lyft, lyfyft, etc. Middle English forms of life, lively, etc.

lyftt. A Middle English form of *lift*¹, *lift*², *left*¹.

Lygæidæ (li-jē-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lygæus + -idæ.] A family of heteropterous insects, typified by the genus Lygæus, belonging to the tribe of land-bugs, or Geocoræ. The genera are many, mostly tropical or sub-tropical, and the family is usually divided into 9 subfamilies. These bugs are small or of moderate size, with 3-jointed tarsi and 4-jointed antennæ.

Lygæus (li-jē-us), n. [NL., < Gr. λυγαιος, shadowy, gloomy, < λύγν, twilight.]

The typical genus of Lygæidæ, founded by Fabricius in 1794. It is characterized by a conical head with projecting eyes in contact with the prothorax; between the eyes is a pair of ocelli. Species are numerous, and are widely distributed in temperate and tropical countries, especially in South America. L. fasciatus is a common one, red, banded and dotted with black. L. equestris, L. saxatilis, and L. familiaris inhabit Europe.

Lygæus fasciatus.
(Twice natural size.)

Lygodia (li-gō-dī-ā-sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Presl, 1845) < Lygodium + -æceæ.] A former order of ferns including the genera Lygodium and Hydroglossum, the latter of which is now included under Lygodium also. Lygodium is placed by Hooker in the suborder Schizæaceæ.

Lygodia (li-gō-dī-ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bronnart, 1843) < Lygodium + -ææ.] A former tribe of ferns, typified by the genus Lygodium.

Lygodium (li-gō-dī-um), n. [NL. (Swartz, 1801) < Gr. λυγώδης, like a willow twig, < λύγος, a willow twig, withy, + εἶδος, form.] A widely diffused genus of ferns with climbing stipes. The spore-cases are ovoid, solitary or occasionally in pairs, in the axils of large imbricated scale-like indusia. The fully developed barren fronds are either palmate or pinnate. Of the 16 species known, only one, L. palmatum, the climbing fern, is a native of North America, being found from Massachusetts south to Florida. It has flexible, twining stipes, from 1 to 3 feet long, and short alternate 2-forked branches or petioles, each fork bearing a round-cordate palmately 4- to 7-lobed pinnule. Eighteen fossil species have been described, ranging from the Cretaceous to the Miocene. They are common in the Tertiary deposits of western America.

Lygosoma (li-gō-sō-mä), n. [NL., < Gr. λύγος, a withy, + σώμα, body.] A genus of scincoid lizards.

lying¹ (li'ing), n. [Verbal n. of *lie*¹, v.] A place where one lies.

The place for the body to be interred wehe was devised over against the lying of Q—Katharine on the right side of the Quyre.

1680 Register book of Peterborough Cathedral. (N. and Q., 7th ser., IV, 121.)

lying¹ (li'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of *lie*¹, v.] Being prostrate. See *lie*¹.—Lying panel. See panel.—Lying tot, adjacent to.

Neither bee there wanting woods here . . . and parkes; for many there are lying to Noblemen's and gentlemen's houses replenished with game.

Holland, tr. of Camden, p. 469. (Davies.)

lying² (li'ing), n. [Verbal n. of *lie*², v.] Falsehood; untruthfulness.

lying² (li'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of *lie*², v.] Mendacious; false; deceptive: as, a lying rumor.

What was it? A lying trick of the brain!
Tennyson, Maud, xxiii, 2.

lying-down (li'ing-down'), n. Same as lying-in.

lying-in (li'ing-in'), n. and a. [Verbal n. of lie in: see *lie*¹, v.] I. n. Confinement in childbirth.

II. a. Pertaining to childbirth; obstetrical: as, a lying-in hospital.

lyingly (li'ing-li), adv. In a lying manner; falsely; by telling lies.

lying-to (li'ing-tō'), n. See to lie to, under *lie*¹.

lyket. A Middle English form of *like*¹, *like*², *like*³.

lykwaket, n. See likewake.

Lyle gun. See *gun*¹.

lylliet, n. An obsolete form of tily.

lyml¹, n. An obsolete form of *limb*¹.

lym², n. See *limc*⁴.

lymall¹, n. See limail.

lymbot, n. An obsolete spelling of limba.

lyme¹, n. An obsolete spelling of *lime*¹.

lyme², n. See *lime*⁵.

lyme-grass (lim'gräs), n. [< lyme (? obs. spelling of *lime*¹—no obvious application) + grass.] A coarse grass of the genus Elymus, belonging to the tribe Hordeæ, having the inflorescence in simple spikes, very rarely branched, the spikelets two or three together, and the glumes two, both on the same side of the spikelet, without awns, inclosing from one to seven florets. The species have an extensive geographical range; nearly all are inhabitants of the temperate zones.

Lymerylon (li-mek'si-lon), n. [NL., < Gr. λύπη, maltreatment, ruin, + ξύλον, wood.] The typical genus of Lymerylonidæ, having five abdominal segments and entire elytra. The species make cylindrical borings in oak, and L. navale is notorious for the injury it thus causes to ship-timber. Also written Lymerylum, and improperly Limexylon.

Lymerylonidæ (li-mek-si-lon'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Lymerylon + -idæ.] A small but important family of pentamerous Coleoptera, of the series Clavicornia. It is characterized by serrate 11-jointed antennæ inserted on the sides of the deflexed and posteriorly narrowed head, slender legs with contiguous coxæ (except in Atractocerus), prominent ungrooved hind coxæ, prominent conical front coxæ without trochanter, and the first ventral segment not elongated. Also Lymerylidæ.

lymiter, lymitour, n. Obsolete forms of limiter.

Lymnæa, Lymnea, n. See Limnæa.

lymnite, n. See limnite, 1.

lymno-. For words beginning thus, see Limno-.
lymph (limf), n. [= F. lymphe = Pg. lympa = Sp. It. linfa, < L. lymphæ, clear water, a fountain (NL. lymph), also personified, Lymphea, a rural deity; a poet, word (so spelled appar. as associated, erroneously, with nymphæ, < Gr. νύμφη, a nymph, esp. a water-nymph, poet. also water, OL. λυμφία, a water-nymph), OL. Λυμφη, orig. lympa* (?) = Oscan dium pa, connected with limpidus, clear, limpid: see limpid.] 1. Pure, clear water, or any fluid similarly transparent. [Poetical.]

A fountain bubbled up, whose lymph serene Nothing of earthy mixture might disdain. Trench.

2. In physiol., a fluid in animal bodies, contained in certain vessels called lymphatics. Lymph is, like the blood, an alkaline fluid, consisting of a plasma and corpuscles, and coagulates by the formation of fibrin. The lymph differs from the blood in its corpuscles being of the colorless kind, and in the very small proportion of its solid constituents, which amount to only about 5 per cent. of its weight. Lymph may, in fact, be regarded as blood minus its red corpuscles and diluted with water so as to be somewhat less dense than the serum of blood, which contains about 8 per cent. of solid matter.—Humanized lymph, vaccine lymph taken from a human being: opposed to bovine lymph, its original source.—Vaccine lymph, the matter collected in a cowpox vesicle. When transferred either from the cow or a person having the disease from being vaccinated, it produces the same disease in others, and gives comparative immunity from smallpox.

lymphad (lim'fad), n. [Prob. a corruption of Gael. longfhada, a galley, < long, a ship, + fada, long.] A galley with one mast and usually a yard upon it. Representations of such a galley, with three or more oars fixed in place for rowing, are common in Scotch heraldry. [Scotch.]

"Our loch ne'er saw the Cawmill lymphads," said the bigger Highlander. . . . "She doena value a Cawmill malr as a Cowan."
Scott, Rob Roy, xxix.

lymphadenitis (lim-fad-e-ni'tis), a. [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀδέν, a gland, + -itis.] Inflammation of a lymphatic gland.

lymphadenoid (lim-fad'e-noid), a. [< NL. lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀδέν, a gland, + εἶδος, form.] Resembling or pertaining to a lymphatic gland: as, lymphadenoid tissue.

lymphadenoma (lim-fad'e-nō-mä), n.; pl. lymphadenomata (-mä-tä). [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀδέν, a gland, + -oma.] 1. A hyperplastic lymphatic gland.—2. Hodgkin's disease; pseudo-leucocythemia.—3. Lymphosarcoma.

lymphadenomatous (lim-fad'e-nom'a-tus), a. [< NL. lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀδέν, a gland, +

-oma (cf. adenoma); as lymphadenoma(-t) + -ous.] Of, pertaining to, or characterized by lymphadenoma.

Lymphadenomatous glands may be hard, and aerofolous onca soft, but the converse is usually found. Lancet, No. 3443, p. 633.

lymphæduct (lim'fē-duk't), n. [< NL. lymphæ, gen. of lymphæ, lymph, + L. ductus, conveyance, pipe, canal: see duct, and cf. aqueduct.] A lymphatic vessel or duct. Also lymphoduct.

lymphæmia (lim-fē'mi-ä), n. [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. αἷμα, blood.] In pathol., lymphatic leucæmia.

lymphangeitis (lim-fan-jē-ī'tis), n. Same as lymphangitis.

lymphangiectasis (lim-fan-ji-ek'tā-sis), n. [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, + ἐκτασις, extension, dilatation.] Dilatation of the lymphatic vessels. Also lymphangiectasia.

lymphangiectatic (lim-fan'ji-ek-tat'ik), a. [< lymphangiectasis (-at) + -ic.] Pertaining to lymphangiectasis.

lymphangioiditis (lim-fan'ji-ō-ī'tis), n. Same as lymphangitis.

lymphangioma (lim-fan-ji-ō'mä), n.; pl. lymphangiomata (-mä-tä). [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, + -oma.] A tumor composed of lymphatic vessels.

lymphangitis (lim-fan-ji'tis), n. [NL., < lymphæ, lymph, + Gr. ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, + -itis.] Inflammation of the lymphatic vessels.

lymphate¹ (lim'fat), a. [< L. lymphatus, pp. of lymphare, drive out of one's senses, distract with fear, craze, < lymphæ, water: see lymph. The connection is uncertain; prob. with ref. to water-nymphs.] Frightened into madness; raving.

lymphated¹ (lim'fä-ted), a. [< lymphate + *-ed*².] Same as lymphate.

lymphatic¹ (lim-fat'ik), a. and n. [= F. lymphatique = Sp. linfático = Pg. lymphatico = It. linfatico, < NL. lymphatics, pertaining to lymph, < lymphæ, lymph: see lymph.] I. a. 1. Containing, conveying, or pertaining in any way to lymph or chyle: as, a lymphatic vessel; a lymphatic gland.

—2. Dull; sluggish; slow in thought or action, as if from an excess of lymph in the body.—Lymphatic cachexy, Hodgkin's disease.—Lymphatic cavity. Same as lymph-sinus.

—Lymphatic ganglion. Same as lymphatic gland.—Lymphatic gland, one of the glandular bodies, formed mainly of lymphoid tissue, occurring in the course of the lymphatic ducts. They have no proper ducts conveying away a secretion, and their function is probably hematopoietic.

Lymphatic heart. Same as lymph-heart.—Lymphatic temperament. See temperament.—Lymphatic vessel. See II.

II. n. A vessel which conveys lymph. The lymphatics are small transparent vessels arising in the various tissues, provided with valves like the veins, and running toward the heart. They are occasionally interrupted by lymphatic glands, and convey the leakage from the blood-vascular system and the waste of the tissues back into the venous system. The place of discharge for the drainage of the right side of the head, right arm, and adjacent regions of the trunk is at the junction of the right subclavian and right jugular veins, while the lymph from all the rest of the body through the thoracic duct pours into the blood at the corresponding place on the left side. That part of the lymphatic system which runs from the intestine takes up some of the products of digestion, and the vessels are here called lacteals.

lymphatic², a. and n. [< L. lymphaticus, distracted, frenzied, < lymphatus, pp. of lymphare, distracted: see lymphate.] I. a. Making or being distracted or frantic.

Horace either is or feligna himself lymphatic, and shews what an effect the vision of the Nymphs and Bacchus had on him. Shaftesbury, Enthusiasm, § 6.

Lymphatics of Front of Right Arm. L. G., three lymphatic glands, or ganglia, as they are sometimes called.

Lymphatics of Leg. G., lymphatic glands; L., lymphatic vessels.

Lymphatic vessel laid open, showing valves, magnified.

The place of discharge for the drainage of the right side of the head, right arm, and adjacent regions of the trunk is at the junction of the right subclavian and right jugular veins, while the lymph from all the rest of the body through the thoracic duct pours into the blood at the corresponding place on the left side. That part of the lymphatic system which runs from the intestine takes up some of the products of digestion, and the vessels are here called lacteals.

lymphatic², a. and n. [< L. lymphaticus, distracted, frenzied, < lymphatus, pp. of lymphare, distracted: see lymphate.] I. a. Making or being distracted or frantic.

Horace either is or feligna himself lymphatic, and shews what an effect the vision of the Nymphs and Bacchus had on him. Shaftesbury, Enthusiasm, § 6.

II. n. A mad enthusiast; a lunatic.

All nations have their lymphatics of some kind or another. Shaftesbury, Enthusiasm, § 6.

lymph-cell (limf'sel), n. A leucocyte occurring in lymph; a lymph-corpuscule.

lymph-channel (limf'chan'el), n. Any conduit for lymph.—Lymph-channel of a lymphatic gland, the space left between the lymphoid tissue and the capsule and trabeculae, which is traversed by retiform connective tissue, and in which the lymph circulates. Also called lymph-sinus.

lymph-corpuscule (limf'kôr'pus-l), n. One of the corpuscules of lymph; a lymph-cell.

lymph-heart (limf'härt), n. A lymphatic vessel which is rhythmically contractile. Such vessels are generally enlarged near their opening into veins, where they acquire a muscular investment which enables them to pulsate. They are chiefly developed in the lower vertebrates. Also called lymphatic heart.

lymphoduct (limf'fô-duk't), n. [< NL. lymphā, lymph, + L. ductus, a conveyance; see lymphæduct.] Same as lymphæduct.

lymphography (lim-fog'ra-fi), n. [< NL. lymphā, lymph, + Gr. -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] A description of the lymphatic vessels, their origin and uses.

lymphoid (lim'foid), a. [< lymph + -oid.] 1. Having the character or nature of lymph; resembling lymph; lacteal.—2. Of or pertaining to lymph.—3. Of the nature of lymphoid tissue.—Lymphoid cells, rounded cells found in lymphoid tissue and resembling white blood-corpuses, except that the nucleus is larger in comparison with the protoplasm.—Lymphoid cords, the rounded cords of lymphoid tissue presenting themselves in the medullary portions of lymphatic glands.—Lymphoid nodules, any nodules of lymphoid tissue, such as are found, for example, in many mucous membranes.—Lymphoid tissue, a tissue formed of branching cells united into a network, the interstices of which are filled with lymphoid cells. Such tissue forms the greater part of the lymphatic glands and such allied structures as the solitary and agminate glands of the intestine; it envelops the smaller arteries of the spleen and forms the Malpighian corpuscles; there are masses of it in the tonsils; it forms the thymus in the infant; it occurs extensively in a diffuse form throughout the mucous membrane of the alimentary canal; and it presents itself in serous membranes, on the bronchial mucous membrane, and elsewhere.

lymphoidal (lim-foi'dal), a. [< lymphoid + -al.] Same as lymphoid.

lymphoma (lim-fô'mä), n.; pl. lymphomata (-mä-tä). [< NL., < lymphā, lymph, + -oma.] A hyperplastic mass of lymphoid tissue. The name has been applied also to lymphosarcoma, and, as general lymphoma, to Hodgkin's disease.

lymphomatous (lim-fom'a-tus), a. [< lymphoma(-t) + -ous.] Pertaining to or of the nature of a lymphoma.

lymphosarcoma (lim'fô-sär-kô'mä), n.; pl. lymphosarcomata (-mä-tä). [< NL., < lymphā, lymph, + sarcoma, q. v.] A sarcoma which in the combination of retiform cells with lymphoid cells presents the structure of a lymphatic gland.

lymphotomy (lim-fot'ô-mi), n. [< lymph(atic) + Gr. τμή, a cutting.] Dissection of the lymphatics.

lymph-sac (limf'sak), n. Same as lymph-sinus.

lymph-sinus (limf'si'nus), n. A large or dilated lymphatic vessel. Also called lymph-sac and lymphatic cavity.

lymph-space (limf'späs), n. Any cavity in the tissues containing lymph.

lymph-vessel (limf'ves'el), n. Any lymphatic vessel.

lymph (lim'fi), a. [< lymph + -y.] Containing or like lymph.

lymptwigg (limp'twig), n. A dialectal corruption of lapping. C. Swainson. [Prov. Eng. (Exmoor).] lynt, n. An obsolete spelling of *line*¹, *lin*².

lynaget, n. An obsolete variant of lineage.

lynce (lins), n. [< OF. lynce, < L. lynx, lynx; see lynx.] A lynx.

The sharp-eyed lynce.

Greene, Maiden's Dream (Prudence). (Davies.)

lyncean (lin-sē'an), a. [< Gr. λυκεος, pertaining to a lynx, < λυξ (λυκ-), a lynx; see lynx.]

1. Pertaining to the lynx.—2. Lynx-eyed; sharp-sighted.—Lyncean Academy (It. Accademia dei Lincei, Academy of the Lyncei, lyncei being the plural of L. Lynceus: see lynceous), an association for the promotion of arts and sciences, existing in Rome from 1609 to about 1632. It has since been revived, and is now called the Reale Accademia dei Lincei.

lynceoust, a. [< Gr. λυκεος, sharp-sighted, < λυξ (λυκ-), lynx; see lynx.] Sharp-sighted; lynx-eyed.

But yet, in the end, their secret driftles are laid open, and lynceous eyes, that see through stone walls, have made a passage into the close coverture of their hypocrisis.

Nashe, Pierce Penilesse (1592). (Hallwell.)

Lynceus (lin-sē'us), n. [< NL., also Lynceus; see lynceous.] A name sometimes given to the constellation Lynx.

lynch¹, n. See *linch*¹.

lynch² (linch), v. t. [< lynch(-law).] To punish by lynch-law; punish summarily, for a crime or public offense of any kind, without authority of law; specifically, to punish with death in this manner. See lynch-law.

The prison was burst open by the mob, and George was lynched, as he deserved. Emerson, English Traits, ix.

lynchet, n. See linchet.

lynch-law (linch'lâ), n. [Formerly also Lynch's law; orig. the kind of law administered by Charles Lynch (1736-96), a Virginia planter (afterward a colonel in the army of Gen. Greene), who in the early part of the Revolution, in conjunction with his neighbors, Robert Adams and Thomas Calloway, undertook to protect society and support the revolutionary government in the region where he lived, on the Staunton river, by punishing with stripes or banishment such lawless or disaffected persons as were accused. According to tradition, Tories brought before this informal court were often hung up by their thumbs until they cried, "Liberty forever!"; but the penalty of death was never inflicted. Charles Lynch was in early life a Quaker. The origin of the term is often erroneously ascribed to his brother, John Lynch, the founder of Lynchburg in Virginia, who remained a Quaker all his life. The notion that the term originated in the action of a mayor of Galway in Ireland, one James Fitzstephen Lynch, who is said to have executed the law upon his own son by hanging him, in 1493, is erroneous.] The administration of summary punishment, especially death, for a crime or public offense, without authority of law. It implies lawless concert or action among a number of members of the community, to supply the want of criminal justice or to anticipate its delays, or to inflict a penalty demanded by public opinion, though in defiance of the laws.

Such is too often the administration of law on the frontier, Lynch's law, as it is technically termed, in which the plaintiff is apt to be witness, jury, judge, and executioner, and the defendant convicted and punished on mere presumption.

Ireing, Tour on the Prairies, p. 35, quoted in Bartlett's [Americanisms].

lyncline (lin'sin), a. [< L. lynx (lynx-), lynx, + -inc.] Resembling a lynx; pertaining to the genus Lynx; lyncean.

lyndt, lyndet. See lind.

lyndent, n. An obsolete form of linden.

lynnet, n. An obsolete spelling of *line*¹, *lin*².

Lynngbya (ling'bi-ä), n. [< NL. (Agardh, 1824), named after Hans Christian Lynngbye (1782-1837), a Danish botanist.] A large genus of algae, typifying Kuetzing's family Lynngbyaceae, which is ordinarily placed in the order Nostochineae. Some of the species inhabit fresh running water, others stagnant, and a few salt water. They consist of delicate threads or filaments, each provided with a distinct sheath, which are simple and destitute of heterocysts. The spores are unknown, and propagation takes place by means of homogones which slide out of the sheaths. There are 23 fresh-water American species, and about a dozen brackish or salt-water species. Sometimes written Lynngbia.

Lynngbyæ (ling-bi'ë-ë), n. pl. [< NL. (Kuetzing, 1843), < Lynngbya + -æ.] A family of algae, typified by the genus Lynngbya. The genus Lynngbya is placed by Thuret and Farlow in the suborder Nostochineæ (the Nematogenez of Cohn in part); by Wolle and Bennett in the order or tribe Oscillariaceæ; and by Cooke in the family Lynngbyæ, which is made of equal rank with the Nostocææ. Much confusion of terms prevails in the classification of these plants.

lyngwort (ling'wert), n. Same as lungwort.

lynton, n. An obsolete variant of lintel.

lyntquhitet, n. An obsolete form of lintwhite.

lynx (lingks), n. [Formerly also linx; *< ME. lynx = OF. lynce, F. lynx = Sp. lynce = Pg. lynce, lynce = It. lynce, < L. lynx, < Gr. λυξ (λυκ-), a lynx, = Lith. luszis = Sw. lo, a lynx, = (with additional formative -s) Dan. los = AS. lox = OS. lohs = D. losch = OHG. MHG. luchs, G. luchs, a lynx; prob. so called with ref. to its bright eyes, < Gr. λυξ in λυχνος, a lamp, λυξαιον, see, etc., L. λυξ, in lucere, shine, lux, light, Teut. λυξ, be light; see light¹. For the Teut. forms, cf. the similar forms of fox.] 1. A wild cat with a short tail, penciled ears, and 28 teeth, belonging to the family Felidae and genus Lynx, such as the caracal, the loup-cervier, and others. There are a number of species, inhabiting Europe, Asia, Africa, and North America. They are of moderate size among Felidae, but considerably larger than any house-cat, with a short body, a very short tail, large and long limbs, usually bearded cheeks and tufted ears, and spotted, marbled, or clouded coloration. Some have been known from time immemorial, and famed for their supposed sharp-sightedness, which probably is no* greater than that of other cats. The common European lynx is L. lynx; L. cervaria, L. pardina, L. isabellina, etc., are other Old World species or varieties. The Persian lynx is the caracal, L. caracal. (See cut under caracal.) The common wildcat of North America is the bay lynx, L. rufus, which runs into several varieties. The Canada lynx, L. canadensis, is a larger, much more robust and shaggy wildcat, resembling the lynx of northern Europe or Siberia; the general complexion is gray or hoary, with clouded or obsolete spots.

Lynx (Lynx canadensis).

2. [cap.] A genus of Felidae lacking the front upper premolar of the true cats; the lynxes. The dental formula is: 3 incisors, 1 canine, 2 premolars, and 1 molar in each upper and lower half-jaw—in all, 28 teeth, instead of 30 as in Felis.

3. [cap.] A small northern constellation introduced by Hevelius in 1690, the name being chosen because the sharp-sightedness of a lynx is required to distinguish any of its stars. It is placed between the Great Bear and Auriga, north of the Twins. Its ten brightest stars are of the fifth magnitude.

lynx-eyed (lingks'id), a. Having acute sight.

lyomer (li'ô-mër), n. A fish of the order Lyo- meri.

Lyomeri (li-om'ë-rî), n. pl. [< NL., pl. of lyomercus; see lyomercus.] An order of ateloccephalous fishes. They have rudimentary branchial arches (none of which are modified as branchiostegal or pharyngeal) situated far behind the skull, deficient especially in nasal and vomerine elements, and articulating with the first vertebra by a basioccipital condyle alone; only two cephalic arches, both freely movable, an anterior dentigerous one, and a posterior suspensorial one, the latter consisting of hyomandibular and quadrate bones; no opercular elements or maxillary bones; an imperfect scapular arch, limited to a single cartilaginous plate, remote from the skull; and separately ossified but imperfect vertebrae. The order includes a few remarkable deep-sea forms constituting the families Eurypharyngidae and Saccopharyngidae.

lyomercus (li-om'ë-rns), a. [< NL. lyomercus, < Gr. λυειν, loose, + μέρος, part.] Loose-jointed; loosely put together; specifically, pertaining to the Lyomeri, or having their characters.

lyon, n. An obsolete spelling of lion.—Lyon court, a court in Scotland which has jurisdiction in questions regarding coat armor and precedence. It is presided over by the lion king-at-arms, who is virtually supreme in all matters of heraldry in Scotland. The name is derived from the lion on the royal shield.—Lyon dollar. See dollar.—Lyon king-at-arms. See king-at-arms.

Lyonetia (li-ô-net'i-ä), n. [< NL., named after P. Lyonet (1707-89), a Dutch naturalist.] The typical genus of Lyonetiidae. L. clerckella is an example. Hübner, 1816.

Lyonetiidae (li-ô-net'i-dë), n. pl. [< NL. (Staudinger, 1871), < Lyonetia + -idae.] A family of microlepidopterous insects of the tineid series, having erect hair on the hinder part of the head, no ocelli or labial palpi, and the antennæ long and thin with broadened basal joint. They fly at evening, and rest with the wings roof-shaped, the body elevated in front, and the antennæ laid back. The larvae have 16 feet, and are either leaf-miners or live between leaves spun together. The family contains about half a dozen genera, of which Cemiostoma and Bucculatrix are the most prominent.

lyonnaise (lë-ô-nâz'), a. [F., fem. of Lyonnais; see Lyonnese.] Lyonnese; specifically applied in cookery to a style of serving potatoes, etc., with a sauce of butter, parsley, and sometimes onions.

Lyonnese (li-ô-nës' or -nëz'), a. and n. [< F. Lyonnais; < Lyon, Lyons.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the city of Lyons in France, or its inhabitants.

2. n. A native of Lyons.

Lyons blue. See bluc.

Lyopomata (li-ô-pô'ma-tä), n. pl. [< NL., < Gr. λυειν, loose, + πομά, lid, cover.] An order of Brachiopoda, one of two into which the class is usually divided, the other being Arthropomata. Formerly called Inarticulata.

lyopomatous (li-ô-pom'a-tus), a. [As Lyopomata + -ous.] Hingeless, as the valves of a brachiopod; ecardinal or inarticulate; specifically, pertaining to or having the characters of the Lyopomata.

Lyperanthus (li-pë-ran'thus), n. [< NL. (R. Brown, 1810), so called in allusion to the somber appearance of the flowers; < Gr. λυπηρός, painful, + άνθος, a flower.] An Australian genus of orchidaceous plants of the tribe Neottieæ and the subtribe Diurideæ, characterized by the posterior sepal being broad and concave and the lateral ones narrow, the claw of the lip broad, and the blade ovate or lanceolate, recurved, and papillose, while the column is quite long and is not winged. Four or six species are known, terrestrial herbs, usually with a short rhizome. The stem in the normal species bears a number of leaves, and the flowers are few and medium-sized, growing in a bracted raceme. The name flower-of-sadness is given to plants of this genus, especially to the species L. nigricans, which is common in cultivation.

Lyperia (lĭ-pĕ'ri-ĭ), n. [NL., (Bentham, 1835), so called in allusion to the dull color of the flowers, and the fact that they are closed and scentless during the day, and expanded and fragrant at night; < Gr. λυπρός, painful, < λύπη, pain.] A genus of scrophulariaceous plants of the tribe Manuleae, characterized by a five-parted calyx, a corolla-tube which is usually slender at the apex and gibbous or incurved at the base, and four included stamens. They are shrubs or woody herbs, with the lower leaves opposite and the upper alternate, often clustered in the axils. The flowers are axillary or in terminal spikes or racemes; when fresh, they are usually yellow or purple, but turn black in drying. There are about 30 species, indigenous to Africa and the Canary Islands. The flowers of L. crocea, from the Cape of Good Hope, afford a fine orange dye and have a medicinal use. They are known by the name of African saffron.

Lyra (lĭ'rĭ-ĭ), n. [NL., < L. lyra, < Gr. λύρα, a lyre, also a constellation so called: see *lyre*¹.]

The Constellation Lyra.

1. An ancient northern constellation, representing the lyre of Hermes or of Orpheus. Also called the Harp. The brightest star of this constellation is Vega (α Lyrae). It is the seventh in order of brightness in the heavens and the third brightest in the northern hemisphere, being half a magnitude brighter than a standard star of the first magnitude. It forms, with two small stars near it, an equilateral triangle, one of the most striking configurations of the summer sky. Vega, Arcturus, and Polaris form a large triangle, nearly right-angled at Vega.

2. [L. c.; pl. lyrae (-rĕ).] In anat., a tract of the brain beneath the corpus callosum, on the under surface and between the divergent posterior pillars of the fornix. There the fibers are so arranged as to present certain longitudinal and transverse lines, fancifully likened to the strings of a lyre. The lyra is merely the appearance or formation of a surface, not a distinct part of the fornix. It is also known as the psalterium or corpus psalmodiae.

3. In zool.: (a) A genus of fishes. Willughby, 1686. (b) A genus of brachiopods. Cumberland, 1816.—4. [L. c.] See *lyra*².

lyraid (lĭ'rĭ-ĭd), n. [< Lyra + *-id*².] One of the meteors sometimes observed about April 20th: so named because they appear to radiate from the constellation Lyra.

lyrate (lĭ'rĭt), a. [< NL. lyratus, < L. lyra, a lyre: see *lyre*¹.] Resembling a lyre; having the form or curves of a lyre; lyre-shaped. In ornith., applied to the tail of the lyre-bird, Menura superba, and of the blackcock, Tetrao or Lyrurus tetrix; in entom., to insects or parts which approach the form of a lyre or lyrate leaf. — Lyrate leaf, a leaf of a plant divided transversely into several lobes, which increase in size toward a large terminal one.

lyrated (lĭ'rĭ-tĕd), a. Same as lyrate.

lyrately (lĭ'rĭt-ĭlĭ), adv. In the form of a lyre; in a lyrate manner. G. Bentham, Notes on Compositae.

lyra-way (lĭ'rĭ-wĕ), n. The kind of tablature in which lute-music was customarily written. See tablature.

lyrawise (lĭ'rĭ-wĭz), adv. In the manner customary for lute-music: applied to certain kinds of tablature.

lyre¹ (lĭr), n. [< F. lyre = Sp. It. lira = Pg. lyra, < L. lyra, < Gr. λύρα, a lyre, lute, also lyric poetry and music, the constellation Lyra, a sea-fish.] 1. In music: (a) A stringed instrument of Egyptian origin, which became the national instrument of ancient Greece. It belonged essentially to the harp family. It resembled closely the cith-ara, which was derived from Asia, and, like it, consisted of a hollow body, sometimes made of a tortoise shell, from which two branching horns projected upward, carrying a cross-piece or yoke; the strings, whose number varied from three to ten or more, but was most characteristically seven, were stretched between the yoke and the body, a bridge being provided on the latter for their attachment. The instrument, held by the left arm, sometimes resting on the knee, was played with a plectrum in the right hand, and also by the fingers of the left hand. The tuning of the strings was probably various, though doubtless tetrachordal from very early times. The strings of an eight-stringed lyre were named hypate, the 'highest' string (probably as the lyre was usually held), which was the longest and gave the lowest sound; parhypate, the next string to hypate; lichanos, the forefinger-string; mese, the middle string; paramese, the next string to mese; trite, the third string (from the bottom); paranete, the next string to nete; and nete, the 'last' or 'lowest' string, which was the shortest and gave the highest sound. From these terms came many of the names of tones in the various Greek tonal systems. (See tetrachord.) The lyre was the instrument most used by the Greeks for accompanying singing and recitation; hence the terms lyric and lyrical. It is doubtful whether it was used unaccompanied by the voice.

Ancient Greek Lyre.—From a cup painted by Duris. (Berlin Museum.)

To me in vain the hold Mæonian lyre
Awakes the numbers fraught with living fire.
Falconer, Shipwreck, iii.

(b) An element in the name of some instruments of the viol class, as the arm-lyre or lira da braccio, and the knee-lyre or lira da gamba. See *lira*². (c) A kind of metallic harmonica, mounted on a lyre-shaped frame, occasionally used in military music. (d) A kind of rebeck used by the modern Greeks. See rebec.—2. [cap.] A constellation. See Lyra, 1.—3. A verse of the kind commonly used in lyric poetry.—4. The Manx shearwater, Puffinus anglorum. [Orkney and Shetland].—5. A grade of isinglass: a trade-name.—Æolian lyre. See Æolian.—Greek lyre. See def. 1 (a).

lyre², n. An obsolete form of *lira*¹.

lyre³, n. See *lira*².

lyre-bat (lĭr'bat), n. A kind of bat, Megaderma lyra.

lyre-bird (lĭr'bĕrd), n. An Australian passerine bird of the family Menuridae and genus Menura. There are two species, M. superba and M. alberti, in both of which the male has the beautiful and extraordinary lyrate tail shown in the figure. The tail is raised and displayed when the bird is courting, after the manner of the peacock and the turkey. The plumage is somber, and the bird would not be particularly noticeable were it not for the unique structure of the tail. The body is about as large as that of the domestic hen, and the air of the bird is gallinaceous, though it is a member of the order Passeres. It lives in the scrub, is shy and solitary, has its lurking places like grouse, nests on the ground, and is said to lay but one egg. Also called lyretail and lyre-pheasant.

Lyre-bird (Menura superba).

lyreman (lĭr'mĕn), n.; pl. lyremen (-mĕn). A cicada or harvest-fly; a homopterous insect of the family Cicadidae, such as Cicada tibicen.

lyre-pheasant (lĭr'fĕz'ĕnt), n. The lyre-bird. lyretail (lĭr'tĕl), n. The lyre-bird.

lyre-tailed (lĭr'tĕld), a. Having a lyrate tail: as, the lyre-tailed nightjar, Hydropsalis forcipata.

lyre-turtle (lĭr'tĕr'tl), n. The leatherback or trunk-turtle, Dermochelys coriacea. See cut under leatherback.

lyric (lĭr'ĭk), a. and n. [= F. lyrique = Sp. lirico = Pg. lyrico = It. lyrico, < L. lyricus, < Gr. λύρα, lyre, of or for a lyre, as a noun a lyric poet (L. neut. lyricum, a lyric poem), < λύρα, a lyre: see *lyre*¹.] 1. a. 1. Pertaining or adapted to the lyre or harp; fit to be sung to or accompanied; hence, pertaining to or characteristic of song; suggestive of music or song.

Æolian charms and Dorian lyric odes.

Milton, P. R., iv. 257.

2. Writing for or as if for the lyre, or with musical effect; composing songs, or poems of a song-like character: as, a lyric poet.—Lyric poetry, among the ancients, poetry sung to the lyre; in modern usage, poetry composed for musical recitation, or distinctively that class of poetry which has reference to and delineates the poet's own thoughts and feelings, as opposed to epic or dramatic poetry, which details external circumstances and events.—Lyric stage, the operas; operatic representations collectively.

II. n. 1. A composer of lyric poems.

The greatest conqueror in this nation, after the manner of the old Grecian lyricists, did not only compose the words of his divine odes, but act them to music himself.

Addison.

2. A lyric composition or poem.—3. A verse of the kind commonly used in lyric poetry.

lyricist (lĭr'ĭk), v. t. [< lyric, n.] To sing in a lyrical way. Davies.

Parson Funch makes a very good shift still, and lyrics over his part in an anthem very handsomely.
Tom Brown, Works, II. 249. (Davies.)

lyrical (lĭr'ĭ-kĭl), a. [< lyric + -al.] Same as lyric.

Lyrical emotion of every kind . . . requires the Saxon element of our language.
De Quincey.

lyrichord (lĭr'ĭ-kōrd), n. [< L. lyra, a lyre, + chorda, a string: see chord, *cord*¹.] An upright form of harpsichord.

lyricism (lĭr'ĭ-sĭzĭm), n. [< lyric + -ism.] 1. A lyrical composition.

They must have our lyricists at their fingers' ends.
Gray.

2. A lyrical utterance or mode of expression. [Rare.]

lyricist (lĭr'ĭ-sĭst), n. [< lyric + -ist.] A lyric poet; one versed in lyrical composition. [Rare.]

lyrie (lĭ'rĭ), n. The armed bullhead or pogge, Agonus cataphractus.

lyrifer (lĭr'ĭ-fĕr), n. [< NL. lyrifer: see lyriferous.] A vertebrate of the superclass Lyrifera.

Lyrifera (lĭ-rĭf'ĕ-rĭ-ĭ), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of lyrifer: see lyriferous.] A superclass of skulled vertebrates distinguished by the development of a scapular arch in the form of a lyrate apparatus curved forward. It includes the classes Pisces proper and Selachii, or typical teleostomous fishes and selachians.

lyriferous (lĭ-rĭf'ĕ-rĭ-ŭs), a. [< NL. lyrifer, < L. lyra, a lyre, + ferre = E. *bear*¹.] Having a lyriferm scapular arch; or of having the characteristics of the Lyrifera.

lyriform (lĭr'ĭ-fōrm), a. [< L. lyra, a lyre, + forma, form.] Lyrate; lyre-shaped.

The tail is . . . lyriform. A. Newton.

lyrism (lĭr'ĭzĭm), n. [< Gr. λύρα, playing on the lyre, < λύριζεν, play on the lyre: see lyrist.] The art or act of playing the lyre; hence, musical performance generally. [Rare.]

The lyrism, which had at first only manifested itself by David's sotto voce performance of "My love's a rose without a thorn," had gradually assumed a rather deafening and complex character.
George Eliot, Adam Bede, liii.

lyrist (lĭr'ĭst), n. [< F. lyriste, < L. lyristes, < Gr. λύρις, a lyrist, λύριζεν, play on the lyre, < λύρα, a lyre: see *lyre*¹.] A performer on the lyre; a composer, singer, or reciter of lyrics.

From her wilds Ierne sent
The sweetest lyrist of her saddest wrong.

Shelley, Adonais, st. 30.

Lyrurus (lĭ-rō'rus), n. [NL., < Gr. λύρα, a lyre, + οὐρά, a tail.] A genus of Tetraonidae, including the blackcock or black grouse, Lyrurus tetrix, in the male of which the tail is lyrate; the lyre-tailed grouse. Swinson, 1831.

lysigenetic (lĭs'ĭ-jĕ-net'ĭk), a. [< lysigenous, after genetic.] Same as lysigenetic.

In the outer portion of this [the tissue of the squash-tendrill], the vascular bundles already referred to arise, while the inner portion remains as a pith region, and often shrinks away from the center, developing a lysigenetic air cavity.
Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., XXXI. 51.

Various Forms of Lyres.

lysigenous (li-sij'e-nns), a. [Irreg. < Gr. λύσις, a setting free, + -γενής, born, produced: see -gen and -genous.] In bot., produced by the absorption or destruction of contiguous cells: applied to certain cavities or intercellular spaces in plants.

Lysiloma (lis-i-lō'mā), n. [NL. (Bentham, 1844), prob. so named in allusion to the inner portion of the pod, which breaks away from the thickened margin; < Gr. λύειν (sigmatic stem λυσι-), loose, + λόμα, a border.] A genus of leguminous plants of the suborder Mimosae and the tribe Ingeae, characterized by bipinnate leaves, usually a small number of stamens, and the valves of the flat, straight pod breaking away from the persistent sutures. They are trees or shrubs from tropical America and the Antilles, much resembling the acacias of the same region, with small leaflets and numerous small flowers growing in round heads or cylindrical spikes. There are about 10 species, of which the most important economically is L. Sabiceu of Cuba, furnishing an extremely hard and durable timber known as Sabiceu-wood, or horse-flesh mahogany. It is used in shipbuilding and for various structural purposes; also as a substitute for boxwood in making shuttles. L. latissimifolia, called wild tamarind, extends into Florida, and its wood is locally useful in building boats and ships.

Lysimachia (lis-i-mā'ki-ā), n. [NL., < L. Lysimachia, < Gr. Λυσιμάχου, a medicinal herb; later Λυσιμάχος or Λυσιμάχου βοτάνη, regarded as named from Λυσιμάχος, Lysimachus, King of Thrace, but appar. earlier regarded (as the E. translation loosestrife, and the statement of Pliny that the plant has a soothing effect upon oxen that will not draw in the same yoke, show) as directly (as the proper name indeed is) < Gr. λύειν (sigmatic stem λυσι-), loose, + μάχη, strife.] A large genus of dicotyledonous gamopetalous plants, belonging to the natural order Primulaceae, the primrose family, and to the tribe Lysimachieae, characterized by a capsule which opens longitudinally, a 5- or 6-parted corolla which is longer than the calyx, and stamens affixed to the base of the corolla. They are erect or creeping herbs, with entire leaves, which are opposite, alternate, or whorled, and yellow, white, or rose-colored flowers, generally solitary in the axils or in racemes. About 65 species are known, natives of the temperate and subtropical regions of the northern hemisphere, tropical and southern Africa, Australia, and South America. (See loosestrife.) The European L. nemorum is the yellow pimpernel. L. Nummularia, the moneywort, also called creeping-jenny, herb-two-pence, etc., is a trailing vine with roundish leaves and bright-yellow flowers, common in Europe, and often planted in baskets, rockwork, etc., in America; L. quadrifolia, sometimes called crosswort, is a delicate and handsome American species. Tournefort, 1700.

Lysimachieae (lis'i-mā-kī'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, 1836), < Lysimachia + -ae.] A tribe of plants of the order Primulaceae, the primrose family, of which Lysimachia is the type, characterized by the lobes of the regular corolla being convolute in estivation, the stamens inserted on the petals, a superior ovary, and semi-anatropous ovules. The tribe embraces 9 genera and about 110 species, principally natives of temperate and subtropical regions.

lysismachus (li-sim'ā-kus), n. [See Lysimachia.] Loosestrife.

Yellow lysismachus, to give sweet rest
To the faint shepherd, killing, where it comes,
All busy gnats, and every fly that hums.
Fletcher, Faithful Shepherdess, ii. 2.

lysimeter (li-sim'e-tēr), n. [< Gr. λύσις, a dissolving, + μέτρον, a measure.] An instrument for measuring the natural percolation of rain through a given depth of soil.

Lysippus (li-sip'an), a. [< L. Lysippus, < Gr. Λύσιππος, < λύειν (λυσι-), loose, + ἵππος, a horse.] Of or pertaining to the ancient Greek sculptor Lysippus, of Sicyon, who flourished between 372 and 316 B. C., or to the school of art founded by him. The works of this school are characterized by abandonment of the dignified repose of earlier sculptures, and by the portrayal of action and muscular strain and power and the personal element, or portraiture, as distinguished from the ideal. (See pathos.) Lysippus made the proportions of his statues more slender than those of his predecessors' works, the heads being notably smaller. His figure called the Apoxyomenos or athlete using the strigil, of which a good copy is preserved in the Vatican, is identified as his celebrated canon, or exemplar of the perfect human figure, and is to be paralleled with the widely different proportions of the Doryphorus, the canon of Polykleitos. The followers of Lysippus exaggerated the faults of his tendency, and leaned toward the extraordinary and pretensions. See Hellespontic, and compare doryphorus.

Lysippian (li-sip'i-an), a. Same as Lysippian.

Lysippic (li-sip'ik), a. Same as Lysippian.

lysis (li'sis), n. [L., < Gr. λύσις, a loosening, < λύειν, loose: see loose.] 1. In med., the gradual recession of a disease, as distinguished from crisis, in which the change for the better is more abrupt.—2. In arch., a plinth or step above the cornice of the podium of some Roman temples. When present in a columnar edifice, it constitutes the stylobate proper.

Lysodactylæ (li-sō-dak'ti-lē), n. pl. [NL., prop. Lysodactylæ, < Gr. λύειν (λυσι-), loose, + δάκτυλος, finger, toe.] In Sundevall's classification of birds, a superfamily of scutellipantlar Passeres, represented by the family of tyrant flycatchers or Tyrannidae: a division of the Exaspidæ, as distinguished from those which are called Syndactylæ.

Lysopteri (li-sop'te-rī), n. pl. [< Gr. λύειν (λυσι-), loose, + πτερόν, wing.] An order of fishes, containing the platysomids and paleoniscids, characterized as actinopterus fishes with the median fin-rays not joined to the interhemal and interneural bones and not coinciding with them in number, and with no suboperculum. Heteroeroeri is a synonym. E. D. Cope, Amer. Nat., XIV. 439.

lysopterous (li-sop'te-rus), a. Pertaining to the Lysopteri, or having their characters.

lyssa (lis'ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λύσσα, Attic λύττα, raving, frenzy, madness (of persons and dogs).] Canine madness; rabies; hydrophobia.

Lyssacina (lis-ā-sī'nā), n. pl. [NL.] A suborder of hexactinellid siliceous sponges with isolated or irregularly cemented spicules, contrasted with Dictyonina. Also Lyssakina.

lyssacine (lis'ā-sin), a. Having isolated spicules, as a sponge; specifically, of or pertaining to the Lyssacina. Also lyssakine.

lysseth, v. An uncertain word, occurring in the following passage. If the form lysseth is correct, it is probably a variant of lysseth, from lysseth, in a sense like 'flout'; otherwise lysseth may be a scribal error for lyzeth, 'laugheth.'

She lysseth and scorneth the wepynges of hem the which she hath makyd wepe with hir fre willie.
Chaucer, Boethius, ii. meter 1.

lyssophobia (lis-ō-fō'bi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λύσσα, canine madness, + φόβος, fear.] A nervous state produced by morbid dread of having contracted rabies.

lysti. An obsolete form of *list*¹, *list*², etc.

Lystra (lis'trā), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1783), < L. Lystra, < Gr. Λύστρα, a city in Lycæonia.] A genus of lantern-flies of the family Fulgoridæ,

The Lysippus Canon.—The Apoxyomenos, or Athlete using the Strigil. (Vatican Museum.)

containing about 15 beautiful and highly colored tropical species, as the South American L. lanata, the woolly lantern-fly, so called because it secretes long strings of a waxy substance which looks like wool.

lytel, a. and n. See *lite*¹.

lytel, a. and adv. An obsolete form of little.

lyterian (li-tē'ri-an), a. [< Gr. λυτήριος, loosing, delivering, < λυτήρ, a deliverer, < λύειν, loose: see lysis.] In med., terminating a disease; indicating the solution of a disease.

lyth, n. See lithe.

lythe¹, a. and adv. An obsolete form of *lithe*¹.

lythe² (li'th), n. [Also laith, laits; origin obscure.] The coalfish. [Scotch and North. Eng.]

The small boat was cleverly run alongside the jetty, . . . and Miss Sheila, with a heavy string of lythe in her right hand, stepped, laughing and blushing, onto the quay.
W. Black, Princess of Thule, ii.

lytheri, a. See *lither*¹.

Lythraceæ (li-th-rā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1846), < Lythrum + -aceæ.] A synonym of Lythrariceæ, still employed by some botanists.

lythraceous (li-th-rā'shi-us), a. [NL. Lythrum + -aceous.] Pertaining to the Lythrariceæ (Lythraceæ), or having their characters.

lythrad (li'th'rad), n. Any plant of the loosestrife family, Lythrariceæ.

Lythrariceæ (li-th-rā-rī'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Jussieu, 1823), < Lythrum + -ariceæ.] The loosestrife family, an order of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants belonging to the cohort Myrtales. It is characterized by valvate calyx-lobes, petals usually wrinkled, and an ovary which is generally free, with from two to an indefinite number of cells, the latter with numerous ovules. They are herbs, shrubs, or trees, with entire leaves, opposite on the stem or rarely alternate. The order embraces 2 tribes, Ammanniacæ and Lythraceæ, about 30 genera and 365 species, the majority of which are natives of the tropics, especially in America; a few are found in temperate regions or dispersed throughout the world. Important genera are Cuphea, Lagerstræmia, and Lythrum.

Lythreæ (li'th'rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1846), < Lythrum + -eæ.] A tribe of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the order Lythrariceæ, the loosestrife family, consisting of shrubs or trees, rarely herbs, characterized by a herbaceous or coriaceous calyx, which is usually many-ribbed, and flowers generally large and almost always with wrinkled petals. The tribe embraces 27 genera and over 300 species. Most of the important genera of the order belong to this tribe.

Lythrum (li'th'rum), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1737), so called in allusion to the purple color of most of the flowers; < Gr. λύθρον, λύθρος, gore.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous plants of the natural order Lythrariceæ and the tribe Lythreæ. It is characterized by a straight striate calyx having from 8 to 16 teeth, with minute intermediate teeth; from 4 to 8 petals; and a two-celled capsule with longitudinal placentæ, both ovary and capsule being wholly included in the tube of the calyx. They are herbs or small shrubs, with entire, generally opposite leaves, and purple or rose-colored, rarely white, flowers, either solitary in the axils of the leaves or in few-flowered cymes. The genus includes about 23 species, found in all parts of the world. It shares with Lysimachia the name of loosestrife, and sometimes with Epilobium the name of willow-herb. The best-known species is L. Salicaria, the purple or spiked loosestrife. See loosestrife.

lytlei, a. and adv. An obsolete form of little.

lytta (lit'ā), n. [NL., < Gr. λύττα, λύσσα, frenzy, rage, canine madness; also the 'worm' under a dog's tongue, supposed to produce madness: see lyssa.] 1. A long vermiform rod of cartilage or fibrous tissue in the middle line and under surface of the tongue of a carnivore; the glossohyal of a carnivore; the so-called "worm" of a dog's tongue. It is vulgarly supposed to be a parasite, and is often extracted by dog-fanciers. Compare lyssa. 2. [cap.] A Fabrician genus of Coleoptera: same as Cantharis.

lyvert, n. An obsolete form of *liver*².

lyverett, n. An obsolete form of leveret.

lyverey, n. An obsolete form of *livery*².

PE
1625
C4
1889a pt.12

The Century dictionary

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

ABBREVIATIONS

USED IN THE ETYMOLOGIES AND DEFINITIONS.

a, adj.	adjective.	engin.	engineering.	meeh.	mechanics, mechani-	photog.	photography.
abbr.	abbreviation.	entom.	entomology.	med.	medicine.	phren.	phrenology.
abl.	ablative.	Epia.	Episcopal.	menaur.	mensuration.	phys.	physical.
acc.	accusative.	equiv.	equivalent.	metaph.	metaphysics.	physiol.	physiology.
accom.	accommodated, accom-	esp.	especially.	meteor.	meteorology.	pl, plur.	plural.
	modation.	Eth.	Ethiopic.	Mex.	Mexican.	poet.	poetical.
act.	active.	ethnog.	ethnography.	MGr.	Middle Greek, medie-	polit.	political.
adv.	adverb.	ethnol.	ethnology.	val Greek.		Pol.	Pollish.
AF.	Anglo-French.	etym.	etymology.	MHG.	Middle High German.	poss.	possessive.
agri.	agriculture.	Eur.	European.	milft.	military.	pp.	past participle.
AL.	Anglo-Latin.	exclam.	exclamation.	mineral.	mineralogy.	ppr.	present participle.
alg.	algebra.	f, fem.	feminine.	ML.	Middle Latin, medie-	Fr.	Provençal (usually Amer.	American.	F.	French (usually mean-		val Latin.		meaning Old Proanat.	anatomy.		ing modern French).				vençal).
anc.	ancient.	Flem.	Flemish.	MLG.	Middle Low German.	pref.	prefix.
antiq.	antiquity.	fort.	fortification.	mod.	modern.	prep.	preposition.
aor.	aorist.	freq.	frequentative.	mycol.	mycology.	pres.	present.
appar.	apparently.	Fries.	Frisiak.	myth.	mythology.	pret.	preterit.
Ar.	Arabic.	fut.	future.	n.	noun.	priv.	privative.
arch.	architecture.	G.	German (usually mean-	n, neut.	neuter.	prob.	probably, probable.
archeol.	archeology.		ing New High Ger-	N.	New.	pron.	pronoun.
arith.	arithmetic.		man).	N, North.	North.	pron.	pronounced, pronun-
art.	article.	Gael.	Gaelic.	N. Amer.	North America.		ciation.
AS.	Anglo-Saxon.	galv.	galvanism.	nat.	natural.	prop.	properly.
astrol.	astrology.	gen.	genitive.	naut.	naulical.	proa.	prosody.
astron.	astronomy.	geog.	geography.	nav.	navigation.	Prot.	Protestant.
attrib.	attributive.	geom.	geometry.	NGr.	New Greek, modern	prov.	provincial.
aug.	augmentative.	Goth.	Gothic (Moesogothic).	Greek.		psychol.	psychology.
Bav.	Bavarian.	Gr.	Greek.	NHG.	New High German	q. v.	L. quad (or pl. quar)
Beng.	Bengali.	gram.	grammar.		(usually simply G.,		vide, which see.
biol.	biology.	gun.	gunnery.		German).	refl.	reflexive.
Bohem.	Bohemian.	Her.	heraldry.	NL.	New Latin, modern	reg.	regular, regularly.
bot.	botany.	herp.	herpetology.		Latin.	repr.	representing.
Braz.	Brazilian.	Hind.	Hindustani.	nom.	nominate.	rhet.	rhetoric.
Bret.	Breton.	hist.	history.	Norm.	Norman.	Rom.	Roman.
bryol.	bryology.	horol.	horology.	north.	northern.	Rom.	Romanic, Romance
Bulg.	Bulgarian.	hort.	horticulture.	Norw.	Norwegian.		(languages).
carp.	carpentry.	Hung.	Hungarian.	numis.	numismatica.	Russ.	Russian.
Cat.	Catalan.	hydraul.	hydraulics.	O.	Old.	S.	South.
Cath.	Catholic.	hydros.	hydrostatics.	oba.	obsolete.	S. Amer.	South American.
caus.	causative.	Icel.	Icelandic (usually	obstet.	obstetrics.	sc.	L. scilicet, understand, ceram.	ceramics.		meaning Old Ice-	OBulg.	Old Bulgarian (other-		supply.
cf.	L. confer, compare.		landic, otherwise call-		wise called Church	Scand.	Scandinavian.
ch.	church.		ed Old Norse).	OCat.	Old Catalan.	Scrp.	Scripture.
Chal.	Chaldee.	Ichth.	ichthyology.	OD.	Old Dutch.	sculp.	sculpture.
chem.	chemical, chemistry.	l. e.	L. id est, that is.	ODan.	Old Danish.	Serv.	Servian.
Chin.	Chinese.	impers.	impersonal.	odotog.	odontology.	sing.	singular.
chron.	chronology.	impf.	imperfect.	odontol.	odontology.	Skt.	Sanskrit.
colloq.	colloquial, colloquially.	impv.	imperative.	OF.	Old French.	Slav.	Slavic, Slavonic.
com.	commerce, commer-	improp.	improperly.	OFlem.	Old Flemish.	Sp.	Spanish.
	cial.	Ind.	Indian.	OGael.	Old Gaelic.	subj.	subjunctive.
comp.	composition, com-	Ind. Eur.	Indo-European.	OHG.	Old High German.	superl.	superlative.
	compound.	indef.	indefinite.	OIr.	Old Irish.	surg.	surgery.
compar.	comparative.	inf.	infinitive.	OIt.	Old Italian.	surv.	surveying.
conch.	conchology.	instr.	instrumental.	OL.	Old Latin.	Sw.	Swedish.
conj.	conjunction.	interj.	interjection.	OLG.	Old Low German.	syn.	synonymy.
contr.	contracted, contrac-	intr, intrans.	intransitive.	ONorth.	Old Northumbrian.	Syr.	Syriac.
	tion.	Ir.	Irish.	OPruss.	Old Prussian.	technol.	technology.
Corn.	Cornish.	Irreg.	irregular, irregularly.	orig.	original, originally.	teleg.	telegraphy.
craniol.	craniology.	It.	Italian.	ornith.	ornithology.	teratol.	teratology.
cranom.	cranometry.	Jap.	Japanese.	OS.	Old Saxon.	term.	termination.
crystal.	crystallography.	L.	Latin (usually mean-	OSP.	Old Spanish.	Teut.	Teutonic.
D.	Dutch.		ing classical Latin).	osteel.	osteology.	theat.	theatrical.
Dan.	Danish.	Let.	Lettish.	OSw.	Old Swedish.	theol.	theology.
dat.	dativ.	LG.	Low German.	Oteut.	Old Teutonic.	therap.	therapeutics.
def.	definite, definition.	lithenol.	lithenology.	P. a.	participial adjective.	toxicol.	toxicology.
deriv.	derivative, derivation.	lit.	literal, literally.	paleon.	paleontology.	tr, trans.	transitive.
dial.	dialect, dialectal.	lit.	literature.	part.	participle.	trigon.	trigonometry.
diff.	different.	lith.	Lithuanian.	pass.	passive.	Turk.	Turkish.
dim.	diminutive.	lithog.	lithography.	pathol.	pathology.	typog.	typography.
distrib.	distributive.	lithol.	lithology.	perf.	perfect.	ult.	ultimate, ultimately.
dram.	dramatic.	LL.	Late Latin.	Pers.	Persian.	v.	verb.
dynam.	dynamica.	m, masc.	masculine.	pers.	person.	var.	variant.
E.	East.	M.	Middle.	persp.	perspective.	vet.	veterinary.
E.	English (usually mean-	mach.	machinery.	Peruv.	Peruvian.	v. l.	intransitive verb.
	ing modern English).	mammal.	mammalogy.	Peruv.	Peruvian.	v. t.	transitive verb.
eccl., eccles.	ecclesiastical.	manuf.	manufacturing.	phar.	pharograpy.	W.	Welsh.
econ.	economy.	math.	mathematics.	phen.	phenology.	Wall.	Walloon.
e. g.	L. exempli gratia, for	MD.	Middle Dutch.	philol.	philology.	Wallach.	Wallachian.
	example.	ME.	Middle English (other-	philos.	philosophy.	W. Ind.	West Indian.
Egypt.	Egyptian.		wise called Old Eng-	phlog.	phonography.	zoog.	zoogeography.
E. Ind.	East Indian.		lish).			zool.	zoology.
elect.	electricity.					zoot.	zootomy.
embryol.	embryology.
Eng.	English.

KEY TO PRONUNCIATION.

a as in fat, man, pang.
 ā as in fate, manc, dale.
 ā as in far, father, guard.
 ā as in fall, talk, naught.
 ā as in ask, fast, ant.
 ā as in fare, hair, bear.
 o as in met, pen, bless.
 o as in mete, meet, meat.
 ē as in her, fern, heard.
 i as in pin, it, blacuit.
 i as in pine, flight, file.
 o as in not, on, frog.
 o as in note, poke, floor.
 o as in move, spoon, room.
 o as in nor, song, off.
 u as in tub, son, blood.
 ū as in mute, acute, few (also new, tube, duty: see Preface, pp. ix, x).
 ū as in pull, book, could.

ü German ü, French u.
 oi as in oil, joint, boy.
 ou as in pound, proud, now.
 A single dot under a vowel in an unaccented syllable indicates its abbreviation and lightening, without absolute loss of its distinctive quality. See Preface, p. xi. Thus:
 ā as in prelate, courage, captain.
 ē as in ablegate, episcopal.
 ō as in abrogate, enology, democrat.
 ū as in singular, education.
 A double dot under a vowel in an unaccented syllable indicates that, even in the mouths of the best speakers, its sound is variable to, and in ordinary utterance actually becomes, the short u-sound (of but, pun, etc.). See Preface, p. xi. Thus:

ā as in errant, republican.
 ē as in prudent, difference.
 ā as in charity, density.
 o as in valor, actor, idiot.
 ū as in Persia, peninsula.
 ē as in the book.
 ū as in nature, feature.
 A mark (˘) under the consonants t, d, s, z indicates that they in like manner are variable to ch, j, sh, zh. Thus:
 t as in nature, adventure.
 d as in arduous, education.
 s as in leisure.
 z as in seizure.
 th as in thin.
 th as in then.
 ch as in German ach, Scotch loch.
 ñ French nasalizing n, as in ton, en.

ly (in French words) French liquid (mon-illé) l.
 > denotes a primary, " a secondary accent. (A secondary accent is not marked if at its regular interval of two syllables from the primary, or from another secondary.)
 SIGNS.
 < read from; i. e., derived from.
 > read whence; i. e., from which is derived.
 + read and; i. e., compounded with, or with affix.
 = read cognate with; i. e., etymologically parallel with.
 * read root.
 † read theoretical or alleged; i. e., theoretically assumed/ or asserted but unverified, form.
 ‡ read obsolete.

